The mixed-voice portion consists of 'A Song for Marching,' 'Evening Glow,' 'First Love,' 'The Fishermaiden,' 'The Wayside Inn,' and 'To Music.' The first is a glorious, rousing piece, the second a full-toned setting of 'Lord, Thy glory fills the sky,' with divided S. and A.—a splendid test-piece this would be; the third (for S.S.A.T.B.) is slow, sustained, sad, and tender; the fourth (for S.A.T.T.B. or S.A.T.B. with tenor solo: the second tenor part can be sung by first bass) is arch and sprightly; the fifth is a touching setting of the meditation of a wanderer for whom there is no room, even in the grave; the sixth might well be sung at musical services in church, or at organ recitals, for it is a lovely, impressive work. Get your basses to think their part as if they were 'cellos, and they will love the task of upholding this nobly simple harmony. A fine song that rings true in every note—a touchstone for other 'sacred' pieces.

For T.T.B.B. there are: the lover's lament, 'My love hath left me lonely,' the splendidly dramatic and romantic 'On lonely heights,' the gently philosophic 'Wiseman's Song,' and the elevated imagery of 'Victory,' another song meet for high occasions, in church or out of it.

The whole budget is heartily welcome.

W. R. A.

Messrs. Chester have just issued John Shepherd's 'French Mass,' edited by H. B. Collins. Only Latin text is given—a matter for regret with many Anglican choirmasters who would like to add this sterling work to their service list. The writing is mainly polyphonic—not as a rule of a very complex or difficult character—with bold, straightforward homophonic passages interspersed. Mr. Collins supplies some gaps by adaptations from other works of Shepherd's, improves the underlaying of the words, and adds an interesting Preface.

The only fault to be found with Vernon Warner's album of 'Six Old-World Classics' (Bosworth) is the unenterprising choice. Such things as Rameau's 'Tambourin,' d'Aquin's 'Coucou,' Paradies's Toccata in A, &c., have been collected and edited so often that the student can hardly escape them. Mr. Warner's other selections from Mozart, C. Ph. E. Bach, and Scarlatti are almost equally familiar.

Something of the same criticism may be levelled at Book 5 of 'The Hundred Best Short Classics' (Paterson). There are twelve pieces, and exception can be taken to none of them. Yet who has not already several copies of such things as Tchaikovsky's 'Chanson Triste,' and 'Song without Words,' Rubinstein's Melody in F, Couperin's 'Sœur Monique,' the Paradies Toccata, the two pieces from Schumann's 'Scenes from Childhood,' &c.? On the other hand, few players have them all in one convenient book, and there is the further advantage here of the editorship of Harold Samuel, who has completed the task left unfinished by the late Cuthbert Whitemore.

Curwen's issue 'Hiawatha Dramatized,' the familiar poem 'arranged in tableau, recitation, and dance,' the music being for three-part chorus (some unison), with solos for medium voices. The pianoforte may be used for accompaniment, but the composer states that an 'orchestra is of the greatest importance.' Strings only 'would add much to the performance.' The work, in six Acts, runs for about two and a half hours. Cuts can be made if desired. It is remarked in the preface that the music 'contains a simple idiom and repetition of phrase that make it easy to memorise.' This is very true. Those who do not seek any striking originality in such a work will not chafe at the music's being rather square-cut, and its ideas trite. Girls' clubs might look at this. There is a vocal edition (Sol-fa and Staff); and a book of the words is published separately.

---

The Oxford University Press has added to its Oxford Orchestral Series a Passacaglia by Frescobaldi, scored for strings by Dr. Esposito; and, edited by the same hand, the Larghetto from Handel's B minor Concerto Grosso. Dr. Esposito has also scored for strings and ad lib. flute and bassoon, a very attractive 'Canzona Franchese,' by Ercole Pasquini. A 'Suite of Dance Tunes for String Band,' sub-titled 'The Jocund Dance,' by John B. McEwen, is just the thing for amateur and good school string orchestras. (The double-bass part is ad lib.) The fine series of instrumental movements from Bach's Cantatas, edited by Dr. Whittaker, is continued with the Sinfonia from 'Wir danken dir, Gott,' a brilliant movement now popular through Sir Henry Wood's transcription for full orchestra. Dr. Whittaker places the Sinfonia within the reach of small organizations by various 'cueings in,' and he adds optional notes in the trumpet parts for use when the Bach trumpets are not available; oboes play with violins, and so are ad lib.; and a third violin part is issued for use when violas are weak or absent. The important organ part may be played on the pianoforte, for which the editor has added optional filling-up. The score is complete with the keyboard instrument and strings only, oboes and trumpets being added according to convenience.

Music in the Foreign Press

THE OPERAS OF JOSEPH SCHUSTER (1748-1812)

In the February Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft Richard Engländer emphasises the importance of Joseph Schuster's operas in the history of opera at Dresden between the time of Hasse and the time of Weber. Schuster has written Opere serie, Opere buffe, and Singspiele. In the last-named category, his 'Der Alchymist (oder Der Liebeteufel)' is particularly interesting. There can be no doubt that Schuster exercised a measure of influence on Mozart.

A FRENCH MUSICIAN ON SCHÖNBERG

In the February Musique, the composer and critic Arthur Hoerée writes:

> Schönberg's visit to Paris has enabled us to reconsider some of our prejudices against his art—an art which is in opposition to the Latin spirit, not so much in its essentials as by virtue of certain of its aspects. So far as it is hermetic and abstractly speculative, it cannot mean much to us. But we can enjoy its conciseness of form, the terseness of its idiom, the fluidity of its tones, and its restraint and economy. All these qualities render it worthy of attention. Let us admire his efforts and strive to understand his achievements; this will be beneficial to us, for he is a great pioneer.

THE YOUNGER HUNGARIANS

In the February Auftakt, an article by Ladislaus Pollatsek contains, besides useful notes on Georg Kósa (who apparently has completed an opera entitled 'The King's Cloak'), Ladislaus Lajtha, and Alexander Jemnitz, information on little-known composers such as Geza Frid, Georg Mathias Seiber, Stephan Szelenyi, Paul Kadosa, and Hugo Kellen. It also refers to the activities in musical composition of two instrumentalists whom we know well and appreciate—Zoltan Szekely and Paul Hermann.

THE CHARACTER OF KEYS

In the January Auftakt, Dr. Max Unger contributes to this favourite subject of disquisitions and discussions. He rightly points out that so long as pitch varies according to countries, there can be no ground for believing that any key has a character of its own.

> When the 'Meistersinger' Overture is performed in Austria, America, or Britain, a German or a Frenchman accustomed to the pitch of four hundred and thirty-five vibrations per second for A, hears this piece not in C major but in C sharp major. But after a time he grows accustomed to the new pitch and transposes his impressions accordingly.

Dr. Unger does not make the usual remark that much of the alleged character of keys is due to conditions determined by the build of wind instruments, by the relative number of open strings that bow instruments use in each key, and so forth.

M.-D. Calvocoressi.

Gramophone Notes

By 'Discus'

H.M.V.

Holst's 'Uranus,' No. 6 of 'The Planets,' has been well recorded, as played by the Symphony Orchestra under Albert Coates. There is a bit too much of the hollow resonance that results from recording in empty concert-halls, and an unnatural flavour comes into the orchestral tone, especially in such passages as wake a few extra echoes (D1384).

The Cortot-Casals-Thibaud trio has long been so fine a combination that it is good to see the first two players forming yet another partnership. They open with a little-known work by Beethoven—Variations on an air from 'The Magic Flute.' This is an early work, and slight in character. It makes an attractive pair of records, the performance being all that we should expect from such a source (DA915-16). Now that Cortot and Casals have started on Beethoven, may we ask for two or three of the best Sonatas for 'cello and pianoforte? There are some fine movements here, and the chances of hearing them are rare, owing to the habit of 'cello recitalists of drawing largely on the everlasting Popper, a few early Italians, and transcribed sweetmeats. The gramophone public is no longer afraid of the word 'sonata,' and I believe that the best of these Beethoven examples, played by Cortot and Casals, would be welcomed.

Paderewski is to be praised for his courage in choosing a large work by a contemporary—Ernest Schelling's 'Nocturne a Raguze.' Those who would prefer him in some familiar music may be reconciled to the novelty by the excellence of the record, the tone being above the average. The Nocturne is an attractive work, as full of effect as such things are when written by performers of Schelling's standing. But it is a good deal more than mere 'pianist's music' (DB1029).

The organ at the Temple Church was so effective in the 'Hear my prayer' record that I expected a good deal from it in solo work. Perhaps I expected too much. Anyway I am rather disappointed with the recording of Thalben Ball in Karg-Elert's Triumphal March on 'Now thank we all our God' and Handel's Largo. It is good when the full organ is employed, and when the reed tone (especially in the pedal department) makes its presence felt; but in the foundation work passages of the Karg-Elert there is a want of clearness and solidity (C1458). (Apropos of organ records, the ignorance of some reviewers concerning the instrument continues to be manifested. Allusion was recently made in this column to the writer who ascribed to the daring of Dupré a registration effect indicated by Bach himself. Yet another reviewer, discussing the record of Dupré's playing of the Chorale Prelude on 'Christ, unser Herr, zum Jordan kam,' describes Dupré's pedalling as amazing, being unaware that the continuous semi-quaver bass is played by the left hand—with 16-ft. and 8-ft. stops, the pedals having a simple job with the chorale melody in long notes!)

Anne Thursfield sings a couple of songs by Armstrong Gibbs—'When I was one and twenty' and 'Song of Shadows.' Here is significant singing, and very few words are missed. True, this distinctness is bought at the cost of a trifle of naturalness; I don't like the singer's way of starting words that begin with a vowel (with a tiny break in the flow of sound and a stress—e.g., 'for 'endless') (E462).

For vocal fireworks it would be hard to beat, or even equal, the latest Galli-Curci record. She sings a vocal waltz by Arditi—'Parla!' and Benedict's 'The Gipsy and the Bird.' The title of the second of course implies a flute obbligato, and a very brilliant thing it is, played by C. Barone. So far as this side of the record is concerned my hat is off as much to the fluter as to the singer. Recent records of Galli-Curci have been below her standard, I think; this one is on a level with the 'Una voce' disc which made such a hit some years ago (DA928).

Why do singers persist in the poor song called 'Passing by,' and add to their offence by giving the composer as Purcell, implying that it was written by the Purcell? It is by an obscure living composer. I forget for the moment whether Purcell is his real name, but certainly his music is a long chalk from being real Purcell. If singers want a worthy setting of the poem they will find it in Parry's 'There is a lady sweet and kind.' Mr. John Brownlee is the latest to serve up this feeble ditty. He does better in Maude Valerie White's 'King Charles' (E483).

The mid-March list gives us an all-too-rare recording of Kreisler in a work of importance. Too often he puts us off with trifles—and poor trifles, too, some of them. Here he is in the Brahms Concerto, with the Berlin State Orchestra, conducted by Blech. This strikes me as being entirely first-rate save in the matter of tone, which is on the hard side, in both solo and orchestral parts. In the Adagio the solo violin is quite piercing. However, this effect may be in some degree peculiar to my machine and choice of needle, so I do not press the point. The first movement is especially enjoyable, with the right sense of size, and an orchestral part that is clear even in its quietest moments. Nos. DB1120-22 give this movement, the sixth side of the three being filled by Schumann's Romance in A. This avoids splitting the Adagio and Finale, each of which is complete on one record—Adagio, DB1123; Finale, DB1124. This fine set wipes out even that worst of Kreisler's descents—the piece by the American General Dawes that earned a high place among the world's worst fiddle solos.

Isolde Menges balances the over-familiar Brahms-Joachim G minor Hungarian Dance by one in B minor that is too rarely heard. In both her playing is admirable (E496).

The only orchestral record is of Grainger's 'Molly on the Shore' and 'Shepherd's Hey,' played by the Royal Opera Orchestra, under Lawrance Collingwood. This makes stirring noises, but the ensemble gets a bit out of gear at times (B2641).

The choir of the Temple Church sounds unduly chastened in Wesley's 'Praise the Lord, O my soul.' There are some excellent soloists, including (apparently) the world-famous soprano, Thomas Lough. A good deal of the music doesn't 'lie' very well for his voice, but he finds opportunities of showing some of his wobbling, squeezed tone, heavy-weather sisters how to sing high notes (C1436).

Two operatic vocal solo records are in the parcel. Both draw on 'Carmen,' and both are above the average. Soprano Heldy, and tenor Ansseau, sing 'Parle-moi de ma mère' and 'Qui sait de quel démon' (DB1115). (The translation of the latter on the label makes one glad the duettists sing in French; 'I might, perhaps, have been of a false fiend the prey.' One never knows one's luck, does one?) The other record is of Olczewska, who sings 'Printemps qui commence,' from 'Samson et Dalilah,' and the 'Carmen' Habanera (D1386).

For clearness of words it would be hard to equal the three records of Mimi Crawford's singing of eleven Milne-Simson songs from 'When we were very young' and 'Now we are six.' Unfortunately, the voice is almost all it shouldn't be. I wish Miss Crawford would borrow the lovely voice of one of our song-without-words experts, or else hand over her own unique words-without-song (B2621 and B2678-79).

---

COLUMBIA

The transference of the recording operation from the studio to the concert-hall or theatre is not always an entire improvement. Occasionally there is too pronounced an impression of empty space, and the added sonority is apt to have a hollow ring. I am reminded of this by the records of the Court Symphony Orchestra playing the 'Dance of the Hours,' from 'La Gioconda,' conducted by Norman O'Neill. One can see the rows of empty seats, with maybe a charwoman at the far end in a state of suspended animation. Otherwise these records are good, though personally I have never been able to understand the apparent popularity of these anæmic dances of Ponchielli's (9288).

There is no doubt about the success of the violoncello as a recording instrument, and fortunately there are several first-rate players catering for the gramophonist. I doubt if there is one better than the new Columbia recruit—Gaspar Cassado. His special excellences, judging from his first records, seem to lie in beauty of tone and sensitive expression. He makes his bow with Schumann's 'Evening Song' and Fauré's 'Après un rêve' (D1598), and No. 5 of Granados's Spanish Dances and Handel's Largo (L2046). In the Largo he leaves the tune at one point and helps out the bass of the harmony—not a good idea, I feel. Having set out to deal with the tune he should stick to it and leave the accompaniment to the accompanist. Mr. Cassado will be a favourite, no doubt.

It is a pity William Murdoch's excellent playing of Liszt's twelfth Hungarian Rhapsody is so meagre in tone. Music of this sort makes much of its effect by power and colour (9282).

The J. H. Squire Octet plays arrangements of Weber's 'Perpetuum Mobile' and Rubinstein's Valse Caprice. In both the players 'feature' the pianoforte overmuch, I think. With an octet of solo instruments we ought to get a far more interesting and effective texture, instead of an impression of an almost continuous pianoforte solo to which strings contribute with an apologetic air. On looking at the label the reason is apparent: the arrangements are made by the pianist, Mr. S. Crooke. He must learn to distribute the 'fat' (9287).

Another Cathedral organist makes his debut—Dr. H. L. Wilson, of Manchester. He plays Guilmant's Offertoire on two Christmas Themes. This is a distinctly successful bit of organ recording—as organ recording goes. (I am never able to join in the almost unqualified praise given to this branch by most of my confrères.) Dr. Wilson has a good registration scheme, although a more delicate reed for the carol tune would have been an improvement. His answer to that criticism, of course, is that a more delicate reed would not have recorded so well, which nobody can deny. I like his pedal stops, which are unusually clear (9293).

The Sheffield Choir, conducted by Sir Henry Coward, is recorded in Wesley's Chapel, London, singing Woodward's 'The sun shall be no more' and Stainer's 'I am Alpha.' This is a change from the austerities of choral recording that have lately been fashionable. There is still a large public for anthems of this sort, however. The choir is not well balanced, at all events for recording purposes. The men (especially the tenors) adopt too sledge-hammer a style, and the women are hardly heard at times. A more telling soprano line would have greatly improved the effect. There is a good soprano soloist, and the organ part is effective (9291).

Raymond Newell and chorus make a rousing thing of 'Johnny come down to Hilo'—one of the best shanty records I have heard, with capital voices, words clear, and any amount of 'go.' 'We're all bound to go' pleases me less, because monotony creeps in. A little variation of power—stopping well on the right side of sophistication and fussiness—would have made all the difference (4689).

Vocal solo records are of Miriam Licette and Dennis Noble in a duet from 'The Barber of Seville,' Mr. Noble's diction being a strong point (9290); Roy Henderson in a capital performance of Schumann's 'Devotion' and Cowen's 'At the Mid Hour of Night' (4692); Dame Clara Butt in Liddle's 'Abide with Me' and Sullivan's 'God shall wipe away all tears,' with organ (7374); and of Malcolm McEachern, who plumbs the depths in Jude's dreadful song 'The Mighty Deep' and the 'Volga Boatmen's Song,' the arranging of the last being shared by three hands: Buck, Kenemaha, and Guisberg—almost as many cooks as go to the compounding of a 'song hit.' Mr. McEachern does a 'stunt' at the end by going overboard, and repeating the last phrase an octave lower—a legitimate effect, I think (9292). The outstanding vocal record is of A. M. Guglielmetti doing wonders with 'Gli Angeli d'inferno,' from 'The Magic Flute,' and Proch's 'Variations' (L2045). This is one of the most astounding bits of vocal gymnastics I have ever heard. Proch's show-piece is by way of being a joke among musicians, but if such things can ever justify themselves it is only by singing so showy as this. The Mozart air is most brilliantly done too.

P.S.—I am asked to point out a slip in the label of Dr. Alcock's organ record, H.M.V. C1376. The Guilmant piece is Verset in F, not Interlude.

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

'The Subject Index to Periodicals,' 1926. Pp. 555. Issued by the Library Association, £3 10*s.*

'Musical Meanderings.' By W. J. Turner. Pp. 206. Methuen, 6*s.*

'Dancetype: A simple method of Dance-Notation.' By Marylin Wailes. Foreword by Madame Karsavina. Pp. 22. Simpkin, Marshall, 2*s.* 6*d.*

'String Quartet Playing.' By M. D. Herter Norton. Pp. 144. Edward W. Organ, 15*s.*

'Here we go round: The Story of the Dance.' By Evelyn Sharp. Pp. 88. Gerald Howe, 2*s.* 6*d.*

'The Influence of Music on History and Morals.' A Vindication of Plato. By Cyril Scott. Pp. 245. The Theosophical Publishing House, 7*s.* 6*d.*

'A Final Burning of Boats, &c.' By Ethel Smyth. Pp. 263. Longmans, Green, 10*s.* 6*d.*

'The Parish Psalter.' By Sydney H. Nicholson. Pp. 224. Faith Press, 2*s.* 6*d.*

'Delius.' By Robert H. Hull. Pp. 45. 'Hogarth Essays,' second series. Hogarth Press, 2*s.*

'Sullivan's Comic Operas.' By Thomas F. Dunhill. Pp. 256. Arnold, 10*s.* 6*d.*

[Book reviews are unavoidably held over this month.—Editor.]

Player-Piano Notes

ÆOLIAN

Duo-Art.—The only roll of any note in this batch is Chopin's Study in C sharp minor, Op. 25, No. 7, played with great depth of feeling by Harold Bauer (7120).

Mozart's Romance in A flat (Köchel's appendix No. 245), attractive though it be when one is in the mood for the style, is not Mozart at his most interesting, and it suffers here from Edwin Fischer's somewhat heavy treatment. His pedalling is opposed to the clarity that is of the utmost importance in Mozart playing (0331). Attractive though ordinary music is Gregh's 'The Happy Butterflies' Caprice, Op. 8 (7166). It is played by Géneviève Pitot, and gives this dainty-fingered artist an opportunity for displaying the delightful quality of her rapid scale-passages.

For those who care for this style of thing there is a Fantasia by Leybach on Bellini's 'La Somnambula,' of which Robert Armbruster gives a good performance (7113).

Eugène d'Albert's playing of Beethoven's 'Bagatelle,' Op. 126, No. 4 (0330), is disappointing; his rhythm seems uneasy.

So often is Tchaikovsky's familiar 'Song without Words,' Op. 2, No. 3, over-sentimentalised, that Shura Cherkassky's performance, though inclining a little to the opposite extreme, is refreshing and welcome (7154).

Hand-Played.—The contemplative style of Bruch's 'Kol Nidrei,' Op. 47, is hardly likely to attract on first acquaintance, but it makes good hearing, and has the advantage of being well-played by Clarence Adler (A1051*d*).

There is a fine performance of Chopin's Ballade in F minor (Op. 52) by Ignaz Friedman (A1053*e*). It is not in the really difficult class, but calls for careful management of crescendos and sforzandos.

A halting rhythm spoils the Minuet from Bizet's 'L'Arlésienne' Suite, played by Aurelio Giorni (A1055*e*).

Elgar's 'Land of Hope and Glory' turns out to be what is popularly known as a 'concert' rendering by Max Darewski, i.e., the song, plus much well-played but totally unnecessary decoration in the form of scales and arpeggi. One would like to hear Elgar's opinion on this version (A1049*d*).

Metrostyle.—The fourth roll of the 'Diabelli' Variations comprises Nos. 22 to 28—perhaps the most attractive stretch in the work. The Fughetta (No. 24) is a happy example of Beethoven's dropping into this form. Incidentally it makes one wonder whether he knew Bach's 'Goldberg' Variations, wherein is a fughetta on similar lines—two halves, each repeated (contrary to the idea of fugue). This and many other Variations in the 'Diabelli' set are the best of answers to those who still subscribe to the old view that Beethoven was an indifferent contrapuntist. More vigorous and stimulating polyphony would be hard to find. In fact, stimulating is the right word for the whole group recorded on this roll. The editing has been well done, and in the brilliant Nos. 23, 25, and 27 the clarity and incisiveness are such as few pianists could (or would) attain. Almost inevitably they would dally with the time and spoil the headlong impulse; or they would use the pedal and destroy the clarity and point. This roll will leave the really musical player looking forward to its successor, which should see the conclusion of this fine enterprise (L30349*c*).

There are two good examples of the brilliant salon type. They are attractive, well cut, and easy to play, giving much effect for little trouble—Friml's Concert Waltz, Op. 12 (T30362*b*), and Godard's 'Au Rouet' Op. 85 (T30361*b*).

Tchaikovsky's 'Humoreske,' Op. 10, No. 2, is good, but needs careful management to make it a complete success (T30363*b*).

Song-Rolls.—These are of the usual order. 'Men of Harlech' (26848), played by Maud Atkins, needs to go at a much steadier pace than is directed. The others are Liddle's 'How lovely are Thy dwellings,' played by Charles Blackmore (26847); 'Bois Epais,' played by Albert Fream (26845); and 'The Far-Away Bells' (Gordon), played by Charles Blackmore (26846).

BLÜTHNER

Decidedly out of the ordinary are 'Altes Portrait' and 'Sturm,' by Serge Bortkiewicz (59463). The first is rich and full of colour, and is treated with sympathetic warmth by Felix Gieseking; and 'Sturm,' vivid and descriptive, is given a really brilliant performance.

Chopin Studies are played again and again with varying degrees of brilliance by different artists. Francis Planté is in excellent form in a couple of Chopin Etudes—Op. 25, No. 11 (55773), and Op. 10, No. 5 (56329). His pedalling is notably skilful, and there is no suspicion of blurring.

A halting and uncertain rhythm spoils Raoul von Koczalsky's playing of the same composer's Valse, Op. 34, No. 1 (56373). The clarity of the rapid passages and their delightful tone-quality, however, almost make up for the rhythmic deficiency.

Dvorák's 'Légende,' Op. 59, No. 9, is effective as played in duet form by Hermans and Hermanns-Stibbe (55418).

There is a typical Fauré piece—'Romance sans Paroles,' Op. 17, No. 3 (55913), well-played by Clotild Kleberg.

Hackneyed as it is, Rachmaninov's C sharp minor Prelude remains vital. It is played with firmness and an absence of sentimentality by Nestlé (57154).

The commonplaces of Verdi's 'Rigoletto' are bound to be painfully evident in a pianoforte transcription. It is surprising and instructive to note what such an artist as Szendrei can do to mitigate such short-comings. There are two rolls, the second of which is the more interesting (59699).

There is much satisfaction to be had with very little effort from Liszt's 'Paraphrase on Mendelssohn's 'Wedding March' (Ordinary, 52588). There is also 'Lysistrata Valse,' by Lincke (56828). This too is Ordinary—very!

D. G.

Points from Lectures

The lecture season is at its height and, as may be expected, lecturers have a great deal to say that is varied and interesting.

Mr. Rutland Boughton had the enormous range of 'Six Centuries of Song' to cover in a lecture at Brighton. He found in 'Sumer is i-cumin in' the developed music of a free people, actuated by a common ideal. They were not the people who would be content for the soprano to have all the melody. In the best music all the parts should be equally good. Taking this standard he found Bach at the head and forefront of all musicians. With the exception of Bach, since 'Sumer is i-cumin in' there had been a decreasing relationship between the idea of Christianity and the mass of the people. The words of songs and carols got more pagan. A typical one had the invocation, 'The gods bless and keep thee.' Also the songs got more snobbish. They made use of classical quotations to show the learning of the writer. 'Less communal, more pessimistic,' was the lecturer's verdict as he passed from song to song down the centuries. Mr. Boughton differed from the statement that the Puritans were inartistic; they did much for music. In reversing the degenerating process, Bach put to religious use many a folk-song melody. He did, in fact, what the Salvation Army did to-day; he would not let the devil have all the good tunes. In degenerating to the drawing-room ballad, we got so low as Mendelssohn's 'Songs without Words,' which Mr. Boughton interpreted as 'Songs without Intelligence.' Playing a song by Stravinsky, he suggested that the composer wrote that kind of music with his finger to his nose. By contrast, he asked his audience to listen to music written by a young Russian, at Moscow—'a charming lullaby, with character and beauty.'

Speaking of 'Programme Music,' Dr. Norman Hay, at Belfast, said the only way to a real appreciation of abstract music was to hear it again and again. Let them fill their souls with the glories of its tone and its chords. Let them learn to unravel its counterpoint, try patiently and loyally to get the panoramic view, the big perspective of its formal structure. The easy way—trying to attach a concrete story to a work like the fifth Symphony—would, he thought, carry them no 'forrader.' Dr. Hay divided programme music into (1) purely imitative music, and (2) music which had merely a general reference to some poetic basis or to some abstract music. All works of this second class were legitimate as music. They must stand or fall as music pure and simple, and, if they stood, the programme mattered little. If they were doomed to fall as music, no programme label would keep them up.

'Voice Production' was the subject treated by Miss Elizabeth Graves at the Dublin School of Singing. Between voice-production and singing, there was, she said, a big step. She hoped to make her young pupils into singers, though she could not promise to make them artists—that depended upon development and character; but she could point out the lines upon which to go. By concentration on voice-production they would get the production automatic, as it were—the steel structure on which they were afterwards to build the artistic superstructure. That superstructure would depend entirely on the singer's own conception of beauty.

Mr. Adam Carse interested his Muswell Hill audience in 'The History of the Orchestra.' The orchestra was, he said, only beginning to come into existence when signs of organization made their appearance at the end of the 16th century, and composers wrote their music for either voice or instrument. The first directions for orchestral instruments were to be found in the Church music at Venice. The earliest compositions for purely instrumental music were written for groups of five players, no account being taken of tone-colour, balance, or individual technique in any particular kind of instrument. A feature of the early orchestra was the bass parts, which were played by the lute and the bass viol, and formed its backbone, as it were. A little later there were evidences of an increase in the size of the orchestra, and the earliest set of band parts in existence were from French ballets performed in the 16th century.

A lecture was given at Belfast on the new examination scheme of the Society of Professional Musicians at Ulster. The object was to train conductors and choirmasters. The Society wished to help organist-choirmasters, teachers, and singing classes and choral conductors. Lists of books for each branch had been prepared, suggested music for special study had been arranged, and practical tests had been set out in the syllabus.

A discussion on hymn-tunes brought a number of speakers to a Church Music Society meeting at Bristol. The last speaker, Mr. A. S. Warrell, had probably the most serviceable thing to say. He appealed for brighter hymn-tunes; also he pointed out that most of the hymns were written in four parts. He thought this was not at all favourable, as people sang mostly in unison. He suggested that the organist should play the tune in the key most suitable for the congregation and not in that in which the tune was written in the tune book. A little attention to this, and a much better and brighter service would result.

From Bach's 'Last Opus' Prof. Donald Tovey argued five propositions at Wigmore Hall, London. He exploded for Bach the fable that Mr. R. O. Morris has demolished for the Italians and the Elizabethans, that the text-books of counterpoint had any connection whatever with the practice of the great composers. One reason for this strange state of affairs was that the Italians, from whom the grammars of music were derived, did not like Bach's style, and another reason was that the grammarians were too nearly contemporary with the composers to have the requisite vision. The most important of the propositions of the lecturer was that the fugue which Bach left unfinished when he was overtaken by his last illness was a fugue on four invertible subjects. Prof. Tovey then played his own completion of this big fugue, explaining that the key to the reconstruction lay in the fact that the fourth subject, which Bach had not introduced at the point when he lay down his pen, was the main fugue subject of the 'Art of Fugue' taken at the twelfth. Riemann had not been able to invert it because he took it at the octave, but that his own reconstruction carried out Bach's intentions completely, Prof. Tovey contended was proved by the fact that it worked.

To a Parents' Association, at Gloucester, Sir Hugh Allen advocated the writing down of tunes. It was as easy to write down a tune the first time one heard it as it was to write down a line of poetry, and yet it was a rare accomplishment, because it was usually begun too late. People believed an expert pianist was a good musician. But that was no more necessarily true than to say that a skilled typist was good at literature. Those parents who wanted their children really to learn music should see that they were taught not only the right way, but also at the right time, and the right time was as early as possible.

Church music was treated historically by Mr. F. C. J. Swanton at the Royal Irish Academy of Music. 'History must be as true as possible,' said the lecturer's cousin, Mr. Hilaire Belloc. It was the rock upon which one stood. When (if ever) the successors of Arnold Schönberg became familiar names on service lists, Bach's Passion and B minor Mass would not be equalled or replaced. Beethoven in his later Mass reverted to 16th-century methods, introducing the bare fifths of Palestrina. Holst and Vaughan Williams were going back to Elizabethan times. Elgar's 'Gerontius' was much influenced by the historic style. As to the future of music, it was not impossible that Europe was losing its capacity for producing great composers, and the palm might then go to America, where there were blood mixtures which were known to produce strong musical characteristics.

A vigorous defence of Stainer was made by Dr. R. Walker Robson at the monthly meeting of the Tonic Sol-fa Association. The 'Crucifixion,' he said, had brought comfort and peace to millions. In similar strain Stainer's critics decried Handel and Mendelssohn. The tirades of abuse came mainly from young men, cathedral organists and clergy of narrow outlook. To such a great personality let us be just and kind.

Mendelssohn was defended by Mr. Alfred W. Fisher in a lecture at Hove. Like his nature, his music was simple, direct, and clear. Mysticism was abhorrent to him, and his efforts were always to pare down the musical content to its simplest.

The String Quartet was sketched in its development by Mr. Allen Gill in a lecture at the Northern Polytechnic—not nearly well enough attended. Of Beethoven it was said that he found music a science and left it an art. This distinction was illustrated by the case of the carefully trained singer. He was conversant with all the different theories of voice-production, and talked glibly about registers, resonance, and colour. He sang by rule—made no mistakes. People discussed his admirable method, his marvellous breathing capacity. He was technically perfect, yet utterly failed to interpret the composer's meaning.

Picture music was the subject Mr. W. A. Chislett took at Halifax in the absence of the lecturer, Mr. Walter Yeomans. The popularity of the gramophone and the number of good records sold, were he said, evidence that we were far from being an unmusical nation. Historically speaking, the English were one of the most musical nations. We had a very fine heritage of folk music and, on the whole, a good taste in music, although we did not seem to fasten on to grand opera. It was too theatrical. It did not appeal to us to see a man stabbed to the heart and taking about half-an-hour to die while some solo was being sung. The gramophone could do for grand opera what the printing press had done for Shakespeare.

'Do not speak disrespectfully of jazz,' said Sir Walford Davies in a lecture at Reading University. 'I saw the face of a little girl who was in a nursing home at the same time as myself brighten up as soon as a jazz music record was played on the gramophone. We were both hungry for music at the time. I personally did not like it, but the little girl did. Jazz has vital rhythm, and we must pause before we criticise it.'

In his tenth lecture, Prof. Percy Buck finished his series at the University of Sheffield. He revealed his entire sympathy with the modern school of composers and his faith in the future of British music. He also showed that he had thrown overboard many of the 19th-century conventions governing composition in which he had been trained. He remarked that it was true of music, as of all the arts, that one's enjoyment of it was increased by knowledge of what it meant and how and why it came about, and the object of his lectures had been to supply the inner meaning of music. Many people, he said, agreed with progress down to their own times, but deprecated further changes.

'Music as an adjunct to worship' gave the Rev. M. A. Bere an opportunity of some outspoken criticism in an address to Hampshire organists. Most choir-trainers, he said, were slaves to the ridiculous fetish of conventional choir-boy falsetto. The notes that suited properly trained boys did not suit the men, or women either, for that matter, and so the adults of the congregation were sacrificed on the choir-boys' altar.

Dr. Frederic H. Wood spoke of 'Some Types of Song,' at Liverpool. These were the folk-song, ballad, art-song, and opera song. Of the ballad type he instanced Martin Shaw's 'Annabel Lee.' That version showed how far we had travelled from the days of Henry Leslie and his famous choir. Of songs of emotion, he singled out Parry's 'Why art thou slow, O death?' as one of the best of its kind. Of the complicated modern song he mentioned as examples Bantock's Chinese songs and Martin Shaw's 'Wood Magic.' The whole question with the listening public seemed to be the personality of the singer, whereas the message was of much greater importance. The true artist would always place this first.

J. G.

Occasional Notes

We had hoped that the discussion on 'The Ethics of Borrowing' would end with our 'Occasional Note' in last month's issue. We have, however, received two further letters on the subject, one of which, from Mr. Ernest Newman, gives yet another instance of Dr. Eaglefield Hull's habit of appropriating the ideas and even the actual words of other writers.

We add a further example that has been brought to our notice during the past few weeks: In January, 1926, Messrs. Novello published 'The Descant Hymn-Tune Book,' by Geoffrey Shaw. The work opened with a Preface on the principles and use of descant, specially written by the Editor of this journal. In The Organ of July, 1926, appeared a review of Mr. Shaw's work, unsigned, but written (we have ascertained) by Dr. Hull. This so-called review consisted entirely of a substantial extract from the above-mentioned Preface, with no word of acknowledgment and no quotation marks. The 'borrowed' matter (equal in length to about half a column of the Musical Times) was a part of several pages of review contributed to The Organ by Dr. Hull, and presumably he was paid for it in the ordinary way. This inexcusable profiting by the work of another writer calls for plain speech. We therefore bluntly accuse Dr. Hull of including in his contribution to The Organ of July, 1926, a considerable portion of matter belonging to Messrs. Novello, used in such a way as to make it appear to be his own original work.

It is an unfortunate coincidence that at the moment when this side of Dr. Hull's activities is under consideration, his methods of advertising should also be attracting unfavourable notice. Several readers send us copies of a four-page circular advertising his Albert Hall organ recitals. We pass by the flamboyant nature of most of the circular, on the charitable assumption that the drafting thereof was done by a publicity agent who is unaware of the very reasonable conventions that are observed in announcing an important musical event. (In fairness to this agent, however, we must assume also that Dr. Hull supplied the material and passed the draft.) The point we wish to deal with is that raised by several correspondents, and concerns a statement in the circular to the effect that Dr. Hull 'has edited the complete organ works of Rheinberger.' The facts are as follows: Dr. Hull's name was one of several submitted to Messrs. Forberg, of Leipsic, by their London representatives, as possible editors of a projected new edition of the seventeen Organ Sonatas in Messrs. Forberg's catalogue. Dr. Hull has never been commissioned to do the work. On the contrary, within a few days of his publicly announcing that he had completed the new edition, we were informed that Messrs. Forberg had decided to hold up the project for the time being! Now, a mis-statement of this kind is not an accident, and it cannot be ascribed to the imaginative publicity agent. It must have come from Dr. Hull himself, and nobody knew better than he how remote it was from the truth. The most adequate comment is in the form of a question. Let Dr. Hull ask himself what would happen to the holder of a Doctor's degree in Medicine, or Law, or any science or art other than Music, who employed such a method of publicity as this—a method that lowers the status of the advertiser and of the profession to which

(Continued on page 344.)

Come, my Way, my Truth, my Life

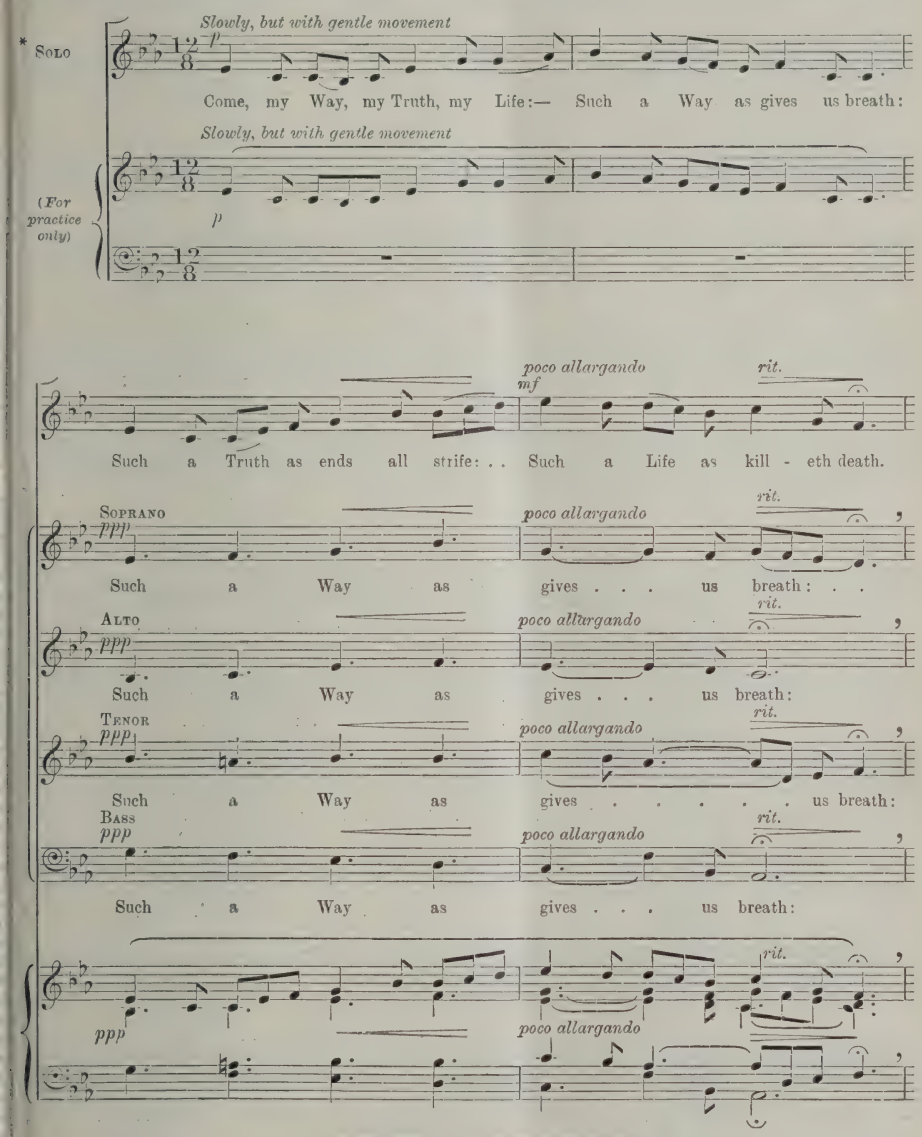
ANTHEM FOR UNACCOMPANIED VOICES

Words by George Herbert Music by Roy Thompson

London: Novello and Company, Limited: New York: The H. W. Gray Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



* Contralto or Mezzo-Soprano

Copyright, 1928, by Novello and Company, Limited

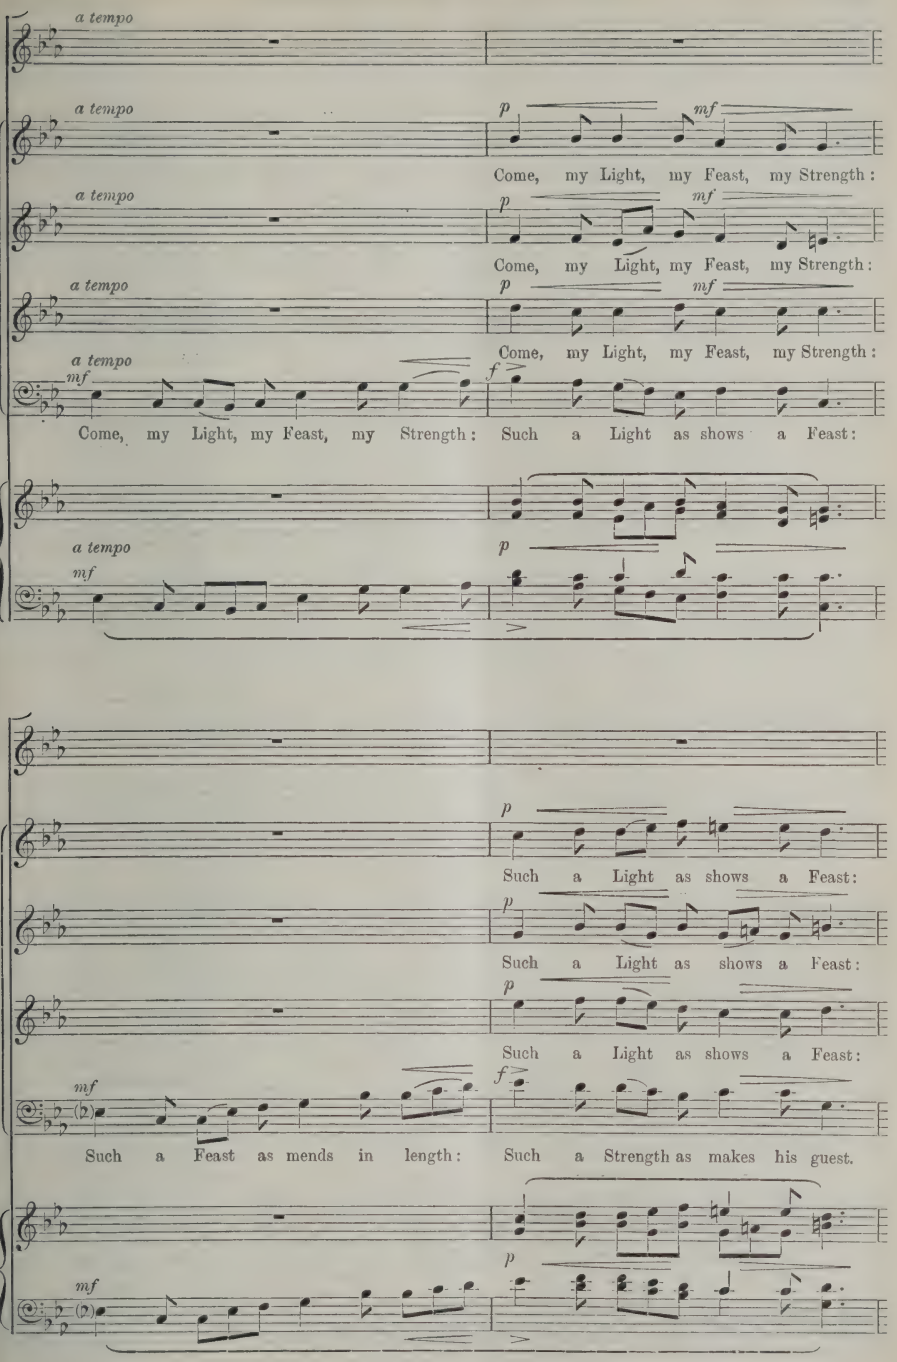
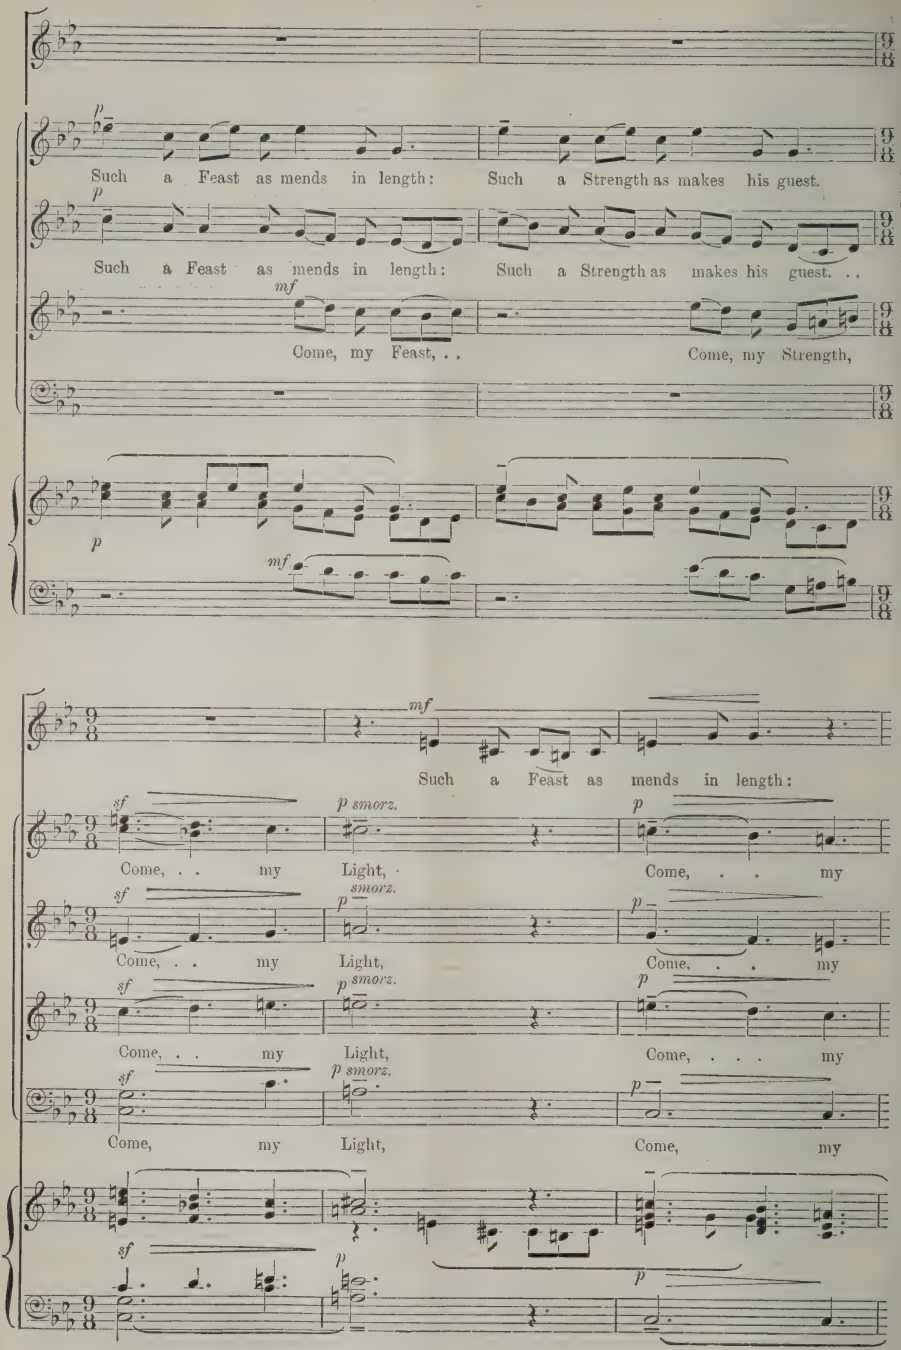
a tempo
pp
cres.
Such a Truth as ends all strife: Such a Life as kill - eth death. . .
Such a Truth as ends all strife: . . Such a Life as kill - eth death.
Such a Truth as ends all strife: . . Such a Life as kill - eth death.
Such a Truth as ends all strife: Such a Life as kill - eth death.
pp a tempo
f
rall.
Come, . . my Way, my Truth, . . my Life. . . .
Come, my Way, . . my Truth, . . my Life. . .
Come, my Way, . . my . . Truth, . . my Life. . .
Come, my Way, my Truth, . . my Life. . . .
Come, . . . . . my Truth, . . my Life. . .



a tempo
p
mf
Come, my Light, my Feast, my Strength:
Come, my Light, my Feast, my Strength:
Come, my Light, my Feast, my Strength:
Come, my Light, my Feast, my Strength: Such a Light as shows a Feast:
f
Such a Light as shows a Feast:
Such a Light as shows a Feast:
Such a Light as shows a Feast:
Such a Feast as mends in length: Such a Strength as makes his guest.



p
Such a Feast as mends in length: Such a Strength as makes his guest.
p
Such a Feast as mends in length: Such a Strength as makes his guest. . .
mf
Come, my Feast, . . Come, my Strength,
p
mf
mf
Such a Feast as mends in length:
sf
p smorz.
p
Come, . . my Light, Come, . . my sf
p smorz.
p
Come, . . my Light, Come, . . my sf
p smorz.
p
Come, . . my Light, Come, . . . my sf
p smorz.
p
Come, my Light, Come, my sf
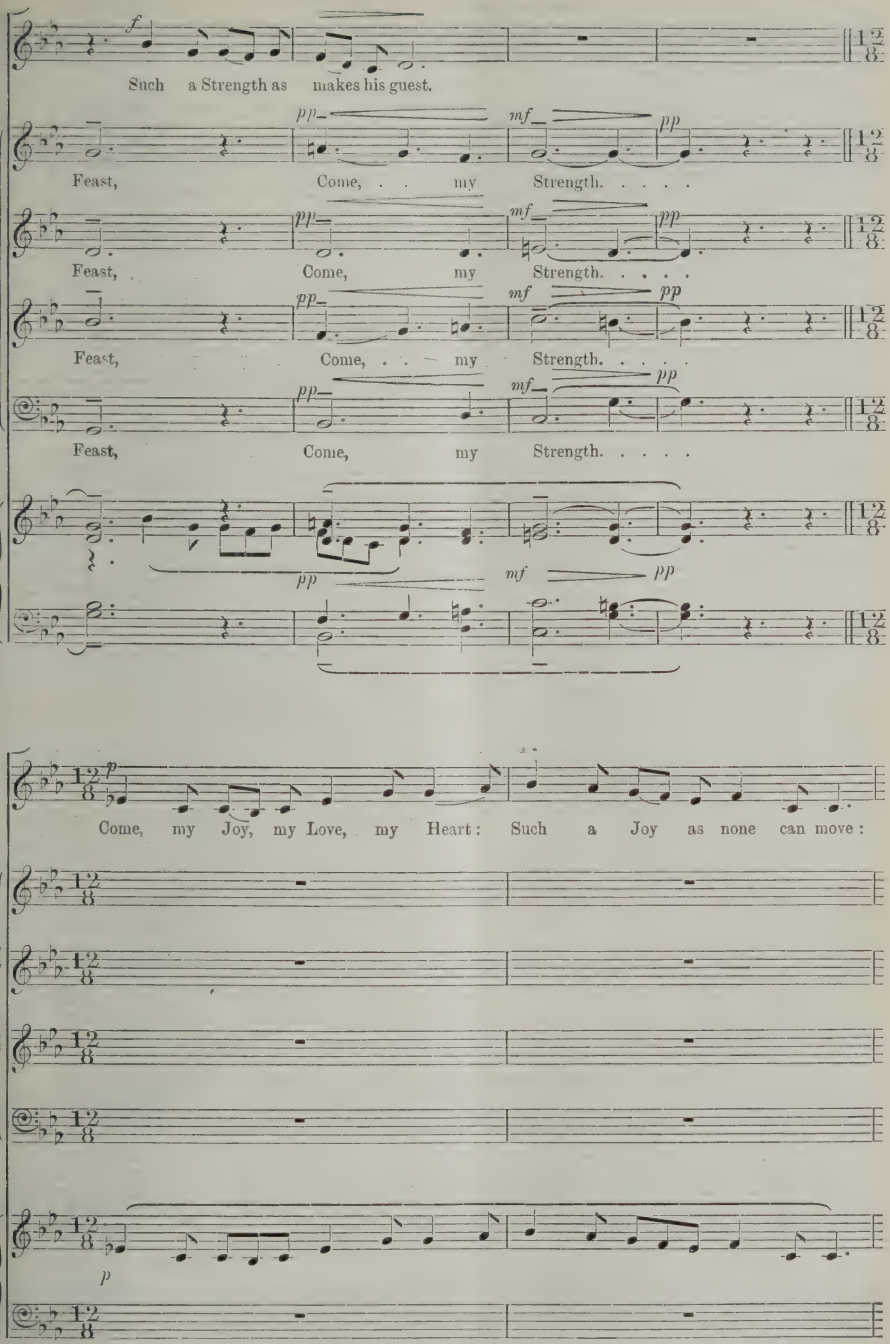
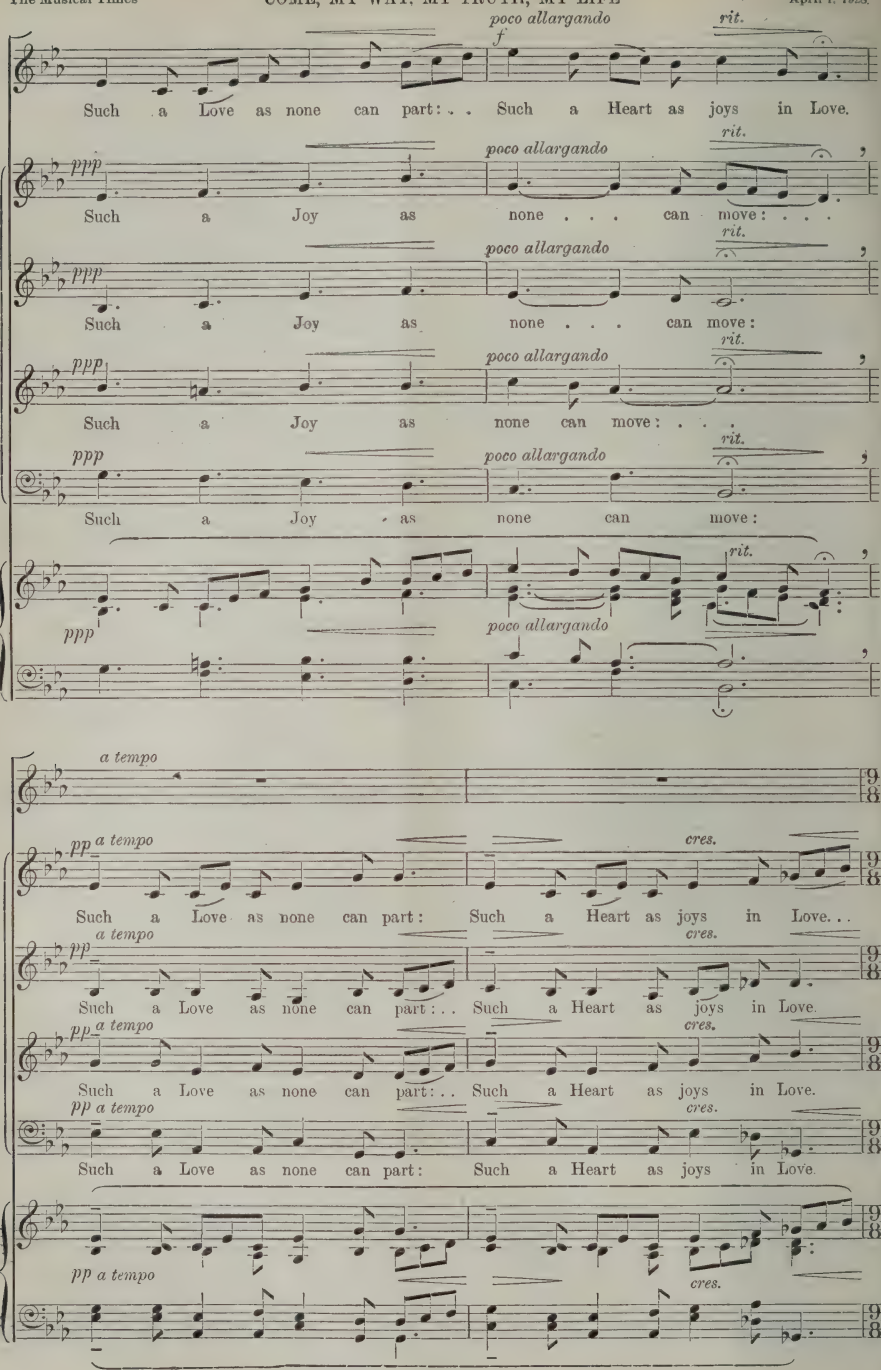
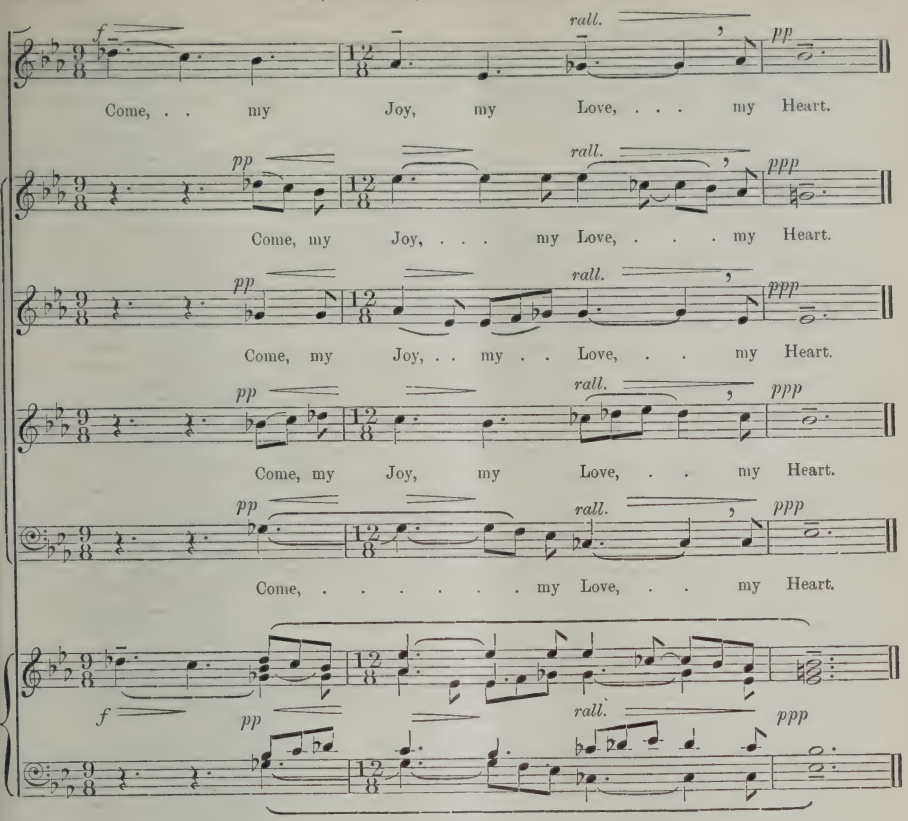
p
p



Such a Strength as makes his guest.
Feast, Come, . . my Strength. . . . .
Feast, Come, my Strength. . . . .
Feast, Come, . . . my Strength. . . . .
Feast, Come, my Strength. . . . .
Come, my Joy, my Love, my Heart: Such a Joy as none can move:



poco allargando
rit.
f
Such a Love as none can part: . . Such a Heart as joys in Love.
ppp
Such a Joy as none . . . can move: . . .
Such a Joy as none . . . can move:
Such a Joy as none can move: . . .
Such a Joy as none can move:
a tempo
pp
cres.
Such a Love as none can part: Such a Heart as joys in Love. . .
Such a Love as none can part: . . Such a Heart as joys in Love.
Such a Love as none can part: . . Such a Heart as joys in Love.
Such a Love as none can part: Such a Heart as joys in Love.



f
rall.
pp
Come, . . my Joy, my Love, . . . my Heart.
pp
rall.
ppp
Come, my Joy, . . . my Love, . . . my Heart.
pp
rall.
ppp
Come, my Joy, . . my . . Love, . . my Heart.
pp
rall.
ppp
Come, my Joy, my Love, . . my Heart.
pp
rall.
ppp
Come, . . . . . my Love, . . my Heart.
f
pp
rall.
ppp

(Continued from page 336.)

he belongs. Moreover, to advertise unfairly is to compete unfairly. We hope that in the near future some musical organization, such as the I.S.M. (or Dr. Hull's own body, the B.M.S.), will be empowered to deal drastically with unprofessional conduct of this kind.

In the course of his letter, Mr. Newman makes it clear that he writes in no unfriendly spirit to Dr. Hull. We shall perhaps be disbelieved, but that is our claim also. We take the matter up because, so long as the musical profession has no governing body able to deal with breaches of conduct or etiquette on the part of its members, that unpleasant duty devolves on the musical press. When the offending member holds the highest academical distinction, and occupies so prominent a position as in this case, the need for plain speaking is the more imperative.

A Handel performance of unusual interest will take place at Bishopsgate Institute on April 26, at 8, when the Harold Brooke Choir will perform 'Belshazzar' in the new abridged edition. This work, though very little known, contains some of Handel's most graphic music, its vivid characterisation suggesting opera rather than oratorio. The soloists will be Norah Scott Turner, Percy Manchester, John Buckley, with Bernhard Ord as harpsichordist and Francis Sutton at the organ. Bishopsgate Institute is close to Liverpool Street Station, and is easily reached from Oxford Circus by the Central London Railway.

Dr. Albert Ham's old friends in this country will be interested to know that he is resigning the conductorship of the National Chorus of Toronto in order to concentrate his energies mainly on his work at St. James's Cathedral. He founded this fine choir twenty-five years ago, and his retirement brings to an end a long spell of fruitful choral activity. It is worth recording that the National Chorus came into being during the wave of enthusiasm created by the visit to Toronto, in 1903, of Sir Alexander Mackenzie in connection with the series of Festivals organized by Mr. (now Dr.) Charles Harriss. The National Chorus consisted of two hundred voices, and its programmes have always drawn liberally on British composers. In recent years it specialised in a cappella singing, and was, in fact, the only large-scale choral body in the continent to do so. Throughout it has maintained a standard of choralism worthy of its British origin, and as a popular educative force has done invaluable service to music in Canada. The Chorus will now cease to exist under its original name, but will no doubt be re-organized. The last concert under Dr. Ham's régime took place on January 26, and according to Canadian press reports was distinguished by performances worthy of the high reputation of the choir.

Our Scottish correspondent reports a choral event that deserves the added publicity of a few words here. On March 3, four of the most prominent of Lancashire mixed-voice choirs, from Barrow, Blackburn, Blackpool, and Sale, visited Glasgow, where they were entertained to tea by the Glasgow Orpheus. Each of the five choirs then performed a programme of about half-an-hour's duration, all joining together afterwards in singing 'Jerusalem,' Parry's 'There is an old belief,' and the 'Hallelujah Chorus.' We give the titles of the principal items sung by the various choirs: 'Sweet honey-sucking bees,' 'Death on the hills,' Cornelius's 'Surrender of the soul' (Barrow Madrigal Society); Bax's 'Of a rose I sing,' Stanford's 'Ye holy angels,' and Benet's 'All creatures now are merry-minded' (Dr. Brearley's Choir, Blackburn); Byrd's 'I thought that love had been a boy,' Bainton's 'The Ballad of Semmerwater,' Elgar's 'O wild west wind' (Sale and District Musical Society); 'Weary wind of the west,' Brahms's 'Song of Destiny,' Walford Davies's 'These sweeter far than lilies are' (Blackpool Glee and Madrigal Society); 'The cloud-capt towers,' Pearsall's 'Great god of love,' Weelkes's 'Hark, all ye lovely saints' (Glasgow Orpheus). What a feast! When another such gathering takes place, may we be there to hear!

One point standing out in connection with this unique affair is that all the four Lancashire choirs are of the competitive kind. People who oppose the Competition Festival movement on the ground that it fosters the hunting of pots, scalps, and marks, at the expense of music itself, are faced with the fact that these choirs, who paid their very considerable travelling expenses to Glasgow, and sang to one another and together for the mere love of singing, are the product of the Competition Festival movement. We congratulate the enthusiastic promoters of this Glasgow meeting, and especially Mr. Harry Cooper, of St. Anne's, with whom, we understand, the project originated.

Amateur operatic societies are as a rule the most unenterprising of bodies. An experiment which Messrs. Chappell are making may lead some of them to become pioneers. At the Scala Theatre, on April 24, the Stock Exchange Dramatic and Operatic Society will give the first and several successive performances of a new light opera, 'Her Ladyship,' by Howard Talbot, the librettists being Percy Greenbank and Dorothy Langton. This use of amateur companies for trial-trip purposes strikes us as being a happy idea. If successful, it should point the way to the removal of the chief of the economic obstacles that hinder the production of new English light operas.

A number of readers send us a cutting from the Church Times of February 21, in which an advertiser in a country parish seeks for an organist 'who would do housework in vicarage, occasional gardening, and drive Singer car.' Our correspondents write in moods ranging from anger to amusement, and ask us to 'go for' the advertiser. We are sorry, but we can't pump up any wrath.

In a small country parish where funds do not permit of the engagement of a fully-qualified professional organist, and where there is no teaching or other musical work to be had, the post must be held by a semi-amateur, i.e., one whose main employment is non-musical. This being so, it is mere snobbishness to draw distinctions between the various non-musical jobs that may be combined with that of organist. Provided the semi-amateur does his bit of church work satisfactorily, does it matter whether the bulk of his time is spent in an office, a shop, the driver's seat of a motor car, or the vicarage garden? We say no; and having swallowed the vicarage garden, we do not strain at the vicarage kitchen. We have had personal knowledge of excellent choir and organ work being done, free or for a nominal salary, by men in avocations as apparently incongruous as those mentioned in the advertisement, and but for their willing service the work would not have been done at all. The advertiser's mistake, we think, was in the wording. What he really wants is a gardener and odd man who can also play the organ. So far from poking fun at him, we wish him luck in his search.

A recent issue of the Manchester Guardian contained a report of a London College of Music prize distribution at which the Lord Mayor of Manchester presided, the Lady Mayoress giving away the prizes.

In his address the Lord Mayor seemed to hint at identifying himself still further with the College activities. Clearly he is unaware of the low estimation in which it is held by the bulk of the musical profession. We suggest to his Lordship that he should consult the heads of the teaching profession at Manchester before again lending the prestige of his name and office to the concern. Perhaps the local branches of the I.S.M., B.M.S., N.O.A., and Music Teachers' Association, will join forces and see that the Lord Mayor is properly informed.

The Annual Dinner of the Musicians' Benevolent Fund will take place at the Savoy Hotel on April 25, at 7.30. Sir John Reith will be chairman, and among the speakers will be Dame Ethel Smyth. Mr. John Drinkwater will read some of his poems, and an attractive programme of music will be arranged. The dinner will be preceded by a reception at 7. Tickets cost one guinea, and are to be had from the Secretary, Musicians' Benevolent Fund, 16, John Street, Bedford Row, W.C.1.

The Albert Hall organ 'will eventually contain 9,562 speaking stops,' says a daily paper. Evidently Mr. Cochran has good reason for boasting that the South Kensington monster will out-do that little chamber-organ in Liverpool Cathedral, with its mere trifle of 168 stops.

Church and Organ Music

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

Lectures will be given at the College, on Tuesday, May 15, as follows: At 3 p.m., by Dr. W. H. Harriss, M.A., F.R.C.O. (organist of New College, Oxford), on 'General Points to be observed in Choir-Training'; at 6.30 p.m., by Dr. Ernest Bullock, F.R.C.O. (organist of Westminster Abbey), on 'Anglican Chanting.' Admission free. The Choir-Training Examination will be held on Wednesday, May 16.

Dr. A. Eaglefield Hull, F.R.C.O., will give four historical organ recitals at the College on Saturday afternoons, April 28, May 5, 12, and 19, at 3.30 p.m. Admission free, no tickets required. A collection will be made at each recital in aid of the Organists' Benevolent League. The subjects of the four recitals are: (1) Primitive—from Frescobaldi to Purcell; (2) Classical—from Buxtehude to Mendelssohn; (3) Romantic—from Franck to Widor; (4) Contemporary.

An examination for the Sir John Goss scholarship will be held at the College in May or June. The successful candidate will be entitled to three years' free tuition at the Royal Academy of Music. Candidates must be either choristers or ex-choristers, and under seventeen years of age on the date of examination. Particulars, date of entry, &c., may be obtained from the Registrar of the College, Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

H. A. Harding, Hon. Secretary.

MALVERN PRIORY

Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper have recently installed a new organ is this historic church. Following is the specification:

| | Pedal Organ (Eleven Stops) | ft. |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | Double Open ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 32 |
| | (Bottom 7 notes separate Quint Pipes. Extension of No. 2.) | |
| 2. | Open Wood ... ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 3. | Violone (from Great) ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 4. | Bourdon ... ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 5. | Dulciana (from Choir) ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 6. | Principal ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 7. | Flute Bass (extension of No. 4) ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 8. | Fifteenth (extension of No. 6) ... ... ... ... | 4 |
| 9. | Trombone ... ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 10. | Double Horn (from Solo) ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 11. | Posaune (extension of No. 9) ... ... ... ... | 8 |

I. Great Pistons to Pedal Combinations.
II Solo to Pedal.
III. Swell to Pedal.
IV. Great to Pedal.
V. Choir to Pedal.

| | Choir Organ (Seven Stops) | ft. |
|---|---|---|
| 12. | Contra Dulciana ... ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 13. | Open Diapason ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 14. | Claribel Flute ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 15. | Dulciana ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 16. | Principal ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 |
| 17. | Flauto Traverso ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 |
| 18. | Piccolo ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 |

VI. Swell to Choir.
VII. Solo to Choir.

| | Great Organ (Thirteen Stops) | ft. |
|---|---|---|
| 19. | Gross Geigen ... ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 20. | Open Diapason (Large) ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 21. | Open Diapason (Medium) ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 22. | Open Diapason (Small) ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 23. | Stopped Diapason ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 24. | Principal ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 |
| 25. | Wald Flute ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 |
| 26. | Twelfth ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2⅔ |
| 27. | Fifteenth ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 |
| 28. | Mixture (3 ranks) | |
| 29. | Contra Tromba ... ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 30. | Tromba ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 31. | Octave Tromba ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 |

VIII. Solo to Great.
IX. Swell to Great.
X. Choir to Great.

| | Swell Organ (Thirteen Stops) | ft. |
|---|---|---|
| 32. | Bourdon ... ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 33. | Open Diapason ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 34. | Rohr Flute ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 35. | Salicional ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 36. | Vox Angelica ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 37. | Principal ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 |
| 38. | Stopped Flute ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 |
| 39. | Fifteenth ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 |
| 40. | Mixture (3 ranks) | |
| 41. | Oboe ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |

XI. Tremulant.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 42. | Double Trumpet ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 43. | Trumpet ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 44. | Clarion ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 |

XII. Solo to Swell.
XIII. Octave.
XIV. Sub-Octave.

| | Solo Organ (Seven Stops) | ft. |
|---|---|---|
| 45. | Viol d'Orchestre ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 46. | Orchestral Flute ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 47. | Harmonic Flute ... ... ... ... ... | 4 |
| 48. | Corno di Bassetto ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |
| 49. | Cor Anglais ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |

XV. Tremulant

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 50. | French Horn ... ... ... ... ... ... | 16 |
| 51. | Tuba ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 |

XVI. Octave.
XVII. Sub-Octave.
XVIII. Unison Off.

Accessories

Six thumb pistons (one adjustable) to Great organ.
Seven thumb pistons (one adjustable) to Swell organ.
Six thumb pistons (one adjustable) to Solo organ.
Three thumb pistons to Choir organ.
Reversible piston—Great to Pedal
Reversible piston—Swell to Pedal.
Reversible piston—Solo to Pedal.
Reversible piston—Swell to Great.
Reversible piston—Solo to Great.
Five combination pedals acting on Swell and Pedal.
Five combination pedals acting on Pedal

CHURCH MUSIC CONFERENCE AT OSTEND

We have received further particulars of this event, a preliminary announcement of which appeared in our last issue. The Conference will take place during Whitsun-week at the Kursaal and the Hotel de Ville, Ostend, by courtesy of the Burgomaster and College of Echevins. There will be two periods, the first, for the convenience of those who can attend for a long week-end only, from Friday, May 25, till the Monday night; the second, for clergy, organists, and other Church workers, from Whit-Monday morning till the following Saturday, with the option of returning by an earlier boat if desired. The papers and discussions will cover, among other subjects, 'Tone production and class singing in schools'; 'The value of singing as a moral training for the young'; 'The relative value, as aids to devotion, of organ recitals, choral festivals and anthems, &c.'; 'Co-ordination of welfare units'; 'The training of choir and congregation'; 'The musical activities of a parish,' &c. We have no list of speakers, but we understand that promises of help have been received from men of experience and understanding. The expenses will be very moderate, the inclusive cost of the first period being £3 1*s.* 9*d.* to £3 9*s.* 2*d.*; for the second period £3 17*s.* 6*d.* to £4 6*s.* 9*d.*, which covers third-class train and first-class boat fares, full board at hotels, and excursions to Zeebrugge, Ghent, and Bruges. Full particulars and application forms may be had from the Secretary, Churchmen's Choral Union, 1*a*, The Cloisters, Inner Temple, E.C.1. (Stamped, addressed envelope should be sent.)

PRESENTATION TO MR. CHARLES J. KING

This well-known Northampton organist and conductor has just completed fifty years as a Church musician. In celebration of the event a gathering took place, at which warm tributes were paid to his work by Canon Hussey, the Mayor of Northampton, and Sir Henry Randall, the last-named handing to Mr. King an illuminated address and a cheque for £150. Mr. King's activities have been by no means confined to the organ-loft. He has played a prominent part in the musical life of the town and district as choral trainer and conductor, string player, lecturer, teacher, &c. Only those of us who have had occasion to visit Northampton frequently can realise fully the town's indebtedness to him, and we are glad to record this evidence of public appreciation.

The organ at the Guildhall School of Music has now been rebuilt and brought up to modern requirements. It is practically a replica of that at the Royal College of Organists. The Swell and Choir organs are in a box, and in addition to the ordinary crescendo pedals, balance pedals have been added, and pistons on each manual duplicate the pedal compositions. There is a special course of preparation for the diplomas of A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O., A.G.S.M., and L.G.S.M. in solo playing and church service accompaniment under eminent teachers, and students taking examinations are permitted to practise (free of charge) beforehand. The next term begins on April 23. Full particulars on application to the Registrar.

A fine recital of unaccompanied works was given by the choir of Ripon Cathedral on March 14, under the direction of Dr. C. H. Moody. The programme included Palestrina's 'O Salutaris Hostia,' Victoria's 'Libera me,' and 'O all ye that pass by,' Anerio's 'Christus factus est,' the Miserere of Allegri, Purcell's 'Jehovah, quam multi,' and Mendelssohn's 22nd Psalm (double choir).

The annual choir Festival of Highgate Congregational Church will take place on April 15 and 18, at 8, when the following works will be performed: April 15, Handel's sixth Chandos Anthem and Purcell's Te Deum in D; April 18, Brahms's 'Song of Destiny,' Vaughan Williams's Five Mystical Songs, songs, &c., by Schubert, and a Purcell String Suite.

The annual performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion at St. Paul's Cathedral will take place on Tuesday in Holy week (April 3), at 6.30.

The sixth concert of the All Saints' (Bradford) Bach Choir, on March 14, covered a good deal of ground—chorales, organ solos, violin and pianoforte works (Concerto in E, &c.), and the Cantata, 'O Light Everlasting.' Mr. John Dunn played the violin, and Mr. Charles Stott was organist, pianist, and conductor.

Mr. Wilfrid Greenhouse Allt has just given eight Bach recitals at St. Giles's Cathedral, Edinburgh, playing about forty works. A helpful feature was the complete list of works played, in chronological order, with page and volume references to the Novello edition.

At Southwark Cathedral, on April 14, at 3, unaccompanied Motets, varied by string quartets, will form the programme. The choral items will consist of Byrd's 'Sing joyfully,' Anerio's 'Christus surrexit,' two Motets by Charles Wood, and Easter carols.

'The Dream of Gerontius' was sung by the City Temple Choral Society on March 17, conducted by Mr. Allan Brown, with Mr. G. D. Cunningham at the organ. The soloists were Miss Margaret Balfour, Mr. Andrew Clayton, and Mr. Samuel Dyson.

On February 5, at St. Alban's Church, Llanelly, nine anthems of the Tudor period were sung after evensong, the composers represented being Tallis, Byrd, Farrant, Tye, Weelkes, and Hilton.

RECITALS

Mr. E. Emlyn Davies, Westminster Congregational Church—Prelude in Form of a Toccata, Stanford; Sonata, Reubke; Passacaille ('Rodrigo'), Handel.

Dr. Chastey Hector, Brighton Parish Church—Introduction and Fugue, Reubke; Allegretto and Bohemesque, Wolstenholme. (The choir sang Wesley's 'The Wilderness.')

Miss Helen Hogan, Liverpool Cathedral—Prelude, Fugue, and Chaconne, Buxtehude; Choral No. 2, Franck; 'Hymn to the Stars,' Karg-Elert; Finale (Symphony No. 3), Vierne.

Mr. Reginald Cooper, Riddings Parish Church—'St. Anne' Fugue, Bach; Suite Gothique, Boëllmann; Variations on 'Hanover,' Lemare.

Mr. Edward G. Yeo, Christ Church, Westminster—Prelude and Fugue in D minor, Mendelssohn; Chorale, 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring,' Bach; March in B flat, Silas.

Miss Doris Fenner, St. Lawrence Jewry—Evening Song, Bairstow; Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach; Pastorale, Franck; Carillon, Vierne.

Miss Edna C. Howard, St. Mary-le-Bow—Rhapsody, Howells; Fantasia on 'Hanover,' Lemare; Sposalizio, Liszt; Carillon, Vierne.

Miss Lilian Coombes, Brixton Independent Church—Variations on 'Heartsease,' Geoffrey Shaw; Choral No. 2, Franck; Introduction, Fugue, and Menuet, Adams; Fugue in E minor, Bach; Scherzo, Bossi.

Mr. Guy Michell, St. John's, Hove—Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Berceuse, Lemare; 'Angelus,' Karg-Elert; Toccata in F sharp minor, Mulet.

Mr. J. Eric Hunt, National Institute for the Blind—Evening Song, Bairstow; Triumphal March, Karg-Elert; 'Londonderry Air,' arr. J. Eric Hunt; Allegro maestoso in F sharp, Rheinberger.

Mr. Philip Miles, St. Alban-the-Martyr, Westcliff—Slow movement (String Quartet), Debussy; Three Canons, Philip Miles; Prelude and Fugue in G, Bach.

Dr. Caradog Roberts, Wallasey Town Hall—Overture in C, Mendelssohn; 'Finlandia'; Toccata in B minor, Gigout; Fugue in G minor, Bach.

Miss Marjorie T. Renton, St. Lawrence Jewry—Pastorale, Franck; Fantasia and Fugue, Parry; Benedictus, Stanford; Fugue, Reubke.

Mr. George C. Gray, Ipswich Public Hall—Elegy, Bairstow; Grande Pièce Symphonique, Franck; 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring,' Bach; Epilogue on the 'Old 100th,' Farrar.

Mr. H. C. Warrilow, National Institute for the Blind—Short Postlude in G, Stanford; Concerto No. 5, Handel; Allegro marziale, Greenhill.

Mr. C. S. Richards, Hexham Abbey—'Pomp and Circumstance' No. 1, Elgar; Fugue in D, Bach; Caprice in B flat, Richards; Finale (Symphony No. 3), Vierne.

Mr. H. Goss-Custard, Middleton Parish Church—Con moto moderato, Smart; Scherzo in G minor, Bossi; Fantasia in E, Wolstenholme: Symphony No. 6, Widor.

Mr. Cyril Pearce, St. Peter's Wesleyan Church, Norwich—Minuetto, Gigout; Rhapsody, Harvey Grace; Introduction and Fugue, Reubke; Preludio (Sonata No. 6), Rheinberger.

Mr. Paul Rochard, Hinckley Congregational Church—'The East Wind' and 'The North Wind,' Rowley; Variations, Bonnet; Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach.

Mr. Ralph Downes, Keble College—Symphony No. 2, Vierne; Canonical Variations on 'Vom Himmel hoch,' Bach; Sonata No. 13, Rheinberger.

Mr. Harold Dawber, Middleton Parish Church—Prelude and Fugue on BACH, Liszt; 'The Four Winds,' Rowley; March from a Suite, Holst.

Mr. Claude A. Forster, St. John's, Forfar—Sonata No. 18, Rheinberger; Arcadian Idyll, Lemare; Fugue in G minor, Bach.

Mr. G. W. Harris Sellick, Middleton Parish Church—Sonata in G, Elgar; 'Unfinished' Symphony, Schubert; Chorale Prelude, 'Now thank we all our God,' Karg-Elert.

Mr. George Metzler, St. Stephen's Walbrook—Sonata No. 5, Mendelssohn; Sonata No. 10, Rheinberger; Canon and Sketch in F minor, Schumann.

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Allan Brown, organist and musical director, Kingsway Hall.

Mr. Wilfrid Dunwell, choirmaster and organist, the Parish Church, Alnwick.

Mr. Frank H. Mather, choirmaster and organist, St. Peter's, Perth Amboy, New Jersey, U.S.A.

Mr. Percy G. Saunders, choirmaster and organist, Melton Mowbray Parish Church.

Mr. Arthur M. Stacey, choirmaster and organist, Church of the Ascension, Balham Hill, S.W.12.

Mr. Eric Warr, choirmaster and organist, Holy Trinity, St. Marylebone.

Letters to the Editor

THE ETHICS OF BORROWING

Sir,—Apropos of the 'Ethics of Borrowing' and Dr. Hull's preface, 'I have taken stones for my walls . . . . without always troubling to acknowledge it when the lifting is as apparent as . . . .': surely Dr. Hull does not realise the full significance of his statements and to where such actions may lead! Perhaps the following relation of a certain 'lifting' and its possible results may make it clearer to him, and to others holding similar views, if any such there be.

Some years ago I completed a scientific work on entirely new lines, and sent my MS. to a firm of publishers, who wrote me saying they had forwarded it to Sir —— for report. A few weeks later the publishers wrote to me again, with the information that the report of Sir —— was not at all favourable and they returned my MS. accordingly.

I despatched it immediately to a second publisher, who accepted it at once and we completed arrangements for its production.

That its publication was justified is shown in the fact that it has since become a standard work on its subject, and adopted as a text-book by many universities and educational bodies the world over.

Even while I was correcting the proofs, however, my bookseller, in a casual, friendly way, showed me a prospectus of a forthcoming book by Sir ——, giving three specimen pages which were 'lifted' from my MS. word for word. The title only appeared to have been altered; in all other respects the book seemed to be mine throughout.

I wrote to the publishers to whom I had first sent the MS., who (notwithstanding their two letters sent to me, cited above) now replied that they never had submitted my MS. to Sir ——!

I then turned the whole matter over to my solicitor. He wrote to Sir ——, who neither replied to nor acknowledged the letter, but the trade was circularised to the effect that owing to his many engagements Sir —— found himself quite unable to produce his work on ——, consequently the proposed publication was abandoned.

A few weeks later my own work appeared, with the result stated. The question is, 'What would have happened had the pirated copy appeared first?' Under another title I might never have seen the book; and, further, the MS. having previously been sent out to only one publisher who decided to prevaricate over it in someone else's interest (see above), my own proof of precedence might possibly have been very difficult to maintain against a book already published.

If publishers' readers are allowed to take off the 'cream,' and to 'cull' from authors' MSS. and incorporate what best suits them in their own published works 'without always troubling to acknowledge it,' the work from which the 'culling' is made being unpublished, there is opened out not only a great breach of faith but a serious menace to any and every author.

Publishers' readers, like Cæsar's wife, should be beyond suspicion, or no author's work is safe.—Yours, &c.,

Congl Wyntog, Pen-y-Groes, N. Wales. JOHN MASTIN.

---

Sir,—As bearing on the interesting correspondence between Dr. Eaglefield Hull and Mr. Percy Scholes, may I draw attention to one or two cases in Dr. Hull's book in which my own work seems to have been laid under unacknowledged contribution? I wish to do so not from the least spirit of unfriendliness to Dr. Hull, but to point out to him the difficulties and dangers, both for himself and for others, involved in what appears to be his method of quoting other authors without giving the reader any indication that he is indulging in quotation.

In his chapter on Wagner, Dr. Hull has the sentences quoted in the left-hand column that follows: in the right-hand column are certain sentences from my 'Wagner as Man and Artist':

| | |
|---|---|
| 'Wagner had this wonderful capacity for bathing each scene and each character in a light of its own. One can almost tell the time of day. Take the blinding sunlight on the mountain height on which Brynhilde awakes to human life and love' (p. 126). | 'No one except Hugo Wolf has ever approached Wagner in the capacity for bathing each scene, each character, in a light and an atmosphere of its own' (p. 308). |
| | 'In Wagner's music, as in Wolf's, one is conscious not only of the locality and the person and the race: one can almost tell the time of day. Music like that at the awakening of Brynhilde would go with nothing but a mountain height in blinding sunlight' (p. 310). |

It is true that Dr. Hull more than once mentions my name in his chapter on Wagner, but no hint whatever is given the reader that my actual phraseology is being employed in the sentences I have quoted above from 'Music: Classical, Romantic, and Modern.'

Let me now quote, in the left-hand column, some passages from Dr. Hull's chapter on Mozart, and in the right-hand column some passages from an article of mine in the Sunday Times of July 4, 1926—i.e., a considerable time before the publication of Dr. Hull's book:

| | |
|---|---|
| 'There is yet another side to all this serene music. Some of his contemporaries found his music melancholy. This strain comes out in | 'That there was a pessimistic and even wild strain in him is certain, but it shows itself in phrases rather than in works or | the most unexpected places. The great descending B minor phrase at the opening of the section of the Adagio for strings in the second Divertimento, and the opening phrase of the C minor Pianoforte Fantasia, supply remarkable cases of this baffling blend of melancholy and passionate revolt. Then there is that curious spiritual tumult in the introduction to the C major String Quartet. The rough accents, the angularity of his dynamic curves, his hard harmonic doublings, reveal at times a sombre irritation, some indefinable bitterness which remind us vaguely of certain morbid states in Strauss's "Salome" and "Elektra." But Mozart soon turns aside from these wild strains. No sooner has the cry come than consolation flows in; no sooner is the terror sighted than he is able to turn away and dismiss it from his mind. As a fifteen-year-old boy he wrote from Milan to his sister: "I send you a couple of lines. I saw four fellows hanged in the Cathedral Square. They hang them here just as they do at Lyons." That is all; the horrible experience is dismissed. The subject is puzzling. Was this supremely gifted, abnormally sensitive little being unable to feel the tragedies of life as other men? Or did he possess some superior philosophy which enabled him to rise above the unpleasant side of things?'

movements as a whole. A typical illustration may be had in the Adagio for strings in the second Divertimento. The great descending B minor phrase with which the second section of the Adagio opens is one of the most tragic melodies ever written by Mozart—a blend of noble melancholy and passionate revolt. Any other composer, and especially a 20th-century romantic, would have made it the text for a long rhapsody of sorrow; we can imagine how Tchaikovski would have wallowed in the emotional possibilities it presents. But with Mozart this mood lasts only a moment; no sooner has the cry been wrung from him than consolation comes, in the shape of a variant of the phrase that swings round into the major and re-establishes the main mood of the work. A similar unconscious procedure will be found here and there in the introduction to another of his most serious works, the C minor Fantasia for pianoforte.

'In these and a thousand other cases that might be cited the principle and the effect are the same; it is as if a cloud trails across the sun for a moment only, as if Mozart could not bear to dwell any longer than that on the darker aspects of life . . . .

'The puzzling question is as to how deeply Mozart really felt the tragedies of his own experience and of men in general. Did they bite deep into him and he consciously brought to them some sort of philosophic anodyne of his own; or was he so made that he was incapable of experiencing certain sensations and emotions with the intensity of other men? There is a curious passage in one of his early letters to his sister that may perhaps have more significance than has hitherto been accorded to it. "So that you may not suppose I am ill," the fifteen-year-old boy writes from Milan, "I write you a couple of lines. I saw four fellows hanged in the Dom Platz. They hang here as they do at Lyons." That is all! It is a strange way for a delicately constructed boy to write about so horrible an experience. Did he feel the horror of it, or was it just an odd spectacle that provoked no particular reactions in him?'

I have italicised the points of verbal coincidence between the two passages; but what may be called the intellectual coincidence is even more striking. There is nothing purely personal to myself, of course, in the argument I was developing in my article—that alongside the conventionally-recognised strain of serenity in Mozart there runs a less generally recognised strain of melancholy; and Dr. Hull might well have developed this now familiar thesis on his own account. But I do not remember to have seen elsewhere the thesis illustrated in the precise way adopted in my article, at all events as regards the theme from the second section of the Adagio of the second Divertimento (Dr. Hull's reference to 'the opening of the section of the Adagio' suggests a little confusion), and as regards the attempt to throw a light on this phase of Mozart's psychology by the passage about the Lyons hangings. It is not a priori impossible, of course, that Dr. Hull or anyone else, without having seen my article, should hit upon the same line of speculation and the same illustrations; but all in all I fancy the reader will agree with me that Dr. Hull has done me the honour to read that article of mine, and that not only the substance of it but a good deal of the phraseology of it has been incorporated in his own book without any hint of this having been given to the reader.

Dr. Hull justifies his rather frequent procedures of this kind by quoting a passage in the preface to his book: 'I have taken stones for my walls, and tiles for my floors, wherever good material came to hand, without always troubling to acknowledge it when the lifting is as apparent as the use of the stones and columns from Hadrian's Wall by the church-builders of Northumberland.'

May I point out to him, however, that the analogy is illegitimate? In the first place, when the church-builders of Northumberland took the stones and columns of Hadrian's Wall and used them for their own purpose they were merely laying hold on matter that had long been derelict and was nobody's property in particular. It will hardly be contended, I think, that the words of living authors, published only a little while before Dr. Hull issued his book, are matter of that kind. In the second place, has Dr. Hull ever reflected what may happen when an author from whose journalistic work he has quoted without acknowledgment (I say nothing of a work as yet unpublished, such as that of Sabaniev) comes to publish that work in book form? Suppose I bring out a study of Mozart one of these days, and incorporate in it the substance of my Sunday Times articles on the subject. Is there not a possibility—even a probability—that many people who remember Dr. Hull's remarks on Mozart will notice the verbal similarity between those remarks and mine, and, ignorant of my priority in the matter, will accuse me of having plagiarised from Dr. Hull?

As I began by saying, in writing this letter I am actuated by no unfriendly feeling towards Dr. Hull, who has done me the honour so often to show that he has read me. I simply wish to point out to him that this method of his of quoting verbally from other authors without giving the reader the slightest indication that he is indulging in quotation is one that may some day lead to far more trouble for both parties than it is worth.—Yours, &c.,

Ernest Newman.

ABSOLUTE PITCH

Sir,—I have been deeply interested in this subject for many years.

Your correspondent 'A Reader,' in the December issue, I will deal with first. His case is exactly the same as mine. I have often seen letters in your valued journal on the subject, but not one has been so explicitly explained before and none such a replica of mine. But possibly I can go further. I can name a note, or key, of any perfect chord struck, without assistance. I have been tested. I was at an organ recital at St. Stephen's Walbrook, when an old friend of mine played a piece which had only been published a short period. I told him I had not heard it before, but nevertheless I could tell him what key he started in, and the following keys it changed from and into, and he admitted I was absolutely correct.

I agree with 'A Reader' that normal pitch is the only right one. Why have more? Cannot we have a standardised one, i.e., normal pitch.

See how convenient it would be for instrumentalists and vocalists alike; then, possibly, we should have more people with that awful, yet very useful, malady of absolute pitch—and perhaps not.

I had a further experience recently at St. Michael's Church, Cornhill, which organ is to my absolute pitch a half-tone higher than is usual. Anybody who makes an investigation on this point will no doubt find I am right.

With regard to your second correspondent, Mr. J. A. Clegg, who writes on this vexed subject in your January issue, on page 61, I am sorry to say I cannot agree with his views. He says there is no such thing as 'Absolute Pitch.' I beg to differ. There is such. I am certain that that particular thing can be hereditary, because my mother, and her father, and no doubt before him, could pitch a true note, without a note given beforehand. I believe that, at all our colleges, for an ear-test examination a note is given beforehand. There are several people no doubt who can guess a note when they are started by, say, the note A. I don't want a starting note. I was at a friend's house a week or so ago; I said to my host, 'Do you know what key that fellow is singing in?' (I did not know the song, it being entirely new to me), and I got up and struck the key on his Bechstein pianoforte, which was perfectly in tune with the pianoforte at the Studio. I struck the singer's last note to give proof again (which proof was not necessary), and my host marvelled. So your correspondent will observe that I don't worry my head about other people's Doh.

I have been a reader of your very interesting journal for thirty years. I apologise for taking up so much space, but I shall be most grateful to you to print my letter verbatim. I have made it as brief as possible.—Yours, &c.,

11, Holden Road, North Finchley, N.12. Percy J. D. Richards.

Sir,—I have not perused any musical periodical for some years,* and it is a singular coincidence that, a few days before accidentally seeing a letter on the above subject in your January issue, I should have been wondering whether the faculty of absolute pitch had ever yet been the subject of a searching symposium.

I am not what your correspondent Mr. J. Arthur Clegg calls 'an absolute pitcher . . . . to some extent.' My faculty, which was first observed at the age of eight, is the best specimen I have encountered, and I have known many.

If, therefore, there should be a body of musicians, such as the Musical Association—before which I had the honour more than once in pre-war days to lecture—whose members are desirous of discovering what are the precise limits of the faculty, I should be very happy indeed to lend, as it were, my ear. The result would, I think, prove that it is a more mysterious affair than is generally supposed.

I wish to make it clear that I have no desire to argue any sort of case for the faculty, but merely to place myself at the disposal of such a body—giving an account of my experiences in the matter and contributing in every way possible to a search for the truth.—Yours, &c.,

20, Edwardes Square, W.8. M. Montagu-Nathan.

DID HANDEL WRITE THE 'BUFFS'' MARCH?

Sir,—It is a very old tradition in the Buffs that our regimental march was written by Handel, and I should be very much obliged if you can help me to establish the fact.

On the face of it, there seems no reason why it should not be so. Up to the time of Handel's death, in 1708, the Buffs had been known for nearly twenty years as Prince George of Denmark's regiment. Handel did not visit England until 1710; but he was never prejudiced against royalty, and he may have thought it would be a delicate compliment to write a march for the late King Consort's regiment, or Queen Anne may even have suggested that he should do so.—Yours, &c., F. W. Tomlinson Naval & Military Club, 94, Piccadilly, W.1. (Major; Hon. Sec., the Buffs History).

* We are sorry that among the dozen musical journals published in this country not one is good enough for the august eye of Mr. Montagu-Nathan.—Editor.

DIPLOMAS

Sir,—Recent discussion about musical diplomas has only touched the fringe of the matter. The whole system at present tends to make our profession a laughing-stock.

What is the use of condemning an unfortunate L.R.A.M. because he took his diploma in the pianoforte and teaches the violin, when it seems that almost invariably the possession of a University degree in music is taken as evidence of ability to teach almost anything?

A music degree in most cases is evidence of nothing but a vast theoretical knowledge and the power to write much counterpoint. How does it qualify a man to teach the pianoforte, to train a choir, or to play a church organ? Yet it seems to be generally accepted as a more important qualification than any diploma.

The fact is that the whole system needs overhauling with a view to abolishing the multiplicity of alphabetical complexities, and to the fair grading of degrees with diplomas. Why, in any case, should the theoretical man have the monopoly of a degree? In a very practical subject like music it seems rather absurd.

I suggest that the two great music schools ought to grant the degrees of D.Mus. and B.Mus.—in addition they might have a lower degree of L.Mus.—and abolish all their diplomas. These three degrees would then be obtainable either at a University or at one of the great music schools, and in any subject. Thus you might be B.Mus. (Oxon.) or B.Mus. (R.A.M.), D.Mus. (Lond.) or D.Mus (R.C.M.), and so on. The subject in which you took the degree might be theoretical or practical. The degree, on the face of it, would not show in what subject it had been taken, any more than an Arts degree does at present. (Do those who make a fuss about the poor L.R.A.M. above-mentioned, realise that when you write yourself M.A., there is nothing whatever to show in what subjects you took the degree?)

The Burnham scale of salaries for school teachers allows a higher scale of salaries for graduates, and graciously allows the chief musical diplomas to count as degrees. But I assume that a Mus. Doc. who could not play the violin at all would be entitled to the graduate scale as a violin teacher, while Kreisler (unless he has a degree) would not. Would it not be as well to get rid of such absurdities?

I suggest the abolition of all this alphabetical nonsense, and the use of the three degrees above mentioned. Given that the standard of examination were kept severe, these degrees would stand for definite grades of proficiency in any subject, theoretical or practical. It would of course be up to anyone employing a D.Mus., B.Mus., or L.Mus., to find out in what subject the graduate was qualified, just as one must at present with a B.A. or M.A.—Yours, &c.,

Loretto School, Musselburgh, Midlothian. C. H. Stuart Duncan.

MOZART'S LETTERS

Sir,—I have in preparation, and hope shortly to publish, a new English translation of Mozart's letters. This will be based in the main on the standard German edition by Ludwig Schiedermair (Munich, 1914), but I hope to be able to include a certain amount of new material. In Schiedermair's edition a number of letters are reproduced from the very imperfect versions preserved in Nisser's biography of Mozart. The originals of several of these letters are almost certainly still in existence, but up to the present I have only succeeded in tracing one of them. I should be greatly obliged if private collectors or public librarians who have original letters of Mozart's in their possession, or under their charge, would be so good as to send me particulars of them.—Yours, &c.,

Oxford & Cambridge Musical Club, 6, Bedford Square, W.C.1. C. B. Oldman.

THE SMALLEST FOUR-MANUAL ORGAN?

Sir,—On pp. 56-57 of your January number you give an interesting account of the four-manual organ of twenty-two speaking stops which is to be found in the Chapel of Jesus College, Cambridge. The writer of the article expresses the belief that it is probably the smallest four-manual organ in existence; but here he errs. An Oxford college (St. John's) can show a still smaller specimen.

I append the specification (correct to the best of my knowledge):

| Pedal | ft. |
|---|---|
| Bourdon ... ... ... | 16 |
| Flute ... ... ... ... | 8 |

| Swell | |
|---|---|
| Hautboy ... ... ... | 8 |
| Suabe Flute ... ... ... | 4 |
| Vox Angelica... ... ... | 8 |
| Stopped Diapason Bass ... | 8 |
| Violin Diapason ... ... | 8 |

| Solo | |
|---|---|
| Trumpet ... ... ... | 8 |
| Harmonic Piccolo ... ... | 2 |
| Cremona ... ... ... | 8 |
| Harmonic Flute ... ... | 8 |

| Great | |
|---|---|
| Fifteenth ... ... ... | 2 |
| Twelfth ... ... ... | 2⅔ |
| Principal ... ... ... | 4 |
| Stopped Diapason ... ... | 8 |
| Open Diapason ... ... | 8 |

| Choir | |
|---|---|
| Open Diapason ... ... | 8 |
| Stopped Diapason ... ... | 8 |
| Flauto Traverso ... ... | 4 |

Couplers, Etc.

Solo to Great.
Solo to Pedal.
Choir to Pedal.
Swell to Pedal.
Great to Pedal.
Swell Octave.
Swell to Choir.
Swell to Great.
Choir to Great.
Swell sub to Great.
Tremulant.

The organ consists therefore of nineteen speaking stops, plus Tremulant and Couplers. The whole is contained in a case not exceeding 5-ft. by 9-ft. by 11-ft. high. Of its origin I know very little; but I believe St. John's purchased it from Ely Cathedral.—Yours, &c.,

B.

Oxford.

MORE CINEMA VANDALISM

Sir,—I feel I must bring to your notice the following incident, which caused me great indignation recently.

Last week I had to spend some time at Oxford, and in order to while away part of an afternoon I went to the cinema. The usual kind of sentimental film was being shown, and during a scene in which, if I remember rightly, some wealthy lady was falling in love with her chauffeur, I realised suddenly that the orchestra was playing music which was vaguely familiar. Imagine my horror when I knew it to be none other than the 'Et Incarnatus' from the B minor Mass! Needless to say it was being rushed through in a vulgar manner, but was nevertheless quite unmistakable. Can nothing be done to stop this sacrilege?—Yours, &c.,

P. H. Cooke.

14, Church Road, Stanmore.

EAR TROUBLE

Sir,—The correspondence appearing in the Musical Times of late re difference of pitch between the ears of the same person, interested me considerably, as I had a similar experience some years ago. My right ear (the weaker) gave the higher pitch of the two, contrary to what I would have expected. Of late the right has become nearly deaf, but when I 'listen-in' the sounds seem to enter through that ear.

About forty years ago I visited some schools with Prof. Junkerman, Inspector of Music in Cincinnati. In one of the classes I noticed that a pupil kept singing several notes lower than the rest all through the exercise. The Professor informed me that the child sang correctly, but always a fourth below. I am sorry now that I did not watch the development of this most interesting case. The scholar (if still alive) would be a lady of about fifty-five.—Yours, &c.,

Jack Edwards.

13, Great Darkgate Street,
Aberystwyth.

NIKOLAI MEDTNER

Sir,—As a devotee of the pianoforte works of Nikolai Medtner, I am grateful for the article on p. 209 of the March Musical Times.

I agree with every word of Sabaneev's appreciation of the Master's compositions, and would go even farther than he does. Medtner possesses a gift of haunting melody which is wanting in Brahms and Schumann, the two masters of the pianoforte with whom he can most aptly be compared, while in technique he is no mean rival of theirs. (It is in envergure—in scope—that he falls short of their standard.) But of course neither of those two composers had any of the dreamy Slav blood in their veins.

In my humble opinion the music of the future will be Slav, stiffened by German efficiency and industry. And in that case, is not Medtner a forerunner of the coming Master?—Yours, &c.,

A. W. R. Cole.

30, Upper Phillimore Place, W.8.

THE EARLIEST USE OF THE LEITMOTIVE

Sir,—Mr. Munro Davison is quite right in pulling me up for a piece of careless writing. I never meant to imply that Wagner was the first to use the leitmotive (we all remember, e.g., the Zamiel pizzicati in 'Freischütz'). I should have used the expression 'popularized' instead of 'illustrated.' I am unfortunately unacquainted with Spohr's oratorios. But as regards the idée fixe in Berlioz's 'Symphonie Fantastique,' to describe it as a leitmotive is, I think, to stretch the point almost to breaking strain.—Yours, &c.,

M.-D. Calvocoressi.

Sir,—I would like to call attention to its use in Beethoven's 'Fidelio' (1805). In the first Act (No. 9, duet between Pizarro and Rocco) Pizarro lays his plot before Rocco, and says, 'Without myself revealing, into the dungeon I steal . . . one blow and he is dumb,' the last four words being accompanied by pizzicato unison notes in the bass.

This is very effective and impressive. Later, in No. 11 (2nd section), after the Prisoners' Chorus, Scene 2, in the duet between Rocco and Leonora, the same pizzicato passage occurs, when Rocco says 'We have to release the prisoner (but how, alas!) . . . I do no killing, but the Governor himself will do the deed': after which follows the pizzicato passage solo, in the manner of a gesture completing the meaning of a sentence—a kind of musical aposiopesis, as is often employed in elocution or in every-day speech. Taking Novello's Edition, vocal score, on pp. 73, 104, and 125 will be found the passages referred to.—Yours, &c.,

Alfred Mistowski.

12, Richmond Mansions,
Denton Road, Twickenham.

'THE NATURE OF HARMONY'

Sir,—The last article on the Minor Harmony (January Musical Times, p. 17) tempts me to make the following suggestion: The sounding of a fundamental note with its octave and twelfth produces as a resultant the missing note of the major triad. Thus, in the key of C minor, the resultant of C and G is E. Is not, then, the minor chord a dissonance, the played E♭ clashing with the implied (and often heard) E♯?—Yours, &c.,

V. W. Leatherdale.

Delhi, India.

Sir,—In my previous letter (February number, p. 161) I misunderstood Dr. Shirlaw when he said that the notes of the minor triad were those of the major triad taken in reverse order. From his contribution to last month's Musical Times, I learn that he does not mean the same notes, but merely the same figures. In other words, his theory is identical with Dr. Riemann's—a theory which I understood him to have rejected (vide his article in the January number). Dr. Shirlaw marks the triads thus:

but these figures refer to two entirely different sets of facts. Those written against the major triad give the ratio of vibrations; those written against the minor triad give the ratio of string lengths. Dr. Shirlaw, if he will pardon my saying so, is juggling with the figures. If 4, 5, 6 represents the major triad, then 10, 12, 15 must represent the minor triad (or, in the particular minor triad chosen for illustration, 5, 6, 7·5). If 6, 5, 4 stands for the minor,

$\frac{3}{4}$, $\frac{3}{5}$, $\frac{3}{8}$ must stand for the major. In either case the imaginary resemblance vanishes.—Yours, &c.,

5, Richmond Mansions, Denton Road, Twickenham. Arthur T. Froggatt.

Sir,—Re Dr. Shirlaw's article in the March issue of the Musical Times, a learned friend assures me that in musical language 'Generator' has only one meaning, viz., the note of the open string.

Dr. Shirlaw seems to suggest another meaning. But surely the only minor chord which would include the Generator (say G) is GBD, representing the very high partials 16, 19, 24.

Another minor chord, springing from the Generator (G) but not including it, is DFA (partials 6, 7, 9).—Yours, &c.,

St. Cecilia's, Spinkhill, Chesterfield. J. Morrison.

THE PULCHRITUDINOUSNESS, Etc., OF A FAMOUS N.Y. CHOIR

Sir,—In your October issue I read an interesting letter written by an ex-Cathedral chorister as a sort of challenge to Mr. Sydney Nicholson's then recent statement that American boys are not naturally good singers.

At the time of reading that letter I was at home (in England), and I had not the very slightest intention of travelling to the United States. However, business necessities made a trip imperative, and being by way of an intelligent lover of Church singing I naturally hastened to hear the best of the choirs of men and boys in New York, Chicago, and elsewhere.

The letter to which I refer made some quite extravagant remarks about the beauties of the singing at Grace Church in New York City. It was natural to assume that I should be interested in hearing this celebrated choir.

Here are my reactions. The choir of Grace Church is one of the finest appearing choirs I have ever looked at in any church. Not especially because of any unusual pulchritudinous assets do I say this, but because of the splendid appearing men and the unusually fine-looking boys. The choir as it enters the church is impressive, and this impressiveness of carriage and bearing, together with the unbelievably lovely atmosphere of the church itself and the majestic procession of a bass section, which individually measures 6-ft., captivate one at the start.

It is safe to say that perhaps some of our English choirs might acceptably take a tip from this choir on appearance. The dignity of black patent leather shoes, low-cut, made the walk of the boy singers as they proceeded up the chancel steps a pleasure to the eye after years of sundry sorts of pedal coverings which one grows accustomed to in some of our churches. The choirboys at Grace Church wear patent-leather shoes and black stockings, long white cottas almost to the ground, and the uniform Eton collar and tie, with the difference of the cotta being attached to the collar and no black space showing between.

As the choir enters one's first impression is that here is a splendid looking choir, immaculate and churchly looking to the last word.

Of the singing: There is some justification for the opinion that Grace Church, New York, boasts a great choir. It is not a perfect choir by any means, but it is a truly fine choir. The tenors and basses are incomparable. We have nothing like them in any English choir. There are probably plenty of voices equally fine scattered all over the city of London, but nowhere have I heard such a set of men singing in one choir.

The boys of the choir have their vocal limitations. It would seem to me that their one fault is singing through almost closed lips. The tone is beautiful, but it is a cold tone, lacking the warmth of some of the boy choirs one hears in England. It is perhaps safe to say that the boys of Grace Church sing much as the average American acts in business—coldly, impassively, and thoroughly. There is plenty of tone-colour, they are superb in smashing forte passages, and sublime in their spinning out of diminuendos: but there is that lack of warmth. I observed them closely as they sang, and my judgment is that Grace Church choir has quite a remarkable assemblage of boys and men—quite the best-trained choir I have ever heard and certainly a resounding set of men—yet a great deal is sacrificed by the boys because they are singing too 'thinly.' An open mouth would readily correct this fault, but the style of the boy choir seems to be for the more brilliant sound. It is less acceptable to the ear than the velvety and smoothly produced sound such as our boys in England get so naturally. The enunciation of the boys is open to discussion; it is questionable.

I think my reactions will prove of interest to British choirmasters who are evincing unusual interest in the choir of Grace Church, New York.—Yours, &c.,

Flushing, L.I., U.S.A. Eric L. Wheeler
(formerly of the Temple choir and the Abbey).

A VETERAN CLARINETTIST

Sir,—I felt greatly interested in your article relating to Mr. Julian Egerton (in the Musical Times of March 1), whose acquaintance I was privileged to make—quite accidentally—when travelling to London, in November, 1925. I suppose 'birds of a feather will flock together'—if I may be permitted to say so—although mine, an amateur musician's, is but a borrowed plumage. I think we talked music all the way, exchanging reminiscences, and I for one felt sorry when the journey's end was reached.

You refer to Richter's arrival in England in 1879. I remember an earlier occasion, to wit, the Wagner Festival at the Royal Albert Hall, in May, 1877. I still have the programme in my possession, giving the names of conductors, singers, and members of the orchestra. Wagner himself was present, and conducted the first number on the programme (the 'Kaisermarsch'), then handing the baton to Richter. The Master began to show his age; he conducted in quite a subdued manner, very different from that of the early Bayreuth days, when—as malicious critics reported—new floor-boards had to be continually provided in front of the conductor's desk.—Yours, &c., E. G. C.

'THE BOOSTER IN ORGAN BUILDING'

Sir,—In reference to the article under the above heading which appeared in the February issue of your excellent publication, will you allow me space to correct one or two mistakes which have crept, inadvertently I am sure, into Mr. Whitworth's text?

'Father Willis's extraordinarily clever device for starting and stopping the blowing machinery in the Dome of St. Paul's' was not his at all, but was designed and installed by my father, Henry Willis II., in February, 1902. The circumstances were that the hydraulic engines in the Dome had hitherto been started and stopped by a man who went up to the Dome before and after Services for the purpose. This was a distinct nuisance, but the engineers had assured Sir George Martin that a control from the console was not within the range of practical politics. When Sir George was at the old 'Rotunda' in Camden Town in consultation with my father, about the organ for St. Saviour's Church, Ealing, he mentioned what a boon it would be to be able to start and stop the Dome engines from the keyboards, and I remember well my father saying, 'I can do it, but it will cost you £30!' The financial difficulty was overcome, and the device inserted, also wind indicators at the console for the Dome L.P. and H.P. A case of an organ-builder stepping in where engineers feared to tread!

Another slight error in the same article should be corrected. The article goes on to state that at Liverpool Cathedral the wind of the main rotary blowers is 'boosted' up to 50-in. This is not the case. There are two main blowing sets which are identical, each having a main blower raising a pressure of 12-in. and a Booster raising this 12-in. wind to 24-in. An entirely independent apparatus is provided for the 30-in. and 50-in. wind, the 30-in. being boosted up to 50-in. This H.P. set has a separate push-button starter at the keyboard so that it may be started and stopped as required.

The term 'Booster' is undoubtedly American in origin, and in its original sense referred to an individual who dilated upon the high excellence of the goods he had for sale or the services he could render, to the point of exaggeration. Such an expressive term was adopted by engineers to describe a piece of mechanism increasing 'an already existing force,' as Mr. Whitworth so aptly defines it.—Yours, &c.,

HENRY WILLIS.

234, Ferndale Road, Brixton, S.W.9.

JOHN DANYEL

SIR,—Perhaps I may be allowed to correct a small error in Dr. Grattan Flood's article on John Daniel (or Danyel, as the composer prints his name). On p. 219 of your last issue he says that the 'unique copy' of the 'Songs for the Lute, Viol, and Voice,' 1606, is in the British Museum Library. There exists at least one other copy, which was lent to the Music Loan Exhibition held by the Musicians' Company at Fishmongers' Hall, 1904, and duly entered in the Illustrated Catalogue, published in 1909, p. 83. It was lent by a private collector, and I have excellent authority for stating that it is still in his library.—Yours, &c.,

G. E. P. A.

[Some 'Letters' are unavoidably held over.—EDITOR.]

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Two violinists and pianist wish to meet 'cellist to practise advanced music. Oldham or Rochdale districts.—H. CHARLESWORTH, 101, Beal Lane, Shaw, near Oldham.

Pianist (gentleman) wishes to meet amateur pianists for duet playing. Also vocalists and violinists for practice. Birmingham or surrounding towns.—A. KELVEY, 76, Oval Road, Erdington.

Young gentleman singer wishes to meet good accompanist, able to play solos, for mutual practice. Also soprano or tenor for duets. S.E. or Croydon districts.—A. F., c/o Musical Times.

Lady pianist wishes to meet violinist for mutual practice of classical sonatas, &c. Beckenham or Bromley districts.—S., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist (lady) wishes to join trio or quartet for experience. N.W. London.—W. E. R., c/o Musical Times.

Amateur pianist (lady) wishes to meet violinist for mutual practice. One evening a week. S. Norwood and Croydon districts.—V. C., c/o Musical Times.

Lady accompanist (experienced) wishes to practice with singer, or join small orchestra. London.—A. B., c/o Musical Times.

Young soprano wishes to meet experienced pianist for mutual practice. Beckenham or near district.—E. RUSHDEN, 55, Kendall Road, Beckenham.

Violinist (young) wishes to join quartet or small orchestra for mutual practice.—REGINALD WINTER, 100, Lauriston Road, Hackney, E.9.

Young lady vocalist wishes to meet pianist (good sight-reader) for mutual practice. — BM/ZTPZ, London, W.C.1.

Pianist and accompanist (lady) wishes to meet singer for mutual practice. London.—B. R., c/o Musical Times.

Vocalist (lady) wishes to meet pianist (good sight-reader), for mutual practice, at her house.—26, Pembroke Gardens, W.8.

Pianist wishes to meet advanced vocalists for practice in accompanying Lieder and modern songs. S.E. London. —H. P., c/o Musical Times.

Gentleman vocalist wishes to meet good solo pianist and accompanist for mutual practice. Also contralto, soprano, and tenor for duets and quartets. Croydon or S.E. districts.—N. K., c/o Musical Times.

Viola player or first violinist, also second violinist, wanted to complete string quartet near Chiswick. Good time-keepers essential. Evening meetings.—E. B., c/o Musical Times.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times of April, 1868:

So thoroughly has the 'encoring' system taken possession of English audiences that with many of the lower classes it is really considered as a French word expressing enthusiastic applause. We remember, a short time since, hearing an elderly female, who had just left a theatre, informing a friend whom she met that a celebrated actor was 'encored the moment he came on the stage'; and that during the whole evening she had 'never heard a man so encored in all her life.' It is a melancholy fact that had this old lady been in the habit of attending concerts, her description of the manner in which the performers were received, even in the true sense of the word, would scarcely be an exaggeration; for assuredly, although we cannot say that they are encored the moment they come on, their songs are usually re-demanded almost before the symphony has ceased; and it may truly be affirmed of Mr. Sims Reeves that he is continually 'encored the whole evening.' Convinced as we are of the pernicious effect of this system upon art and artists, it is only as faithful chroniclers of musical events that we feel ourselves compelled so constantly to record the number of encores insisted upon during a performance. In the notices of country concerts sent to us for insertion we are always reminded, by crosses, red lines, and other hieroglyphics, that Miss —— was encored five or six times during the evening. . . . . In one report of a concert, which lately came before us, it was stated that 'the whole of the second part of the programme was encored.'

Sharps and Flats

We have an eight-year old daughter. I should like to tell you about her. She has the cutest complex. Although she has just had her first music lessons, she wants to play for people. The minute company comes, she sits down at the pianoforte. Doesn't that sound promising?—Yolando Mero.

Perhaps the most interesting item was the 'Eel-King' of Schubert, sung with good expression by the whole school.—Liverpool Paper.

Evidently a hitherto unpublished companion piece to Schubert's well-known 'Trout.'—Punch.

Rosewood Baby Grand. Length 5-ft. Three Corinthian legs. Very little use, quite like new.—Advt. in Daily Paper.

£12 10s., Excellent Piano, only wants seeing.—Yorkshire Paper.

So does our neighbour's, but unluckily it gets hearing too.—Punch.

I never sing without my monkey. It has been my mascot. When I was told I could not bring Toto to London I was in despair. I cannot sing without my mascot.—Tito Schipa.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

There have been happenings of unusual interest during the last month, one of the most interesting being the visit of Nicholas Medtner to the social and musical meeting of the R.A.M. Club on Friday, February 24. It was a peculiarly gracious act of the famous Russian composer and pianist to attend in such friendly fashion at such an informal gathering. The evening was a huge success. Not only did M. Medtner play some of his own pianoforte works, but he brought with him his countrywoman, Madame Tatiana Makushina, who sang two groups of songs, with the composer at the pianoforte. Some of these songs are fascinating in their apparent simplicity, but they need a Medtner to illustrate their real artistry. It was a pretty touch on the part of Dr. McEwen to turn over for M. Medtner. The President of the Club, Sir Henry Wood, and Lady Wood, received the guests.

The students' chamber concert, on February 29, began with Marcel Dupré's Prelude and Fugue in G minor, Op. 7, No. 3, for organ. This characteristically French work was well played by Mr. Edward Pauer Briggs, and the Fugue is most amusing. Beethoven's Sonata in C minor, Op. 111, was very well played by Miss Virginia McLean, who comes from Montreal. She is an apt pupil of Mr. Harold Craxton, and should make a name for herself far beyond the confines of the Academy. In addition to her musical gifts she has an excellent platform personality—an invaluable asset. More attention might be displayed by English artists to the matter of deportment, for a favourable first impression goes a long way. Miss Freda Robertson played the pianoforte part in a Fantasie Trio of her own composition, assisted by Miss Helen Gaskell (oboe) and Mr. Vivian Gray (horn). It is not great music—perhaps it may be best described as nice—but Miss Robertson shows promise of better things. Miss Joan Coxon sang the Bach aria, 'Sighing, weeping.' She has a good voice and a distinct Bachian style.

The conductors' class and the opera class, in combination, are rehearsing 'Die Meistersinger,' 'Madame Butterfly,' and 'Carmen,' in preparation for the annual operatic week at the Scala Theatre in July. The performance of 'Die Meistersinger' was such an outstanding success last year that the policy of repeating it is to be heartily commended.

One of the most encouraging signs of the times was the students' production of an operatic triple bill in the new theatre. From many points of view this enterprise is deserving of the highest praise. As regards the future of opera in England—not to say in English—it is a very big step in the right direction; and the mere fact that they themselves have not only taken part in the productions but have produced them, will instil in the minds of many young people an abiding interest in opera as a form of music. Again, the undoubted success of the performances should incite all concerned to still more ambitious efforts. The three operas were Dunhill's 'The Enchanted Garden,' Holst's 'Savitri,' and Mozart's 'Bastien and Bastienne.' Everything was the work of the students, without any help or interference from the professors. Even the scenery and dresses were designed and carried out unaided. In such a short notice it is impossible to enter into details, interesting though they might be. Some of the lighting effects were charming, and remarkably well-managed. Mention must be made of Mr. Geoffrey Dunn, the producer of all three works, and a participant in two of them, especially for his admirable English version of Mozart's delightfully naïve little opera. The personnel was entirely recruited from the 'second strings,' so to speak, and it will be well worth while if one night of the opera-week in July is devoted to a repetition of this triple bill, for it is deserving of a bigger public.

Apropos of the students' operatic evening, a pleasing feature of the entertainment was the appearance of two Royal College of Music composers, Messrs. Holst and Dunhill, at a Royal Academy performance. It is by such friendly intercourse between two big schools of music that the true spirit of music is kept alive.

One of the most interesting performances of Haydn's Quartets by Mr. Lionel Tertis's class took place on March 8, when the 'Seven Words' was given at the Duke's Hall. This work is to all intents and purposes unknown, and its presentation excited much curiosity. The seven short movements known as 'The Words of our Saviour on the Cross' were originally composed by Haydn for the Cathedral at Cadiz, in compliance with a request from the Chapter for appropriate instrumental music for Good Friday. The serial performances of the complete sequence of Haydn Quartets will be resumed on Thursday afternoon, May 3.

Present students of the R.A.M. will perform works by ex-students at the Worshipful Company of Musicians' dinner on April 14. F.

The following awards have been made: Sterndale Bennett Prize (female pianists) to Hilda Bor (London), Dorothy Green and Jacqueline Townshend being highly commended, and Connie Cox commended. Philip Leslie Agnew Composition Prize to Ethel M. Winfield (London), Yelland Richards being highly commended. Goldberg Prize (tenors) to Edgar Thomas (Morriston, Swansea). Grisi Prize (female voices) to Phyllis Edmundson (Birkenhead), Esther Hulbert, Freda Townson, and Leslie Duff being highly commended. Prize for Viola-Playing to Winifred Copperwheat (London), Philip Burton and Adolph Borsdorf being commended. Edward W. Nicholls Prize (female pianists) to Hilda Bor (London), Margaret Good being highly commended, and Josephine Harrison, Dorothy Manley, Jacqueline Townshend, and Inez Tognolini commended. Cuthbert Whitemore Prize to Frank G. Britton (London), Hilda Bor being highly commended, and Dorothy Manley and Veronica M. Brown commended. Josiah Parker Prize (composition) to Elizabeth Poston (Stevenage, Herts), Guirne Creith being highly commended, and Frank Britton commended.

E

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

As was only natural, the last month of the term was somewhat crowded with fixtures, considerable difficulty being found in fitting in the numerous orchestral concerts, recitals, chamber concerts, Patrons' Fund rehearsals, and opera performances. Some of these came too late in the month to be dealt with in this issue, but of the earlier fixtures attention may be drawn to the success of two of the Mid-day Recitals, now a popular feature of the luncheon hour, namely, those given by Mr. Leyland-White (baritone) and Miss Thelma Reiss-Smith (violoncello).

Of the two Patrons' Fund rehearsals given in March, one, for executive artists, included Beethoven's 'Emperor' Pianoforte Concerto, played by Miss Gwendo Paul, and Lalo's Violoncello Concerto, played by Mr. Sheridan Russell; the other was devoted chiefly to composers' new works, namely, a 'Dance of Dryads' by Sybil Barlow, a Prelude and Fugue by Arthur Dennington, an Irish Suite by F. W. Wadely, and 'Sea Dream,' a nature study for orchestra, by Edward Mitchell. The programme also included Liszt's Hungarian Fantasia for pianoforte, played by Miss Sara Chanot.

The Parry Theatre has also been fully occupied, with, among other operatic activity, two works produced on March 12, namely, a ballet, 'The Jew in the Bush,' by Gordon Jacob, an ex-student of the College—and now a member of the teaching staff, and a short opera, 'Fiorella,' by Amherst Webber. The ballet was first heard, in concert form, at a Patrons' Fund rehearsal last year. It is based on one of Grimm's fairy-tales, the story telling of a youth who befriended a witch and was rewarded with a magic fiddle, and a Jew who is cheated by the youth of a bag of gold. The Jew, enraged at the loss, brings the youth before the king and queen and a court of justice, but the youth is saved from execution by the magic fiddle, which compels the king and queen to dance, and by the witch, who hypnotises the court and enables the boy to make his escape. The performance was given by the Ballet Class, with an orchestra under the direction of the composer, and proved him to be blessed with a fine stage sense and a complete command of what is known as the modern idiom. Miss Imogen Holst (the youth) and Miss Craster (the Jew) in the principal parts gave an admirable display, both in dancing and miming, and the Ballet Class danced with remarkable verve and enthusiasm, not missing a single point either in stage action or in rhythmical precision.

Mr. Amherst's opera, 'Fiorella,' given by the Operatic Class, and conducted by Mr. Richard Austin, is a charming one-Act opera with a Venetian setting. It had an interesting origin, for the libretto was written by the great Sardou, and it was composed for the De Reszkes some years ago, though it has been rarely heard. The plot turns upon the intrusion of an adventurer, Gattinara, upon whose head a price has been set, into the clandestine meeting of a romantic pair of lovers, whose betrothal has been forbidden by the uncle of the girl (Fiorella) owing to the young man's poverty. The solution to the difficulty is framed by Gattinara, who finds means to restore the lover's lost fortune, and thus remove the old uncle's scruples to the match. Mr. Weber, as might be expected from a composer of his experience, has produced a most attractive work, well-knit and full of atmosphere, melodious and grateful to the singers, with aptly-timed climaxes and deftly turned phrases. Mr. Leyland White, as Gattinara, showed a nice sense of comedy, backed up by a really dramatic style and a fine baritone voice; Miss Mansfield and Miss Evens, with fewer opportunities, distinguished themselves in a lesser degree.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The annual general meeting of the College Corporation was held on Friday, March 16, Mr. W. W. Cobbett presiding. Mr. Louis Pecskai and Mr. Alec Rowley were elected members of the Corporation, and Mr. F. Gostelow and Dr. R. J. Wickham Hurd filled the places on the Board rendered vacant by the death of Mr. E. Burritt Lane and the retirement of Dr. Creser. Dr. J. Warriner was elected vice-chairman of the Corporation.

The terminal orchestral concert was given by the students of the College at Queen's Hall on Saturday, March 17, when an overflowing audience assembled. Dvorák's charming Overture 'In der Natur' received an excellent performance, and Brahms's Symphony in E minor was adequately played. Vocal and instrumental solos were given by Ethel Jones, Olga Kantrovitch, Reginald Gibbs, and Frederick Davey.

We regret to announce the sudden death recently of Mr. John Newton, organist of Christchurch Priory, Hants, who was a former student of the College.

A NEW SCHEME OF COMIC OPERA

It is good to hear that Mr. Walter Johnstone Douglas is again getting together the company which last year gave us those admirable performances of 'Così fan Tutte' at the Kingsway, with a view to another and slightly more ambitious season next May. At a meeting held at 40, Upper Grosvenor Street, the opinion was expressed that comic opera suited the genius of the nation better than music-drama. The speaker could have gone further, and asserted boldly that if opera is now in a parlous state the cause must be sought partly in the disproportion between the serious and the comic genres. Verdi and Wagner have each left but one comedy to balance their many serious operas. The same may be said of Puccini and Rossini. Yet in every case it is the comedy that to-day is generally accepted as touching the high-water mark of the composer's achievement. Neither Wagner nor Verdi did anything finer than 'The Mastersingers' and 'Falstaff.' Of all Puccini's operas, 'Gianni Schicchi' alone has been welcomed with equal warmth and sincerity by the crowd and the elect. The present generation knows nothing of Rossini beyond 'The Barber of Seville.'

This is one of the reasons why the new scheme should succeed. A second reason will be found in the very attractive programme Mr. Johnstone Douglas and his friends have chosen. It consists of a revival of 'Così fan Tutte,' the opera which both in London and at the recent Bristol Festival proved so reliable an attraction. Cimarosa's 'Secret Marriage' and a triple bill consisting of Vaughan Williams's 'Delectable Mountains,' de Falla's 'The Puppet Show of Mastro Pedro,' and Schubert's 'Faithful Sentinel,' complete the scheme, which will be conducted by Dr. Adrian Boult. Schubert's little opera is a novelty. Its original form was that of a Singspiel. It has been re-edited recently, and is sure to prove one of the special attractions of the season.

Finally, a word must be said about finance—the bugbear of all opera enterprise. All the artists give their services for a purely nominal fee. Thus the sum which guarantors are asked to lend is reduced to a minimum, about £2,500. Naturally the singers hope finally to derive more substantial rewards. But these will be shared out only after the loan has been repaid. Since sceptics abound, it may be added that the same procedure was followed in regard to the production of 'Così fan Tutte' last year, and that at the end of the season every penny of the loan was repaid. From whatever point we examine it, Mr. Johnstone Douglas's project seems as watertight as artistic intelligence and practical foresight can make it. It deserves to succeed.

F. B.

MUSIC AT THE ENGLISH CHAPELS ROYAL

The announcement that by special permission of the Lord Chamberlain, Mr. Stanley Roper's paper on 'Music at the Chapels Royal, c. 1135 to the present day,' would be delivered in the Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace, drew a large number of the members of the Musical Association on December 6. Mr. Roper said that the long story covered a period of nearly eight centuries, and embraced the musical activities of many of the most prominent musicians that our country had produced. The English, at least as far back as the period of John Dunstable, were celebrated for their love of music and good voices, but references to the choirs of the English sovereigns dated from two hundred and fifty years before Dunstable. Great as we knew the influence of the King's Chapel to have been in the Restoration period, we could not doubt that it was an even greater incentive to musical effort and development in very early times.

In at least one respect the establishment could be regarded as a Royal peculiar, for whereas in the course of its history six distinct Chapels Royal were mentioned, yet in its earliest times there was undoubtedly no fixed building at all. Dr. Jebb said in 1843: 'This establishment belongs to no fixed abode, but attends the sovereign wherever he may be resident.' Of this there were many proofs, among them records relating to Henry III., Henry V., Henry VIII., and George IV. In general the services had been confined to the King's Palace in London, then to the present building in 1532, and continued there for the remaining years of the Tudor period; thence under the Stuarts to the magnificent chapel at Whitehall, destroyed by fire in 1698. Sub-Dean Dolben took a somewhat broad view of what constituted a Chapel Royal, for in 1714 he successfully claimed for himself and the choir the right to officiate in St. Paul's Cathedral in the presence of the sovereign, 'as being the King's Chappell upon this occasion.'

Dr. Grattan Flood a few years ago brought abundant evidence to show that the foundation of the Chapel Royal was much earlier than had been generally supposed. In the Red Book of the Exchequer it was first mentioned in 1135. The Calendar of the Liberate Rolls from 1227-40 contained numerous references to the Chapel Royal. The Calendar of Patent Rolls told us that as far back as 1303 it was customary, as now, to further the education of the Children when their voices broke. The effect of this custom was far-reaching, for it soon became the means whereby a departing chorister's musical education was continued, and had much to do with the successful maintenance and development of our cathedral music. There were several records of the choir attending Henry V. in France, and there was a very early reference to the practice of impressing boys, proving that the custom was in existence at least sixty-four years before what was supposed to be the first commission of Richard III. in 1484. There was also an interesting allusion to the anthem, for in 1526, in an order defining the duties of the Royal Choir, it was expressly laid down that they were to sing an anthem in the afternoon. It had often been said that the anthem was first introduced to the service under Queen Elizabeth, but Fayrfax received twenty shillings from Princess Elizabeth in 1502 'for setting of an anthem.'

After a detailed survey of the Masters of the Children, and the work of the composers connected with the Chapel Royal, Mr. Roper came to the period of the building of the present Chapel. On its site there existed formerly a hospital dedicated to St. James-the-Less. In 1532 Henry VIII. negotiated with Eton College for an exchange for the site with certain lands in Suffolk. He was successful, and proceeded to build 'a goodly manor house.' The Royal Chapel thus founded here must have been among the first to experience the change which came over English Church music at this time. The florid contrapuntal style had now to give place to something understanded of the people, and English composers for the Church were obliged to write their music on the new lines. But in spite of this proscription the Chapel and its music rose to great importance in the days of Queen Elizabeth, for, as John Barnard said in his first Book of Selected Church Music, 1641, 'the reign of Elizabeth brought forth a noble birth, as of all learned men, so of famous composers in Church music.'

Additions and alterations to the Chapel were made by Charles I., Queen Anne, George II., George III., and William IV., but portions of the original building still survived. The roof, said to be the work of Holbein, was of copper. The date 1540 occurred more than once in the painting of the ceiling, and the initials 'H & A' in a lovers' knot, but it was doubtful whether A stood for Anne Boleyn or Anne of Cleves, the former having lost her life in 1536. Towards the end of the reign of Charles I., and after his death, the Chapel was used as a guard room. Charles was imprisoned in the palace, and attended service here before he walked across the Park to his execution. Queen Victoria was married here in 1840, as were also our present King and Queen in 1893.

The records of the old Cheque Book began in 1561, and occurred fairly regularly for some hundred and eighty-three years. Compiled by members of the establishment, they were both useful and interesting, and had thrown much light upon the lives of the poet-musicians and Church musicians of the period covered. The MS. was written on large folio paper, measuring sixteen and a half inches by eleven inches. The original binding was preserved, but dilapidation had made rebinding a necessity. This work was carried out under the supervision of the late W. Barclay Squire, and it should last for very many years to come.

At the conclusion of the paper the following music was sung by the Children and Gentlemen of the Chapel Royal: 'O quam gloriosam' (William Byrd); 'Almighty and everlasting' (Orlando Gibbons); 'Thou knowest, Lord' (Henry Purcell); and 'The Spirit of the Lord' (Elgar).

London Concerts

ROYAL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY: 'EGDON HEATH'

Mr. Holst's 'Egdon Heath' was performed at the Philharmonic Society's concert on February 23. Before that it had been heard only at New York and Cheltenham. The playing under M. Talich was good, as far as one could be aware on making first acquaintance with the music.

'Egdon Heath' is an interesting proposition. Only a bold composer who is mentally and technically at the top of the tree could look over such a landscape. The geographical title should not take up much of our view of the work, for anyone might point out that there is no more of Egdon in the music than there is of Martlesham, which is also a very good heath. Without any hint from a title, we know that the dream-colours of Holst's music speak to us of a locality, and not of an affection of the mind. We feel, too, that the locality is a presence, one that steals upon us and moves us to liking and to fear: it is not a pretty place, but it is lovely, and lonely. However, it is all so much better put in Hardy's first chapter, that the music may just as well be 'Egdon Heath' and annex the best programme note in the world.

It is, however, in chapter 2 that we find apt words about the music. 'To do things musingly, and by small degrees, seemed to be a duty in the Egdon valleys . . . .' Holst is in no hurry to point out one thing after another. The wisdom that accumulated in the growth from 'The Perfect Fool' to the 'Ode on a Grecian Urn' can, if it likes, dispense with the direct methods that spring from an anxiety to be understood. It can spell-bind without appearing to try. In short, 'Egdon Heath' is third-period music. Like other third-period music it pays a compliment to our understanding and presumes upon old acquaintance. It may be doubted whether anyone who had never before heard a note of Holst would make much of 'Egdon Heath.' Its thought, harmony, and colour are too finely distilled out of Holst's personal methods to make any yield to a standard test of listening. For the same reason 'Egdon Heath' is little likely to be popular. One almost hopes that it will fail to please more than the select few, for that is how we feel about heaths.

At this concert Szigeti played the Brahms Violin Concerto with a marvellous poise of style and thought and technique, and a characteristic lack of warmth in his tone. There are some of his admirers with whom this counts as a virtue, but here is one who remains unconvinced. M. Talich made a vivid affair of Dvorák's fourth Symphony, a pleasant enough work which, to be among the elect, you should praise above the fifth. What would the elect say if for every performance of No. 5 during the last quarter of a century there had been twenty of No. 4?

Holst's music put a duty upon the makers of the programme. They should have provided a sympathetic approach to it for our minds and moods, not to say our ears. Nothing could have been worse chosen than Berlioz's 'Carnaval Romain.' M.

TWO B.B.C. NATIONAL CONCERTS

On February 24, Mr. Geoffrey Toye conducted, at Queen's Hall, a programme of unblending elements. There was the Bach two-Violin Concerto, in which Jelly d'Aranyi and Adila Fachiri were the active partners, and the orchestra and Mr. Toye the gently quiescent ones; the 'Siegfried Idyll,' with the bloom off it; Ravel's gorgeous piece of fiddlestickery, the 'Tzigane' (orchestra, also ran); and Stanford's Symphony inspired (so to say) by Milton's 'L'Allegro ed il Pensieroso.' This has plenty of good tunes, into the working of which the composer put just a little too much hard labour. When he was in the vein, Stanford could be as light and spirituel as the best. He just misses bringing off most of this work, though there is enough pleasant music (in the Scherzo especially) to make one feel it was not a waste of time to play the Symphony. We have more than once lately spent forty minutes with the B.B.C. in far less entertaining company. Mr. Toye's control was easy—too easy, for the band needed a stronger hand.

On March 9, in a concert that was much too long (it lasted until a quarter to eleven, and you should have heard the poor tired band struggling after Till Eulenspiegel at that hour!), we had the well graced violinist Szigeti in the Beethoven Concerto. If his tone does not expand quite so much as that of other fiddlers, it is gloriously pure; he phrases like a gentleman, and his fastidious polish overlays a conception of imaginative power. He should be heard by all young fiddlers. I doubt if there are more than two or three violinists who as musicians can give us greater satisfaction.

Sir Henry Wood and the orchestra played the fourth 'Brandenburg' (perhaps not quite the happiest choice, since M. Szigeti did not play the solo violin part, and the excellent orchestral leader would not pretend to bring to the music such perfect art as his) and Frank Bridge's Suite 'The Sea,' which wears uncommonly well. The novelty was Respighi's set of 'Vetrate di Chiesa,' published last year. These purport to suggest the pictures in stained-glass windows—'The Flight into Egypt,' 'The Archangel Michael,' 'The Matins of St. Clare,' and 'Saint Gregory.' Here are all the orchestral gauderies that we enjoyed in 'The Fountains of Rome' and 'The Pines of Rome,' but there is not a memorable idea in all the music. What is said matters little; the manner of saying it is everything. Respighi would make a good composer for films. The best, because the sweetest and simplest, was the 'The Flight into Egypt.' At other times the simplicity was rather like that of pampered people's toys, that lack the happy inspiration of childhood, and the gorgeousness had more than a touch of vulgarity. The chief pleasure was in hearing Respighi throw the orchestra about in his enviably slick way. W. R. A.

LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

On Monday, February 20, Dr. Hermann Abendroth conducted the first of two programmes committed to his charge, and a large audience came to Queen's Hall to hear his reading of three classic Symphonies by Haydn, Beethoven, and Brahms. Haydn's Symphony was that in D usually called No. 6 of the Salomon set, and numbered 66 in the catalogue of the Breitkopf edition, a work conspicuous for the delicacy and charm of its orchestration, Beethoven's fourth and Brahms's second Symphonies followed, and the playing of Haydn augured well for the other two, since in it Dr. Abendroth insisted on carefully turned phrasing and well-balanced tone. In both Beethoven and Brahms, however, he forced the pace so that the playing was much rougher. The drummer came to grief inexplicably on the last chord of Beethoven's slow movement; the bassoon player in the Finale was rendered inarticulate by hurry. The reflective side of Brahms was entirely lost sight of in the fevered determination to prove that Brahms could be as exciting and even hectic as any of his contemporaries. The audience was stirred by the brilliant climax to which the Finale was carried, and signified its enthusiasm in the usual way, but there were some who left the hall wondering whether Brahms was not better understood in the days when the majority thought him dull and the virtuoso conductor looked askance at him as a clumsy orchestrator.

H. C. C.

The London Symphony Orchestra seemed to be playing all the better, at Queen's Hall on March 19, for its travels. Naturally an orchestra does play better when it has the habit of playing together. How good our flutists are! Mr. Robert Murchie and Mr. Gordon Walker were sitting together that night—a pair one would have to go far to match. Mr. Halstead's oboe playing was sweet, if a little shy. Not every section of the L.S.O. strings is well led. This is a matter which the celebrated body might, we venture to say, think over very seriously one of these fine days.

The Symphony was Beethoven's in C minor, and excepting a Concerto of Handel's the rest of the programme was no less familiar. A Suite by Reger which was to have been played had to be left out, and 'Death and Transfiguration' was given in its place. The concert was a success, and the conductor, Dr. Abendroth, enhanced his reputation. The moral of his vogue is that great works of German 19th-century music should be performed with the earnestness with which they were composed. Dr. Abendroth does not take his duties lightly. We have a suspicion that he could not if he would; but his seriousness is very energetic and truly impressive. Sometimes we should like for a change to have the effect of a natural flowing movement in the music. He pommels the score in hand. But when he is in charge the orchestra does certainly put its back into the work.

C.

MADAME LANDOWSKA

Madame Wanda Landowska has fairly conquered the London public. Her last harpsichord recital at Wigmore Hall was crowded; it was enjoyed; it became at the end a demonstration of cordiality. This clever and charming woman and consummate musician got on the friendliest footing with the audience. She did it by conveying something peculiarly zestful through her playing. Her harpsichord was not her fad, it told us, but her passion.

She used a modern instrument with a number of colouring devices. It was a noble instrument for the '48,' from which we were given a selection and would gladly have had more. A movement from the 'Italian Concerto' sounded extraordinarily brilliant. If all harpsichords had been as good as this one in the 1780's the pianoforte would have had a harder fight for supremacy. Madame Landowska turned to a pianoforte in order to play a Sonata of Mozart's, which she gave with a distinguished delicacy and certain coldness of style.

C.

BUDAPEST QUARTET

The Budapest Quartet gave a Schubert concert on March 3, and included one of Mendelssohn's neglected Quartets on March 12. They are a good party, a little more terre à terre than the airy Léners—more recognisably human and individual. It is curious that there is never anything to cavil at in the 'cello playing in the numerous quartets which come to London nowadays from all quarters of the globe. Schubert's G major Quartet is one of the most interesting of chamber works to hear if one goes primed with Prof. Tovey's recent subtle analysis (see the Oxford Press's 'Heritage of Music').

C.

POLTRONIERI QUARTET

The two concerts of the Poltronieri Quartet, from Milan, interested us partly because of the fine degree of technical skill and accuracy which characterised every performance, partly because of the peculiarities of some readings. The players opened the first concert with a Quartet by Boccherini, and this won unanimous approval. The ensemble was flawless and the individual playing excellent. But after Boccherini came Beethoven, and their interpretation of Beethoven was undoubtedly open to question. In a matter of this sort, personal taste, however, is the final arbiter, and Signor Poltronieri and his colleagues have as good a right to their convictions as have we to ours. In our opinion their version of Beethoven's music lacked solidity, grip, grandeur; it made a fetish of sweet tone and lyrical expression, and accordingly the reading did not do justice to some aspects, which we believe to be essential aspects, of his work. Technically, the playing was irreproachable.

On its second appearance the Poltronieri Quartet introduced a new work by a young Italian composer, Benvenuti, which met with a favourable reception. It is a good piece of writing, though not particularly daring in conception.

F. B.

MISS ESTHER FISHER

French music had a large share of the programme of the recital given by Miss Esther Fisher at Wigmore Hall—which is perhaps not unnatural, since this young and able New Zealand pianist is the pupil of a Parisian teacher. The choice is also explained by her unusual success in dealing with such music—be the composer an ancient or a modern, Daquin or Debussy. Miss Fisher, however, played also some examples of the German classics—Bach's Chaconne (in Busoni's arrangement) being the most notable performance. Her interpretation was that of an intelligent and studious artist, thoroughly trustworthy but perhaps a little too reticent to 'impose' her views on her listeners. With many another young player Miss Fisher seemed to say 'our true intent is all for your delight'—which is well. But it is still better when the player's own delight and satisfaction becomes his or her only concern.

F. B.

HOWARD BLISS

Mr. Howard Bliss revived, at Æolian Hall, Richard Strauss's early 'Cello and Pianoforte Sonata, and its Mendelssohnian strains made us wonder whether some day Strauss himself will not be regarded as we regard Mendelssohn, with an admiration which is not wholly unqualified. Mr. Bliss did full justice to its unsophisticated lyricism (how obvious the working-out section seemed!), and to those periods which promise better things to come. Throughout the recital we found Mr. Bliss an intelligent interpreter, always ready to put the composer's claims before his own. Such reticence deserves credit, but we had an uneasy feeling that a style less detached, a slight degree of self-assertion, would not have been amiss here and there—especially in the Beethoven Sonata.

F. B.

ORIANA MADRIGAL SOCIETY

The Oriana Madrigal Society gave a concert of north-country music at Kingsway Hall with the collaboration of a number of soloists, among whom two stood out, Mr. Ernest Potts, of Newcastle, and Mr. Tom Clough, a Northumbrian piper. Nothing is more trying than a make-believe brogue, and we are afraid we must say that Mr. Potts made most of the others seem a trifle affected.

Mr. Potts was so unmistakably the real thing. His brogue was something you could very nearly hang your hat on. He was also a capital artist. He sang his Northumbrian songs with a much relished dryness and pawkiness. His pathos was as good as his humour: excellent in quality and judiciously restricted in quantity. We wanted to hear him again and again. The folk-song arrangements by Dr. Whittaker served him better than those by Mr. Jeffrey Mark, which were inclined to be fussy and to do smart little irrelevant things. I would rather hear Mr. Potts sing than Sir Harry Lauder any day.

But he must be sure to preserve his dryness and economical method, and not to play down.

Mr. Clough and his Northumbrian Small Pipes were an utter novelty to at least one ignorant southerner. This instrument was a refined—a chamber concert—relation of the Scottish bagpipes. It was not played by the mouth, but bellows were worked by the right arm—an idea for tired oboists. Mr. Clough's agility of fingering was only matched by his keen rhythmical sense. He gave us a brilliant performance, playing reels, strathspeys, variations, and so on. It was said he was a miner. Years of sophistication could not have given him a more telling platform behaviour. He was wrapped in his music-making, and, playing with closed eyes and swaying slightly as he played, he appeared oblivious of the interested and grateful audience. C.

GERALD COOPER'S CHAMBER CONCERTS

The last four of Mr. Gerald Cooper's chamber concerts have surpassed in artistic interest and historical importance anything done before. The first of these was a harpsichord recital by Mrs. Gordon Woodhouse, whose playing of Scarlatti was perfect, and whose reading of Mozart would have been faultless but for occasional vagaries of rhythm. Then, on February 28, came the concert which of all others we have most reason to remember. Mr. Cooper had assembled for the occasion not fiddlers and pianists, but trumpeters and trombonists, an organist, and a singer whose excellent voice was the best match obtainable for the timbre of the brass.

The programme began with Purcell's 'Music for the funeral of Queen Mary II.,' for two trumpets and two trombones. Even though the playing left something to be desired in respect of intonation, the music made a very deep impression. It is the kind of music to which a musician who is also something of a poet, a Berlioz, or a Boïto, would have given his heart. There is a fine climax towards the end, but it has nothing in common with the emotional climax of such funeral pieces as those of Chopin and Wagner. It is a climax of pure majesty—the bleak and gaunt majesty of death. It suggested nothing so much as some mediæval pageant led by the Leveller. Almost equally interesting were the other items—H. Schütz's Symphonia Sacra, 'Fili mi, Absalom'; W. Locke's 'Music for the King's Sackbuts and Cornets'; Bach's Chorales for four trombones; Mozart's Divertimento in C major, for two flutes, five trumpets, and drums; and Bach's aria, 'Heiligste Dreieinigkeit,' sung by Mr. Keith Falkner, and accompanied by three trumpets, drums, and organ. There were also two organ solos, which missed fire through no fault of the player, but of the wholly inadequate instrument on which he had to play.

The next concert (March 6) was a violin recital chiefly notable for the exceedingly fine playing of the Bach Sonata in C major by Mr. Joseph Szigeti. One realised more clearly than ever why so many Bach performances, meritorious in some ways, yet fail to hold our interest. To do justice to such a piece as the Fugue in the C major Sonata one needs very exceptional powers of endurance, both physical and intellectual. Mr. Szigeti's reading was just as keen as it was technically perfect, just as alert at the end as it was at the beginning. He played also some Bartók Hungarian folk-tunes (arranged by himself) for the first time. These were brilliant and extremely effective pieces—worthy successors to the Brahms-Joachim Hungarian Dances.

On March 13 Mr. John Barbirolli conducted a string orchestra and Miss Sibyl Eaton played Vaughan Williams's 'Concerto Accademico.' Neither the playing of the orchestra nor that of the soloist reached a high standard of distinction. The programme, however, was very attractive, and consisted of Purcell's Suite, Locatelli's 'Concerto Grosso,' Peter Warlock's 'Serenade,' and Mozart's 'Eine Kleine Nachtmusik.' F. B.

BACH AT SOUTHWARK CATHEDRAL

The annual performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion—or portions of it—at Southwark Cathedral was given on March 17. This year the soprano and contralto solos were sung by women's voices—a great improvement. Even Mr. Cook's versatile boy choristers cannot do anything like justice to these sublime outpourings, which were so unmistakably meant to be sung by women. The two singers were well in the picture, though we could have wished for a more consistently steady tone from each of them. Mr. Steuart Wilson, who sang the part of the Evangelist and the tenor solos, used heart and brain, as well as voice, but was sometimes inclined to over-dramatise the Narrator's words. These, the most wonderful recitatives ever written, surely need no underlining. The bass, a member of the choir, sang the words of Jesus and the 'Eventide' recitative. From behind the great screen (late arrivals were consigned to the Lady Chapel) some of the chorus-singing naturally sounded rather muffled or overpowered by the orchestra (London Symphony) or organ. The choir, however, knew this music, and some things came through remarkably well. The soprano ripieno in the opening movement sounded exactly right in relation to the double chorus, and the choral responds often gave an impression of simply happening. It was good, too, to hear the throbs of the bass strings so vividly.

The only thing to be said against these Southwark performances of the Passion is that there is not enough of it. The question of pounds shillings and pence is of course all-important (it is deplorable that such enterprising music-making as goes on at the Cathedral does not pay its way). But would it not be possible for Mr. Cook to give us the 'St. Matthew' Passion complete one of these days? We suggest that either two Saturday afternoons be devoted to it, or the whole work be given on a mid-week evening.

P. W.

CENTRAL LONDON CHORAL UNION

Elgar's 'The Kingdom' is so rarely heard in London that its performance at Central Hall, on March 20, ought to have attracted a far larger audience. There could be no better answer to those who decry London choralism than the excellent singing of this three-year-old body of about a hundred and fifty voices, drawn from business workers in the City. Their tone is fresh and always musical, and the musicianship and intelligence shown in their grasp of Elgar's exacting work entitles them to high rank among London's choral bodies. There was a capital quartet of soloists—Miss Dorothy Silk, Miss Margaret Balfour, Mr. Percy Manchester, and Mr. Keith Falkner. Dr. Harold Darke was an alert and stimulating conductor. H. G.

QUINQUAGESIMA SUNDAY, 1723

A venture unique in music, either here or in America, is in my opinion being carried forward by the Bach Cantata Club through its concerts at St. Margaret's, Westminster.

The programme on February 21 was a replica of the service in which Bach offered his 'test-piece' for the post of cantor in St. Thomas's Church, Leipsic, on Sunday, February 7, 1723. Much of the ritual, though noted on the programme, was omitted; the result was an impressive and spiritual service of prayer, sermon, and music.

It would be a pity to subject such a service to analysis. Certainly the audience, with the first notes of the organ prelude, was transformed into a congregation, joining in the Chorales and sharing in the service without any sense of listening to a concert performance. It is this participation of all of us in a service under the ægis of Bach that places these concerts quite apart.

A word is in order perhaps about two outstanding features of this service: the sermon by the Right Rev. Samuel Mulford Taylor, Canon of Windsor, and the cantata, 'Jesus called to Him the twelve.' The preacher took these words for his text, and in a few simple serious sentences called attention to Bach's subjectivity (his complete immersion in the task which lay before him) and his faith — that faith which, far beyond the music production of those years, made his cantorate a spiritual development of Bach's character towards a profound and personal intimacy with God. The cantata itself, a short, simple, early work, contains, in the Chorale, 'Awake us, Lord!' one of Bach's most beautiful settings.

The chorus, a small one, is by no means perfect, witness the poor intonation in the attack on the opening chorus (for what would a criticism be without a single crit!). I should like to see the day when this chorus, in gowns suitable for a service, is directed from the organ-loft and the services become as nearly as possible miniatures of the services in the Thomaskirche. Then indeed will the Cantata Club (whoever its sponsors and directors) be able to say, with all the high adventure implied in the words, that it 'went up to Jerusalem.' Leonard Elsmith (N.Y.).

OPERA AT THE OLD VIC.

'Lohengrin' at the Old Vic. was of course the merest sketch of the real thing, but still a sketch that was well appreciated by the audience. The Elsa and Lohengrin, Miss Joan Cross and Mr. Henry Wendon, looked a truly noble Nordic pair, and both sang agreeably, if with some lack of warmth and fullness. Mr. Wendon is an uncommonly promising young tenor. It is hardly fair to complain that he was rather a rigid hero, for there is not much room for spreading oneself on the stage at the Old Vic. during 'Lohengrin'; but we should have liked to hear him sing sometimes with more breadth. He surely has more voice in him than he tells people about. Miss Frances Geraldi was an effective Ortrud, at least as regards the upper part of her voice. Mr. Sumner Austin sang rather throatily as Telramund, but acted with conviction. Mr. Harry Brindle was the King; his phrasing was a little stiff, but there was good, ringing tone. Mr. Corri conducted. He had some special reinforcements in the orchestra.

'Figaro' the next week was a great popular success, and was indeed a pretty show. In criticizing the Old Vic. it is absurd to ask for extravagant luxuries. Their 'Figaro' would have met all reasonable demands if the ensemble had been more neatly sung. It was a pity to hear nearly all the principals cutting in before the beat again and again in the Finale of Act 2. Miss Wilma Berkeley sang very prettily as the Countess. Like everyone else, she was at her best in her solos. Her 'Dove sono' was charmingly sweet and pure. It was a small voice, and did not tell quite enough in the ensembles. As an actress Miss Berkeley did not give the Countess her full stateliness. She should, for all her tremors, be a very great lady in Act 2. Miss Joan Cross sang 'Voi che sapete' very prettily, though there have been Cherubinos who managed to appear more boyish. Is it not possible to train a chorister for the part? Miss Mavis Bennett would have sung better if she had set her face against any sort of tremolando. Her motto should be, Trust to an open throat. Mr. Sumner Austin, whose operatic repertory seems unlimited, was Figaro. Mr. Vernon Cooper was really excellent as the Count, apart from some small rigidities in his enunciation. And a word must be said for the most excellent and droll Gardener of Mr. S. Harrison—whose name we have seen on Old Vic. programmes for years without ever learning what the 'S.' stands for.

Benedict's 'Lily of Killarney' is rather absurd, but not bad fun, especially when performed with the Old Vic. Company's zest. Its fault, judged by its own quaint standard, is that the hero is a cad. Not by designed irony, but by the author's incompetence, he is left in the worst predicament that ever pretended to have a happy ending—viz., with two loving young women, equally virtuous, attractive, and self-sacrificing, on his hands. This unfortunate personage was played by Mr. Kennedy MacKenna, who sang many things nicely but who has a thing or two to learn about top notes. Mr. Herbert Simmonds's performance as Danny was outstandingly good. C.

SOME SINGERS OF THE MONTH

Tito Schipa, an Italian lyric tenor from Chicago, who has the makings of a pleasing if probably not a musicianly singer, took the fancy of the Albert Hall audience on March 11. He was uncertain of his technique in all but the lightest of Italian and Spanish pieces of a popular nature. In more exacting music we noticed his upper-chest breathing, and although he did not sing throatily, the whole of his thought was obviously directed to avoiding throatiness, leaving no attention for anything else. He hardly dare pronounce a single consonant all the afternoon, and he took breath without thought of anything but vocal convenience (thus in Brahms's 'Mainacht'—'Und; die einsame; Thräne'). The English language is a complete mystery to this young singer. As he ascended the hill of a few songs he cautiously cut steps all the way in the form of innumerable inserted h's. His tone was pretty; but if one's command of an open throat is so uncertain, one is not a technician. Miss Rita Neve played pianoforte solos—a thankless task at an Albert Hall concert when a singer is the prime attraction. Her pieces were slightly beyond her grasp.

Mr. Leslie Holmes, a Canadian baritone, sang at Wigmore Hall on February 28. There were good moments—for instance, in the last page of 'Ye twice ten hundred deities'—but the young singer had no very sure basis for his tone. He made an impression of considerable nervousness, but nerves should not put the diaphragm out of action. The programme afforded a quaint example of song-translation. For the line 'Alcidens Siegesschreiten,' in Schubert's 'An die Leyer,' this easy-going version offered us 'For great Alciden's glories,' trusting that no one would wish to know who Alciden was.

Miss Sonia Neville, who sang at Æolian Hall on February 22, was described as a Polish contralto. Her performances were eccentric and not very musical, and her affected manners on the platform were distracting. She would probably have sung much better if she had stood rather more still and concentrated her thought on her songs. There were moments when her voice was interesting, —for instance in Brahms's 'Wiegenlied,' which was lightly sung on a very little breath, but really controlled.

Miss Muriel Pearson (Æolian Hall, March 16) was typical of the 'promising' singers one so often hears. She had the makings of a good voice, but her performances were in a state of emerging from amateurishness. She seemed to have been trained on too small and finicking lines. It was a voice of some volume, but it wanted the discipline of a stiff course of Handel and Verdi. The singer's knowledge of foreign languages did not warrant her using them in public. But she was eminently promising—if she really means business. C.

Music in the Provinces

Banbury.—Madrigals, part-songs, and 'The Banner of St. George' were sung by the Banbury Choral Union under Mr. C. R. Palmer at its third concert. Miss Dorothea Webb chose her songs well, and the orchestra opened with Mozart's 'Kleine Nachtmusik.'——The Banbury Madrigal and Glee Union gave half its concert on March 14 to the abridged version of 'Carmen,' with four members of the choir as soloists.

Bath.—At a recent Symphony concert Mr. Jan Hurst, before conducting Glazounov's seventh Symphony, was pianist in a performance of Beethoven's Trio in C, Op. 56. ——The Léner Quartet has been giving a series of Friday afternoon concerts at the Pump Room. The programme on March 9 was devoted to Brahms.

Bedford.—The Choral Society's performance of 'The Creation,' under Mr. A. F. Parris, was the occasion of the incident of the month, when Mr. Keith Falkner, having mislaid his evening dress, walked on to sing Adam in plus fours.——The School Musical Society gave 'Acis and Galatea' to a crowded audience in the Great Hall, Mr. A. J. de Reyghere conducting.

Birmingham.—A concert largely in honour of Mr. Holst was given on February 16 by the Festival Choral Society. The programme included the 'Hymn of Jesus' and the Fugal Concerto, which was played by an orchestra of fifty largely drawn from the City Orchestra. Stimulated by the presence of the composer the choir sang at its best under Dr. Adrian Boult.——The concert edition of 'Carmen' was given by the Midland Musical Society under Mr. Darby on February 18, with Miss Muriel Brunskill in the title-part.——The Gloucester Orpheus Society, of nearly sixty voices, paid its second visit to Birmingham on February 21, and sang an excellent selection of choral music in characteristic style under Mr. S. W. Underwood. ——The City Orchestra's concert on Sunday, February 19, was distinguished by the presence of Dame Ethel Smyth, who conducted her Violin and Horn Concerto, the soloists being Mr. Brosa and Mr. Brain. The Overture to 'The Wreckers' was also played.——M. Ansermet made his first appearance at Birmingham at February 22 as conductor of a Symphony concert, the programme of which included Franck's Symphony, the Prelude to Moussorgsky's 'Khovantschina,' and Honegger's 'Pastorale d'été.'——At the Sunday concert on March 4 the City Orchestra played a Suite, 'Abend Musik,' by Hermann Grabner, and a Poem for orchestra by William J. Fenney, entitled 'In the Shadow.'——Holst's Somerset Rhapsody and a new Elegy by I. Burnell were played on March 11. ——The programme given by the Birmingham and Midland Institute, under Prof. Bantock, on March 12, included several unfamiliar items, such as the Overture to Handel's 'Poro,' a set of six pieces from the 'Rosenkavalier,' and Liszt's A major Pianoforte Concerto.——Dr. Brodsky, who is now seventy-seven, played Bach's A minor Concerto with Mr. Hock's String Orchestra at a Philharmonic Mid-day concert. These programmes have also included the six Pastorals for four voices and string quartet by Walford Davies, and Dohnányi's second Pianoforte Quintet, played by the Philharmonic Quartet and Miss Mary Abbott.——The Catterall Quartet was responsible for a memorable occasion on March 13, when the players were joined by Miss Kathleen Moorhouse and Mr. Stuart Redfern in Schönberg's Sextet, 'Verklärte Nacht.' The concert was given by the Birmingham Chamber Concert Society.——At a meeting of the University Musical Society the Violin Sonatas of Elgar and Delius were played by the Society's President, Mr. Albert Sammons.——Among the artists recently heard were Friedman, Elisabeth Schumann, and Harold Samuel.—— The Birmingham Grand Opera Society was at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on March 5 to 10, with a programme consisting of 'Pagliacci' and 'Dido and Æneas.' The part of Æneas was sung on one occasion by Mr. Parry Jones and on another by Mr. Frank Mullings.

Bournemouth.—Sir Edward German's second Symphony, which was first played at the Norwich Festival of 1893, was a popular revival at the Winter Gardens.—— The second Pianoforte Concerto by Montague Phillips was played by Mr. Leslie England, with the composer conducting.——A programme of special interest, given under the direction of Sir Dan Godfrey, included Sibelius's fifth Symphony, Stanford's Variations on 'Down among the dead men,' for pianoforte and orchestra, and an Air and Variations by J. D. Davis.

Bradford.—Thomas Wood's racy work, 'Forty Singing Seamen,' was given its first performance in the North of England by the Old Choral Society on March 7, under Mr. Wilfred Knight.——The Bradford Moor Choral Society gave a Schubert concert under Mr. George Firth, the programme including the 'Song of Miriam,' and songs arranged by Dr. Bairstow.——The Entr'acte from Delius's 'A Village Romeo and Juliet' was played under Mr. Keith Douglas at a concert of the Philharmonic Orchestra. At the next concert Mr. Douglas conducted 'Scheherazade' and his own two North Country Sketches for string orchestra—'Reflections on the river at Burnside' and 'Kettlewell.'——Schubert's Symphony in C was played, under Sir Hamilton Harty, at the last Subscription concert of the season.——The West Riding Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Douglas, made its first public appearance on March 11 with a programme that included Mozart's 'Ein musikalischer Spass,' Butterworth's 'The banks of green willow,' and Honegger's 'Pastorale d'été.' The new Orchestra is formed from the pick of the players in the Leeds and Bradford Orchestras.

Brighton.—'Caractacus' was heard for the first time at Brighton on February 18, when a well-prepared performance was given by the Brighton and Hove Harmonic Society, under Mr. Percy Taylor. The solo singers were Miss Ida Cooper, Mr. Heddle Nash, Mr. Howard Fry, and Mr. Charles Knowles.

Bristol.—The eighty-fourth annual Ladies' Night of the Bristol Royal Orpheus Glee Society was a celebration of Mr. George Riseley's jubilee as conductor of the Society. The programme of the evening included 'The curfew tolls the knell,' a setting of part of Gray's 'Elegy' by Mr. Lee Williams, with the composer conducting the performance. ——The chief item at the annual concert of Miss Gertrude Winchester's Ladies' Choir was a cantata, 'The Captive Soul,' by E. M. Wooley.——The Women's Choir at Bristol University sang admirably in an enterprising programme on February 20—four of Holst's 'Rig Veda' Hymns, part-songs by Schubert, Geoffrey Shaw, &c., and unison folk-songs. Mr. Arthur S. Warrell conducted, and Mr. Ralph Morgan played organ solos.——At Easter a series of twenty-six weekly concerts will begin at the 'Glen.' The programmes are to be of the 'good-class popular' order, with well-known symphonies and concertos and the like.

Camborne.—The Cornwall Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Dr. C. Rivers, gave three concerts at Camborne and Truro on February 26 and 27. The programme included the 'Enigma' Variations.

Cambridge.—A series of concerts by the Léner Quartet came to an end on March 7, with a programme of Franck, Debussy, and Ravel.

Catterick (Yorks).—The programme of the Catterick Choral Society on February 21, under the direction of Mr. Arthur Fountain, opened with Parry's 'Ode to Music,' and included Frederic Austin's cycle of traditional songs entitled 'Songs in a Farmhouse.'

Cheltenham.—The Léner Quartet gave the fourth of a series of Beethoven concerts on March 8, the programme including Opp. 95 and 127.

Clare.—The concert edition of 'Carmen,' and 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' were given by Clare Choral Society with the assistance of singers from the choral societies of Cavendish and Haverhill.

Derby.—The Municipal and County Chamber concerts came to an end on February 24, when the Catterall Quartet was joined by Mr. Carl Fuchs in Schubert's Quintet, Op. 163.

Eastbourne.—Capt. Amers has recently conducted the 'Enigma' Variations, Franck's 'Le Chasseur Maudit,' and Vaughan Williams's Folk-Song Suite.

Gloucester. — On February 16, when the Choral Society sang Elgar's 'The Black Knight' and Stanford's 'Phaudrig Crohoore,' the late Sir Herbert Brewer conducted the Society for the last time.——The concert of the Orchestral Society on March 1 occurred during his illness, and the programme, which included Mozart's Symphony in E flat, was conducted by Mr. S. W. Underwood.——A programme of nineteen part-songs was given recently by the Orpheus Choir, under Mr. Underwood. The novelties in the list included 'In September,' by A. Brent-Smith, to words by Sir Oliver Lodge, and 'Quick March,' by Rutland Boughton, to words by Thomas Hardy.

Halifax. — An admirable performance of the new concert version of 'Semele' was given by the Choral Society under Dr. Tysoe on March 8. The solo singers were Miss Elsie Chambers, Mr. Heddle Nash, and Mr. Stuart Robertson, and the members of the Leeds Symphony Orchestra assisted.

Hartlepool.—Mozart's thirty-fifth Symphony was included in the programme of the Symphony Orchestra under Mr. J. F. Chalmers Park, on March 14.

Hastings.—Mr. Basil Cameron's special concert on February 18 was a great popular success, Hastings residents taking much pride in the distinction which has recently been won by their Musical Director. With the substitution of Debussy's 'L'après-midi d'un faune' for Bax's Symphonic Variations, the programme was identical with that which Mr. Cameron conducted for the London Philharmonic Society.

Haverhill. — The old-established Haverhill Choral Union chose 'Samson' for its annual concert, and gave an enjoyable performance under Mr. C. J. H. Shann, of Bury St. Edmund's.

Huddersfield.—At a concert of the Philharmonic Society, under Mr. J. Fletcher Sykes, the Andante and Finale from Weber's Clarinet Concerto were played by Mr. Percy Taylor.——'Acis and Galatea' and Brahms's

'Liebeslieder' were performed by the Marsden Choral Society on March 10.——Bach's 'Sing ye to the Lord' and a programme of madrigals and part-songs were sung by the Glee and Madrigal Society, under Dr. T. E. Pearson, on February 28, and the Kodály 'Cello Sonata was played by Miss Beatrice Harrison.

Hull.—The Vocal Society concluded its season on March 7 with a programme that illustrated smaller English choral works, from 'Sumer is i-cumin in' to Vaughan Williams's 'Now tramp o'er moss and fell.' Sir Henry Coward conducted. The Catterall Quartet also took part in the concert, with movements by Tchaikovsky, Elgar, Franck, and Beethoven.

Ipswich. — Franck's Symphony was played by the Orchestral Society on February 21, under Mr. Edgar Wilby's direction.

Leeds.—The Choral Union gave Vaughan Williams's 'Sea Symphony' and Cliffe's 'Ode to the North-East Wind,' each for the first time, on February 15. With the assistance of the Leeds Symphony Orchestra the works were excellently performed, the Symphony under its composer and the Ode under Sir Henry Coward.——Leeds New Choral Society gave an operatic evening on March 7. ——'The Revenge' and three works of Bach—'O Light Everlasting,' the Pianoforte Concerto in D minor, and the Flute Suite in B minor—were performed by members of the University Music Society.——The programme of the College of Music Choir for March 14 included a new Dance-Fantasy for pianoforte and strings entitled 'The Enchanted Wood,' by Armstrong Gibbs.——Mr. Julius Harrison conducted the fifth 'Brandenburg' Concerto and 'Tod und Verklärung' at the Saturday concert on February 18. A fortnight later W. H. Reed's Viola Concerto was played by Mr. Lionel Tertis, and the programme further included Mr. Harrison's 'Worcestershire Suite.'——Miss Beatrice Harrison played the Kodály 'Cello Sonata at the last of the Belgrave Popular concerts on March 10.

Liverpool.—Elgar's 'Falstaff' and Delius's 'Sea Drift,' together with Bach's third 'Brandenburg' Concerto and Dohnányi's Suite in F sharp minor, gave importance to the Philharmonic programme on February 21. The performances, under Sir Henry Wood, left nothing to be desired. Mr. Roy Henderson was the soloist in 'Sea Drift.' Another Delius work, 'Brigg Fair,' was played at the next Philharmonic concert a fortnight later.—— Miss Beatrice Harrison played the Kodály 'Cello Sonata at a meeting of the B.M.S.——The Kennedy-Frasers and Mr. Harold Samuel have been among the visiting artists.

Maidstone.—The London Symphony Orchestra, the Maidstone Amateur Orchestral Society, and the Choral Union joined forces on March 6 for a performance of Bach's 'Christmas Oratorio,' under Mr. F. Wilson Parish.

Malvern. — The Budapest Quartet played for the Malvern Concert Club on March 1. The Club, which is managed by Mr. A. Troyte Griffith, has now given ninety-six concerts of a high standard.

Manchester.—An interesting series of Hallé concerts has to be chronicled. The main items were: on February 16, Strauss's 'Don Quixote' and Brahms's fourth Symphony; on February 23, Mozart's 'Echo Nocturne' for four orchestras and Serenade in E flat for wind octet; on March 1, 'The Kingdom,' which had not been heard at Manchester for twenty-one years (the solo singers were Miss Dorothy Silk, Miss Muriel Brunskill, Mr. John Coates, and Mr. Harold Williams); on March 8, Sibelius's second Symphony.——Sir Thomas Beecham took charge of the Brand Lane concert on February 25, for an evening of opera. At the next of these concerts, on March 10, Sir Henry Wood conducted the Manchester Philharmonic Chorus in the complete 'Song of Hiawatha.' ——In chamber music, the chief event has been a Brahms concert by the Catterall Quartet.——Recitals have been given by Mr. Maurice Ward and Mr. Clifton Helliwell in Violin and Pianoforte Sonatas, Mr. Carl Fuchs and Miss Nancy Smith (singer), Mr. Everard de Peyer (singer) and Miss Ivy Parkin (pianoforte), and Mr. Wilfred Grantham (singer) in a programme that included new songs by Edward Agate.——During a week of opera by the B.N.O.C. the following programme was popularly received: 'The Mastersingers,' 'The Barber of Seville,' 'Carmen,' 'Madame Butterfly,' 'Tannhäuser,' 'The Valkyrie,' and 'The Golden Cockerel.'

Middlesbrough.—Under Mr. Gavin Kay the Musical Union sang with great effect in Elgar's 'The Black Knight' and Brahms's 'Song of Destiny' on March 13.

Newcastle-on-Tyne.—There is very little to chronicle from this centre of music. Mr. Bainton and the Newcastle Philharmonic Orchestra gave a Wagner concert. Sir Thomas Beecham was prevented from conducting his London Symphony Orchestra concert and Mr. W. H. Reed, as usual, stepped into the breach. The Choral Union showed its appreciation of the services of Dr. W. G. Whittaker, who has just resigned the conductorship, by presenting him with four volumes of the Bach Gesellschaft edition and the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book in two volumes.

Newcastle-under-Lyme.—On March 5, the Clef Club gave a concert performance of Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas' under the direction of Mr. S. F. Lovatt.

Norwich.—At the Municipal concert on March 3, Miss Beatrice Harrison played the Kodály 'Cello Sonata and Haydn's Concerto in D. Mr. Maddern Williams conducted this and the 'Unfinished' Symphony. The London Harp Ensemble, with Madame Marie Korchinska as harpist, played the Bax Quintet for the Philharmonic Society on February 16.——The Norwich String Quartet finished its season on March 1 with two concerts, the programmes including Quartets by Mozart, in G, and Brahms, in C minor.

Oxford.—On March 1, the Harmonic Society gave the first performance of the 'Ballad of Hampstead Heath,' a choral and orchestral work in which Dr. Thomas Wood has taken all the opportunity offered by Flecker's poem for writing jocular, boisterous, and fanciful music. The Society also gave a concert version of Purcell's 'King Arthur'; Mr. Reginald Jacques conducted.——Under the same conductor, on March 4, the Eglesfield Musical Society performed Mozart's 'Requiem' and Bach's 'Magnificat' in Queen's Chapel.——Under the direction of Mr. Marco Pallis, of Liverpool, an informal concert of little-known music for viols and virginals was given at Queen's, on February 25. Most of the music had recently been copied from the British Museum. Among the works was a piece for three viols by Henry VIII. —— A Quartet for three strings and flute, by Mozart, was played at a recent Subscription concert. —— On March 3 the Léner Quartet played the three 'Rasoumovsky' Quartets at the Town Hall.

Portsmouth.—Mr. Norman F. Demuth conducted his 'Overture for a Comedy' at the Municipal concert on March 3, and at the following concert he and Miss Joan Last played his Suite for two pianofortes and orchestra, 'Moods.'

Rochdale.—The Male-Voice Choir, which is admirably trained by Mr. George Whitaker, gave a specially interesting programme on February 21. The feature of it was a selection from Shield's ballad-opera 'The Farmer,' with a Choral Overture specially composed by Mr. Whitaker for the recent production of this work at the Leeds Little Theatre. Three bass solos from the opera were sung by Mr. Joseph Sutcliffe. The programme furthur included Weelkes's 'Ha, ha, this world doth pass' and Sibelius's 'The song now stilled.'

Salisbury.—An important concert of Bach's music was given by the Salisbury Musical Society in the Cathedral on February 15, the works being the Motet, 'Jesu, Priceless Treasure' and four parts of the 'Christmas Oratorio.' Dr. W. G. Alcock conducted, and Mr. G. Thalben Ball was at the organ.

Sheffield. — A specially interesting 'Five o'clock' concert was given on February 29, when a capable company of artists performed Vaughan Williams's 'The shepherds of the delectable mountains' and a selection from 'Hugh the Drover.'

An introductory address on Vaughan Williams was given by Sir Henry Hadow. Other 'Five o'clock' features have been the Debussy Quartet, Beethoven's Op. 127, and the Kodály 'Cello Sonata played by Miss Beatrice Harrison.——Among the works that have been heard at recent University recitals were the Debussy Quartet, the Brahms Pianoforte Quintet, and, in pianoforte versions, Scriabin's 'Poem of Ecstasy' and Delius's 'A Song before Sunrise,' 'Autumn,' and 'Winter Landscape.' These orchestral works were played on two pianofortes by Mrs. Leathes and Miss Ethel Cook.

Shrewsbury. — On February 21 the Philharmonic Society gave a miscellaneous programme which included Bach's 'Jesu, Priceless Treasure,' Dowland's 'Come again, sweet love,' Byrd's 'While the bright sun,' and contributions by the Philharmonic Pianoforte Quartet.

Tonbridge.—Two Symphony concerts have recently been given at the Judd School Hall with an orchestra made up of professional wind, a few professional string players, and some capable amateurs collected under the conductorship of Mr. David Evans. The programme on March 3 included the 'New World' Symphony and Elgar's second 'Wand of Youth' Suite.

Torquay.—At a concert of the Municipal Orchestra Mr. E. W. Goss first gave a lecture on Coleridge-Taylor and then conducted the following works: the 'Christmas' Overture, the three Characteristic Waltzes, the 'Otello' and 'Minnehaha' Suites, the three Dream Dances, and the first Entr'acte from the music to 'Nero.'

Ulverston.—At the annual concert on March 2, the Choral Society, a well-trained body of a hundred and fifty singers and players under the conductorship of Mr. Edmund Telfer, performed 'Judas Maccabæus.'

Uxbridge.—A creditable performance of the 'The Dream of Gerontius' was given by the Choral Society recently, under Mr. Maurice Miles. The soloists were Mr. Eric Greene, Miss Freda Townson, and Mr. Leyland White.

York.—Apart from the second Act of Gluck's 'Orpheus,' the concert of the Musical Society on February 21 was a Schubert Centenary celebration. Dr. Bairstow conducted the early C minor Symphony and his own arrangement of seven of the songs for unaccompanied choir. Dr. Bairstow's selection included 'A Song for Marching,' 'The Wayside Inn,' 'The Fishermaiden,' and 'The Waterlily.'

Competition Festival Record

Barnsley (March 2 and 3).—It was decided this year to offer no money prizes in these competitions. The entries dropped from four hundred and forty-two to three hundred and forty-six, and it can hardly be doubted that this is a case of cause and effect. The falling off occurred chiefly in the choral classes and, as a result, the Festival lost much of its interest. The only competing male-voice choir in the chief class was Cudworth Y.M.C.A. (Mr. H. Jolley), Wakefield Co-operative Choir (Mr. H. Leach) was successful in the mixed-voice class.

Carlisle (March 5-8).—This year there was a marked falling-off in choirs from business houses, and in the open male-voice choir class there was no entry. This slackening of interest is said to be due to the rise of amateur operatic societies at Carlisle. Success was brought to the Festival largely by the rural choirs, which were plentiful and of a good standard. Out of sixteen village choral societies the winner was Dalston Choir (Mr. J. W. Ellis), Dovenby Singing Class (Mr. T. L. Hayston) being second. In the female-voice class Dovenby was first and Lazonby Wesleyan (Mr. J. Routledge) second, out of twenty choirs. Isel (Mr. W. E. Gash) was best of four choirs from small villages. Brackenburgh (Mr. W. H. Reid) was at the head of twelve male-voice choirs, and Warwick (Mr. W. Hughes) was best of twelve choirs from Women's Institutes. Eight choirs entered for a sight-test, won by Broughton Moor (Mr. T. Graham). In the choral contests held on the final day the prizes were taken by Haltwhistle (female voices), Haltwhistle Presbyterian (mixed-voices), and Penrith in the chief mixed-voice class.

Chester-le-Street.—At the third annual competitions the choral singing was still behind-hand in numbers (eight choirs in three classes), but it was of an advanced standard, especially in the chief male-voice competition. Five choirs gave thoroughly artistic performances of Elgar's 'The Herald,' the best being that of Bebside (Mr. William Bell).

Devonshire.—The Devon Music Competitions were held at three centres. At Exeter (March 3-7) the entries in the choral competitions were on the whole disappointing, but the competition for Women's Institutes brought in fourteen choirs and was a great success. The prize was taken by Uffculme. University College sent the best Ladies' Choir and the best Town Choral Society. Uffculme also sent in the best Village Choral Society. At Barnstaple, on March 9, there was an increased entry, especially in the case of rural elementary schools. West Buckland won the prize among four choirs from Village Institutes. At Tavistock (March 9 and 10) there was also an increased entry. Women's Institutes were again prominent, the best choir being that of Buckland Monachorum.

London.—This Festival, with a mammoth entry, is proceeding as we go to press. We shall give a report in our next issue.

Mansfield (March 9 and 10).—Here, as in so many of this year's competitions, there was a dearth of competing choirs, although in other respects the Festival showed a gradual improvement in numbers and performance. Sheffield Orpheus won the prize for male-voice choirs, and a new note was struck in the ladies' section by the victory of Skegby Hockey Club.

Mill Hill (February 20, 21, 22, 25, 27, and 28).—This 'Eisteddfod,' now in its ninth year, is justified in its title, for its syllabus wanders away from music as far as to include original sonnets, limericks, and spelling (under ten). The event is popular and expanding, and shows signs of health in everything except choral activity. One of the features was the (unopposed) playing of Miss Ethel Loder's String Orchestra.

Norfolk (May 16-19).—Entries close on April 9. Hon. secretary, Mrs. Wilfrid Tillett, 2, Claremont Road, Norwich.

Skipton (February 18 and 25).—Although the syllabus contained fewer classes than last year, the number of competitors had increased. Schools in the neighbourhood seem to be out of sympathy with the competition, for only two choirs entered, and they were from the same school, Brougham Street, Skipton. In the chief choral class seven choirs put up a good competition, which resulted in Gilstead Wesleyan (Mr. Henry Hargreaves) coming out top, and Bradford Vocal Union (Mr. George Norman) second. The leading male-voice choir was Skipton (Mr. Hume Wrathall, and Halifax Co-operative Choir was first in the female-voice class.

Southampton (March 5-10). — Remarkable progress has been made by this three-year old Festival, the entries being already more than double those of the first year. Choirs remained at last year's total—ninety-seven. The standard reached by the schools was very high, the four large secondary boys' schools putting up performances that could without exaggeration be described as remarkable in every way. The educational and combined performance sides were emphasised, the adjudicators giving talks and lectures to large gatherings of school children. A thousand youngsters took part in the junior concert; at that for adults, in which about seven hundred joined, the chief item was Handel's sixth Chandos Anthem, with orchestra and excellent local soloists. Audiences throughout the week were large, and a festive spirit pervaded the event. We append the chief results: Adult mixed-choirs (sixty voices and over)—Southampton Philharmonic; adult mixed-choirs (twenty to thirty voices)—Immanuel Church Choir, Southbourne; school choirs (boys)—Taunton's School, Southampton; (girls)—York Buildings Girls' School, Southampton; elementary school orchestras — Wimborne Road Boys, Southsea; male-voice choirs — Portsmouth Male-Voice Choir; ladies' choirs—Western District Evening School Choir.

Tunbridge Wells.—The East Sussex and West Kent Musical Festival was a successful meeting of a more or less domestic character between the choirs of the neighbourhood. The competing choirs came from Groombridge, Mayfield, Tunbridge Wells, Wadhurst, and Withyham, the last-named, under Mr. Bernhard Ord, being successful in the chief mixed-voice class.

Wimbledon.—The fourth annual competitions were held on February 11 and 18-25. Competitors from all over the country brought the entry list to the respectable total of 1,600, chiefly of juveniles and solo performers. The strongest feature of the Festival was folk-dancing, which had doubled in numbers and increased in enthusiasm since last year. Children's choirs of all kinds were plentiful, but apparently nothing will induce Wimbledon Boy Scouts to sing.

The following competition Festivals have also been held:—Penge and Anerley, February 17 and 18; Swindon G.W.R. Festival, February 18; Hazel Grove, February 24; Carlton and District, February 25; Harrow, the N.W. Middlesex Festival, held at Harrow County Girls' School on evenings from February 25 to March 10; Enfield, February 28 to March 3; Buckingham, March 1-3; Witney, March 4-6; Portsmouth Welfare Association, March 5-10; Todmorden, March 9 and 10; Congleton, March 10; Shipley, March 10; Derby, March 14-17, the Derby and North Staffs Festival, formerly the Dove and Churnet Valleys Competitions; Carshalton, the annual Festival of music, art, elocution, dancing, and physical culture.

IRELAND

Belfast (February 20-25).—The twentieth annual competitions proceeded, as usual, to break records, chiefly numerical. There were a hundred and twenty-three classes, over four hundred pianists, nearly three hundred verse-speaking competitors, and two hundred and thirty-six vocal soloists. There were many good features besides those which can be set down in numbers. There was keen interest in the competitions for choirs of Girl Guides, Rangers, Scouts, and factory workers. Taking it all round, the standard of performance in all classes of competition showed a steady advance, and spoke well for the average musical gifts prevalent at Belfast. The chief prizes in the choral classes were won by Belfast Choral Union (Mr. James Graham) and Castleton Mixed-Voice Choir (Mr. J. K. Collins).

Londonderry Feis (March 7-9).—As a meeting of choirs, this was a failure. In the five chief choral classes there were no more than eight choirs altogether. But as a meeting of solo competitors it was as populous as a football match. Singers in great numbers competed in all the classes, and there were a host of pianists. Prizes for solo singing were won by Miss I. Guthrae (soprano), Miss M. Hazlitt (mezzo-soprano), Miss M. Baker (contralto), Mr. N. Doherty (tenor), Mr. J. Browne (baritone), and Mr. J. Moore (bass).

Music in Scotland

Bathgate.—At the annual concert of the Bathgate Orchestral Society (Mr. Angelo Marsden) the orchestra played the 'Oberon' Overture, the 'Peer Gynt' Suite, and a number of lighter items.

Bridge-of-Allan.—At the last of the season's Subscription concerts the programme was sustained by Miss Olivia Hilder (soprano), and the International Trio—William Primrose (violin), Livio Mannucci ('cello), and Serge Krish (pianoforte.)

Coatbridge.—Coatbridge Choral Union (Mr. W. J. Clapperton) selected Mendelssohn's 'Elijah' for its annual concert.

Edinburgh.—The programme of a chamber concert given by the Edinburgh Bach Society, Mr. Douglas Dickson directing, included the third, fourth, and sixth 'Brandenburg' Concertos and one of the Flute Sonatas. An unusual and specially interesting feature of the concert was an exposition of invertible fugue by Prof. Tovey, who, with the assistance of some of the players, presented a variety of invertible fugues, and concluded with a completion by himself of the unfinished last fugue of Bach's 'Kunst der Fuge.'——At the fifth Reid Orchestra concert, Prof. Tovey conducted performances of Beethoven's eighth Symphony, Mozart's Symphony in C major (K. 338), and Hely-Hutchinson's 'Variations,' and played Bach's D minor Pianoforte Concerto, Miss Mary Grierson conducting. At the sixth concert, Dame Ethel Smyth directed performances of some of her own works—the Concerto for violin, horn, and orchestra, the orchestral prelude, 'On the Cliffs of Cornwall,' two choruses, 'Sleepless Dreams' and 'Hey Nonny No' (members of the Edinburgh Choral Union assisting), and a song-cycle for mezzo-soprano and miniature orchestra. Prof. Tovey conducted performances of Haydn's 'Surprise' Symphony and the 'Fidelio' Overture.——At the fourth of the University Historical concerts, Prof. Tovey presented Mozart's String Quintet in G minor, Brahms's Pianoforte Quintet, and Ethel Smyth's Trio for violin, horn, and pianoforte. At the last concert the programme comprised a String Quintet in C major, by Michael Haydn, the pianoforte duet version of Beethoven's 'Grosse Fuge,' and Brahms's B flat String Sextet.——Prof. Tovey's Sunday concerts included two pianoforte recitals by the Professor himself of works by Beethoven, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Schubert, Schumann, and Brahms, a chamber music recital, at which the Schumann Pianoforte Quintet and the Dohnányi Pianoforte Quintet in E flat minor were played, and a concert by the strings of the Reid Orchestra, the programme including Mozart's 'Eine kleine Nachtmusik,' Parry's 'Lady Radnor' Suite, the Bach cantata, 'Jauchzet Gott,' for soprano, and the violin transcription in G minor of Bach's F minor Pianoforte Concerto.——Pilrig Choral and Dramatic Society gave what was stated to be the first performance in Scotland of Handel's 'Semele.'——The string band of the Edinburgh Highland Reel and Strathspey Society (Mr. Ian C. Menzies), over a hundred strong, gave its forty-seventh annual concert of reels and strathspeys.——Mr. Adolphe Borschke gave a pianoforte recital, including, as at Glasgow, some rather puerile transcriptions of his own.——Miss Dorothy Hesse, a new-comer, made a very good impression in a Bach pianoforte recital.——Miss Marjorie Greenfield's third folk-song lecture-recital was devoted to 'Songs of love and labour from Ireland and the Hebrides.'——The recently-formed Edinburgh Police Male-Voice Choir (Mr. Thomas Butcher) gave its first concert, and sang a number of part-songs.——St. John's Church Choir (Mr. Ralph Langdon) performed Brahms's 'Requiem.'

Falkirk.—The Falkirk Choral Union (Mr. James Dorman) gave a concert performance of 'Carmen.'

Forfar.—Forfar Choral Union (Mr. Stephen Richardson) sang Ferdinand Hiller's 'Song of Victory' and a number of part-songs at its annual concert.

Galashiels.—At the fourth and last of the Galashiels Playhouse Subscription concerts, Miss Beatrice Harrison, ('cello), Miss Dora Labbette (soprano), Miss Olga Haley (contralto), Mr. Robert Parker (baritone), and Miss Joan Singleton (pianoforte), gave a miscellaneous programme.

Glasgow.—An event surely unique in the literal sense of that sorely abused word took place when four famous English choirs on their own initiative travelled north to pay a fraternal visit to the Glasgow Orpheus Choir. The visitors were: Barrow Madrigal Society (Mrs. T. M. Bourne), Dr. Brearley's Choir, Blackburn (Mr. Herman Brearley), Blackpool Glee and Madrigal Society (Mr. Herbert Whittaker), and Sale and District (Manchester) Musical Society (Mr. Alfred Higson). They arrived at Glasgow at five o'clock on a Saturday afternoon, and were entertained to tea by the Glasgow Orpheans. Thereafter, the five choirs proceeded to the hall of the Royal Technical College, where each of the choirs in turn sang for half-an-hour to the other four. Forty-one pieces in all were thus sung, drawn from Parry, Wilbye, Cornelius, Bainton, Moellendorff, Gerrard Williams, Vaughan Williams, di Lassus, Elgar, Benet, Byrd, Mundy, Wagner, Bax, Stanford, Brahms, Sakhnovsky, Bach, Vautor, Walford Davies, Stevens, Bantock, Tchaikovsky, Weelkes, Charles Wood, de Pearsall, Moodie, Brearley, and Roberton. At the close of this Gargantuan feast there were one or two short speeches, and the combined choirs sang, under Mr. Roberton, Parry's 'Jerusalem' and 'There is an old belief,' and the 'Hallelujah Chorus.' The visitors had a rousing send-off home after a six hours' visit to Glasgow, most of which had been spent in song. The plain facts of the whole episode speak more eloquently than could any rhetorical embellishment of them.——One of the major events of the season was a harpsichord and pianoforte recital given under the ægis of the Glasgow Bach Society by Madame Wanda Landowska, who last visited Glasgow (under the same auspices) in 1914. A wholly delightful programme included works by Bach, Handel, Mozart, Scarlatti, and Daquin.——At a chamber concert given by the Glasgow Bach Society, the Society's chamber orchestra, conducted by Mr. F. H. Bisset, played the Suite in D, No. 3, the Concerto in C for two pianofortes (Mr. Philip Halstead and Mr. J. Michael Diack), the Pianoforte Concerto in F minor, (Mr. Philip Halstead), the Violin Concerto in E (Mr. David F. McCallum), and a string suite from the Concerti Grossi of Handel.——At the fourth annual concert of the Glasgow Orpheus Junior Choir, the choir, under Mrs. Catherine Armstrong, sang with extraordinary artistry and technical finish a wide variety of part- and unison songs. The younger children of the Orpheus Sangspiel were equally distinctive in action-songs, singing games, nursery rhymes, and Scottish country dances.——At its second Musical Evening the Fellowes String Quartet played Mozart's 'Jagd' Quartet, Brahms's Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1, and, with Mr. Philip Halstead at the pianoforte, Schubert's 'Trout' Quintet.——The Glasgow Wireless Concert Orchestra gave a 'grand popular concert' in the City Hall under Sir Henry Wood, Rimsky-Korsakov's 'Scheherazade' Suite occupying pride of place in the programme. Miss Olga Haley and Mr. Harold Williams sang.——At its second concert the Glasgow Amateur Orchestral Society (Mr. Peebles Conn) played Schubert's 'Rosamunde' Overture and Symphony in C, Massenet's 'Scènes Pittoresques,' the 'Freischütz' Overture, &c. Mr. Matthew Nisbet, (bass), the principal prize-winner at the last Glasgow Festival, sang.——At the annual concert of the Glasgow University Choral Society (Mr. A. M. Henderson) the programme included Mozart's 'Laudate Dominum,' Handel's 'Haste thee, nymph,' some part-songs and sea shanties, and Mr. Henderson and Mr. Wilfrid Senior played works for two pianofortes by Bach, Glière, and Rachmaninov.——The programme of a musical evening given by the Glasgow University Orchestral Society (Mr. Michael Diack, jun.) included Haydn's 'La Reine' Symphony in B flat, Handel's 'Occasional' Overture, the Schubert 'Rosamunde' Overture, and miscellaneous solo and concerted items.——Mr. Joseph Hannah, a young Glasgow pianist who has been studying under Mark Hambourg, gave a first recital, which served to display a technique much in advance of his artistry.——A performance of 'Elijah' was given by a choir drawn from a number of city churches. The project was arranged by the Glasgow Society of Organists; Mr. F. O. Sheard conducted. At a chamber concert arranged by the same enterprising body and with the same conductor, the programme included one of Bach's Concertos in C minor for two pianofortes (Mr. S. L. K. Crookes and Mr. Robert McCallum) and two movements from Mozart's Concerto No. 17 in G (Mr. McCallum). The Glasgow Grand Opera Society gave a series of stage performances of 'Carmen.'——The Choral and Orchestral Societies of the Glasgow Athenæum School of Music gave excerpts from the 'Song of Hiawatha,' Mr. J. W. Sharpe conducting.——The annual concert of the Glasgow Corporation Tramways Choir (Mr. Wilfrid Phillips) occupied two evenings. The programmes comprised part-songs and Stanford's 'Songs of the Sea.'——At its annual concert the Glasgow Philharmonic Male-Voice Choir (Mr. R. H. Howie) sang Stanford's 'Songs of the Fleet,' and a number of part-songs.——Glasgow Y.M.C.A. Choir, directed by Mr. Hugh Hunter, chose Haydn's 'Creation' for its annual performance. The Fellowes Orchestra assisted.——Cathcart Choral Union, an enterprising body, admirably directed by Mr. William Nisbet, gave a concert of part-songs, and announced its first competition festival, for which three-fourths of its members have entered.——The William Morris Choir (Mr. J. B. Houston) sang Brahms's 'Song of Destiny' and a number of part-songs.——Shawlands Choral Union (Mr. Ernest E. Gordon) sang Hamish MacCunn's 'Wreck of the Hesperus,' and other choral pieces.——The Glasgow Police Musical Association (Mr. Thorpe Davie) sang part-songs at its annual concert.——The Western Choral Union (Mr. Dudley R. Langdon) gave a concert of part-songs.——Miss Helen Hogan, an American organist, visited Glasgow, and gave an organ recital in the Cathedral.——Dr. George Dyson, concluding his series of Cramb Music Lectures at Glasgow University, dealt with some phases and tendencies in contemporary music.

Greenock.—At the annual concert of the Greenock Male-Voice Choir (Mr. A. J. Gourlay) the choir sang a wide variety of part-songs, and Mr. Gourlay and Miss Ailie Cullen played works for two pianofortes.

Kirkcaldy.—Kirkcaldy Choral Union gave a performance of Coleridge-Taylor's 'Scenes from the Song of Hiawatha,' under the outstandingly competent direction of Mr. Charles M. Cowe, of Dundee.

Meigle. — Meigle (Perthshire) Musical Association (Mr. James Sherriffs) gave a performance of Coleridge-Taylor's 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast.'

Perth.—Mr. Stephen Richardson's Choral Society gave a performance of Handel's 'Samson.'

General.—At the last of the Max Mossel Subscription concerts, at Glasgow, Edinburgh, Aberdeen, and Ayr, Mr. Harold Samuel played Bach, Brahms, and Debussy, and Madame Elisabeth Schumann sang Schubert, Schumann, and Hugo Wolf Lieder.——At the last of the International Celebrity concerts, at Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dundee, Kilmarnock, and Stirling, Sir Thomas Beecham directed the London Symphony Orchestra in operatic excerpts, with the assistance as solo vocalists of Madame Guglielmetti, Madame Offers, M. Mazzei, and M. Zaporojetz.——A charming chamber recital was given at Glasgow, Edinburgh, and Perth by Miss Seymour Whinyates, violin, Miss Joan Singleton, pianoforte, and Mr. Mark Raphael, baritone.

Sebastian.

Music in Wales

Abervstwyth.—At the weekly College concert on February 16, Prof. de Lloyd conducted performances of Mozart's 'Jupiter' Symphony and his Overture to 'Der Schauspieldirektor' and the Andante from Schubert's C major Symphony.

Bangor.—Recent programmes at University College have included Moeran's Quartet in F minor (played by the International String Quartet), Ravel's Septet, and a new Septet on Welsh folk-dances by E. T. Davies.

Cardiff.—An outstanding event has been the visit of the B.N.O.C., which gave a series of well-produced operas extending over the fortnight from February 20 to March 3. The series included 'The Mastersingers,' 'Parsifal,' 'Tannhäuser,' 'The Valkyrie,' and 'Hansel and Gretel,' and the performances reached a high level of excellence. The audiences were sparse at the beginning, and, though the last performance was crowded out, it is understood that considerable loss has been incurred. Efforts are being made to start a branch of Sir Thomas Beecham's Imperial League of Opera, and Mr. Herbert Ware's Orchestra gave a concert in aid of the fund.——At the last of the University College concerts of the term a good performance of Brahms's 'Requiem' was secured under the direction of Prof. David Evans.——On March 4 the Cardiff Musical Society, conducted by Mr. Warwick Braithwaite, gave Franck's Symphony and other items.——Elgar's Violoncello Concerto was played for the first time at Cardiff on March 11 at a concert of Mr. Ware's Orchestra.

Swansea.—Beethoven's Mass in C was performed with very good effect by the Swansea Catholic Choral Society on February 19, under the direction of Mr. Caredig Williams.

Music in Ireland

Belfast.—Sir Thomas Beecham and the London Symphony Orchestra, with their all-star operatic cast and programme, took Belfast in their stride on March 9.——Belfast Choral Union, under Mr. James Graham, sang madrigals and part-songs at the Ulster Hall popular concert on March 10.——Solomon played a Hungarian Fantasia of Liszt's at a B.B.C. orchestral concert, conducted by Mr. Godfrey Brown.——A recital by Friedman attracted attention on February 27.

Cork.—Under Mr. G. Brady's direction the Philharmonic Society, a body of forty competent players, gave a successful afternoon concert on Sunday, March 11. The works played by the orchestra were Haydn's 'Clock' Symphony, a Bach Suite for strings, the 'Unfinished' Symphony, and the 'Henry VIII.' Dances. The programme also included two movements from Haydn's 'Emperor' Quartet.

Dublin.—The University Choral Society sang Bach's Magnificat and Mendelssohn's forty-second Psalm, under Dr. Hewson, with pianoforte and string accompaniment, on March 9.——At the Orchestral Society's concert on February 18, a select choir sang the four 'scala enigmatica' works of Verdi, and the Symphony was Brahms's second. Dr. Larchet and Mr. T. H. Weaving conducted, this being the first occasion on which Dr. Esposito has been absent since the foundation of the Society thirty years ago.——Tchaikovsky's 'Pathetic Symphony' and Elgar's Violoncello Concerto, played by Miss Ida Starkie, were the features of the Philharmonic Orchestra concert conducted by Col. Brase on March 3.——The Catterall Quartet played at two Royal Dublin Society recitals on February 20, and the Léner Quartet did the same on March 5.——Smeterlin and Friedman have been the principal visitors.

Musical Notes from Abroad

HOLLAND

French music of many kinds is very much in evidence in Holland at present, partly because of the appeal it makes and partly owing to the active propaganda of the Alliance Française and the Holland-France Association. The former of these societies recently arranged a 'Festival de Musique Française' which consisted of a symphony concert given by the Residentie Orchestra under Dr. Pieter van Anrooy, with the assistance of the Dutch singer, Madame Jo van Yzer-Vincent, and the Belgian 'cellist (leader in the orchestra), Charles van Isterdael. The programme consisted of well-known works by Berlioz, Saint-Saëns, Debussy, Duparc, Dukas, and Ravel, and made a strong popular appeal. Of a very different character were a couple of lectures given under the auspices of the same body by Jacques de la Presle, whose claim to distinction is that he won the premier Grand Prix de Rome. The first lecture contained little or nothing that was new on its subject, 'Deux courants dans la musique moderne—César Franck et Claude Debussy,' but introduced to us one or two unfamiliar works by followers of Franck. The other, on 'Quelques aperçus sur l'évolution de la forme Sonate de François Couperin à Claude Debussy,' was more original in intention and to some extent in achievement, but did not quite succeed in showing that the Sonata is in any particular way a French form.

The visit of the Société Taffanel, with Erwin Schulhoff as pianist, was a great event though the programme contained only two items by French composers—d'Indy's 'Chansons et Danses' and Schulhoff's second Sonata for pianoforte. The wind instrumentalists played not only as great virtuosi but with a remarkable ensemble, but it was a pity that the pianist failed to realise the delicacy of the Mozart Quintet in E flat (K. 452). The vigour of his style was more at home in his own Sonata, a stirring rhythmic work. This visit was arranged by the Holland-France Association. Florent Schmitt's Psalm 47 has also been given by the Amsterdam 'Toonkunst' Choir and the Concertgebouw Orchestra, but aroused more admiration for its cleverness than for any deeper qualities.

Utrecht is happy in possessing a conductor, Evert Cornelius, whose tastes are as eclectic as his ability is great. In a recent programme there appeared Rameau's 'Castor and Pollux' Suite and 'Fête du Soleil,' from 'Les Indes Galantes,' a Symphony by Pergolesi, Duparc's 'La Vague et la Cloche,' and César Franck's 'Nocturne' and 'Psyche.' This, it may be said, is typical in its freshness and effectiveness of the very varied programmes which are usual at Utrecht.

Elgar's 'Enigma' Variations have been given twice lately by the Residentie Orchestra, as has also Prokofiev's 'Chout' Suite. Van Anrooy's reading of the Variations was surprisingly sympathetic, and if he did not handle the more delicate numbers as lightly as he might have done, he almost made up for this by the ample breadth he gave to the others. On the whole it was one of the best performances I have heard. Among other works he has directed lately are Debussy's Two Nocturnes for orchestra, Tchaikovsky's fifth Symphony, and a pleasant but not very original Suite, 'Impressions du Midi,' by G. H. G. van Brucken Fock. Between the last two came Saint-Saëns's Violin Concerto in B minor, which gave Adolphe Poth, the second concertmeister of the orchestra, an opportunity of showing that as a soloist he possesses qualities far above the ordinary.

Other unfamiliar works we have heard lately are Lucinio Refice's 'Martyrum Agnetis Virginis' and 'L'Aveugle-Né' by Léon du Bois, given by the Amsterdam Roman Catholic Oratorio Society. The Amsterdam String Quartet has given the first performance of Henrietta Bosman's new Quartet, which is to be submitted by the Dutch circle for performance at the next Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music. It is a melodious work with considerable constructive power, which promises still more for its successors if the composer can only acquire more complete control of her technique.

Since he returned from America Mengelberg has been busy also with unfamiliar works, among which must be mentioned J. C. Bach's very pleasant Symphony in B flat and Ernest Bloch's magnificent 'Israel' Symphony, both in the same programme, and Zoltán Kodály's Suite, 'Hary Janos.' This last was, I understand, the first performance of the work in Europe in this form (the opera from which it is gathered was produced at Budapest in October, 1926), Mengelberg having produced it as recently as December last at New York. The genial humour, the richness of the melodies, and the magnificent orchestration, made the work an immediate success.

It is with very great pleasure that one is able to say that the museum and library of music instruments and books collected by the late Dr. D. F. Scheurleer have now, through the generosity of his son, Dr. C. W. Lusingh Scheurleer, been thrown open to the public.

Events already announced to take place in the summer are a Netherlands Music Exhibition which is to be held at Scheveningen in June, and an International Competition for Choirs, run on lines somewhat similar to English competition festivals, and to which a special invitation is being issued to English choirs. The chief difference between this and English competitions is that, besides medals and certificates, each award has attached to it a monetary grant and a 'conductor's prize' in money.

Herbert Antcliffe.

MILAN: LA SCALA

'LA FIGLIA DEL REGGIMENTO'

The history of 'La Figlia del Reggimento' in the annals of La Scala is remarkable in its almost entire non-existence. This perfectly delightful opera was especially written for the Opéra-Comique of Paris under rather odd circumstances. In 1838 'Poliuto' was given at the San Carlo of Naples, and was to have its Parisian baptism under the name of 'I Martiri' at the Académie Nationale de Musique (now the Grand Opéra) in the April of 1840. With Donizetti's arrival at Paris little prior to the performance, the Opéra-Comique, apparently fearing the competition, flung open its doors to the composer with an urgent invitation to write a work which would conform to a prevailing taste born of the Italian Opera buffa.

Thus was projected 'La Figlia del Reggimento,' which was presented to the Parisian public on February 11, 1840, several weeks before 'I Martiri.' Its first appearance at La Scala was on October 3 of the same year. During that month it was played in all six times. The seventh performance in the great Milanese theatre occurred on March 1, 1928.

The revival was naturally attended with much interest, but it is not yet easy to gauge the sentiments of the public towards the opera. Comparisons made with the same writer's 'Elixir d'amore' favour the latter, but that is no way to judge a work. All of the semi-humorous, semi-pathetic operas of Donizetti's, while bearing a family resemblance, are yet distinct enough to merit an individual existence. It is a pity that to-day an Italian audience demands more emotionalism, preferably of the Puccinian order, to the neglect of this class of more wholesome work.

To say that Dal Monte was chosen to sing the title-rôle is not quite so exact as would be to say that the revival was chosen for Dal Monte: but let there be no cavillings on that head. She sang Maria's lines, and acted Maria's part, was comic on occasion, or effectively sentimental without any undue 'sob.' Dal Monte's is not the voice of a Patti, but her technique is flawless. The tenor was Enzo De Muro Lomanto, who has a very agile, nicely coloured voice, though none too big. Olga De France was an effective Marquise and Di Sulpizio. Di Lelio made a fine crusty sergeant. Santini missed here and there some of the martial spirit that lends so fresh and vigorous a charm to the music. The opera is of course very short, and the directors saw fit to follow it with further representations of the ballet 'Vecchia Milano,' which apparently has an appeal for the public it was designed for.

RICHARD STRAUSS

Richard Strauss is no stranger to Milan or La Scala, where he has directed on numerous occasions. This time he came specially to conduct 'Der Rosenkavalier,' 'Salome,' 'The Legend of Joseph,' and Mozart's 'Le Nozze di Figaro.' There is a quiet strength in his manner, so unostentatious, that at first sight gives an impression almost of lethargy, but that this is not the case is amply demonstrated by the results he achieves. Strauss's well-known motto, 'Play the musical text with precision and but few director's signs are necessary to arrive at a perfect execution,' is in contrast to many well-known conductors' practice, but once again 'the proof of the pudding is in the eating.'

'Der Rosenkavalier' was given complete: the terzetto which has on occasions been cut proved its right to be heard. Under Strauss, the voices of the singers had appreciably better chances that more than counterbalanced the slight coldness of the first Act. 'Der Rosenkavalier' is a vital opera, and it was pleasing to observe the appreciation expressed after each Act. Of the interpreters, the Spanish soprano Mercédès Llopart sang Mariscialla's music accurately if with limited means. Ottavia and Sofia were sung by the Signore Superavia and Ferraris respectively; Baron Ochs by Di Lelio; and Favinal by Vanelli. The singer of the madrigal in the first Act was the tenor Pietro Menescaldi.

A FURTHER SCHUBERT CONCERT

The cult of Lieder has not penetrated very deeply into Italy. Beyond Schumann and Schubert it would appear that the form is almost unknown. Also during the past years practically the only Lieder heard have been of the two named composers, with the result that the Centenary movement loses point. The objection is not to the performance of Schubert, but to the neglect of those many others whose best efforts are infinitely superior to Schubert's lesser works. Ines Maria Ferraris sang a programme of songs all of which belong to the group that one hears wherever Schubert's name appears. She was assisted by the Quartetto Veneziano del Vittoriale, who played the Quartet in D minor, and the choir of the Teatro del Popolo, under Maestro Dentella. The items by the choir pleased most. They comprised a 'Spring Song,' 'The Dance,' and the 23rd Psalm.

From the same Quartet a few evenings later came a repetition of Benvenuti's excellent Variations on a popular theme in D minor, the work which created such a good impression last year; Jachino's new Quartet in E minor was favourably received, but has no outstanding merit. The two slow movements are very similar, and the Più mosso gives a sensation of fatigue. Tartini's 'Sinfonia a quattro' was another matter, and although not the composer at his best, is yet interesting enough.

Wilhelm Backhaus was the only really good pianist of the month, and at both his concerts succeeded in filling the larger hall of the Conservatorium.

Of the singers Ida Borghi was the best. Leo Slézak sang, as usual, a programme of artistic tit-bits that hugely pleased his German audience. There are fifteen thousand Germans at Milan who scrupulously patronise the German artists who visit the city, an example well worth emulating by the large English colony. It seems, however, that the continual statement that the English are not musical comes to be believed.

The French organist Joseph Bonnet gave an all-Bach recital, but the programme was too austere for assimilation by an audience unused to this class of music. His playing reflected a technical perfection that was not equalled by his interpretative powers.

CHARLES D'IF.

PARIS

Along with the musical activity pursued by the French institutions, considerable foreign work has been going on at Paris for some years past which, owing to intrinsic quality, has in some cases won the right of artistic citizenship. Such is the Russian Opera. Among the numerous refugees settled in or round the French capital the various musical elements were profuse and often of a good quality. It is to M. Slavianski d'Agrenev's credit that he has grouped them together and set up the Russian Opera in Paris. The Company has as yet to content itself with concert performances of works generally little known here. But many share its hope that some day it may attain the rank of a fully-equipped institution. After Borodin's 'Prince Igor,' produced repeatedly under the direction of the above-mentioned conductor, we were invited to acquaint ourselves with Rimsky-Korsakov's 'Czar Saltan,' M. Pomerantzev conducting. It is an opera of four Acts and a Prologue, composed between 1898 and 1900, and produced that same year at Moscow with great success. The libretto is from the pen of Belsky, who made use of one of Poushkin's fairy-tales. It is a story of a series of marvellous adventures with no serious plot, but pregnant with naive, popular poetry.

As in most of his other works, Rimsky-Korsakov's music is of a picturesque, narrative style. While flatly conventional in the lyrical and dramatic parts, it excels in the rendering of nature's poetry, in the depicting of legend and magic. The scoring is brilliant, and drives home every single stroke. It is astonishing, on the other hand, to note how much of Siegfried's sylvan tone and of the 'Parsifal' flower girls' voluptuousness have crept into the Russian score. But Rimsky-Korsakov has seen to it that no cosmic intention or metaphysical hint lay undue weight on the beauty of his landscape.

Belonging partly to the chapter of Russian musical activity in our city the Stravinsky festivals in the Pleyel Hall stand out as hitherto the most interesting items of the present season. In two successive concerts the composer conducted the 'Sacre du Printemps' twice, the 'Chant du Rossignol,' 'Petroushka,' 'Pulcinella,' and the Eight Pieces for pianoforte duet scored for the occasion. He was at the head of the Straram orchestra, a remarkable body of musicians sternly trained by their chief. The festivals were attended by many official personalities, and by a huge public that manifested its warmest enthusiasm for the composer.

With a spirit of large eclecticism musical Paris is actually doing honour to Manuel de Falla, Spain's foremost composer. The Opéra-Comique made up the programme of a whole evening of three scenic works—'La Vida Breve,' 'L'Amour Sorcier,' and 'El Retablo de Maese Pedro,' which extend over the last twenty-five years of de Falla's production.

The score of 'La Vida Breve,' belonging to de Falla's early period, is an attempt towards moulding into a musical entity divergent elements such as dramatic verism and inspiration proceeding from Spanish folk-lore. The dance of the second Act, as well as the interlude, are admirable pieces of music teeming with colour and vital movement. In spite of the simplicity of the argument the two Acts of 'La Vida Breve' keep the attention and foster a melancholy mood inherent in the lyrical romanticism that is nowadays proceeding to rapid extinction among advanced musicians. In 'L'Amour Sorcier,' a one-Act ballet pantomime, de Falla attains with unchallenged mastery unity of style and perfection of form. A perfect presentation unveiled the manifold merits of the work, much to the success of the composer. Madame Ninon Vallin sang passionately the solo parts, while the famous dancer Argentina performed the characteristic dance-solos with admirable talent. 'El Retablo de Maese Pedro' (Master Pedro's Stage) is the scenic adaptation of an episode from Cervantes's 'Don Quixote,' the French version having been made by M. Jean-Aubry. Outside an inn, in the presence of villagers, among whom we see Don Quixote, Maese Pedro is exhibiting a puppet-show relating the adventures of Melisendra, a presumed daughter of Charlemagne. She has been captured by the Moors, and soon after rescued by her husband, Don Gayferos. The Moors pursue the fugitives. At that moment, Don Quixote, who all through the show has been impatiently strutting about, steps forward to give a helping hand to the lovers, and, taking the Moors for real enemies, stabs Maese Pedro's puppets. 'El Retablo,' composed in 1920, is written for three voices, puppets, and a chamber orchestra, with a harpsichord to accompany the reciter's declamation. The music is on concise, clear-cut lines, equally distant from dramatic stress and from ethnological suggestion. It attains an objectivity of a convincing kind, though the show might arouse only a relatively distant interest on the part of a public that sticks firmly to its romantic sense so far as concerns the scenic combination of poetry and music.

Petro J. Petridis.

TORONTO

The musical season, so far as this city is concerned, reached its climax with the annual festival of the Mendelssohn Choir. This year Dr. H. A. Fricker again welcomed as his associate Mr. Fritz Reiner and the brilliant Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, cementing an artistic and temperamental friendship with even more gratifying success than during the two previous years. It is interesting to feel that this rapidly maturing American orchestra is so entirely in sympathy with choral work of the first magnitude that the Mendelssohn Choir can safely depend upon its whole-hearted support, whatever the contingency. Three choral and orchestral programmes and one orchestral matinée were given to capacity houses, the opening concert under the personal patronage of Viscount Willenden, Canada's Governor-General. The finest choral achievement, other than one or two subtle moments in a cappella numbers, came on the second night with performances of Handel's 'Acis and Galatea, and the second part of Granville Bantock's 'Omar Khayyám.' Here the exceptionally fine balance between sections and a remarkable finish in tonal quality were particularly emphasised. And never has the Mendelssohn Choir engaged a more thoroughly reliable quartet of vocalists than those who took part in these works—Ethyl Hayden, Viola Silva, Tudor Davies, and Earl Spicer. And we cannot forget that Mr. Tudor Davies gave us on the opening night some of the most inspired Wagner and Mozart we have heard for many years. One could write much concerning the poise and thorough musicianship of Mr. Reiner's work. Sufficient to remark that, for balance of beauty, brilliant virtuosity and intensity, such playing as Toronto heard this year was unequalled in our experience.

The National Chorus, having given its twenty-fifth annual concert, passes into history, on the retirement of Dr. Albert Ham, as one of the finest a cappella choirs on this continent. Dr. Ham has set a standard for part-song singing which has done a magnificent and unique work in encouraging that specific branch of choralism. The programme was delightfully varied and charmingly developed, with Dr. Ham's characteristic lightness of expression and purity of tone. Sophie Braslau, one of the few great American concert contraltos, assisted the choir. The works sung by the choir were: 'Since thou, O fondest' (Parry), 'Hushed in Death' (Hiles), 'The Æolian Harp' (Sawyer), 'Hymn to the Sun' (Chapuis), 'Weary Wind of the West' (Elgar), 'Just as the tide was flowing' (Vaughan Williams), 'All creatures now are merry-minded' (Benet), 'Angel spirits ever blessed' (Tchaikovsky), 'A morning song of praise' (Max Bruch), and 'Sea Drift' (Coleridge-Taylor).

Some very happy moments have been enjoyed by large audiences during the Toronto Symphony Orchestra's Twilights, Dr. von Kunits finding much to satisfy his polished musicianship in works by Weber, de Massi-Hardman, Rossini, Smetana, Rachmaninov, Rubinstein, and Grieg. Assisting soloists were Ernest Seitz and Mieczyslaw Munz (pianists), and Isabelle Burnada (contralto).

At various concerts and recitals we have heard Heifetz, Rachmaninov and Percy Grainger in a two-pianoforte programme, Florence Austral with Tito Schipa and John Amadeo, and the Hart House String Quartet, who played twice at Hart House, as beautifully as ever, in the first concert given in conjunction with Esther Dale, the American Lieder-singer.

And now there is a lull in our musical activities, although Dr. Fricker is rehearsing the Mendelssohn Choir for the Detroit-Cincinnati tour. I have omitted to mention the remarkable singing of the Harvard Glee Club early in January. If there is available space, a few remarks in my next letter may be of interest, as this organization is quite a famous choral body in the States.

H. C. F.

VIENNA

THE NEW STRAVINSKY

A 'reform' of the Staatsoper is once more in the centre of public discussion. Certain critics of the city some time ago discovered a hitherto unknown necessity for a new 'first conductor' to take his place beside director Franz Schalk and Robert Heger. After some hesitation those responsible for the welfare of the Staatsoper adopted the same view, and Clemens Krauss was selected as the candidate for the post. A duel of counteracting interests and opinions began, and ended with the withdrawal of Krauss from his candidature. Now Wilhelm Furtwängler is considered the most auspicious candidate, and bulletins from the office of the general-director of the State theatres, Franz Schneiderhan, assure us that negotiations are proceeding favourably. Yet the pessimists cherish their doubts, and on good grounds. The position of Franz Schalk as director is firm and unshakable, at least for two more years to come. Any prominent conductor who associates himself with the Staatsoper now, expects quite naturally the ius succedendi which, however, no one is in a position to grant, since Schalk—and rightly so—has no intention of retiring in the near future.

The vitality of the 'grand old man' shone brightly again in the Staatsoper's recent production of Stravinsky's oratorio-opera entitled 'Œdipus Rex.' If the interesting work failed to attract and was quickly relegated to the storehouse, it was not the fault of the performance, the merits of which the writer—having heard the Paris première last summer—is in a position to judge. The latest and esoteric child of Stravinsky's sometimes strange fancy has many beauties. It requires a man of genius to write a piece as noble and rounded as Jokaste's aria—a 20th-century paraphase on Bachian style—or to conceive the grandeur of the choruses in this opera. Yet with all its often great music, 'Œdipus Rex' remains an experiment, and a doubtful one. The atmosphere of Parisian salons has not benefited the sturdy son of the Russian plains. When he left national grounds, he burned his bridges behind him, and no path seems to lead back from the retrospective experiments to the fertile soil whence sprang 'Petrouchka' and 'Le Sacre.' These spoke a forceful Russian language; but 'Œdipus' speaks neither Russian nor French, but—Latin. Stravinsky explains the reason: he chose a foreign tongue, not generally understood, in order not to detract the hearer's attention from the music to the text, which is a 'negligible quantity.' And he chose Latin instead of Greek (the language of Œdipus) because Latin is after all more generally understood (which may or may not be true of this particular Latin) than Greek. There is palpably a logical break in such argumentation; and from this ambiguity suffers, somehow, the whole oratorio-opera. This Parisian vision of ancient Greece is much like Macbeth in plus-fours.

TWO ASPECTS OF PUCCINI

Jointly with Stravinsky's new work the Staatsoper performed, also under Schalk, the new opera of Franco Alfano, 'Madonna Imperia.' Alfano's name itself awakens memories of Puccini, whose 'Turandot' he completed. 'Madonna Imperia' follows suit in many respects. Like most of Italy's contemporary operatic composers, Alfano is clearly under Puccini's influence. What he thought of—and what would have been appropriate—was evidently a counterpart to that delightful little comedy with music, 'Gianni Schicchi,' which may, with some concessions, be regarded as Puccini's 'Falstaff.' The lightness of touch which Puccini gave this one-Act opera would have befited the somewhat risqué libretto. But Alfano clings more to Puccini's lyric aspects. He approaches the plot with more seriousness than frivolity, and the result is a musical garment far too heavy for the flippant figure of the coquettish heroine. The closing duet has melodic beauties of no mean value, however.

Memories of Puccini were conjured up also by Theodor Szanto's opera, 'Typhoon,' which the Volksoper produced recently. The subject is Menyhert Lengyel's thrilling play of that name which enjoyed, and still enjoys, popularity on the dramatic stage. At first sight it seems a suitable operatic subject: visions appear of kimonos and cherry blossoms, and of a Japan which is more Puccini's than of the 20th century. Szanto, however, evidently felt himself attracted by the latter. He dwells in his opera less on 'atmosphere' than on realism, less on lyricism than on declamation, and less on melody than on melodrama. Puccinian reminiscences, so near at hand, he avoids painfully, but at the cost of sustained melody and lyric effusion. His music gives a vivid background for the plot, but little more. His score is of the 'mosaic' type: 'pointillistic' methods prevail, amid a superabundance of pianoforte and celesta effect. For the crucial moments of the play, when the music should tell emotion, Szanto resorts to spoken dialogue. He is a modern composer of culture and sensibility; but it takes more than that—a genius—to carry conviction with long stretches consisting of obstinate rhythms on the same unchanging interval. Stravinsky did that in 'Le Sacre.' But he was a genius.

NEW CHAMBER MUSIC

In the chamber music field, the advent of the Vienna String Quartet, headed by Rudolf Kolisch, has quickened the pulse of Vienna's musical life. This Quartet's cycle of subscription concerts is invariably well attended, and contains many interesting new works, particularly of the modernistic Viennese school. Arnold Schönberg's new String Quartet and Alban Berg's Lyric Suite—both previously reviewed in these columns—are among them, and a new Trio by Webern, as well as new songs by Hans Eisler, a gifted young Schönberg pupil, will shortly be heard. The Rosé Quartet, in former years the pathmaker for Arnold Schönberg (whose courageous and tempestuous première of the F sharp minor Quartet belongs to history) is still continuing its annual chamber music series. The novelties have necessarily changed in character as compared with twenty years ago. They are less radical to-day, when the young Vienna String Quartet stands in the front row of modernistic fighters. Karl Weigl's Quartet, Op. 20, of which Rosé and his men gave the première, is an earnest, sincere work of classic learning; Brahms, Beethoven, and Wagner are its godfathers. More unusual and very interesting was the new Quartet of Alfred Rosé, the violinist's young son. It marks great progress over the composer's earlier efforts in the vocal field, and reveals a newly-gained freedom from inherited Mahlerian influences. With this, his first work of larger proportions, young Rosé has evidently proceeded to his 'storm and stress' period. His quest for new paths is evident, and to a notable extent successful. He writes a virile, rugged idiom in his first movement, and a dramatic, almost operatic language in the second, and is fresh and vigorous in the final movement.

The concerts of the various Viennese chamber organizations—the Viennese, the Rosé, the Buxbaum, and the Sedlak-Winkler Quartet — were reinforced this season again by visiting chamber bodies such as the Dresden Quartet, which is gaining in popularity, and by the Thorwald Nielsen Quartet, from Copenhagen. The latter presented a programme of Danish music and, with two Quartets—Opp. 14 and 44—by Carl Nielson, gave a short cut, as it were, through the productions of this most prominent composer of Denmark. His popularity at home is, I am told, endangered by his alleged modernism; to our ears, trained to the formal problems and harmonic experiments of Schönberg, Berg, or Hindemith, the productions of Nielsen were an object-lesson as to the relativity of the term 'modern.' Common to both of Nielsen's quartets is their clear, transparent architecture; they adhere to classicism not only in structure but also in diction—vide the Mozartian principal theme of Op. 44. This younger piece, which has a beautiful Adagio con sentimento religioso for a second movement, is perhaps even more 'clarified' than the earlier Op. 14, although the latter dates from a period far less infected with modernist tendencies.

Ernst Krenek's new songs—four of them, on old poems, for soprano and six wood-wind instruments—were first given by Ruzena Herlinger, the vocally-gifted and eminently-musical pioneer of interesting modern music. After his singularly successful opera 'Jonny spielt auf,' there had been considerable speculation as to Krenek's further development. These songs give the answer only tentatively. They are not representative enough to be symptomatic, but sufficiently frivolous and grotesquely tainted to justify their classification with Krenek's later style. To fervent, tender, spiritual words, Krenek has devised a music which approaches parody: it mocks the diction as well as the meaning of the poems with shrill, ironic wood-wind effects, in the manner of Stravinsky's middle period.

PAUL BECHERT.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

ALFRED HERBERT BREWER, at Gloucester, on March 1. Born at Gloucester, on June 21, 1865, he was a chorister at the Cathedral there from 1877 till 1880, and a pupil of C. H. Lloyd, the Cathedral organist at that time. He held appointments at St. Catherine's and St. Mary-le-Crypt, Gloucester, while still a youth, and in September, 1882, went to St. Giles's, Oxford, as successor to Parratt. A year later he was elected to an organ scholarship at Exeter College, Oxford, continuing his work at St. Giles's also. At about this period he gained the first open scholarship for organ playing offered at the Royal College of Music, studying under Parratt. In 1865 he went to Bristol Cathedral, proceeding a year later to St. Michael's, Coventry. There followed a period of about four years as organist and music-master at Tonbridge School, and in December, 1896, he succeeded Lee Williams as organist and choirmaster of Gloucester Cathedral. His already wide experience in diverse posts, together with his fine playing, made him well equipped for a sphere which entailed activities and responsibilities beyond those of the ordinary Cathedral work. The Three Choirs Festival gave ample scope for his energy and organizing ability, and to his all-round work on its behalf the meeting very largely owes its astonishing post-war revival and present sound position. In the choice of programmes his influence led to the inclusion of much that was new and unfamiliar. The same missionary spirit showed itself in his work as conductor of the Gloucester Orchestral Society, his frequent organ recitals, and above all in the series he has given during recent years for school children. For the Gloucester Festivals of 1901 and 1904 he wrote respectively the cantatas 'Emmaus' and 'The Holy Innocents,' the latter being heard in a revised form in 1922. But he was perhaps more successful as a writer of concert works in lighter vein, e.g., 'Summer Sports,' 'Jillian of Berry,' 'Three Elizabethan Pastorales,' and various cycles of songs, &c. He was knighted in 1926. A portrait and memoir appear elsewhere in this issue.

Paget John Merriman Bowman, on February 22, in St. Mary Abbott's Hospital, whither he had been removed after a motor accident on the previous night. Member of a family that had achieved eminence in the medical and legal professions, he was a solicitor with strong artistic leanings. A keen music-lover and an excellent amateur actor, it was natural that he should be specially drawn to opera. In 1921 he became advisory business director and solicitor to the British National Opera Company. When Sir Thomas Beecham launched his Imperial League of Opera scheme, Mr. Bowman at once took an active part in supporting it—in fact, the accident that caused his death occurred when he was returning from a meeting he had been addressing on behalf of the League. Mention should be made of his activities in connection with concerts and entertainments for the troops during the war. His services to music included also a prominent part in the founding and direction of the Federation of Music Clubs, of which organization he was also legal adviser. His death, at the early age of fifty-three, is a heavy blow to the cause of opera in this country.

George Miller, at Portsmouth, on March 2, in his seventy-fourth year. For forty years he was a bandmaster in the Army, most of this period being spent in charge of the band of the Portsmouth Division of the Royal Marines, which under his direction became the best and most popular of Service bands. Miller was one of the first bandmasters to be promoted to a commission, ultimately becoming Major. He was the son of an Army bandmaster, his first important appointment being that of band- and music-master at Sandhurst Royal Military College. He graduated Mus. Bac. at Cambridge in 1892, was made M.V.O. for his work in connection with the music at Queen Victoria's funeral, and was also the recipient of various foreign orders. He was persona grata with the Royal Family, who honoured him with many personal gifts. His son, Capt. G. J. Miller, is Director of Music to the Grenadier Guards.

William Johnson, at Altrincham, on March 19, in his seventy-fifth year. He was a well-qualified amateur organist and composer, being appointed to St. Anne's, in his native town of Warrington, when a lad of fifteen. From 1885-87 he was honorary organist to the Warrington Musical Society, at that time conducted by Henry Hiles. His published compositions include a cantata, 'Ecce Homo,' anthems, &c.

John Newton, at Christchurch, where he was organist and choirmaster of the Priory. He did excellent missionary work by means of his books, 'Church Music Reform,' 'The Organist and Choirmaster,' and by several pamphlets written in simple, colloquial style—'Don'ts for Choirboys,' 'Don'ts for Choirmasters,' &c.

Edmond Clément, at Nice, aged sixty. He was a tenor formerly well known in England and America, as well as in his native France. His best work was done in lyric opera.

Henry Miller, at Finsbury Park, on March 10. As secretary of the National Sunday League for many years, he did much to promote Sunday concerts of various kinds in London.

---

On the occasion of Mr. Tobias Matthay's seventieth birthday (February 21) the professors of his pianoforte school presented him with a five-valve wireless set, and the the students gave him a Kodak-cinema.

The degree of Mus.Doc., for external students at the University of London has been gained by Eric Harding Thiman.

Answers to Correspondents

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

A. E. R.—(1.) We should not have thought that any question concerning the method on which you have been trained would be asked at reputable examinations. You are right in the doubt expressed by your question. In art, the word method must always be restricted to one side only of physical or mental activity. As to naming some 'recognised methods,' we ask to be excused. In this we take the same stand as the examinations; all depends upon the results and upon them only. (2.) Certainly not. You are not too old to sit for A.T.C.L., though, since you are twenty, we should expect you to pass more creditably than were you younger. Yes! The L.R.A.M. examination is a very high standard. (3.) The obvious cure is to learn to write better. That should not be hard for twenty years of age! (4.) The questions you ask with reference to phrase-marks show misunderstanding of their nature. Those you quote call for no abbreviation of tone-value. They are to a large extent mental breaks, something like the effect of the commas you use in speech, but which do not disintegrate the syllables. On the violin, these breaks are effected by bowing; on the pianoforte, by various forms of muscular relaxation, but very rarely by abrupt shortening of the tone-values.—E. F.

Tuba.—(1.) Apparently there is no one book that will serve for a study of the period 1850-1900. You must be prepared to collate the information from several sources—an excellent thing to do. Read the final chapters of Stanford and Forsyth's 'History of Music' (Macmillan). Hadow's 'Studies in Modern Music' (Seeley) should also be consulted. The first series deals with Berlioz and the French romantic movement, Schumann and the corresponding development in Germany, and Wagner and opera reform. The second series is concerned with Chopin, Dvorák, and Brahms, and opens with a lengthy chapter on Form which will help you in that part of the examination. For a concise treatment on Form see also Pauer's 'Musical Forms' (Novello). For choir-training your own practical experience ought to give you answers to almost any question. But see Richards's 'Choir Training' (Joseph Williams). (2.) As you have a leaning towards the trombone you can hardly do better than take it up. Tenor or bass? you ask. For general utility purposes in local orchestras the bass would probably be the more useful.

J. R. K.—(1.) We strongly recommend you to stick to the recognised methods of fingering scales—methods that are the outcome of practical experience of skilled teachers. Moreover you will find that the fingering of pieces is based on these principles, and if you adopt a system of your own, you will be constantly hampered instead of being helped. (We admit that we have no time to examine your system thoroughly.) (2.) It would take too much space to explain fully the various forms of the minor scale. Briefly, the so-called melodic form, with the sixth and seventh sharpened in ascending and flattened in descending is so-called because it is obviously suited for melodic purposes, and is also easier to sing than the harmonic form with its augmented second. Hence it is usually found in vocal music. The harmonic form is so-called because it is the basis of the chords used in the minor key. Occasionally the melodic rather gives the sharpened sixth and seventh, both descending and ascending, but this form is vague in its harmonic implications.

W. G. J.—There are consecutive fifths and consecutive fifths: those that are written (1) for some special effect of sonority or colour; (2) because it is the fashion; and (3) because the composer is clumsy, writes a bad succession of roots, and can't avoid them. As the specimens you send sound as awkward as they look, they evidently belong to the third category. Your plea that 'they improve the bass' won't wash. There are half a dozen better and more grammatical basses available.

J. W.—(1.) The list of books you give ought to be quite adequate. In the work you are about to undertake much depends on commonsense, tact—'gumption,' in fact. It is easy to overdose oneself with book-advice. A multitude of counsellors sometimes leads, not to wisdom, but to confusion and indecision. The 'gumption' is required for adapting the counsel to your particular needs. In other words, don't follow any writer slavishly. (2.) The books you mention include some lists of graded songs. But here again do not depend solely on your guides. Investigate for yourself. Every month sees the issue of much new material, and so the lists given in books are soon out-of-date, though of course they contain references to standard songs that you can't do without. Write, from time to time, to the publishers of school songs asking for specimen parcels on approval. State your requirements fully: average age of classes, degree of difficulty, &c.

G. I. C.—(1.) Naumann's 'History of Music' is now a good deal behind the times. Try Stanford and Forsyth's 'History of Music' (Macmillan) and 'The Growth of Music,' by H. C. Colles (Oxford University Press). For English interests take Davey's 'History of English Music' (Curwen) and Walker's 'History of Music in England' (Oxford University Press). (2.) 'Technique and Expression,' by Franklin Taylor (Novello). (3.) 'Elementary Harmony' and 'Counterpoint for Beginners,' both by C. H. Kitson (Oxford University Press); 'Outlines of Musical Form,' Albert Ham (Novello); and/or 'Musical Forms,' Ernst Pauer (Novello). (4.) The diploma is worthless. The institution is not advertised in our columns for the good reason that we refuse to accept its advertisements.

J. H. R.—Delius appears to have published nothing for pianoforte solo. Certain of his works, however, are arranged for the instrument: Pianoforte Concerto (four hands, two pianofortes); 'Brigg Fair' (duet); 'In a summer garden' (solo); A Dance Rhapsody (duet); 'Summer night on the river' (solo); 'On hearing the first cuckoo in spring' (solo); 'Autumn,' from 'North Country Sketches' (duet); 'Eventyr' (duet); and 'A Song before Sunrise' (duet). The publishers are various, but you can obtain all the above through Novello. Certain works of the concerto type are also to be had in versions for solo instrument with the orchestral part transcribed for pianoforte solo. We can give you particulars of these later if you want them.

Elaine R.—You will have much to do to qualify fully for a teaching career. The examination you mention is only one of the bottom rungs of the ladder, and the standard is likely to become more exacting in the near future. The musical profession is badly overcrowded, and we do not advise you to enter it unless you are ready to spend several years of preparation, followed by a few more in which a great deal of work may have to be done for a bare living wage—if that.

I. O. A. (Nigeria).—(1.) For the writing of hymn-tunes you need a good knowledge of harmony and simple counterpoint. (2.) Stainer's 'Harmony' (Novello), Bridge's 'Counterpoint' (Novello). But we doubt if you will get far without a teacher. (3.) The Guild you mention is a bogus concern. (4.) We know of no life of J. B. Dykes. (5.) For histories of music see reply to 'G. I. C. above. Best of all, obtain the new 'Grove.'

A. B. H. I.—The direction Non legato is a general one, and refers to style. It intimates that the smoothness of rendering characteristic of pure legato is to be replaced by a style in which the sounds are virtually detached. The measure of detachment depends upon the character of the passage affected, and may therefore vary from the smallest amount of separation to a quite aggressive staccato.—E. F.

A. J. L.—(1.) We cannot give a list of songs. Tastes differ, and even compass is not much guide. Only a singer and/or his teacher can decide as to suitability. Study our monthly review of songs. (2.) We know of no opera composed mainly for male voices.

Organist (Wellingborough).—Try to hear Vierne (Notre Dame), Bonnet (St. Eustache), Tournemire (Ste. Clotilde), Quef (Trinité), and Dupré. The last-named may be touring. We are not certain as to whether he now holds a Church appointment.

Tenor (Manchester).—(1.) It is not customary for a writer of song-words to pay a composer to set them to music. On the contrary, the composer usually pays a fee for the words, or/and a royalty. Our advice is to pay nothing to the composer whose letter you send us. 'Tis your money he wants! (2.) A song-words writer (you note our careful avoidance of the word 'poet' and 'lyricist'!) gets in touch with likely composers by sending them typed copies of his wares. (3.) You ask for our candid opinion on your verses. They are of quite average merit for this type of work. But it's time you rhymsters gave 'roses' a rest. Your effort consists of twelve short lines, and that over-worked flower turns up four times!

A. F. B.—The works of Haydn and Mozart contain so much material suitable for lecture illustrations that you can hardly have prepared your lecture without being aware of it. We cannot suggest illustrations, as we know nothing about your performing resources. Do some hunting on your own account! It will be an instructive operation. (2.) We have no information concerning lantern slides for musical lectures.

K. D.—For picture-theatre playing consult: 'Musical Accompaniments to Moving Pictures,' by Lang and West (Rogers); 'The Orchestral and Cinema Organist,' by P. Kevin Buckley (Hawkes); 'Playing to Pictures,' by George (Cinema Picture Co.), and 'Cinema Organ Playing,' George Tootel (Paxton).

E. A. H. C.—We dislike suggesting metronome marks, for reasons we have often given. If you find the work you mention goes better at a somewhat quicker pace than that usually adopted, play it accordingly.

Convert.—(1.) We know of no book treating fully of Liszt's pianoforte music. (2.) See our answer to 'E. A. H. C.' concerning metronome marks—and remember that rhythm often matters more than pace.

R. R. G.—We should prefer G natural, but it is possible to regard the harmony of that bar as the subdominant of A (into which key the next bar modulates) as well as the tonic D.

L. T. C. L.—The Music Student is now known as the Music Teacher (Messrs. Evans Brothers, Montague House, Russell Square, W.C.1; on the 25th of the month, price 1s.).

Staffs.—(1.) 'Repairing the Piano,' Musical Opinion Office, Chichester Chambers, Chancery Lane, W.C.2. (2.) The diploma you ask about is worthless.

C. G.—For particulars of this year's Summer School of Music write to The Education Department, Federation of British Music Industries, 117, Gt. Portland Street, W.1.

Retlaw.—Concerning Edward C. Purcell and the song 'Passing by,' see 'Gramophone Notes,' p. 332, col. 1.

---

A correspondent wishes to perform Florian Pascal's 'Water-Babies,' but finds that the vocal score is out of print. Are there a few spare copies to be got from readers? Letters, &c., addressed to 'E. N.,' at this office, will be forwarded.

'Solitude' asks for information from readers concerning sound-proofing materials. He is under the impression that there is a fibrous material that may be affixed like wall-paper. Is there? If so, what and where is it?

THE MUSICAL TIMES

Charges for Advertisements:—

| | £ | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Two Lines ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 | 0 |
| Three Lines ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 | 4 |
| For every additional Line ... ... ... | 0 | 0 | 10 |
| One inch (displayed) ... ... ... ... | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| Half a Column... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| A Column ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 | 0 |
| A Page ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 10 | 0 |

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.

A remittance should be sent with every Advertisement.

CONTENTS.

| | Page. |
|---|---|
| Schubert's Style. By Richard Capell ... ... ... ... | 305 |
| A Conductorless Orchestra. By Leonid Sabaneev ... ... | 307 |
| The Singer's Ear. By W. S. Drew ... ... ... ... ... | 309 |
| Phases of Impression and Expression. By Mrs. Frank Liebich | 312 |
| The Future of Opera in England. By Dyneley Hussey ... ... | 313 |
| Alfred Herbert Brewer (1865-1928) (with Special Portrait) ... | 315 |
| Recording the Organ. By D. Batigan Verne ... ... ... | 316 |
| 'Boris Godunov' as Moussorgsky Wrote it. By M.-D. Calvocoressi ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 318 |
| New Light on Late Tudor Composers.—XXXIII. Thomas Mudd. By W. H. Grattan Flood ... ... ... ... ... | 320 |
| French Tunes in 'The Beggar's Opera' and 'Polly.' By J. A. Westrup ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 320 |
| New Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 323 |
| Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi ... ... | 331 |
| Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus' ... ... ... ... ... | 331 |
| Books Received ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 333 |
| Player-Piano Notes ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 333 |
| Points from Lectures ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 334 |
| Occasional Notes ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 336 |
| Church and Organ Music ... ... ... ... ... ... | 345 |
| Royal College of Organists ... ... ... ... ... ... | 345 |
| Letters to the Editor ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 347 |
| The Amateurs' Exchange ... ... ... ... ... ... | 352 |
| Sixty Years Ago ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 352 |
| Sharps and Flats ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 352 |
| Royal Academy of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 352 |
| Royal College of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 353 |
| Trinity College of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 354 |
| New Scheme of Comic Opera ... ... ... ... ... ... | 354 |
| Music at the English Chapels Royal ... ... ... ... ... | 354 |
| London Concerts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 355 |
| Music in the Provinces ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 358 |
| Competition Festival Record ... ... ... ... ... ... | 361 |
| Music in Scotland ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 362 |
| Music in Wales ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 363 |
| Music in Ireland ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 364 |
| Musical Notes from Abroad ... ... ... ... ... ... | 364 |
| Obituary ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 367 |
| Answers to Correspondents ... ... ... ... ... ... | 368 |

MUSIC.

'Come, my Way, my Truth, my Life.' Anthem for unaccompanied voices. By Roy Thompson ... ... ... ... ... 337

TWO EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS are given with this number:

1. Portrait of the late Alfred Herbert Brewer.
2. 'O for a closer walk with God.' Easy Hymn-Anthem. By H. A. Chambers.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.

Published by NOVELLO & CO., Limited.

CHAMBERS, H. A.—"There is a garden in her face." Part-Song for S.A.T.B. (No. 1436, Novello's Part-Song Book.) 4d.

—— Ninefold Kyrie. (For use with the Communion Service in G.) (No. 1149, Parish Choir Book.) 2d.

—— 'Come, O thou traveller.' Sacred Song. Melody by R. King (1723.) Arranged. In D and F. Each, 2s.

GERMAN, EDWARD.—Morris Dance (from the music to "Henry VIII."). (No. 31, Transcriptions for the Organ, by Edwin H. Lemare.) 2s.

—— Shepherds' Dance (from the music to "Henry VIII."). (No. 32, Transcriptions for the Organ, by Edwin H. Lemare.) 2s.

—— Torch Dance (from the music to "Henry VIII."). (No. 33, Transcriptions for the Organ, by Edwin H. Lemare.) 2s.

GIRLING, Rev. F. J. W.—"Hush! blessed are the dead." Hymn and Tune. 3d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 430, contains the following music in both notations. "Cradle Song." (Two-part.) C. H. H. Parry (arranged by H. A. C.). "Sea Mood." (Unison.) Cecil Sharman. 2d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

SCHOOL SONGS.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. A. B.

No. 1484. "Who is Sylvia." (Two-part.) Edward German. (Arranged by John Pointer) — 3d.
1485. "The way for Billy and me." (Two-part.) C. H. Lloyd. (Arranged by H. A. C.) 3d. —
1486. "Night." (Two-part.) A. Randegger. (Arranged by H. A. C.) 3d. —
1487. "Voyaging." (Two-part.) Eaton Faning. (Arranged by H. A. C.) 2d. —

SMITH, W.—"Jerusalem, the golden." A Sacred Song for Soprano or Tenor. 2s.

STANFORD, C. V.—Te Deum in B flat. A Unison part for Men's Voices. Arranged for use with the original edition for Choir and Organ. 3d.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY SERIES:

No. 79. "Lord of an earth of glory." Edward S. Deans ... ... ... ... 1½d.
80. "Take my life, and let it be." Edward S. Deans ... ... ... ... 1½d.
81. "Faithful Shepherd, feed me." Hugh Blair. (Arranged with optional 2nd Treble part) ... ... ... 1½d.
82. "Every morning the red sun." Anthem in Unison, and Two-part ... ... 2d.

THOMPSON, ROY.—"Come, my way, my truth, my life." (Unaccompanied Anthem, Solo and Four-Part.) (No. 1022, The Musical Times.) 3d.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2556. "Jesus shall reign." Hymn-Anthem. Ferris Tozer ... ... ... ... 2d.
2557. "My bonnie lass, she smileth." (Arranged as a Trio.) Edward German ... ... ... ... 3d.
2558. "Cryes of London." (Humorous Fancy.) Orlando Gibbons ... 6d.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

BAKER, T.—"Bow down Thine ear, O Lord." Lenten Anthem for Mixed Voices. (No. 933, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

LANDIS, N.—"Behold the Lamb of God." Anthem for Mixed Voices, with Baritone Solo. (No. 930, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

LUTKIN, P. C.—"Fairest Lord Jesus." Motet for Baritone Solo and Chorus. (No. 934, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

WARNER, F. H., and MATTHEW, G.—Invitatories according to the Revised Rubric of the Church throughout the year. (No. 907, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (10d.).

WEBBE, W. J.—"Let now the Heavenly Hosts." Anthem for Easter. (No. 932, Church Music Review.) 20 cents (10d.).

WENDT, T.—"The death of summer. Part-Song for S.S.A. (No. 362, Modern Series.) 12 cents (6d.).

TEACHING CONNECTION (chiefly Singing, few Piano), established ten years, with furnished HOUSE for SALE (owner retiring), healthy London suburb. Splendid opening for capable, energetic, teacher. "R. K. T.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

BASS WANTED at once. West-End Church. £20 per annum. Write, E. C., 98, Ardgowan Road, S.E.6.

ANTHEMS FOR ASCENSIONTIDE

*Above all praise and all majesty ... ... Mendelssohn 2d.
Achieved is the glorious work ... ... ... Haydn 1½d.
*Achieved is the glorious work (2nd Chorus) ... Haydn 2d.
*All glory to the Lamb ... ... ... ... Spohr 2d.
Awake up, my glory ... ... ... ... ... M. Wise 4d.
*Christ became obedient unto death ... ... J. F. Bridge 3d.
Christ is not entered into the Holy Places ... E. Faning 2d.
Come, ye children ... ... ... ... ... H. J. King 4d
For it became Him ... ... ... ... ... O. King 2d.
*God goeth up with shouting (1st Chorus) ... ... ... Bach 6d.
God is gone up ... ... ... *Croft, 6d. ; W. B. Gilbert 3d.
*God, my King ... ... ... ... ... ... Bach 3d.
Grant, we beseech Thee ... A. R. Gaul, 4d. ; H. Lahee 3d.
*Hallelujah, unto God's Almighty Son ... ... Beethoven 4d.
*How excellent Thy Name, O Lord ... ... ... Handel 2d.
*If ye then be risen with Christ ... ... ... I. Atkins 6d.
If ye then be risen ... *F. O. Carr and J. Naylor, ea. 4d.
If ye then be risen (Two parts) F. W. Wadeley, 2d.; M. B. Foster 4d.
In My Father's house ...H. E. Button and J. M. Crament, ea. 4d.
In that day ... ... ... ... ... ... G. Elvey 6d.
In that day (Open ye the gates) ... ... F. C. Maker 4d.
*It shall come to pass ... ... ... ... B. Tours 3d.
I will not leave you comfortless ... ... ... W. Byrd 4d.
*King all-glorious ... ... ... ... ... J. Barnby 8d.
King all-glorious (with Chorus arr. for four voices) J. Barnby 6d.
*Leave us not, neither forsake us ... ... ... J. Stainer 3d.
Let not your heart ... E. Faning and G. Gardner, each 4d.
Let not your heart be troubled (Double Chorus unac.) M. B. Foster 4d.
*Let not your heart (Four-part) ... ... M. B. Foster 4d.
*Let their celestial concerts all unite ... ... Handel 2d.
*Lift up your heads ... Handel and J. L. Hopkins, each 2d.
*Lift up your heads ... ... ... S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
Lift up your heads ... ... ... ... ... W. Turner 3d.
*Look, ye saints ... ... ... ... M. B. Foster 4d.
Now at Thy feet Creation lies (Chorale) ... ... Bach 2d.
O all ye people, clap your hands ... ... ... H. Purcell 4d.
O clap your hands ... ... M. Greene, 6d. ; *J. Stainer 8d.
O clap your hands ... J. L. Hopkins, 4d. ; T. T. Trimnell 4d.
*O God, the King of Glory ... ... ... ... H. Smart 6d.
*O God, when Thou appearest ... ... ... Mozart 4d.
*O how amiable ... ... ... ... ... J. Barnby 4d.
O Lord our Governour... ... Marcello, 3d. ; *H. Gadsby 4d.
*O risen Lord ... ... ... ... ... J. Barnby 3d.
*Open to me the gates ... ... ... ... F. Adlam 6d.
*Rejoice in the Lord ... ... ... ... J. B. Calkin 2d.
*Sing unto God ... ... ... ... ... F. Bevan 4d.
*Ten thousand times ten thousand ... ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
The earth is the Lord's ... ... ... ... T. T. Trimnell 6d.
*The Lord ascendeth up on high. Hymn (arr. by H. G. Ley) J. Schicht 2d.
*The Lord is exalted ... ... ... ... ... J. E. West 3d.
The Lord is King H. Gadsby, 8d. ; H. J. King, 6d. ; W. King 3d.
Thou art a priest for ever ... ... ... ... S. Wesley 4d.
*Unfold, ye portals ... ... ... ... Ch. Gounod 4d.
*Where Thou reignest ... ... ... ... ... Schubert 4d.
Who is this so weak and helpless ... ... ... Rayner 3d

ANTHEMS FOR WHITSUNTIDE

And all the people saw ... ... ... ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
*And suddenly there came ... ... ... ... H. J. Wood 4d.
And when the day of Pentecost ... ... C. W. Smith 4d.
*As pants the hart... ... ... ... ... Spohr 3d.
*As the hart pants... ... ... ... ... Mendelssohn 2d.
Behold, I send the promise ... ... ... J. V. Roberts 6d.
*Come, Holy Ghost ... ... ... ... Attwood 3d.
Ditto (Three-part, S.S.A.) ... ... Attwood 4d.
Come, Holy Ghost ... ... Elvey and J. L. Hatton, each 6d.
Ditto ... ... ... ... Tallis, 3d. ; E. H. Thiman 4d.
Come, Holy Ghost C. L. Williams and *Palestrina, each 3d.
Come, Thou Holy Spirit ... ... ... J. F. Barnett 4d.
Do not I fill heaven and earth... ... ... ... H. Blair 4d.
*Eye hath not seen (Two-part, or four voices) M. B. Foster, ea. 4d.
Fear thou not ... ... ... ... ... J. Booth 2d.
Give thanks unto God ... ... ... ... ... Spohr 6d.
Glorious and powerful God ... ... ... ... O. Gibbons 4d.
*God came from Teman... ... ... ... ... C. Steggall 6d
*God is a Spirit (Two-part, or four voices) ...Bennett, ea. 2d.
Ditto (Male Voice, A.T.B.B.) ... ... Bennett 3d.
Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost ... ... ... H. Blair 4d.
*Great is the Lord... ... ... ... ... W. Hayes 6d.
*Grieve not the Holy Spirit ... ... ... ... J. Stainer 4d.
Hail! breath of life ... ... ... ... ... T. Adams 3d.
Happy is the man ... ... ... ... ... E. Prout 1s.
He that dwelleth in the secret place... ... ... ... Booth 6d.
*Holy Spirit, come, O come (Ad Spiritum Sanctum) G. C. Martin 3d.
I was in the spirit ... ... ... ... ... Blow 8d.
*I will magnify Thee ... ... Bunnett, 4d. ; J. H. Parry 4d.
*I will not leave you comfortless ... ... ... B. Steane 3d.
*I will pray the Father ... ... ... ... G. W. Torrance 3d.
If I go not away... ... A. J. Caldicott, 4d. ; *T. Adams 3d.
If ye love Me ... Bunnett, 4d. ; B. Steane, 3d. ; C. S. Heap 3d.
*If ye love Me ...W. H. Monk, Tallis, and R. P. Stewart, each 3d.
If ye love Me H. W. Wareing and W. J. Westbrook, each 4d.
*In divers tongues ... ... ... ... ... Palestrina 3d.

ANTHEMS FOR TRINITYTIDE

*Almighty and everlasting God ... ... ... Gibbons 3d.
Almighty God, Who hast promised ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
*Angel Spirits, ever blessed ... ... ... Tchaikovsky 3d.
Ascribe unto the Lord ... ... ... ... S. S. Wesley 6d.
Behold, God is great ... ... ... ... E. W. Naylor 6d.
*Beloved, if God so loved us ... ... ... J. Barnby 2d.
Beloved, let us love one another ... ... ... G. F. Cobb 2d.
Be ye all of one mind ... ... ... ... A. E. Godfrey 4d.
*Blessed Angel Spirits ... ... ... ... Tschaikowsky 3d.
*Blessed is the man ... ... ... ... ... J. Goss 6d.
Blessing and glory ... ... ... ... ... ...Boyce 3d.
*Blessing, glory ... ... ... ... ... ... Bach 8d.
Come, ye children ... ... ... ... ... J. Booth 4d.
*God came from Teman ... ... ... ... ... C. Steggall 6d
*God so loved the world ... ... ... ... M. Kingston 2d.
Grant, O Lord ... ... ... ... ... ... Mozart 3d.
Grant to us, Lord ... ... ... ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
*Hail, gladdening Light ... J. T. Field, 3d. ; *G. C. Martin 6d.
*Holy, holy, holy ... ... ... ... ... Crotch 4d.
Holy, Lord God Almighty ... ... ... ... T. Bateson 6d.
*How goodly are Thy tents ... ... ... ... F. Ouseley 3d.
*How lovely are Thy dwellings ... ... ... ... Spohr 3d.
*Hymn to the Trinity (Nos. 1 and 3) ... ... Tchaikovsky, each 3d.
I am Alpha and Omega Ch. Gounod and J. V. Roberts, each 4d.
*I am Alpha and Omega... ... ... ... ... J. Stainer 3d.
I beheld, and lo! ... ... ... ... ... ... Blow 8d.
I know that the Lord is great ... ... ... ... F. Ouseley 3d.
I saw the Lord ... ... ... *C. Harris, 4d. ; *J. Stainer 8d.
I will magnify ... ... ... ... ... ... J. Shaw 4d.
I will sing of Thy power ... *A. Sullivan, 3d. ; Greene 6d.
I will sing unto the Lord ... ... ... ...H. Wareing 4d.
*In humble faith ... ... ... ... ... G. Garrett 3d.
*In Jewry is God known ... ... ... J. Clarke-Whitfeld 3d.
In sweet consent ... ... ... ... E. H. Thorne 4d.
In the fear of the Lord ... ... ... ... J. V. Roberts 4d.
Let the peace of God ... ... ... ... ... J. Stainer 6d.
*Let Thy merciful ears ... ... ... ... A. R. Gaul 2d.
*Light of the world ... ... ... ... ... E. Elgar 4d.
Lord of all power and might ... ... ... E. T. Chipp 4d.
*Lord of all power and might ... ... ... ... W. Mason 3d.
Lord of all power and might (Men's voices) ... J. Barnby 3d.
Lord, we pray Thee ... ... ... ...H. A. Chambers 2d.
*Lord, we pray Thee ... ... ... ... J. V. Roberts 3d.
O Father blest ... ... ... ... ... J. Barnby 3d.
O God, Who hast prepared ... ... ... ... A. R. Gaul 3d.
O joyful Light ... ... ... ... ... ... B. Tours 6d.
*O Lord, my trust... ... ... ... ... ... K. Hall 2d.
O taste and see ... ... *J. Goss and A. H. Mann, each 4d.
*O taste and see ... ... ... ... ... A. Sullivan 3d.
O Trinity, most Blessed Light ... ... ... H. Willan 3d.
O where shall wisdom be found? ... ... ... ...Boyce 8d.
Ponder my words, O Lord ... ... ... ... A. D. Culley 2d.
*Praise His awful Name ... ... ... ... Spohr 3d.
Rejoice in the Lord ... ... ... ... ... G. C. Martin 8d.
*See what love hath the Father ... ... ... Mendelssohn 3d.
Sing to the Lord ... ... ... ... ... Mendelssohn 1s.
*Stand up and bless ... ... ... ... ... J. Goss 6d.
Teach me Thy way ... W. H. Gladstone, 2d. ; F. L. Moir 4d.
*The Lord hath been mindful... ... ... ... S. S. Wesley 4d.
*The Lord is my Shepherd J. Shaw, 4d. ; G. A. Macfarren 3d.
The Lord will comfort Zion ... ... ... ... H. Hiles 8d.
Thou art worthy, O Lord ... ... ... ... F. E. Gladstone 4d.
Thou shalt shew me the path of life... ... ... A. Gray 2d.
Three in One and One in Three (S.S.) ... ... F. W. Wadeley 3d.
We humbly beseech Thee ... ... ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
Whatsoever is born of God ... ... ... ... H. Oakeley 4d.
Who can comprehend Thee ... ... ... ... Mozart 4d.

 Anthems marked thus () may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d. to 3d. each.*

London : Novello and Company, Limited

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS

SET IX. JUST PUBLISHED

HYMNS AND TUNES

SETS PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED

PRICE SIXPENCE PER SET. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

SET I.

1. COME, CHILDREN, ON AND FORWARD ... ... G. C. MARTIN
2. FOR THE FRESHNESS OF THE MORNING ... LADY EUAN-SMITH
3. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ... ... ... FREDERIC CLAY
4. COME, O COME! IN PIOUS LAYS ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. THINE FOR EVER! GOD OF LOVE ... ... W. C. HARVEY
6. JESU, WHOM THY CHILDREN LOVE ... ... H. E. BUTTON
7. SWEETLY O'ER THE MEADOWS FAIR ... ... F. A. CHALLINOR
8. WOULD YOU GAIN THE BEST IN LIFE ... ... C. J. MAY
9. ON OUR WAY REJOICING ... ... ... WALTER B. GILBERT
10. NOW THE DAYLIGHT GOES AWAY ... ... ... J. ADCOCK

SET II.

1. AGAIN THE MORN OF GLADNESS... ... ... ... J. STAINER
2. THE ANGELS' SONG ... ... ... ... ALBERTO RANDEGGER
3. FORWARD, CHRISTIAN CHILDREN ... ... ... ALFRED MOFFAT
4. THE GOLDEN SHORE ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR ... ... ... JOHN E. WEST
6. ENTER WITH THANKSGIVING ... ... ... F. H. COWEN
7. MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE ... J. V. ROBERTS
8. STARS, THAT ON YOUR WONDROUS WAY ... ... J. STAINER
9. THE DAY IS PAST AND OVER ... ... ... JOSEPH BARNBY
10. GOD WILL TAKE CARE OF YOU ... ... F. R. HAVERGAL

SET III.

1. WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY ... ... ... J. BARNBY
2. HARK! HARK! THE ORGAN ... ... ... G. J. BENNETT
3. O WHAT CAN LITTLE HANDS DO? ... ... H. E. BUTTON
4. WHILE THE SUN IS SHINING ... ... ... T. ADAMS
5. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ... ... ... H. J. GAUNTLETT
6. THE ROSEATE HUES OF EARLY DAWN ... ... A. SULLIVAN
7. LORD, THY CHILDREN GUIDE ... ... ... A. S. COOPER
8. IN OUR WORK AND IN OUR PLAY ... ... F. WESTLAKE
9. THE BEAUTIFUL LAND ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
10. GENTLE JESUS, MEEK AND MILD ... ... ... J. STAINER

SET IV.

1. THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ENGLAND ... ... ... J. STAINER
2. THE CROWN IS WAITING ... ... ... J. STAINER
3. THE CITY OF LIGHT ... ... ... ... E. J. TROUP
4. HE DWELLS AMONG THE LILIES ... ... ... LADY EUAN-SMITH
5. GOD IS IN HEAVEN! CAN HE HEAR ... ... H. E. BUTTON
6. THE GOOD SHEPHERD ... ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
7. A LITTLE KINGDOM I POSSESS ... ... ... R. S. NEWMAN
8. RAISE YOUR STANDARD, BROTHERS ... ... ... E. J. TROUP
9. FLOWERS ... ... ... ... ... ALBERTO RANDEGGER
10. JESUS, TENDER SHEPHERD, HEAR ME ... ... H. PARKER

SET V.

1. CREATOR, GOD, AND LORD ... ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
2. WHEN LOVE DRAWS NEAR ... ... ... E. J. TROUP
3. COME, PRAISE YOUR LORD ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
4. WE WILL PRAISE THEE ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. ABOVE THE CLEAR BLUE SKY ... ... HERBERT E. CRIMP
6. WE THANK THEE, LORD ... ... ... ... W. C. HARVEY
7. COME, FRIENDS, THE WORLD WANTS MENDING ... E. J. TROUP
8. COME, SING WITH HOLY GLADNESS ... ... G. W. TORRANCE
9. THE LESSON OF LOVE ... ... ... ... ... J. BARNBY
10. NOW THE DAY IS OVER ... ... ... ... F. W. BLUNT

SET VI.

1. HOSANNA WE SING ... ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
2. HEAVENLY FATHER, SEND THY BLESSING ... W. C. HARVEY
3. BLESSED JESU, WE CAN SEE THEE ... ... ... A. ROWLEY
4. THE DAYS OF OLD ... ... ... ... ... ETHEL BOYCE
5. WHAT IS THE GIFT ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
6. WHILE OUR LORD WAS PASSING BY ... ... ETHEL BOYCE
7. THE EARTH IS FAIR AND SWEET ... ... ... A. ROWLEY
8. PILGRIMS OF THE NIGHT ... ... ... ... O. KING
9. THE HOLY LIGHT ... ... ... ... ... C. H. LLOYD
10. NOW SINKS THE SUN ... ... ... ... ... C. J. MAY

SET VII.

1. LIFE'S GLAD MORNING ... ... ... ... G. C. MARTIN
2. JESU, BLESSED SAVIOUR ... ... ... A. HERBERT BREWER
3. COME, CHRISTIAN YOUTHS ... ... ... HARVEY GRACE
4. THY WORD IS LIKE A GARDEN ... ... ... E. H. THIMAN
5. GOD OF MERCY, THRONED ON HIGH ... ... HARVEY GRACE
6. GOD OF OUR FATHERS ... ... ... ... E. J. HOPKINS
7. WHEN THE LORD OF LOVE ... ... ... E. H. THIMAN
8. CHILDREN OF GOD ... ... ... ... ... F. G. RUSSELL
9. THE CHILDREN'S PRAYER ... ... ... ... R. MCLEOD
10. THE LORD BE WITH US ... ... ... ... ... C. J. MAY

SET VIII.

1. THE CHILDREN'S SONG ... ... ... GEORGE RATHBONE
2. THE CHILDREN'S FESTAL DAY ... ... ... J. H. ADAMS
3. SING ALOUD TO JESUS ... ... ... ... ALEC ROWLEY
4. LONG AGO SWEET VOICES CALLING ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
5. CHILDREN'S VOICES ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
6. AROUND THE THRONE OF GOD (Tune—"LASST UNS ERFREUEN") Arr. by IVOR ATKINS
7. GOD, WHO HATH MADE THE DAISIES ... ... ... R. MCLEOD
8. FOR EVER AND FOR EVER ... ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
9. FRAMER OF THE LIGHT ... ... ... R. WALKER ROBSON
10. THE JOYOUS DAY, O LORD, IS ENDING ... ... C. J. MAY

SET IX.

1. ALLELUIA! HEAR US SINGING ... ... ... H. E. BUTTON
2. SHEPHERD OF TENDER YOUTH ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
3. FATHER, HEAR THY CHILDREN'S PRAISES GEORGE RATHBONE
4. GOD OF THE MORNING ... ... ... ... CHARLES BURNEY
5. LET ALL THE WORLD IN EVERY CORNER SING H. E. BUTTON
6. OUR HEARTS ARE FULL OF GLADNESS ... ... ALEC ROWLEY
7. THANKSGIVING ... ... ... ... ... MYLES B. FOSTER
8. GOD WHISPERS ... ... ... ... ... ROBERT MCLEOD
9. GOD IN ALL ... ... ... ... ... ... EDGAR MOY
10. HEAR THY CHILDREN, GENTLE JESUS ... ... ... C. J. MAY

The Hymns and Tunes may also be had in separate numbers, price 1½*d.* each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS

ANTHEMS, Etc.

SACRED UNISON SONGS FOR SOPRANO VOICES (or Solos)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Children's Angel, The (both Notations) | Ch. Gounod | 2d. |
| Come, let us all this day (both Notations) | J. S. Bach | 2d. |
| Lord, at all times I will bless Thee (both Notations) | Mendelssohn | 3d. |
| Lord of our being (both Notations) | G. F. Handel | 1½d. |
| O for the wings of a dove (both Notations) | Mendelssohn | 2d. |

SACRED TWO-PART SONGS AND ANTHEMS FOR SOPRANO VOICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Except the Lord build the House (both Notations) | M. J. Monk | 3d. |
| Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard (both Notations) | Myles B. Foster | 4d. |
| Faint not, fear not, God is near Thee (both Notations) | Henry Smart | 4d. |
| God sends the night (both Notations) | G. Rathbone | 4d. |
| Like as the hart (both Notations) | V. Novello, arr. by H. Elliot Button | 2d. |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The (s. & c., both Notations) | Henry Smart | 3d. |
| O for the wings of a dove (Staff Notation only) | Mendelssohn, arr. by J. E. West | 4d. |
| O how amiable are Thy dwellings (Staff Notation only) | J. H. Maunder | 4d. |
| Songs of Praise the Angels sang (Staff Notation only) | Attwood | 2d. |
| Within the fold (both Notations) | Roland Rogers | 4d. |

CONTRALTO SOLO AND THREE-PART CHORUS FOR 1st AND 2nd SOPRANO AND CONTRALTO

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Within Thy sacred fane (both Notations) | Josiah Booth | 3d. |

HYMN-ANTHEMS FOR CHILDREN AND CHOIR

| | | O.N. | Tonic Sol-fa |
|---|---|---|---|
| Happy Day! Festal Day! | H. A. Chambers | 4d. | 3d. |
| Hosanna be the children's song | E. M. Barber | 3d. | 1½d. |
| Hosanna we sing | John E. West | 4d. | 2d. |
| I love to hear the Story | Myles B. Foster | 4d. | 2d. |
| Jesus shall reign | Ferris Tozer | 3d. | 2d. |
| Lord, Thy children | J. H. Maunder | 4d. | 2d. |
| Sing Alleluia forth | Eric H. Thiman | 3d. | 2d. |
| Sweet is the work | R. Walker Robson | 2d. | 1½d. |
| Sweet is Thy mercy | J. Barnby | 3d. | 1½d. |
| Thine for ever | H. Elliot Button | 4d. | 2d. |

ANTHEMS FOR SOPRANO SOLO AND CHORUS

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Open to me the gates | Frank Adlam | 6d. | 2d. |
| Praise the Lord, O my soul | T. P. Royle | 4d. | 2d. |
| Sun of my soul | Joseph H. Adams | 4d. | 3d. |

ANTHEMS FOR FOUR VOICES

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| God sends the night | G. Rathbone | 3d. | 2d. |
| Lift up your heads | S. Coleridge-Taylor | 4d. | 1½d. |
| Lord, I have loved the habitation of Thy House | G. W. Torrance | 4d. | 2d. |
| O how amiable are Thy dwellings | J. H. Maunder | 4d. | 2d. |
| Rejoice in the Lord | George J. Elvey | 3d. | 1½d |
| Rejoice in the Lord | J. Baptiste Calkin | 2d. | 1½d. |

ANTHEMS FOR EVENING SERVICE

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Save us, O Lord, while waking. S.A.T.B. | George C. Martin | 3d. | 2d. |
| Saviour, Thy children keep. S.S.A.A. | Arthur Sullivan | 4d. | — |
| Saviour, Thy children keep. S.A.T.B. | Arthur Sullivan | 4d. | 2d. |
| Through the day Thy love has spared us. S.A.T.B. | H. A. Chambers | 3d. | 2d. |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

SOLOS FROM THE CHURCH CANTATAS

BY

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

In Twelve Books—each Book, One Shilling and Sixpence

FIRST SET

SOPRANO

Air — WITHIN MY HEART OF HEARTS ("A Stronghold Sure").
Air — OUR JESUS HATH FOR AYE ("God goeth up").
Air — MY HEART EVER TRUSTING ("God so loved the world").
Air — O GRANT US, MIGHTY LORD ("Jesus, now will we praise Thee").
Air — SIGHING, WEEPING ("My spirit was in heaviness").

TENOR

Air — LORD, TO US THYSELF BE SHOWING ("Bide with us").
Recit. — WHY HAST THOU THEN ("My Spirit was in heaviness")
Air — FAST MY BITTER TEARS ,, ,, ,,
Air — REJOICE, O MY SPIRIT ,, ,, ,,
Recit. — THE MIGHTY GUARDIAN ("Thou Guide of Israel").
Air — HIS FACE MY SHEPHERD ,, ,, ,,
Air — AND WHY ART THOU, MY SOUL ("When will God recall").

ALTO

Air — THOU, WHOSE PRAISES NEVER END ("Bide with us").
Recit. — THE FATHER HATH APPOINTED HIM ("God goeth up").
Air — MY SPIRIT HIM DESCRIES ("God goeth up").
Air — INTO THY HANDS ("God's time is best").
Air — REJOICE, YE SOULS, ELECT AND HOLY ("O Light Everlasting").

BASS

Recit. — HE COMES, THE LORD OF LORDS ("God goeth up").
Air — 'TIS HE, WHO ALL ALONE ("God goeth up").
Recit. — IT IS NOT MINE ("God so loved the world").
Air — ON MY BEHALF ,, ,, ,,
Recit. — YEA, THIS THY WORD ("Thou Guide of Israel").
Air — WHOM JESUS DEIGNS ,, ,,
Air — YET SILENCE ("When will God recall").

SECOND SET

SOPRANO

Air — OPEN WIDE, MY HEART ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — FATHER, WHAT I PROFFER ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — COME, VISIT, YE GLOWING ("How brightly shines").
Air — I HAVE WAITED FOR THE LORD ("If thou but sufferest").

TENOR

Recit. — THE SAVIOUR NOW APPEARETH ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — COME, JESU, COME ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — WHAT VOICE IS WITH THE TEMPEST ("From depths of woe").
Air — TUNEFUL HARPS AND VOICES ("How brightly shines").
Air — THOU ART MY GOD ("Lord, rebuke me not").

ALTO

Air — GOD'S ENSAMPLE THUS TO FOLLOW ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — JESUS SLEEPS ("Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth").
Recit. — INCLINE THINE EAR ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — THE LORD HATH HEARD ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — ALL EARTHLY POWERS FROM GOD INHERIT ("Praise thou the Lord").

BASS

Air — THE PASCHAL VICTIM HERE WE SEE ("Christ lay in death's dark prison").
Air — DO THINE ALMS ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — WITH JESUS WILL I GO ("Wailing, crying").
Recit. — AH, WHEN ON THAT GREAT DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").
Air — BLESSED RESURRECTION DAY ,, ,,

THIRD SET

SOPRANO

Recit. — O LORD, HEAR ME WHEN I CALL ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — HOW LONG, O LORD ,, ,,
Air — O PRAISE THE LORD ("O Praise the Lord").
Recit. — O JESU, OUR REDEEMER ("There is nought of soundness").
Air — HEARKEN WHEN WITH TREMBLING ACCENTS ,, ,, Air — THOUGH REVILING TONGUES ASSAIL ME ("Watch ye, pray ye").

TENOR

Recit. — LORD, WHY SO FAR AWAY ("Jesus sleeps").
Air — IN BILLOWS THE RIVERS OF BELIAL ("Jesus sleeps").
Recit. — O HAPPY TOWN, O FAVOURED LAND ("Praise thou the Lord").
Air — O BLEST ARE ALL THAT FEAR HIM ,, ,, ,, Recit. — REJECT IT NOT ("Sages of Sheba").
Air — SAVIOUR, TAKE ME FOR THINE OWN ("Sages of Sheba").
Air — UPLIFT YOUR HEADS ON HIGH ("Watch ye, pray ye").

ALTO

Air — BE WELCOME, THOU GREAT ANGEL ("O teach me, Lord").
Air — AH, TARRY YET ("Praise our God").
Air — GOD IS EVER SUN AND SHIELD ("The Lord is a sun and shield").
Recit. — BE STEADFAST IN AFFLICTION ("Wailing, crying").
Air — PAIN AND SORROW WORK SALVATION ,, ,,

BASS

Air — GOD, WHOSE POWER ("Let songs of rejoicing")
Recit. — ALTHOUGH AN HOST ENCAMP ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — O LORD, THY MERCY ,, ,,
Air — FARE YE WELL ("O teach me, Lord").
Recit. — THESE THINGS THAT ISAIAH OF OLD ("The Sages of Sheba").
Air — GOLD OF OPHIR IS BUT VAIN ,, ,,
Air — AH, WHERE SHALL I SUCCOUR ("There is nought of soundness").

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NEW EDITION

POCKET SING-SONG BOOK

FOR SCHOOLS, HOMES

AND

COMMUNITY SINGING

CONTENTS

A-hunting we will go
All people that on earth do dwell (Old 100th)
All through the night
Arethusa, The
Ash Grove, The
Auld Lang Syne
Bay of Biscay, The
Begone, dull care
Bells of Aberdovey, The
Blow, blow, thou winter wind
Blue Bell of Scotland, The
Bonnie Banks of Loch Lomond, The
British Grenadiers, The
Campbells are comin', The
Camptown Races
Charlie is my Darling
Coasts of High Barbary, The
Come, lasses and lads
Come, let's be merry
Dashing away with the smoothing iron
Down among the dead men
David of the White Rock
Drink to me only with thine eyes
Early one morning
Flight of the Earls, The
Girl I left behind me, The
Glory to Thee, my God, this night (Tallis)
God rest you merry, gentlemen
God save the King
Golden Vanity, The
Good-morrow, Gossip Joan
Harp that once through Tara's halls, The Heart of Oak
Heave away, my Johnny
Here's a health unto His Majesty
I saw three ships
John Brown's body
John Peel
Keel row, The
Land of my Fathers
Lass of Richmond Hill, The
Last Rose of Summer, The
Let the hills resound
Londonderry Air
March of the Men of Harlech
Marching thro' Georgia
Marseillaise, The
Meeting of the Waters, The Mermaid, The
Minstrel Boy, The
My Lady Greensleeves
Now thank we all our God
O no, John !
Oak and the Ash, The
Oh, dear ! what can the matter be
Oh ! we can play
Old Folks at Home
Old King Cole
One man went to mow
Onward, Christian Soldiers
Poacher, The
Polly Oliver
Polly-wolly-doodle
Rio Grand
Rounds: Come, follow me
'Tis humdrum
Chairs to mend
Rule, Britannia
So early in the morning
Summer is a-coming in
There was a simple maiden
This great world is a trouble
Tight little Island, The Twelve days of Christmas
Vicar of Bray, The Wanderer, The
We be Three Poor Mariners
When I was a Tailor
When Johnny comes marching home
Wi' a Hundred Pipers
Widdicombe Fair
Will ye no come back again
Young May Moon, The

Size 6½ in. by 5 in., rounded corners, and lined paper cover. The songs are generally set in low keys with simple pianoforte accompaniments. The voice part is printed in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa notations.

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

Words only, price 4*d*.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JUST PUBLISHED.

SEVEN PART-SONGS

FOR FEMALE VOICES AND STRINGS.

WORDS BY ROBERT BRIDGES.

MUSIC BY GUSTAV HOLST.
(Op. 44.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | Say who is this ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| 2. | O love, I complain ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| 3. | Angel Spirits of sleep ... ... ... | 3d. |
| 4. | When first we met ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| 5. | Sorrow and joy ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| 6. | Love in my heart from Heaven ... ... | 3d. |
| 7. | Assemble all ye maidens ... ... ... | 8d. |

String Parts, Nos. 1-6, complete, 2s. 8d.
Ditto, No. 7, 2s. 8d.

"'Assemble all ye maidens' is very beautiful, with that cold, pure beauty which the composer knows so well how to get from a few simple vocal strains, long sustained drone or pedal notes on the strings, and a basso ostinato in quintuple time enriching the rhythmic movement of the later stanzas."—The Times.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Foyle's Special Offers.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF MUSIC. By POLE. An exhaustive treatise on the Theory or Philosophy of Music—its elements and its development. Published at 10s. 6d. net); offered (new) at 6s. post free.

FRANZ LISZT'S GREAT WORK ON THE GIPSY IN MUSIC. The result of the Author's life-long experiences and investigations of the Gipsies and their Music. With Essay on Liszt and his Work. In two Vols. Published, 15s. net; offered (as new) at 9s. 9d. complete, post free.

Above sent on approval. Quote offer 122.

Are you requiring other Music or Books? Foyles can supply, and save you trouble and expense.

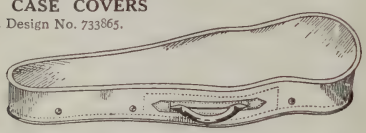
FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,
119-125, CHARING CROSS ROAD, LONDON, W.C.2

PROTECT YOUR VIOLIN CASE!
"HILSON" VIOLIN
CASE COVERS
Regd. Design No. 733865.



BROWN CANVAS. BRITISH THROUGHOUT
No Straps. Simplicity itself.
PERFECT PROTECTION and THOROUGHLY WATERPROOF
Ask your Music Dealer to show you one.
PRICES: Quality A, 12/6; B, 15/6; C, 19/6
MAKERS: HENRY HILL & SONS,
9 & 10, CHRISTMAS STREET,
ESTB. 1887 BRISTOL Tel. 3105

FOUR
TENNYSON LYRICS

SET TO MUSIC BY
PERCY E. FLETCHER.

1. A LULLABY.
2. THE CITY CHILD.
3. THE REIGN OF THE ROSES.
4. THE THROSTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

JOHN GILPIN

POEM BY
WILLIAM COWPER.

SET FOR FEMALE (OR BOYS') VOICES
IN UNISON.
(Second Part Optional.)
WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT
(Two Violins and Percussion Optional)

BY COLIN TAYLOR.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SEVENTEEN SONGS

COMPOSED BY
HENRY PURCELL.

Edited and arranged, with accompaniment for the Pianoforte, by ARTHUR SOMERVELL.

Price Four Shillings.

CONTENTS.

A PASTORAL ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF MR. JOHN PLAYFORD.
AH! CRUEL NYMPH.
AH! HOW PLEASANT.
AH! WHAT PAINS.
AN ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF MATTHEW LOCKE.
ANACREON'S DEFEAT.
CEASE, O MY SAD SOUL.
HOW DELIGHTFUL 'S THE LIFE.
I FAIN WOULD BE FREE.
IF MUSIC BE THE FOOD OF LOVE (2nd Version).
LET EACH GALLANT HEART.
LOVE ARMS HIMSELF.
OLINDA.
ON THE BROW OF RICHMOND HILL.
SAWNEY IS A BONNY LAD.
THE FATAL HOUR COMES ON.
THE QUEEN'S EPICEDIUM (ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF QUEEN MARY. 1695).

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

New Numbers in the "YORK SERIES."

ALLELUIA HAIL WITH GLADNESS.
J. LAMONT GALBRAITH.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

CROWN OF LIFE.
NOEL HANNENFORD.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

THE SHEFFIELD CATHEDRAL DESCANTS.
(24 Settings of Popular Hymn Tunes.)
By T. W. HANFORTH.
Price 6d.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

VOCAL COMPOSITIONS BY EDWARD GERMAN

| SONGS | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE. D, E flat, and F ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| CHARMING CHLOE. D flat, E flat, and F ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| FIRST FRIEND. (Boy Soprano) ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| HIS LADY. (Mezzo-Soprano) ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| IT WAS A LOVER AND HIS LASS. G and B flat... each | 2 | 0 |
| JUST SO SONG BOOK, THE ... ... ... cloth, net | 7 | 6 |
| LONDON TOWN. C, E flat, and F ... ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| LORDING'S DAUGHTER, THE. D minor and F minor ea. | 2 | 0 |
| MERROW DOWN. (Baritone) ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| *ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE. (Soprano or Tenor) ... | 2 | 0 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO. *G minor and A minor each | 2 | 0 |

| PART-SONGS (S.A.T.B.) | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| CHASE, THE ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| IN PRAISE OF NEPTUNE ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| LONDON TOWN ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 4d. | 0 | 6 |
| MY BONNIE LASS SHE SMILETH ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| O LOVELY MAY ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| O PEACEFUL NIGHT ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE (4-part) ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| Do. do. (8-part) ... ... ... | | 0 | 6 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 6 |
| SLEEPING ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| SWEET DAY SO COOL ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| THREE KNIGHTS, THE ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| WEEP YOU NO MORE (Sleeping)... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| WHO IS SYLVIA? ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |

| MALE VOICES (T.T.B.B.) | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| LONDON TOWN ... ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 6 |
| O PEACEFUL NIGHT (German words, 6d.) ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO ... ... ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 6 |
| SLEEPING ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| THREE KNIGHTS, THE ... ... ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| WEEP YOU NO MORE (Sleeping) ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |

| FEMALE OR BOYS' VOICES | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| BEAUTEOUS MORN (S.C.C.) ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE (S. & A.) ... ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| IN PRAISE OF NEPTUNE (Unison) ... ... ... ... | | 0 | 4 |
| *IT WAS A LOVER AND HIS LASS (S. & A.) (Folio, | 3s.) | 0 | 4 |
| Do. ... ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | | |
| MY BONNIE LASS SHE SMILETH (3 Voices) ... ... | | 0 | 4 |
| O LOVELY MAY (S.S.C.) ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| O PEACEFUL NIGHT (3 voices) ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| *ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE (S.S.A.) (Folio, | 3s.) ,, 1½d. | 0 | 4 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO (S. & A.) ... ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| *SHEPHERDS' DANCE (arranged as two-part or Unison Song). From Henry VIII. ... ... Staff Notation | | 0 | 4 |
| Do. Staff and Sol-fa Notations combined | | 0 | 4 |
| Do. Sol-fa only ... ... ... ... | | 0 | 3 |
| String Parts, 3s.; Wind Parts, 4s. 4d.: Full Score, MS. | | | |
| WHO IS SYLVIA (S. & A.) ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |

| SERVICE, ANTHEM, ETC. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| BREAD OF HEAVEN, ON THEE WE FEED Sol-fa, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| GRACE, "NON NOBIS DOMINE" ... ... ... ... | | 0 | 2 |
| Do. do. T.T.B.B. ... ... ... | | 0 | 2 |
| INTERCESSORY HYMN In E flat and D flat Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 3 |
| (Words only, 2s. per 100.) | | | |
| DITTO (Welsh words). In D flat ... ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 3 |
| (Words only, 2s. per 100.) | | | |
| TE DEUM LAUDAMUS, IN F ... ... ... ... ... | | 0 | 8 |

* Orchestral parts may be had.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NATIONAL SONGS

WITH DESCANTS.

ARRANGED BY

GEOFFREY SHAW

SET I. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 271

CONTENTS

THE BAY OF BISCAY (English)
A HUNTING WE WILL GO (English)
JOHN PEEL (English)
ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT (Welsh)
SCOTS, WHA HAE (Scottish)
THE OAK AND THE ASH (Scottish)
EARLY ONE MORNING (English)
OH, DEAR! WHAT CAN THE MATTER BE? (English)
THE BRITISH GRENADIERS (English)
THE ASH GROVE (Welsh)
GOOD KING WENCESLAS (Traditional)
THE FIRST NOWELL (Traditional)

SET II. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 275

CONTENTS:

COME, LASSES AND LADS (English)
WI' A HUNDRED PIPERS (Scottish)
DAVID OF THE WHITE ROCK (Welsh)
THE YOUNG MAY MOON (Irish)
THE GOLDEN VANITY (English)
FLIGHT OF THE EARLS (Irish)

SET III. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 276

CONTENTS:

MEETING OF THE WATERS (Irish)
THERE'S NAE LUCK (Scottish)
DRINK TO ME ONLY WITH THINE EYES (English)
LET ERIN REMEMBER (Irish)
THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON (English)
THE BELLS OF ABERDOVEY (Welsh)

PRICE EIGHTPENCE EACH SET. Separate Numbers at TWOPENCE or THREEPENCE each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

SMALL COLLECTIONS OF SONGS

(ROYAL QUARTO)

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| AUSTIN, E.Songs from the Highway (Six Songs) (Baritone) ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| BELL, W. H.Six Love Lyrics (Contralto or Baritone) ... ... ... | 4 | 6 |
| BOUGHTON, R.Four Songs in two sets. Each set | 2 | 0 |
| BOYLE, G. F.Six Songs (Soprano) ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| BREWER, A. H.Sprig of Shamrock (Four old Irish Airs) (High or low voice) | 3 | 6 |
| CAPEL, J. M.Just before bed-time (Six little Songs for good children) ... | 4 | 0 |
| CARSE, A.Voyage of Love, The (Five Songs) (Contralto or Baritone) ... | 4 | 0 |
| COBB, G. F.Three Sacred Songs (Contralto) ... ... ... | 6 | 0 |
| COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S.Soul's Expression, The (Four Sonnets), Op. 42 (Contralto) ... | 4 | 0 |
| CRIMP, H. E.Wilderness Way (Three Songs of Childhood) ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| DAVIES, E. H.Five Songs of Childhood ... | 3 | 0 |
| FLETCHER, P. E.Four Tennyson Lyrics (Soprano) ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| HILL, A.Songlets for Children (Six Songs) ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Twilight Songs for Little Children (Six Songs) ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| HODGKINSON, N.Six little Songs (Contralto) ... | 3 | 0 |
| MACKENZIE, A. C.Four Songs by Tennyson (Soprano) In two Sets, each ... | 2 | 0 |
| MARCHANT, S.Nonsense Songs (Five Songs) (Contralto) ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| MARRIOTT, N.Three Songs (Mezzo-Soprano or Contralto) ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| MONTFITCHET, M. de.Three Cradle Songs (Mezzo-Soprano) ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| NEWMARCH, R.Six Russian Songs (Selected)... | 3 | 0 |
| PITT, P.Trois Poésies (Three Songs) (Soprano) ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| RESSE, E. P.Four Folk-Songs (Mezzo-Soprano or Baritone) ... | 3 | 0 |
| ROECKEL, J. L.Illusions (Three Songs) (Baritone or Contralto) ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| SOMERVILLE, R.Three Songs of Friendship (Three keys, C, D, E) ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| STEGGALL, R.Four Shakespeare Songs (Mezzo-Soprano or Baritone) ... | 4 | 0 |
| WAGNER, R.Five Songs (Soprano or Tenor) | 3 | 0 |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

A SELECTED LIST OF # NOVELLO'S LIGHT PIECES
FOR PIANOFORTE

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| ARENSKY, A. | Romance in A flat | 2 | 0 |
| ARMSTRONG, F. ALFORD | Autumn Leaves | 2 | 0 |
| " " " | White Heather. Valse | 2 | 0 |
| BREWER, A. HERBERT | Auf Wiedersehen | 2 | 0 |
| CARSE, ADAM | Gavotte in G | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Three Miniatures: 1. Humoresque 2. Love Song 3. Scherzetto — Complete | 2 | 6 |
| COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. | Four Characteristic Waltzes: 1. Valse Bohemienne 2/- 2. Valse Rustique 2/- 3. Valse de la Reine 2/- 4. Valse Mauresque 2/- — Complete | 4 | 0 |
| COWEN, FREDERIC H. | Four English Dances, in the Olden Style: 1. Stately Dance 2. Rustic Dance 3. Graceful Dance 4. Country Dance — Complete | 4 | 0 |
| " " | Minuet d'Amour | 2 | 0 |
| ELGAR, EDWARD | Chanson de Matin | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Chanson de Nuit | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Mazurka | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Serenade Mauresque | 2 | 0 |
| ESIPOFF, STEPÁN | L'Absence | 2 | 0 |
| FLETCHER, PERCY E. | Reflections (after verses from Longfellow): 1. Snowflakes 2. Spring 3. Sunset — Complete | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Toy Soldiers' March | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Two Bagatelles: 1. Valsette 2. Pizzicato | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Valse Arabesque | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Valse Lyrique ("Smile of Spring") | 2 | 0 |
| GERMAN, EDWARD | Three Dances from "Henry VIII": 1. Morris Dance 2. Shepherds' Dance 3. Torch Dance — Complete | 3 | 0 |
| HOLBROOKE, JOSEF | Souvenir de Printemps | 2 | 0 |
| HOLLINS, ALFRED | Intermezzo | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Spring Song | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Valse Impromptu | 2 | 0 |
| MANNS, OTTO, JUNR. | A Northern Cradle Song | 2 | 0 |
| PITT, PERCY | Air de Ballet | 2 | 0 |
| RAWLINSON, HAROLD | Aubade | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Serenade | 2 | 0 |
| SCOTT-BAKER, H. | Mazurka | 2 | 0 |
| " " | Pantomime | 2 | 0 |
| WEBSTER, ERIC | Vignettes: 1. Valse 2. Reverie 3. Petit Scherzo — Complete | 2 | 0 |
| WENDT, THÉOPHIL | Cantique d'Amour | 2 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

ORGAN MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR PERFORMANCE AT CINEMAS, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| J. BENEDICT | | |
| Variations on Arne's "Where the bee sucks" ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| DUDLEY BUCK | | |
| At Evening ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| WALFORD DAVIES | | |
| Solemn Melody ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| EDWARD ELGAR | | |
| Contrasts (The Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | | |
| Fountain Reverie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Matinale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD GERMAN | | |
| Morris Dance (Henry VIII.)... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Shepherds' Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Torch Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| R. G. HAILING | | |
| Chanson de Joie... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| KING HALL | | |
| Canzone ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| ALFRED HOLLINS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Barcarolle... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Evening Rest ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| In Springtime ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Maytime (Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Minuet ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Morning Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Spring Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD J. HORSMAN | | |
| The Curfew ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| BERNARD JOHNSON | | |
| Pavane in A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| S. KARG-ELERT | | |
| Harmonies du Soir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWIN H. LEMARE | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson d'Eté ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Elegy in G ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in B flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Madrigal ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Minuet Nuptiale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Pastorale in E ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Reverie in E flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Romance in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| J. A. MEALE | | |
| Chanson d'Espoir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| J. RAFF | | |
| Cavatina ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| SCHUBERT | | |
| Ave Maria ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Serenade ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| BERTHOLD TOURS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Menuetto ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| TSCHAIKOWSKY | | |
| Chanson Triste ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Chant sans Paroles ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Andantino (Symphony No. 4) ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| ERIC WEBSTER | | |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. DAVAN WETTON | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. A. WHEELDON | | |
| Cantilene ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| W. WOLSTENHOLME | | |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Romanza and Allegretto in E flat ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWENTY SHORT AND EASY PIECES

FOR THE ORGAN

SET VI.

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | ADAGIO FROM SEXTETT (OP. 81) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | BEETHOVEN |
| 2. | ALLEGRO GRANDIOSO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | HUGH BLAIR |
| 3. | LARGO IN E FLAT... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | E. BUNNETT |
| 4. | MODERATO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | GEORGE CALKIN |
| 5. | BERCEUSE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | CÉSAR CUI |
| 6. | ADAGIO IN D ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | OTTO DIENEL |
| 7. | POSTLUDE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | EDMONDSTOUNE DUNCAN |
| 8. | IMPROMPTU IN A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | A. M. GOODHART |
| 9. | WEDDING MARCH ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | A. GUILMANT |
| 10. | MARCH FROM "ODE ON ST. CECILIA'S DAY"... ... ... ... | HANDEL |
| 11. | LIEDER OHNE WORTE, No. 9 ... ... .. ... ... ... | F. MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY |
| 12. | ALLEGRO IN C ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | GUSTAV MERKEL |
| 13. | ANDANTE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | REISSIGER |
| 14. | POSTLUDE IN F ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | J. VARLEY ROBERTS |
| 15. | PRELUDE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B. LUARD-SELBY |
| 16. | PRELUDE IN A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | HENRY SMART |
| 17. | ANDANTE CON MOTO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | CHARLES STEGGALL |
| 18. | ALLEGRETTO GRAZIOSO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | BERTHOLD TOURS |
| 19. | COMMUNION IN B FLAT ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | FERRIS TOZER |
| 20. | CON MOTO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | JOHN E. WEST |

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

Cloth, Six Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

A MODERN SCHOOL FOR THE VIOLIN

BY

AUGUST WILHELMJ AND JAMES BROWN

THE purpose of this Work is to provide, in one systematic and comprehensive scheme, all that is necessary for the acquirement of the Art of Modern Violin Playing.

"A Modern School for the Violin" consists of Six Books devoted to Daily Technical Practice, Six Books of Studies for Violin alone, and a number of Pieces with Pianoforte Accompaniment, the Violin parts being specially edited for the purposes of teaching.

SECTION A.—TECHNICAL PRACTICE. IN SIX BOOKS.

The foundation of "A Modern School for the Violin" is laid by means of a series of Six Books dealing exclusively with the important subject of Daily Technical Practice. The First Book of Technical Practice (Book 1A) is limited to the 1st Position; the Second Book (2A) to the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions; the Third Book (3A) to the first five Positions; and so on. Bowings and other technical devices are introduced in a similarly progressive manner throughout. Each Book of Technical Practice is divided into "Lessons" (or Chapters), and each Lesson contains a number of short repeating Exercises on some definite point of Violin Technique—as Fingering, Bowing, &c., with the needful explanations. Included in each Book will be found a complete set of Scales and Arpeggi, arranged according to the particular stage of advancement reached.

Taken as a whole, this section is intended to facilitate, and to insist on, a thorough, steady, and continuous progress in the mastery of the Instrument, this being the only possible means of preparing the groundwork for artistic achievement with all its lasting delights.

SECTION B.—STUDIES. IN SIX BOOKS.

Section B is formed of a series of original and selected Studies, in Six Books. Each Book of Studies (Section B) is carefully co-ordinated, in respect of difficulty and range of subject, with the correspondingly numbered Book of Technical Practice (Section A). Thus the First Book of Studies (1B) is written in the 1st Position; the Second Book (2B) in the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions; the 3rd Book (3B) in all Positions up to and including the 5th; and so on. It should further be explained that the two Sections are designed to complement one another, and that the "School" must be practised, not in single Books of Technical Practice and Studies alternately, but in pairs. Thus, Books 1A and 1B are to be taken concurrently, then Books 2A and 2B, 3A and 3B, and so on, and the appropriate pairs are now issued bound together in cloth (see Cloth Bindings below).

| | | s. | d. | | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1A. | TECHNICAL PRACTICE (1st Position) | 3 | 0 | 1B. | STUDIES ... ... ... (1st Position) | 3 | 0 |
| 2A. | Ditto (1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions) | 3 | 0 | 2B. | Ditto ... (1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions) | 4 | 0 |
| 3A. | Ditto ... (1st to 5th Position) | 4 | 6 | 3B. | Ditto ... ... (1st to 5th Position) | 4 | 6 |
| 4A. | Ditto ... ... (all Positions) | 4 | 0 | 4B. | Ditto ... ... ... (all Positions) | 4 | 6 |
| 5A. | Ditto ... ... ... Do. | 4 | 0 | 5B. | Ditto ... ... ... Do. | 4 | 6 |
| 6A. | Ditto ... ... ... Do. | 4 | 6 | 6B. | Ditto ... ... ... Do. | 4 | 6 |

CLOTH BINDINGS.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Book 1. | (1A and 1B, bound together) in Cloth ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| ,, 2. | (2A and 2B, bound together) Do. ... ... ... ... | 8 | 6 |
| ,, 3. | (3A and 3B, bound together) Do. ... ... ... ... | 10 | 6 |
| ,, 4. | (4A and 4B, bound together) Do. ... ... ... ... | 10 | 0 |
| ,, 5. | (5A and 5B, bound together) Do. ... ... ... ... | 10 | 0 |
| ,, 6. | (6A and 6B, bound together) Do. ... ... ... ... | 10 | 6 |

PIECES.

In completion of the scheme of "A Modern School" a number of Pieces are published, in a form designed to fulfil the requirements of Violin Teachers and Students. In each number the Violin part is furnished with complete Fingerings and Bowings, besides remarks as to the methods of rendering, &c.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 13. | TWELVE FOLK DANCES FROM DENMARK (1st Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 14. | SONATA IN G MINOR. G. Tartini (All Positions) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 15. | OVERTURE TO SAMSON. G. F. Handel (1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 16. | SONATINA IN D. Franz Schubert (1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 17. | EIGHT HYMN TUNES. Various Composers (1st Position) | 2 | 0 |
| No. 18. | STYRIAN DANCES (LANDLER) (Op. 165). Josef Lanner (1st to 5th Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 19. | PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN G MINOR. J. S. Bach (Advanced) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 20. | SONATA IN G (No 8). Joseph Haydn (1st to 6th Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 21. | CONCERTO IN A MINOR. J. S. Bach (1st to 6th Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 22. | CONCERTO IN A MINOR. Pierre Rode (Op. 9). (All Positions) | 3 | 6 |
| No. 23. | TWELVE CAROLS ... ... ... (1st Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 24. | SONATA IN A (Köchel, No. 305). W. A. Mozart (1st to 5th Position | 3 | 0 |
| No. 25. | RÊVERIE. Henri Vieuxtemps (Op. 22, No. 3). (Advanced) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 26. | FOUR LITTLE PIECES (From Op. 8). Ignaz Pleyel (1st Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 27. | SARABANDE AND TAMBOURIN. Jean-Marie Leclair (1st to 5th Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 28. | BOURRÉE AND GIGUE. J. S. Bach (1st and 3rd Positions) | 2 | 0 |
| No. 29. | BALLADE AND POLONAISE. Henri Vieuxtemps (Op. 38). (Advanced) | 3 | 0 |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

THE ENGLISH COUNTRY DANCE

GRADED SERIES

CONTAINING THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DANCES TOGETHER WITH THE TUNES

BY

CECIL J. SHARP

VOL. 1.

BRIGHTON CAMP.
*GALOPEDE.
*NANCY'S FANCY.
*THE BLACK NAG.
*GATHERING PEASCODS.
*RUFTY TUFTY.

VOL. 2.

RIBBON DANCE.
GODDESSES.
*THE MARY AND DOROTHY.
*IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
PICKING UP STICKS.
*HASTE TO THE WEDDING.

VOL. 3.

BONNETS SO BLUE.
THE MAID PEEPED OUT AT THE WINDOW.
CHRISTCHURCH BELLS.
*HEY, BOYS, UP GO WE.
*SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MERRY, MERRY MILKMAIDS.

VOL. 4.

SAGE LEAF.
EPPING FOREST.
CHILDGROVE.
*THE OLD MOLE.
HIT AND MISS.
NEWCASTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS EACH VOLUME.

* The Dances marked with an asterisk may be had for Brass and Military Band.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWELVE COUNTRY DANCE TUNES

COLLECTED BY

CECIL J. SHARP

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS OR MILITARY BAND

BY GORDON JACOB

IN THREE SETS

PRICE ... ... 4*s.* 6*d.* EACH.

Separate Parts, 3*d.* each.

SET 1.

THE BUTTERFLY
GALOPEDE.
HASTE TO THE WEDDING.
NANCY'S FANCY.

SET 2.

GATHERING PEASCODS.
RUFTY, TUFTY.
HEY BOYS.
THE BLACK NAG.

SET 3.

IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
THE OLD MOLE.
SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MARY AND DOROTHY.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S ELEMENTARY MUSIC MANUALS

No.

1.—PART-WRITING FOR BEGINNERS, by J. W. Ivimey. The Rules tabulated are for the guidance of beginners in the Art of Part-writing. Many of them change from rules to recommendations, when the students become more advanced. Bound in linen covers. Price 8d.

2.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by Cuthbert Harris. Many elementary students of harmony can satisfactorily add parts to figured basses, but are unable to harmonize even simple melodies. This book gives minute instruction which any student can understand. Part I. Price 2s. 6d.

3.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa), by George Lane. The Exercises are written in the Treble and Bass Clefs, in order that the Book may be used by Male and Female voices in one class. Suitable for Evening Continuation Schools. Part I. Price 8d.

4.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa). by George Lane. Part II. Price 8d.

5.—HINTS TO YOUNG VIOLINISTS, by C. Egerton Lowe. Price 1s. 6d.

6.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by Cuthbert Harris. Part II. Price 2s. 6d.

7.—ADDITIONAL EXERCISES IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by Cuthbert Harris. Price 8d.

8.—HINTS ON PIANOFORTE TEACHING (chiefly to Boys), by E. D. Rendall. Price 2s. 6d.

9.—SCHOOL CHOIR TRAINING, by Margaret Nicholls. A Practical Course of Lessons on Voice Production for the guidance of Teachers of Class Singing. Price 3s.
(The Appendix, published separately: Hints on Part-Singing and Exercises, 3d.; Sol-fa, 3d.)

10.—THE COMPOSITION OF SIMPLE MELODIES, by Robert T. White. Price 2s. 6d.

11.—PHYSICAL EXERCISES IN THE INFANT SCHOOL, by Margaret A. Hughes. Price 4s. 6d.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

A Valuable Book for Teachers and Students.

TECHNIQUE AND EXPRESSION IN PIANOFORTE PLAYING BY FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

In the course of my experience as a teacher of the pianoforte, an experience extending over many years, certain ideas have from time to time suggested themselves to me which have proved useful—to myself, as enabling me to express more clearly that which I desired my pupils to understand, and to my pupils, as tending to facilitate their comprehension of the various difficulties they have had to encounter, at the same time leading them to perceive the most practical means of overcoming them, and thus accelerating their general rate of progress.

These suggestions relate to both the mechanical and intellectual sides of the study of pianoforte-playing, or briefly, to Technique and Expression, the chief matters implied by the first of these terms being the production of various qualities of tone, the choice of suitable fingering, and the best methods of attacking certain difficulties; while the second, which may perhaps be more aptly designated the means of expression, includes rhythm, phrasing, variety and gradation of tone, the use of the pedals, et cætera.

WITH NUMEROUS MUSICAL EXAMPLES FROM THE WORKS OF THE GREAT MASTERS.

Price, Cloth Gilt, Seven Shillings and Sixpence Net.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

New Foreign Publications

PIANOFORTE SOLO

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| BRUNEAU, A.—Danse Espagnole (Angelo), No. 5 | 2 | 6 |
| CHARLES-HENRY.—Quatre Morceaux, No. 1. La Danseuse au pâle visage | 1 | 6 |
| —— Quatre Morceaux, No. 2. Polémique entre poules et canards | 1 | 6 |
| FAIRCHILD, BLAIR.—Le Train (En Voyage), No. 3 | 3 | 0 |
| —— Dans les bois à Pointe-au-Pic (En Voyage), No. 6 | 2 | 6 |
| LAPARRA, R.—Le Livre de l'Aurore. No. 9, Moulins à vent | 1 | 6 |
| —— Le Livre de l'Aurore. No. 10, Croquemitaine | 1 | 6 |
| ROESSING, HELEN.—Au fil de l'eau (Drifting) | 1 | 6 |
| SCHWAAB, MAURICE.—Au temps d'Haydn (Menuet) | 1 | 6 |
| —— Romance | 1 | 6 |
| SPIELTER, HEDZ.—Jonglerie | 2 | 0 |

VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| DEBUSSY, CLAUDE.—Mouvement (Images, No. 3) (transcribed by Dushkin) | 2 | 6 |
| FAURÉ, GABRIEL.—12th Barcarolle, Op. 106 (Pianoforte) (transcribed by Gustave Samazeuilh) | 2 | 0 |
| HAHN, RINALDO.—Concerto for Violin and Orchestra (reduced for Violin and Pianoforte) | 10 | 0 |
| PIERNÉ, GABRIEL.—Fantaisie Basque, Op. 49 (reduced for Violin and Pianoforte by the Composer) | 6 | 0 |
| —— Cydalise et le Chèvre-pied: | | |
| No. 1, Menuet de Cydalise | 2 | 6 |
| No. 2, Marche de Petits Faunes | 2 | 6 |

FLUTE AND PIANOFORTE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| DUKAS, PAUL.—La plainte, au loin, du Faune (transcribed by Gustave Samazeuilh) | 2 | 0 |
| LILGE, H.—Suite, Op. 16 | 2 | 6 |

PIANOFORTE, VIOLIN, AND 'CELLO

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| SAINT-SAËNS.—Le Rouet d'Omphale (arranged by Roger Branga) | 5 | 0 |

PIANOFORTE, FLUTE, AND 'CELLO

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| PIERNÉ, GABRIEL.—Sonata da camera, Op. 48 (Prelude, Sarabande, Finale) | 8 | 6 |

HARP SOLO

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| SALZEDO, C.—Transcriptions for Harp: | | |
| Corelli—Gigue | 3 | 0 |
| Couperin—Sarabande | 1 | 6 |
| TORGERSON, H.—Bourrée | 1 | 6 |
| Contentement | 2 | 0 |
| Valse de concert | 2 | 0 |

VOCAL

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| CANTELOUBE.—Chants d'Auvergne: | | |
| Berceuse | 1 | 6 |
| Bourrée | 2 | 0 |
| Le Boussu | 2 | 0 |
| CARTAN, J.—5 Poèmes de T. Klingsor. No. 5, Paysage | 2 | 6 |
| CHAPUIS, A.—Chansons populaires: | | |
| Le Charpentier du Roi | 1 | 6 |
| Dialogue des Métamorphoses | 1 | 6 |
| DELANNOY, M.—Le Voyageur (Poèmes d'A. Germain, No. 1) | 2 | 6 |
| FAIRCHILD, BLAIR.—Le Message (Poème Chinois). English and French. Mezzo-Soprano | 1 | 6 |
| IBERT, J.—Quatre Chants, No. 3, Familière | 2 | 0 |
| No. 4, Fête Nationale | 1 | 6 |
| MILHAUD, D.—Prières journalières. No. 2, Prière de l'après-dîner | 2 | 6 |
| No. 3, Prière du soir | 1 | 6 |

ORGAN

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| BEETHOVEN.—Andante from fifth Symphony (arranged by Hoyer) | 2 | 0 |
| WIDOR, C. M.—Suite latine, Op. 86 | 8 | 0 |

In addition to their own extensive catalogue, Messrs. Novello & Co. have a large stock of foreign publications, the comprehensive nature of which can be judged by the following list:

PIANOFORTE—Solos, duets, &c., transcriptions and arrangements of all kinds.

VOCAL—Operatic, concert, and classical solos, duets, glees, exercises, vocal scores of operas, oratorios, &c., and orchestral parts.

ORGAN—Original compositions, transcriptions, and arrangements, in volumes and separately.

HARMONIUM—Duos, trios, quartets, transcriptions, &c.

INSTRUMENTAL—Solos, duets, trios, quartets, &c.

ORCHESTRAL—Scores and parts, miniature scores, pianoforte arrangements, studies, exercises, &c., for all instruments.

Inquiries for little-known or unknown works will be welcomed, and any compositions not in stock can be obtained at short notice.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

CHAPPELL & Co.'s
LATEST SONG SUCCESSES

FOR ALL VOICES.

BIRD SONGS AT EVENTIDE.
G (D-E), B flat ... ... ... Eric Coates

LITTLE LADY OF THE MOON.
E flat (B flat-E flat), F, G ... ... Eric Coates

I THINK OF YOU, MY SWEET.
F (C-D), A flat ... ... ... Haydn Wood

BELOVED, I SHALL WAIT.
D flat (C-D flat), E flat, F ... ... Guy d'Hardelot

FLOW'R OF THE DESERT.
C (C-E), D ... ... ... ... Hermann Lohr

SUNDAY.
D (A-F sharp), F ... ... ... Molly Carew

A GARDEN IS A LOVESOME THING.
A (C sharp-D sharp), C ... ... Teresa del Riego

TREES.
C (A-E), D, F ... ... ... Oscar Rasbach

FOR SOPRANOS AND MEZZOS.

THE TIME OF ROSES.
C mi. (D-E), D mi., E mi. ... Roger Quilter

APRIL IS A LADY.
D flat (C-F), E flat, F ... Montague F. Phillips

SUN-FLAKES.
F (C-F), G ... ... ... Montague F. Phillips

OVER THE MEADOW.
D (D-F sharp), F ... ... ... Molly Carew

FOR BARITONES AND BASSES.

THE HAPPY MAN.
B flat (A-D), C ... ... Thomas F. Dunhill

THE LITTLE SHIPS.
B flat (B flat-D), C, E flat Raymond Loughborough

ARCHIE OF THE ROYAL AIR FORCE.
E flat (B flat-E flat), F ... ... Ernest Longstaffe

THE PRIDE OF TIPPERARY.
C (C-D), D, F ... ... ... A. Lochhead

The compass of the first key is given in brackets.

Price 2/- net each (by post 2/1).

CHAPPELL & CO., Ltd., 50, New Bond Street, London, W.1.
NEW YORK AND SYDNEY.

NEW PUBLICATIONS FOR THE PIANO

JOHN LOCKE "CHARIVARI." 3/-

1. AN OLD PORTRAIT
2. THE FAIRY RING
3. TOBY TONGUE-IN-THE-CHEEK
4. MAITRE RENARD
5. MISCHIEF
6. FILIGREE

A delightful set of modern piano pieces which, by their variety and the resourcefulness of their treatment, display the composer's imaginative personality. The fact that they are only moderately difficult makes them accessible to most players, and gives them a definite value for educational purposes; teachers nowadays cannot afford to disregard new tendencies such as atonality and polytonality, if their pupils are to be equipped for the problems that confront them in modern music, and no more pleasant initiation into these mysteries could be imagined than "Charivari."

ERWIN SCHULHOFF "SONATA No. 2." 4/-

This is both a typical and peculiarly successful work by a Czech composer. It shows a very distinct individuality, the most engaging qualities of which are high spirits, an attractive if somewhat cynical humour, neatness and economy of workmanship, a refreshing absence of preconceived technical notions, and an unfailing sprightliness of invention.

READY SHORTLY:

Two New Pieces by SELIM PALMGREN

PRELUDE-NOCTURNE ... 2/- PRELUDE-CAPRICE ... 1/6

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD., 11, Great Marlborough Street, London, W.1

London:—Printed by Novello and Company, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1, Saturday, March 31, 1928.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,023—Vol. 69. Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

MAY 1 1928

Price 6d.; Postage, 2d.

Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

(Season, 1928-1929.)

There are now VACANCIES in the CHOIR for SOPRANOS, CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. Applicants should have STRONG VOICES OF GOOD QUALITY, and must be prepared to pass an examination in SIGHT-READING. Address, The Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.7.

The Royal College of Music

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING / HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, C.V.O., M.A., D.Mus., D.Litt.

MIDSUMMER HALF-TERM

THE MIDSUMMER HALF-TERM will commence on Monday, June 11th, 1928.

COMPLETE MUSICAL EDUCATION
is provided by Teachers of the highest eminence.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT
Classes are held for pupils under sixteen, whose time is also occupied by their general education.

SPECIAL CLASSES ARE HELD FOR:
Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet.

OPERATIC CLASSES
The College possesses a fully equipped College Opera Theatre for an audience of 600.

SCHOLARSHIPS, EXHIBITIONS
Upwards of 70 Scholarships and Exhibitions are provided from a permanent endowment fund.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES
There are Vocal and Instrumental Ensemble Classes, and Pupils sufficiently advanced in this work are given the opportunity of putting their knowledge into practice at College Concerts.

A.R.C.M.

Examinations for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) are held three times a year, in September, December, and April.

Full particulars obtainable from the Registrar.

Guildhall School of Music

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting, Fencing, French Classical Drama.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £12 12s. and £14 14s. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons:
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.
H.R.H. THE PRINCESS LOUISE (Duchess of Argyll)

President:
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.

Principal:
JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M

MIDSUMMER TERM

BEGAN MONDAY, 30th APRIL

MIDSUMMER HALF-TERM

BEGINS MONDAY, 11TH JUNE

SPECIAL COURSES FOR

CONDUCTORS
OPERATIC SINGERS.

STUDENTS' ORCHESTRA.—Conducted by SIR HENRY J. WOOD, D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE. The Examination for the SPECIAL DIPLOMA IN TEACHING MUSIC will be held in July.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES.

SCHOLARSHIPS. 72 Scholarships and Exhibitions.

L.R.A.M. EXAMINATIONS.—Summer, Christmas, and Easter vacations.

Prospectuses and full particulars from
A. ALGER BELL, Secretary.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

BAMBRIDGE PIANOFORTE SCHOLARSHIP, VALUE £100 A YEAR.

A Competition open to British subjects of either sex for this Scholarship, tenable at the College in London, will be held in July next; last day of entry, July 7th.

Candidates must be not less than seventeen nor over twenty-one years of age.

The Examination consists of:

1. The performance of two or more Pianoforte pieces, names of which must be submitted for approval;
2. Reading at sight;
3. Viva voce questions on Rudiments and Form;
4. Ear-Tests.

Full particulars of this and other Scholarships, with entry forms, may be obtained from the Secretary, Trinity College of Music, Mandeville Place, London, W.1.

MR. HERBERT HODGE will give an Organ Recital (1,993rd) at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, on May 1st, and every Tuesday at 1 p.m.

The Royal College of Organists

The SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Toccata in D minor (Dorian), J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 10, p. 196; Augener, p. 360; Peters, Vol. 3, No. 3.)

Prelude (in form of a Chaconne), Op. 88, No. 2, Stanford. (Stainer & Bell.)

Romanza, "La Reine de France," Haydn. (Best's arrangements, Vol. 1, p. 199.)

The selected pieces for the July, 1928, A.R.C.O. Examination, differ from those set for January, 1928.

All candidates for the next examinations must send in their names for FELLOWSHIP by JUNE 7TH, for ASSOCIATESHIP by JUNE 14TH. In the case of NEW MEMBERS, proposal forms, duly filled up, must be sent in before MAY 31ST. No names will be entered after the above dates.

An examination for the SIR JOHN GOSS SCHOLARSHIP will be held at the College on June 9th. The successful candidate will be entitled to Three years' free tuition at the Royal Academy of Music. Candidates must be either Choristers or ex-Choristers, and under 17 years of age on the date of examination. Entries must be received before May 19th; further particulars may be obtained at the College.

HISTORICAL LECTURE ORGAN RECITALS will be given at the College by Dr. A. Eaglefield Hull, on Saturday afternoons, May 5th, 12th, and 19th, at 3.30 p.m. Members and those interested are invited to attend. Admission free, no tickets required. A collection will be made in aid of the Organists' Benevolent League.

TWO LECTURES ON CHOIR-TRAINING will be delivered at the College on Tuesday, May 15th, at 3 p.m., by Dr. W. H. Harris, and at 6.30, by Dr. E. Bullock. These lectures will be free to Members, and those interested. No tickets required.

For the convenience of members, past examination papers have been bound in one volume: Fellowship and Associateship Organ Work, January, 1913, to July, 1927; Paper Work, July, 1924, to July, 1927. Price 4*s.*, to be obtained by members only.

Examination Regulations, list of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College. Associateship or Fellowship, 6*d.* each (post free).

The College is open daily from 10 to 4, Saturdays 10 to 1, except for Whitsun Vacation, May 24th to 29th.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

THE NEW SCHOOL OF MUSIC

26, WESTBOURNE GROVE, W.2

Tel.: PARK 7249

Patrons:

THE COUNTESS OF LAUDERDALE

THE LORD BLANESBURGH, G.B.E.

LADY NEISH

Directors:

G. R. GALSWORTHY, A.R.C.M. J. M. SYMONS, M.C., A.R.C.M.

MISS M. E. GALSWORTHY, A.R.C.M.

Day and Evening Tuition in Singing, Piano, Strings, Wind Instruments, &c., and Theory, Composition, Ear-Training, Sight-Reading, Memorising, Elocution, &c.

ORCHESTRAS AND CHORUS

OPEN TO NON-STUDENTS

PREPARATION FOR R.A.M. and R.C.M. EXAMINATIONS

Prospectus on application to the Secretary.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, MRS. MARION COLE, Secretary.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE

SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D. Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1927-1928

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.

Paradise Street, Birmingham.

GLASGOW ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC

SESSION 1927-28

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 12 to December 3, December 5 to March 10, and March 12 to June 8.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes.
Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS

FOUNDED 1913

PRESIDENT FOR 1928: J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, are eligible. Register of vacant appointments. All particulars on application to the Hon. Secretary.

De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

Manchester School of Music

Founded by J. A. CROSS (1892)

Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.
Director: LEOPOLD H. CROSS, M.A.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras. Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, Aural Training, &c.

Students prepared for all Royal Academy and Trinity College Exams.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING.

12,000 WORDS. ILLUSTRATED METHOD.
2*s.* 6*d.* Post free; Abroad, 3*s.* Pre-eminent Technique
It will thoroughly prepare you for the position of "Conductor."
M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool.

IS MEMORISING ESSENTIAL?

Alfred Cortot

Serge Koussevitzky

Vaclav Talich

Tobias Matthay

Harold Bauer

Myra Hess

Irene Scharrer

Leff Pouishnoff

Katharine Goodson

Stewart Macpherson

Ivor Newton

Adrian Boult

Maurice Cole

Maurice Besly

Percy Scholes

Keith Douglas

Rae Robertson

recommend the

MACKINNON COURSE.

It is not only essential—it is INEVITABLE.

Every time you practise you are memorising.

If you practise well, you are memorising good habits:

If you practise badly, you are memorising bad habits—that is the only difference.

All Practice is a work of Memory.

THE

Mackinnon Course

GUARANTEES SUCCESS.

By teaching you how to practise in the right way, it will not only render your memory supple and reliable, but it will inevitably improve your technique and your powers of interpretation.

Read what correspondents say:

"I had never tried to memorise in that way before, but you have shown me that it is the only sensible way after all, as well as the most interesting. Also, I find that it is helping my interpretation and sight-reading immensely."

"Not only has it taught me how to memorise everything, including fugue, but it has taught me how to work, and my musical and technical powers have developed consequently in a most gratifying way."

"My playing has improved, my teaching powers also."

"I no longer work in the dark, and my practice has become a very real thing to me with a corresponding improvement in playing from memory."

"Practice, Playing, and Listening—all have a different meaning to me since your lessons."

COMPLETE IN SIX POSTAL LESSONS FOR £3 : 3 : 0

SEND FOR FREE BOOKLET

(FIX COUPON INSIDE ENVELOPE).

TO MISS LILIAS MACKINNON, 1, Paultons Square, London, S.W.3.

Without any obligation on my part please send me your free booklet on "MEMORY TRAINING."

Name.....

Address.....

.....

ROYAL
MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC
Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY
Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are requested to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36 Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Coruse, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING
New Address: 2, Gray Street, Duke Street, W.1 (near Selfridge's).
President: A. NETTLEFOLD
Principal: DAVID GODELL

Instruction in all Vocal Subjects. Voice-curing Courses.

A thorough musical education if desired.

Two Free Scholarships to be competed for on Thursday, May 24th. All voices.

Particulars from Secretary, Miss MAIMIE M. HEATH. Mayfair 3819

ST. ANNE'S, SOHO

ORGAN RECITALS
ON THE NEW ORGAN

SATURDAY, MAY 5th, at 3 p.m.
DR. ERNEST BULLOCK,
Organist of Westminster Abbey.

SATURDAY, MAY 12th, at 3 p.m.
MR. A. W. GOLDSBROUGH, F.R.C.O.,
Organist of St. Martin-in-the-Fields.

SATURDAY, MAY 19th, at 3 p.m.
DR. ALCOCK,
Organist of Salisbury Cathedral.

NO TICKETS NEEDED.

EDWIN H. LEMARE

is paying a visit to England, and will be available for

ORGAN RECITALS

during July, August, and September.

For terms, vacant dates, &c., apply

Edwin H. Lemare, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd.,
160, Wardour Street, W.1.

"LONELINESS"
and other Essays, also extracts from Lectures on Singing delivered to the Students of the Royal Academy of Music, London.
By AGNES J. LARKCOM, F.R.A.M.
Price 4*s.* 6*d.*; postage, 4*d.* extra.
GERALD DUCKWORTH & CO.,
3, HENRIETTA ST., COVENT GARDEN, or any bookseller.

JOIN
THE ORGAN CLUB
PRESIDENT: J. MARTIN WHITE, ESQ.
AND VISIT
CANTERBURY CATHEDRAL, MAY 19.
ROEHAMPTON PARISH CHURCH, JUNE 9.
HOLY TRINITY, UPPER TOOTING, JULY 21.
Further attractive visits to follow.

Entrance Fee, 2s. 6d. Annual Subscription, 10s. 6d.

For full particulars apply Hon. Sec.,
28, HILLMORE GROVE, SYDENHAM, S.E.26.

LEEDS
MUSICAL FESTIVAL
OCTOBER 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 1928.

PATRONS:
His Majesty The King. Her Majesty The Queen.
His Royal Highness The Duke of York.
Her Royal Highness the Duchess of York.
Her Royal Highness Princess Mary Viscountess Lascelles.
The Right Hon. The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of Leeds (Mr. and Mrs. Ratcliffe), and many other distinguished Patrons.

CONDUCTORS:
SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, C.V.O., M.A., D.Mus.
SIR THOMAS BEECHAM, Bart.
FESTIVAL CHORUS,
Drawn from Leeds and other towns in the West Riding.
LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

A guarantee of £10 entitles Guarantors purchasing First Serial Tickets to the privilege of a first ballot for choice of such seats. Forms of guarantee can be had on application.

Prospectus and full details are now ready, and can be obtained from CHARLES F. HAIGH, 30, Bond Street, Leeds.

CONSERVATORY of BASLE
(SWITZERLAND)

DIRECTOR: FELIX WEINGARTNER.

TWO CLASSES OF CONDUCTING

Under the personal direction of
MR. FELIX WEINGARTNER.

1. CLASS FOR BEGINNERS, from the 1st of October, 1928, to the 30th of June, 1929.
2. MASTER-CLASS, in June, 1929, three lessons a week, of three hours each. Full Orchestra (professionals).

INFORMATION BY THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE CONSERVATORY.

FREE ADVICE.

ARTHUR MCALISTER, B.A. (Cantab.), Principal of the MODERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE, will be pleased to advise Students with regard to the following Examinations:

| | |
|---|---|
| Matric.: Mus. Bac. . . . | (Durham, London, Dublin, Oxford, Cambridge.) |
| Diplomas for Organists . . | A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L. |
| Diplomas in Theory . . . | A. Mus. T.C.L., L. Mus. T.C.L. L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. |
| Diplomas for Pianists . . | L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., L.T.C.L. |
| Diplomas for Teachers of Elocution and Singing | L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L. |
| Diplomas for Class Teachers | L.R.A.M. (Voice Culture and Class Singing). L.R.A.M. (Aural Training). A.R.C.M. (Musical Appreciation). |

Single Subjects. Tuition in any Subject connected with the above Examinations.

PLEASE STATE.

(1.) Exam. or Subject interested in.
(2.) Standard of Work.
(3.) Time available for Study.

FREE GUIDE.—DEGREES AND DIPLOMAS IN MUSIC.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE 20, SHERWIN RD., NOTTINGHAM.

The Pianist's Hands

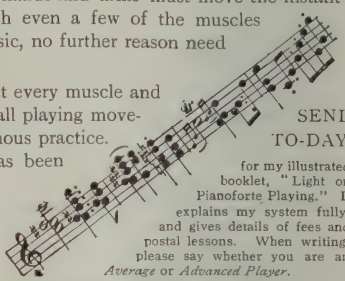
The Times says: "The excellence of Mr. Macdonald Smith's methods has been abundantly proved."

PREVALENT among pianists is the idea that you cannot play well unless you have a special sort of hand; this is a mistake. It is obvious, however, that the hands must be in perfect condition, otherwise the many technical difficulties to be overcome will be found insuperable. For a pianist every single muscle of the hands and arms must move the instant it is required to do so, and if this fails to be the case with even a few of the muscles brought into play in any complicated passage of music, no further reason need be sought to account for failure.

Let the "From Brain to Keyboard" System perfect every muscle and nerve in your hands and give you instant control over all playing movements without any of the usual drudgery and monotonous practice. Why not learn something about the System that has been used by many of our eminent musicians.



SEND TO-DAY for my illustrated booklet, "Light on Pianoforte Playing." It explains my system fully, and gives details of fees and postal lessons. When writing, please say whether you are an Average or Advanced Player.

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdona'd Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

M. C. MACDONALD SMITH, 94, GOWER STREET, LONDON, W.C.1

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.
London Address: 34, Spencer Hill, Wimbledon, S.W.19.
Please mention this paper when writing.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD"
SIGHT-READING LESSONS

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."

Music: "Goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint. Cannot fail to be of service."

A PUPIL WRITES: "Dr. —— tells me to practise more, and I feel all the time I am practising on the wrong lines, and not improving at all."

AFTER SECOND LESSON.—"I find I have more confidence, and Dr. —— says my reading is certainly more fluent. Your hints have helped me considerably at both organ and piano."—(F.R.C.O. Exam.)

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON,
and WEEKES'S STUDIOS, 14, HANOVER ST., W.1
('Phone: Croydon 2703)

"SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER

(Registered No. 692810)

FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

A simple and very effective appliance for giving strength and flexibility to the fingers.
Recommended by Editor of the Musical Times.

IMPROVED MODEL
Price 2*s.* 6*d.*; postage and packing, 3*d.*

BYEWAYS, CLIFF ROAD, SEABROOK, HYTHE, KENT.

THE TECHNIQUER

A BOON TO ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS
Invented and Patented by Mr. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.
BUSONI and THE TECHNIQUER

Extract from a letter:
"A pianist is not imaginable without hands. Their physical culture is therefore of importance.
In fact, there are some functions which belong exclusively to the mechanical department.
Mr. Pitcher's apparatus . . . proves helpful against stiffness and inflexibility of the hands. I wish his good results may ever increase."—FERRUCCIO BUSONI.

Send for list of testimonials and full particulars post free
"Hand Development," with 16 Photos, 1*s.* 6*d.*
Secretary: MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

PIANO REPAIRS. "WIGMORE HALL FINISH"

denotes a standard not obtainable elsewhere.

THE MOST HIGHLY SKILLED WORKMANSHIP.
THE FINEST MATERIALS (regardless of cost).
PERFECT SATISFACTION.

WIGMORE HALL AND PIANO GALLERIES, 32-40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

THE REVISION OF MSS. is UNDERTAKEN by musical critic and song composer. Lessons in piano, singing, theory. Herbert H. Nelson, 9, Grange Rd., Canonbury, N.1

REAL HELP FOR AN OLD, OLD PROBLEM

Years ago many Teachers actually prevented and discouraged pupils from memorising. Now one and all recognise its great importance and the development of interpretation which it affords. But how few teachers have a really good and definite system. Not one in a thousand! Many good performers — both amateur and professional—are at a standstill, are in a groove, just because they are unable to play from memory. Probably because memory-playing has not always occupied the important place in music that it now holds, the average player does not realise its possibilities. Is this so in your case? If it is, then the solution is a simple one; but you must take matters in your own hands and at once. The offers you the most direct way to achievement and is the most practical and efficient Course on memory-playing it is possible to obtain. If you are really ambitious to succeed in music, then write to me to-day. My Free Book (post free) is yours for the asking. It contains much striking information of interest to everyone, and is worth many times over the effort in securing it. Just send me a post-card telling me if you are a moderate or advanced player, and whether you play the Piano, Violin, 'Cello, or Organ, as there is a separate and distinct Course for each instrument. Every student receives my personal guarantee of success.

MASTER-METHOD OF MEMORY-PLAYING

Send for this Free Booklet

REGINALD FOORT, F.R.C.O.,
194 Beacon House, Hemstal Rd., London, N.W.6.

NORTHERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal:
ALBERT JOWETT, Mus. Bac., Oxon.

COACHING FOR EXAMINATIONS:
Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Trinity College, &c.
Many notable Successes,
amongst which was the celebrated Composer and Pianist,
WILLIAM BAINES,
who was entirely trained by Mr. JOWETT.

PIANOFORTE PLAYING AND INTERPRETATION.
SINGING, VOICE-PRODUCTION AND INTERPRETATION.
PERSONAL LESSONS IN LEEDS AND NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.
Including all Modern Work: Italian, French, German, Spanish, &c.
COMPLETE COURSE IN COMPOSITION.

A simple and completely successful system of
SIGHT READING.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS:
"Your splendid lessons."
After fifth lesson: "I have received considerable enlightenment."

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.
LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, ACCOMPANIMENTS WRITTEN TO SONGS.

State Exam. or Subject.

HEATHFIELD, MOORLAND DRIVE, HARROGATE ROAD, LEEDS

A revolution
IN PIANO-TEACHING:
G. KUGLER'S
PIANOFORTE METHOD

COMPILED IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE LATEST PRINCIPLES OF MUSICAL EDUCATION. PART I. 3/- PART II. 3/-

Teachers will receive a free specimen copy by filling the Coupon below, or asking any Music-seller to procure one

HUG & Co (Music Publishers), LEIPSIC, Germany.

MESSRS. HUG & CO., LEIPSIC.
Please send me free a specimen copy of G. Kugler's "Pianoforte Method."
Name.....
(Mr., Mrs., or Miss).
Address.....

A MUCH APPRECIATED OFFER TO MUSICIANS

Grove's DICTIONARY OF MUSIC and Musicians.

is now obtainable for a first payment of only

7/6

Scores of Musicians who realise the great utility of this work are now enrolled as subscribers under our payment-out-of-income system.

NEW (THIRD) EDITION in

5 Volumes

handsomely bound in Cloth or Half Morocco.

Over 4,000 pages.

96 full-page illustrations (24 in colour).

GOUNOD

A NOTABLE TRIBUTE:

"I had, of course, seen the unanimous praise that the press had given to the new edition, but I was delighted to find how really good it is. You should be thanked by all who value the fine things of life, for placing this most excellent work within their reach."—*A Bath Subscriber, February, 1928.

SOME OF THE NEW ARTICLES INDICATING THE RANGE BOTH OF SUBJECT AND CONTRIBUTOR

ANTHEM, by Rev. E. H. Fellowes, Mus. Doc.
BACH, by Prof. Sanford Terry, Mus. Doc., Aberdeen University.
BALLET DANCING, by D. L. Murray.
BELLS, by W. W. Starmer.
BRAILLE NOTATION, by Ed. Watson, Secretary, Music Department, National Institute for the Blind.
BYZANTINE MUSIC, by Prof. H. J. W. Tillyard, Birmingham University.
COPYRIGHT, by G. Herbert Thring.
DEBUSSY, by Dr. Ernest Walker.
DEGREES IN MUSIC (American), by Prof. W. A. Spalding, Harvard University.
DVOŘÁK, by Dr. Otakar Šourek, of Prague.
ELGAR, by the Editor.
FRANCK, by Harvey Grace.
HANDEL, by Scott Goddard.
HARMONY, by Dr. George Dyson.
HOLST, by Edwin Evans.
INDIAN MUSIC, by A. H. Fox-Strangways.
MADRIGAL, by Prof. E. J. Dent, of Cambridge University.
MASS (Mediæval), by the Bishop of Truro, D.D., C.R.
ORCHESTRATION, by William Wallace.
ORGAN-PLAYING, by Prof. P. C. Buck, Mus. Doc., London University.
STRAUSS, by A. Kalisch.
STRAVINSKY, by ERIC BLOM.
SYMPHONY (Modern Developments), by Richard Aldrich, New York.
THOROUGHBASS, by F. T. Arnold.

Exhaustive and thoroughly up-to-date information on every aspect of music and musicians.

To the GLOBE PUBLISHING CO., Ltd.,
112, Strand, London, W.C.2
(Use unsealed envelope, ½d. stamp.)
Please send me Prospectus of the New Grove's Dictionary of Music, with full particulars of payment-out-of-income, and discount for cash.
Name.....
Address.....
M.T. 20. .....

POST THIS COUPON

TO-DAY for Free Illustrated BOOKLET

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES

MISS WINIFRED DENHAM (A.R.C.M.)

SOPRANO.

"A clear, well-produced voice—exceedingly well sung."—Musical Standard.

"Her extraordinary, bird-like purity and clarity."—Surrey Advertiser.

"Possesses a voice of remarkable purity and strength."—Surrey Advertiser.

41, Avondale Road, South Croydon. 'Phone: Croydon 2703.

BLANCHE ALLEN

SOPRANO.

"A good and charming soprano voice made listening a pleasure."—Birmingham Post.

Future bookings: Pump Room, Leamington; Bexhill "Colonnade."
ORATORIO, OPERA, CONCERTS, MASONICS.
36, Albany Road, W.13. Tel.: Ealing 4756.

MISS LYDIA JOHN

(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.

Lecture-Recitals of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Professor of Voice-Production and Singing.
Pupils prepared for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., Scholarships and Festivals.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Lessons given at above address or West-End Studio, Cricklewood Conservatoire of Music, N.W.2; and Highbury Conservatoire, N.5, &c. Primrose 3869.

HAROLD KNOWLTON

TENOR.
Soloist, St. Paul's Cathedral.
Shirley, Park Road, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

WILLIAM LOMAS

(Late Royal College of Music, Manchester)
TENOR,
GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL.
ORATORIO, OPERA, BALLAD, AND SACRED.
45, St. Mary Street, Gloucester.

VERNON HARRISS

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medalist. BASS.
Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.
Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING.

ALBERT GARCIA

CARRIES ON THE TRADITIONS OF HIS GRANDFATHER, THE LATE MANUEL GARCIA.
STUDIO: 59, QUEEN'S ROAD, N.W.8.

H. N. HORTON

F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.
GIVES LESSONS IN PIANOFORTE AND SINGING
SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO VOICE PRODUCTION
Apply for particulars,
Messrs. Weekes's Studios, 14, Hanover Street, W.1.; or 515, London Road, Thornton Heath.

MISS MARY LINDSAY

L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing.
Moderate Terms.
26, Onslow Square, S.W.7. Tel.: Kensington 3627.

MISS IRENE BRETTELL

PUPIL OF PROF. SEVČIK.
Teaches his Violin Method. NEW TERM, APRIL 27.
Studio, Berners Street, W.1. Apply, 352, Camden Road, N.7.

E. SIMS-HILDITCH

LECTURER AND ADJUDICATOR.
Address, 37 Victoria Street, Crewe.

MISS PITT SOPER F.R.A.M.

Professor of Singing, Royal Academy of Music, London.
Prepares Candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Examinations (Teachers and Performers).
For particulars, apply Wigmore Hall Studios.

TO COMPOSERS

NICHOLAS GATTY

MUS. DOC. CANTAB.
Is prepared to undertake the revision and arrangement of MSS., and to advise on any matter concerning composition and orchestration.
For terms, &c., apply, 12, Upper George Street, W.1.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.

Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London,
Gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to Candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1. Langham 3909.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF

SOLO PIANIST.
RUSSIAN MUSIC.
CONCERTS AND RECITALS.
TALKS AT THE PIANO.
For terms, apply to
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

MR. J. C. BRYDSON, Mus.B.

SPECIAL POSTAL COURSES (10*s.* 6*d.* FOR TEN LESSONS).
1. Harmony Course on Macpherson's "Melody and Harmony."
2. Counterpoint Course.

Owing to success of above the following have been prepared:
3. Rudiments Course.
4. Course on Harris's "Harmonizing Melodies."

(A "Compound Course" of any of above can also be taken.
DEGREE AND DIPLOMA COURSES from £1 1*s.* FOR TEN LESSONS.
"Balcary," KEGWORTH, near Derby.

YOUNG MUS. DOC.

COACHES BY CORRESPONDENCE.
ALL branches of Music, including Paper Work for Professional and Higher Examinations.
Send stamped, addressed envelope and specimen of work for FREE LESSON.
FEES FROM 2*s.* EACH LESSON.
"H. K." c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1

MARGARET YOUNG, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L.
Registered, Pianoforte, Singing, Theory.
Personal or Postal Coaching. General Musical Advice.
Bawburgh, Norwich.

GEORGE A. ARMSTRONG, Mus. Bac., A.R.M.C.M., L.Mus. T.C.L. Correspondence Lessons in all subjects. Preparation for diplomas. 131, Warbreck Drive, Blackpool, N.S.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight-Reading Courses, Study Aids, 9*d.* Studies in Modulation, 3*s.*
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B. Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Street, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teacher of Singing), prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations. Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

POSTAL TUITION by F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L. (Registered Teacher). Any Exam. One guinea ten lessons. Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, &c. Courses in History, Choir-Training, Aural Tests, Analysis, R.C.O. exams. Recent successes, F.R.C.O., July, 1927; A.R.C.O., January, 1928. Address: BM/JRMB, London, W.C.1.

PAPER WORK BY Mus. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1,100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS
"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."
SUCCESSES (with those for January, 1928) include 3 F.R.C.O. (1 for Jan., 1928). 3 A.R.C.O. 2 L.R.A.M.
2*s.* 6*d.* per lesson and postage.
"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-27... 324 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-27... 88 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work. (25 Successes.)
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint. (21 Successes.)

(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Organist and Musical Director, The City Temple), 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17. Telephone: Battersea 0916.

Special preparation for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Also L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. ORGAN EXAMINATIONS.

SINGLE LESSONS and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. inst. Also large four-manual organ. Pieces registered and phrased.

RECENT SUCCESSES IN ORGAN WORK:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | L.R.A.M., Dec., 1919 | 3 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 1 | A.R.C.M., April, 1920. | 1 | A.R.C.O., July, 1921 |
| 1 | L.R.A.M., April, 1924. | 3 | A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 1 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 1 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 1 | F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 4 | A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 1 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 3 | A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 2 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 3 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 5 | A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 1 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 3 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 4 | F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 4 | A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 4 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 2 | F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 4 | A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 4 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. | 5 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |

"Hints for R.C.O. Candidates" to be obtained from the Publishers, Reid Bros., 26, Eastcastle Street, Oxford Circus, W.1. 2/8 post free.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., PIANOFORTE.—Special Coaching by Arthur Ellershaw, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

FREDERICK GREEN, Mus. B., F.R.C.O., &c. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator Prep. for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. 1, Newington, Liverpool.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 413 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and the paper-work requirements for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas in pianoforte playing. For terms, &c., apply to 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922, L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

TO COMPOSERS.—Complete and systematic course, by correspondence, in Military Band Instrumentation. Write, Captain Charles Hoby, M.B.E., Mus. Doc., Oxon., Director of Music, Royal Marine Barracks, Chatham.

DR. W. HUNT, Mus. D. Durham (1926), F.R.C.O. Gives Lessons by Correspondence, for degrees and diplomas in music. Thorpe Road, Melton Mowbray.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, Sept., 1927, Mus. Doc., 3 Final Mus. Bac., and three 1st Mus. Bac. passes. Also in 1927—4 Mus. Doc. and 3 Mus. Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition. 200 successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London.

SUCCESSES IN ORGAN PLAYING SINCE 1910:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1910 | ... | 8 | 1919 | ... | 11 |
| 1911 | ... | 10 | 1920 | ... | 7 |
| 1912 | ... | 20 | 1921 | ... | 9 |
| 1913 | ... | 18 | 1922 | ... | 15 |
| 1914 | ... | 25 | 1923 | ... | 15 |
| 1915 | ... | 25 | 1924 | ... | 7 |
| 1916 | ... | 18 | 1925 | ... | 14 |
| 1917 | ... | 2 | 1926 | ... | 11 |
| 1918 | ... | 3 | 1927 | ... | 12 |

5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

MR. C. E. de M. LEATHES, M.A., Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O. Tuition in Piano, Harmony, Composition, &c. Pupils successfully prepared for all examinations. Cramer's Studios, 139, Bond Street, W.1, and 128, Kensington High St., W.8.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, Mus. Doc., University of Toronto; F.R.C.O., F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons. Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning" prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.

10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Specialist in Pianoforte Playing, Touch, Technique, and Interpretation. Thirty years' experience in preparing for examinations. More than 1,000 of Dr. Middleton's pupils have gained Degrees and Diplomas. Address: Weekes' Studios, 14, Hanover Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 23 pupils' successes Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A. Performer and Teacher.
Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering." 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6d.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture, Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes. 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

DR. A. E. TAYLOR. PUPIL GAINED STILLIE Bursary for Cpt.; Gold Medal for Cpt., Ass. Board; Gold Medal for Har., Ass. Board; C. C. Scholarship; A.R.C.O., A.T.C.L., Mus. B. Compositions revised and accompaniments written. Portland Place, Lancaster.

"BY CORRESPONDENCE"

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING, Mus. Doc., Lond., L.R.A.M.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work
(3.) Touch, and Technique (for Pianoforte Diplomas)
(4.) Trinity College Diplomas
(5.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O.
(6.) Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. (London and Durham)
(7.) Separate Subjects
NUMEROUS SUCCESSES.
Dr. SPRANKLING also gives PERSONAL LESSONS in Bristol and London. Special Coaching for all Pianoforte Diplomas.
Address: Dr. NORMAN SPRANKLING, 46, Clarendon Road, Redland, Bristol. Telephone: Bristol 3033.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) Mus. Bac. Degree.
Several recent successes in all these examinations.
R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."
SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.
319 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
189 F.R.C.O. " " "
RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. | 10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. | 7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921. | 8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. | 9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928 | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS (all music Exams.) by recognised and well-qualified Professor. 1s. 6d. per lesson, and postage. Stamp for specimen. Composers advised and assisted. "W. H. D.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TO SINGERS.—ITALIAN, GERMAN, and FRENCH LESSONS. Purest accent, acquired abroad. Moderate terms. Box 14, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CONTRALTO WANTED.—Synagogue, North London. Saturday afternoon Service: Wednesday rehearsal. Some week-day festivals essential. £15. Good reader. Apply, E. Gordon, 107, Dynevor Road, N.16.

TENOR and ALTO WANTED for City Church. £15. Fridays, 6.30; Sundays, 11 and 6.30. State experience. Box 32, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TENOR and ALTO REQUIRED URGENTLY. Light duties. Remuneration £15 p.a. Apply, Organist, Christ Church, Woburn Square, W.C.1.

TENOR WANTED.—Standard Solos. Reader. Church, N.W. Salary, £20 to £30. Write, "Precentor," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TENOR WANTED for Nonconformist Church, Crouch End, N. £20. Apply, Dr. Eric H. Thiman, 28, Manor Drive, Wembley Park.

TENOR WANTED.—St. Mary's Parish Church, Wimbledon. Plain Services. £14. Write, Moore, 190, South Park Road, S.W.19.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE, Oxford. Vacancy for Academical CLERK (Singing Scholarship) next October. Tenor Voice. Competition on May 24th. For particulars write, Rev. Dean of Divinity.

URGENT.—TENOR and BASS WANTED for Holy Trinity Church, Grays Inn Road. Offered £5 or expenses. Write, The Rector, 27, John Street, Bedford Row.

ORGAN CLASS (Saturdays 2 p.m.)
ORGAN LESSONS by well-qualified teacher, on large organ, situated within easy access of City and West-End. Organists desiring individual high-class tuition at very moderate fees, should write to "R. C. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1, for full particulars of the above.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—1s. 4d. an hour (pupils, 9d.). Hydraulic-blown, two-manual and pedal organ, at the Fulham School of Music, 2, Edgarley Terrace, S.W.6.
ORGAN LESSONS at ST. STEPHEN'S WALBROOK, E.C.4. GEORGE METZLER, F.R.C.O. Tel.: Putney 4208.

ORGAN PHOTOS.—Royal Albert Hall, Queen's Hall, St. Paul's Cathedral, and scores more of equal importance. Any organ can be taken. G. Benham, "Bramerton," New Barnet.

R.C.O. EXAMS.—Finishing lessons given on replica of R.C.O. organ at National Institute for the Blind, London. Apply, Mr. H. V. Spanner, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., 79, Crofton Road, London, S.E.5. Candidates are advised to apply early.

ASSISTANT-ORGANIST REQUIRED for St. John's Church, Red Lion Square. Opportunity for studying Plainsong accompaniment. Free tuition and organ practice. Honorarium when left in charge. Apply, Organist, 9, Fisher Street, Red Lion Square, W.C.1.

EXPERIENCED ORGANIST.—Willing to deputise during August and September. If good organ, and musical Service; pleasant district. Remuneration nominal. Apply, "B. G.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

LOCUM ORGANIST, A.R.C.O., can deputise, abroad or at home, from July 23 to August 18. Box 34, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST, CHOIRMASTER, and CONDUCTOR of Orchestra (experienced) WANTED for Congregational Church, Harrogate. £85 p.a. Send qualifications and experience to Secretary.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for Wesley Church, Babbacombe Road, Torquay. Apply, by letter only, stating experience, qualifications, and salary required, to Rev. Winbolt Harding, Woodland Leigh, Torquay.

ORGANIST WILLING TO WORK WITH qualified Choirmaster required for Congregational Church in N.W. London. Acceptance of other engagements can be arranged. £25 p.a. Apply by letter to "Choirmaster," 2, Radnor Road, Brondesbury Park, N.W.6.

WANTED.—ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, for Glenorchy Congregational Church. Apply, Church Secretary, 2, Barnfield Avenue, Exmouth.

WOULD ORGANIST living on South or South-East Coast consider an EXCHANGE of HOUSES with London Organist for a month—August or early September? Box 33, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

WILL ANY GENTLEMEN OFFER their Services as Choirmaster for a North London Parish. Apply, Vicar, 34, Canonbury Park South, N.1.

PRACTICE on West-End Church organ offered in return for occasional help. Box 33, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSIC MASTER, L.R.A.M., Pianoforte, &c., desires Visiting (or Resident) Post, School, &c., in any district. "H.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PIANOFORTE TEACHING (Matthay Method), by Mr. Ernest Kynaston, L.R.A.M., A.T.C.L. Apply, 25, Homefield Road, Wimbledon, S.W.19.

YOUNG COMPOSER WISHES TO MEET young musician expert in orchestration, to collaborate in arranging new work for orchestra. Write, Box 35, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED
LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.
For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS, Glenholme, Hessle High Road, Hull, Yorks.

AURAL TESTS.—MOST IMPORTANT PAPER. All the leading Examinations. Shows how to train up in order to pass the tests. Very successful. Send P.O. 4s. 6d. to "Aural Tests," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ESSAY.—A.R.C.O., July next. Secure now. New Series of 6 Model Essays on the book set for the Exam.: Success assured. Also valuable "hints" on writing the Essay. Enclose 4s. 6d. to "Essays," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

BAND PARTS ARRANGED, Songs, Solos, &c. COPYING of any description by retired Conductor. Coulton, 7, Museum Street, Warrington.

MUSIC COPYING, Transposition, Arrangements, Band Parts, &c., Smith, 40, Coniston Rd., Muswell Hill, N.10.

MUSIC COPIED.—Neat and correct work. 6d. 12 lines. Transposing. "Hermes," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSIC DUPLICATING.—All kinds, any number; perfect copies. Specimens and prices on application to E. Herrick, at 37, Amherst Road, West Ealing, W.

'CELLO AND BOW, in excellent condition. Canvas and box cases. £15. Herbert Brown, Farringford Pinner.

FOR SALE.—BECHSTEIN GRAND. Ebonized case; perfect condition. Full particulars, apply, "X.Y.Z.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—CHAPPELL BABY GRAND PIANOFORTE. Condition as new, beautiful tone; cost £250 in 1922, accept £120. Can be seen any time. Moyce, 4, Amesbury Road, Bickley. Phone: Ravensbourne 2612-3.

FOR SALE.—LARGE PIANO, with Organ Pedals (Norman & Beard pneumatic attachment). £35, complete. Carriage, &c. extra. On view. Apply, Mr. Herbert Westerby, "Sandon," Erith, S.E. Kent.

FOR SALE.—VIRGIL CLAVIER. Good condition; also Instruction Books. Six guineas. Apply, "C. R.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—ELECTRO-PNEUMATIC action 3-Manual Chamber Organ by Messrs. Norman & Beard, erected 1902, now standing in the Hall of a Country House in Bedfordshire. With 6 Stops to the Great Organ; 6 Stops to the Swell Organ; 6 Stops to the Choir Organ; 2 Stops to the Pedal Organ, with the usual couplers. Detached Console in oak, fitted with stop-keys. Radiating and concave pedals. Blowing apparatus consists of three feeders driven by 1-h.p. direct current electric motor. Price, £400. Open to consider reasonable offer. For further particulars, apply to George P. Allen, F.R.I.B.A., Architect, 31, High Street, Bedford.

FOR SALE.—£250. Two-Manual ORGAN, now in use at St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle. Seven Stops, three Couplers, Tremulant; hand blown. Suit Church or Chamber. Write, Sir Walford Davies, c/o The Chapter Clerk, The Cloisters, Windsor Castle.

FOR SALE.—TWO-MANUAL REED ORGAN by Holt, with hydraulic engine. 4 Swell, 4 Great, 2 Pedal; 5 couplers. Balance swell. Built to Willis's measurements, and in perfect order. £150. "Organist," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN for SALE.—Two-Manuals, Pedals, 12 Stops. Suit Mission, small Church, &c. Bargain, £25. Apply, Clewer, 69, Hibbert Road, Leyton, E.10.

ORGAN, Small Pipe, 5 Stops, hand blown.—Suit small Church or Chapel. Apply, "W. L.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN, TWO-MANUAL, Reed, 19 Stops, £25. E. C. Faithful, 92, Hatfield Road, St. Albans.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

ORGAN PEDALS FOR PIANO, Rummens, with Stool, complete. In good order and condition. 16, Glencoe Street, Hull.

HARP FOR SALE.—J. A. Stumpff, maker. 8 Pedals, 43 strings. HARP FOR SALE.—Bond, London. Apply, "H.," c/o W. H. Smith & Son, Bookshop, Ashbourne.

THE UNIVERSAL CANTICLE CHANT BOOK. Founded on the Ancient themes. No treble note above D. 25, £1. Prof. Birch, Wincanton.

THE TONIC SOL-FA COLLEGE

(Incorporated 1875.)

26, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.1.

President: SIR W. H. HADOW, C.B.E., M.A., Litt. D., LL. D., Mus. D. (Vice-Chancellor of the University of Sheffield.)

A CONFERENCE on the Board of Education's latest published Suggestions for the Teaching of Music will be held at the COLLEGE OF PRECEPTORS, BLOOMSBURY SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.1, on SATURDAY, MAY 19th, 1928, the Chair to be taken at 3 p.m. by SIR HENRY COWARD, M.A., Mus. D. (Oxon.), F.T.S.C. The Conference will be opened by MR. ROBERT McLEOD, Mus. B., F.R.C.O., F.T.S.C., of Edinburgh with an address on "THE ADVANTAGES OF TEACHING the STAFF TIME SYSTEM through the medium of the SOL-FA TIME NOTATION."

A hearty invitation is given to Supervisors and Teachers of Class Singing in Schools. Admission free, without ticket.

FERD. KUECHLER'S

(Teacher at the Leipsic Conservatory)

COURSE of VIOLIN INSTRUCTION

is a

TRIUMPH

of practical teaching

TO KNOW IT IS TO RECOMMEND IT

Send for a specimen copy from the publishers, or ask your music-seller to let you have one on approval.

HUG & Co.

MUSIC PUBLISHERS.

LEIPSIC

"THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS"

NARRATIVE TONE-POEM FOR ORGAN

BY

ERNEST AUSTIN

FOR the many celebrations of John Bunyan's Tercentenary, 1928, organists are reminded of ERNEST AUSTIN'S Narrative Poem for Organ, "THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS," in twelve Parts.

No more suitable music could be chosen for such occasions. Each Part can be played as a separate movement. The entire work is frequently performed in four Recitals—three Parts being played at each, with introductory addresses by the presiding Minister.

An explanatory Booklet by Ambrose P. Porter, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., Organist and Master of the Choir of Lichfield Cathedral, will be sent free, on application to the Publisher.

J. H. LARWAY, 2, PERCY ST., LONDON, W.1

To all interested in the improvement of Church Praise

TEN ORDERS OF WORSHIP

From the Book of Congregational Worship, with Music selected and composed

by

SIR H. WALFORD DAVIES

Paper Boards, 2/-. Cloth Boards, 3/-

PATERSON'S PUBLICATIONS, LTD.

GLASGOW: 152, BUCHANAN ST. LONDON: 95, WIMPOLE ST.
NEW YORK: 35, WEST 32ND STREET.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SONG

THE GENTLE STARS

WORDS TRANSLATED BY

P. J. O'REILLY

MUSIC BY

JOHN T. AULD

"A beautiful melodic gem."

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

Published by

W. PAXTON & CO., LTD.,
22, HIGH STREET, NEW OXFORD STREET,
LONDON, W.C.1.

CRAMER

MAGNIFICENT 1928
LATEST MODELS

| | |
|---|---|
| BABY GRAND ... | 120 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT GRAND | 65 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT PLAYER | 103 Gns. |

FULL SCALE
LATEST DEVICES

Write for our very generous Hire-Purchase Terms.

J. B. CRAMER & CO., Ltd.,
139 NEW BOND ST., W.1.
46 MOORGATE, E.C.2.
128/130 KENSINGTON HIGH STREET, W.8.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS

SET IX. JUST PUBLISHED

HYMNS AND TUNES

SETS PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED

PRICE SIXPENCE PER SET. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

SET I.

1. COME, CHILDREN, ON AND FORWARD ... ... G. C. MARTIN
2. FOR THE FRESHNESS OF THE MORNING ... LADY EUAN-SMITH
3. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ... ... FREDERIC CLAY
4. COME, O COME! IN FIOUS LAYS ... ... ... ...J. STAINER
5. THINE FOR EVER! GOD OF LOVE ... ... W. C. HARVEY
6. JESU, WHOM THY CHILDREN LOVE ... ... H. E. BUTTON
7. SWEETLY O'ER THE MEADOWS FAIR ... ... F. A. CHALLINOR
8. WOULD YOU GAIN THE BEST IN LIFE ... ... C. J. MAY
9. ON OUR WAY REJOICING ... ... ... WALTER B. GILBERT
10. NOW THE DAYLIGHT GOES AWAY ... ... ... J. ADCOCK

SET II.

1. AGAIN THE MORN OF GLADNESS... ... ... ...J. STAINER
2. THE ANGELS' SONG ... ... ... ... ALBERTO RANDEGGER
3. FORWARD, CHRISTIAN CHILDREN ... ... ... ALFRED MOFFAT
4. THE GOLDEN SHORE ... ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR ... ... ... JOHN E. WEST
6. ENTER WITH THANKSGIVING ... ... ... F. H. COWEN
7. MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE ... J. V. ROBERTS
8. STARS, THAT ON YOUR WONDROUS WAY ... ... J. STAINER
9. THE DAY IS PAST AND OVER ... ... ... JOSEPH BARNBY
10. GOD WILL TAKE CARE OF YOU ... ... F. R. HAVERGAL

SET III.

1. WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY ... ... ... J. BARNBY
2. HARK! HARK! THE ORGAN ... ... ... G. J. BENNETT
3. O WHAT CAN LITTLE HANDS DO? ... ... H. E. BUTTON
4. WHILE THE SUN IS SHINING ... ... ... T. ADAMS
5. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ... ... ... H. J. GAUNTLETT
6. THE ROSEATE HUES OF EARLY DAWN ... ... A. SULLIVAN
7. LORD, THY CHILDREN GUIDE ... ... ... A. S. COOPER
8. IN OUR WORK AND IN OUR PLAY ... ... F. WESTLAKE
9. THE BEAUTIFUL LAND ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
10. GENTLE JESUS, MEEK AND MILD ... ... ... J. STAINER

SET IV.

1. THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ENGLAND ... ... ... J. STAINER
2. THE CROWN IS WAITING ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
3. THE CITY OF LIGHT ... ... ... ... ...E. J. TROUP
4. HE DWELLS AMONG THE LILIES ... ... ...LADY EUAN-SMITH
5. GOD IS IN HEAVEN! CAN HE HEAR ... ... H. E. BUTTON
6. THE GOOD SHEPHERD ... ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
7. A LITTLE KINGDOM I POSSESS ... ... ... R. S. NEWMAN
8. RAISE YOUR STANDARD, BROTHERS ... ... ... E. J. TROUP
9. FLOWERS ... ... ... ... ... ALBERTO RANDEGGER
10. JESUS, TENDER SHEPHERD, HEAR ME ... ... H. PARKER

SET V.

1. CREATOR, GOD, AND LORD ... ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
2. WHEN LOVE DRAWS NEAR ... ... ... ... E. J. TROUP
3. COME, PRAISE YOUR LORD ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
4. WE WILL PRAISE THEE ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. ABOVE THE CLEAR BLUE SKY ... ... HERBERT E. CRIMP
6. WE THANK THEE, LORD ... ... ... ... W. C. HARVEY
7. COME, FRIENDS, THE WORLD WANTS MENDING ... E. J. TROUP
8. COME, SING WITH HOLY GLADNESS ... ... G. W. TORRANCE
9. THE LESSON OF LOVE ... ... ... ... ... J. BARNBY
10. NOW THE DAY IS OVER ... ... ... ... F. W. BLUNT

SET VI.

1. HOSANNA WE SING ... ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
2. HEAVENLY FATHER, SEND THY BLESSING ... W. C. HARVEY
3. BLESSED JESU, WE CAN SEE THEE ... ... ... A. ROWLEY
4. THE DAYS OF OLD ... ... ... ... ... ETHEL BOYCE
5. WHAT IS THE GIFT ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
6. WHILE OUR LORD WAS PASSING BY ... ... ETHEL BOYCE
7. THE EARTH IS FAIR AND SWEET ... ... ... A. ROWLEY
8. PILGRIMS OF THE NIGHT ... ... ... ... O. KING
9. THE HOLY LIGHT ... ... ... ... ... C. H. LLOYD
10. NOW SINKS THE SUN ... ... ... ... ... C. J. MAY

SET VII.

1. LIFE'S GLAD MORNING ... ... ... ... G. C. MARTIN
2. JESU, BLESSED SAVIOUR ... ... ... A. HERBERT BREWER
3. COME, CHRISTIAN YOUTHS ... ... ... HARVEY GRACE
4. THY WORD IS LIKE A GARDEN ... ... ... E. H. THIMAN
5. GOD OF MERCY, THRONED ON HIGH ... ... HARVEY GRACE
6. GOD OF OUR FATHERS ... ... ... ... E. J. HOPKINS
7. WHEN THE LORD OF LOVE ... ... ... E. H. THIMAN
8. CHILDREN OF GOD ... ... ... ... ... F. G. RUSSELL
9. THE CHILDREN'S PRAYER ... ... ... ... R. MCLEOD
10. THE LORD BE WITH US ... ... ... ... ... C. J. MAY

SET VIII.

1. THE CHILDREN'S SONG ... ... ... GEORGE RATHBONE
2. THE CHILDREN'S FESTAL DAY ... ... ... J. H. ADAMS
3. SING ALOUD TO JESUS ... ... ... ALEC ROWLEY
4. LONG AGO SWEET VOICES CALLING ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
5. CHILDREN'S VOICES ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
6. AROUND THE THRONE OF GOD (Tune—"LASST UNS ERFREUEN") Arr. by IVOR ATKINS
7. GOD, WHO HATH MADE THE DAISIES ... ... ... R. MCLEOD
8. FOR EVER AND FOR EVER ... ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
9. FRAMER OF THE LIGHT ... ... ... R. WALKER ROBSON
10. THE JOYOUS DAY, O LORD, IS ENDING ... ... C. J. MAY

SET IX.

1. ALLELUIA! HEAR US SINGING ... ... ... H. E. BUTTON
2. SHEPHERD OF TENDER YOUTH ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
3. FATHER, HEAR THY CHILDREN'S PRAISES GEORGE RATHBONE
4. GOD OF THE MORNING ... ... ... ... CHARLES BURNEY
5. LET ALL THE WORLD IN EVERY CORNER SING H. E. BUTTON
6. OUR HEARTS ARE FULL OF GLADNESS ... ... ALEC ROWLEY
7. THANKSGIVING ... ... ... ... MYLES B. FOSTER
8. GOD WHISPERS ... ... ... ... ... ROBERT MCLEOD
9. GOD IN ALL ... ... ... ... ... ... EDGAR MOY
10. HEAR THY CHILDREN, GENTLE JESUS ... ... C. J. MAY

The Hymns and Tunes may also be had in separate numbers, price 1½*d.* each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from

STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1.
'PHONE: MAYFAIR 6641-5.

PIANOS

BY

Bechstein, Bord, Schiedmayer,
Chappell, Rogers, Gors, & Kallmann

and other celebrated makers

The Profession most cordially invited to inspect our large and varied stock of New and Second-hand Pianos. Cash, Hire, or Hire-purchase. Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:

CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: MUSEUM 0439.

JUST PUBLISHED.

GUSTAV HOLST

EGDON HEATH

(FOR ORCHESTRA)

"It makes no concessions to the ear and no attempts to be attractive, but it grips."

"We may wonder that his vision is so stark, but men have similarly questioned Hardy whether life was so grim as he saw it."—The Times, Feb. 14, 1928.

"It is all strangely hushed and severe, and, so to speak, awestruck. Masterly to a consummate degree in the effect of spaciousness and bleak majesty made by the composer with the fewest possible notes and orchestral colours."—Daily Mail, Feb. 14, 1928.

"'Egdon Heath' is the nearest approach we have to painting in terms of musical notes. The achievement is notable even for a past-master of orchestral colour like Holst. He conjures up the vision which was Hardy's of something mysterious and gigantic, of a force that is not brutal yet irresistible."—Daily Telegraph, Feb. 14, 1928.

SCORE, 10*s.* 6*d.*; String Parts, 3*s.* 4*d.*; Wind Parts, 7*s.*

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY Limited.

A POSTHUMOUS WORK OF IMPORTANCE

FREE ACCOMPANIMENT OF UNISON HYMN-SINGING

By DR. C. H. LLOYD, sometime Organist of Gloucester Cathedral and Precentor of Eton College.

"In Accompaniment and Improvisation Dr. Lloyd could hold his own with any organist, English or foreign. Musicians who listened attentively received many a valuable lesson and soon recognised that in one important branch of musicianship he was pre-eminent."
Mr. A. M. Goodhart in his Introductory Note.

CONTENTS.

PREFACE.—Reproducing Dr. Lloyd's comments and hints, with additional notes on the general principles which should guide organists in accompanying Unison Hymn-Singing.

HYMN ACCOMPANIMENTS.—The harmonies employed by Dr. Lloyd in accompanying 48 WELL-KNOWN HYMN-TUNES ARE PRINTED IN FULL. In nearly all cases, side by side with the tune, are printed Dr. Lloyd's hints and notes on the particular tune.

APPENDIX.—Some additional notes upon the treatment of the Hymns from a personal recollection of various extempore performances by Dr. Lloyd at Eton, contributed by Mr. A. M. Goodhart.

Royal Quarto, Cloth Gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.* net. Postage 6*d.* extra.

TWO HUNDRED TUNES FOR SIGHT-SINGING.

In all the Major and Minor Keys, by C. S. LANG, Mus.Doc., 2*s.*6*d.* net.

"One of the best books of its order that we have come across."—Musical Opinion.

The Year Book Press Series of Unison and Part-Songs.
The Year Book Press Series of Anthems and Church Music.
The Year Book Press Series of Instrumental Music.
The Village Drama Society Series of Plays.

Full Catalogues, Plays and Vocal and Instrumental Music on approval post free to any address at home or abroad.

H. F. W. DEANE & SONS THE YEAR BOOK PRESS LTD.,
31, MUSEUM STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

FOYLE'S SPECIAL OFFER!

Tudor Church Music

Recovered from the archives of Cathedral and other libraries. The work of re-discovery, trans-notation, and editing carried through by a Committee headed by Sir Richard Terry.

VOL. 1. JOHN TAVERNER.
VOL. 2. WILLIAM BYRD. English Church Music. (Part I.)
VOL. 3. JOHN TAVERNER. (Part II.)
VOL. 4. ORLANDO GIBBONS.

Handsome volumes, royal 4to (13-in. × 10-in.). Published £2 2*s.* per vol. Some copies offered in new condition at 21s. per vol. Postage 1*s.* Sent on approval. Quote Offer 122.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,

119-125, CHARING CROSS ROAD, LONDON, W.C.2.

JUST PUBLISHED.

MADGE

A CAMP-FIRE PLAY

BY

KITTY BARNE

INTRODUCING

FOLK-SONGS, SUNG AND ACTED

Price One Shilling.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.

Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:

Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus.D., F.S.A.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus.D.

Monday, April 30th.—Summer Term began.

Wednesday, May 2nd, 3 p.m.—Inaugural Ceremony and Address.

Wednesdays, May 16th and 23rd, at 3 p.m.—Students' Concerts

Wednesday, May 30th, at 3 p.m.—Lecture.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Dramatic and Operatic Elocution. The Lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student; pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open to sufficiently competent persons who are not College Students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors. Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

Organists who like music of reasonable modernism

SHOULD GET

"CATHEDRAL WINDOWS"

SIX PIECES ON GREGORIAN TUNES

BY

KARG-ELERT.

PRICE COMPLETE, FIVE SHILLINGS NET.

Here will be found all the characteristics which organists have learnt to expect from this composer—the rich harmonic idiom, the charming atmospheric effects, the tumultuous brilliance.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,
20, KINGLY STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.

RECENT ADDITIONS TO Bosworth's Famous Portrait Classics Series

Brahms Album

Revised by VERNON WARNER

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| BALLADE | Op. 10, | No. 1 | ROMANCE | Op. 118, | No. 5 |
| BALLADE | Op. 118, | No. 3 | RHAPSODIE | ,, 79, | ,, 2 |
| CAPRICCIO | Op. 76, | No. 2 | SCHERZO, from Sonata, Op. 5 | | |
| GAVOTTE (Gluck-Brahms) | | | VARIATION | No. 4, Op. 35/II | |
| INTERMEZZO | Op. 76 | No. 3 | do | ,, 6, ,, 35/I | |
| do | ,, 76 | ,, 4 | do | ,, 11, ,, 35/I | |
| do | ,, 76 | ,, 6 | do | ,, 12, ,, 35/II | |
| do | ,, 76 | ,, 7 | WALTZ | Op. 39, No. 1 | |
| do | ,, 116 | ,, 4 | do | ,, ,, ,, 2 | |
| do | ,, 116 | ,, 6 | do | ,, ,, ,, 3 | |
| do | ,, 117 | ,, 1 | do | ,, ,, ,, 4 | |
| do | ,, 117 | ,, 2 | do | ,, ,, ,, 7 | |
| do | ,, 118 | ,, 2 | do | ,, ,, ,, 8 | |
| do | ,, 119 | ,, 3 | do | ,, ,, ,, 9 | |
| INTERMEZZO, "Retrospect," from Sonata, Op. 5 | | | do | ,, ,, ,, 11 | |
| | | | do | ,, ,, ,, 15 | |
| | | | do | ,, ,, ,, 16 | |

Portrait cover, 3/- Edition 1162 Cloth cover, 6/-

Schubert Album

The Centenary of this Composer falls on Nov. 19th, 1928.

| | |
|---|---|
| TWO ECOSSAISES, Op. 33 | IMPROMPTU, Op. 90, No. 3 |
| VALSE, Op. 9a | ,, ,, 90, ,, 4 |
| LITTLE VALSE, Op. 9b | ,, ,, 142, ,, 2 |
| GERMAN DANCES, Op. 33 | SCHERZO, B flat major |
| MOMENT MUSICAL, Op. 94, No. 2 | ,, D flat major |
| MOMENT MUSICAL, Op. 94, No. 3 | IMPROMPTU, Op. 142, No. 3 |
| MOMENT MUSICAL, Op. 94, No. 6 | MARCHE MILITAIRE, Op. 51, No. 1 |
| MENUET, Op. 78, No. 3 | BALLET from "ROSAMUNDE" |
| IMPROMPTU, Op. 90, No. 1 | SYMPHONY IN B MINOR ("Unfinished" Symphony) |

Portrait Cover, 3/6 Edition 1119. Cloth Cover, 6/6

BOSWORTH & Co., Ltd.,
8, Heddon Street, Regent Street, London, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

GOD WITHIN

MOTET

FOR CHORUS, ORCHESTRA, AND ORGAN

Composed for the 274th Festival of the Sons of the Clergy

BY

A. HERBERT BREWER

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

MAY 1 1928

(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 463.)

SCHUBERT'S STYLE:
II.—PIANOFORTE AND VOICE

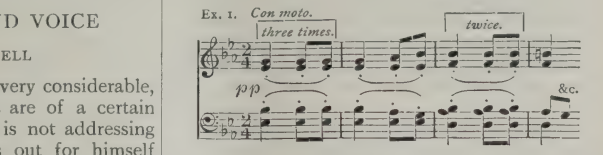
By RICHARD CAPELL

Schubert's dramatic songs are very considerable, but the most part of his songs are of a certain meditative order. In them he is not addressing the world; he is finding things out for himself as he goes his lyric way, and turning them over for his own charmed gaze. Concert songs are rare in Schubert. He himself, we know, gave but one concert in his life.

One does not read lyrical poetry to a crowd. And extemporizing on the pianoforte is naturally a private entertainment. (There was in Schubert's day even a fashion for extemporizing publicly: to be taken as an outward sign of the widespread domestic habit.) In the early days of the pianoforte, fingers must always have been tapping and sounding in the exploration of the new keyboard's possibilities.

The Schubertian song was not what other songs had been, but was the outcome of a delight in the new poetry and the new instrument. In effect, it combined the reading of verse and the practice of music within the most exclusive of conditions—within the room of two or three intimates, and possibly indeed of the utterly solitary. The Schubertian song is the thing we know, first from the impulse received by its marvellous author from Schiller's and Goethe's lyrical works; and secondly from the suggestions that arose in the course of the wanderings of his fingers over the keys.

Music is first of all sound. Only after a singular intimacy with the reality is it possible to reach the point of conceiving an ideal soundless music. There is no example of a musician who was deaf in youth. Music is not invented in a vacuum. A musical thought has, as progenitors, feelings and sounds. There is a sort of puritanism that would prefer all such things to be the offspring of sheer internal logic, like the 'Art of Fugue.' But the Bach who in his latter days composed the 'Art of Fugue' had long before—having hands, feet, ears, and an organ—cut into a virgin forest of sounds, straining logic beyond all precedent. A hint at a line of argument must suffice here; one would suggest a long interplay between musical minds and the promptings from the instruments at hand, particularly the keyboard instruments, and most particularly the equally tempered ones, which could at last give into one man's grasp all the kingdoms of the world of music for the toy of his solitude. Bach at his organ, Beethoven at his pianoforte did certain things, so we are suggesting, on lines on which they would hardly have written before. And so with Schubert, in whose pianoforte writing we again and again see, it can hardly be doubted—in many characteristic figures of broken chords, for instance, and especially, of course, in the so personal, fresh, and delightful courses which his modulations take—the immediate outcome of his hours of vagrant improvisation. When a piece of Schubert's begins like this:



or this:

he cannot but be imagined as abandoning himself to the direction, indeliberate and indefinitely foreseen but safely to be counted on as happy in the event, of fancy's interplay with the effects of the roaming and modulatory hands.

Beethoven was the grand exploiter of the pianoforte's sonority and eloquence. By his pianoforte improvisations he formed his style and was helped to find out his own thoughts. Since then the instrument and the facilities it affords have been so much abused that we cannot easily realise the charms it had in its young days. How effective they were is seen by the eclipse of the wiry, glittering harpsichord. The over-used pianoforte is now often reproached for being cold and colourless and percussive, but it must have seemed thenadays a miracle of warmth and rich singing quality. The harpsichord had made much less of a pretence to sing, and its p and f were mechanical. Its displacement was unfairly complete, but we have to imagine what it must have been at that period to discover a keyboard instrument with a 'soul.' (The clavichord had had a soul, but only a very little one.)

The early pianists in their beguilement flattered the sounds they made. Beethoven's pianoforte music is full of horn themes, timpani strokes, and string passages. The pianoforte could just hint at such things. It was playing a curious part in music in Schubert's time. The suggestions which it gave to the improvisers (who need not be thought of as ever denying themselves the luxury of the diminished seventh) were immediately worked into the writing of instrumental music, and were developed a little later into Wagner's wondrous enharmonic style. But if Beethoven and the rest were so influenced in their general writing, they necessarily had to think, when making music for the pianoforte, of the sounds of the more real of musical instruments. There is a measure of reality in the pianoforte, but always in its music there is—more or less, according to the composer—something else, which let us call an oblique representation. Pianoforte music veers between a genuine sensuous communication and an idea of music, an abstraction. The voice, the violin, the clarinet, or whatever, has very much more reality. Each is solely itself, concrete music, with no capacity for representing an imaginary music; while pianoforte music is more often than not something else in short score.

For all that, it would be an impropriety to orchestrate Beethoven's Pianoforte Sonatas—'the abstract joy, the half read wisdom of dæmonic images'—or Schubert's lyrical songs; and for a reason beyond the difficulty of orchestrating them congruously. It is that although the music was frequently conceived by the aid of more or less unconscious thoughts and memories of the tones of real instruments, the expression is so very much the affair of one contemplative and concentrated mind, or a pair of chambered collaborating friends, whose closing of their outer door is the opening of the inner world of this music.

The composer of such music is the pianist. Beethoven admits a violinist on occasion, Schubert a singer, out of friendliness: except for which the Violin Sonatas and the songs might often have been made into pianoforte music pure and simple. If the composer is satisfied with the suggestions of reality which his ten fingers can evoke, he has no essential need of the accompaniment of voice or fiddle. The real gain is the friendly communion.

Therefore to refer to the pianoforte part of Schubert's songs casually as the accompaniment is to invite misunderstanding. To refer to it as such with an inflection of disparagement is an impropriety too obvious to be mentioned if it were not at the root of the unsatisfactoriness of many concert performances. Even without any such error in the first step of the approach, there is no over-rating the difficulty of the problem. The crux lies in this, that pianist and singer are on different planes. For the moment the question is not of Schubert's openly dramatic pieces, like 'Prometheus' and 'Der Kampf.' In his typical lyrics the pianoforte makes an imaginative reference, and the singer when he is introduced into the music must also, if by a different way, appeal to the imagination. He has to lead us not to himself but to something through himself. The sound of his voice can only be actual; he has, however, the resource of saying as well as sounding. The most direct and physical effects of singing, then, are to be withheld. The way to sing Schubert's songs is a contained way. Not the singer himself is involved in the described passions.

At the same time the expression must not seem rehearsed. One must every time be, as it were, stepping delicately and wonderingly in a world of unexplored feelings, and not of represented adventures. Not the first reaction to reality is sung, but its reflection in imagination. The singer is not to act as someone else, and yet is utterly to forget to be himself, so sunk is he to be in the evocation. Singing thus, he addresses us indirectly, and an appeal so modified harmonizes in a way with the reflection of a reflection in the pianoforte's music.

This is not to exaggerate the delicacy of his engagement; for indeed no other sort of music is so rarely given perfectly, and the habitual listener comes to the conclusion that listening, or at any rate cold-blooded listening in a crowd, is not the true approach to Schubert's songs. And as for the singer, the deeper he goes into this world of poetry the more courage must he feel he needs to play his part. He must exert himself towards an ever superior purity of tone, sensitiveness of line, and spiritual concentration when he hears all the inner music and not merely the cold sound of the instrument in Schubert's exordia. Take any one of a hundred:

Ex. 3.

or:

Ex. 4.

This is no deterrent. The life of art is full of such tempting impossibilities.

The starting-point for the endeavour is a state in which technical mastery and the production of appropriate tone, acquired in years of singing music of the direct kind, are second nature: the state in which the mind is free to be engrossed by the poetic vision.

The singer is for convenience' sake called 'he,' though the quotation in B flat minor just above introduces a female voice, and there are a number of Schubert's songs that can only be sung by women. There are still more which can be appropriately sung only by men. Why this 'can only,' if the Lieder-singer is to aim at being a reflecting instrument that suggests more than it can tell, and is not to be seen as a dramatic personage? Well, he is unceasingly manœuvring for advantage against actuality; and it is not good sense to ask to be extra-handicapped. The curious thing is that women may venture fairly safely on some of the men's songs, while the other way about is an impossibility. Even so, it is as well to be cautious. According to existing manners, there is something comically improper in a woman's singing Rellstab's 'Ständchen,' with its imploring invitation to the person above to join the amorous serenader in the garden.

The special demands of Schubertian technics are that the singer shall be most feelingly aware of the pianoforte part and shall most feelingly think of the words. The alliance with the instrument is not hard and fast—it is a different case from, let us say, the great arias in Bach, where the principle is a theological obedience to the dogmatic letter. Everything in Schubert's art reposes in an understanding between friends. The very melodiousness is lost in an unbalanced performance, say, by a masterful and showy singer and an effaced pianist.

Schubert's melody was from the first irresistible. Schubert and melody—it is a truism, the two are almost synonymous. But in a great number of Schubert's songs the vocal line is not self-supporting. A professional paradoxist might disparage his gift of melody by isolating a given line. The life of his melody is again and again found to depend on associated figures and harmonies. Schubert constantly suggests to us that the whole conception was one; and sometimes as good as asserts that it could not have been otherwise. Such an air as 'Todtengräber-Weise' (1826) could not have been thought of otherwise than harmonically:

Ex. 5.

and so on to a D minor cadence before a return is begun towards the final E major. The vocal line in Schubert is in any number of songs a wonder of invention, shapeliness, and grace; but to name one of his songs brings to mind not just that, but a general view—not alone the carolling miller but also the tumbling water and the wheel, not only the cry of the Erl-king's prey but also the terrible galloping and the tossing of the eerie branches on the fatal ride, and so on with hundreds of Schubert's musical scenes.

Often when there was no call for the picturesqueness of which he has such an extraordinary command, the vocal line was made to bend to the influence of the harmonic instrument its associate; so in 'Stimme der Liebe' the voice's rising minor sixth in the fourth bar, its drop of a diminished fourth in the fifth bar, and its subsequent movement (from the original B flat) into F flat are a harmonist's music. Such things were to lead to the characteristic vocal writing of Wagner and Hugo Wolf.

POSTSCRIPT.—I should not have said last month that the first version of 'The Erl-King' had eight quavers to the bar in the pianoforte part; but the third. This was a simplified version for pianists who could not manage the triplets—among whom Schubert was included.

(To be concluded.)

RIMSKY-KORSAKOV

By LEONID SABANEEV

In April of this year occurred the twentieth anniversary of the death of the Russian musical genius, N. A. Rimsky-Korsakov, the composer of perhaps the most splendid cluster of Russian operas of the 19th century. For this anniversary I have written a lengthy monograph on his work which I hope shortly to publish. Meanwhile, within the limits of a magazine article I desire to throw some light on the achievements of a composer who is not so generally known to the Western European public as the importance of his talents deserves.

Rimsky-Korsakov is most familiar to Western Europe as the symphonic composer of the brilliant scores of 'Scheherazade,' 'Sadko,' and the 'Capriccio Espagnol.' His significance in the family of Russian composers, as well as for Europe, is greatly in need of elucidation. Russian musical thinkers and historians have long been aware that the new French school of neo-impressionists—headed by Debussy and Ravel—was essentially nothing but a continuation of the line of Rimsky-Korsakov's creative work, many of his methods of writing having been transmitted in toto to this group. A comparison of the scores of 'Iberia' and 'Scheherazade,' of 'Daphnis et Chloé,' and 'A Night on Mount Triglav,' will suffice to demonstrate how many principles these two schools have in common.

In justice it must, however, be stated that Russian composers, including Rimsky-Korsakov, thereby merely repaid their indebtedness to French music, since all the members of the famous 'Five'*—that specific flower of Russian national romanticism—were in their time extremely dependent, from a creative point of view, on Berlioz. The cycle of influences initiated in France by Berlioz, after crossing over to Russia and yielding the fruits of the Russian national school, returned to its native land.

Historical analysis has long since shaken the original hypothesis of the ideological unity of the style of the 'Five.' It is now clear that their specific ideology, at one time Slavophile, at another national, was essentially expressed by Moussorgsky alone; all the others were more or less elusive forms. Balakirev and Cui were on the whole second-rate composers, and Rimsky-Korsakov was a heretic to a considerably greater extent than even he himself imagined—a heretic in respect of the ideology of the 'Five.' Their primary ideology was amateurish—these daring young dilettanti were convinced that by their boldness and talent they would shift music from its dead-point. The future showed that the boldness of the young innovators was relative, and Rimsky-Korsakov was one of the first to replace it by another: he dared to assert that one cannot live by dilettantism alone, and that a real musical novitiate was necessary. Having begun his career as an amateur, he became a professional for the expansion of his creative powers; having begun by rejecting all the foundations of music, he ended by becoming the careful guardian of everything of value that the musical art has produced in the course of the ages.

* Balakirev, Borodin, Cui, Moussorgsky, and Rimsky-Korsakov. (Trans. note.)

Belonging to this group of Russian Romantics,* Rimsky-Korsakov from the very first fell in love with and selected for himself a sacred realm of inspiration—the world of the Russian legendary epos. He will pass for ever into musical history as the great Russian teller of tales, the musical bard who immortalised the Russian legend in musical forms endued with the national colouring suited to it.

This preliminary choice of legend as the material for his creative work conditioned many of his characteristic qualities. Rimsky-Korsakov is a supremely objective artist, an epic poet by nature and not a lyricist. He contemplates and describes, and always remains outside his subject; unlike Moussorgsky or Tchaikovsky, he does not identify himself with his personages nor with the lyrical element of his music. At the outset of his musical career he wrote a classically-marvellous opera on a subject full of meaning for himself—'Snegurochka,' the legend of the snow-maiden who melts in the first rays of the sun, the personification of passion and love. This subject, as I have said, is very significant of Rimsky-Korsakov. All his work is like the snow-maiden—exquisite to a degree, cold and pellucid—and it, too, dissolves at the touch of the living language of passion. Rimsky-Korsakov knew this, and hence he feared and avoided the lyrical depths, conscious that they would be disastrous to his creative work. One of the few Russian composers who always delighted in the spheres of passion and tragedy, in which they seemed fated to dwell, Rimsky-Korsakov is neither tragical nor gloomy—his work is tranquil, and radiant with the radiance of a landscape. He is absolutely foreign to the psychologism so familiar to other Russian composers; the personages of his operas have no psychology; they are abstract formulæ, legendary figures, and nothing more. He has a passionate love of beauty, of beautiful and caressing resonances. A colourist of genius, he developed the palette of Berlioz and anticipated the colouristic revelations of the neo-impressionists.

His work is coloured throughout with one characteristic idea — a profound and almost religious reverence for Nature. I venture to say that in this love of and feeling for Nature we have the whole man. Here he is a genius, and the pages of his music in which he reveals his comprehension of Nature may on the whole be said to eclipse anything that has been created in this sphere by other musical geniuses.

This attitude towards Nature—perpetually renewed, perpetually radiant, incomprehensible, and at the same time impersonal and remote from man, from his passions and feelings—begets in Rimsky-Korsakov a predominating mood, semi-mystical, pantheistic, outside of which his music cannot in general be understood and received. He is precisely a poet of Nature; and so far as he is concerned, man, with his psychology and passions, in her presence recedes into the background, and religion is lost in her depths. Pantheism (the religion of the great national philosophers) is rather near to atheism, which has a certain organic affinity with positivism—and Rimsky-Korsakov was a positivist in life and thought. If his genius had not found an outlet in music, I should have expected that it would have made of him a natural philosopher or a traveller. In this pantheistic temperament of his, in this peculiar mystical pantheism, we have a most characteristic Slav trait. The mysticism of the Slav is very deeply tinged with pantheism, and the idea of God-Nature is very near, very closely related to, the general Russian sentiment. In this we have the root of Rimsky-Korsakov's organic nationalism.

This pantheistic temperament is constantly manifest in the figures of his music and his operas: all of them are permeated with a specific quality which has no precedent. In his works death itself is presented to us in a reconciled aspect, as a return to the great bosom, as a fusion with Mother Nature. Let us take some examples which have become enduring and kindred symbols for the Russian musician: the death of Snegurochka, melting in the vivifying and passionate rays of the sun; Princess Volkhova transformed into a flowing river; Kashchevna turning into a weeping-willow; Fevronia dying amidst the springing flowers of paradise. The philosophical resignation and the transparency correspond with the peacefulness of the music Rimsky-Korsakov's music borders on the extreme of pellucidness and crystalline purity. In the almost geometrical regularity of these tonal structures the observant eye will perceive a strange resemblance to crystals—the music seems to assume crystalline forms. This tonal world is intensely cold in its inner aspect; the passionate human soul does not reach it. It is beautiful with the geometrical beauty of ice crystals, whose structure this music repeats, not only in the features of the individual harmonies and the general coldness, but also in the regularity and geometrical nature of the form, in the evenness of construction beloved by Rimsky-Korsakov, the symmetry exalted into a pearl of creation.

By reason of these almost exceptional qualities in the family of composers he stands apart from the rest. His natural spheres are those of Nature and the fantastical legend—in them he found respite from the tragedy of the human psychology. And he had as deep and accurate a comprehension of the spirit of Russian legend, permeated with these fantastic moods, as of his native landscape. His music is either landscape pure and simple, or landscape-fantasy. When he penetrates into the realm of pure lyrics, Rimsky-Korsakov usually seems to become vapid and anæmic. There is a certain curious deliberation in his brilliant and masterly works, which increases in the course of time and converts his latest compositions into something like geometrical musical problems. His mathematical mind was capable of constructing the most intricate tonal combinations (in 'Kashchei the Immortal' we find many harmonic novelties of the present day), but he always gave them crystalline facets and a fatal symmetry, piercing them with the cold of his icy touch. He had an enormous crystallising power, and was fully justified in asserting that he had never written anything irregular. This music is the kingdom of symmetry.

* Or, more correctly, impressionists, since the Russian romanticism sprang up all at once in a somewhat enfeebled aspect of impressionism, anticipating the appearance of this movement in Western Europe.

Rimsky-Korsakov's centre of gravity lies, of course, in his operas, fifteen in number, which constitute his immense contribution to the music of Russia and the world. Unfortunately, only a few of them are known outside Russia. They are, perhaps, too firmly bound up with the legendary epos, which is not always intelligible to the European, and they contain too much local colour. But Rimsky-Korsakov was aware that only in this sphere was he strong, that if he left the soil of Russian national or Oriental melos he would inevitably lose his individuality. On this music lies the fatal impress—one might even say the curse—of an excessively ethnographical approach to creative work. Outside this he was weak; like Antæus of old, he was obliged to remain in perpetual contact with Mother Earth. His worst compositions are those in which he abandoned the native soil necessary to him—I refer to 'Servilia,' 'Pan Voevoda,' 'Mozart and Salieri,' the symphonies, &c. On the other hand, his best moments are found in the depictions of fantastic or natural landscapes—tempests, the sea, the dawn, the forests, the nocturnal flights of the witches, the snowstorms (in 'Kashchei' on the chord of the seventh alone). As a landscape painter in tones he is a genius, and his musical ornithology leaves Wagner's birds and other attainments of previous composers in this sphere far behind.

His influence on the younger generation was enormous, and is more perceptible in present-day music than that of any of his contemporaries. His cold and deliberate type of creative work has been continued to a certain extent by Stravinsky, as cold and sometimes as deliberate, but without Rimsky-Korsakov's pantheism and inexhaustible sense of musical beauty. Nevertheless, 'Petroushka' is the legitimate child of the brilliant fair-scenes from Rimsky-Korsakov's operas, and in 'The Rite of Spring' it is possible to discover many of the elements which were used in the creation of 'Mlada.' The neo-impressionists of France were inclined to ignore Rimsky-Korsakov, preferring to acknowledge their kinship with Moussorgsky. This of course is an error due to near perspective. It was precisely Rimsky-Korsakov—with his cold, partly atheistic mind, his reverence for beauty, and his remoteness from psychology shared by the French impressionists—who was near to Debussy and Ravel, and not the out-and out psychological realist, Moussorgsky. And the picturesque quality of Debussy and Ravel in 'La Mer,' 'La Cathédrale Engloutie,' and 'Daphnis et Chloé,' are in the direct line of descent from Rimsky-Korsakov's picturesque and fantastic landscapes, just as the instrumentation of all of them is derived from Berlioz and Rimsky-Korsakov, and disregards Wagner and others, who were more alien to French culture. One of the most distinctive signs of a composer's importance is the possibility of including amongst his imitators (the degree of their genius is a matter of indifference) such names as those just quoted, apart altogether from a mass of secondary influences, less characteristic, less persistent—such as that exerted by Rimsky-Korsakov on Scriabin and the whole of the younger generation of Russian composers.

Twenty years have passed since Rimsky-Korsakov's death. They have, it is true, been exceptional, and are perhaps equivalent to a century, in view of the tenseness of the events which have been accomplished in them. And that may be the very reason why his work—once the centre of controversies and disagreements long since appeased—now presents itself to us in so luminous an aspect and has become classical. Rimsky-Korsakov is certainly a classic, not only for Russian music but for the music of the whole world, and the classical traits in him are emphasised by his perpetual striving for crystalline clearness, by the perfection of his form, and the creative objectivity which banished psychological moments from his compositions.

(Translated by S. W. Pring.)

Ad Libitum

By 'FESTE'

STRONG MEAT FOR BABES

Too little notice seems to have been taken of the recent 'plebiscite' programme at the Robert Mayer children's concerts. We have often been told by the self-styled 'progressives' that the present-day youngster, given free choice, would prefer out-and-out modern music to the classics. Some have even advocated a complete reversal of the generally accepted educational methods: instead of beginning with Bach, they affirm, we should start the young musician with (say) Stravinsky and Bartók, and gradually work back to the early writers. This plan is based on the theory that as the composer of to-day expresses the spirit of the age, the young mind reacts more readily to him than to the composer of a century ago. This argument sounds plausible enough until we see that it overlooks two facts: (1) human nature is pretty much the same throughout the ages; and (2) all the best things in the arts appeal to this permanent side of it, and so are affected very little, or not at all, by chronology. After all, the term 'spirit of the age' is often little more than a high-sounding synonym for 'fashion.' However, I must resist the temptation to discuss the question of permanence in art, and get back to the plebiscite programme. The matter being left to the House, with no whips put on, so to speak, these youngsters proceeded to upset the theories of the progressive brigade by choosing a programme consisting of the 'Oberon' Overture, the first movement of the 'Unfinished,' the first movement of Beethoven's fifth Symphony, and a couple of Brahms's Hungarian Dances. Here we see demonstrated the facts mentioned above. So much has been said in recent years about the reaction against emotion and romance that many of us believed it to be wide-spread—a real 'spirit of the age.' Yet the concert-halls have shown it to be no more than a fashion confined to a comparatively small section of the musical public. The works chosen by these normal London children are rich in the elements that have always appealed to musicians in bulk—romance, melody, emotion, dynamic contrast, and rhythm; and, so far from the appeal of these elements diminishing, it is likely that, the more life becomes mechanised and robotised, the more we shall turn to them for relief and contrast.

---

I have lately been looking through some children's pieces written by Stravinsky, Jarnach, Toch, Hindemith, and other emancipated composers. The most representative collection of the kind is 'Das neue Klavier-Buch,' in two volumes, published last year by Schott. The Preface says:

> Quite apart from the musical understanding required for modern music, its technical difficulties stand in the way of its becoming generally accessible. There is a lack of musical literature by means of which the amateur may become familiar with the spirit of modern musical thought through the medium of technically easy pieces. . . . The collection should appeal particularly to progressive teachers who wish to acquaint their pupils with the language of to-day.

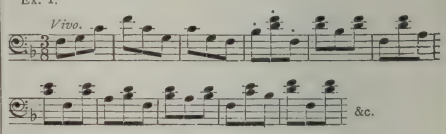
Hence this Buch. About twenty-three composers are represented by forty-three pieces. A little of the music is delightful, the more so by reason of its arid and forbidding surroundings. The handful of normal examples belong so clearly to the class of children's pieces started by the hated Schumann that one wonders at their inclusion in a work designed to prepare the bantlings for the bleaknesses and asperities of Hindemith, Stravinsky, &c.

---

Before sampling the 'Neue Klavier-Buch,' however, let us glance at what appears to have been the first attempt to wean the childish palate from the old-fashioned milk diet—Stravinsky's 'Les cinq doigts' (Chester, 1922).

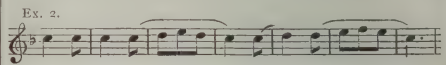
The title-page indicates either a joke or an oversight: 'Pièces très faciles sur 5 notes,' it promises. But only No. 1 confines itself to five notes. The remainder contain a liberal proportion of sixths, sevenths, and eighths in the left-hand part. From an educational point of view this is a mistake (unless, I repeat, it is a subtle joke); for the child able to play, vivo, a left-hand-part made up largely of such material as:

Ex. 1.



will neither be helped nor interested by a right-hand part that deals largely in such small change as:

Ex. 2.



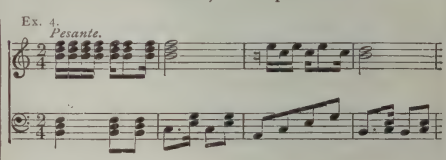
The bass part, in fact, belongs to a stage several degrees ahead of the treble. I think most teachers will agree that a collection of teaching pieces containing such anomalies is a failure on the practical side.

On the æsthetic side, what does Stravinsky offer the aspirant? Very little, it must be confessed. The bulk is dull. No. 2, for example, consists of about forty bars, in twenty-four of which the left hand plays nothing but:

Ex. 3.

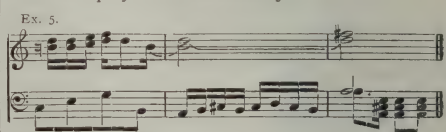
Setting out to quote the ugly side, I find myself embarrassed by riches. On the whole, perhaps, the opening of No. 8, with its childish insistence on the diminished triad, is the prize bit:

Ex. 4.

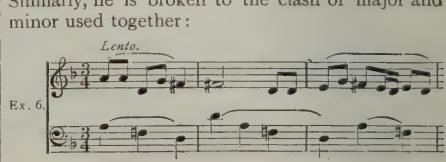


Throughout the pupil is prepared for the adult delights of 'juxtaposition of tonalities.' This cadence, for example (from No. 8), will enable his tender palate to savour the joy of tonic and dominant played simultaneously:

Ex. 5.



Similarly, he is broken to the clash of major and minor used together:

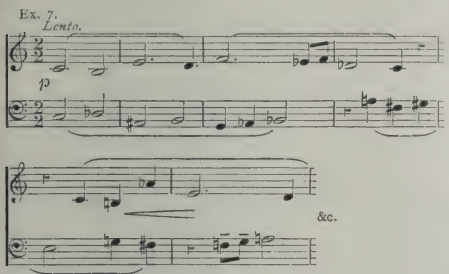


If 'Les cinq doigts' contained a few phrases of real beauty and genuine invention, we could forgive the crudity and childishness of the rest. But one draws a blank here as on the educational side.

---

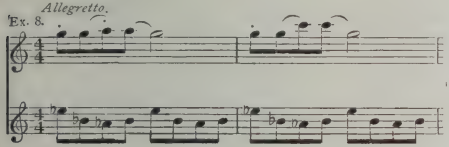
However, Stravinsky is mild compared with some of his rivals in the up-to-date kindergarten. 'Das neue Klavier-Buch' opens with a Preludio by Jarnach, from which I quote the opening phrase—or, rather, strain, using the word in its most literal sense:

Ex. 7.



Here is the start of a piece called 'Sunbeams,' by Ernest Toch:

Ex. 8.

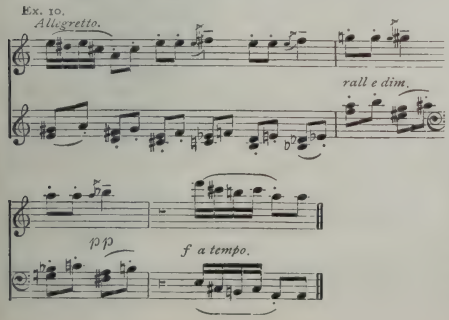


And it ends with a chilling gleam that makes me want to turn up my coat collar:

Ex. 9.

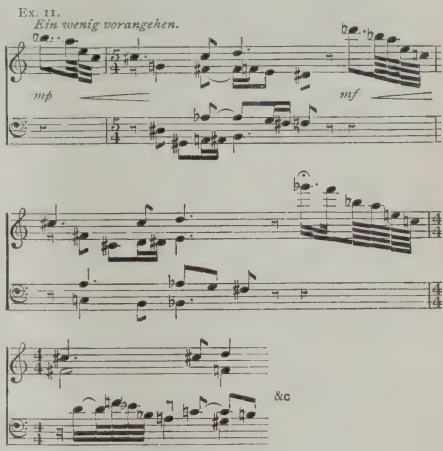
However, to see Mr. Toch (whose name I resist the temptation to mis-spell) at his best, I turn to his 'Dance for Ruth.' It is hard to decide on a quotation, but perhaps the closing bars will serve:

Ex. 10.



I cannot see any young Ruth of my acquaintance footing it to so gritty and tortured a measure as this. Perhaps the Toch circle contains younglings of the right type—precocious freaks, round-shouldered and be-spectacled, with beetling brows, who, as a rest from Toch's dance, would think nothing of cerebrating violently over No. 27, by Hindemith, which fills two pages with this kind of 'children's music':

Ex. 11.

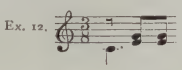


This is in Book 1, which is labelled 'easy.'

---

A valse of Poulenc's reminds us of some of the Stravinsky futilities quoted above. The left hand plays this:

Ex. 12.



during the opening twenty-four bars, and again for another two-score bars a page later. Forty-eight bars of tonic chord in a three-page piece! This is a part of the joke, of course. Other humorous ingredients are the constant use of F sharp in the right hand when the tonality (C major) leads the player to expect F natural; and the sudden splash in the midst of a stretch of elementary technical material:

Ex. 13.

—a joke so good that Poulenc at once repeats it. This waltz, by the way, is an example of the danger of irony in music. It sets out to ridicule the waltz of convention, but the only passages that are recognisably like that dance miss their aim by exaggeration. No real waltz was ever so dull and futile as to perpetrate forty-eight bars of this sort of thing:

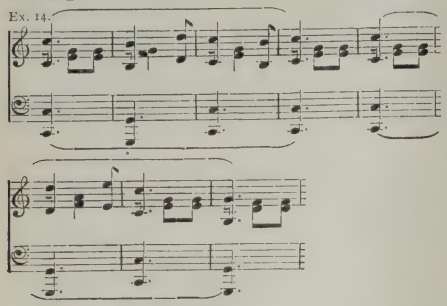
Ex. 14.



Poulenc's problem was to parody dullness, and to make a live job of it; but he is far duller and more conventional than the thing he set out to satirise.

---

·· Lack of space compels me to end, although several other collections remain to be discussed. I wish it had been possible to deal at length with Alexander Voormolen's 'Livre des Enfants' (stocked by Edward Organ, Acocks Green, Birmingham). This Dutch composer (who writes like a French one) discovers a pretty fancy, but over and over again one sees the fault common to almost all children's albums of the 'modern' sort, i.e., it leaves us in doubt as to whether the music is to be played by children, or to them. Voormolen's work is in two books, and the grading suggests that he is writing for young players. Yet the pieces bristle with passages that would tax the average good adult performer. The last of the set is called 'Malédiction de Czerny'; a youngster who could play this Presto would be well past the Czerny-cursing stage. 'Barbe bleue' (vivo furioso) calls for a grasp of keyboard and harmony that no child is likely to possess. The fact is, for one composer who can write real children's music, there are dozens who can do no more than produce the grown-up sort, plentifully garnished with eccentricities, and fraudulently stuck over with childish titles. The successful efforts can almost be numbered on one's fingers. Schumann's 'Kinderscenen' for children to play, and Debussy's 'Children's Corner' for them to listen to: if you take these as (probably) the two best examples of their kind, and try to supplement them, your list will be surprisingly short.

Anyway, it is pretty certain that the youngsters who asked Mr. Mayer and Dr. Sargent for a meal of Beethoven, Schubert, Weber, and Brahms, would have no use for more than a few pages of the 'Neue Klavier-Buch.' And our grandchildren will be playing Schumann's 'Hobby-horse' and 'Important Event,' and listening to Debussy's 'The snow is falling,' long after everybody has forgotten the joyless angularities of the whole tribe of Tosh. (The fit spelling cannot be resisted, after all.)

'BORIS GODUNOV' AS MOUSSORGSKY WROTE IT

By M.-D. Calvocoressi

II.—The Initial Version

'Boris Godunov' as first carried out (1868-69, consists of seven scenes. Five of these—the first four and the seventh—were incorporated in the later version; the fifth was almost entirely remodelled; and the sixth was suppressed, to be replaced by the revolution coming by way of conclusion.

Here is the order of the scenes:

(1.) The people assembled and ordered to implore Boris to ascend the throne.

(2.) The coronation.

(3.) Grigory and Pimen in the monastery cell.

(4.) The inn by the Lithuanian border.

(5.) The private apartment of the Tsar. The children; Boris; Boris and Shuisky; the hallucination.

(6.) Outside the Cathedral of St. Basil, at Moscow. The people discuss the anathema proclaimed against the Pretender and his conquering march on Moscow. A few hotheads start shouting, 'Down with Boris!' but are restrained by the elders. The Simpleton appears, and is robbed of his groat (this episode and the Simpleton's final lament were transferred to the revolution scene). When the Tsar comes out of the Cathedral, the people start proclaiming their distress, and implore him to give them bread. The Simpleton, seeing the Tsar, hails him: 'Boris, hey, Boris! These wicked urchins have stolen my groat. Have them killed, as by your orders the little Tsarevich was killed.' The Tsar's retinue all stand aghast; Shuisky orders that the Simpleton be arrested, but Boris intervenes: 'Do not touch the man of God! Man of God, pray for me.' And while the Tsar moves away, the Simpleton replies: 'Pray for you, Boris! I cannot. One must not pray for a Tsar Herod. The Holy Virgin does not allow it.' And he starts his mournful song.

In this scene, as in the foregoing, Mussorgsky follows the text of Pushkin's 'Boris Godunov' very closely.

(7.) The council and the Tsar's death.

. . . . . .

The first four scenes are in their complete form; that is, without any of the curtailments that were made in the 1874 edition. The only additions made later are a short choral passage in the scene in the cell, and the song of the Hostess ('I have caught a duck') in the scene at the Inn. The scene of the council and death also contains a certain amount of hitherto unknown music. These five will be considered next month, in the survey of 'Boris Godunov' as a whole. I shall anticipate the conclusion of this survey only by saying that 'Boris Godunov,' whether in its initial form or—apart from the inserted act in Poland—in its full form (including both Moussorgsky's later additions and the passages cut from the scenes transferred from the initial version to the later version) is wonderfully compact, close-knit, and logically balanced. It forms a whole in which there is nothing superfluous, and indeed nothing that is not vitally important.

What first strikes us when we consider the original version are its starkness and terseness. It does not, like the later version, afford hearers any opportunity for relief. It pursues its grim course without an instant of intermission, except when the tension is relieved a while by touches of character-comedy in the dialogue (first and sixth scenes, the people; scene at the Inn; Feodor and the nurse at the beginning of the fifth scene). And even at these points, there is nothing (except Varlaam's song, 'By the walls of Kazan, the mighty stronghold') that comes as an intermezzo inducing a halt, however brief, in the action. Every one of these touches is part and parcel of the whole.

A very remarkable feature (one, indeed, that makes this version something unique in the history of lyric drama) is that Grigory, the young monk who, in the course of his conversation with Pimen, decides to rise against Boris, pretending that he is the Tsarevich saved from death, never reappears after he has effected his escape into Lithuania and begun his activities as the Pretender. He remains in the background, evoked time after time by references made by Shuisky, by Boris, by the people, and by the Councillors. And these allusions are made doubly pregnant by corresponding reappearances and transformations of the motive first introduced in association with the murdered Tsarevich. Hence a particular significance attaches to the fact that this motive (as explained in the January Musical Times, p. 19) is used in connection with both the Tsarevich and his impersonator — the two unseen terrors haunting Boris and gradually breaking down his resistance, and the two main factors in what is the real tragedy of Moussorgsky's masterpiece: the fate of Russia.

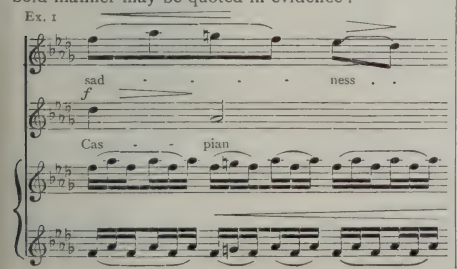
It will presently be seen that in this version the Dimitri-Grigory motive is introduced far more forcibly and circumstantially than in the later version, and that its reappearances are more numerous and emphatic. And it may be added forthwith that in other respects too the structure of the first version is thematically far tighter than that of the 1874 version. Most of the minor cuts in this abridged version affect passages in which main themes play a part—a curious fact, which confirms the supposition that Moussorgsky's anti-Wagnerian friends and counsellors had something to do with the selection of the cuts.

. . . . . .

In this matter of recurring motives and in other more important respects nothing could be more instructive than a comparison between the first and second treatments of the scene in the Tsar's apartment.

Generally speaking, both contain different music, and very beautiful music; so that if either is set aside there is both loss and gain. For instance, the opening of the scene in the original version, with Feodor studying geography aloud while Xenia, his sister, mourns her dead fiancé, is one of the gems of the score. A passage from it in which the contrasting voices combine in charmingly simple and bold manner may be quoted in evidence:

Ex. 1



But against this we find, in the later version, the delightful songs which no lover of Moussorgsky would care to sacrifice.

There are big differences in the monologue of Boris, in his dialogue with Shuisky, and in the final hallucination.

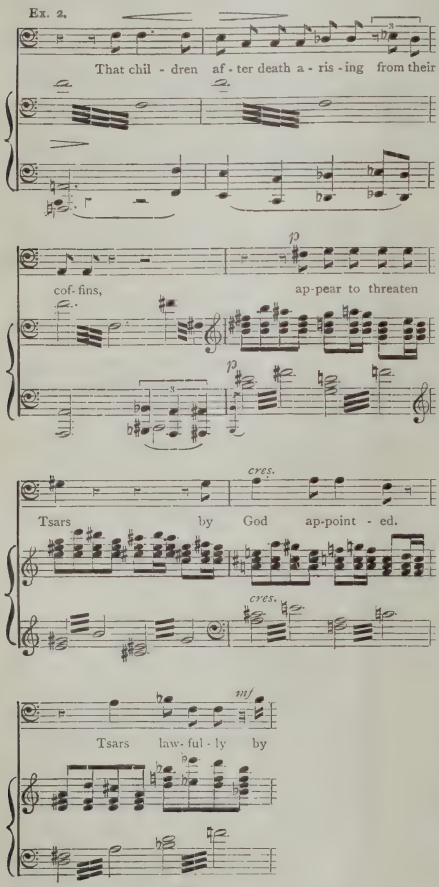
At the first blush, when one is accustomed to the later version of the monologue, the music of the earlier version may strike one not only as starker (which is a gain if anything) but as rougher, more angular. One may be disconcerted a while, as one would be by suddenly encountering any familiar work in altered form. But even then one can hardly fail to realise the pregnancy and force of Moussorgsky's first inspiration. What it lacks in romantic colour and sensational contrasts it more than makes up for in terseness and austere grandeur. The music is founded on one theme only—one of several mutually related themes that accompany Boris—and the Dimitri theme appears towards the end.

The psychological differences between the two versions are most clearly brought out by the Russian critic M. Igor Gliebof in a pamphlet on 'Boris Godunov,' just published at Moscow, which contains the finest criticism ever written on the subject:

In the second version, Moussorgsky adopts a more sentimental tone. He shows Boris no longer under an aspect of unmitigated grimness, but as a repentant sinner whom he pities. He accordingly imparts to his music a warm, lyrical quality, touching upon distress, repentance, prayer, and qualms of conscience in turn . . . In this second version, the music of the middle section of the monologue is borrowed from his earlier 'Salammbo.'* The music of the first version was far better suited to the original conception of the whole opera, that of a social and political tragedy, not the tragedy of Boris's conscience. I consider it as more coherent and better thought out.

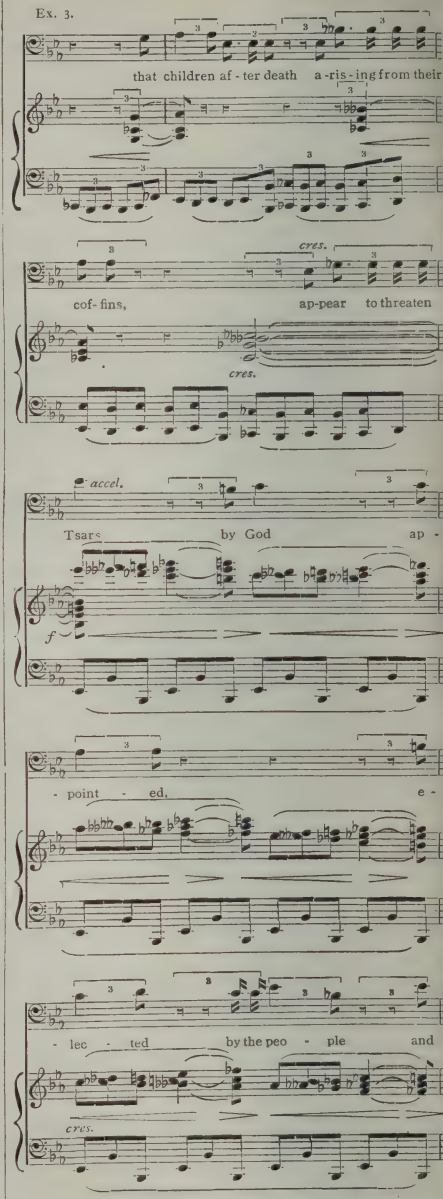
The music of the dialogue with Shuisky is likewise starker, and informed by more numerous thematic reminiscences than in the later version. The differences in technique and spirit may be illustrated by this example, a musically interesting and dramatically very telling use of the Dimitri motive:

Ex. 2.



This passage, it is true, is exceptional in its insistence upon the theme and in the peculiarity of its handling. In the second version, the corresponding bars are:

Ex. 3.



that children af - ter death a - ris - ing from their cof - fins, ap - pear to threaten Tsars by God ap -
- point - ed, e -
- lec - ted by the peo - ple and

In Shuisky's description of the murdered child's body awaiting burial in Uglich Cathedral, Moussorgsky uses the same theme, whereas in the second version he resorts to new, non-thematic materials.

The differences in the music of the final hallucination are primarily accounted for by the fact that the clock with its chimes and puppets is not introduced in the first version. Hence there is no weird phantasmagoria of puppets appearing in a ray of moonlight to heighten the hallucinated terrors of Boris, and the music remains grim and unadorned instead of expanding into the wonderful evocative symphony of pulsing basses and whirring violins and flickering wood-winds which we find in the second version.

* The question of the borrowings from 'Salammbo' will be dealt with later.—M.-D. C

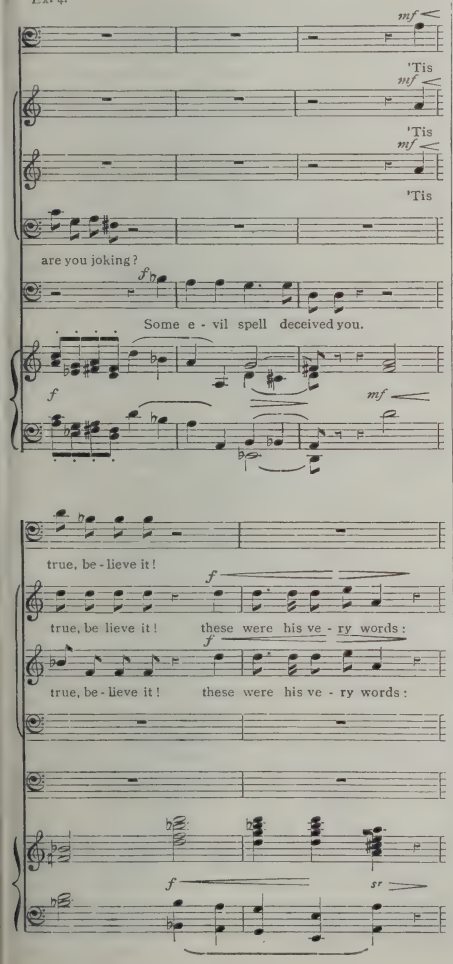
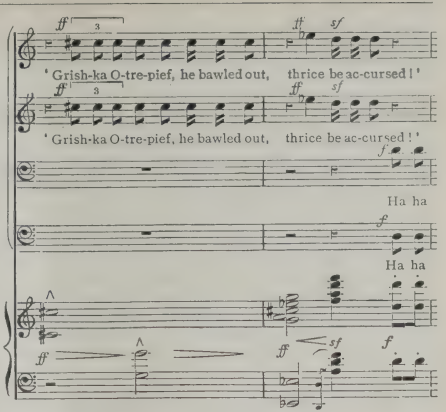
In short—and in a strictly limited sense, for Moussorgsky's methods in 'Boris' are always governed by his supreme sense of economy and directness—the first version of the scene is closer to classical restraint and adherence to the main, unswerving line; and the second tends towards romantic exuberance and employment of contrasts and of accessory (though not necessarily irrelevant) details.

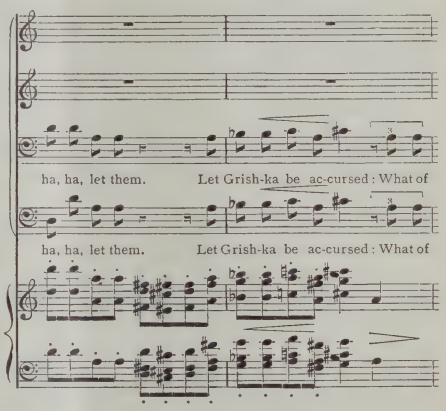
The scene by the Cathedral of St. Basil is altogether admirable. It starts with racy dialogue, which belongs to the very best and most characteristic of Moussorgsky. Here is a quotation from it:

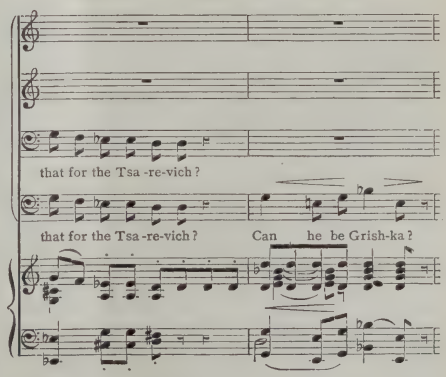
Ex. 4.



'Tis
'Tis
'Tis
are you joking?
Some e - vil spell deceived you.
true, be - lieve it!
true, be lieve it! these were his ve - ry words:
true, be - lieve it! these were his ve - ry words:







Then comes by way of climax, after the vociferations: 'Down with Boris!'—the big, deeply moving chorus of imploration, from which I give a few bars:

Ex. 5.

Kind fa - ther, Tsar, have pi - ty.
Kind fa - ther, Tsar, have pi - ty.
Kind fa - ther, Tsar, have pi - ty.
Kind fa - ther, Tsar, have pi - ty.
Bread! Bread! We are starv - ing!
Bread! Bread! help us, kind fa - ther!
Bread! Bread! help us, kind fa - ther!
Bread! Bread! help us, kind fa - ther!

The brief meeting of the Tsar and the Simpleton (one of the finest things in Pushkin) is dealt with soberly, and stands out in wonderful poignancy. And the artistic value of the remainder of the Simpleton episode is sufficiently proved by the fact that it stood the test of transfer to the revolution scene, where the final lament makes a worthy ending to the tremendous whole.

But for this transfer, it would be possible to include the scene by St. Basil in the complete version of 'Boris Godunof'; for it does not otherwise duplicate, nor does it weaken by anticipation, the effect of the revolution scene. It is of great value both in itself and as part of the tragedy of Tsar Boris and his people. Unfortunately, this could not be done without desecrating afresh the ill-fated masterpiece with which, up till now, tamperers have had their misguided will so freely. But, as I said last month, the concert platform may and must introduce to all music-lovers both the scene by St. Basil and the first version of the scene in the Tsar's apartment.

Far from being loose or ill-balanced (one must harp on the point exactly as Moussorgsky's adversaries are constantly harping on their views concerning his alleged shortcomings), both these scenes, dramatically and musically, might well serve as models of well-judged and well-carried out structure: the one, an uninterrupted, splendidly sustained gradation from the entry of Boris (after a short evocation of the tranquil setting of his home surroundings) to his collapse; the other working from the start towards the choral apex and swift dramatic conclusion.

The same may be said of the original 'Boris' as a whole. Even the above rough survey will have made this clear. However, there are many points of structure which are common to both versions; so that as I have dealt so far but with the two scenes which belong to the initial version only, it will be better to postpone further discussion until next month.

(To be concluded.)

---

THE EDITING OF OLD KEYBOARD MUSIC

A new issue of 'Parthenia,' which, says the title-page, is 'arranged for the pianoforte and freed from the errors of previous editions,' by Margaret H. Glyn (Reeves), raises some questions concerning performing editions of such old keyboard music. Miss Glyn retains the obsolete key- and time-signatures, and the barring of the original; sharps are used instead of naturals, and about half of the accidentals are placed over or under the notes instead of before them. These features make the music hopeless from the ordinary pianist's point of view. The pages also bristle with ornaments as to whose interpretation Miss Glyn admits there is no clue. How far this version is 'freed from the errors of all previous editions' is impossible to say without examination of those editions; but it seems evident that many errors of the original have been allowed to remain. Modern editors of old music are curiously timid in such matters, just as their forbears were perhaps too bold. But we ought by now to be able to hit the commonsense middle course. For example, in this passage from a Galliard by Byrd:

Ex. 1.

can there be any doubt that the e in the L.H. should be natural? (The signature is given as retained by Miss Glyn.)

Again, in the same piece Miss Glyn gives this:

Ex. 2.

Is there any reason why it should not be written as on p. 413, with the R.-H. c sharp in its obviously right place, and with all the four e's natural instead of only two? As it stands, this bar contains three errors—a large proportion for an edition purporting to 'correct' all previous editions!:

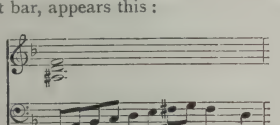
Ex. 3.

Once more, in the fine Galliard in D minor, by Bull, we have this:

Ex. 4.

Instead of bothering the player with an unnecessary sharp under the second c in the R.H., why not naturalise the b? The edition contains many such anomalies. No doubt the ♮ is absent from the original, for the good reason that it was taken for granted under the rules—if rules they can be called—of Musica ficta. Miss Glyn admits that the 1611 edition of 'Parthenia' is 'not without errors.' Very well; then why not correct the obvious slips? Moreover, such corrections should be made in the score, with a foot-note giving the original. Miss Glyn's respect for antiquity is such, however, that she goes to work the other way round. For example, on p. 16, last bar, appears this:

Ex. 5.



with an asterisk directing us to a foot-note which gravely says that 'the ♯ should be before F'! Of course it should; and it should be put there, with a foot-note, 'In the original the sharp is before a.' On p. 15 we find:

Ex. 6

where it is obvious that the third and fourth sharps have got out of place, and refer to the f, as there is no e flat in the signature to be contradicted. But Miss Glyn will not admit that it is obvious; she leaves the error to add one more confusing element for the player, and tells us in a foot-note that the sharps are 'probably' meant for the f's! There are other instances of this blend of timidity and pedantry. I write with some warmth on this point because such methods keep players away from these charming old works. It is the fashion to-day for our revivalists to sniff at the editors of the past generation, and it may be admitted that some of them were too ready to alter texts to suit the taste of their period. Yet they were often right; and to-day, when we are well aware of the principles that lay at the back of early composers' false relations and dissonances (e.g., the logical result of passages based on the simultaneous use of melodic and harmonic forms of the minor scale, the wavering between the old modes and the scales, &c.) there is rarely any doubt as to the accuracy or otherwise of the early editions. The fact is, the present day has no cause for despising the Victorian editor so far as old keyboard music is concerned. I still possess excellent editions of Byrd, Bull, Purcell, and other early keyboard writers, made by Ernst Pauer, and bought over thirty years ago. Tattered as they are, I still use them because I have met with no modern performing editions so good. To Pauer this music was evidently no mere museum exhibit, but live stuff to play and enjoy. Facsimile and library editions are necessary for the musicologist; but for every musicologist there are many hundreds of mere players, and their needs are too little considered. It is far better that this old music should be easily accessible and understandable, even with a few dissonances watered down (though Pauer is commendably sound in this respect), than that it should be made a dead letter to all but a handful of specialists and antiquaries. H. G.

---

THE FUTURE OF MUSIC ACCORDING TO HONEGGER

By F. Bonavia

The antagonism between the younger generation of composers and the older has led to a remarkable encounter between two well-known French musicians—Arthur Honegger on the one side and Vincent d'Indy on the other.

Honegger admits that there are false prophets amongst the followers of the ultra-modern school, but he upholds the claims of Milhaud, Poulenc, Prokofiev, Hindemith, and Schrenek, whom he defines as 'creative' artists whose work may be discussed but cannot be ignored. Above all he approves of Schönberg, although he does not deny that his work may excite a feeling which is not of pleasure. Schönberg, he declares, has been the apostle of freedom. If music to-day has been rescued from the tyranny of tonality we owe it entirely to him. As a thinker and a theorist Schönberg has made a name that will rank amongst the great in the history of music. Honegger protests that the notion that moderns avoid emotion and sensibility is due to a misunderstanding. But he grants us that Schönberg's music is mentally logical, 'cerebral.' He admits, for instance, that the Quintet for wind instruments cannot be followed even by the well-trained expert. If we listen, the work seems 'deadly dull.' But if instead of playing such music we are content to read it, then its extraordinary logic, the closeness of its texture, become apparent. 'You suggest,' somebody asks, 'that this music is meant to be read, and not played!' 'Precisely,' replies Honegger, refusing to see anything derogatory in this abject surrender of all the prerogatives of music.

This indeed is but one logical consequence of the advance made in mechanical instruments, and of the influence they have on the public. Audiences, said Honegger, do not go to a concert to hear a symphony but to hear what Mr. X or Mr. Y will make of it. 'The public applauds a tight-rope dancer: the dancer is everything: the immortal work is but the rope, the means whereby he exhibits his skill.' It is preposterous that the 'creative' musician should have to submit to the caprice of an interpreter. Composers in the future will resort to pianolas and other mechanical instruments where they can supervise the reproduction and insist on correct interpretations. The future of music lies entirely with the mechanised orchestra, which will no longer be limited by the handicaps of range and endurance which beset our orchestras.

The advantages of the Robot orchestra are many, maintains the Franco-Swiss composer. Machinery, he says, already reproduces faithfully all 'timbres'—except those of the strings. As soon as the last problems of mechanised reproduction are solved, a few cardboard boxes will hold a magnificent entertainment which the inhabitants of Tristan da Cunha will enjoy in as perfect a state as the inhabitants of London or Paris. The humble provincial will no longer need to wait weary months, if not years, before having the opportunity to hear a masterpiece like 'Le Sacre du Printemps,' and we shall be saved the terrible labour of rehearsal and preparation now the inevitable prelude to any musical manifestation.

All this sounds very reasonable. At present rehearsals are a decided handicap, and lack of rehearsals a still heavier handicap to the concert giver. At the same time Honegger's logic is not faultless, and his prophetic vision errs decidedly on the side of moderation. If the future rests on mechanical invention, why cardboard boxes when we have wireless and television to aid us? It seems more likely that the 'European concert' will no longer be the butt of sceptics, but a solid, harmonious reality established at Geneva and controlled by the League of Nations. It is not generally known that in the very first months of the existence of the League a sort of musical society was debated amongst its officials. If a love of music has not been quenched by the routine of duty, the idea no doubt will be taken up with enthusiasm, and a musical bureau will be established side by side with the labour and other dépendances of that celebrated institution.

And now we must turn to the other side of the picture and listen to Vincent d'Indy, who, totally unconvinced by Honegger's arguments, denies utterly Schönberg's greatness: 'You say Herr Schönberg affirms that his music is meant to be read and not heard. I heartily agree, since that conglomeration of sounds without reason, equilibrium, or logic, cannot be called music. It may be noise, but I am no judge of noises, and I have no interest in noises, be they described on paper or found in the universe. It is said that Herr Schönberg has freed us from the thraldom of tonality, and you rejoice in this surgical operation which deprives music of one of her essential limbs. This reminds me of a gentleman who, after losing his legs, exclaimed: "My lower limbs have gone! I shall no longer itch for a walk!"'

Thus ends (for the present) this interesting exchange of views. Only the future can prove whether Honegger is right and d'Indy wrong, or vice versâ. But it is to be hoped that the tourney will not be ended. Important questions arising from Honegger's argument should be settled, as far as possible, in advance. How many musicians will be needed for the Genevan concert; the quota each nation will contribute; the pension to be assigned to all other—superfluous—members of the musical community; the status and nationality of the Supervisor-General of Music in the League of Nations; the locus where a great bonfire will be kindled with Strads and grand pianofortes; the most humane manner in which to gag singers—all these points ought to be decided at once if we mean to be ready for the future.

THE SCHOOL OF ENGLISH CHURCH MUSIC

This projected institution has already been pretty fully discussed in our columns, and little remains now but to report progress. An appeal has just been launched, from which we quote a few salient paragraphs. After alluding to the Report of the Archbishops' Committee on Church Music (1923), and to the need for practical steps towards the carrying-out of the suggestions made therein, the appeal continues:

> The rendering of the services in many parish churches still leaves much to be desired: and this is due far less to a lack of good material than to a lack of knowledge how to obtain the best results from that which is available. Provision is therefore much needed for the training of choirmasters and organists in the management of choirs and voice-training, accompanying of church services, organization and development of congregational singing, study of ecclesiastical music of all styles and periods, knowledge of the liturgy and of the principles and history of church services (see 'Music in Worship,' p. 36 and elsewhere).
>
> Provision should also be made to enable clergy and candidates for ordination to obtain practical knowledge of Church music in general, and to gain experience in the rendering of the priest's part in the service. ('Music in Worship,' pp. 33, 34.)

Occasional lectures and classes cannot supply training of the right scope and thoroughness. The need is for practical experience under expert guidance, and this can be had only by systematically taking part in the conduct of actual services in their proper surroundings. Such help cannot be obtained at the ordinary training colleges, whose tuition is necessarily confined to individual performance and general musicianship.

Nor is the type of instruction aimed at in the School needed only by the full-time organist and choirmaster. There are to-day many parish churches at which, for various reasons, the musical direction is in the hands of amateurs and semi-professionals. Most of these have not been able to obtain a thorough musical training, and provision would be made at the School for study and practice outside their business hours.

It is clear that such an institution as is projected can achieve much that can be done by no other means.

The practical nature of the scheme is shown by the fact that the School will provide:

(a) A chapel where regular choral services of different types and different degrees of elaboration or simplicity could be maintained, and in which the students would take an active part, in various capacities;
(b) A hostel, where a certain number of students could reside at a self-supporting yet inexpensive rate, thus forming the nucleus of a college life;
(c) A warden or director of studies, who should be a church musician of experience and standing;
(d) A chaplain, who should be capable of assisting in the teaching;
(e) A sufficient number of choir-boys, some of whom at least should be resident.

The appeal goes on:

> Besides providing for the practical training of church musicians, the school should have power to issue certificates of efficiency to students. It should form a centre for various activities for the promotion of the best Church music of all kinds, and the chapel services should themselves set a standard for what is suitable in churches of different types and with different opportunities. It should in no way compete with existing institutions; and it should definitely aim not so much at meeting the individual claims of any one school of churchmanship as at giving aid to all who desire to make their Church music worthy of its purpose.

It is estimated that an annual income of £6,000 to £7,000 will suffice to carry out the scheme, including the lease of some available premises adjoining Wimbledon Common. The property is now being used as a boys' school, and is easily adaptable.

In a less ambitious form the School could be run at an annual cost of from £3,000 to £5,000.

The Archbishop of Canterbury warmly supports the scheme, and wide and influential backing, both clerical and musical, is assured. There is a strong provisional council, and Mr. Sydney Nicholson is the Warden-elect.

We warmly commend the appeal to the sympathetic consideration of our readers.

We have received No. 1 of the quarterly News Sheet of the School of English Church Music. It gives particulars of the project, as well as some helpful lists of Church music. Future issues will report progress of the School, and will be sent free to supporters. The office of the School is at 105, Gower Street, W.C.1 (Tel.: Museum 4340), and the organizing secretary is Miss H. F. Harvey.

Teachers' Department

THE SELF-EXPRESSION OF CHILDREN IN MUSIC—I.

By R. H. Hull

It is sometimes stated that discussions relating to this subject cannot be particularly helpful from a practical standpoint. There is this danger, certainly, if the matter never proceeds further than vague theory. It will be my endeavour to show that the question is one of considerable practical importance.

The problem is fairly universal because teachers have to deal with it in one form or another irrespective of the methods they employ. The most common difficulty to be contended with is a temporary arrestment of the expressive powers. In such cases the pupil not only fails to make progress, but seems actually to lose ground. There are various expedients to counteract this. A change of interest is essential because 'staleness' is generally at the bottom of the trouble. Some teachers believe firmly in making the pupil concentrate actively upon appreciative work so as to stimulate fresh interests before returning to the original subject. There will be something to be said on that point later. Another point of view seems to be that an adequate outlet may be found in singing.

There is room for more than one opinion here. A correspondent (Sheffield) considers that as most children are singing regularly up to the age of thirteen or fourteen the artistic impulse is finding a satisfactory outlet. With this opinion I am in partial agreement only. It cannot be denied that singing is to some extent an emotional relief, and I do not dispute for a moment the contention that the adult singer has, as a result of discipline, an adequate and perfectly balanced medium of expression. But with children there is this difference, namely, that to get the best and most natural results the teacher does not, in the singing class, employ the rather drastic training methods which may be necessary for, e.g., an older pupil preparing for a professional career. There must be little or no restraint. It seems to me, therefore, that while for children singing is certainly an expressive outlet, it should be supplemented by some other means of expression as well, if the most satisfactory results are to be obtained. In support of this view I quote the following examples which, I think, help to illustrate the point in question.

'A,' a big pupil aged eight, showed temporary arrestment after two years' pianoforte instruction. He ceased definitely to progress, and showed every sign of losing ground. For some months he had no pianoforte lessons, but remained in the singing class. Pianoforte instruction was continued after an interval of six months, but without appreciable result. For the year following the pupil ceased to learn music in any form. Finally he re-joined the singing class, and subsequently received pianoforte lessons again. This time his progress was rapid; he quickly recovered the lost ground, and at the end of the period of observation showed every sign of satisfactory development.

From this it would seem that singing as an alternative was not an adequate means of relief. Complete cessation, on the other hand, was more satisfactory. I may add that the circumstances of this case were fairly normal, so we have not to reckon with any undue distraction.

The next example is a curious illustration of distortion which is in some respects a converse of the first illustration.

'B,' a girl of ten, had not studied any instrument, but shared in the normal class singing which was held at the school every day. She was a temperamental, nervous child, and at the age of eleven was obliged to leave school on the grounds of health. This point is important, because it meant in effect that the singing automatically came to an end. While away from school she began pianoforte lessons, although previously she had shown no signs of talent in that direction. She made remarkable progress, with a consequent improvement in health. At twelve years old she returned to school, continuing pianoforte study and resuming class singing. Subsequent observation showed that she developed normally, though without becoming an exceptional pianist.

This was clearly a case of inhibited instinct which, so far as I can ascertain, had been badly dealt with in the earlier stages. It is difficult to understand, otherwise, why the pianistic talent should have remained dormant so long. There is a probability, however, that the ultimate release was made easier by the temperamental changes associated with adolescence, and this presumption at least covers the facts.

While in no way maintaining that the above examples are to be regarded necessarily as conclusive evidence, I venture to suggest that they do at least provide some grounds for my original statement.

Leaving for the moment the question of singing, I should like to refer to what would appear to be the most remarkable case of all. It is an example of complete transition from one medium of expression to another, and unless it is to be regarded as absolutely exceptional, which apparently it is not, we are faced with a very searching question connected with artistic co-relationship.

The facts concern 'C,' a boy of nine, who for nearly four years had shown quite an astonishing aptitude for drawing. Then, without warning, his ability seemed to lessen until, after a decrease in capacity spread over about six months, his interest in the subject was entirely at an end. It must be mentioned that this child had a certain creative genius, and that when he stopped drawing he had no espressive outlet for his artistic inclinations. His interest in music had hitherto been vague, but after six months of non-expression he became more keenly attracted by it. The parents arranged for him to have lessons, and the results were extremely satisfactory. While never attaining in music the promise of genius which his earlier drawings had shown, he nevertheless became a very competent executant. In this instance there were no abnormal features relating to health or educational circumstances. The power of drawing remained, to all intents and purposes, lost.

It is scarcely necessary to emphasise the importance of the issue raised by a case of this kind, but in the present context a detailed discussion of artistic co-relationship would be out of place. Before quitting the point, however, I would indicate that we cannot, in fairness, treat such a transition as a freak of nature. Whatever may be our views on the basic principles of the subject, such a manifestation as quoted above may well come within the horizon of the most ordinary school teaching. It should not be dismissed, therefore, as an exception which is not likely to occur outside the pages of a psychological text-book.

A danger against which the teacher has to guard is taking for granted that the child's interest at the moment is necessarily more than temporary. To take a parallel instance, we know that many boys, in their early years, express an ambition to become a locomotive driver, but later, as they develop, change their intention. The same applies to the different branches of music, and it has constantly to be borne in mind that in the preliminary stages the focus is always changing.

Of equal importance is the necessity for variety. I mention this point because it is fatally easy to decide what we consider a child ought to do in the way of routine, as opposed very often to the freer inclinations of the child himself. Reconciliation does not always seem possible, and though the teacher may get his own way, in the end it is generally at a cost which a sensible modification would have avoided. Variety acts as an unconscious compromise, and enhances the value of routine work.

The questions connected with appreciative expression as a distraction, together with some examples of obverse cases, must be held over until the next article.

(To be continued.)

---

A FEW THOUGHTS ON PIANOFORTE PLAYING

By I. Philipp

The perfect interpretation of a work is impossible for a pianist unless he is master of his fingers and has overcome all technical difficulties.

Technique can be acquired only by thoughtful effort. Under the heading of technique must be included not only scales, octaves, double-notes, arpeggios, shakes, &c., but also rhythm, sound, bar-time. All this calls for patient work, slow and thorough, along with the certainty that we have never reached the end, that it is always possible to improve. Unfortunately, the least gifted of our young 'pianotists' considers himself a master as soon as he leaves the Conservatoire,* knowing everything there is to learn—though frequently knowing nothing at all. 'I intend to begin all over again the study of the pianoforte,' Busoni wrote to me three months before he died. And what of all the other masters! A Godowsky does not allow a single day to pass without working, without improving his play. And listen to such masters as Rosenthal, Cortot, Ganz, Harold Bauer; in spite of the successes they win every day, they do not stop practising. We are conscious of the progress they have made every time we hear them again.

Mental discipline, the independent development of each finger, suppleness of arms and wrists, the study of sound and nuances, an understanding of various styles—in a word, everything that ought to be studied . . . all this is frequently a dead letter in instruction. Too often does it happen that a pupil leaves his master, after studying for a few years, utterly incapable of studying alone the simplest piece. No attempt is made to interest the pupil and to graduate his work; instead, the teacher may just listen to the suggestions of parents, or of the pupil himself, recommending the study of works invariably too difficult and that correspond neither to the pupil's natural endowments nor to what he has already acquired. The result is nil.

I wonder if it is possible to reform such disastrous methods of teaching the pianoforte? Instruction should be individual. Each pupil has his own peculiarities, and the same method cannot possibly be applied to all alike. There are certain principles, however, of universal application; the following, for instance: 'Instead of accustoming oneself to play rapidly, one must practise going slowly, for that is the only way to make progress,' or, 'Introduce the effort of thinking into the daily practice,' or, again, 'Play as naturally as possible, avoid useless and frequently ridiculous movements, carefully follow and interpret the nuances and indications of the composer, and beware of all traces of affectation.'

To repeat: there is too little discernment, and too difficult works are attempted too soon. This always results in bad playing.

If such a state of things is to be avoided, that fingering must first be chosen which best suits the pupil's hand, for the latter must always remain supple and in a natural position on the keyboard. A technical problem, or any difficulty whatsoever, is often pronounced insoluble when a simple change of fingering, a lateral movement of arm or wrist, would make everything smooth and easy-going.

Nothing, however, is so important as the left hand, which is not sufficiently worked separately and apart from the right. It is the perfect execution of the left hand that gives one assurance; its rôle is far more important than that of the right. With an assured bass, all sorts of awkward difficulties would disappear of their own accord.

Sight-reading is far too much neglected. It is a matter of common knowledge that many excellent pianists read badly at sight, whilst others, only

---

* Dantan junior characterised the virtuosi of the keyboard by endowing with twenty fingers the two hands of Thalberg, in a statuette which may be seen at the Carnavalet museum. Allured by the caricature, a piano-strummer one day called to have a statuette of himself made. The caricaturist consented, with the result that each hand had only one finger!

moderate performers, can play a piece admirably the first time they see it. The result is that certain teachers of the pianoforte content themselves with advising against sight-reading, as they are afraid lest their pupils accustom themselves to inaccurate and slipshod methods; others do not even mention this element of pianoforte practice, though it is so useful.

For a pianist it is nowadays an indispensable condition to be able to read at sight both well and rapidly.

We never remain at a standstill; we are always going either forwards or backwards. Therefore, we should never stop working. Numbers of young artists are led astray by exaggerated flattery. They are convinced that their initial efforts are just as good as those of their elders—whom, moreover, they criticise quite passionately—and their desire for progress diminishes in direct proportion to the good opinion they have of themselves.

Sensitiveness, intelligence, and instinct are not enough. Only by hard work can one become perfect. And so, whatever one may say or do, a pianist must learn his business.

We often wonder where the present-day art of pianoforte playing differs from that of the master pianists of the end of last century. All who have had the joy of listening to the latter will be of my opinion: whereas those artists looked upon expression as their main object, most of the young virtuosi of the present day have acquired a regrettable tendency to play as loudly and as rapidly as possible.

The new methods have brought us greater freedom, more suppleness in the movements both of body and of arms, a more active collaboration between brain and instrument, a more refined seeking after nuances of sound. If all this progress were utilised in the interests of the art of interpretation, there would be nothing further to say. Unfortunately, this is not invariably the case. To-day there are very remarkable musicians and rare temperaments to be found, but how many young players of mediocre talent content themselves with knowing—or not knowing—a few Preludes of Debussy's, though they think themselves equal to the best pianists! A hundred times a year we listen to these Preludes of Debussy's, but where are the virtuosi who would dare to enter on their programmes modern works that are fairly long—works that are never played, simply because their effect is not an immediate one?

Consequently I crave indulgence to call on our youthful performers for a little audacity when drawing out their programmes, and I would ask them to be just a little more modest concerning themselves.

(Authorised translation by Fred Rothwell.)

POINTS FROM LECTURES

Points that may be here quoted from a Schubert lecture at Reading by Sir Walford Davies include his statement that Schubert was the son of Beethoven in mind. His music emulated Beethoven in a Schubertian way. Schubert possessed an amazing power of absorption and adaptation, and that accounted for the great success of his songs, which baffled the scholars by their perfection. Another feature of all Schubert's compositions was his subtle change of key. No composer who ever lived was able to do this so persistently and child-likely as Schubert. He bridged with a chord what to other men would be a gulf. Sir Walford firmly believed that Schubert would be the apostle of the future.

Mr. Arthur Darley, violin professor at Leinster School of Music, gave a Potteries audience an enthusiastic account of old Irish music. Some people, he said, thought things ancient at fifty or a hundred years old. Not so in Ireland. From the 5th to the 10th century, Ireland was certainly the educational centre of the world, and music flourished in a marvellous way. On the violin the lecturer illustrated some of the sad music, and then gave examples of the exhilarating or martial music, of which no country possessed such stirring clan marches. Neither was there anywhere such stirring melody as Irish melody.

At a Rugby ruri-decanal conference Mr. Sydney H. Nicholson was among old friends whom he interested in his views on English Church music During the last twenty-five years, he said, commissions had been organized to make necessary improvements, but the reports issued by them had been merely read over, and not acted upon. In the church to-day the choice of music was often at fault. The Psalms were chopped about and the words altered to fit some particular chant. Many hymns were chosen because they were well-known and liked by the congregations. Choirmasters and organists needed training in the management of choirs. The remedy was to establish in London a School of Church Music. There would be a chapel where regular choral services of different types could be maintained, also a hostel where the students could live.

As author of 'Music and Religion,' the Rev. Dr. W. W. Longford came before the Berkshire Organists' Association well equipped to speak about 'Music in Worship.' The purposes of music in religion, he said, were: (1) to create atmosphere (the emotional aspect); (2) to offer a vehicle of worship (congregational); and (3) to give inspiration. Music had an exceptionally high and wide teaching value. It might be transitory in effect, but it could translate a sense of divine truth in terms which words (e.g., sermons) could not express. The highest feelings and aspects were often speechless. Music could not create religion, it could only stimulate and revivify it. The corruption of popular music of the day would lead to the corruption of religion.

Dr. C. H. Moody, speaking at the Ripon Wesley Guild, regretted the lack of proportion and of discrimination in the selection of hymn-tunes in the churches. His experience was that for one respectable tune a dozen bad ones were employed. Many of the clergy placed a low and false estimate on the taste of their congregations. A brother Cathedral organist recently expressed his contempt for a certain type of anthem, but what would he have said of highly-placed clergy who substituted Redhead's 'Story of the Cross,' with its miserable sentimental lines and boneless setting, for Allegri's noble and God-inspired 'Miserere'?

'The Development of Pianoforte Music' lecture at Douglas, by Mr. Edward Mitchell, was as pleasing to the audience for its great range of illustrations as for the outspoken views of the lecturer. Most of Bach's music, he said, though beautiful, was confined to a short space on the keyboard. Not so Scarlatti's, which had a most wonderful freedom, and which even now sounded quite up-to-date. Although Beethoven was undoubtedly much the greatest, there were certain imperfections about his writing, such as lack of tone-balance and misuse of the bass register.

He had a habit of writing a melody in the upper register and accompanying it by thick chords in the lower register, which was not good balance. One could not, however, blame him for what was really the imperfection of the instrument of his time. Liszt bore the same relation to the pianoforte as Berlioz to the orchestra. He was discovering all the time new and surprising effects, and, carried away by exuberance, overdid it, and ruined many of his compositions by vulgarity and glitter. Berlioz's orchestration always had too much drum and cymbals in it. It was, however, upon Liszt's work that the Russians had built up some marvellous music within the last hundred years.

'Humour in Music' was treated in a Manchester lecture by Mr. J. H. Elliot. In his opinion the production of genuinely artistic music did not necessarily debar a free play of the sense of humour on the part of the composer. The field for the exploitation of humour had widened with the rapid development of the art. Of humour super-imposed upon the music, examples were given of humorous instrumentation, parody, quaint description, and quotation. Illustrations were also given of the humour which is actually a condition of the music itself.

Mr. T. W. Hanforth, speaking at Sheffield, referred to some of the unwise things which learned men said about music. 'Some of the old hymn-tunes,' he said, 'may not reveal profound scholarship, but if they touch your hearts they are serving a fine purpose. It is the mission of the music of the Church to elevate people's minds, to lift them to a higher plane, and to awake sympathetic chords in their inmost being to respond to God's word and teaching. The man who says he wants to remove three hundred hymns from our popular hymn-book means that all he would leave would be hymns that would not appeal to people not highly educated, or of a literary turn of mind. If that were done, I am afraid that the congregations would get thinner and thinner in numbers.'

Welsh music in Tudor times is a subject which has engaged the attention of Mr. Lloyd Williams for years. In a lecture at Bangor he revealed a high state of things before Tudor times. Then there came a profound change. The Tudor monarchs showed favour to Welshmen, but unfortunately not to their language and traditions. Cultured leaders and even the clergy deserted the people. Those who continued to make poetry formed themselves into a narrow exclusive circle, intensely jealous of their accomplishments. The art of penillion singing decayed until, at the end of the Tudor period, there was practically no one left who understood and practised the old traditions. Yet the self-expression of the peasantry filled the country with song. The Welsh used to congregate on the mountain sides and there with their harpists sing secular songs all day. It was hoped that before long Wales would occupy an honourable position in the world of music.

Great music was Mr. Arthur Hirst's theme in an illustrated lecture at Lytham. The layman did not need technical knowledge, he said, to appreciate music, but it was wrong to say he could appreciate it without thinking about it. They did not need to know how a thing was done, but why it was done. Great music was the fine art of music, and, like other fine arts, sprang from two definite instincts in the human heart—a love of the beautiful, and a love of fellowship, or intercommunication of hearts and minds. All great music that came from a great heart went straight to the man who had a heart. One of the tragedies of music was very often that music which had come from the heart was used merely as a medium of some technical accomplishment, without the performer realising what he was doing. The listener then failed to get the message, and said, 'Oh, I am shut out of classical music; it is beyond me.' Abstract music in the nature of things must be limited in its field. If they were ordinary people they should not worry because they could not appreciate a Bach fugue or other complicated music. But they must know something of the heart that was talking to them; they must have some clue. With that little guidance, there was no reason why they should not enter into the great gallery of pictures of the human heart. J. G.

THE USE AND IMPORTANCE OF IMPROVISATION AT THE KEYBOARD

By H. A. B. Crawford

To the average amateur pianist the art of improvisation is a closed book. Even among professionals the art seems to have died out, although up to the middle of the last century it was customary for every pianist to include an improvisation in his programme, and it is well known that Chopin, the greatest of all pianist-composers, always did so.

Among otherwise capable—and often brilliant—pianists to-day, the lack of elementary musical ability is surprising. As a teacher I find it not uncommon to encounter a new pupil with technical and interpretative powers well developed, and who is fully capable of giving a good account of a Beethoven or Chopin Sonata, unable to play the simplest progression purely by ear (although quite able to memorise), and equally incapable of effecting a simple keyboard modulation.

Such a musical paradox would be almost unbelievable were it not that the reason for it is very apparent. On a keyboard instrument it is possible to read music, and even to commit written music to memory, with but little aural attention or sense of musicianship. That the importance of aural training is now more generally recognised than it was some years ago is shown by the wise inclusion of an aural test in the syllabus for R.A.M. and other standard musical examinations, and by the writings of the great teachers, but it is still doubtful whether some pianoforte teachers are alive to its vital necessity.

My own experience leads me to believe that many teachers, although they deplore the inability of their pupils to give real musical attention to their doings at the pianoforte, have no practical remedy for the disease. To most of their pupils ordinary 'ear-training,' so-called, is dull work, and in consequence little or no progress is made with it. The result is that the average pupil continues his musical education without ever really learning to listen to music at all, and his work depends entirely on his ability to transfer written symbols into corresponding key movements. It is as a cure for this state of things that I have found the teaching of simple improvisation to be so valuable. It interests every pupil, and if taught purely 'aurally,' as it ought to be, it is the best form of practical ear-training available, since it is quite impossible to play by ear at all without the closest aural attention; and, further, it cultivates the habit of 'pre-hearing,' which is a vital factor in true 'listening.'

Taught in this way, the necessity for learning 'harmony' in the generally-accepted sense of the word is not involved, although the student can hardly fail to acquire, quite naturally and without conscious effort, a considerable degree of useful musical knowledge. No suggestion is implied that it is either desirable or necessary to teach composition to the average pianoforte student; but should his subsequent ambitions lead in this direction, his practical aural work at the keyboard will certainly be found to have been of remarkable value.

But apart from these considerations, a pianist, organist, or indeed any musician whose playing is absolutely confined to what has been written by others on paper, and who cannot even modulate readily and musically at the keyboard, is but half-educated. Indeed, I believe that we have here the reason why so many pianists lack confidence, musical imagination, and general musical ability.

Teachers all the world over will agree that it is desirable to effect an improvement in this direction, and so far as our present knowledge goes, I venture to suggest that some such teaching as is outlined here provides a practical method of doing so.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

E. P. A. O.—A slight vibrato in string playing, used with judgment and discretion, is pleasant. Indiscriminate vibrato is an abomination. The object of vibrato is to give a sentimental colour, to suggest emotion. The slightest abuse is bound to result in gross sentimentality. Unfortunately the practice is but too common at the present time, especially since it has been discovered that a generous vibrato acts as a cloak for imperfect intonation. If you mean to acquire faultless intonation and good tone avoid it entirely in the lower positions; use it sparingly in the higher. The present craze is largely due to the frequent use by modern composers and especially by 'editors' of intervals, difficult in respect of intonation, and naturally somewhat empty—the intervals of fourth and fifth. If strings were perfectly true and reliable the question of intonation would not arise; but, as you have probably noted, the great majority of strings, without being actually false, may be just a shade short of perfection. In such a case, and particularly in high positions (from the fifth or sixth upward), a little vibrato may be of considerable help. But bear in mind that 'vibrato' is a stimulant—like alcohol, tobacco, &c. You may use it with impunity so long as you are master of the situation; but unless you use your judgment and carefully watch its effects, unless you are sure of absolute control, it may end by controlling you. There are violinists to-day who cannot put finger on string without a 'wobble'; their playing in consequence is uninteresting, monotonous, and impure. F. B.

L. M. N.—You are asking much more than it is in our power to give you. The details of your letters do not inform us of two things it is essential we should know before our advice can be of help, to wit, (1) your experience of the art of music, the works you have studied, your knowledge of harmony and power to express yourself musically on paper; (2) your general educational outlook, the books you have read, and, possibly, any literary examinations you may have passed. In these days, it is impossible to take up the teaching of music with but a small equipment behind. There are three qualifications for such work: (1) An ardent desire to teach; (2) knowledge of the processes of teaching with an adequate reference to psychology; (3) mastership in that side of music it is intended to teach, this to be proved by examinations accepted by the Board of Registration. So you see that in seeking to become a music teacher, you are proposing to yourself a big task. Reading between the lines of your letters, we feel that to attend a Teachers' Course would be an excellent start on your journey. You would then get into touch with teachers of eminence, and be in a vastly better position to ascertain your present powers and the possibilities of success. Such a course will be held at Seascale during August next. Apply to the Secretary, 73, High Street, Marylebone, W.1. Our best wishes to you. E. F.

YOUNGSTER.—It is difficult to advise you. If you are bent on a musical career it seems a pity to spend time in obtaining the commercial diploma you mention. On the whole, we think you will be wise to remain at home for some years yet, following music as a semi-amateur. The knowledge you acquired in matriculation, plus your business experience and studies, will probably be of little use to you in music, but they should enable you to take a good business post with which music can be combined pleasantly and profitably. Look at it in this way: you can hardly be a professional musician, with accountancy as a spare-time job; whereas you may be an accountant, and an excellent musician in your evenings and week-ends. The church and organ branch of the musical profession offers less and less openings for full-time workers. The larger the number of posts held by semi-professionals, the better it is for the qualified teacher, who will have less competition from the organists. Your idea of eventually becoming a public school music master need not be given up. Work away, and try for a University organ scholarship in about three years' time. You seem to be in the hands of good teachers, who will be able to advise you as to this.

OKELEIGH.—(1.) There appears to be no book dealing specially with the writing of pianoforte accompaniments to songs. It is merely one branch of the technique of composition, and so is generally given a chapter in composition primers. The best way of learning, however, is to study good models. For simple examples examine those of Stanford in the 'National Song Book' (Boosey). Then go on to the best songs of the best song composers. (2.) You are 'fogged' because you don't see in what way the study of counterpoint has any bearing on composition. Do you see the connection between technical studies on the pianoforte and the playing of pianoforte music? Nobody gives a recital of scales and arpeggios, but these things had a big share in enabling the recital to be given. So with counterpoint: you may never use it in composition, but you will compose the better for having studied it. Remember that Schubert in his last years, being dissatisfied with his technical equipment, resumed the study of counterpoint, taking lessons with Salieri—who as a composer wasn't fit to black Schubert's boots. (3.) We can discover no book dealing with songs and song-writers of the Dibdin-Shield school.

E. G. G.—The choirman who publicly states that your R.C.O. diploma is worthless will no doubt be difficult to convince to the contrary. Reference to the Musical Directory shows that five other musicians in your town are R.C.O. diplomés. Draw your choirman's attention to this, and point out also that three of the five also hold either Mus. Doc., Mus. Bac., or L.R.A.M. or A.R.C.M. distinctions. Ask him how many of the numerous A.L.C.M.'s hold any of these diplomas. Produce your copy of the R.C.O. Calendar, and let him see that the institution is governed by a large body of Church musicians whose status is unquestionable. Give him the statistics of passes at recent examinations, and let him see that the percentage is lower (and the standard therefore higher) than that of almost any other musical college. He will probably be still unconvinced, so it will be up to you to do your work in such a way as to show that your diploma is a guarantee of all-round ability.

FAIR AND SQUARE, AND OTHERS.—During the past year we have gone very thoroughly into the question of the London College of Music, and we cannot repeat the arguments. We are sorry that you appear to think the motives behind the attacks on this and similar colleges are the outcome either of conservatism or professional jealousy. We ourselves have no axe to grind—indeed, so far from profiting from its attacks on the College, the Musical Times loses by its consistent policy of refusing to insert the advertisements of certain examining bodies. You will see, therefore, that we may fairly claim to be disinterested. We must be content to say here, as we have said before, that we believe the London College of Music does useful work in its teaching, by catering for pupils who are unable to afford the fees demanded elsewhere; but we object to its diploma-giving because we have the best of evidence as to the low standard of its examinations.

A. T. B.—(1.) Tye's setting of 'The Acts of the Apostles' and Campion's 'Never weather-beaten sail' are published by the Oxford University Press. (2.) The list you give of fairly simple polyphonic Masses of the 16th and 17th centuries, with English words, seems to us to be pretty exhaustive, short as it is. There is no lack of settings with Latin text; no doubt the growing demand for English versions will create the supply. You might add Tallis in the Dorian mode (Paxton). But why confine yourself to old composers? Excellent settings in simple polyphony have recently been published by the Oxford University Press and Faith Press. Write to them for a list.

VILLAGE ORGANIST.—Do we 'recommend a lot of solo playing in accompanying hymns in a village church'? We should want to hear a sample before we can say whether we should like a lot, a little, or none at all. Again, much depends on the vocal barrage put up by the congregation. If they are a good crowd singing lustily, solo stop playing (except on a tuba, which is not common in village organs) goes for very little. As a general principle (since we must come off the fence) we prefer a plain accompaniment, with variety of the broad, simple type rather than the niggling and fussy; and, above all, with a live rhythm.

M. R. E.—As you say, it is rather a footling question. But as your friend won't believe you, and wants to see the answer in print, here it is: In S.A.T.B. unison, treble and alto usually sing the same pitch, and tenors and basses an octave lower. We say 'usually,' because in the event of a passage lying very high, the altos might sing an octave lower than the trebles, and the basses an octave below the tenors. In fact, what is generally known as unison singing with S.A.T.B. voices is really octave singing, the disposition of the octaves depending (as we have shown) on the compass of the music.

H. A. M.—All you have to do is to send your manuscript to a likely publisher and then go on hoping. You ask us to give you 'an idea of a likely publisher.' How can we, without seeing the MS.? (But please don't take this as a hint that we want to see it. We don't!) Surely you know enough of the kind of music issued by the chief music publishers to be able to decide for yourself. You wouldn't send a fox-trot to Novello's, or an anthem to Lawrence Wright, would you? Very well; there is the simple principle on which you must act.

H. R. B.—You do not say what books on choir management you have tried (and found wanting), but we have found the following to be useful: 'Choral and Orchestral Societies,' Venables (Curwen); 'The Chorusmaster,' Antcliffe (Paxton); and, of special value on the performing side, 'Choral Technique and Interpretation,' Coward (Novello). In the long run, however, choir management is a matter of tact and gumption. Books will help, but only in cases where there is already a natural gift for the work.

M. E. C.—(1.) The diploma you hold is of little value in musical circles that matter. (2.) Memory-playing: see our advertisement pages for several teachers who specialise in this. A book you may find useful is one recently published by the Richards Press, St. Martin's Street, W.C., 'Memorising Music,' by Gerald Cumberland. (3.) 'The Art of Pianoforte Pedalling,' by H. Farjeon (Joseph Williams). (4.) 'Musical Interpretation,' by Tobias Matthay (Joseph Williams).

A. C. W.—The list of Handel's works in the German Handel Society's edition gives the number of Organ Concertos as twelve. But Handel was in the habit of using his instrumental movements in all sorts of ways, and it may be that some of the other Concertos of various kinds were used for the organ. The standard collection is that edited by Best (Novello). Best also put together a series of other movements, and made a further set of six Organ Concertos, published by Boosey.

H. B. S. (Johannesburg).—The method of beating in 7-4 time depends on whether the seven is made up of 4 and 3, or 3 and 4. Even this disposition may vary from time to time, so the main thing is to see that your up-beat comes with the seventh pulse, just as your down-beat is with the first. The particular kind of waggling between the down and up varies with conductors.

DIAPASON.—'Elementary Harmony,' C. H. Kitson (Oxford University Press), 'Musical Forms,' Ernst Pauer (Novello), 'Analysis of Form in Beethoven's Pianoforte Sonatas,' H. A. Harding (Novello), 'Fugue,' J. Higgs (Novello). We don't think you will be able to take the examination without the help of a teacher.

R. O. H.—(1.) Parry's 'Summary of Musical History' (Novello) ought to meet your needs, backed up by reading of biographies of certain outstanding composers in 'Grove' or elsewhere. (2.) 'The Art of Teaching Music,' by J. Warriner (Trinity College), and 'Psychology applied to the Teaching of Music,' by Mrs. Curwen (Curwen).

A. G. W.—There is no performing fee payable in regard to music performed in churches, provided such music is a part of, or in connection with, a service. There will be no point in your taking out a Performing Right Society's licence unless you are likely to be giving frequent performances of works under non-service conditions.

S. E.—(1.) We explained the harmonic and melodic minor scales in answer to 'J. R. K.' in our April number. (2.) The characteristic intervals are the third and sixth—c—e flat and c—a flat in the key of C. (3.) The pianoforte method you name is certainly a good one.

F. W.—We cannot discover the publisher of Study in C minor, by Sternberg. He composed over a hundred pianoforte works, which are issued by various Continental houses. If you order the work from Novello, they will no doubt be able to obtain it.

A. 'H.—Reubke's Pianoforte Sonata is published in the Cotta Edition, and may be had from Novello. This, with his Organ Sonata, appears to be the only work by Reubke now obtainable, although he wrote also some songs and small pianoforte pieces.

W. F. L.—(1.) Walford Davies's choral arrangement of 'O filii et filiæ' is published by Curwen's, under the title 'Spiritual Songs.' (2.) Try 'The Story of the Organ,' by Abdy Williams (William Reeves, Charing Cross Road, 5*s.* 6*d.*)

J. B. R.—As you say, the Guild grants diplomas for very simple examinations. They carry no weight.

---

In reply to 'Solitude,' who asked last month for particulars of sound-proofing materials, Mr. N. C. Underhill kindly writes from Oxford to say that there is an American preparation made from dried seaweed (he believes it to be 'eel-grass' from the Sargasso Sea), and pressed between paper or thin card. Mr. T. S. Henderson, of Glasgow, also writes, informing us that the preparation is Celotex Insulating Lumber (Celotex Company of Great Britain, 323-26, Australia House, Strand, W.C.2).

In our reply to 'J. H. R.' last month we said that Delius appears to have published no pianoforte solos. Several correspondents kindly write to tell us that there is a set of Three Preludes by Delius published by the Anglo-French Music Co. (Oxford University Press). Mr. W. R. Anderson also writes saying that there is a Dance in the Universal Edition, No. 7037—a piece actually written for harpsichord.

While we are making good our omissions let us also say, for the benefit of 'I. O. A. (Nigeria)' that there is a biography of Dykes. It is 'The Life and Letters of J. B. Dykes,' by the late Canon Fowler, and may be had from Messrs. Andrews, Saddler Street, Durham, 3*s.* 6*d.*, post free. We have to thank several correspondents, as well as Messrs. Andrews, for this information.

Will our correspondent 'Billet' please send his name and address? A letter is waiting for him.

Music in the Foreign Press

DEBUSSY'S 'ODE À LA FRANCE'

In Musique (March 15), Louis Laloy describes the circumstances in which Debussy during 1917 wrote the 'Ode à la France,' a cantata for soprano solo, chorus, and orchestra, of which a full draft (vocal, with pianoforte accompaniment, and notes as to intended orchestral setting) was found among his papers.

In Excelsior (March 21), M. Leon Vallas declares that it would be desirable to publish a facsimile of the autograph manuscript, so that all may know exactly how much of the forthcoming orchestral version (carried out by M.-F. Gaillard) was actually thought out by Debussy.

ALEXIS DE CASTILLON

In the March Tablettes de la Schola, Pierre de Bréville writes in praise of Castillon's unjustly neglected music:

> His 'Psalm 84,' his concertos, his fugues, his Violin Sonata, his Quintet, his Pianoforte Quartet, are works of great artistic value. As for his songs, it is incredible that all tenors should not sing 'Renouveau,' all contraltos 'La Mer,' all mezzos 'Le Bûcher' and 'Sérénade mélancolique,' all baritones 'Le Semeur.'

A PROMISING RUSSIAN COMPOSER

In the course of an article on the younger generation of composers at Leningrad (Melos, March), Igor Gliebof specially singles out Gabriel Popof (b. 1904), praising his Septet for wind and strings and his Pianoforte Suite.

BEETHOVEN'S GRAND FUGUE, OP. 133

In the March Musik, Hermann Scherchen submits this work to a very careful and thorough examination, and concludes:

> The performance of the work seems to require more than the physical power of four men. In its original form it should be played only as part of the Quartet, Op. 130, for which it was originally intended: for then the balance of the two parts (of the Quartet as originally devised) creates a different order of strain or tension ('eine andere Art der Spannung ergibt'), that is predetermined by a performance of the fugue alone. The performance of the fugue alone can be successful only if entrusted to a full orchestra of strings—Weingartner's setting being excellent for the purpose.

THE AUTHORSHIP OF AN 18TH-CENTURY ORATORIO

In the March Revue Musicale, G. de Saint-Foix writes:

> In the library of the Florence Conservatorio there is a manuscript score (catalogue No. 261) entitled 'Isaaco, Figura del Redentore, Oratorio in due atti. Del Sigr. W. Mozart.' Its music is beautifully luminous and simple, so that on the face of things the description does not appear altogether incredible. At one time (as recorded by Pohl) it was ascribed to Haydn. Its real author is Josef Mysliweczek (b. 1737, near Prague, d. at Rome, 1781). It was performed in 1777 at Munich, where a manuscript score, probably autographed, is preserved.

BRUCKNER'S RELIGIOUS MUSIC

In Le Ménestrel (February-March), Fritz Munch considers Bruckner's religious compositions, and comes to the following conclusions:

> The Bruckner revival in the composer's own country is not due to a sudden turn of fashion. His music, indeed, closely corresponds to one of the greatest requirements of our time. It embodies a strong reaction against the excessive subjectivism that was the 19th-century's weakness, against the materialism that blinded us to the essential reality. It contains all the main elements that seem to influence the outlook of the post-war generations. For all these reasons, Bruckner's voice is well entitled to a hearing.

M.-D. CALVOCORESSI.

Gramophone Notes

BY 'DISCUS'

H.M.V.

It is with surprise that one finds the records of Schubert's C major Symphony announced as 'the first ever made.' The fact is a reminder of the vagaries of recording, some composers and many undoubtedly attractive works being passed by, while others are recorded again and again. No doubt the Centenary will see the issue of four or five sets of the C major. This H.M.V. recording is of a performance by the London Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Dr. Leo Blech (D1390-95). I do not as a rule follow records with a full score, because it seems fairer to judge from the standpoint of the average gramophonist, who (I imagine) uses no such aids. The virtues that we desire in a record are those that reach the ear without help from the printed page. For once in a way, however, I broke my rule, and listened to the Symphony score in hand. I am bound to say that the result was depressing. So much detail seemed to be missed, so much was unclear! My thumb would have gone down, but for the favourable—even enthusiastic—verdict passed by others present, who were not made hypercritical by seeing as well as hearing. So my thumb—almost against conviction—must go up, and a decision made to follow no more records with the score. Blech keeps things alive, though his changes of pace in the Andante are open to question. He is too prone to adopt the obvious (and amateurish) formula: loud = quick; soft = slow. Some pages of this movement are taken at rather more than double the speed of others, with no apparent justification. It gives an impression of a lack of confidence in the music. Is Schubert to be 'revived,' like Handel, by mere getting over the ground? The Andante is, I think, the least successful movement in these records. The Scherzo and Finale are perhaps the best. The only serious defect seems to be the weakness of the wood-wind in soft passages, where the strings usually swamp them.

The only other orchestral records are of the light kind. Paul Whiteman and his Concert Orchestra play 'When day is done,' with, for companion pieces, some extracts (labelled, with unintentional irony, 'vocal gems') from 'The Cocoanuts' (C1460). On C1461 are 'Just a melody' and 'My blue heaven,' by the Salon Orchestra and the Salon group respectively, the latter including some singers with voices too good for the material and for the sloppy, slightly-off-pitch method that is now fashionable in 'Palais de danse' circles. The playing of the orchestra is capital—full of ingenious bits of colour and trickery, all reproduced with a clearness too often lacking in records of real music. For those who want mere dance music, regardless of quality of material and performance, there is a record of a couple of Tangos played by Juliade Caro and his Tipica Orchestra and the Mexican Tango Orchestra (B5441).

Erica Morini makes her H.M.V. debut with an extract from Goldmark's Concerto in A minor and the well-known Dvorák-Kreisler Slavonic dance in E minor (D1397). Her tone in fortes seems a little hard and pressed; where delicacy and brilliance are required she is first-rate. Her choice of the Dvorák-Kreisler piece is a good example of what was said above concerning the over-recording of certain works.

Bruch's 'Kol Nidrei' is another. Every 'cellist has to make a record of it, apparently. I suppose a lot of folk like it, but its attractions have somehow eluded me. Here it is, once more played by Suggia, who takes both sides of a 12-in. over the job (DB1083).

Yet another inescapable is the 'Song of the Volga Boatmen.' Chaliapin has made records of it long ago, but on the principle that one can't have too much of a good thing, he does it again—wonderfully, of course. The version is that of Koenemann, for orchestra, conducted by Coates. Fine climaxes are forthcoming, but it strikes me as being overloaded. On the other side is Rimsky-Korsakov's 'The Prophet,' inevitably overshadowed by the 'Boatmen.' (DB1103).

Some exquisite Bach records are to be noted. Elisabeth Schumann sings an air from the 'St. Matthew' Passion, and 'Es ist vollbracht,' from Cantata No. 159. The flute and oboe obbligati, played by John Amadio and Leon Goossens, are beyond criticism (D1410). People sometimes accuse Bach of poor orchestration, and it must be admitted that generally he was far more concerned with the music than with its medium. The truth is that his ensemble method was more often than not that of chamber music. These two airs are excellent instances of his treatment of the voice as one of a small group of solo instruments meeting on equal terms. Perhaps the growth of the chamber-music public is partly responsible for the increased appreciation of this beautiful side of Bach's art—a side that was undervalued in the past by those who regarded the solos as mere vocal music, and, because of its exacting nature (exacting in musicianship, not fireworks), decided that Bach could not write for the voice!

The other Bach record is of the Bach Cantata Club, conducted by C. Kennedy Scott, singing a couple of the songs from the Schemelli book, arranged for choir by Wüllner (D1366). They are beautifully sung and recorded—in fact, it would be difficult to name better examples of choral ppp recording. Yet I have doubts about such studied and extremely expressive treatment of what was primarily simple—even homely—material.

Carillon music is delightful in its proper surroundings, which give the harmonics a chance of dispersal; in a room the effect is apt to be noisy and confusing. The Borough carillonneur of Loughborough (W. E. Jordan) is recorded in a Country Dance, by Newton, and Mendelssohn's 'Spring Song' (B2687), and a couple of Fantasias on popular songs (B2683). Mr. Jordan plays with capital rhythm, and I should like to hear him at about a half-mile's distance on a calm summer's evening. By the by, cannot some more negotiable description for him be found than 'Borough carillonneur'? I wonder what Loughburians make of that second word.

Exiles from York will hear, not without emotion, the record of the Minster bells, rung by the local Society of Change Ringers. As usual, the change-ringing makes one think of the proverb—the more it changes, the more it seems the same. But it is a grand and stirring clamour, punctuated by the solemn boom of the 10-ton bourdon, with Great Peter as a no less fine baritone, so to speak (B2691).

The mid-April list adds the 'Death and the Maiden' Quartet to the Schubert Centenary material. The Budapest Quartet are the players, and their performance leaves only one loophole for the fault-finder. Why do they take the Trio of the Scherzo at little more than half the pace of the rest of the movement? No change of pace is marked in the score—at all events in my copy—and it is contrary to usage. The change of style, and the major key, give all the variety that is needed; a markedly slower pace merely adds a sentimental touch to a work that in its preceding movements has abundance of emotion (1422-26). An odd side being available, it is given to 1423, and filled by the Canzonetta from Mendelssohn's E flat Quartet.

The best example of quartet playing that I have heard for some time is that of the Virtuoso Quartet in the Variations from Haydn's 'Emperor,' and Frank Bridge's 'Londonderry Air.' The delicacy and finish of the Haydn is about as perfect as can be desired. The more highly coloured Bridge piece is no less good in its different way (C1470).

Kreisler plays two of his own works—a brilliant 'Gipsy Caprice' and an unoriginal and tuneful 'Shepherd's Madrigal' (DB1110).

Previous records of Segovia's guitar solos have left me wondering at the popularity of the player and instrument. His latest explains it. In Tarrega's 'Tremolo Study' and Turina's 'Fandanguillo'—the latter the more vital work of the two—the variety in colour and nuance is fascinating. Most of the famous keyboard-smiters of to-day might well go to school to Segovia in regard to delicacy and sensitiveness of rhythm and tone-colour (D1305).

The revival of the Straussian waltz is reflected in the recording room. Rachmaninov brings forward Tausig's version of the waltz, 'One lives but once'—a fine bit of crisp playing, but poor in tone (DB1140); and Evelyn Scotney sings, with orchestra, a transcription of 'The Blue Danube' and 'Voce di primavera' waltzes, with Italian words, most of which have got lost on the way. Only the utmost clarity of execution justifies such arrangements, and is not always forthcoming, some passages—e.g., the opening of 'Voce di primavera'—being smeared (D1403).

Tremendous power and vivid contrasts are features of the Love Duet from 'Madame Butterfly,' sung by Sheridan and Pertile. The orchestral part is unusually good, too (DB1119).

I envy the millions who enjoy McCormack's singing; they have one source of pleasure denied to me. I can never get past that reedy tone, with its occasional touch of snivelling. His singing of Schubert's 'Die Liebe hat gelogen,' however, has less of it than usual, and almost converts me; but 'Who is Sylvia?' makes me an unbeliever again. Were McCormack less eminent, one would venture to complain that Schubert's melody is badly treated by the phrase ends being pressed where they should be shaded off—e.g., 'Sylviaaa'—and that the words are distorted: 'wieese' for 'wise,' 'land' for 'lend,' &c. And why sing 'That adored she might be' when Shakespeare wrote 'That she might admired be,' and 'To her garlands let us bring' instead of 'To her let us garlands bring'? No doubt the singer is following some miscreant of a vocal editor, but we expect great singers to know their Shakespeare well enough to put mere composers and editors in their places (DA933).

The Royal Opera Orchestra, Covent Garden, conducted by Lawrance Collingwood, gave a rousing performance of 'Shepherd Fennel's Dance,' but even they cannot make Tchaikovsky's 'Sleeping Beauty' panorama other than the poor thing it is (C1469).

There are a couple of choral records. The Glasgow Orpheus are far better than E482 would have us believe, though it is a goodish record—Brahms's 'Dimlit Woods' and Pearsall's 'Great God of Love' (E482). The Chapel Royal Choir, conducted by Stanley Roper, sings well in four popular hymns (B2693).

COLUMBIA

Brahms's F minor Pianoforte Quintet is played by the Léner Quartet with Mrs. Olga Loeser-Lebert (L2040-44). The medium is a difficult one for recording purposes. A string quartet alone almost invariably comes off; a pianoforte solo, sometimes. But the combination of the keyboard instrument with the strings raises problems of balance and blend. Even heard at first hand, the problems are not always solved. These records are good in that the pianoforte tone is practically free from jangle, and rarely interferes with the clarity of texture. The only two blemishes that strike me are in regard to the surface—usually Columbia's strong suit—and the weak effect of some very quiet passages. The poor surface may be merely peculiar to my particular records; the other defect is due to an impression of distance rather than diminution of power. It is as if some of the nuances in the string parts were got by the retiring and approaching of the players. (Probably a certain amount of 'faking' of this kind is usual; nobody will complain of that so long as the device is not apparent to the ear.) The Scherzo and Finale are the most attractive parts of this work—at all events, in this recording. Pianoforte tone is unusually good.

When a work is ascribed to plain Bach we naturally assume that the composer is John Sebastian. The Sinfonia recorded on L2047, though labelled 'Bach,' is by John Christian. Much of this Sinfonia suggests early Haydn. The opening Allegro is capital bright stuff. The revival of interest in this period ought to lead to our hearing more of such works at Queen's Hall. It is easy to dismiss these pioneers in symphonic and sonata form as having said nothing that was not expressed infinitely better by Haydn and Mozart; but a proportion of their work is almost certainly worth hearing for its own sake, and unquestionably should be heard for its historical interest. What has become of the Final Presto in this record? Only the opening Allegro and the Andante are on my disc, though the Bulletin alleges that the three movements are there. The players are 'Willem Mengelberg and his Concertgebouw Orchestra,' as the label puts it—a method of description right enough for Sousa's Band but not for a symphony orchestra. The recording is excellent in the quick movement, but a trifle muddy in the Andante, owing, apparently, to the undue resonance of the empty hall.

The Grenadier Guards Band plays a jolly selection from 'Tom Jones' (9297). There is everything to be said for this, but little for a similar selection from 'Lilac Time,' wherein Schubert is occasionally reharmonized and generally mangled (9298).

People sometimes dispute as to which is the best national anthem, and there will never be agreement. But we are now able to see that one of the worst is that of Afghanistan. Here it is, played by the Band of the R.A.F. On the other side is the 'Marseillaise,' played by the Band of the Garde Républicaine. A plainer harmonization and more 'pep' would have improved it (4378).

The St. George's Chapel Choir, Windsor, has made a good choice of unaccompanied pieces—Stanford's 'Glorious and powerful God' and Charles Wood's 'Hail, Gladdening Light.' The former is capital in ring and all-round musical effect, but the words are heard only fitfully. The Wood anthem is far less clear in texture, owing, apparently, to the not uncommon fault of letting the tone and rhythm sag slightly in soft passages (9303).

Attractive violoncello playing is that of Gaspar Cassado in Saint-Saëns's 'Le Cygne' and Glazounov's 'Mélodie Arabe.' It is a pity that the pianist in the former failed to realise that the undulating accompaniment has its place in the picture and should be heard clearly throughout (D1600).

Harriet Cohen is recorded to less advantage than usual in a couple of Chorale Preludes by Bach (4740). She has arranged the exquisite little coloratura Prelude on 'Blessed Jesu, we are here,' but its melodic line cannot be drawn satisfactorily on the pianoforte. Musicians may decry the organ, but when all is said there are certain works that can make their full effect on no other instrument, and many of Bach's Chorale Preludes are among them. Moreover, the tone in this record is 'plunketty,' and Miss Cohen's somewhat rigid treatment—the fault of the instrument, no doubt—fails to give the music the plasticity that it would certainly get in an adequate organ performance. On the other side is Rummel's transcription of 'Mortify us with Thy grace.' Personally, I should have liked a slightly quicker pace and more flowing style here. This movement is, as usual, incorrectly described as a chorale prelude, whereas it is a chorus from the Cantata for Quinquagesima Sunday. The wrong description sometimes sends folk worrying publishers for an organ chorale prelude that does not exist.

Two of our best English singers join forces in a couple of duets: 'In Springtime'—a poor setting by Newton of 'It was a lover and his lass,' and Lehmann's 'At love's beginning.' Dora Labbette is well suited, but Norman Allin is less so, though he makes his great voice foot it featly enough. The misfit is a matter of colour rather than of agility (4739).

Still it is good clean singing all the time, which is more than can be said of a duet from 'La Sonnambula,' in which Maria Gentile and Enzo de Muro Lomanto wobble to such an extent that one is often in doubt as to what notes are being sung. There is a good deal of bad intonation, too. Opera 'fans' will no doubt enjoy it, because it is what they call 'expressive' and dramatic (D1599).

Raymond Newell has a capital recording voice, and his words are more than ordinarily clear and natural. I look forward to hearing him in better songs than Sterndale Bennett's 'Leanin'' and Russell's 'Gipsy Dan.' He will make his singing even more attractive when he varies the power more. At present he keeps on a level forte too long (9302).

The 'Columbia' recording of Schubert's C major Symphony has the great merit of clearness. The players are the Hallé Orchestra. Sir Hamilton Harty's reading is straightforward. In the Andante he neither hurries nor dallies, and the result is far more satisfactory than the eccentric version of Dr. Blech. There is a 'cut' of twenty-eight bars in this movement — a step which few will decry. Throughout the whole Symphony the balance is good. The wood-wind parts, even at their quietest, are never lost. With two recordings of the work appearing together, the gramophonist finds choice difficult. My own preference is for the 'Columbia' set, mainly perhaps on the negative ground that it is free from the touches of exaggeration that annoy me in its rival. From this negative virtue, however, result the positives of clearness and consistency (L2079-85).

Another Schubert Centenary recording is of the Sonatina in D, for violin and pianoforte—a simple and engaging work that is played rather too slickly by Sammons and Murdoch (4794-96). But if only one of the four Sonatinas is being recorded, it is a pity the best was not chosen. No. 2, in A minor, is a far better work. In this Centenary year we should in fairness bring forward only the pick of Schubert, seeing that we cannot perform it all.

Three records of Stainer's 'Crucifixion,' made in Marylebone Parish Church, are above the average in the reproduction of chorus and organ. The singing, however, seems too consistently loud, and the phrasing short at times (e.g., in 'God so loved'). Tone and diction are unusually good. The singers are the choir of the church, with the organist, Ronald G. Tomblin, in charge (9315-17).

An important set of organ records arrives too late for the detailed discussion they deserve. I hope to devote a special article to them next month.

Player-Piano Notes

BLÜTHNER

It would be difficult to find an opera likely to lose so little in transcription as 'La Tosca' (59469-471, Acts 1-3). The arrangement is well up to the usual standard of this edition, and the performance, by Szendrei, is excellent. The first two rolls are particularly good, the firm, clean rhythm in the opening of the second being especially noticeable. The music of the opera falls off considerably in the third Act, and, consequently, the third roll suffers a little from scrappiness. However, here is a very good set for the opera enthusiast.

In direct contrast is an arrangement of the Prelude to Act 3 and the Bridal Scene, from 'Lohengrin.' The playing, by Julius Prewer, is good, but all his efforts cannot disguise the thin patches, nor supply the necessary colour and variety in tone, in music so essentially orchestral as this. Any pianoforte transcription of it is bound to be unsatisfactory (56587).

There is also an arrangement by Lange of Gounod's attractive, if slightly commonplace, 'Frühlingslied,' and though there are some feeble spots, these can be mitigated and a certain amount of satisfaction gained by intelligent management (54479, Ordinary).

It is refreshing to hear something of Grieg—it makes one wish it were possible to hear more of him in recital programmes. Here is Ilonka von Pathy giving us a good, sympathetic performance of 'Fantasie—In Autumn' (55581).

Unusual but charming, and typically French, is Fauré's 'Pavane,' Op. 50, delightfully played by the composer. It is not everybody's taste, but the player-pianist to whom it appeals will be well repaid for the little extra care demanded for a more than ordinarily good result (55912).

There is warmth, rhythm, and good passage work—in fact all that one has learnt to expect from Teresa Carreño — in that fine player's performance of Chopin's Valse in A flat, Op. 42 (55800). D. G.

Occasional Notes

It has lately become evident that the Musical Times has among its readers a steadily increasing number of teachers. We propose, therefore, to give more attention to their needs, and we make a start this month by setting apart a few pages headed 'Teachers' Department.' In this will be included each month articles dealing with appropriate subjects, reviews of teaching material (both books and music) Answers to Correspondents, and such other matter as seems likely to be useful. We hope that the general reader will find the 'Teachers' Department' not without interest, and also that the teacher, remembering the importance of general musical reading, will not skip the rest of the journal. The best teacher is usually the best-read and most fully informed all-round musician.

Before Schubert's Centenary year has gone too far on its way we venture to plead for a more worthy celebration than at present appears to be likely. So far, the vision of orchestral concert-givers seems to be bounded by the 'Unfinished' and C major Symphonies, with an occasional glance at the 'Rosamund' music. Comparatively few people attend chamber music and song recitals, and so there is a danger that the great majority of concert-goers will continue to hold the view that one of the most prolific of composers wrote little more than three works still worth hearing, two of which have been played threadbare for many years past. Schubert's other Symphonies are on a lower level than the C major and 'Unfinished,' it is true, but the best of them ought to be heard during the year, either wholly or in part. Several of their curiously Beethovenish Scherzos and no less Haydnesque Finales still make good hearing. There is also an orchestral transcription, by Joachim, of the four-hand Grand Duo in C, of which report speaks highly. This also calls for hearing. A Centenary should be more than a mere orgie of already over-familiar music; it ought to give the public an opportunity of seeing a composer whole.

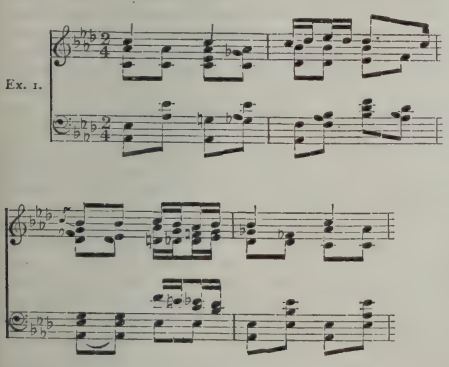
Another direction in which orchestral concerts this year might break new ground and at the same time help towards a fitting celebration of Schubert, is in the matter of chamber music. Why should not an orchestral programme include one of Schubert's fine examples in this field? Hundreds of people would thus make acquaintance with works at present available only by means of the gramophone or through occasional broadcast performances. If it be objected that Queen's Hall is too large for a string quartet we have only to point to the invariable success of the Léner Quartet recitals at that hall. And if precedent is wanted, it is supplied (appropriately enough) by the Royal Philharmonic Society's programme book of February 23, in which is given a list of music played at the Society's concert on April 14, 1828. It included Symphonies by Haydn and Spohr, a Weber Overture, a Concerto by Moscheles, two vocal duets, and a Mozart String Quartet.

Perhaps the Society (still one of the most enterprising bodies in the country) will consider this suggestion when making its arrangements for next autumn. The Centenary of Schubert's death falls on November 19. A concert at Queen's Hall on or near that date, with a programme including one 'draw' in the shape of a familiar orchestral work, some chamber music, a group of songs, and a work for chorus and orchestra (one of the Masses, say), would be an attractive and worthy celebration of the composer who is still generally held to be deserving of Liszt's splendid tribute, Le musicien le plus poète que jamais.

---

Schubert has suffered a good deal at the hands of arrangers, and will perhaps have a particularly bad time this year. But if pianoforte recitalists bring forward Ornstein's dreadful travesty of a 'Moment Musical,' critics will do their duty, we hope. Pouishnov recently made a record of a similar distortion by (we think) Godowsky, but beyond a protest in the 'Gramophone Notes' in this journal, we saw no objection raised by reviewers. We quote the opening phrase of Ornstein's 'improvement,' so that readers may know the tasteless distortion when they hear it, and (being unable to throw things) may resolutely refrain from applause:

Ex. 1.



(Since the above has been set up, we have received a letter on the subject from Mr. Clinton Gray-Fisk. It appears on p. 442.)

The appointment of Mr. Herbert Whitton Sumsion to Gloucester Cathedral probably came as a surprise to the public. Mr. Sumsion, however, had strong claims, both local and musical, being a native of Gloucester, and having been associated with the Cathedral since 1908 (when, aged nine, he became a probationer), until a year or two ago. His career has been so brilliant that we set it out in detail. He was made a chorister in 1910, articled to Sir Herbert Brewer in 1914, appointed assistant in 1915, obtained the A.R.C.O. diploma in 1916, and gained the Fellowship six months later, when still only seventeen years of age. From 1917 till early in 1919 he held a commission in an infantry regiment. In the following year he gained his Mus. Bac., being then only in his twenty-second year. His first appointment outside Gloucester was to Christ Church, Lancaster Gate; he held posts also as assistant music-master at Bishops Stortford College, and as assistant teacher at Morley College, London. In July, 1926, he was appointed to a professorship of harmony and composition at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia. He was engaged also to direct the organ department at the Institute, but as no organ was yet available he decided to return to England. Last year he was appointed to Coventry Cathedral, on the recommendation of Sir Herbert Brewer, and was due to take up his duties at Coventry in the coming June. On Sir Herbert Brewer's death, however, negotiations between the authorities of the two Cathedrals led to his being released from Coventry in order to go to Gloucester. Mr. Sumsion is still in America, but is expected to return home in about a month's time. He will, of course, be conductor-in-chief at the Gloucester Festival of the Three Choirs this year. Meanwhile the chorus training is being carried on by Mr. S. W. Underwood.

Photo by] [Navana, Ltd.

HERBERT WHITTON SUMSION

We have received particulars of a series of gramophone recitals given in villages by the Hereford Times. The idea is an excellent one, and the audiences are large and enthusiastic. The promoters draw attention to the fact that the programmes include no jazz. With no desire to be captious we point out that there are many worse things than the best specimens of jazz, and a few of these worse things were among the items played. It is true that they appear to have been the most loudly applauded, but the fact merely shows the need for courage and discretion on the part of those responsible. The report says, 'Experience shows that while real highbrow music may appeal to the comparative few, there is no necessity to approach lowbrow stuff in order to evoke really deep interest and enthusiasm.' Unfortunately, the lowbrow stuff was approached. Perhaps, however, the promoters think the milder term 'middlebrow' is a fairer description of 'The mighty deep,' 'In a monastery garden,' a bad organ 'Storm,' and a certain setting of 'Abide with me.' For our part, we should prefer a good piece of present-day dance music to any of these things. Let the Hereford Times take its courage in both hands and give a little consideration to 'the comparative few,' who surely ought not to be penalised for possessing real foreheads! Having 'released' a little friendly criticism, we wish this capital enterprise all success.

The Daily Express of April 12 contained a note on the London Select Choir that calls for protest. The Choir, it tells us, 'has done valuable work in promoting unaccompanied singing, which has been little practised by other choirs in England.' No figures are available, but it is safe to say that the choirs in this country who do little else but sing unaccompanied must number several thousands. The London Choir may be as select as its title claims, but it is far from being a pioneer in a cappella singing.

An article in a Welsh newspaper concerning composers and their methods, contains some information that we gladly pass on. 'Irving Berlin, the most famous melody-maker of this generation, does not know one note from another, and composes by tapping out one note after another until he has built them up into a song.' We are not surprised to hear this, but we sit up when the writer goes on to assure us that Mr. Berlin 'has a peculiarity common to many composers in that he can only play and compose in one key.' The peculiarity is no doubt common among the Berlins, but no real composer is similarly afflicted. What is the lonely key affected by Mr. Berlin?

> . . . His music gets its peculiar, haunting strain by the fact that it is originally composed in the key of D (sic)—all on the black notes of a piano—and is then transposed for him by a hack who knows all the technique of music but lacks the imagination and gift of composition. When Irving Berlin came to Europe last year with his bride he was at a party along with many eminent English composers. Each played in turn, and it was amusing and pleasing when Berlin played to see him hard at work on the black notes.

Most of us who have frequented smoking concerts of the rough-and-ready type have met with vamping experts who accompanied every song in G flat—the result being occasional difficulties in regard to vocal compass.

> . . . Not all composers are technically bad musicians, and most of them at least can write down their own compositions.

We like that 'at least'!

Towards the end of the article the writer shifts his ground, and dwells on the necessity for technical skill:

> . . . Only genius can hope to succeed in composition without a thorough technical knowledge of music. . . . One of the reasons why most jazz music is bad is because it is made by musical cobblers. One man strums a melody, another fits to it outrageous harmonies, and another cobbles the lot together into a cacophonious (sic) whole.

This is the method pursued by 'the most famous melody-maker of his generation,' who is, in fact, one of the musical cobblers.

The Dominant for last month contained a capital bit of foolery in the shape of a 'spoof' supplement, dated April 1. Sir Richard Terry's article on an imaginary Tudor composer named Nicholas Bugsworthy probably deceived most readers till they were well in the toils. The advertisement page had some good hits too. Altogether, a sprightly effort. Though we ourselves have neither the inclination nor the space for such lightmindedness (holding the view that music, being a serious art, should be handled in a becoming manner), we are not disposed to frown on our jesting contemporary.

From a review of the new 'Grove':

> One thing is certain. When the next edition of 'Grove' appears, many of us who read it to-day will either be much older or will have passed away.

This is bold prophesying, but we are prepared to be even more daring, and substitute 'all' for 'many.'

New Music

PIANOFORTE

A new series of pianoforte music, the Clarendon Series, under the general editorship of John Ireland, is being issued by the Oxford University Press, and a first batch of numbers contains some very interesting stuff. York Bowen's 'Three Preludes' are particularly attractive, and are written with a knowledge of the instrument and its possibilities that is not felt in some of the other examples. This composer, moreover, generally gives a polish and finish to his work that lift it out of the ordinary. These qualities are found especially in the suave and graceful Prelude No. 3, and similar distinction of handling is apparent in the more robust No. 1. E. J. Moeran's 'Bank Holiday' is in a mood reminiscent of Grainger: there is a swinging diatonic tune, and an ostinato middle section that provides effective contrast—the whole thing being very high-spirited and game. Moeran's 'Summer Valley' is an essay in the manner of Delius, dedicated to that composer. The piece might easily have been called 'After hearing Brigg Fair.' It has many beautiful moments, even if the voice is not the voice of E. J. Moeran. 'Tarn Hows,' by Hilda Cooper, has atmosphere and a picturesque sense of colour, but is long for the amount of material it contains. The music does not develop: it goes on. Still, the touch is fresh and graceful. Other numbers in the series are 'Rabbit Hill,' 'Elf Dance,' and 'A May-Day,' by Roy Agnew, and 'Eclogue,' by H. E. Randerson.

'Seven Rêveries for the Cultivation of Style,' by Frances Terry (Schirmer), show a great deal of sincere and sensitive musicianship. Nos. 2 and 6, for instance, although they do not pretend to be deep and searching music, are extremely thoughtful, and clearly expressed, without affectation or elaboration. The composer would probably (one guesses) be the last to claim much for these studies, but the ordinary musician will find a lot to appreciate in the quiet and graceful phrases.

C. H. Stuart Duncan's 'Celtic Legend' is a set of short variations on a modal theme. The variations do not go very deep; and there is not a vast wealth of implication in the theme, but the composer gets what there is out of it. The outlines are clean and firm, and the music is unpretentious. William Baines was attempting very big things in the 'Pictures of Light' that Elkins have just published. And at times he comes near to success. 'Drift-light,' for example, with its quiet and undulating basses and its monotone of semiquaver movement, is a striking idea well expressed. In 'Pool-lights' again there is a considerable feeling of shifting, opalescent, reflected lights; although, musically, some of it seems to be reflected from Scriabin. 'Bursting Flames,' on the other hand, only seems to be hammering away about nothing. No doubt the idea was vivid to the composer, but the music does not pass on to the listener any similar experience. It is impossible, however, not to feel with the suite as a whole, immature as it is, that there is music behind it all.

Two pieces by Kenneth A. Wright, published by Winthrop Rogers, show a certain facility with pianoforte effects and a sensitiveness to atmosphere, two very prevalent diseases. But atmospheric or picturesque music must be very austere to be tolerable, and 'Night wind on the downs' is merely flabby and amateurish when the slender charm of its opening phrase is exhausted. 'The Juggler' is a humoresque. 'Keep a robust tune going at the top,' says the composer, 'with a continuous bouncing accompaniment underneath.' This juggler keeps on too long at one trick; his entertainment lacks variety.

Edward Organ, of Acock's Green, Birmingham, sends three Bartók publications which have been known to musicians for some time, and are now obtainable through his agency. These are the 'Ten Light Pieces,' 'Second Fantasy,' and 'Esquisses.' The first contains some typical Bartók of the earlier style, such lovely things as 'Evening in the country' and the folk-song arrangements; whilst the 'Esquisses,' although they date also from 1908, or thereabouts, seem to represent a later development in the composer's outlook. But they are not difficult to follow, and, like all Bartók's work, they sound extraordinarily fresh and vivid. That is one of the striking things about Bartók—his slenderest pieces have this touch of keen individuality; his particular point of view seems never to have occurred to any other composer; and some of these numbers have a really arresting personality in them. Those who want to get to know Bartók should approach him by way of these tiny but highly individual pianoforte pieces.

Louis Schnitzler's 'Ten Impressions for Pianoforte' are published by Keith Prowse, and are rather unusual in style: their harmonic bases are sometimes far-fetched, sometimes effective, and generally unusual, and there is a freshness about one or two of the numbers that is very attractive. Much more elaborate in lay-out are Henry Eichheim's 'Oriental Impressions' (Curwen), which call for a very considerable technique; there is a command of modern pianoforte effect, but the general atmosphere is rather conventional and dull.

Leo Kok's 'Enfance' is a set of eight easy pieces illustrative of a child's day, and containing a good deal of gentle and fanciful music. The commonplace is very carefully but not always successfully avoided, the manner is sometimes a little too studied, but the pieces are attractive. Two numbers of G. O'Connor Morris's 'Six Pictures of Childhood' are much harder to play than the foregoing pieces. They need a bigger stretch and considerable technique, and are tuneful and straightforward. 'The Little Soldier' and 'Dreamland' are the titles, and Augener is the publisher. This firm also sends Adam Carse's arrangement of the 'Berenice' Minuet, Donald Powell's of the Chorale from Bach's fourth Cantata, 'Thus we celebrate the high festival,' and William Murdoch's of the Vivaldi-Bach Concerto in D minor. This last is a 'virtuoso-arrangement.'

'Three Plain Tunes' is the modest title of a very good set of pieces by Thomas Wood, which has just been issued by the Oxford University Press, and shows the same qualities that gave distinction to Dr. Wood's larger suite, 'In the quiet County.' There are similar good 'plain tunes,' a similar virility of texture and design, and a similar feeling of poetry behind the very self-contained manner. The composer's methods are so austere, he allows himself so few notes, that without this sense of beauty behind it the music might sound very cold and dull. As things are, it never does so: and the virtue of a general outlook that is austere is that beauty in that clear atmosphere is so much more keenly felt. Each of these pieces has its own charm. Most immediately appealing is No. 2, with its quiet and restful beauty; but there is much to be said for the last also, which has an intriguing little middle section tune, and some very happy later uses of its piquant flavour. Technically the Suite is easy to play, but only a real musician will get the best out of it. Yeaman Dodds's 'Lament,' in the same series, is another good piece of work, more conventional in outlook than Dr. Wood's, but in its own way sincere, well-written, and effective. 'Pierette,' another publication of the Oxford University Press, is a happy example of Ernest Farrar's fresh and sensitive talent. Without being far-fetched the music is thoroughly unexpected, and has all the marks of a distinctive mind. The opening of Humperdinck's 'Albumblatt' is almost too ingenuous to be true: it is like reading 'a cat can see a rat.' You wonder if it is a leg-pull. As the piece develops, firmly and consistently, however, there is much more than this 'to it,' though it is never easy to associate the work with the writer of 'Hansel and Gretel' (International Music Company). 'March Winds,' by Felix Swinstead, is a rather meagre little breeze set up by quick finger work—a useful study, no doubt (Joseph Williams). Norman O'Neill's 'Suite for Pianoforte' (Keith Prowse) consists of four pieces, 'Theme and Valse,' 'Romance,' 'Intermezzo,' and 'Ragtime,' which are connected by their relationship to the chief theme, but are in no very real sense variations. At its best the music is well written, musicianly light music; but the composer's ragtime is a poor business. Mr. O'Neill dislikes ragtime, and 'tis not to be expected that he should write it well. Perhaps, however, this is only one of his ways of showing contempt for it.

Carl McKinley's 'Song in the dusk' (Schirmer) calls for a lot of technique to deal with its unnecessarily elaborate lay-out. There is a certain amount of effective colour and sweep about the music, but the underlying thought is flabby and commonplace in the extreme. Three of Aurelio Giorni's Twenty-four Concert Studies in all keys are much better stuff, with moments of convinced and convincing utterance. But music has got to be very powerful in impulse if it is to survive being stated in such an elaborate way. The Studies, as such, seem very good.

An interesting set of nine short pieces (but not very easy) is Otto Siegl's 'Klavier-büchlein.' The composer looks back a good deal to Bach's three-part Inventions, and he writes in a way that commands respect. There is some very interesting music here, if one is not put off by the occasionally abstruse sound of the thing. The publisher is Ludwig Döblinger (Leipsic), who also sends Alexander Spitzmüller-Harmersbach's 'Sechs Klavierstücke für Tanz.'

T. A.

---

SONGS

The Oxford University Press has published six more songs by Van Dieren which are of considerable help to those who still feel unable to 'size up' this composer. 'Mon cœur se racommande à vous' is a tune attributed to Orlando di Lasso, to which Van Dieren has added an accompaniment, and the treatment indicates clearly the way in which his mind works. One sees that it is true, as his admirers have always insisted, that his style is contrapuntal; and here, when his harmonic scheme is to some extent dictated to him, the parts flow smoothly and freely. Clashes, when they occur, are due to the determination to carry through a certain set of tendencies which meet and resolve satisfactorily when they are sympathetically treated. This has been at the root of most, if not all, of the developments that harmony has made in the course of the few centuries whose music we know, and Van Dieren in this case is following tradition.

When his harmonic scheme, however, is dictated only for his own fancy or the feeling of the poem, Van Dieren seems to become in fact less free. The independent and flowing style of his parts remains noticeable, but his mind looks so inevitably to the ninth as a basis for all these shifting effects that the colour is far less varied than one expects. He seems to deal not so much with colours as with shades of the one autumnal brown towards which he constantly turns—which he finds so richly laid on in these warm, intimate canvases of Walter Savage Landor. Van Dieren's style is really extremely limited. Within these limits, as in the beautiful 'Love must be gone,' he attains a sure and moving effect: when he tries to leave it his touch seems less satisfactory. Spring is not in his blood at all, and his setting of Thomas Nashe's poem of that name, despite his studied lightness of texture, does not match the poem in any real way. A very curious work is 'Epiphanias,' a kind of twelfth-night jest, based on a Goethe poem. The three kings are called upon, each has his own music: they introduce themselves, and take their leave. There is some attractive stuff in it, and a good deal of parody, one suspects. The use of 'Ich grolle nicht,' for the third king, who 'eats his fill and drinks his fill,' is pretty far-fetched, but will no doubt raise a laugh in Chelsea, where even the bare mention of Schumann seems to pass as a good joke.

The same publishers send W. G. Whittaker's 'Four Songs of the Northern Roads,' which are full of strength and the marks of an uncompromising rugged personality. At times the effect is bleak and bare in the extreme, as in 'Scatterpenny'; at other times the bareness is curiously threaded with a strand of warm emotion, as in 'Song of a Lass.' Altogether the feeling of the set is one of real power, both of outlook and handling: but the sternness and austerity of the music will alienate those who prefer a softer atmosphere. Less personal in style are 'Four North Country Songs,' by Jeffrey Mark, from the same press. Three of these are original, and the fourth is an arrangement of a folk-song. All are modal and 'folk-songy,' and somehow have the air (which is particularly strong in 'Lal Dinah Grayson') of not being the real thing. There are too many highly-educated gentlemen nowadays playing 'yokels.' Dr. Whittaker's songs had obviously grown from a study of the Northern folk-tunes; they were equally clearly not imitations, but personal utterances. Mr. Mark's music does not give this impression of directness.

Victor Hely-Hutchinson has the same feeling for Walter de la Mare as Armstrong Gibbs has; and in his music there is no small touch of the magic of the poetry. His handling is firm and sensitive, his outline always strong even when gentlest, and there is a welcome distinction of outlook which is never attained with any sense of strain. Four songs from the Oxford University Press all show a real sense of poetry: 'The Old Soldier' is robust, 'Silver' is gentle and elusive, and both are very successful. 'The Huntsmen' makes attractive play with its humorous opening figure, but most penetrating of all, in its extremely quiet simplicity, is 'Dream Song,' which is a charming work. These songs are most welcome. 'Drinking Song' is a boisterous, diatonic tune by Gordon Slater, harmonized in splashes. It is an effective song which might be by anybody.

The Oxford Press also sends ten new numbers in Dr. Whittaker's finely-edited series of 'Arias from the operas of Handel,' and Schubert's 'The gods of Greece' ('Götter Griechenlands'), with a new translation by Fox-Strangways and Steuart Wilson. Paterson's, of Glasgow, send three additions to their series of solos from the Cantatas of Bach. Basses should look at the beautiful 'Slumber on,' from Cantata No. 82.

From Curwen's come 'Bartholomew,' an unusual and well-written song by B. Burrows, 'Peg-a-Ramsey,' an arrangement by E. W. Naylor of the traditional tune, to which the arranger has written some words, and 'In the Highlands,' an early song by Armstrong Gibbs. Vaughan Williams's 'Let us now praise famous men' has also been issued by this house as a solo song, in two keys. Glazounov's 'Duo,' Op. 80, for soprano and contralto, is published by Belaieff, Leipsic, and a very pleasant little work it is, with generously spreading phrases, almost reminiscent of Parry. It makes no great demands, and has no pretentions, but is grateful and musical. Stanford's 'Witches' Charms' (Cramer), is effective, and rhythmically attractive, and, needless to say, beautifully written—but it does not match, indeed it hardly likes to refer to, the bizarre and gruesome horror of Ben Jonson's poem. From Schirmer's come three settings by Arthur Farewell of poems by Emily Dickinson, and Cecil Burleigh's 'Westward,' a sensitive treatment of some lines from 'Hiawatha.'

T. A.

---

VIOLIN

The 'Lyric Poem,' for violin and pianoforte, by Eugène Goossens (J. & W. Chester), increases our respect for this very gifted musician who refuses to grow up. The poem is admirable, but not more so than the music Goossens used to write ten years ago. The violin part has been lavishly fingered—presumably by the composer himself. Goossens, however, ought to know that most violinists capable to do justice to this piece will insist on the fingering which suits them best—which may or may not be the author's. Not a few instances could be given which any player could improve—unless the aim is one of continuous portamento. If this is the case, an intimation to this effect would have simplified matters a good deal.

Lajos Bárdos's 'Three Hungarian Folk-Songs' (Oxford University Press) should be a boon to dashing fiddlers with no knowledge of any position higher than the first. They are not, however, as simple as they look, and the accompaniments are not such as one would expect to find 'in the natural state.'

B. V.

VIOLA

Bach's six Suites for 'cello, adapted for the viola, revised and fingered by Svecenski, need neither commendation nor comment. For the violinist and the violist Bach provides the foundation of a good technique and style not less surely than in the case of the organist and the pianist. There is, however, one innovation in this edition (William Organ, Birmingham) which will cause some alarm. On p. 3 there is an 'explanation of marks' wholly unnecessary and rather disturbing. If every editor and every composer begins to invent or adopt new symbols the task of the performer will be more difficult than ever. It is bewildering to find that a certain sign long associated with a definite effect has come to have a new meaning; it is maddening to find the new explanation more confusing than the symbol.

Svecenski, for instance, tells us that a dash (_) over a note means 'that same should be held a trifle longer than its actual value.' Hitherto this symbol has been taken as an indication of bowing which has no reference to length of time. A succession of dashes (_ _ _ _) means detached notes, and a succession of dots surmounted by dashes (‾ ‾ ‾ ‾ ‾) means 'notes to be well separated.' What is the exact difference between 'detached' and 'separated'? The Editor wants the Roman figures I., II., III., and IV. to stand for A string, D string, &c. Is it not simpler to write A st. or D st. in place of I. and II. if in so doing we avoid all possibility of misunderstanding?

I admit that Svecenski is neither the first nor the only one to err in this respect, although he does go further than any other editor or composer I can call to mind. Is an understanding beyond hope? If we go on at this rate the time must come when fiddlers and 'cellists must gather together and settle once for all the disputed points.

B. V.

FLUTE

Three pieces for flute and pianoforte (Rhapsody, Idyll, Elegy), by Arthur Barclay (J. & W. Chester), deserve to be praised as music written with full understanding of the possibilities of the medium. There is no case here of flute 'or violin.' These pieces must be played on the flute or not at all. As music they are pleasant enough, even though they do not bear the stamp of a strong individuality—probably because a somewhat conservative instinct tends here and there to overcome modern tendencies.

B. V.

CHAMBER MUSIC

We have often heard it said that the present age is a barren one. If it is, we are reaping some of the advantages possible only when we are not overpowered by dazzling genius. More consideration is given to the great men of the past, and hastily condemned, neglected works are rescued from oblivion. Composers themselves seem a little more anxious to consult the needs of performers, and write for instruments which before were passed by. Dame Ethel Smyth, for instance, has just published some 'Variations on "Bonny Sweet Robin,"' for flute, oboe, and pianoforte (the flute and oboe parts admitting of possible substitutes in violin and viola), and 'Two Interlinked French Folk-Melodies' for the same combination (Oxford University Press). These are excellent examples of the composer's skill which combines an innate taste for telling melody and a certain cunning in the arrangement of harmony. Some men may perhaps feel a certain want of 'ballast'; the music does seem to ride a little too lightly. But so far from seeing in this error or weakness, I take it to be neither more nor less than an indication of a nature as full of courage as of resource. By all means let us test our anchors and our ropes before we put to sea. But let us also recognise the bravery of more adventurous voyagers.

Dame Ethel Smyth's Concerto for violin, horn, and orchestra has also been published in an arrangement as a Trio for pianoforte, violin, and horn, with viola and 'cello as substitutes for the last (Curwen). This is good news, for the original form debarred many from a composition which has not a few admirers. It is dedicated to 'the best friend of English music, Sir Henry Wood.'

Under the heading of chamber music should be included also a short piece entitled 'All through the night,' for pianoforte, violin, and violoncello, by Reginald Redman (Augener). The melody (a Welsh air) is good and the harmonization careful, but the writing for the violin is bad, for it goes suddenly from the very easy to the very difficult. Moreover, the difficulty is quite unnecessary, as the effect aimed at (twenty-fifth bar) could be more easily obtained by means of harmonic notes.

Frank Haworth's 'Two Andantes for two violins' (Augener) are easy, pleasant, and short. I am rather puzzled by the direction Nella stila antiqua. I presume it to be Esperanto for 'In the ancient style.'

Bach's Sonata in C minor, for violin and pianoforte (Schirmer), finds conscientious editors in Hugo Kortschak and Edwin Hughes. Fingering and bowing are carefully annotated, and the print is clear.

B. V.

ORCHESTRA

William Byrd's 'The Carman's Whistle' has been arranged for string orchestra by Granville Bantock (Curwen)—a charming tune scored in masterly fashion. Without comparison with the original it is impossible to discover exactly how much the work in its present arrangement owes to the 'arrangeur.' But we may trust Bantock to do such work in a scholarly fashion. At any rate, the score as it stands must tempt all conductors of string orchestras. The viola part is unusually important, but the work does not make heavy demands on the technique of the players.

B. V.

CHURCH MUSIC

Recent additions to Novello's music for Sunday School Festivals comprise attractive and well-written tunes by Hugh Blair—'Faithful Shepherd, feed me,' for unison singing, with optional second treble part—and Edward S. Deans, whose two hymns 'Lord of an earth of glory' and 'Take my life and let it be' are for unison and four-part singing respectively. For Sunday School Anniversary services, Hugh Blair has written a bright, tuneful little children's anthem, 'Every morning the red sun.' It is for unison singing, with brief portions for two trebles. In all the above the music appears in both notations. The same publishers send also a simple setting of the Ninefold Kyrie by H. A. Chambers, for use with the composer's Service in G, and an arrangement for men's voices of Stanford's Te Deum in B flat by C. S. Lang—voice part only—to be used with the original edition for choir and organ. The arrangement is mainly unison, with some divisions into two parts.

A chorus from Bach's Cantata No. 37, 'I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills,' has been arranged by Ivor Atkins and J. Michael Diack (Paterson's Publications). The adaptation for pianoforte or organ of the instrumental parts has been well done, and indications of the original scoring—two oboi d'amore, strings, and organ—are also given. This is an effective, stately little movement, which might be confidently undertaken by any average choir. Another interesting short anthem is Gustav Holst's 'Eternal Father,' poem by Robert Bridges (Curwen). It is for soprano solo, chorus (S.A.T.B.), and organ with bells (ad lib.). Most of the work is written over a descending scale-passage of six notes. In the last section (6-2 time) these six notes form a ground-bass in minims, over which tenors and basses sing the tune, while sopranos in three parts—preferably placed far away—sing a continuous succession of Alleluias (ppp) to the notes B C E G, the first sopranos singing the high G. Apart from this section, which obviously requires delicate handling, the anthem is quite easy.

An interesting addition to the Tudor Church Music series issued by the Oxford University Press is the Service in D minor by John Farrant (of Salisbury). It comprises the Te Deum and Jubilate Deo and the Magnificat and Nunc dimittis. Ouseley—we are told by the editor, Dr. E. H. Fellowes—wrongly attributed this Service to Richard Farrant of Windsor, and his edition was scored from MSS. at the Chapel Royal, St. James's, a text which appears to have been late and much debased. The present edition, which has been transposed up a tone, is from the Peterhouse and Durham MSS. The writing is harmonic, and nowhere provides any serious problems for those accustomed to unaccompanied singing. An accidental is missing from the organ part in the last bar of the Te Deum and from the treble part in bar 4, p. 3, of the Magnificat. The same publishers send H. E. Piggott's setting of the Communion Service. This is well-written, devotional music intended for unison and congregational singing, although the Sanctus, Benedictus, and Agnus Dei may optionally be sung in four-part harmony.

From the H. W. Gray Co. (Novello) come a Motet, 'Fairest Lord Jesus,' by Peter Christian Lutkin, and a short festival Cantata, 'Great and Marvellous,' by Rowland Leach. The Motet is for baritone solo and chorus (S.A.T.B.), and is based on the Lutheran Chorale 'Munich' (1677). The part-writing is interesting, and the work, which is of moderate difficulty, should prove effective if well sung, preferably without accompaniment. The Cantata consists of four numbers: (1) tenor solo, 'God so loved the world'; (2) chorus, 'Great and Marvellous'; (3) soprano solo, 'And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes'; (4) choral finale. The soprano solo is a fairly elaborate piece of work which would make an effective separate number. The choruses are broadly-written, vigorous movements, in which some imposing effects are obtained by quite simple means. As a whole, the Cantata is not difficult. G. G.

UNISON SONGS

The cheap school edition of the second book of Boulton and Somervell's 'Our National Songs' costs only sixpence. Here are the words and tunes of a score of songs, all of these islands except one, a Dutch South African psalm tune. These are the more welcome in that they explore some less familiar paths (Cramer).

PART-SONGS FOR CHILDREN'S AND FEMALE VOICES

With Parry's pretty little 'Cradle Song (two-part) is issued Sharman's 'Sea Mood,' a unison song allowing the use of power and asking for plenty of colour (Novello).

Victor Hely-Hutchinson has set four of Blake's 'Songs of Innocence' for S. and M.S., and one—'The Little Boy Lost'—for S.S.M.-S. He happily touches off the simplicity of the poems, which are dangerously easy to set. All move at a brisk pace, except No. 3, 'Infant Joy.' There are a few three-part chords in this, also in No. 2, 'The Lamb' (Oxford University Press).

In Margaret Crichton's 'What the robin sang' there are signs of inexperience in the laying out of the parts, but the little piece is pleasant in its unpretentious way. It is for S.A., the lowest note being B flat.

Another of Robert Jones's pieces, edited by Warlock, is 'Now have I learn'd with much ado' (S.S.). This is a dainty conceit, in which the voices answer each other tastily. It is suitable for older singers (Curwen).

MALE-VOICE

Paterson issues a simple arrangement for T.T.B.B. of the Coronach from 'The Lady of the Lake'—'He is gone on the mountain,' by David Stephen. Male choirs of no great numbers could make this effective.

MIXED-VOICE

Dr. Sweeting has arranged for Cramer's 'Choral Library' the old English song 'The Willow Tree' (S.A.T.B.). This is a piece for sympathetic singers, able to make their voices convey simple pathos without losing colour. The arrangement is quite straightforward. Graceful and agreeably fluent is H. A. Chambers's setting of 'There is a garden in her face,' for S.A.T.B. Choirs able to touch the notes richly and lightly will enjoy this. It is from Novellos, who reprint the chorus, 'Forward through the glimmering darkness,' from Parry's cantata, 'War and Peace'—a sturdy song of high aspiration, meet for the times. If the orchestra is available, so much the better. W. R. A.

The Musician's Bookshelf

'William Byrd.' By Frank Howes.

[Kegan Paul, 7*s.* 6*d.*]

The latest number in the 'Masters of Music' series breaks a good deal of fresh ground, as was to be expected of the first full-size book on Byrd. Mr. Howes has gone about his task in an unusual way. Hitherto biographers have chosen one of two courses. Either they have cleared the biographical matter out of the road, and then spread themselves over the music, regarding the latter as the department of most importance to the average reader; or they have run the biographical and critical matter tandem-wise, showing en route the relationship between the man and his work. Mr. Howes evidently felt that methods suitable for Beethoven or Mozart would probably be a good deal less satisfactory for Byrd, because so much of the biographical data is conjectural, and when all is said the story of his life is scanty.

But a man and his work are one, and as we have no authentic portrait of Byrd, either verbal or pictorial, Mr. Howes reverses the usual process, and helps us to evolve one from a study of the composer and the circumstances and period in which he worked. As a result, the book contains a great deal that is only indirectly connected with its subject. Thus it opens with quite a lengthy treatise on early English music and its instruments, the influence of the Reformation on music, and other kindred topics. This reconstruction of the set of circumstances that produced the Tudor-Elizabethan school is well and interestingly done. The musician will welcome so much information handily set forth, and the average reader will not find it forbidding. Having set the scene, Mr. Howes takes us through Byrd's works in detail, following on with a final chapter of fifty pages in answer to his question, 'What sort of man was it who produced this work?' We thus end the book with as definite a portrait as can be got in this way. The tenacious character of Byrd, which shows itself in the thoroughness and seriousness of his music as a whole, is no less seen in the stubbornness with which he fought one law-suit after another. Mr. Howes daringly holds that Byrd was 'a Quaker fifty years before George Fox was born,' and certainly he makes out a good case. 'The only two qualities [says Mr Howes] that differentiate him from the typical Quaker, beside the fact that he was a musician, are his absence of humour and his feeling for romance.' (Incidentally one speculates as to how many Quakers may not have been musicians. The non-use of music in their religious exercises may mean little. Many churchmen prefer services at which there is no music, although—perhaps because!—they themselves are musical.)

It is a pity Mr. Howes could not have helped out his discussion of the music with far more liberal use of music-type. He does all that can be done with words alone, but, as usual, one feels the inadequacy of verbal descriptions of music that is unfamiliar, and in some cases not easily at hand. Fortunately the gramophone comes to the rescue. It was a happy thought to give references to such records as are available. With these, plus copies of a few works that a reader may count on hearing sung by madrigal choirs from time to time, it is possible to get a good working knowledge of Byrd's music.

In discussing the 'Great' Service, Mr. Howes holds that its insistence on one key is fatal to its performance straight through, and suggests that choral societies should 'perform it, suitably interspersed with anthems, motets, and solos.' Isn't he exaggerating this one-key difficulty? Many of Bach's most popular cantatas have very little key variety. True, they have variety of other kinds, including that provided by the orchestral accompaniment. Yet the difficulty does exist in their case, and it has been overcome by the cultivation of sufficient historical sense in the hearer to enable him to adjust himself. So easily has this been done that one of the most frequently sung of all is the very one that is unaccompanied, and is in E minor practically throughout—'Jesu, priceless Treasure.' I believe that the 'Great' Service could be endured at a sitting by more people than Mr. Howes thinks capable of the feat. Anyhow, the idea of interspersing it with other material is too risky. A better way of accommodating the restless modern ear would be to transpose certain movements; a tone up or down would make little or no difference to the singers, but would be a great relief to the listener.

Speaking of one of Byrd's Christmas pieces, Mr. Howes says 'It is worth noticing that Byrd begins this chorus in compound pastoral rhythm, like so many writers of Christmas music (e.g., Bach and Handel), and, as in other carols, passages move in thirds and sixths. It cannot be a case of association that gives these features to Christmas music; it can only be that the mind of man symbolises this Christmassy emotion in auditory images of this shape.' But surely it is a case of association. Handel wrote his Pastoral Symphony just so because he had at the back of his mind the words 'There were shepherds abiding in the fields,' and as hardly any poet or painter uses Christmas as a subject without reference to the shepherds, even so the composer naturally becomes pastoral and six-eight-y, with a liberal allowance of thirds and sixths.

Mr. Howes has a good chapter on the instrumental music—a department in which listeners need even more help than in the choral music. As he says, a good deal of it is tentative and of no great interest; but there are charming pages in it, and to the musician it is a mine of interest—especially such things as the Variations on 'The woods so wild.' A general appreciation of this old keyboard music is hindered by the unsuitability of the pianoforte as its medium, the unexpected difficulty of much of it, and the scarcity of practicable performing editions which the average domestic player can use. It is perhaps too much to hope for more gramophone records of old English keyboard music played on the harpsichord; yet the venture may be no more rash than was the issue of madrigal records ten years ago. Certainly the general musical public will get but a poor idea of this music without such help.

A good practical feature is an Appendix giving the titles of all the works of Byrd that are mentioned in the book, classified, and with the publishers' names, and (in the case of music issued in sheet form) the price. As was said above, reference is also made to such gramophone records as are available, and the records themselves are critically discussed. Not so many years ago the author of a book of this kind would have thought such details beneath his august notice—a high-horse attitude that led to the sparseness of the public in this country for books and journals concerned with music. Happily the new generation of musical biographers, whatever faults they may have, possess one prime merit: they work throughout with a realisation that if the composer of long ago is to be revivified, it will not be by the retailing of apocryphal anecdotes, but by bringing the reader into direct contact with the music, both as performer and listener. This is a capital virtue in Mr. Howes's book, which has the further merits of good writing, and the note of tempered enthusiasm without which musical criticism is a thing of nought. Only in one expression of his admiration for Byrd does he appear to overshoot the mark. On p. 231 he says that Byrd 'disputes with Purcell the title of the foremost British composer.' It is a thankless job, this handing round the title of 'greatest,' because the grounds of comparison are too hazy. But for my part I am tired of hearing Purcell hailed as the greatest English composer. A marvellously gifted one, if you like; an English Schubert—almost a Mozart. But when so much is said it has to be admitted that compared with the Bachs and Beethovens he is short-breathed. This was due to circumstances, no doubt, but the fact remains, and it makes him a potential rather than an unmistakable first-rater. We have to admire him with qualifying 'buts' and 'ifs': had he but been born fifty years later; or had he but lived twenty years longer; and so on. Similarly, Byrd, great as he was, is kept below the peak by his limitation of mood, and, on the instrumental side, by the undeveloped state of his medium and technique. However, since crowns are being bestowed, even a humble reviewer may take a hand. So, after claiming to be no less a Byrdite and Purcellian than most musicians, I make bold to say that the greatest English composer is happily alive to-day, and his name begins with E. H. G.

'Les Ancêtres Flamands de Beethoven.' Par Raymond Van Aerde.

[Godenne, Malines.]

It has long been held, in a vague sort of way, that Beethoven was of Flemish descent, though the identity of the town from which the family came was uncertain. The honour seemed to rest between Antwerp and Louvain. Mr. Van Aerde, the archivist of Malines, has now settled the matter, and in this handsomely produced book sets forth in detail evidence that shows the Beethovens to have been a Malines family. Louis, the composer's grandfather, it seems, was born at Malines, not at Antwerp, and was in the Malines Choir School. This fact was discovered in a curious way. Michel van Beethoven, the father of Louis (b. Malines, 1684), fell on evil days late in life, and became a bankrupt. According to legal custom, the two sons, Nicholas and Louis, were summoned with other relatives. Mr. Van Aerde gives a facsimile of the summons issued against Louis by the Malines Curator Steenmans in 1744, wherein Michel's son is described as 'Sr Louis van Beethoven, musicien in het Cabinet van Syne hoogheyt den Ceurvorst van ceulen tot Bonn' ('musician at the Court of his Highness Prince-Elector of Cologne, at Bonn'). The house of the family has also been traced—No. 11, rue des Pierres—and a photograph of it is given. There are many portraits, facsimiles, and illustrations of Malines past and present. Mr. Van Aerde deserves well of his townsfolk, and of musicians generally; first, for his research; and, second, for giving us the results in so attractive and well-documented a form. H. G.

'Sullivan's Comic Operas: a Critical Appreciation.' By Thomas Dunhill.

[Arnold, 10*s.* 6*d.*]

'Origin and Development of Light Opera. By Sterling Mackinlay.

[Hutchinson, 21*s.*]

Mr. Dunhill's book is welcome on several grounds. More than any other composer, Sullivan has suffered from being written about by authors with very slender musical qualifications—authors more concerned with personal gossip, royalty and sales statistics, &c., than with the only thing that matters much about a composer. Competent critics in the past have given too little notice to Sullivan, regarding him as a gifted composer who took the wrong turning by writing mere comic operas instead of adding to the shelvesfull of still-born oratorios. We know now that fifty years ago the best critical opinion on the Continent saw that the real excellence of Sullivan was shown only in these 'mere' comic operas—a view now increasingly held in this country. Mr. Dunhill is particularly well qualified to deal with his subject, partly because he is a discerning enthusiast who knows the Savoy operas from A to Z, and also because he himself has a happy knack in writing music that in its tunefulness and deftness of touch undoubtedly owes a good deal to Sullivan.

But above all, the book is timely for the protest it utters concerning some stupid conventions and restrictions which, as Mr. Dunhill shows, prevent much of Sullivan's music from making its complete effect.

The bulk of the book is inevitably devoted to a detailed discussion of the works in chronological order. The reviewer need do no more than recommend the devotee to go over the familiar ground with Mr. Dunhill, pianoforte score at hand for reference. He will discover many excellences that have probably escaped him hitherto, and he will enjoy future performances the more through having learnt something of the means whereby Sullivan made some of his best hits. All this part of the book may be passed over here, and the available space used to draw notice to some points raised in the closing pages.

The chapter on 'Sullivan and the Orchestra' is incidentally a severe indictment of the owners of the performing rights of the Savoy operas. It seems incredible that of only one opera—'The Mikado'—is the full score available. This exception was lithographed in Germany, and may be seen at the British Museum, so the term 'available' is euphemistic.

Why [asks Mr. Dunhill] are the full scores not published and on sale?

> What is the meaning of the strange policy of secrecy which has never been adopted in the case of any other important composer in modern times? It seems incredible that the British people should be denied access to the work of one of their greatest musicians in its only proper and authentic form. It is more incredible still that it is impossible to hire a manuscript full score for the purpose of conducting a performance, and that even the musical director during the London season is obliged to be content with a 'cued-in' pianoforte copy on his desk. This is a state of things that no self-respecting conductor can view with equanimity, but he has no choice in the matter, for the owners of the performing rights have decreed that he shall never be allowed to do his job as thoroughly as he would wish to do it.

And he reminds his readers that when, in 1926, Dr. Malcolm Sargent conducted a season at the

(Continued on page 437.)

Rosy May

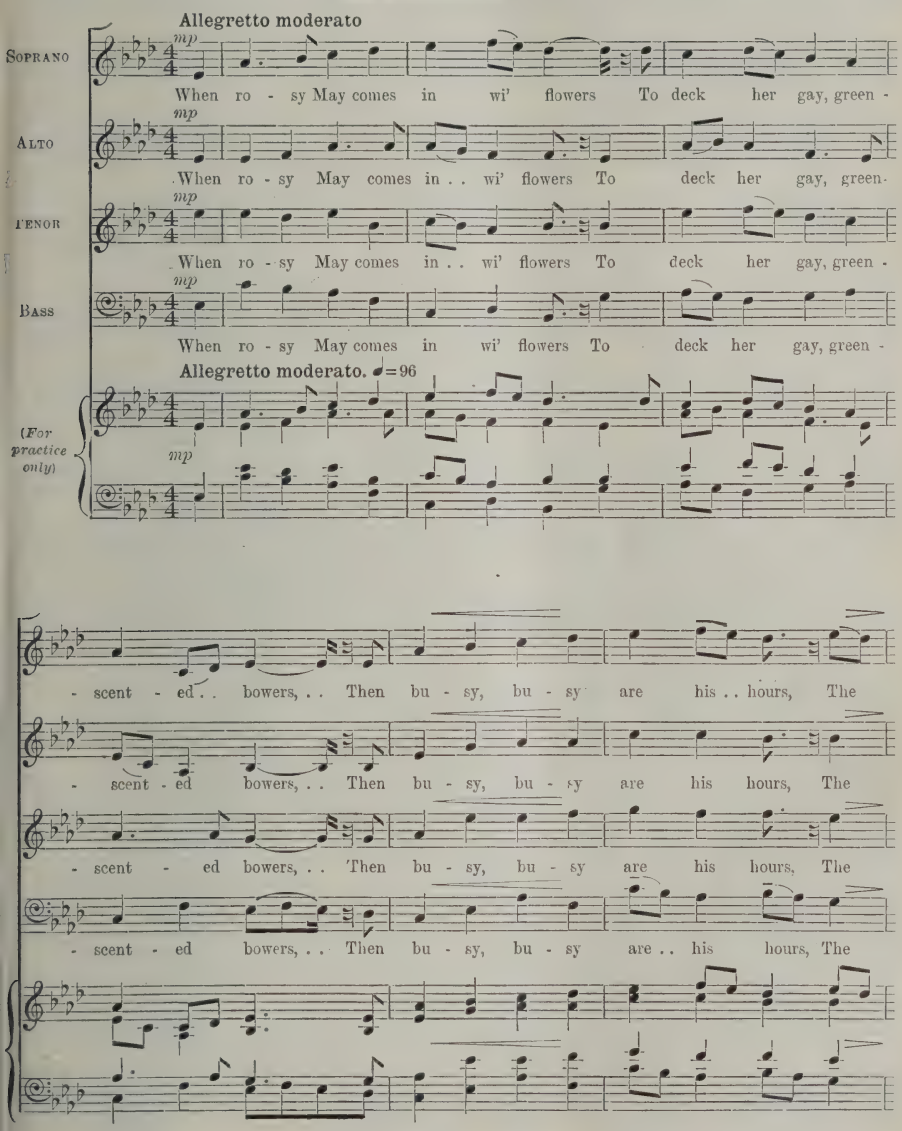
FOUR-PART SONG FOR MIXED VOICES

Words by Burns

Scottish Folk Tune
Arranged by Edgar L. Bainton

London: Novello and Company, Limited; New York: The H. W. Gray Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Allegretto moderato
Soprano
Alto
Tenor
Bass
mp
When ro - sy May comes in wi' flowers To deck her gay, green -
When ro - sy May comes in . . wi' flowers To deck her gay, green -
When ro - sy May comes in . . wi' flowers To deck her gay, green -
When ro - sy May comes in wi' flowers To deck her gay, green -
Allegretto moderato. ♩=96
(For practice only)
- scent - ed . . bowers, . . Then bu - sy, bu - sy are his . . hours, The
- scent - ed bowers, . . Then bu - sy, bu - sy are his hours, The
- scent - ed bowers, . . Then bu - sy, bu - sy are his hours, The
- scent - ed bowers, . . Then bu - sy, bu - sy are . . his hours, The

Copyright, 1928, by Novello and Company, Limited

mf
gar - d'ner wi' . his pai - - dle. The crys - tal wa - ters gar - d'ner wi' his pai - - dle. The crys - tal wa - ters gar - d'ner wi' his pai - - dle. The crys - tal wa - ters gar - d'ner wi' . his pai - - dle. The crys - tal wa - - gen - tly fa', The mer - ry birds are lov - ers a', . . The gen - tly . . fa', The mer - ry . . birds . . are lov - ers a', . . The gen - tly fa', The mer - ry birds . . . are lov - ers a', . . The
- - - ters fa', The mer - ry birds are lov - ers a'. . . The cres.
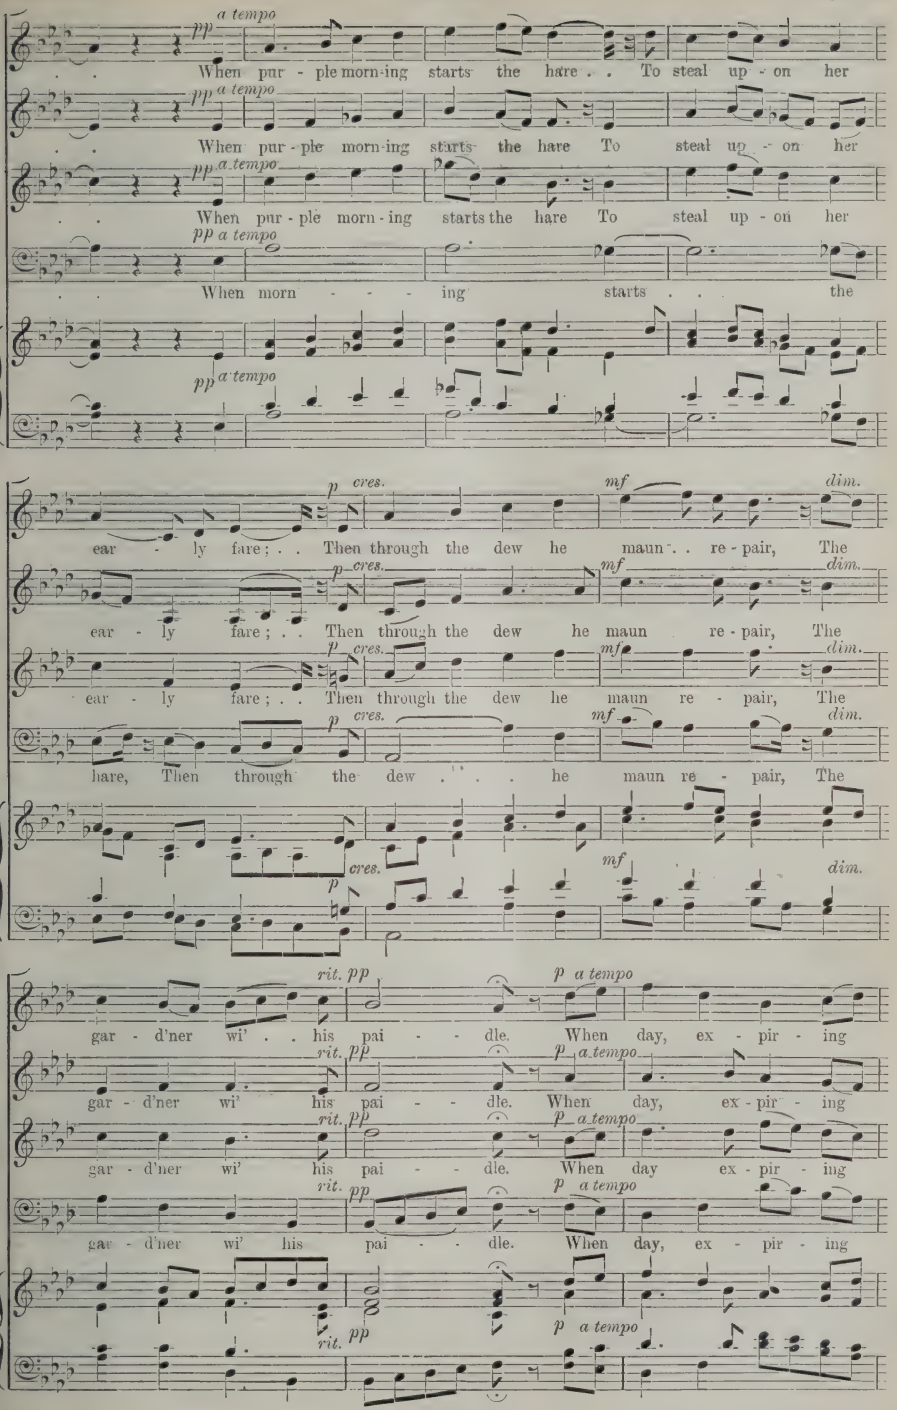
rit.
scent - ed breez - es round him blaw, The gar - d'ner wi' . . his pai - - dle. . .
scent - ed breez - es round him blaw, The gar-d'ner wi' his pai - - dle. . .
scent - ed breez - es round him blaw, The gar - d'ner wi' his pai - - dle. . .
scent - ed breez - es round him blaw, The gar - d'ner wi' . . his pai - - dle. . .



pp a tempo
When pur - ple morn-ing starts the hare . . To steal up - on her
When pur - ple morn-ing starts the hare To steal up - on her
When pur - ple morn - ing starts the hare To steal up - on her When morn - - - ing starts . . the p cres. mf dim.
ear - ly fare; . . Then through the dew he maun . . re - pair, The ear - ly fare; . . Then through the dew he maun re - pair, The ear - ly fare; . . Then through the dew he maun re - pair, The hare, Then through the dew . . . he maun re - pair, The rit. pp p a tempo
gar - d'ner wi' . . his pai - - dle. When day, ex - pir - ing gar - d'ner wi' his pai - - dle. When day, ex - pir - ing gar - d'ner wi' his pai - - dle. When day ex - pir - ing gar - d'ner wi' his pai - - dle. When day, ex - pir - ing in the west, The cur - tain draws o' Na - ture's rest. . . He in the west, The cur - tain draws o' Na - ture's rest, . . He in the west, The cur - tain draws . . o' Na - ture's rest, . . He in the west, The cur - tain draws o' Na - ture's rest, . . He cres.

f
flies to her arms he loves . . best, The gar - d'ner wi' . . his pai - dle.
flies to her arms he loves best, The gar d'ner wi' his pai - dle.
flies to her arms he loves . . best, The gar - d'ner wi' his pai - dle.
flies to her arms he loves . . best, The gar - d'ner wi' his pai - dle.

(Continued from page 432.)

Savoy, after getting his own way and being allowed a sight of the sacrosanct original manuscripts, he was accused of tinkering Sullivan's orchestration. What he had done was merely to remove errors, and bring out many points that had inevitably been lost to sight as a result of the stupid policy of restricting conductors to a pianoforte score!

The only suitable term for such a topsy-turvy situation is happily provided by the operas themselves: it is Gilbertian. And what a lop-sided and tasteless policy is that which has so jealously guarded the libretti and certain bits of 'business' in the operas, and at the same time prevented the music from being heard in its integrity! The injustice done to Sullivan's work by the very people who might have been expected to show the most scrupulous regard for it, has its counterpart in the Philistinism of the average Savoy audience. To give an example mentioned by Mr. Dunhill, how many people have really heard the little orchestral fugato that greets the entry of the Lord Chancellor in 'Iolanthe'? It is one of Sullivan's best bits of musical humour, and, moreover, it has a thematic connection with the song which follows. Yet, as Mr. Dunhill says, it is invariably drowned by the ovation which greets the entry of the 'star' who plays the part. But what can be expected of an audience which, by its ridiculous habit of encoring practically every number, destroys the structure and continuity of the works?

We do not find 'The Mastersingers' held up while the 'Prize Song' is repeated; a fine piece of rhetoric or a rich bit of low comedy in Shakespeare, or a witty exchange in Sheridan: we enjoy such things no less than the Savoy 'fan' enjoys his pet songs, but we do not spoil them and their context by noisily demanding their repetition. Moreover, indiscriminate encoring has as little significance as any other kind of indiscriminate honour: 'When everyone is somebodee . . . .' Savoy audiences, above all, ought to realise the sound sense of that couplet.

On the whole, one feels that the Gilbert-Sullivan operas would gain by a couple of years of non-performance, followed by a revival in which three principles should be rigorously adopted: (1) Sullivan's orchestration should receive full justice; (2) encores should be prohibited; and (3) the overdone by-play that has become established in recent years should be abolished. In regard to (3) Mr. Dunhill quotes Miss Jessie Bond (one of the original Gilbert-Sullivan players), who says that 'the tricks and antics' of present day performers would never have been tolerated by either author or composer.

It is too much to expect such drastic measures, perhaps, but we may reasonably hope that Mr. Dunhill's excellent work will effect something. It may bring about the belated publication of the full scores; and it may even work something of a miracle by persuading the noisy insatiables in the Savoy audiences to show their admiration for the operas by allowing all the music to be heard, and the stories to be developed without interruption.

Mr. Mackinlay's book covers a lot of ground, both in chronology and width of scope, and its comprehensiveness makes it valuable for reference purposes. His tendency to garrulousness is in keeping with a subject that on its literary side is perilously near zero. (Some of the examples of punning rhyme quoted in the chapter on 'Burlesque' make one squirm.) There are many illustrations and portraits, and an exhaustive index. A reproduction of Johann Strauss's 'Promenade Quadrille' shows that composer conducting at a Covent Garden 'Prom.' with his back to the orchestra. When did this method begin and end? The present writer has met with it once—at Bexhill, about thirty years ago, when he saw a foreign conductor thus direct his band from behind, so to speak. The point does not appear to have been mentioned by writers on conducting. The price of Mr. Mackinlay's book is stiff, but is justified by the amount of lore placed at the reader's disposal in an agreeable manner.

H. G.

Prof. Kitson has added to his series of text-books one on 'Invertible Counterpoint and Canon' (Oxford University Press, 7s. 6d.). As he remarks in his preface, there is nothing new to be said on the subject. He has, however, improved on many treatises by eliminating the superfluous, with clarifying result. He treats of counterpoint at the octave, fifteenth, tenth, and twelfth; counterpoint invertible at more than one interval; triple counterpoint; imitation, inversion, &c; canon at the octave in two parts; canon two in one at other intervals; and canon in three or more parts. He takes Bach as the chief authority, on the ground that there is no need to go farther back except for special purposes. In the chapter on Imitation he lays stress on the importance of a good harmonic substructure—'it is fatal to let the imitations force the harmony.' He is emphatic, too, on over-frequent chord changes. Most bad contrapuntal work comes from weakness in these respects, and the fact is a convincing proof of the value of this study from the harmonic point of view. In fact, a student brought up on the slack principle that you must study harmony whereas you may study counterpoint is rarely other than a half-baked musician. This compact little treatise shows that the subject is neither dismal, useless, nor unmusical.

Debussy's 'Monsieur Croche the Dilettante Hater' is an English version of articles that appeared in various French journals (Noel Douglas, 6s.). A good deal of the material appeared in the Musical Times in 1918 and 1919, translated by Mrs. Frank Liebich, so there is no need to discuss the book now. The version under notice is readable. Some of the numerous foot-notes that appear are superfluous—e.g., few readers of such a book will need to be told that the Choral Symphony is 'Beethoven's 9th Symphony in D minor, Op. 125,' or to receive similar information concerning the 'Unfinished' and 'Pastoral.' Debussy discovers an attractive flavour of tartness, and his little articles are unmomentous and enjoyable.

William S. Hannam's 'Notes on the Church Cantatas of John Sebastian Bach' is clearly the work of an enthusiast. Its most valuable parts are of the tabular kind—list of the works in alphabetical order with numbers, in the order of the Breitkopf & Härtel edition, cantatas published with English words, cantatas, choruses, and songs for special study, &c. The notes on the various cantatas contain useful information, and there is also a separate series of notes on the songs and duets. The critical side of the book is less helpful, as it consists too often of a mere adjective or two. But as a collection of well-arranged information the little book is one not to be missed by the Bachite (Oxford University Press, 7s. 6d.).

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

'Zur Psychologie der Klaviertechnik.' Von Willy Bardas. Pp. 98. Im Werk-Verlag zu Berlin.

'Year-Book for 1928,' of the British Federation of Musical Competition Festivals. Edited for the Central Board by John Graham. Pp. 268. From the Federation Offices, 22, Surrey Street, Victoria Embankment, W.C.2, 1*s.* 3*d.*

'The Limitations of Music.' A Study in Æsthetics. By Eric Blom. Pp. 172. Macmillan, 6*s.*

'The Use of Plainsong.' By Edgar T. Cook. Pp. 47. Plainsong and Mediæval Music Society, 2*s.* 6*d.*

Catalogue of the Plainsong and Mediæval Music Society's Library. Pp. 39. From the Society, 5*s.*

'Über die Art Musik zu Hören.' By Siegfried Ochs. Pp. 54. Im Werk-Verlag zu Berlin.

The Oxford Book of Carols.' By Percy Dearmer, R. Vaughan Williams, and Martin Shaw. Pp. 248. Oxford University Press, 4*s.* 6*d.*

Church and Organ Music

THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

Lectures will be given at the College, on Tuesday, May 15, as follows: At 3 p.m., by Dr. W. H. Harris, M.A., F.R.C.O. (organist of New College, Oxford), on 'General Points to be observed in Choir-Training'; at 6.30 p.m., by Dr. Ernest Bullock, F.R.C.O. (organist of Westminster Abbey), on 'Anglican Chanting.' Admission free. The Choir-Training Examination will be held on Wednesday, May 16.

Dr. A. Eaglefield Hull, F.R.C.O., will give three historical organ recitals at the College on Saturday afternoons, May 5, 12, and 19, at 3.30 p.m. Admission free; no tickets required. A collection will be made at each recital in aid of the Organists' Benevolent League. The subjects of the three recitals are: (1) Classical—from Buxtehude to Mendelssohn; (2) Romantic—from Franck to Widor; (3) Contemporary. The first recital of this series, on April 28, dealt with the period 'Frescobaldi to Purcell.'

An examination for the Sir John Goss scholarship will be held at the College on June 9. The successful candidate will be entitled to three years' free tuition at the Royal Academy of Music. Candidates must be either choristers or ex-choristers, and under seventeen years of age on the date of examination. Particulars, date of entry, &c., may be obtained from the Registrar of the College, Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

We have received programmes recently performed at special musical services at Chelsea Wesleyan Church. On April 10 (for example) the scheme included a Handel Concerto for organ and orchestra (organ, Mr. H. V. Peacock), Bach's Cantata No. 189 for solo voice, flute, oboe, and strings (soloist, Mr. Percy Manchester), Bach's fifth 'Brandenburg' Concerto (pianoforte, Mr. Arnold Goldsbrough), Motets by Gibbons and Weelkes, and Vaughan Williams's Five Mystical Songs for solo voice, chorus, and orchestra (Mr. Percy Manchester). The conductor and moving spirit in this excellent enterprise is Mr. Arnold Foster. Readers who live Chelsea-way should support such music-makings.

We have received the Annual Report for 1927 of the Organists' Benevolent League. At the annual meeting Dr. Ernest Bullock, who, as Westminster Abbey organist, succeeds Mr. Sydney Nicholson as President, was heartily welcomed. The secretary, Mr. Thomas Shindler, announced that Sir Walford Davies had become a member of the committee. A bequest of £100 had been left to the Fund by the late John Stubbs, of Chorley, a former member and Associate of the College. Applications for relief during the year had been less numerous than usual, and in every case the committee had been able to give assistance. In some instances, however, it regretted that the available funds had not permitted of larger grants being made, and once more reminded the rank and file of the profession of the need for more frequent recitals and concerts on behalf of the League. The balance sheet showed that grants during 1927 had amounted to £160; receipts from recitals and concerts were £146, and from donations and subscriptions, £93. In view of the fact that the organists in the country number some thousands, the income from recitals ought to be much larger. With anything like adequate support in this way the committee would be able to do far more in the provision of annuities for old and impoverished organists. This can only be done from income produced by invested funds. The Report points out that the annuities now being granted are very small, and that the Committee desires 'to invest such an amount as would provide (say) six annuities of 10*s.* or £1 a week.' It therefore appeals to members of the profession for help by means of regular subscriptions, or through recitals.

In a St. George's Hall, Liverpool, programme note concerning Buxtehude, Mr. Ellingford states that Bach walked fifty miles to hear that composer play. Fifty miles is no great distance for a pilgrimage, even in these motoring and flying days, so we think it worth while to point out that from Arnstadt to Lübeck is about two hundred and thirty (English) miles. Bach thus covered about four hundred and sixty miles on the double journey, which was something like a walk. Mr. Ellingford evidently followed Spitta and Parry, who give the distance as fifty miles, but omit to state that the miles were of the German measure. The fact is apparently of little moment, but it has some importance in that it partly explains why Bach's four weeks' holiday ran into four months, and got him into hot water with his pastors and masters on his return.

At the Town Hall, Ripon, on April 7, a portrait in oils of Dr. C. H. Moody, organist of the Cathedral, was handed over to the Mayor of Ripon to be hung in the Mayor's Parlour. The portrait, which has been purchased by subscription, represents Dr. Moody in his Doctor's robes wearing the insignia of the C.B.E., and is the work of Miss M. E. Hunter, a local artist of repute. The speakers at the ceremony were the Bishop of Ripon, the Mayor of Ripon, and Councillor C. Harker, all of whom bore warm testimony to the value of Dr. Moody's work. Dr. Moody has just been invested as Grand Organist of the Grand Lodge of England.

The organ presented to Cheltenham Town Hall by Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Burrow was formally opened on March 28, when Dr. Harold Darke gave a recital, his programme including Bach's Prelude and Fugue in D, the Overture to the 'Occasional' Oratorio, Saint-Saëns's Fantasia in E flat, Elgar's 'Imperial March,' and his own Rhapsody. The organ was built by Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper, and is a three-manual of thirty-three speaking stops, thirteen couplers, and twenty-four foot and finger pistons.

So many performances of Bach's 'St. Matthew' and 'St. John' Passions have been reported that we are unable to record them all. A notable point is the increase in the number of performances, either wholly or in selections, in small centres of population where a few years ago such an undertaking would have been regarded as impossible.

At All Saints', Hertford, on March 28, Brahms's 'Requiem' was performed by the East Herts Music Society with a choir and orchestra of about a hundred. The soloists were Miss Bertha Steventon and Mr. Stuart Robertson. Mr. W. J. Comley conducted, and Mr. Douglas Rogers was at the organ.

Mr. Wilfrid Greenhouse Allt, organist of St. Giles's Cathedral, Edinburgh, has been appointed to succeed the late Dr. T. H. Collinson as organist to Edinburgh University.

RECITALS

Dr. Bernard Jackson, Boston Parish Church—'March of the Wise Men,' Dubois; Allegro (Flute Sonata in C), Bach; Preludes on 'St. Mary' and 'St. Anne,' Parry; Fantasia and Toccata in D minor, Stanford.

Mr. Allan Brown, City Temple—Fantasia in E minor, Silas; Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, Franck; Finale (Symphony No. 6), Widor.

Dr. Henry Ley, Eton College Chapel—Pièce Héroïque, Franck; Grand Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; Toccata (Sonata No. 14), Rheinberger; Prelude and Fugue in E flat, Bach; Prelude on 'O come and mourn with me awhile,' Parry; Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn.

Mr. Purcell J. Mansfield, City Hall, Glasgow—Minuet in G, Paderewski; Impromptu No. 3, Coleridge-Taylor; Scherzo (Symphony No. 2), Guilmant; Variations on 'Where the bee sucks,' Benedict; Overture, Morandi.

Dr. Walter Williams, Middleton Parish Church—Dithyramb, Harwood; Air (from Suite in D), Bach; Andante, with Variations, Haydn; Final March (Suite No. 2), Boëllmann.

Mr. Leonard J. Castle, St. Matthew's, New Kent Road—Grand Chœur in D, Guilmant; Overture, 'Athalie,' Handel; Invocation, Guilmant.

Mr. Harry Wall, St. Andrew-by-the-Wardrobe, E.C.—Canzone in A minor, Guilmant; Fugue ('Pastoral' Sonata), Rheinberger; Sketch in G, Wolstenholme; 'Laus Deo,' Harvey Grace.

Mr. Guy Michell, St. Matthew's, Worthing—Fiat Lux, Dubois; Sonata No. 6, Merkel; Two Chorale Preludes, Reger.

Mr. C. S. Richards, Hexham Abbey—Prelude and Fugue in F minor, Bach; March on a Ground Bass, Dohnányi; Pièce Héroïque, Franck; Sonata No. 6, Mendelssohn; Concert Overture, Hollins.

Mr. Warren D. Allen, Memorial Church, Stanford University, U.S.A.—An English programme: Legend, Alcock; Hymn-Prelude, 'London New,' Charlton Palmer; Evening Song, Bairstow; Sérénade un peu sérieuse, Harry Farjeon; Cradle Song, Harvey Grace: Fantasia on 'The King of Love,' Frederic H. Wood.

Dr. H. C. L. Stocks, Holywell Parish Church—Adagio in E flat, Elgar; Chorale Prelude, 'In deepest need,' Bach; Marche Religieuse, Guilmant; 'Hush Song,' Stanford.

Rev. A. M. Samson, St. Michael and All Angels, Leicester—Vivace (Sonata No. 6), Bach; Two Chorale Preludes, Charles Wood; Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Healey Willan. Bassoon solos by Major L. V. Wykes.—Adagio, Concerto No. 96, Mozart; Ballade, Concerto, W. Y. Hurlstone.

Mr. Herbert F. Ellingford, St. George's Hall, Liverpool—Prelude and Fugue in F, Buxtehude; Fantasia in E minor, Silas; Choral No. 3, Franck; Chaconne, Bach; Adagio, Franck Bridge; Finale (Symphony No. 6), Widor; Overture to 'Alcina,' Handel; Sonata in G minor, Edgar Tinel; Final in B flat, Franck.

Mr. Henry Riding, St. Mary Abchurch—Alla marcia, Tchaikovsky; Concerto in G minor, Camidge; Pastoral Sonata, Rheinberger; Pontifical March, de la Tombelle; Concerto No. 4, Handel.

Mr. Allan Brown, Upper Clapton Congregational Church—Canon in B minor, Schumann; Marche Funèbre and Chant Séraphique, Guilmant; Fugue in G minor, Bach; Pastorale in E, Franck; Finale in B flat, Wolstenholme.

Mr. Claude A. Forster, St. John's, Forfar—Toccata di Concerto, Bossi; Allegretto in B minor, Guilmant; Sonata No. 1, Borowski.

Mr. M. Courtenay Boyle, St. Mary's, Slough—Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; 'Visione,' Rheinberger; Rhapsody in E, Howells.

Mr. J. Gray, Adam Smith Hall, Kirkcaldy—Andante Cantabile, Widor; Grand Chœur in D, Guilmant; Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Mendelssohn. (Songs by Miss Dora Labbette; and Concerto for two violins in D minor, Bach, Miss Alison M. Cowe and Miss Tertia Liebenthal.)

Mr. Alfred R. Stock, Essex Church, W.—Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Bach; Sonata, Borowski; Concert Scherzo in F, Mansfield; Processional from 'Herod,' Coleridge-Taylor.

Mr. J. H. Raybould, Castleford Road Primitive Methodist Church, Normanton—Prelude on 'Come, Holy Ghost,' Bach; Fantasia on Two Christmas Carols, John E. West; Fantasia on 'The King of love,' Frederic H. Wood.

Mr. Stanley Lucas, South Croydon Congregational Church—Scherzo, Harvey Grace; Allegretto, Wolstenholme; Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Bach; Evening Song, Bairstow; First movement, 'Unfinished' Symphony.

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Norman Askew, organist and director of the music, Wesleyan Central Hall, Southfields.

Mr. E. W. E. Booth, choirmaster and organist, Harlesden Parish Church, N.W.10.

Mr. Allan W. Bunney, choirmaster and organist, Christ Church, Hampstead.

Mr. John Horner (late teacher of organ and pianoforte at Glasgow Athenæum School of Music), lecturer in music at Adelaide University.

Mr. Claude E. Monteath, choirmaster and organist, St. Peter's Church, Melbourne, Australia.

Letters to the Editor

THE ETHICS OF BORROWING

SIR,—In your March issue, Dr. Hull uses this expression about myself:

'Mr. Scholes has now fallen back on merely repeating himself; and life is too short and too valuable for me to spend any more time in correcting his many inexactitudes, mauled quotations, mis-spellings, and curious claims to Russian rights. I must leave that to my friend Mr. Sabaneev, if he thinks it worth while.'

The expression 'any more time' is curious, inasmuch as Dr. Hull has never yet offered the corrections in question, nor, as your readers well know, can I induce him to do so. The purpose of this present letter, however, is to suggest that Dr. Hull has introduced a very unfair incidental debating point in his reference above to 'my friend Mr. Sabaneev,' in view of the fact that a letter has been received from Prof. Sabaneev, reading as follows:

'Dr. Hull appeared unexpectedly on my horizon. He wrote me a letter asking about Skryabin's Symphony of Light. I referred him to my book, "Skryabin." You ask if he is "my friend." I never saw him, and this is the first letter from him.—Yours faithfully ——.'

As another instance of the same kind of thing, in your February issue Dr. Hull says:

'Splendid! I also have had for many years "a friendly business arrangement with Mr. Pring, whereby he should give me the benefit of his abundant and scholarly translations from the Russian."'

Yet Mr. Pring, in your March issue, told us:

'I have not even had the pleasure of meeting Dr. Hull, and our intercourse has been confined to occasional correspondence concerning articles and books submitted for his editorial consideration.'

I feel that I am quite entitled to call attention to these inconsistencies, as public debate becomes a farce if it is conducted in this way. We may say that my action has been in defence of the rights of Prof. Sabaneev as author, and Mr. Pring as translator, and that Dr. Hull has tried to slip away from me by implications of an understanding between him and them which do not appear to be substantiated.—Yours, &c.,

PERCY A. SCHOLES.

SIR,—In your April issue 'Occasional Notes' you say that 'nobody knew better than Dr. Hull himself how remote it was from the truth,' viz., his statement regarding the editing of the Rheinberger Sonatas. Permit me to say that this is an over-statement which does not reflect credit on your otherwise so fairminded journal. Briefly the facts are these: When I was asked by Messrs. Robert Forberg, of Leipsic to suggest the name of a prominent English organist to undertake the editing of the Rheinberger Sonatas, I mentioned three. Dr. Hull was one of them, and Messrs. Harvey Grace and Alec Rowley the other two. Dr. Hull was not aware that anyone else was being considered to do the work, and it was therefore not unreasonable for him to assume that he would receive the commission at the time he was preparing the circular in question, as the only matter to be decided was the terms. Shortly afterwards, in February, the Leipsic publishers decided to hold up the project for the time being. Giving Dr. Hull the benefit of reasonable doubt, I submit that he may have overlooked to make the correction in the circular, and did not deliberately state an untruth as accused in your 'Occasional Notes.' I am sure you will wish to make this reparation to Dr. Hull.—Yours, &c.,

ERNEST R. VOIGT
(Director, Winthrop Rogers Ltd.).

[We gladly publish Mr. Voigt's letter, the more so as it substantiates our main point, viz., that Dr. Hull announced himself as having completed an important editorial work before he had been definitely commissioned to undertake it. Why was he not content to describe himself as a prospective editor of the Sonatas? Moreover his claim to have edited 'the complete works of Rheinberger' overlooks the fact that about thirty pieces by that composer are published by Messrs. Novello, and that no question of a new edition has arisen in regard to them. Mr. Voigt's remark about 'correction in the circular' is beside the point, surely. Had Dr. Hull been content to confine himself to facts, there would have been nothing to correct.—EDITOR.]

THE REVIVAL OF MUSIC

SIR,—I hope it is not impertinent to make a few comments on Mr. Robert Hull's article 'The Revival of Music' in the March issue of the Musical Times. Mr. Hull has given us so many assumptions and dogmatic utterances in the short space of three columns that the humble reader may be forgiven if he is a little bewildered by the argument. I take it that Mr. Hull's main objection is to the indiscriminate revival of works which have long been forgotten. This revival appears to be two-fold. 'The difficulty,' says Mr. Hull, 'with which one has to contend arises in two forms: the revival of music by means of press propaganda, and the revival of music by actual performance.' Mr. Hull does not make it quite clear why this is to be regarded as a difficulty or why it is necessary to contend with it, but for the present I am prepared to assume with him that there is such a difficulty.

(1.) Press propaganda. What exactly does this mean? Not, we are told, the researches of Dr. Grattan Flood, Dr. Fellowes, and others. (These gentlemen must indeed be gratified to escape censure.) The evil with which we have to fight is the article by the 'undisciplined enthusiast.' Mr. Hull tells us that:

> 'The power of press propaganda has become considerable during recent years, and in the present connection there is urged upon the musical public at large a practical interpretation of the elementary advertising truth that if you tell people frequently enough, they will end by believing it. The immediate application becomes evident if one considers to what extent musical periodicals are filled with contributions relating to little-known composers born prior to the 18th century. It would be offensive and unnecessary to particularise further.'

I agree that it would be offensive, but it is surely necessary to substantiate general accusations of this kind with some sort of detailed evidence. Nor is the expression 'little-known composers' altogether happy. It merely means 'composers about which I know little.' Is it for this reason that articles of this kind are written—that those who know little may know more?

A moment's thought shows that it is hardly worth while pursuing this side of the question much further, for 'press propaganda' is not the revival of music. It merely draws attention to such revivals. Music lives in performance, and 'propaganda' which has no connection with performances of ancient music does not come into the question at all. The line is to be drawn, not between the 'admirable research work of Dr. Grattan Flood, Dr. Fellowes, and others,' and the propaganda of the undisciplined enthusiasts, but between articles which tell us about music without any specific purpose, and articles which tell us about music which is not generally known and of which a public performance is shortly to take place. The first kind of articles may thus be ruled out, while those of the second kind are obviously justified. Revivals must be made to pay if possible, and the more people who can be induced to attend them the better. And apart from this commercial aspect, persons who are likely to be interested prefer to inform themselves on the subject beforehand without going into a fair amount of preliminary research.

Mr. Hull's argument therefore resolves itself into an objection to the revival of music by performances—for, as we have seen, an objection to 'propaganda' which tells us about 'little-known composers' without offering us an opportunity of hearing their works, is petulant. On the other hand, 'propaganda' which is designed to bring to our notice coming performances of old music can hardly be separated from the performances, so that the real trouble would be that music is revived at all. Here no distinction seems to be made between the sheep and the goats. I think I am right in saying that the 'admirable research work' done by Dr. Grattan Flood and Dr. Fellowes has not in the main taken the form of arranging performances of forgotten works. We have to thank them for supplying us with historical and biographical data and for the publication of texts.

(2.) Actual performance. Mr. Hull complains chiefly of a lack of discrimination in this respect. Dull works are generally chosen for revival instead of those that are interesting, and very frequently they are badly performed. Is not all this a little sweeping? Could one not say, with as much (or as little) truth, that the new works which we hear performed are generally dull in themselves and badly played. Generalisations of this kind lead nowhere, and any charge that is levelled against performances of forgotten works can equally well be directed against first performances of modern ones. The only difference is that forgotten works are frequently performed by amateurs. But that is because amateurs do not make their living by the profession of music, and can afford, apparently, to devote their leisure time and their purses to the pursuit of what Mr. Hull would have us believe is a horrid chimera.

It seems, then, that only interesting works are to be performed, and that they must be well performed. Who would not agree with this? But who is to decide what works are or are not interesting? Even Mr. Hull would not be in a position to know, if it were not for the efforts of those who have made it possible for us to hear all and separate in our own minds the bad from the good. The history of music is not a history of success. The failures far outnumber the triumphs, and it is only by taking the good along with the bad that we can arrive at any fair estimate of the position of the art at any particular period. Many works that are dull on paper prove to be surprisingly alive when performed. What is amazing in the history of revivals is not that the enthusiasts should have been undisciplined, but that they should have had the courage and the vision to get performed forgotten works, many of which have now taken their place in the ordinary repertory of singers, players, choirs, and orchestras. It was not necessary to make a discovery as though the name of Bach had been forgotten throughout Europe in the 19th century—true. But we should know very little about Bach if it had not been for the undisciplined enthusiasm of those who first performed his works in recent times.

I think I have said enough to show that it is always very difficult to know beforehand whether a work is likely to be interesting in performance. At the same time there is every probability that the man who is chiefly responsible for the revival will know more about it than the audience. If he, having studied it, believes that it is worth producing, he is, to say the least, in as good a position to judge as the listener. Listening to the music of the past often requires concentration and a particular attitude of mind. We listen to early music with the ideas of the 20th century, and proclaim the music of the 16th and 17th centuries to be wanting. The obvious deduction is that music has progressed. No theory could be more fatuous. The truth is not that we have progressed, but that we are on a different level. It is not the revivals which must cease, but the listeners who must get themselves into the right frame of mind. This does not imply uncritical adoration, but merely the effort to understand and appreciate in all humility what others have pronounced to be worthy of our attention. Granted that bad works were written at all periods of music, there were not a few that were good. If enthusiasts err, they err on the right side. Better that we should hear too much of the music of the past, that we should hear even a quantity of inferior work, than that we should miss some hidden beauty. Wheat and chaff are often thrown into the furnace together.

Enthusiasm in music is, after all, an enthusiasm for music. The enthusiast is anxious not that he himself may attain glory and honour through the medium of the work which he revives, but that others besides himself should enjoy beauties in which he firmly believes and which are not accessible to the majority of his fellow musicians. We may well be thankful that those 'who would restrain their efforts are no less handicapped.' It is only the professional critic who has had too much music who could complain of such enthusiasm. If he would avoid it his obvious course is not to attempt to handicap it, but to retire from the world for a space and return to his duties refreshed after a period of meditation.

I should like to return for a moment to the subject of 'press propaganda,' Ancient versus Modern. Mr. Hull seems to think that much of the energy and printed matter which are devoted to the antique might more profitably be employed in furthering the cause of modern composers. I am surprised to hear that their cause needs any furthering. Are they not alive and, Sir, not to put too fine a point upon it, kicking? Mr. Hull himself has indicated how successful advertising can be. How much more is this the case with self-advertisement! Nay, they need not even do this. Good work will come to the front sooner or later, and whether a composer dies in an attic or makes several thousand pounds in royalties is of small account so long as the world knows and enjoys good music. Mr. Hull quotes with approval Mr. Ernest Newman's belief > '. . . that this theory of the inevitable failure of any generation to recognise its great composers is a fallacy, and a modern fallacy at that.'

If this belief be true, there is no reason why it should not apply to the present day just as much as to past centuries. The great composers of our time will be recognised. Why bother about the others?

I have written this letter, not because I hold the ridiculous belief that an antique is interesting and worth knowing simply because it is an antique. I have never known any musician who thought that old music was worth performing solely as a matter of historical interest. I am afraid that when Mr. Hull says that 'the saving grace of antiquity is a poor defence in music when it is advanced as the only defence,' he is setting up a palpable straw man. The only reason for reviving old music is the obvious one that it has far less chance of seeing the light than the new productions of modern composers, even though (as we are reminded) they are not all of them young. And as for going to 'responsible authorities' for guidance, the unfortunate truth is that nine times out of ten there are no responsible authorities to go to.

I do not know to what work of Cecil Gray's Mr. Hull refers. That author has produced several essays in which familiar paradoxes are re-assembled in a superficially attractive way. But in any case one may perhaps, without being too old-fashioned, suggest that error is always to be deplored, and that to be right on every occasion is a very desirable and proper aspiration.—Yours, &c.,

J. A. WESTRUP.

ABSOLUTE PITCH

SIR,—I recently came across quite the most remarkable example of the possession of 'absolute pitch' I have ever known or read of. I was invited by a man in the town where I live, to try some 'ear-tests' on his daughter, aged eight, and obviously sub-normal in mentality. The child, standing away from the pianoforte with her back to it, was able to name without hesitation, and without a single error, any note struck between C below and the second C above middle C. (All the tests were within this compass owing to my reluctance to be severe on the girl.) I was then asked to sound two notes together. Again wishing to be lenient, I sounded only major and minor thirds. All were named rightly. To my astonishment I was next challenged to try the child with three notes sounded together. In a revulsion from my former leniency I at once struck this chord:

Without hesitation came the answer—E F G sharp. There the tests ended. An interlude of conversation after each test prevented the subject using the notes previously sounded as data for the succeeding test. The girl, I learned, had amused herself at the pianoforte since the age of two, had learned the notes and had simple lessons from the age of four (from her mother, who does not possess 'absolute pitch'), and has now about the average playing ability for her age. One curious feature of the answers was that all black notes were given as sharps, even when the chord was in a flat key—e.g., a minor third on F was named as F G sharp, and a major third on E flat as D sharp G. For reasons which I think will be evident, I avoid giving any clue to the identity of the child, but would willingly reveal it to any authoritative body formed to investigate the question of absolute pitch.—Yours, &c.,

SPINET.

SIR,—I have read the letter of Mr. Percy Richards with great interest, and my experiences have been very similar. Almost as long as I can remember, soon after I began to learn the pianoforte, a piece sounded to me in a particular key, and in no other. Even in those days I could soon recognise the correct key. Later on, this stood me in good stead. Soon after going into residence at Cambridge, I heard Dr. Mann play on the King's College Chapel organ a Sonata which appeared to me in the remote key of E flat minor. Shortly afterwards I came across a volume of Rheinberger's Organ Sonatas, and was able to recognise No. 6 in that key. To this incident I owe my introduction to that composer. Early impressions have caused me to regard approximately the normal diapason as my standard pitch. When I first heard Best, at St. George's Hall, Liverpool, it was very difficult to get out of mind that he was not transposing up a semitone music I knew. Subsequently I discovered that the organ was tuned to the high pitch, and I believe still is. Mr. Richards mentions the instrument at St. Michael's, Cornhill. I too have noticed the high pitch when recitals have been broadcast. I am quite unable to explain the recognition of keys and pitch, though I know from personal experience that it is a fact. In my case it is certainly not hereditary, as both my parents were unmusical.—Yours, &c.,

GEORGE DIXON
(Lieut.-Colonel).

St. Bees, Cumberland.

[See also a letter from Mr. A. J. Blake on p. 444. We are unable to publish all the matter we have received on this subject, and we must now close the correspondence. —EDITOR.]

'IMPROVING' THE CLASSICS.

SIR,—I should like to register a vigorous protest against certain observations by your reviewer 'Discus' concerning a certain record by Pouishnov. The works played thereon are Schubert's 'Moment Musical,' Op. 94, No. 3, and Albeniz's 'Tango,' Op. 165, No. 2. Each piece has been 'freely arranged' by Godowsky, and I entirely agree with your reviewer that this fact should be clearly stated on the record. (As a matter of fact, this has now been done, and the record removed from the light blue to the dark blue section of the Columbia catalogue.

Furthermore, I agree that the rhythm of the performer is, at times, fantastic. Nevertheless, personal dislike of a specific piece cannot be regarded as an adequate basis for the formulation of artistic principles.

'Discus' describes Godowsky's arrangement of the 'Moment Musical' as a 'vandalized version,' states that Pouishnov should be compelled to keep it for private consumption, and hopes all his reviewing colleagues will lift up their voices in a chorus of similar protest—'otherwise we shall find other familiar classics mauled in the same way.'

It is curious that this academic attitude persists in face of the fact that the arch-arranger and transcriber was the greatest of all masters, namely, Bach. Moreover, it is significant that the work of arranging and transcribing continues to attract musicians of the front rank, such as Busoni, Godowsky, Rachmaninov, &c. Rachmaninov, it may be noted, has also been attacked in the Musical Times in connection with his very excellent transcription of Bizet's 'L'Arlésienne' Minuet. Cyril Scott and Roger Quilter are others who, having turned their creative ability on to old tunes such as 'Cherry Ripe' and 'Drink to me only'—very much to the benefit of both—have received the usual censure.

When, however, we read that Bach himself as a result of his harmonic enterprise was accused by his church council of 'producing strange sounds during the Chorales, thereby confounding the congregation,' it becomes clear that this class of criticism emanates from a type of mind which is ever in our midst. Its owners term it, euphemistically, 'conservatism'; others, including myself, regard it as a disease which may be more accurately described as 'mental ossification': that is, the cells of the brain, owing to lack of healthy exercise, lose their elasticity and refuse to function save on severely stereotyped lines.

To such people any advancement in knowledge or achievement—whether in art, sociology, or science—is regarded, as I have pointed out elsewhere, as being either 'blasphemous,' 'immoral,' 'impossible,' 'improper,' 'unplayable,' or, as in this instance, 'vandalistic.'

Well, what has Godowsky done? He has by a process of contrapuntal super-imposition, harmonic enrichment, and general re-design of keyboard lay-out, transformed these Schubert and Albeniz pieces from tinkling trifles into genuine pianoforte literature which, musically and pianistically, is far more interesting than the originals. Personally, I should never dream of playing either of these pieces except as arranged by Godowsky. It should be noted that he has continued the good work on a number of other pieces, including Chopin's ubiquitous Waltz in D flat, Op. 64, No. 1, and the lesser-known specimen in the same key, Op. 70, No. 3.

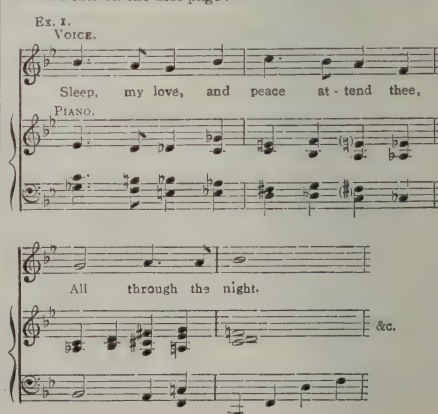
Kaikhosru Sorabji has also carried the same process several stages further in his 'Pastiche,' based upon Op. 64, No. 1. Another complete vindication of the transcriber's art is Rachmaninov's dazzling transcription of Kreisler's 'Liebesfreud,' which he plays superbly in his latest record (H.M.V., DA786). It must not be thought that arrangements and transcriptions are necessarily better than the originals, but I suggest that the above and many other examples are obviously and entirely justified by their intrinsic artistic merit.

In conclusion, I may say that the case of re-harmonization of old tunes has been well stated by Cyril Scott in his 'Philosophy of Modernism,' while the question of arranging and transcribing has been admirably epitomised by Godowsky himself in the preface to his Schubert song transcriptions: '. . . a masterpiece is indestructible. It remains untarnished whether arranged, transcribed, or paraphrased, and its intrinsic value having the necessary vitality to sustain its interest, cannot be impaired. Whenever an original composition is supplanted by versions made by others, its vulnerability is clearly demonstrated. A transcription, an arrangement, a paraphrase, when conceived by a creative mind, is an entity, which in its own worth may prove a masterpiece. It may even surpass the composer's original work. Although I fully realise that my knowledge of music is necessarily limited when compared with the immensity of the subject, I am equally aware that many others know less than I, among whom I should place the self-appointed arbiters of what is right and wrong in our chosen art.'

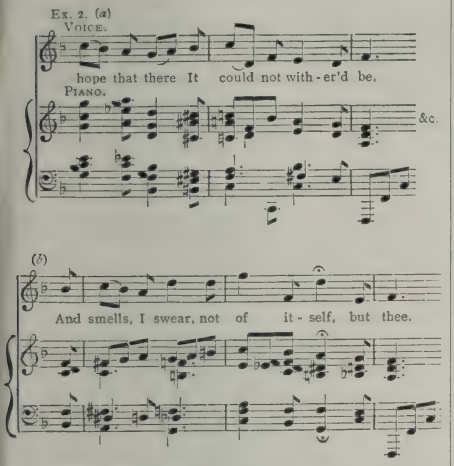
May the dry-as-dust pedants and purists take notice.—Yours, &c.,

CLINTON GRAY-FISK.

[By a coincidence Mr. Gray-Fisk's letter came just after we had written our 'Occasional Note' on Ornstein's version of Schubert's 'Moment Musical.' As he 'registers a vigorous protest,' we must drop our usual mildness, and try to register a vigorous reply. Mr. Gray-Fisk's Bach analogy will not hold water. None of Bach's arrangements of works by Vivaldi and other composers contain anything that may be likened to the fantastic harmony and other extraneous material with which certain modern arrangers have overlaid the originals. And the 'strange harmonies that confounded the congregation' were merely the free accompaniments which every organist has used, and still uses, in connection with unisonous singing. If Mr. Gray-Fisk can see no difference between this legitimate treatment of folk-music (as the Chorales were) and the elaboration by a 'star' pianist of a work by a great composer, we cannot hope to convince him. Very few musicians to-day object to the principle of transcription; certainly we do not. But many hold the view that such transcription should respect the harmonic scheme and style of the original. This opinion is not due to pedantry, but to a feeling for fitness and style. Mr. Gray-Fisk apparently fails to see the incongruity and bad style—and even bad taste—of such a treatment of Schubert's 'Moment Musical' as that quoted on p. 425 of this issue. Moreover, it is an alteration of the text. Nobody plays similar tricks with literary classics, and we shall continue to protest against such vandalism in regard to musical classics. If the 'arrangers' mentioned by Mr. Gray-Fisk want to exploit their harmonic and other enterprise, let them do so in the form of original composition. Mr. Gray-Fisk is welcome to regard us as afflicted with 'mental ossification'; he must allow us in return to say that his letter throughout shows him to be deficient in musicianship and a sense of style. He quotes the Cyril Scott arrangements of folk-songs. We know them well, and have had many a hearty laugh over them. We happen to have some of them handy. This being our busy day, we take the first that comes to hand. We open 'All through the night,' and find this on the first page:



Turning to Mr. Scott's version of 'Drink to me only,' in the set of 'Old Songs in New Guise' (not Guys !), we see him not content with sickly harmony: he also changes the melody:



It certainly smells; in fact it is rank.

If Mr. Gray-Fisk really thinks this far-fetched ludicrous harmonization is to the 'benefit' of the song, we can only wish him well out of his embryonic stage of musicianship. He will then see that the ability to plaster a simple old tune with luscious chords is very far from being a sign of progressiveness. On the contrary, the examples quoted above and on p. 425, belong to what may be called the 'juicy' era of twenty-five years ago, and are already out of fashion in really 'advanced' circles. As Mr. Gray-Fisk regards a distaste for them as a sign of 'mental ossification,' we must be allowed to adopt his graceful argumentative style, and say we prefer that disease to mental assification.—EDITOR.]

DIPLOMAS

SIR,—Mr. Stuart Duncan's letter on the above subject, which appeared in the April issue, approaches the root of the matter, but there are one or two points which call for modification. He says that 'a music degree in most cases is evidence of nothing but a vast theoretical knowledge and the power to write much counterpoint,' and goes on to suggest that degrees should be granted for practical work as well as theoretical.

Surely the ideal would be a combination of the two. I agree with Mr. Duncan that the theorist should not have the monopoly of a degree; but it cannot be disputed that many brilliant instrumentalists possess but little knowledge of music outside their own particular sphere.

A degree in Arts may be taken for special subjects, but a man must have an excellent all-round education in order to graduate in Arts. This brings us to the fact that it is not essential to possess any technical ability or the power to interpret music in order to gain a musical degree. Why should the art of interpretation be entirely overlooked by our Universities? It is just as important to us as individuals and as a nation, it is quite as difficult, and is as great a proof of a candidate's 'musicianship' as is the creative art.

Turning to another page of the Musical Times for April, I read these words, 'There is one type of musician in which we seem almost to specialise, the all-rounder . . .' True; then let a degree be evidence of a man's 'all-round' capabilities. I beg to suggest the following subjects for examination: (1) Harmony and counterpoint in not more than four parts; (2) Orchestration; (3) Form and history of music; (4) The ability to play two instruments; (5) Sight-reading and transposition; (6) Training and conducting of a choir or orchestra; (7) Sight-singing and aural training; (8) The art of teaching.

The adoption of this plan would give the 'all-rounder' a real chance to graduate, a chance which at present is open only to the theoretical specialist. In my humble opinion, a diploma such as the F.R.C.O. or the L.R.A.M. is greater proof of a man's general capability and training than is a degree, for the simple reason that the subjects for examination cover much more ground.

In regard to teaching music in schools, a significant incident comes to my mind. A young man recently went to the head-master of his old school for advice in seeking an appointment as a music-master. When the question of a degree arose, the head-master said, 'The Mus. Bac. is certainly an accomplishment; but unless a man were fully qualified to teach class-singing and musical appreciation, and could control a class of boys, he would be useless to me, were he Sir Walford Davies himself.'

In conclusion, may I point out that all the correspondence in the world will not alter this matter? What the majority of musicians would welcome is a conference of such men as University professors of music and the principals of our great music schools, men of large experience and sound judgment. We should then not only get the views of the leaders of our profession, but also a thorough revision of this all-important question.—Yours, &c.,

22, Windermere Road, N.10. ARTHUR E. TEMPLE.

EAR TROUBLE

SIR,—Dr. Smith's articles on faulty sensations of musical pitch are so extremely interesting that I am constrained to mention my own experience. More than twenty years ago I happened to be playing at a Sunday morning service when I became aware that my hearing had become very defective, so much so that I had to watch my fingers to feel certain that I was playing correctly. The sounds were loud enough, but very discordant. When I got home I found that the fault lay in the left ear. Going to the pianoforte I struck one of the keys and seemed to hear two sounds a little more than a tone apart—an interval that might be described in upper partials or harmonics as 7-8, the latter figure representing the true pitch. Later on, discordant sounds ceased, but the affected ear lost all sense of sound, and has remained in that condition ever since. Never having heard of anything like it before or since, until I saw the articles referred to, the experience seemed so incredible that I wondered whether it could be mentioned without endangering one's reputation for truthfulness. The experience of one so eminent as Dr. Edwin Smith has removed those fears. I am afraid it is too long since to recall further particulars now.—Yours, &c.,

W. BETHELL.

5, Bathurst Road, Garston.

SIR,—Years ago I knew a fine professional whom nobody would have suspected of any defect in his 'ear for music.' He was in fact acutely critical, and an excellent reader and accompanist. But if he attempted to illustrate a point (as sometimes he did) by whistling a melody to an accompaniment, the effect was too comical for words, for he was consistently off the pitch—in the wrong key altogether, like an orchestral part wrongly transposed.

I know two violinists who illustrate the theory that 'use' can have a dangerous influence. One of them has short fingers, and can barely reach certain notes, so that now, after many years, he actually prefers some notes to be played rather flat. The other has long fingers, and unless he practises very attentively and with great watchfulness he finds himself tolerating sharpness without inconvenience, while listeners wonder 'how can such things be?' Usually, both these men have been, and still are, efficient, whether in orchestral or chamber music. They are aware of their danger and strive to guard against it, having good, sincere friends, and the sense to take a well-meant tip without offence.—Yours, &c.,

AURAL TEST.

ABSOLUTE PITCH

SIR,—Mr. Percy Richards's letter in your April issue is very interesting to me, as I can confidently claim to have the same ability or gift that he has. Any music I hear instantly conveys its key to me, unless it be of the atonal variety, and I follow the modulations without effort.

But it is his remark re the pitch of the organ at St. Michael's, Cornhill, that induces me to write. I am accompanist to the St. Michael's Singers, and when occasionally I sing there I have deliberately to transpose the music a semitone sharp in order to sing in tune, but after a time I gradually lose the sense of singing a semitone sharp, which I suppose is due to my sense of pitch accommodating itself to the pitch given by the organ.

Now my pianoforte is of the same pitch as the pianoforte used in broadcasting, and is therefore presumably normal. Dr. Harold Darke, our esteemed conductor, I imagine also has absolute pitch, but in his case it seems to be affected by that of his organ (which I suppose he uses and hears more that any other instrument), as, when he pitches a note for the choir in the hall where we practise, I notice he is always a trifle sharper than the pianoforte, which to me seems normal (i.e., that of my own pianoforte).

These instances go to prove that anyone with a sense of pitch bases it on the pitch he mostly hears, so the term 'absolute' is scarcely correct; but I cannot suggest a better.—Yours, &c.,

A. J. BLAKE.

238, Verdant Lane, S.E.6.

'THE BOOSTER IN ORGAN BUILDING'

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me to thank Mr. Henry Willis for his letter in the April issue on the above subject?

Naturally he is in possession of esoteric information concerning the details he mentions, and I am grateful to him for his corrections. It is but fair that the credit for the ingenious contrivance in the Dome of St. Paul's Cathedral should go to the right Henry Willis.

Happily these corrections do not in any way invalidate my explanation of the 'Booster,' and it is gratifying to note that a man of such high standing and authority in the organ building world as Mr. Henry Willis is in agreement with me as to the origin and present definition of the term.—Yours, &c.,

REGINALD WHITWORTH.

87, Glebe Road,
Crookes, Sheffield.

ORGANISTS' LONG RETENTION OF THE SAME POST

SIR,—At the present time we do not hear as much about 'lack of fixity' and 'uncertainty of tenure' as we used to do. On the contrary, newspapers frequently inform us of records being made in the opposite direction. Two of the more recent cases of long retention of the same post are those of Dr. Warriner's forty-one years at St. Matthew's, Denmark Hill, and Mr. Boddington's forty-five years at St. Andrew's, Stoke Newington. Would it be possible to compile and publish—say in the Musical Times—a 'roll of honour' of organists, living or departed, who have served continuously in any one place of worship for forty years and more? Such a list might be capable of doing much good. As each of your readers would have his own individual field of observation in this respect, may I be pardoned for briefly referring by way of illustration to my own personal outlook? The first name which occurs to me in this connection is that of my dear old friend, Dr. A. H. Mann, whom I first heard play at King's, in 1879. He was not then exactly a newcomer, but he plays there still; and long may he be spared to do so!

Every R.C.O. reader of yours will doubtless regard—as I do—admission to Associateship or Fellowship as an initiation into the ranks of musical brotherhood and comradeship. I therefore recall with pardonable pride the names of those who passed their Fellowship with me in January, 1881, forty years ago. 'We are seven,' viz., Alcock, Barrow, Bryant, Dancey, Greenish, Mitchell, Pearce. Of these, one (Mitchell) is dead, and Bryant I have lost sight of. But the first name mentioned is that of our worthy R.C.O. President, and Dr. W. H. Barrow is still organist of St. George's, Leicester, to which he was appointed in 1875. Mr. H. Dancey, is still, as he was in 1881, at All Saints', Putney; and Dr. A. J. Greenish has held his present post at St. Saviour's, South Hampstead, since 1882. I, like our President, cannot boast a forty years' continuity in any one stay; but I am still recognised as honorary organist at two London Churches: St. Luke's Parish Church, Middlesex, and St. Clement's, Eastcheap, having been appointed to the former in 1874 and to the latter in 1885. There ought to be sufficient names for an imposing roll of honour either in your columns or in book form. Can I be of any use in helping you to compile it?—Yours, &c.,

C. W. PEARCE.

'The Paddocks,' Ferndown, Dorset.

[If Dr. Pearce will be so good as to send us, from time to time, particulars of long service, we will insert them with pleasure.—EDITOR.]

RECORDING THE ORGAN

SIR,—Apropos of the interesting article 'Recording the Organ,' in your April issue, I wish to comment on the paragraph wherein Mr. Verne describes the difficulties often met with by organists who desire to register adequately and artistically when a record is taken from an organ unprovided with 'interchangeable combination pistons, or what is worse, no pistons of any kind, and the organist is reduced at times either (1) to carrying on defiantly with an unsuitable stop combination—perhaps with the Great-to-Pedal hanging out if there is no double-acting reversible handy; or else (2) holding up the performance while he fumbles at a change in the registration. This of course is a nuisance not unknown in connection with the ordinary post-Evensong recital; but whereas registration is of secondary importance as a rule, it is a problem which comes right to the forefront in recording the organ' (my italics).

Now the object of the recording organist is, very obviously, to obtain as good a record as possible, and to do this he must make up for the defects of his instrument in whatever way he can. Therefore, if through inaccessibility of stop handles, or inadequate means of stop control, one pair of hands (and feet) cannot register satisfactorily, then employ two—i.e., have a competent assistant ready to make any adjustments that are beyond the control of the player.

We gladly accept the good offices of the organ-blower, when the organ is not provided with a motor; and no one demurs if a friend offers to turn a page at an awkward point in the music; why boggle at employing a helper with the registration?

Why do we make a fetish of attempting the impossible with one performer, and spoiling an otherwise good performance and record, when a perfect result can be obtained with a little intelligent help from a second person? The performance is given to attain the best possible record, not as a test in stop-manipulation for the player; the fetish of the one-man-orchestra may serve a useful purpose in some branches of organ-playing (though that is questionable); it certainly should be abolished in recording.—Yours, &c.,

A. H. HARVEY.

19, Wellesley Road,
Colchester.

BRITISH MUSIC IN NEW ZEALAND

SIR,—The letter from Mr. Vernon-Griffiths which appeared in the January number contains statements regarding the value placed upon English music in New Zealand which are much too sweeping. He is, I think, distinctly unfair to many musicians who have spent the greater part of their lives in this country endeavouring—often under difficult conditions—to develop a public taste for the best music of all countries. Mr. Vernon-Griffiths would have you believe that early and present-day English music is practically unheard here. This is far from being the case. I will deal only with the music of this city with which I have been associated. Other musicians also could record much work done in the interests of British music.

At the Cathedral, where I have been solely responsible for the music for twenty-six years, the Early English school of composition is well represented. During last year, out of a total of two hundred and fifty-five services, I find that 16th-century music was heard either in service or anthem, and sometimes in both, at seventy-six services. Living English composers represented during the year were Elgar, Harwood, Walford Davies, Holst, Balfour Gardiner, Bantock, Noble, Bairstow, Terry, &c. As the way in which music is presented has such an important bearing on its educational value, perhaps I may be allowed to quote a few words referring to our Cathedral music.

Writing in the School Music Review for November, 1926, Mr. Douglas Tayler, who recently left England to supervise musical education in the New Zealand schools, includes the following among his first impressions: 'The choir in Christchurch Cathedral, under Dr. Bradshaw, gives some of the most beautiful renderings of the Church Service that I have ever heard—the detailed finish of everything, no less than the devotional spirit, being a perfect delight.'

The Male-Voice Choir, which I founded some years ago, is devoted almost entirely to the performance of British music. It has produced works by the following living musicians—Elgar (fourteen compositions), Walford Davies, Vaughan Williams, Balfour Gardiner, Grainger, Bantock, Harrison, Ireland, Dyson, Somervell, German, Lee Williams, Mackenzie, &c. Also many works by Stanford, Parry, Charles Wood, and other composers recently deceased.

One of the features of these concerts, which are presented to audiences totalling from seven thousand to eight thousand people each year, is the inclusion of 16th- and 17th-century music in which the Cathedral boys sing the treble parts. The policy of our oldest musical institution, the Royal Christchurch Musical Society, would doubtless be considered conservative so far as the choice of modern works is concerned.

Extension of University work has made it impossible for me to act as conductor since 1921, though I have been repeatedly invited to do so. During the fifteen years I held the position a considerable amount of British music was performed, but nothing more modern than Elgar.

In conclusion, let me say that a visit to this country from the excellent bodies of musicians named by Mr. Vernon-Griffiths would be heartily welcomed on all sides. If such be undertaken I would counsel great discretion in the choice of works. Any attempt to force the pace in the interests of ultra-modern music would do more harm than good; I fear it would arouse the same feeling of impatience as would doubtless be caused similarly in many quarters in England. Discretion is required as to the amount of advanced music the public can assimilate. A lesson might well be taken from Mr. Vernon-Griffiths's own experience here. After only one season's conductorship of the Royal Musical Society he has retired from the position owing to his policy in the choice of works being unacceptable.—Yours, &c.,

The Cathedral, JOHN C. BRADSHAW.
Christchurch, N.Z.

REPORTS OF ORGAN RECITALS

SIR,—Being a constant reader and enthusiast of the Musical Times, I wonder if you could possibly spare a little of your correspondence space to ascertain the opinions of fellow organists and others in a position to speak on a subject which I consider would go far in improving the standard of organ-playing, and in time the improvement would cause organ-playing to be much more appreciated than it is at present.

The query is this: Why is it that we never read any critical reports on organ recitals? Singers and pianists, experienced and debutants, are hauled over the coals unmercifully, and by this means their weaknesses are made known to them, and they obviously strive to remedy their faults before their next appearance. I repeat, What of the organ recitalist?

I may say I have attended a great many organ recitals, and without being unduly critical—knowing the difficulties—I have rarely felt really enthusiastic or satisfied as I have when present at the recitals of even very minor pianists and singers. Also, on chatting with members of the general public with regard to this matter I find that my feelings are endorsed in practically every case.

I write not to discourage but to help organists. We must not consider ourselves immune from criticism because most of our listeners are ignorant of the capabilities of our instrument. The profession of a real church organist and recitalist (I say real because there are so many pianists who very wrongly profess to be organists and even hold responsible organ posts) will never, maybe, receive the remuneration it should, but present conditions would be greatly improved, and the value of a good organist would soon be recognised, if these were given the opportunity to read the critical opinions of experts on their playing, and would set themselves out to remedy their defects.—Yours, &c., CRITICISM.

Stamford Hill, N.16.

[The difficulty is (1) that experts in organ playing are not usually writers; (2) music critics as a body know little about the organ, its repertory, and its technique; (3) the number of organ recitals in London is so large that a critical notice could not be given to more than a very small proportion, and the choice would often be invidious. We agree that the best recitals are well worthy of notice, and some day when we can find a critic or two with the right expert knowledge, and time to spare (for most recitals take place at an awkward time for journalists), we will see what can be done.—EDITOR.]

THE PLAYING OF QUICK MORDANTS

SIR,—Many pianoforte students find great difficulty in playing very quick mordants neatly and lightly and without disturbing the rhythm of the music (I am speaking, of course, of quick movements such as occur so often in Bach, Scarlatti, and the like).

The difficulty is nearly removed if the mordants be played as they used to be of old on the organ—with the two first notes played simultaneously, on the beat, and the auxiliary note immediately released, leaving the principal note held. The 'biting' effect is much more striking when the notes are attacked together and the line of the melodic passage is not broken by the repetition of the principal note. Such quick mordants as those in Rameau's 'La Poule,' and in some of the Associated Board Examination pieces by old composers, are almost impossible to play in the usually accepted way; this, I imagine, perfectly legitimate and probably originally intended execution of the ornament makes it quite feasible and, as I have said, far more telling.—Yours, &c., (Mrs.) ENID MORRIS.

1, Herbert Terrace,
Clevedon, Somerset.

A GOOD WORD FOR RIPON

SIR,—As an organist of many years' standing in Canada, I cannot refrain from paying my testimony to the great delight it has given me, during a short visit to England, to attend several services in Ripon Cathedral. The singing of the choir in that ancient church is marked with an extreme reverence and special attention to the significance of the words sung such as are not found in every choir of similar importance.

Dr. Moody is evidently an ideal choirmaster, and his work has attained splendid results, particularly in the case of the boys' voices.—Yours, &c., H. S. H. GOODIER

(Organist, St. John's, Port Arthur, Canada, 1901-22)

THE LARYNX AGAIN

SIR,—In his article entitled 'The Singer and Broadcasting,' in the February Musical Times, Mr. Corbett Sumsion states that the women singers of this generation cannot sing a note and stick to it, and also that it is impossible to hear a word they sing, and he asks, 'Can anyone tell me the reason why this should be?'

Will you allow me to tell him that I know the reason, which is, that the larynx is out of place? This is the reason for every imaginable vocal defect. The explanation of women singers being worse offenders than men, lies in the fact that while both may be doing the same wrong thing, the woman's throat, being the more delicate organ, is the more quickly damaged.

I have before endeavoured to point out, in these and other pages, the fact that in order to sing perfectly it is necessary to raise the larynx to the highest possible extent. The necessity for the raising of the larynx is no mere theory, but is a fact which I have proved beyond all doubt. Not only is it a cure for every vocal defect, but it has proved infallibly that every case of throat trouble is caused by a dropped larynx.

Any teacher who tells a pupil to lower the larynx and open the throat will seriously damage, if not ruin, the voice, and will run grave risk of permanently injuring the health of that pupil.—Yours, &c.,

(MRS.) ETHEL AUBREY.

7, Clifton Gardens, Maida Vale, W.9.

AN APPEAL

SIR,—We are forming an orchestra, having discovered a considerable amount of hitherto latent musical ability among our patients. Many of your readers doubtless have in their possession musical instruments which they no longer use. I am instructed by my appeal committee, the chairman of which is Lord Coventry, to say that we shall gladly welcome these as gifts, and will be able to make good use of them. Our station is Defford, L.M.S.—Yours, &c.,

THOS. A. NEWSOM
(Administrator).

Besford Court Welfare Hospital for Children, Worcestershire.

[In a footnote to a letter from Mr. Montagu-Nathan last month, we rallied him on what appeared to be a supercilious reference to the musical press. We have since received a friendly letter in which he explains that his loss of touch with musical journals is due, not to lack of appreciation, but to claims of business. He is desirous that the remark on which we commented should not be misconstrued.—EDITOR.]

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Violin candidate for A.R.C.M. teaching diploma (September) wishes to meet another to discuss teaching questions.—A. L. P., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist (moderate ability) wishes to practise with small orchestra. West Ham district.—G. F., 5, Leonard Road, Forest Gate, E.7.

Pianist and violinist (lady and gentleman) wish to meet a good 'cellist for the mutual enjoyment of chamber music. Schubert, Mendelssohn, Beethoven Trios, &c. Northern district.—ENTHUSIAST, c/o Musical Times.

Lady pianist wishes to meet vocalist or instrumentalist for study and practice of accompaniment. Mornings preferably. London or S.W. district.—E. M. S., c/o Musical Times.

Contralto wishes to meet accompanist for mutual practice. Hornsey district, or near.—E. C. PAGE, 1, Priory Road, Hornsey, N.8.

Pianist (L.R.A.M.) wishes to meet vocalists and instrumentalists with a view to practising.—MUSICIAN, 7, Brixton Hill, S.W.2.

Gentleman viola player (beginner) wishes to meet pianist, or would join amateur players, for practice of easy classical music. W. London district.—E. A. COUSINS, 32, Thorneyhedge Road, Gunnersbury, W.4.

Amateur pianist (young lady) wishes to meet violinist, or join small orchestra. One or two evenings a week.—F. STOCKWELL, 28, Maitland Park Road, N.W.3.

'Cellist wishes to meet other string players for chamber music.—A. F. H., 141, High Road, Lee, S.E.13.

Pianist (lady) wishes to join orchestra, quartet, or trio, for experience. W. London district.—L.R.A.M., 22, Mervyn Road, W. Ealing, W.13.

Sharps and Flats

The Die-hard reaction is at an end. Everywhere, sometimes delightfully, and sometimes dubiously, one hears contemporary music. The moderns are again on the March!—Leigh Henry.

It is easier to understand Beethoven than Irving Berlin—but Berlin is much more amusing . . . It would be a good thing for everybody if all music could be closed down for a year.—Fred Elizalde.

I can quite understand that if a man is so unfortunate as to prefer Mr. Berlin to Beethoven he would rather be without music altogether.—'Observator' in the Observer.

Erotic sensitiveness emerges dominantly from the 'Gurrelieder,' but over and above this evolves an exalted aftermath of sublimated emotion which translates in rarified, symbolic terms.—Leigh Henry.

Gregorian music belongs to an age before civilization, and bears much the same relation to true music as astrology does to astronomy, or the ancient MSS. to the printed page.—Canon J. C. Trotter (Ramelton, co. Donegal).

The tenors were particularly strong, and sank with considerable merit, especially in passages which offer scope for such singing.—Kentish Newspaper.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

It was very fit and proper that the principal work in the programme of the students' orchestral concert at Queen's Hall on March 28, should be Bax's Symphony in E flat. Arnold Bax is not only an ex-student, but one of the most distinguished of Academy composers. To the best of my knowledge this was only the second performance, it having been given once before by Sir Henry Wood and his Queen's Hall Orchestra. He conducted on this occasion, and the performance was extraordinarily good, the playing of the strings being both virile and well balanced. In spite of its length, the work is well worth inclusion now and again in programmes, especially by conductors who affect to be interested in English music. Miss Grace Reynolds sang 'Ritorna Vincitor' with a good deal of expression. She has a pretty voice well under control. Miss Margot MacGibbon played the first movement of the Beethoven Concerto with plenty of temperament. She is a violinist who should do well, and if cadenzas must be played, she certainly chose the least objectionable.

Miss Jacqueline Townsend, aged sixteen, a pianoforte student at the R.A.M. under Mr. Harold Craxton, won the £100 scholarship presented by the Daily News at the recent London Musical Festival. Miss Margaret Good, also a pianist and an Academy student, won the fifty-guinea Challenge cup presented by the Federation of British Music Industries for the best performance at the Festival, at which there were twelve thousand competitors.

The Lent Term Review Week was a most successful affair, among the interesting lectures being 'The Eye and Sight' by Capt. William Wallace, M.D.

The complimentary banquet given to Sir Edward German at the Mayfair Hotel, on March 29, by the 'Music Club' and the R.A.M. Club, attracted a company of over two hundred and fifty guests. Among the speakers were Dr. J. B. McEwen, Sir Alexander Mackenzie (in the chair), Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, Sir Richard Terry, Capt. William Wallace, Mr. Alfred Kalisch, and the guest of the evening. A delightful programme of Sir Edward's music was given by R.A.M. students. F.

The following awards have been made: Leonard G. Vallange Prize ('cello), to Stephen Blythe (London), Peers Coetmore being very highly commended; Lady Hopkinson Prize (elocution) to Muriel Gale (Croydon), Norah Lynch and Eileen Hann being highly commended, and Margaret H. Hill, Frederica Tomlinson, Hesper Ames, Margaret Bryer Ash, and Isabel M. Smith commended.

Mr. F. H. Shera has been appointed to the Rossiter Hoyle Chair of Music at Sheffield University. The endowment is a recent one, and for its first year (1927-28) Prof. P. C. Buck gave a course of lectures.

UNION OF GRADUATES IN MUSIC INCORPORATED

The thirty-fifth annual general meeting of the Union of Graduates in Music took place at Connaught Rooms, Kingsway, W.C., on March 27, under the presidency of Dr. C. H. Kitson, Professor of Music in the University of Dublin. The attendance was large and representative. The Rev. Canon T. H. Ross, Capt. J. C. J. Hoby, Mr. W. R. Anderson, Mr. T. W. Hanforth, and Mr. F. J. Stone were elected to fill the five vacancies on the Council. Dr. C. H. Kitson was unanimously re-elected president for the ensuing year. During the past year the Union has been strengthened by the admission of forty-three new members; this is an increase which has not been exceeded for a very long time. The meeting was followed by the annual dinner which was attended by a large number of members and guests. The various toasts were proposed by the chairman (Dr. Kitson), the Rev. Dr. E. H. Fellowes, the Rev. Dr. W. J. Foxell, Mr. J. Percy Baker, and the Rev. Canon T. H. Ross, and responded to by Dr. E. F. Horner, Mr. W. W. Cobbett, Mr. Claude Aveling, and Dr. C. Hazlehurst. Among other members present were the Rev. Dr. C. L. Bradley, the Rev. N. C. Woods, Dr. W. G. Eveleigh, Dr. J. W. G. Hathaway, Dr. G. A. Slater, Mr. R. Cooper, Mr. A. M. Fox, Mr. A. P. Howe, Mr. W. Lovelock, Mr. S. Myerscough, Mr. P. G. Saunders, Mr. B. Ramsey, Mr. H. Rutland, Mr. H. Wardale, Miss Margaret Jones, Miss Caroline Perceval, and the hon. treasurer and secretary, Mr. Charles Long.

A NEW CHORAL WORK

Ladislav Vycpálek's 'Cantata of the Last Things of Man' was produced for the first time in this country at the Liverpool Philharmonic Society's concert on March 20.

Vycpálek is probably little more than a name to the majority of English musicians. His output is not indeed very large to date, and the Cantata is his most important achievement. It was written in 1920, apparently in a mood of disillusionment at the spiritual consequences of the war, and as a protest against the rampant materialism of the time. The text of the Cantata is based on two Moravian folk-songs, rather formidable types of psalm-like poems dealing with the subject of death and the soul. The musical treatment is extraordinary. It is a graft of an exceedingly modern idiom upon an almost archaic polyphonic style. The latter is chosen no doubt deliberately as being in line with the religious motive of the poems. But though the weaving of the parts is systematically contrapuntal, the effect is one of a relentlessly moving mass of tone. The enormous power and sincerity of the writing are beyond question, and the actual vocal texture is stamped with an impressive individuality.

Few modern choral works have created so profound and moving an effect at a first hearing. The work has its moments of sensation, as in the scene in which the relatives quarrel over the dead man's possessions, but for the most part what impresses the hearer is its restrained statement. It succeeds without making any sacrifices to the audience in the way of charming passages. The orchestral interludes, which occur at two or three points, are brief, grim episodes, and the instrumental lines go their way irrespective of clashing tonalities. The odd thing is that one does not trouble very much whether the music is at any point polytonal or atonal or what not. One simply feels that Vycpálek has gone about his music without thinking of such things. This is, at any rate, not formula music. It is the music of power rather than of knowledge, masterly as is the mere handling of its very spare material. Practically the whole work is based on two motives—the motive of death and the soul-motive. There is towards the end a most moving duet (sung on this occasion very finely by Mr. Roy Henderson and Miss Elsie Suddaby), in which the soul (soprano voice) complains of the body that it has brought her to this ultimate pass of suffering for the body's sins, and the body naively retorts that they 'acted together' in life, though in death they are divided. The cantata concludes with a brief moral epilogue, commenting on the mortal nature of man, and finally a great outburst of supplication for forgiveness. The work was sung with fine force and intelligence by the Philharmonic Choir, under Sir Henry Wood.

A. K. H.

BOARD OF TRADE INQUIRY ON GRAMOPHONE ROYALTIES

Evidence as to composers' declining receipts from sheet music and the enormous profits made by gramophone companies, was submitted at an inquiry which opened at the Board of Trade on March 28, when application was made by the Musical Copyright Defence Association, representing composers, authors, and publishers, for a revision of the payments made under Section 19 of the Copyright Act, 1911, in respect of the rights for the mechanical reproduction of compositions.

At present a 2½ per cent. royalty is paid on works produced before the passing of the Act, and 5 per cent. on works published since the Act, with the minimum of a half-penny per work sold for mechanical reproduction. The Association is asking the Committee to recommend an increase to a minimum of 10 per cent., and a minimum payment per work for its mechanical reproduction of a penny instead of a halfpenny. If the present rates are varied by Parliament, they will have to stand for fourteen years. It was arranged to complete the inquiry before the end of April, in time for an important conference at Rome, when questions of international copyright are to be discussed.*

The Committee consisted of Mr. H. Claughton Scott, K.C. (Chairman), Mr. William Cash, F.C.A., and Mr. William Smith Jarratt (Comptroller of Patents). The applicants were represented by Sir J. Herbert Cunliffe, K.C., M.P., and Mr. E. J. Macgillivray, instructed by Messrs. Syrett & Sons, while the opposers of the application, the mechanical musical industry, were represented by Mr. Rudolph Moritz, K.C., and Mr. S. O. Henn Collins, instructed by Messrs. Broad & Son. Mr. D. Kilhan Roberts and Mr. G. H. Thring represented the Society of Authors and Composers, which was giving general support to the application of the Musical Copyright Defence Association.

Sir Herbert Cunliffe in his opening statement for the applicants said that the Association consisted of practically all the people of note in the composition and publication of musical works in the United Kingdom, comprising 354 composers, 181 authors, 39 copyright owners, and 39 publishers. Before 1911 composers and authors of musical works had no copyright or protection against the unauthorised mechanical reproduction of their works. Piracy could not be prevented, and any person of indifferent moral principles could appropriate the products of their skill and genius by mechanical means of reproduction without either payment or acknowledgment.

The legislature in the Copyright Act of 1911 was against giving the author the right to control the mechanical reproduction of his compositions, and set up an experimental system of compulsory licences and the provision of royalties. Those provisions, said Sir Herbert, were obviously experimental, and after a period of seven years were to be subject to a variation of the legislative rates. When the discussions took place it was stated that the gramophone industry was a struggling one and could not bear greater royalties than were imposed at that time. Whether that were true or no, argued Sir Herbert, the gigantic profits that had been made in recent years had completely altered the position, and it was quite clear that the industry was now able to pay adequate remuneration to the composer and author who were the origin of the success of that industry, and without whom it could not have existed.

Another important consideration was that with the growing popularity of the gramophone there had been a serious decline in the sale of printed sheet music, and as a payment to the composer of sheet music was about 12½ per cent., compared with the much smaller return on the gramophone records, no corresponding compensation was offered by the latter.

* This will be reported in the Musical Times.

Another iniquity of the present law was that when a composer had allowed one man to reproduce his works, he could not refuse permission to anyone else, however inferior the reproduction might be.

Quoting figures to show the large profits recently earned by gramophone companies, Sir Herbert said that the profits of the Gramophone Company had risen from £153,128 in 1910 to £760,015 in 1927, with a dividend of 40 per cent., less income-tax. The Columbia Graphophone Company on a capital of £200,000, showed profits of £183,000 in 1927.

Sir Herbert stated that most gramophone records were now double-sided, and non-copyright works were generally used on one side of such records. The royalty paid on a work had to be divided between the author, composer, and publisher. Recent developments in the industry, whereby the selling price of records had been greatly reduced, brought down the royalty payable to the minimum of a halfpenny in most cases; 1s. 3d. records were now being sold, and even 6d. ones had an enormous sale through a popular store.

Mr. William Boosey, managing director of Messrs. Chappell, said that the advent of the cheaper records had reduced the remuneration in many cases to the composer, who, witness considered, was not now receiving an adequate return for the exploitation of his work on the gramophone. Taking the figures of his firm, he worked out that the average royalty paid was $1\frac{1}{11}d.$, which had to be divided between the composer, author, and publisher. Mr. Boosey submitted figures to show that the sale of English sheet music by his firm had decreased by £30,000 in five years.

Mr. Frederick Day, of Messrs. Francis, Day & Hunter, also gave evidence that the sale of sheet music had declined. He denied that gramophone companies were responsible for popularising songs, and said that it was public performances which popularised them.

Mr. Lawrence Wright, of the Lawrence Wright Music Co., said that his experience in recent years was that the sale of sheet music had declined considerably, whereas the sale of gramophone records had increased by leaps and bounds. He considered that the return on the royalties for records was quite inadequate. He regarded the life of a song to-day as from four to six months, instead of twelve months as in 1921.

Mr. Herbert Smith, of Messrs. Keith, Prowse, said the sale of sheet music had declined and that the remuneration to the composer was inadequate.

Mr. John Ireland and Mr. Haydn Wood gave evidence that the sale of their sheet music had declined, and that the return they get from the gramophone records was inadequate.

Other witnesses who gave evidence to the same effect were Mrs. R. Rhodes ('Guy d'Hardelot'), Mrs. Helen Rothschild ('Helen Taylor'), and Mrs. May Morgan ('May Brahe').

Miss Helen Taylor said that her gross income had declined from £600 to £200 during the last five years, and that her income from mechanical rights was about £100 to £120.

At the resumed hearing on April 17, Mr. Rudolph Moritz, for the opposers of the application, said that his clients would not contest the statement that there had been a tendency in the last few years for the sale of sheet music to decline, and that such a drop coincided with an increase in the sale of gramophone records. They would no doubt differ as to the deductions to be drawn from those facts. He would produce witnesses to give evidence to show that in eight out of eleven foreign countries the royalty rate was almost exactly what it was in England to-day.

Mr. Frederick Day, under cross-examination, did not agree with this statement.

Mr. John Abbott, a director of Messrs. Francis, Day & Hunter, said that in America where a royalty of 2 cents, equivalent to a penny, was paid, there was an enormous sale of 35 cent records in the big stores, so that authors and composers got a bigger percentage on such cheap records than in this country.

Mr. Moritz argued that the cheap trade prices were so cut in this country that it was impossible to pay a higher royalty, and if the prices were changed the popular sale would be destroyed.

Mr. Martin Shaw gave evidence that the sale of his sheet music had declined, whereas the sale of records had increased, but not sufficiently to compensate him.

Mr. J. Macgillivray, for the applicants, said that he had witnesses, if necessary, who would say that an author was receiving a much higher rate of royalty for the reproduction of work in book form, or in any form other than gramophone records. In the theatre, returns to a dramatist on gross box office receipts ranged from 5 per cent. on the first £800 in a week, to $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on amounts over £1,500. While such facts bore no direct relation to the inquiry, they did at least indicate a standard.

At this stage of the proceedings Mr. D. Kilhan Roberts, representing the Society of Authors and Composers, said that as a result of a meeting attended by some members of his Society and also by some members of the Musical Copyright Defence Association, his Society was now perfectly satisfied with the application as it was being made by the Musical Copyright Defence Association.

Mr. Moritz, opening the case for the mechanical music industry, said that as any change would have to stand for fourteen years it should be based on detailed information, and an assurance that there would be stability in the industry during that time. There was no such assurance. The industry had already suffered rapid transformations, and, according to Mr. Lawrence Wright and Mr. Frederick Day, the vogue of imported jazz music was now on the wane. The applicants had not shown that there was a drop in the sale of sheet music without any compensating advantage from the sale of gramophone records. Only one systematic attempt had been made to put figures before the Committee, and those figures could be used to disprove what it was attempted by the applicants to prove. The gramophone companies contended that the sale of records had really been a virgin field which the composers had never got hold of, and the benefits which they were reaping were a result of the work of the gramophone companies.

The $37\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. of the total royalty now claimed by the publishers was considered excessive by the gramophone companies, and if that amount were reduced the composers would have nothing to grumble at. Quite apart from the gramophone, the whole tendency to-day was against the sale of sheet music owing to such factors as the dancing habit and the employment of women, which had completely destroyed the peaceable old atmosphere of the drawing-room of the Victorian home.

Great play had been made by the applicants with the alleged prosperity of the gramophone companies, but while the Columbia and the Gramophone companies were prosperous, on the other hand such companies as the Vocalion, the Edison-Bell, and the Crystalate did not share in that prosperity, and any increase in the minimum royalty on the cheaper records produced by those companies would be disastrous, and their sale would be jeopardised if not destroyed. The applicants in their case had suggested that the rates fixed under the Act of 1911 were of an experimental character because the industry was a struggling one and could not pay higher rates, but Mr. Moritz quoted from the trading profits of the Gramophone Company from 1903 to 1911 to show that for that period before the Act the Company was a stable and prosperous concern. Far from being dissatisfied with the minimum, all musical composers had shown an eagerness to have their works on cheap records, and wrote to publishers offering discounts on the statutory minimum.

Richard James Langley, managing director of Atwell Binfield & Co., wholesale and retail music dealers, and also vice-president of the Music Trades Association, called on behalf of the opposers of the application, said that taken in the aggregate the sale of sheet music in his experience had not changed much in the last ten years. The advent of the gramophone and wireless had increased inquiries for sheet music.

Mr. James Van Allen Shields, a director of the Columbia Graphophone Company, said that over a period of eleven and a quarter years his firm had paid to copyright owners a sum equal to the profits it had made by the sale of copyright records. His firm did not wait until a work was popular before it recorded it. Sometimes it produced records before the sheet music appeared. It had to take the risk of many records being failures.

The inquiry was then adjourned.

London Concerts

ROYAL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY

The concert of March 22 is stale news by now, but calls for record on several grounds. Handel vià Beecham is one of the fashions of the moment, and there can be no doubt about Sir Thomas's enjoyment of Handel's music for its own sake, though one suspects him to be not unmindful of the chance it presents of epatering the burjoice. 'Solomon' had been considerably pulled about for this revival—long-forgotten solos restored, some fine choruses dropped to make room for them, and a good deal of fresh orchestration added. The changes on the structural side were not all gain. True, it gave us some approach to a coherent love story, but who wants that, with an enamoured Solomon represented by a contralto? It is easy to say that such conventions ought not to dash our enjoyment, but they do. On the whole, despite some charming solo music, the finest part of the work is on the choral side; and as the textual weaknesses are almost confined to the solos, Sir Thomas's reconstruction was not well-judged. Only first-rate work by the soloists could have atoned for the long choral gaps, and we didn't get it. The hated Victorians may have dealt dully with Handel's choruses, but they always had on tap a group of singers able to earn full marks in the solos, with a margin of breath and tone that would suffice many a well-known singer in these less exacting days. The four soloists on this occasion were Lilian Stiles-Allen, Dora Labbette, Clara Serena, and Walter Widdop. The contralto was well worth hearing for her voice alone, with its ample tone and easily managed top notes. The two sopranos made slips, and Miss Labbette, despite some pretty moments, was not at her best.

The chorus—the Philharmonic Choir—rose well to Sir Thomas's excited demands. The delicate singing of 'Let no rash intruder' was, for many of us, the best thing of the evening. The grandly-expressive 'Draw the tear' was perhaps the next best. No choir in the world, however, could have done all that Sir Thomas asked in some of the quick choruses, for the practical reason that there is a speed limit beyond which rapid eight-part florid choral writing simply cannot 'come off,' and the limit was passed in several numbers. Still, there was no mistaking Beecham's extraordinary power of compelling his forces to pull out that little extra bit beyond their normal, which makes a performance effervesce. It is no grudging spirit, however, which makes many of us dubious concerning his new policy of 'brightening' Handel by means of doubling the customary pace. What will happen when fourth-rate conductors begin to try it? If Handel suffered from old-fashioned choralists, it was not entirely—perhaps not much—through their slow pace, but because of their lack of tonal variety and rhythmic life.

If Beecham will set out to show lesser fry (as he certainly could—no man better) how to vitalise choral singing without changing Allegro into Presto, he will do much for a real Handel revival, and for choir work generally. Having now heard his 'Messiah' and 'Solomon' I feel that the superimposed brilliance of the conductor does not compensate us for the loss of the pomp and poundage of the composer. After all, style matters. There is a strong ceremonial flavour about Handel's choruses—though they smack of the Temple, Jewish or Masonic, rather than of the Church. There is characterisation, too. Under the Beecham baton Handel's Hebrews tend to become either Dervishes or Watteau Shepherds. Moreover, Handel was a heavyweight, and he gets his effects less by quickness of footwork than by hard-hitting and good timing—which is rhythm. Perhaps some first-rate choir will soon come along, sing him at a moderate pace, and prove that the tempi of the past generation were, after all, not far out.

It should be added that the presence of The King and Queen delighted a packed audience. But many of us wondered why the Royal party were given the worst seats in the hall—at the platform end of the circle, where the hearer gets too much of one half of the choir and too little of the other.

H. G.

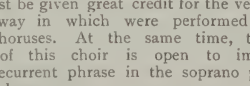
'Solomon,' with the same performers, was sung again at the Albert Hall on April 15, in aid of Sir Thomas Beecham's Opera League. Unfortunately the attendance was small—owing, no doubt, to a sudden return of winter.

BACH CHOIR

Bach's 'St. John' Passion was sung by the Bach Choir on March 24, at Westminster Central Hall. The work has been rather neglected in London, at least so far as concert performances go. The hall was well filled—proof that a good many felt it a privilege to renew acquaintance with such noble numbers. It is curious that the 'St. John' Passion is not more often sung in place of the truncated versions of the 'St. Matthew'; for, while much of the music is equally sublime and intense, the whole work can be sung within two and a half hours.

The Bach Choir's performance was characterised by a deeply earnest spirit. Dr. Vaughan Williams set his face against any suggestion of a mere concert. One had the impression of a new approach both to the actual music and to its ineffable subject—on no point did we feel the weight of any idle convention. There were shortcomings, but these were not due in any instance to anything unsympathetic in Dr. Vaughan Williams or his forces that afternoon. Troutbeck's excellent translation was in the main used; but an editor (Dr. Vaughan Williams, we presume) had modified Bach's recitative to fit the text of the Authorised Version, following the example of the Elgar edition of the 'St. Matthew' Passion. We are not clear that that is really justifiable. Sir George Henschel's protest, a few years ago, against that edition of the 'St. Matthew' must be confessed to have had much weight. English Bachians owe thanks to Troutbeck for his 'St. John,' which is thoroughly adequate and singable, and has worn well.

On one or two points Dr. Vaughan Williams did not persuade us to see eye to eye with him. He had gone to great trouble to make the choir sing the interpolated hymns with delicately shaded expression; and one of the hymns was actually sung (not with any great certainty of intonation) by a solo quartet. The suggestion was that these noble pieces of music required the addition of some element of interest not natural to them. But do they? Are not they most telling when sung in a massive and, indeed, stolid style, with congregational effect? Choir and conductor must be given great credit for the vehement and yet precise way in which were performed the short ejaculatory choruses. At the same time, the general tone-quality of this choir is open to improvement. There is a recurrent phrase in the soprano part of the sublime final chorus:



which cannot be properly sung in an utterly raw and untutored way. We are afraid we must say that the Bach Choir sopranos uttered entirely unmusical sounds on their A flats. Dr. Vaughan Williams proved himself to have small sympathy with the nature of the bass voice, by the excessively rapid tempo at which he took the G minor aria, 'Haste, ye deeply wounded spirits.' No singer could have given due weight to the sense of this number at such a pace; and anyone could have guessed that the conductor had never himself sung this aria.

If we criticise the solo singing on some technical points, we would still make it clear that in spirit the whole bore the stamp of true devotion. The Narrator, Mr. John Adams, did not please us by the quality of his tone, which was uneasily produced and dry in effect, but alike in intention and in bearing he was dignified and appropriate. It is a pity he cannot adopt a less constrained technical method. 'Tight' tenors are an infliction to the listener. The singer we should one day much like to hear in the Passion recitative is Mr. Heddle Nash. Mr. Roy Henderson deserves great credit for the impressive way in which he sang the words of Jesus. He proved himself a true artist. Mr. Henry Wendon sang the two very difficult tenor arias with a promising style which needed yet more warmth and expansiveness. He sang from bar to bar, so to speak, not commanding a broad enough outlook. Miss Joan Elwes was the soprano. She sang with musical feeling, but her tone rather lacked roundness. Miss Astra Desmond was the contralto, and Mr. Arthur Cranmer the bass. The organist was Mr. Arnold Goldsbrough, and Mr. Thornton Lofthouse played the continuo at the pianoforte. P. W.

GLASGOW ORPHEUS SOCIETY

The Glasgow Orpheus Society (conductor, Mr. Hugh Roberton) paid its annual visit to Queen's Hall on March 31. In the afternoon the choir sang 'The Messiah.' The audience was surprisingly small. If Londoners had realised what an unconventional performance it was to be and, still more, its particular beauties, the public would surely have flocked there.

It was certainly a rather queer performance. The visitor, entering the hall, might easily have thought he had mistaken the address, and, seeing no orchestra or soloists and the choir arrayed in scarlet and purple cassocks, might have fancied that here were Casimiri's Roman Basilican choristers, rather than a body of Glasgow men and women come to sing Handel to us. We have all heard of the rather excessive fears, prevalent among the more rigidly orthodox Scots of a past generation, in regard to the secular nature of instruments of music; but did not know until that Saturday afternoon that Glasgow still frowned on fiddle and flute, and preferred to substitute organ and pianoforte in accompaniments to oratorio. Frankly, it was not an improvement. The fact is, it is less easy to improve Handel than most of those who have tried their hand at the game imagine.

Mr. Roberton succeeded in giving a more ecclesiastical character to 'The Messiah' at the cost of a certain infidelity to the great author of the work. It is well that in strictly liturgical music soloists should not be indulged in the vanity of personal prominence. Bearing this in mind Mr. Roberton had many of the solos sung by massed voices, and in other instances members of the choir performed solo numbers in their places among the other singers. But Handel did not write 'The Messiah' as a liturgy. He did not write the solos for self-effacing and anonymous singers—still less to be sung by a crowd. We have said enough to indicate that this was an eccentric and wilful departure from Handel's intentions.

All the same, the Glasgow Orpheus is a wonderful choir. It may be as heterodox as it likes, but we cannot help listening to it with pleasure, for Mr. Roberton's singers know how to sing. Their quality was truly ingratiating to the ear. This body of choristers is a rich and flexible musical instrument. One heard no spluttering and hissing of consonants. The impression was that every woman and man was singing on the vowels—i.e., that each individual had a right idea of the elements of vocal technics. There was the less reason in the mass singing of certain arias since the choir boasted useful soloists in all sections, notably contraltos and tenors. The singer who was allotted 'Thou shalt break them' gave us a really distinguished performance. We hope the Glasgow Orpheus will keep up its London visits, for in the matter of sheer tone-quality and exactness of enunciation our London choirs are not its equal. P. W.

LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Felix Weingartner conducted the London Symphony Orchestra's ninth concert at Queen's Hall on April 2. The programme made no unusual excursions, unless the choice of Beethoven's second 'Leonora' Overture was one. The Symphony was Mozart's G minor. This concert was a great change from some others we have lately heard, for Weingartner belongs to the old school, and believes in the letter of a composer's writing. No doubt a musician's intentions cannot all be put down in black and white, but there are conductors who go too far in assuming that it is necessary to contradict the letter in order to attain the spirit. Weingartner is not one of these. Probably to a strong adherent of Dr. Abendroth he appears somewhat prim, but the orchestra understands him, and plays its best under him.

This concert began with Brahms's 'Academic Festival' Overture in perfectly delightful fashion. Vivaciousness and ceremonial pomp were admirably balanced, and as the engaging work developed, one had a feeling that the conductor had the whole within his view as though it were a panorama. Then followed Brahms's B flat Pianoforte Concerto, in which the soloist was Mr. F. Goldenberg. A superior performance of this same work had been heard earlier in the season, and comparisons were inevitable. Perhaps this Concerto were better not given more than once in a season. Only the most convinced Brahmsians remain unsated by the end of that nearly interminable first movement, which is like a speech at some distinguished and ceremonious occasion, delivered in a persistently subdued, conversational tone. The performance was reasonably good, if hardly invigorating. The 'cello solo in the slow movement might have been more shapely and decisive.

The Symphony was played alertly. Weingartner is not one to find unexpected springs of poetry in so familiar a work, but what he could do was to render it its normal shape and movement. It was a refreshing performance by reason of its natural, unforced character. P. W.

Weingartner conducted the London Symphony Orchestra's Schubert memorial concert on April 16. The programme consisted of the B minor and C major Symphonies and some of the 'Rosamund' music—the Overture and Interludes in B minor and B flat. Schubert must have been much attached to the melody in this last piece. He used it at least twice elsewhere. The wood-wind played with uncommon delicacy here. Mr. Leon Goossens was the oboist of the evening, and clarinet and flute seemed to vie with his exquisitely musical performances. The B minor Interlude was the one piece in the programme that is not frequently played. A magnificent and intense piece of music is here adumbrated rather than fully achieved. It suggests that Schubert had it in him to make of it one of his finest symphonic movements, but was prevented by sheer haste. The familiar Overture took on pristine colour and charm in Weingartner's hands. Nor was there anything perfunctory about the performance of the immortal B minor Symphony. The second subject was given an unusually serious cast by being very perceptibly slowed down. The Andante was taken rather faster than is ordinary. In the C major Symphony Weingartner seemed to us to exaggerate a little with his military emphasis in the slow movement. Something was lacking in the Finale to keep up and continuously increase the extraordinary, dionysian spirit of the music. But this was a good and satisfying concert. Schubert's century-old music never sounded fresher than to-day. The hall was sold out. It is to be hoped that when the time of the actual Centenary comes an effort will be made to produce some of Schubert's less familiar works, of which there are a number, both choral and orchestral, worth revival. C.

B.B.C. NATIONAL SYMPHONY CONCERT

We have come to look on the visits of the Hallé Orchestra as special treats. On March 23 they gave us their celebrated performance of Berlioz's 'Fantastic' Symphony. Harty got the last ounce of virtuosity from his men, and passion from the work; yet never a phrase was pulled out of its place, never a colour smudged or laid on too heavily. It was a triumph of judgment. At his hands the music's defects retire, and its magnificent flamboyant ardour reveals all the strange, lovable, wayward emotion in the young man who, in writing it, tore out his heart—or thought he did. That qualification provides peculiar pleasure for the listener who likes to ponder on it.

Earlier in the evening we had the fourth 'Brandenburg,' in which the strings were curiously rough. It was interesting to compare this performance of it with Sir Henry Wood's. This had a certain gruff power that made us think rather of Beethoven than of Bach. It was a wholesome and heartening start for the programme. Afterwards Godowsky relaxed the tension considerably in the fourth Concerto of Beethoven. This was clear, neat, and almost colourless—all except that grievous cadenza in the first movement, which had all the effect of brawling in church.

Of the last group of pieces one was Braithwaite's 'Snow Picture,' a Carnegie award work, tuneful and pretty (it brought up early memories of those attractive coloured supplements to Christmas magazines); another, Moeran's 'In the Mountain Country,' gripped the attention for nearly all of its considerable length, and made us want to encourage the composer to keep on developing upon those lines. At the end of the long programme came the authentic scent of turf and Irish hams, in the best performance I remember of Stanford's first 'Rhapsody.'

W. R. A.

ARNOLD BAX'S SYMPHONY

Sir Henry Wood conducted the Royal Academy of Music Students' Orchestra at Queen's Hall on March 28. The Symphony was no less a work than Arnold Bax's in E flat. The choice was doubly justified in that Mr. Bax is the most distinguished composer of his generation belonging to the R.A.M., and this Symphony of his, first produced in 1922, had been less than fairly dealt with—it had had only two London performances. The enterprise was, for all that, a daring one—for the Symphony is excessively difficult, and might well have been thought unmanageable by a students' orchestra. It speaks well for the R.A.M. that so good an account of it was given. The Symphony has no title, but its contents speak for themselves—it is a war symphony. The first movement is full of grimness, anger, and tumult; the second is an elegy; the third evidently represents the rejoicings and feastings of a victorious army. The whole work is full of original and fascinating colouring. Best of the three movements by far is the most poetic and truly grief-stricken elegy. The work struck us that afternoon as having two weaknesses—one, the almost conventional nature of the second subject of the first movement, and the other, the excessive abruptness with which the merrymaking of the finale follows on the terrible lamentation of the second movement.

Among the students who gave solo performances I was particularly interested by a soprano who sang the air from the first Act of 'Aida,' and a violinist who played the first movement of Beethoven's Violin Concerto.

P. W.

CIVIL SERVICE ORCHESTRA

One is loath to say anything that might damp the ardour of amateurs, since it is on their efforts and on their understanding, on their energy and initiative, that the future of music must depend. But I should do ill service to the orchestra of the Civil Service if I did not point out that its playing on March 26 was not such as I would expect from a society with so vast a membership as that of the Civil Service is—or ought to be. To give them their due, not a few of the players showed the goodwill and alacrity which go for so much in an amateur performance. But the strings carried far too much 'dead weight' to be effective. Far too many violinists had not taken the trouble to look at their parts and master their difficulties at home, and they neutralised to a very considerable extent the work of the more zealous. This is the sort of weakness against which the most able of conductors will fight in vain. A conductor can deal with the mass—not with the individual. It is for the individual player to attend the rehearsals fully prepared, knowing what he is expected to do and how to do it. Then the work of preparation becomes effective and educative. Orchestral playing is like life in this—that you cannot get out of it more than you are prepared to put in.

F. B.

PRO PALESTINE FUND

A miscellaneous concert was given at the Hippodrome in aid of the Palestine Fund with the co-operation of, amongst others, Miss Daisy Kennedy and Mr. Harold Samuel. These distinguished performers played a number of short pieces and played them very well. But according to an objectionable custom the programme contained an enormous number of performances and resembled in many ways a variety show, with this important reservation—that some of the contributors would never be accepted as part of a good music-hall entertainment. No one could dream of blaming the organizers of this particular concert for failing to give some sort of harmony and homogeneity to the entertainment. It is the custom that must be blamed for this senseless mixture of what is eminently interesting and delectable with what is dull and uninteresting. It seems inevitable that those who take an interest in Mr. Harold Samuel must find, say, a jazz band something of a bore—and vice versa. Both are, no doubt, excellent in their different way. But they do not mix very well.

F. B.

PIANOFORTE AND VIOLIN

An interesting evening of music was given on March 27 by Miss Dorothy Darlington and Miss Fiona McCleary. These two young players are fairly well equipped technically, but the merit of their performances is not in the dazzling display of virtuosity. It is rather the freshness of their outlook, the obvious pleasure they take in whatever they do, that captivate the listener. The painstaking, plodding work of preparation has not in the least blunted their zest and, in consequence, they are better qualified to give pleasure to an audience than other far more skilled practitioners. We liked the way Miss Darlington tackled the very difficult 'Concerto Accademico' of Vaughan Williams, for it showed good taste and discrimination. And in the pianoforte solos of Miss McCleary there was the same most laudable determination to bring out clearly and effectively those features of the music which appealed most to the performer. Above all we liked their playing of Ravel's Sonata, for the violinist and the pianist are an exceedingly well matched pair.

B. V.

MISS DOROTHY HESSE

We may assume that Miss Dorothy Hesse is full of confidence, for only a very confident young pianist will challenge public opinion with a Bach programme. Her confidence, however, was justified to a large extent. Miss Hesse's command of style and technique enabled her to play such things as the Toccata in G, the Partita in B flat, and the Chromatic Fantasia, with a very clear understanding of their aim and purpose. Every part stood out clearly and the balance of the parts showed thought and judgment. In one respect only did Miss Hesse leave something to be desired. She attempted not infrequently to give the themes a touch of sentiment, 'expression,' and this is what Bach will never bear. He provides his own expression, and all the interpreter need do to realise it is to allow him to speak for himself.

F. B.

TWO PIANOFORTES

A recital for two pianofortes was given by Miss Joan Davies and Mr. Dennis Dance with some success. Neither player could be described as master of his instrument. But their earnestness, their determination to 'make good,' their modesty and sincerity, made ample amends for whatever flaws could be noted in the performances. In any case these were neither numerous nor serious, and one felt that experience alone is needed to give finish and maturity to their very promising efforts.

F. B.

THE WESTMINSTER QUARTET

The Westminster Quartet consists of Miss Dorothy Ewens, Miss Phyllis Newton, Miss Ada Stuart, and Miss D. Fening. They played Purcell's 'Chacony' well—apart from occasional hardness of tone—and a set of Variations by Purcell Warren was also given an adequate reading. Neither of these pieces, however, tested very severely the abilities of the quartet players, and the other contributions made it abundantly clear that at present these should mark the limit of their ambitions. Their intonation is not by any means faultless, nor can they afford to smile at a difficult piece of left-hand technique. But the material is good, and should show to much better advantage when material difficulties have been more surely overcome. F. B.

MISS MARION MCAFEE

The singing of Miss Marion McAfee at Grotrian Hall left us in no doubt as to the excellence of her style, method, and understanding. Whether she sang Italian, English, or German, her readings were always highly competent. And as the accompaniments were played by Mr. Cyril Scott, with utmost taste and refinement, every item gave great pleasure. Is she one of the singers to command a vast following? The future will show. At present her restraint, admirable in some ways, may hide a lack of quick, generous response. Her programme pointed to very wide sympathies, but although she sang both Verdi and Wolf well, she never gave the impression of one who for the time being is in the grip of an irresistible force. She did not surrender her own personality; she gave nothing that was not scrupulously controlled. In some ways this is an asset; but when constant experience has robbed the singer of the thrill of facing audiences, it may become a source of weakness. At present Miss McAfee's performances are as delightful to the connoisseur as to the mere music-lover who demands nothing more than a good voice and good musicianship.

F. B.

PEOPLE'S PALACE CHORAL AND ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY

This hard-working body gave a performance of the B minor Mass at the People's Palace on March 24. The ensemble inevitably suffered from the fact of a number of the singers being placed in the balconies owing to lack of space on the platform, but good work was done throughout, especially in the 'Sanctus.' The soloists were Miss Caroline Hatchard, Miss Millicent Russell, Mr. Andrew Clayton, and Mr. Topliss Green. Mr. Paul Brunet led the orchestra, and Mr. Herbert Hodge was at the organ. Mr. Frank Idle conducted, and he and his forces are to be congratulated on the measure of success that attended their ambitious flight. X.

RAILWAY CLEARING HOUSE MUSICAL SOCIETY

Clearing house usually raises a dust and makes one husky. With Mr. John E. West's choir it apparently works the other way, for these men's voices are notably clear and true. It is next to impossible in many choirs nowadays to get ideal balance. The next best thing is to make the singers in all the parts listen to each other, and use their intelligence about tone-levels. This choir does so; that, and its good discipline and ready response, surest signs of the experienced conductor's grip on them and the music alike, told all the time—in Holst's arrangements of 'Swansea Town' and 'Matthew, Mark,' in the well-coloured performances of Elgar part-songs, and, most effectively of all, in S. S. Wesley's glee 'When fierce conflicting passions.' There, in the middle section, is some of S. S.'s serenest, most buoyant part-weaving. Why don't choirs let us hear a few more of his pieces, and why don't we have more glee singing? Best of all would be for the fairly large choirs to break up into little groups, and so get valuable experience in singing one-to-a-part, and give us the glee in its purest form. W. R. A.

FLONZALEY QUARTET

The Flonzaley Quartet, which was founded in 1902 and which played at Wigmore Hall on April 14, is reported to be on the point of disbanding. The Quartet still retains three of its original members. Twenty-six years is a big slice from a life-time, and some of the players may have different ambitions incompatible with a whole-time and life-long devotion to string quartets; but their separation is a public loss, as their performance of Mozart's D major (K. 575) Quartet proved. It was beautifully mellow, almost faultless in intonation, and reasonably but not inhumanly unanimous. Erwin Schulhoff's Quartet which followed gave the players opportunities for virtuosity and effects that tickled the audience, but it was ephemeral music. The Flonzaleys bade us good-bye (if this was indeed their good-bye) with an exquisite performance of Brahms in B flat. C.

AMATEUR ORCHESTRAS

The London Shipping Orchestral Society, which is gradually improving under the direction of Mr. Clive Parsons, played the 'Merry Wives of Windsor' Overture and the Largo from the 'New World' Symphony, at Kingsway Hall on March 21.

At the Victoria and Albert Museum, on March 24, the League of Arts had the services of the Audrey Chapman Orchestra, which is well-known for the high standard of its playing and its fine concert-giving work in out-of-the-way parts of London. Under Mr. Frank Bridge the orchestra played the 'Siegfried Idyll,' Bach's Violin Concerto in E, with Mr. William Primrose as soloist, and the G minor Symphony of Mozart.

The Amateur Orchestra of London, conducted by Mr. Wynn Reeves, accompanied Mr. Reginald Paul in Rachmaninov's second Pianoforte Concerto, at Kingsway Hall, on March 26.

The best of the suburban amateur orchestras, Croydon Philharmonic Society, gave an excellent programme under Mr. W. H. Reed on March 27. The Symphony of the occasion was Beethoven's fourth, de Falla's 'El amor brujo' was played, and Mr. Harold Samuel contributed Bach.

Mendelssohn's 'Italian' Symphony was played by the Royal Amateur Orchestral Society, under Mr. Arthur Payne, at Queen's Hall on April 3.

The Stock Exchange Orchestral Society, conducted by Mr. Edric Cundell at Queen's Hall on April 12, played a Hungarian Rhapsody of Liszt's, and accompanied Pouishnov in Rachmaninov's second Pianoforte Concerto.

The programme of Lloyd's Orchestra at Æolian Hall on April 17 included Elgar's 'Froissart' Overture, Debussy's 'Petite Suite,' and Mozart's E flat Symphony. Mr. Clarence Raybould conducted.

LONDON CHORAL CONCERTS

Armed with his new authority as permanent conductor, Dr. Malcolm Sargent inspired the Royal Choral Society to a vigorous performance of 'The Messiah' on Good Friday, partly by the prevailing fashion of taking choruses more quickly than they were taken a decade ago, and partly by attending to particular opportunities for expression. The soloists were Miss Flora Woodman, Miss Muriel Brunskill, Mr. Ben Davies, and Mr. Charles Knowles.

Bach's 'Peasant Cantata' was sung by the L.M.S. Concert Society on March 16, and again on March 19 by the Civil Service Choir, at Kingsway Hall, where, under Mr. Stanford Robinson, a programme of good choice included the closing scene from 'Dido and Æneas' and three secular choruses by Handel.

The Crystal Palace Choral and Orchestral Society gave a Wagner concert on March 24, under Mr. Walter Hedgcock.

Under Mr. Frank E. Creed the London Sunday School Choir, some thousand strong, gave an agreeable concert at the Albert Hall on March 24.

At the concert of the National Provincial Bank Musical Society the choir, under Mr. Herbert J. Baggs, gave Balfour Gardiner's 'Sir Eglamore,' an Elizabethan group by Vaughan Williams, and Elgar's 'Weary wind of the west.' Mr. Stanley Curtis gave an excellent performance (the concert was at Queen's Hall) of Guilmant's D minor Symphony for organ.

Barclay's Bank Choir sang effectively in the course of the Society's concert at Queen's Hall on March 28, the music including Deering's 'Cryes of London' and Grieg's 'Landerkennung.'

A well-rehearsed and enjoyable performance of 'King Olaf' was given by the South-West Choral Society at Battersea Town Hall on March 28, Mr. Frank Odell conducting.

The miscellaneous programme of the Stock Exchange Male-Voice Choir at Cannon Street Hotel, on March 29, included Byrd's 'While that the sun,' Elgar's 'Serenade,' Dunhill's 'Full fathom five,' Julius Harrison's 'Viking Song,' and arrangements by Vaughan Williams and Holst.

The Good Friday programme at the Crystal Palace included Rossini's 'Stabat Mater' by a large choir and the London Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Walter Hedgcock.

KENSINGTON MUSIC CLUB

A small orchestra, conducted by Mr. Anthony Bernard, and Miss Orrea Pernel were the performers at the last concert of the Kensington Music Club. Miss Pernel played some Tartini as if she loved it, and won our gratitude, since the immense majority of violinists play Tartini to-day as the last generation played Vieuxtemps—to show the deftness of their fingers or the skill of their bowing. The only fly in this ointment was the length and quality of the cadenzas.

The orchestra played a Concerto of P. E. Bach's at the beginning—a rather unbalanced performance—and later Delius's 'Song before Sunrise' with real gusto. F. B.

Music in the Provinces

BANBURY.—The performance of the abridged concert edition of 'Carmen' given by the Banbury Madrigal and Glee Union marked the Society's thirty-seventh year of work under the conductorship of Mr. O. Sherwin Marshall. The orchestra was that which is organized and conducted by Miss Dorothy Robeson. A special feature of this Society's concerts is that for many years the solo parts have been sung by members of the choir.

BARNSLEY.—The abridged concert edition of 'Carmen' was sung with good effect by the St. Cecilia Society under Dr. J. Frederic Staton. The part of Carmen was taken by Miss Rispah Goodacre.

BOLTON.—In a well-chosen miscellaneous programme by the Philharmonic Society, the chief items were Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens' and 'The Lotos Eaters,' in which the choir sang well under the direction of Mr. C. Risegari. A young Bolton soprano, Miss Margaret Collier, made a success with the soprano part of 'The Lotos Eaters.' ——The Amateur Orchestral Society, under Mr. Archie Camden, played an Air for strings by Cunningham Woods and Coleridge-Taylor's 'Othello' Suite at its final concert on March 31.

BRADFORD.—Dr. Malcolm Sargent conducted an inspiring performance of 'The Dream of Gerontius' by the Bradford Festival Choral Society and the Bradford Permanent Orchestra, on March 23. The soloists were Miss Muriel Brunskill, Mr. Steuart Wilson, and Mr. Harold Williams.

BRIGHTON.—Harold Samuel was the soloist at a concert given by the Symphonic Players under Mr. Herbert Menges. Apart from the music of Bach in which the soloist was concerned, the programme included Elgar's Serenade, Op. 20, and Julius Harrison's 'Prelude Music' for strings and harp.——The Brosa Quartet played at a meeting of the Sussex Women Musicians' Club.

BRISTOL.—The concert of the Bristol Choral Society, on March 17, was arranged as a tribute to the memory of the late conductor, Sir Herbert Brewer. The original programme had consisted of Verdi's 'Requiem' and Ethel Smyth's Mass, but the latter was postponed, and in its place the choir sang Spohr's 'Blest are the departed' and the 'Hallelujah Chorus.' The Bristol Symphony Orchestra played Chopin's Funeral March, and Miss Elsie Suddaby sang 'I know that my Redeemer liveth.' The other soloists were Miss Margaret Balfour, Mr. Parry Jones, and Mr. Arthur Cranmer, and the conductor was Mr. George Riseley.——A performance of 'The Apostles,' under Mr. Arnold Barter, brought the season of the Bristol Philharmonic Society to an end on March 31. The orchestra of sixty included thirty players from the London Symphony Orchestra. The solo parts were sung by Miss Dorothy Silk, Miss Millicent Russell, Mr. Steuart Wilson, Mr. Herbert Heyner, Mr. Roy Henderson, and Mr. Howard Fry.——The Don Cossacks gave a concert on March 28, with a characteristic programme, and were much admired. ——Sir Henry Wood conducted an orchestral concert in Colston Hall on March 27, with a programme that included Beethoven's fifth Symphony and Elgar's second 'Wand of Youth' Suite.

BROADSTAIRS.—'King Olaf' was given by the Broadstairs and St. Peters Choral and Orchestral Society, under the direction of Mr. F. E. Fisher. Both choir and orchestra acquitted themselves creditably.

CHELTENHAM.—The third of the concerts given by the City of Birmingham Orchestra drew a large audience on March 26. The works performed under Dr. Adrian Boult included Bantock's Prelude to 'Sappho,' the Intermezzo and Overture from 'The Boatswain's Mate,' Franck's Symphony, and Chabrier's 'Espana.' Dame Ethel Smyth conducted her own music, and her Overture was repeated.

CHESTER.—Schumann's Trio in D minor was one of the works played at the final concert of its season by the Chester Trio—Mr. A. Hull, Mr. F. W. Hague, and Mr. A. B. Colman.

CHESTERFIELD.—A large audience heard 'The Dream of Gerontius,' performed on March 20 by the Chesterfield Musical Union, assisted by the Sheffield Musical Society. The choir of a hundred and fifty voices and the orchestra of forty were conducted by Dr. J. Frederic Staton.

COLCHESTER.—The Colchester and District Musical Society, which is more faithful to Handel than is the fashion nowadays, gave an excellent performance of 'Judas Maccabæus,' under the direction of Mr. W. F. Kingdon, on March 27. The soloists were Miss Cecilia Farrer, Mr. Frederick Taylor, and Mr. Barrington Hooper.

CROMER.—The capable Orchestral Society conducted by Miss F. Muriel gave a successful concert on March 22, the principal work being Schubert's 'Tragic' Symphony.

DERBY.—Bach's Mass in B minor was performed for the first time at Derby by the Choral Union, on March 27. Sir Henry Coward conducted, and the solo singers were Miss Stiles-Allen, Miss Edith Furmedge, Mr. Steuart Wilson, and Mr. Arthur Cranmer. All who heard the performance say that the choral singing ranked very high in every respect.

DISS.—At its final concert the Diss Choral Society sang Rossini's 'Stabat Mater,' Elgar's 'My love dwelt in a northern land,' and other works, under the direction of Mr. W. H. Aldritch.

GRIMSBY.—Holst's 'The Cloud Messenger' was given by the Grimsby Choral Society under Mr. Percy Wilson, the accompaniment being played at the pianoforte by Miss Gladys Hunter.

GUERNSEY.—The Guille-Allès Festival, held on March 22 and 23, was, as usual, the event of the year, both musically and socially. The chief works performed were 'The Dream of Gerontius' and Parts 1 and 2 of 'Hiawatha.' There were also miscellaneous additions in which the solo singers took a conspicuous part, and everything went off well under the direction of Mr. John David.——At a successful concert given on April 9 by the Jersey Male-Voice Choir of forty-two voices, under Mr. W. Leach, a miscellaneous programme included Bullard's 'The Sword of Ferrara,' Wilfred Shaw's 'An Evening's Pastorale,' and Coleridge-Taylor's 'Viking Song.'

GUILDFORD.—A programme of special interest was provided at the fourth of the Subscription concerts. Mr. Aubrey Brain played Mozart's E major Horn Concerto, Mr. Haydn P. Draper played a Clarinet Concerto by Maurice Blower, and the works conducted by Mr. Claud Powell further included the second Symphony of Beethoven.

HALIFAX.—Handel's rarely-heard 'Passion' was given on March 29 by St. Paul's Choral Society, under Mr. T. Newboult. The choir also sang Bach's 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring.'——Elland Orchestral Society gave its first performance of a Beethoven Symphony (No. 2) on March 27.

The programme also included three folk-dances arranged for string orchestra by Rutland Boughton. Mr. S. Garsed conducted.

HUDDERSFIELD.—Mr. A. W. Kaye gave a concert with his string orchestra on March 31, the music including Bantock's Suite, 'Scenes from the Scottish Highlands,' Sibelius's Romance in C, Elgar's Serenade in E minor, and other familiar works.

HULL.—The most notable of recent events has been the performance of Vaughan Williams's 'A London Symphony,' under Sir Henry Wood, at the Philharmonic concert, on March 22. Miss Marie Wilson made her first appearance in the Violin Concerto of Max Bruch.

HUNSTANTON.—With an orchestra of ten string players and a pianist the Hunstanton Choral Society sang Bach's 'Peasant Cantata' and Elgar's 'The Banner of St. George' on March 20. Mr. B. Roden Hilder conducted.

IPSWICH.—Beethoven's E flat Quartet, Op. 127, was played by the Budapest Quartet at the final concert of the Ipswich Chamber Music Society.

KENDAL.—At a recent concert of the Choral Society, Mr. J. S. Winder conducted the choir and orchestra of a hundred and forty performers in Coleridge - Taylor's 'Kubla Khan' and Beethoven's Mass in C.

LEEDS.—'The Dream of Gerontius' was performed by the Philharmonic Society with the assistance of the Hallé Orchestra, before a large audience. Dr. E. C. Bairstow conducted, and the soloists were Miss Olga Haley, Mr. Steuart Wilson, and Mr. Walter Whiteway. The choir also sang Schubert's 'To Music,' arranged as a part-song by Dr. Bairstow, and the Orchestra played the 'Tragic' Symphony.——At the last concert of the Leeds Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Julius Harrison conducted the 'Enigma' Variations, Moeran's 'In the Mountain Country,' Holst's 'Marching Song,' and Schubert's 'Fierrabras' Overture. The continuance of these concerts has been rendered doubtful by want of adequate public attendance, and a special appeal was issued for better support in the future. ——On March 24 Mr. Edward Maude's String Orchestra gave two concerts. The first had an all-Bach programme which included a Suite arranged by Dr. Whittaker from the first 'Overture,' the sixth 'Brandenburg' Concerto (that which dispenses with violins), a Suite arranged by Bachrich from the second Violin Sonata, and Arias sung by Miss Elsie Suddaby. The evening programme included a Concerto Grosso in D minor by Geminiani, three movements from Dvorák's Serenade, Op. 22, Rutland Boughton's 'Folk-Dances,' and Bantock's 'Scenes from the Scottish Highlands.'

LEICESTER.—The new Bach Choir, organized and conducted by Dr. Gordon Slater, made its first appearance on April 1 in a performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion.

LISKEARD.—The Choral Society, which is now greatly improved in numbers and ability, gave a successful concert on March 22, under Mr. Walter B. Weekes. The music included a selection from 'St. Paul,' and Coleridge-Taylor's 'Viking Song.'

LIVERPOOL.—A notice of Vycpálek's new cantata 'The Last Things of Man' will be found on p. 447. The other works performed by the Philharmonic Society at this concert included 'Scheherazade' and Delius's 'Sea Drift.' ——The Welsh Choral Union gave a thoroughly praiseworthy performance of Beethoven's Mass in D on March 24, under Dr. Hopkin Evans. —— The repertory of the B.N.O.C. for an excellent week of opera at the Empire Theatre included 'The Golden Cockerel,' 'Gianni Schicchi,' 'Aida,' 'Rigoletto,' 'Carmen,' 'Manon,' and 'Parsifal.'

MANCHESTER.—On March 28 the Catterall Quartet gave a typically interesting programme—Ernest Walker's Quartet in one movement, Wolf's 'Italian Serenade,' and, with Mr. Redfern and Mr. Fuchs, Schönberg's 'Verklärte Nacht' and the Sextet of Brahms.——Apart from the opera season by the B.N.O.C. the most notable events have been Miss Jo Lamb's performance of Elgar's Violin Concerto at her recital, Barclay's Bank Musical Society in Hubert Bath's 'The Wedding of Shon Maclean,' a Caprice on 18th-century Country Dances of Grétry, composed by Mr. Edward Isaacs and played by him at a Tuesday Midday concert, and the Manchester Orchestral Society under Mr. Archie Camden in a G major Symphony of Haydn.

NEWCASTLE.—The large audience that came to the Town Hall on March 22 was well repaid by a splendid performance of Berlioz's 'Faust,' by the Newcastle and Gateshead Choral Union and the Newcastle Symphony Orchestra. The choir of three hundred voices included fifty young singers from Rutherford College Girls' School. Mr. George Dodds conducted, and Mr. W. Hendry, a local baritone, took the part of Mephistopheles.——A short illustrated lecture on North-Country Folk-Music was given to the Rotary Club recently by Dr. Whittaker and Mr. Ernest Potts whose expert singing of these songs is now happily becoming well known.

NORTHWICH.—The Philharmonic Society recently gave Handel's 'Samson' with full orchestral accompaniment, under the direction of Mr. J. Paterson-Shaw.

NORWICH.—The Philharmonic Society and the Choral Society joined forces for a commemoration service in honour of Schubert, at the Cathedral, on March 29, under the direction of Dr. Bates. The 'Unfinished' Symphony and the Mass in B flat were the Schubert numbers, and the programme further included Bach's cantata, 'My spirit was in heaviness.' The solo singers were Miss Elsie Suddaby, Miss Millicent Russell, Mr. Steuart Wilson, and Mr. Joseph Jones.——Mr. Cyril Pearce's fourth series of chamber concerts came to an end with an interesting programme that included Bach's 'Giant' Fugue, arranged for strings by Vaughan Williams, a Concerto Grosso by Geminiani, Bantock's Serenade 'In the far west,' and a 'Cello Sonata by Vivaldi played by Miss Adeline Carter to string accompaniment arranged by d'Indy. Madrigals were sung by St. Mary's Choir.

NOTTINGHAM.—The Sacred Harmonic Society brought its season to a close with a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor under Mr. Allen Gill. Mr. Bernard Johnson, who assisted at the organ, had prepared the way for the performance by a lecture to members of the Nottingham Music Club.——At a 'Madrigal Evening' given recently by the William Woolley Choral Society, the conductor gave a preliminary lecture on the Elizabethan period, and the choir sang sixteen madrigals. The concert was given at the Church Hall of St. Michael and All Angels, Radford, where Mr. Woolley has been organist and choirmaster for thirty-eight years.

OLDHAM.—'King Olaf' was performed with good effect by the Oldham Musical Society, a choir of seventy voices and a capable orchestra, under Mr. Ernest Craig.

OXFORD.—In connection with the fourth congress of the National Union of Students a concert was given by student performers to a student audience at the Town Hall on April 1. A string orchestra, under Mr. Christopher Mason, gave a Suite of Purcell pieces arranged by Bliss, and Vaughan Williams's 'Charterhouse' Suite. Community singing was conducted by Mr. Reginald Jacques.

PETERBOROUGH.—The Choral Union and the Orchestral Society were conducted by Mr. A. E. Armstrong on March 23 in the concert version of Gounod's 'Faust,' the 'Unfinished' Symphony, and Eric Coates's Suite 'Summer Days.'

PORTSMOUTH.—The Philharmonic Society conducted by Lieut. R. P. O'Donnell brought its season to an end by giving the first performance at Portsmouth of 'The Kingdom.' There was a first-class orchestra and the choir did justice to the music and to the occasion.

RAWMARSH.—The complete 'Song of Hiawatha' was performed on March 22 by the Rawmarsh and Parkgate Choral Society, under Mr. A. G. Steele.

READING.—Mendelssohn's 'Scotch' Symphony was played by the Berkshire Symphony Orchestra, under Mr. Daughtry, on March 28.

REDHILL.—An ambitious programme by the Redhill Society of Instrumentalists (which has now completed its thirty-fourth season) included Franck's Symphony, the Suite from 'Le Coq d'Or,' and Sullivan's 'Macbeth' Overture. The orchestra played with excellent effect under Mr. W. H. Reed.

ROCHESTER.—For the last concert of the season the Choral Society, under Mr. C. Hylton Stewart, gave a performance of Brahms's 'Requiem' in the Cathedral.

ROTHERHAM.—The Choral Society's programme, on March 29, included Handel's 'Acis and Galatea' and Gade's 'Spring's Message.' Mr. Granville Naylor conducted.

RUGBY.—The programme of the Philharmonic Society, under Mr. Kenneth A. Stubbs, on March 29, included Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' Gounod's 'By Babylon's Wave,' Bach's 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring,' and Parry's 'My soul, there is a country.'——On the next evening the Orchestral Society, under Mr. F. Yuille-Smith, played Beethoven's eighth Symphony and a selection of the Handel-Harty 'Water Music.'

SHEFFIELD.—The performance of 'The Dream of Gerontius' given by the Sheffield Amateur Musical Society on March 27, was the third that had taken place in the West Riding within a week. Dr. J. Frederic Staton conducted.——Two days later 'The Apostles' was performed by the Music Union, which thus completed its fifty-second season under the direction of Sir Henry Coward.——At its ninth annual concert, Sheffield Glee and Madrigal Society sang madrigals by Gibbons, Wilbye, Bateson, Byrd, and some well-chosen part-songs, under the direction of Miss Bessie Unwin.

SKIPTON.—'Hiawatha' was given on March 22, by the Skipton Choral Society, assisted by Mr. Whitby Norton's orchestra, under the direction of Mr. A. Townsend.

SOUTHPORT.—The Schubert programme given by Ainsdale Musical Society under Mr. Ernest Hillson, on March 29, included the Mass in G, part-songs for ladies' voices, men's voices, and mixed voices, and the Quartet, 'Death and the Maiden.'

STOCKPORT.—The Vocal Union concluded its fifty-fifth season on March 26 with a miscellaneous programme, including Elgar's 'The Banner of St. George,' Coleridge-Taylor's 'The Lee Shore,' and Sibelius's 'Finlandia,' under Dr. Thomas Keighley.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON.—The Choral and Orchestral Society gave a performance of 'King Olaf' on April 5, under Capt. Allen K. Blackall.

SUNDERLAND.—'Caractacus' was performed for the first time at Sunderland on March 28 by the Philharmonic Society with a local orchestra, under the direction of Mr. R. F. Jarman.

TROWBRIDGE.—The Trowbridge Orchestra of forty-eight performers, under Mr. A. E. Howell, which made its debut last November with the 'New World' Symphony and '1812' Overture, played the 'Prince Igor' Dances, the 'Freischütz' Overture, Quilter's 'Children's Overture,' and, with Miss Beatrice Harrison as soloist, Haydn's D major 'Cello Concerto at its second concert, on March 21.

WALLASEY.—The new Wallasey Philharmonic Society made its first appearance recently in a performance of 'A Tale of Old Japan,' under Mr. T. J. O. Jones. Accompaniment was provided at the organ by Mr. Henry Goss-Custard.

WALSALL.—Elgar's 'The Music-Makers' and Cowen's 'John Gilpin' were given on March 22, by the Philharmonic Choir, under Mr. Ambrose Porter. The orchestra, assisted at the organ by Mr. T. W. North, played Holst's two 'Songs without Words.'

WINDSOR.—On March 19, the Windsor and Eton Choral Society, under the Rev. Bernard Everett, gave Bach's Mass in B minor, the 'Credo' being omitted. The audience included eighty children from the elementary and secondary schools of Windsor and Eton. Dr. H. G. Ley assisted at the organ, and also played the 'Dorian' Toccata and Fugue of Bach.

WOKING.—The programme of the Woking Music Club, on March 27, included Bach's 'Coffee Cantata' and Mozart's Quartet in D for flute and strings, the artists being Miss Dorothy Silk, Mr. Bruce Flegg, Mr. Stuart Robertson, Mr. Joseph Slater, the Wood-Smith String Quartet, and Mr. George Reeves at the pianoforte.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas' was performed at the tenth annual concert of the Wolverhampton Girls' High School Choral Society. Mrs. Melbourn conducted, and the solo parts were taken by members of the choir.——Verdi's 'Requiem' and Brahms's 'Song of Destiny' were performed by the Musical Society on April 3, under Dr. Malcolm Sargent.

WORCESTER.—The performance of 'The Dream of Gerontius' by the Festival Choral Society in the Cathedral, under Sir Ivor Atkins, was of the standard associated with the Three Choirs Festival. The composer was present in the audience.——The Orchestral and Ladies' Choral Society gave a successful concert in the public hall under Sir Ivor Atkins, the programme including Elgar's 'The Snow' and 'Lullaby,' Martin Shaw's 'Song of Callicles,' the 'Eroica' Symphony, and a 'Wand of Youth' Suite.

WORTHING.—Under Mr. William Bredt the Orchestral Society played Mozart's G minor Symphony and Bach's Concerto for two violins, with Miss Una Cheverton and Miss Peggy Radmall as soloists, on March 24. The concert was not adequately supported by this apparently unmusical neighbourhood.

THE BOURNEMOUTH FESTIVAL

The Bournemouth Festival of April 13-16 was similar to its predecessors in all save the programme. This will probably not be true on the next occasion, for it is expected that the new Pavilion or Casino or Palace of Diversion (the name has yet to be announced) will be ready for the Festival of 1929, which will have all the advantages of a stage as well as a platform in the large hall, seating-room for seventeen hundred and fifty, a dancing hall close by, and three restaurants. Sir Dan Godfrey, his orchestra, and the guest-conductors, crowded a great deal of interesting music into their four days. There was nothing performed for the first time, but there was plenty of behind-the-scenes music which is waiting for popularity or the opposite fate, and which is dependent for its present chances on the visits of composer-conductors to such festivals as this. William Walton's 'Sinfonia Concertante' (with Mr. Gordon Bryan as pianoforte soloist) was the most conspicuous example. It bears a second hearing well, and deserves to have a vogue. Audiences like it, and that is a helpful factor. Dr. Rootham's 'Pan' was another case in point. Its chances are less, perhaps, because it does not strike for popularity, but calmly aims at the expression of beauty in sound and thought, appealing more to the higher than to the lower courts of taste.

On this last point F. W. de Massi-Hardman's 'Manx Rhapsody' is undecided, and the impression it made was indefinite. This could not be said of the 'Mock Fugue' by Lord Berners, which appeals directly to the sense of humour, and wins its appeal by deft management. It may be questioned, however, whether there is enough music in the joke for an oft-repeated welcome. The composer-conductors included Sir Hamilton Harty, who, besides honouring his contract with Berlioz, offered his own setting of Keats's 'Ode to a Nightingale'—a work of accomplishment. Mr. John Ansell, Mr. Eric Coates, and Mr. Haydn Wood shared an evening of light music. Mr. Norman O'Neill conducted his 'Festal Prelude' and two 'Shakespearean Sketches' from his incidental music to 'The Merchant of Venice.' Holbrooke's Saxophone Concerto was played to an interested audience. Mr. Norman Demuth conducted a bright little 'Overture to a Comedy' of his own.

Outside the British music the chief event was the performance, under Mr. Pedro Morales, of 'Evocation,' by F. Morreno Torroba, which is the first number in a Suite entitled 'Cuadros Castellanos,' and Turina's 'Sinfonia Sevillana.' The works were alike, and to English ears like all other Spanish orchestral music, in their regard for colour, rhythm, and the Iberian equivalent of a 'hwyl,' and in their nonchalance towards other ways of virtue. Other foreign works of the Festival included Chausson's Symphony in B flat, Ravel's 'Tombeau de Couperin,' Debussy's 'L'après-midi d'un faune,' Dukas's 'L'apprenti sorcier,' Dvořák's 'New World' Symphony, and the final Wagner programme.

The orchestra and the conductor, both a credit to Bournemouth, took the Festival in their stride, and dealt with it competently as they passed from their previous week's work to the next. F. T. C.

Competition Festival Record

BEDFORD.—The Bedfordshire Musical Competition Festival ('Eisteddfod' for short) began on March 5, and went on with only a Sunday interval until the following Saturday week, when prize-givings and winners' performances and speeches made a popular finale. The Festival had not only length but breadth; that is, it was not spun out by long successions of solo singers and child pianists (although there were cases of seventy or eighty entries), but was largely concerned with genuine festival interests such as choral singing, school choir singing, and folk-dances. The school choir singing was an especially strong feature, for twenty-six competitions brought in an average of over six choirs each. Adult choirs were less numerous—here and there a prize was awarded without a contest—but they showed a steadily advancing support. A number of choral classes were confined to competitors within thirty miles of Bedford. In these the chief prizes were won by Stevington Choral Society (Mr. G. Field), Meppershall Choral Society (Miss M. Ibberson), Bedford Orpheus Choir (Capt. P. Burke), Primrose Hill Male-Voice Choir, Northampton (Mr. F. A. Facer), and, in a class that drew eleven entries, St. Paul's, Bedford, Mothers' Meeting. In the open choral classes the awards were as follows: mixed-voice, Northampton Co-operative Choir (Mr. W. C. J. Grant); madrigal class, Clarendon Singers, Bedford; male-voice, tenor lead, Primrose Hill, Northampton (Mr. F. A. Facer); male-voice, alto lead, Bedford Liberal Club (Mr. A. W. Barker); female-voice, Streatham Singers (Mr. F. C. Haggis).

BOGNOR.—The eleventh annual West Sussex Festival, held for the fourth time at Bognor, on March 22-24, showed all the signs of increasing prosperity in addition to the expansion of the Festival from two days to three. Over eighty choirs entered in the junior and senior classes, and many interesting competitions were held. In the competitions for choirs from large villages, the winners were Warnham Choral Society (mixed voices) and Barnham Choral Society (male voices and female voices). The winning choirs in the town classes were Chichester Apollo (male voices) and Horsham Philharmonic (female voices). In the open classes the prizes were taken by Chichester Apollo in the male-voice section, and Petworth Choral Society in the mixed-voice, Arundel being only one mark behind. The prizes were distributed by the Duchess of Norfolk, President of the Festival. At the end of one of the evening sessions, combined choirs sang a selection from 'Dido and Æneas,' under Dr. Whittaker's direction.

BRIGG.—This Festival is well served by its neighbouring villages, and the two adjudicators who worked on March 27 and 28 were given plenty of surprises in the course of the various choral competitions. The biggest occurred when Stanford's 'The Blue Bird' and Geoffrey Shaw's 'Worship' were sung, with beauty of tone and interpretation, by a combined choir from South Ferriby, Saxby, Bonby, and Worlaby. Brocklesby Choir also sang well in winning the male-voice class.

BRISTOL.—The Eisteddfod, with a hundred and fifty classes and about six thousand competitors, lasted from March 22-30, and provided work for seven judges in the purely musical classes. The greater part of the time was occupied by solo performers of all kinds and ages, elocutionists and dancers, and comparatively little by choirs. Of these the principal winners were Romilly Men's Choir (Mr. W. M. Williams), Barry Male-Voice Choir (Mr. D. J. Thomas), out of six choirs that sang Elgar's 'The Herald' in the chief class; Romilly Male-Voice Choir (Mr. W. M. Williams) in the class for less than forty voices; Miss Mary Wood's Ladies' Choir, Bath, out of six entries; and Bristol Ladies' Choir (Miss F. Bradfield), the only entry for two-part sight-singing.

DERBY.—The Derbyshire and North Staffs Musical Competitions, which have grown out of the old Dove and Churnet Valleys Festival into a four-day event of more than local importance, were held with an increased entry and every sign of growing prosperity on March 14-17. Here the choral work bears a proper proportion to the solo singing and playing, and the doings of school and adult choirs were the main interest. Folk-dancing also flourished among the schools and Girl Guides and like institutions. In the open choral classes the leading choirs were Madame Gell's Ladies' Choir, from Birmingham; Cheadle Choral Society (male voices); and Ilkeston Co-operative Society. In the three classes for village choirs the first prize was taken in each case by Croxden and Hallington Choral Society.

DEVON.—In the Devon Music Competitions held at Exeter, Barnstaple, and Tavistock, the chief awards were made to Broadclyst Choral Society, Tavistock Parish Church Choir, University College Ladies' Choir, Uffculme Women's Institute, and Ottery St. Mary Orchestra. The adjudicator gave special praise to the singing of the Women's Institute Choirs and to the tone of the school choirs.

CAMBRIDGE.—The Borough Competitions, held on March 29, were poorly attended, but the Village Competitions on March 31 were very successful. Seven choirs entered from villages with a population of under a thousand, the winners being Over Choral Society. There were five in the open class for chorus and five in the female-voice class. Winning competitors included Melbourne and Meldreth Choral Society and Village Orchestra. In several classes the test-pieces included a selection from Bach's 'Peasant Cantata,' and at the end of the competitions the whole cantata was performed under the direction of Mr. H. S. Middleton, organist of Ely Cathedral.

HASTINGS.—The twenty-second Festival occupied six days (March 22-28), four halls, and twelve adjudicators; its syllabus contained a hundred and twenty-four classes (including impromptu speaking and one-Act plays); and twenty-six pianoforte-playing classes drew an average entry of fourteen, but choirs were few. Mr. Leslie B. Mackay's Choir came out at the head of five competitions.

HEXHAM.—At the twentieth annual competitions there were good entries in some of the classes—six women's institutes, six female-voice choirs from small villages, and eight male-voice quartets—but important classes were neglected. Wallsend was alone in the chief male-voice class. Haydon Bridge won in both the open mixed-voice and open female-voice classes. The village of Stocksfield won distinction by the singing of its male-voice and female-voice choirs under Mr. E. Kellet.

LONDON MUSICAL FESTIVAL, with its 4,250 entries and a total of twelve to thirteen thousand competitors, concluded on April 2 with four concerts by first prize-winners at Central Hall, Westminster. Notwithstanding this prodigious entry the management may be congratulated that there was no suspicion of unwieldiness. With twenty-seven adjudicators at hand, and four, occasionally six, halls engaged simultaneously, all the competitions were negotiated in thirteen days. In deference to the expressed wish of the Board of Education and the London County Council Educational Authority, morning sessions were practically abandoned, which increased the difficulties of the management, as it necessitated a shorter time-table. As a general rule, heads of elementary and secondary schools applauded the decision, although an unimportant minority, particularly from high schools, stubbornly refused any leave of absence and added threats of expulsion. Thus it became necessary to hold many junior classes in the evening, when it should have been a recuperating time for the morrow. The fallacy of this uncompromising policy is exposed, as fitness for the next day's tuition is seriously jeopardized.

Although in a few classes artistic results were disappointing, a very high standard was reached and maintained in others. As a whole the performances were considerably in advance of last year. The scope of the London Musical Festival has assumed new significance. There is an air of nationalisation, and even internationalisation, for not only do competitors enter from all parts of the country, but Canadians, South Africans, French, Irish, Japanese, and Parsees are in the entry list. A glance at the appended results will show that provincial candidates take their share of the spoils.

The most important results were as follow: choral societies, up to eighty voices—Portsmouth Choral Union (Mr. P. Dove); choral societies, up to sixty voices—Coventry Co-operative Festival Choir (Mr. Alexander Edwards); choral societies, up to forty voices—Vocal Students' Choir, Coventry (Miss A. McGowan); new choral societies, formed since September, 1926—Mead Vale Choir, Earlswood (Mr. T. B. Lawrence); ladies' choirs (eighteen entries)—Mr. E. R. Benton's Choir, Grimsby; women's institute choirs—Crowthorne, Berks (Mrs. Whiteley); men's choirs—City of London (Mr. M. R. Mitchell); vocal solos, gold medal classes—Doris Hunn, Sevenoaks (soprano); Bertha Dawson, Leytonstone (mezzo-soprano); Cecilia Marshall, Stroud Green (contralto); Reginald Rulf, Hastings (tenor); Frederick Hard, Letchworth (baritone); Ronald Middleton, Sheffield (bass); pianoforte solo, gold medal class—Margaret Good, Forest Hill; pianoforte solo (prize of Chappell pianoforte)—Miss Gwenyth Misselbrooke, Southend; violin, gold medal class—Blodwen Thomas, Cardiff; organ—Haydn Sail, Kettering; string orchestra—Miss Ethel Loder's Orchestra, Finchley; small orchestra—Sheen School of Music.

LOUGHBOROUGH. — Over five hundred entries were received for this 'Eisteddfod' (which has none of the features that distinguish an eisteddfod from a musical competition festival) organized for the sixth time by the Loughborough Male-Voice Choir on March 22-24. Six pianoforte solo classes had an average of nearly thirty entries. In the classes for pianists under sixteen and under eighteen years of age the prizes were won by a fifteen-year old Nottingham girl, Miss G. M. Woodruff, a highly-gifted and promising musician. Notable competitions were held in the chief choral classes. Coventry Armstrong-Siddeley was best of eleven choirs in the male-voice section, and Leicester Oriana was the best of twelve mixed-voice choirs.

NORTHAMPTON.—The Central Northants Competitions, held this year on March 16 and 17, are a festival of choirs and choral music, and the neighbourhood responds very well to the specialised invitation. Choirs of all kinds, junior and senior, kept the interest alive throughout five busy sessions. Among the juniors, the choirs from Wellingborough All Saints', Irthlingborough Council School, and East Haddon were conspicuous for their ubiquitous and excellent work in many competitions. Classes for Women's Institutes were a feature, the first prizes being taken by Holdenby (Mrs. Schilizzi), Earls Barton (Mrs. S. Robinson), and, in the senior class, West Haddon for the third time. The winning choirs in the open classes were Primrose Hill Male-Voice Choir (Northampton) and Northampton Co-operative Choral Society.

PLYMOUTH.—At this Festival, on March 17, solo playing and singing were in the ascendant—sixty-two juvenile pianists, forty boy sopranos, and in general a high average entry throughout a long list of classes. The standard shown by the best performers was exceptionally good. Choirs were very scarce, only two entering for the chief male-voice class, and only one in each of the classes for church and chapel choirs.

PONTEFRACT.—At the twentieth Festival, on March 20-24, the number of entries had dropped in the solo classes, but choirs and quartets were more numerous than before and represented new districts. In the junior competitions the features were the almost perfect duet-playing of two boy pianists, the award of full marks for sight-singing by a Kippax girl, and the excellent singing of Ardsley Oak Council School, winner in the open class. In the open choral classes the chief awards were won by Monk Fryston Mixed-Voice Choir and Ackworth Female-Voice Choir. At the final concert combined choirs sang 'The Revenge.'

STOUR CHORAL UNION (Chipping Norton, April 17-19). — This twenty-four year old event is an excellent example of the growing number of small rural festivals that make a feature of combined rehearsal and performance. The two adult days ended with surprisingly good singing by small village choirs of Schubert's 'Song of Miriam,' and by somewhat larger choirs of Parry's 'Ode on St. Cecilia's Day.' Valuable help was given by string players from Oxford and Leamington. This column does not usually concern itself with professional soloists, but a word is due to the excellent singing, both in the works and in groups of songs, of Miss Mabel Ritchie and Mr. John Andrews. The chief winning choirs were Hook Norton (Miss B. Dickins), Chipping Norton (Mr. Edgar Smith), Prestbury (Mr. F. H. Philpot), and Cherington (Mrs. Alan Dickins).

SWALEDALE TOURNAMENT OF SONG.—At Northallerton, March 28 and 29. At this Festival, which caters for a large rural district, good work was done by the schools. Church choirs made an entry above the average. Solo classes were small and poor, but some really first-rate chamber music performances were heard, and there was an excellent string orchestra from Richmond.

WINCHESTER.—This Festival of competition and performance, held on March 16-22, was a greater success than ever. Over sixty choirs competed against each other, and afterwards joined in groups to take their part in the fine series of evening concerts. The first of these was given by the children on the Saturday. At Monday's concert the chief event was a performance of 'Dido and Æneas' under Dr. Malcolm Sargent. On the Tuesday, Mr. Harold Samuel played Bach and Debussy, and choirs sang their test-pieces. At the next concert the local orchestra was assisted by London players in Brahms's second Symphony, under Mr. Leslie Heward, and choirs joined in 'The Revenge.' For the conclusion of the Festival Mr. Heward conducted the massed choirs in Parts 1 and 2 of the 'Christmas Oratorio.'

WORKSOP.—The North Notts Competitions, formerly of Retford, were held at Worksop for the second time on March 20-23. The greater part of the first day was passed in recitations and readings and Shakespearean scenes, all for juvenile competitors. This special feature of the Festival was popular, and eagerly supported. Children's choral singing was also a successful and important feature. In the adult choral classes some very creditable singing was given by the prize-winning choirs from Rampton, Retford, and Doncaster, and in general the Festival again proved its value as a local stimulant to musical activities.

YORK.—Some choral singing of a high standard was heard at the Yorkshire Choral Competitions, on March 24 and 31. The best performances were those of Greetland Vocal Union in Hegar's 'The Phantom Host' and Elgar's 'The Herald'; Bradford Philharmonic Society (ladies' voices) in Armstrong Gibbs's 'The Song of the Shadows' and Julius Harrison's 'Come away, death'; and Middlesbrough Cecilian Glee Society in Elgar's 'O wild west wind' and Stanford's 'The Blue Bird.' The public of York showed very little interest in the proceedings. Further competitions in connection with the Festival remain to be held in May.

---

The STRATFORD Festival, longer, more complete, and more populous than ever, was held in the middle of March, the most important occurrence being the announcement made by Mr. John Graham that he intends to retire from the honorary secretaryship after forty-two years of service. Other competitions in the London district were held at BECKENHAM, ENFIELD, HENDON, and, for the inner western boroughs, the GUILDHOUSE in Eccleston Square. An elaborate Festival was organized at FOLKESTONE by the Rotary Club. AMERSHAM held its second Festival successfully. At STAFFORD the County Musical Association again opened competitions to Women's Institute Choirs. The Educational Committee of the Stockport Co-operative Society held its annual Festival at STOCKPORT. EAST GRINSTEAD and WOODBRIDGE were among the smaller Festivals. At MORPETH, where the Wansbeck Festival was held as usual, five awards were won by Belsay Choral Union. The preliminary competitions of the Dorset Choral Association Festival were held at SWANAGE, POOLE, DORCHESTER, and WEYMOUTH.

SCOTLAND

AYRSHIRE (March 14-17). — Held at Kilmarnock. Principal awards: mixed-voice choirs, Kilmarnock Lyric; male-voice choirs, Renfrew; female-voice choirs, Kilwinning Musical; church choirs, Portland U.F. Church, Troon; school choirs, Ayr Academy.

CAMBUSLANG (February 11-25).—Held at Cambuslang. Chiefly evening sessions. Draws most of its competitors from Glasgow. Principal awards: mixed-voice choirs, Lanark Choral Society; male-voice choirs, Kirkintilloch; female-voice choirs, Caledonian House, Glasgow; church choirs, Sherwood U.F. Church, Paisley; junior choirs, Cowlairs Co-operative; Scots folk-dancing, Shields Road Public School, Glasgow, and West Coats H.G. School, Cambuslang; vocal solos—general, Mr. Alex. Hanna, Dumbarton; Scots, Mr. Horace Wilson, Glasgow; operatic, Miss Nellie Allan, Newmilns.

EAST OF SCOTLAND CO-OPERATIVE (March 24).—Held at Bathgate. Principal awards: mixed-voice choirs, St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh; junior choirs, St. Cuthbert's B, Edinburgh, and Bathgate.

MONKLANDS (March 15-24).—Held at Airdrie. Principal awards: mixed-voice choirs, Glasgow Police; male-voice choirs, Kirkintilloch; female-voice choirs, Caledonian House, Glasgow; school choirs, Drumpark Special School; Scots folk-dancing, Coatbridge Primary School; vocal solos—general, Mr. Broughton Shatford, Clydebank; Scots, Miss Gertrude Bayes, Clydebank; operatic, Miss Gertrude Bayes, Clydebank.

MOTHERWELL AND WISHAW.—Held at Motherwell. Principal awards: mixed-voice choirs, Wishaw and District; male-voice choirs, Dalziel Works, Motherwell; church choirs, Cambusnethan U.P. Church; school choirs, Newmains Public School; Scots folk-dancing, Linnville Dancers, Lanark, and Craigneuk Public School; vocal solos—general, Miss Mary O'Rourke, Newmains; Scots, Mr. H. W. Crichton, Coatbridge.

PERTHSHIRE (March 2-10).—Held at Perth. Ranks next to Glasgow among Scottish Festivals. Competitions were well up to standard both in quality of work and number of entries, but public attendances were less good than last year's. Principal awards: mixed-voice choirs, Auchterarder Institute; male-voice choirs, Clydebank, Glasgow; female-voice choirs, Philomel, Grangemouth; church choirs, Pitlochry Established; junior choirs, Stirling Arion; school choirs, Blackness Public School, Dundee; vocal solos—general, Miss Nellie Morris, Perth; Scots, Miss Mary Robertson, Pitlochry; pianoforte solos, Miss Margaret S. D. Lyell, Perth.

SCOTTISH CO-OPERATIVE (March 17, 24, and 31).—Held at Paisley. Principal awards: mixed-voice choirs, St. George's, Glasgow; male-voice choirs, St. George's, Glasgow; female-voice choirs, Fergusliie Mills, Paisley; junior choirs, Junior Choirs, St. George's.

STIRLINGSHIRE (March 24-29).—Held at Falkirk. Showed a marked improvement in number and quality of entries and in public interest. Principal awards: mixed-voice choirs, Falkirk Select; male-voice choirs, Carron Works, Falkirk; female-voice choirs, Grangemouth Select; church choirs, East Church, Stirling, Anderson U.F. Church, Kilsyth, and Ladywell U.F. Church, Bannockburn; junior choirs, Arion Junior, Stirling; school choirs, Grangemouth High School; Scots folk-dancing, Bonnybridge Co-operative Children's Circle; vocal solos—general, Mr. James Laing, Falkirk; Scots, Mr. H. M'Leod Wilson, Glasgow.

IRELAND

The COLERAINE Festival (March 27-30) is now twenty-one years old. Its influence has been wide and effective, although it has failed to win over the school authorities to a proper appreciation. However, the school singing that did occur won enthusiastic praise from the adjudicator. The general standard of the competitions was very satisfying.——In opening the LARNE Festival (March 19-23), the Earl of Antrim referred to the expansion of the Festival in the course of its three years' existence—from forty-six classes and a thousand three hundred competitors in 1926 to eighty-one classes and two thousand seven hundred competitors in 1928. Here the solo singing was the strongest feature in an elaborate scheme of competitions. A new set of competitions in verse-speaking was well supported, and brought out excellent results. The children's choral competitions were also very successful.——Verse-speaking took a prominent place in the PORTADOWN Festival (March 26-30). Here also solo work flourishes, both in numbers and in artistic quality, and choral competitions in general suffer from a lack of competitors.

Music in Scotland

BATHGATE.—Bathgate and District Choral Union (Mr. A. G. Peggie) performed Elgar's 'King Olaf,' an orchestra of local players, with some professional stiffening from Glasgow, assisting.

BLAIRGOWRIE.—Blairgowrie and Rattray Choral Society (Mr. E. F. Parker) showed something less than enterprise in choosing so innocuous a work as Gaul's 'Joan of Arc' for its annual concert.

EDINBURGH.—At the sixth Reid Orchestra Symphony concert (Prof. D. F. Tovey), the programme comprised Sibelius's Symphony No. 3, in C major, Mozart's E flat Horn Concerto (soloist, Mr. Walter Worsley), Beethoven's G major Pianoforte Concerto (soloist, Prof. Tovey; conductor, Dr. Mary Grierson), Mozart's 'Figaro' Overture, and Ravel's 'Mother Goose' Suite. At the seventh and last concert, Madame Adila Fachiri played the Brahms Violin Concerto and Spohr's 'Scena Cantante,' and the orchestra, under Prof. Tovey, played Dvorák's 'New World' Symphony, Schumann's 'Manfred' Overture, and an 'Old Netherland Suite' by Julius Roentgen.——At the eighteenth of Prof. Tovey's Sunday Evening concerts, Prof. Tovey and Dr. Mary Grierson gave a recital of works for two pianofortes and for pianoforte duet, by Brahms, Mozart, Schubert, Schumann, and Debussy. At the nineteenth concert, the Edinburgh Royal Choral Union (Mr. Greenhouse Allt) sang Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' Dr. Mary Grierson and Mr. Stewart M'Manus played Mozart's E flat Concerto for two pianofortes, Miss Gladys Clark and Miss Ruth Waddell played Brahms's Concerto for violin and 'cello, and Prof. Tovey directed the Reid Orchestra. At the twentieth and final concert, Madame Adila Fachiri and Prof. Tovey played Sonatas for violin and pianoforte, Mozart's E minor, Brahms's A major, and Beethoven's 'Kreutzer,' and Madame Fachiri played the Bach Chaconne.——Edinburgh Choral Union (Mr. Greenhouse Allt) concluded its season with a performance of 'Elijah.' The same work was given a few evenings later by Mr. Gavin Godfrey's Choir.——The programme of the Edinburgh Amateur Orchestral Society's third concert, conducted by Mr. Ralph T. Langdon, included a Symphony in E flat by Haydn, Beethoven's 'Prometheus' Overture, and Bach's 'Brandenburg' Concerto No. 3, in G major.——At the third meeting of the Edinburgh Bach Society, the Society's choir and orchestra performed, under Mr. Douglas Dickson, the Cantatas 'Bide with us' and 'Alles nur nach Gottes Willen,' some excerpts from other Church Cantatas, and a Palestrina Mass, 'Æterna Christi Munera.' Mr. Douglas Dickson lectured to the Scottish Ecclesiological Society on 'J. S. Bach and the Reformation.' Illustrations were sung by the Edinburgh Bach Society's choir.——The Scottish String Quartet concluded its season of three chamber concerts with a programme which included Borodin's Quartet No. 2, in D, J. B. McEwen's 'Biscay' Quartet, and Frank Bridge's 'Londonderry Air' quartet arrangement.——A concert performance, announced as the first in Scotland, of Purcell's 'King Arthur' was given by Mr. W. B. Moonie's choir.——The programme of the St. Andrew Amateur Orchestral Society's annual concert included Haydn's 'Surprise' Symphony, Beethoven's 'Prometheus' Overture, and Bizet's 'Carmen' Prelude. Mr. W. Watt Jupp conducted in the absence, through illness, of Mr. J. M. Begbie.——The programme of the forty-first annual concert of the Leith Amateur Orchestral Society (Mr. W. Gilchrist Cochrane) included Beethoven's Symphony No. 2, in D, and Mozart's 'Così fan Tutte' Overture.——Leith Choral Society (Mr. Christie Jupp) selected Coleridge-Taylor's 'Song of Hiawatha' for its eighth annual concert.

——The choir of St. John's Episcopal Church (Mr. Ralph T. Langdon) sang Bach's 'St. Matthew' Passion, dividing the performance of the work over four consecutive evenings. ——The programme of a recital by Mr. John Petrie Dunn, one of Edinburgh's leading pianists, covered a wide range of classical works, including Beethoven's E major Sonata, Op. 109.——Mr. Gavin Gordon Brown, a young baritone new to Edinburgh, gave an interesting recital. Miss Janet S. C. Grierson played pianoforte solos.——At a community singing concert organized by the Women's Rural Institutes, Eastern Division, and held in the Music Hall, Edinburgh, members from seven counties took part in a programme of folk-songs under the direction of Mr. Robert McLeod.

GLASGOW.—The Glasgow Bach Society showed enterprise and discrimination in inviting Sir Walford Davies north to conduct its performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion in Glasgow Cathedral. This was the ninth performance given in the Cathedral by the Society since the founding of the Glasgow Bach Choir twenty years ago. Sir Walford directed three rehearsals, and, with a responsive double choir of eighty voices, a double orchestra of forty players, and a boys' choir to augment the soprano line in the choral melodies, an impressive performance resulted. Of the soloists Mr. Tom Pickering, Aberystwyth, as the Narrator, calls for special mention. His work would have stood out as distinctive in any company. An audience of over a thousand entirely filled the nave of the Cathedral and overflowed into the choir.——At its annual 'March' concert of three nights, the Glasgow Orpheus Choir, under Mr. Hugh S. Roberton, sang with all its accustomed artistry, technical finish, and poetic insight, but we found the programme hardly so attractive as usual. Mr. Harold Craxton, the solo pianist, was much less effective than we have found him to be under more intimate conditions. ——The Glasgow branch of the British Music Society has but a slender following, and a delightful lecture-recital by Mr. Harold Craxton, entitled 'From Byrd to Arne,' was attended by the merest handful of people.——At the annual orchestral concert of the Glasgow Athenæum School of Music, the programme included Schubert's Symphony No. 7, in C, Rossini's 'Barber of Seville' Overture, and movements from Rachmaninov's second Pianoforte Concerto and the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. Mr. Horace Fellowes conducted.——At the L.M.S. Railway staff concert, three of the Company's choirs—the L.M.S. Glasgow Mixed-Voice Choir (Mr. Tom Simpson), St. Rollox Railway Workshops Choral Society (Mr. Norman Gordon), and the Railway Male-Voice Choir, Kilmarnock (Mr. Tom Simpson)—sang part-songs.——The Ingram Choir (Mr. William Nisbet), an eight-years-old industrial combination, gave a programme of part-songs and madrigals.——Clydebank Choral and Operatic Society (Mr. A. Broughton Shatford) sang Challoner's choral ode, 'A Song of the Sea,' and some part-songs.——The Scottish Song Society Ladies' Choir (Miss Mary Dixon) gave its annual concert of Scottish part-songs.——Glasgow Arion Choir, a new combination directed by Mr. William Robertson, formerly conductor of the William Morris Choir, gave a first concert of madrigals and part-songs.—— Wellington U.F. Church Choir (Mr. Fred Turner) got well out of the beaten track in choosing Walford Davies's 'Everyman' for its annual recital.——The fifty-year-old Glasgow Select Choir gave a concert of part-songs and madrigals under Mr. Thorpe Davie.——At the annual concert of the Glasgow Caledonian Strathspey and Reel Society, the Society's Orchestra, under Mr. T. Sinclair Rae, played a wide selection of marches, strathspeys, and reels. ——Mr. Alfred Graham gave a pianoforte recital.

JEDBURGH.—Jedburgh Choral Union (Mr. Alex. Dingwall) wound up its season with a performance of Hamish MacCunn's 'Bonnie Kilmeny.'

KELSO.—Kelso Choral Union (Mrs. J. F. Brown) showed considerable enterprise in selecting for performance Bach's 'Christmas Oratorio' (Parts 1 and 2) and Mendelssohn's 'Hymn of Praise.'

OBAN.—Oban Choral Society (Mr. James Cunningham) gave a concert of part-songs.

PAISLEY.—At the concluding concert of the Paisley Choral Union (Dr. William Rigby), Handel's 'Acis and Galatea' and Coleridge-Taylor's 'A Tale of Old Japan' were performed.

PERTH.—The Perth Madrigal Society (Mr. David T. Yacamini), hitherto associated chiefly with madrigal and part-song work, made a notable departure by giving a Bach concert in the City Hall, Perth, before a very large and appreciative audience, and repeating it two days later in the more fitting but acoustically less responsive environment of Dunblane Cathedral. The choral programme comprised three Church Cantatas, 'God so loved the world,' 'God's time is best,' and 'Sleepers, wake,' and the chorus, 'Death, I do not fear thee.' The vocal soloists, drawn from the membership of the choir, varied in effectiveness, but the singing of the choir was uniformly first-rate. A chamber orchestra from Glasgow, organized and finely led by Miss Bessie Spence, and drawn mainly from the orchestra of the Glasgow Bach Society, gave distinguished service, co-operating with the choir in the cantatas and playing also the Suite in D, No. 3, the fifth 'Brandenburg' Concerto in D, for flute, violin, pianoforte, and strings, and the second 'Brandenburg' Concerto in F, for trumpet, flute, oboe, violin, and strings (soloists, Mr. Philip Halstead, pianoforte; Miss Spence, violin; Mr. Alfred Picton, flute; M. Leon Dandoy, oboe; and Mr. James Ellis, trumpet). Altogether, a case of 'hats off to Perth.'

STIRLING.—Stirling Choral Society selected for its annual concert Handel's 'Samson,' an orchestra from Glasgow under Mr. Horace Fellowes assisting. Mr. H. G. Barrett conducted with grip, lucidity, and enthusiasm. Stirling Arion Choir (Mrs. Carruthers Greig) gave a programme of madrigals and part-songs at its second annual concert.

GENERAL.—The Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company made its annual Scottish tour. The most interesting productions were Wagner's 'Valkyrie,' Rossini's 'Barber of Seville,' and Verdi's 'Masked Ball.'

SEBASTIAN.

Music in Wales

CARDIFF.—On March 15, Mrs. Herbert Jones, secretary of the Welsh Folk-Song Society, gave an interesting lecture-recital on Welsh folk-songs. Her vocal illustrations were much appreciated.——On the same day Sir Walford Davies, addressing a Teachers' Conference, advocated the organization of a Schools Musical Festival. —— On March 17, Sir Thomas Beecham conducted the L.S.O. in a series of operatic selections, using the occasion for the purpose of propaganda in connection with the Imperial League of Opera.——Cardiff musicians are at the present time much concerned by a threatened loss to concert-giving, for the Empire Theatre is not likely to be available after the present season.——On March 31, Mr. Hubert Ware (violin) and Mr. Raymond Taylor (pianoforte) gave a sonata recital, which included Brahms's Sonata in A (Op. 100) and Elgar's Sonata in E minor (Op. 82).—— On Good Friday the Cardiff Musical Society gave a spirited performance of Verdi's 'Requiem' and Part 2 of 'The Messiah.' Mr. Warwick Braithwaite conducted.——By far the most interesting event of Easter week has been the initial concert given by the National Orchestra of Wales, the first part of which was conducted by Sir Henry Wood, when the programme included the Overture to 'Benvenuto Cellini' and Mozart's 'Haffner' Symphony. The second part of the concert, conducted by Mr. Maurice Braithwaite, included a number of Welsh folk-songs and Edward German's 'Welsh Rhapsody.' The concert took place in the City Hall. The Welsh National Orchestra has been formed as the result of co-operation between the B.B.C. with the Welsh National Council of Music, the National Museum of Wales, and the City Corporation of Cardiff. Free concerts will be given in the great hall of the National Museum during lunch-hour on certain days of the week, and a series of Symphony Concerts will be given in the City Hall, for which the charges will range from sixpence to three shillings and sixpence.

DINAS POWIS.—The Dinas Powis Choral Society gave what is reported to have been a fine performance of 'St. Paul' on March 28, conducted by Mr. Arthur Harris.

LLANELLY.—'The Hymn of Praise' and Rossini's 'Stabat Mater' were given on March 24, under the baton of Mr. D. Vernon Davies.——'The Hymn of Praise' was also given at Moriah on March 20.

NEWPORT.—On March 16, the Newport Choral Society, conducted by Mr. A. E. Sims, gave Parry's 'War and Peace.' The soloists were Miss Caroline Hatchard, Miss Dorothy d'Orsay, Mr. Parry Jones, and Mr. Thorpe Bates. As is often the case in these post-war days the male portion of the choir was not numerous enough to balance the higher voices. Purely orchestral items included Mendelssohn's 'Fingal's Cave' Overture and two of Grieg's Norwegian Dances.

SWANSEA.—At a meeting of the Swansea Chamber Music Society, on March 20, the Madrigal Society, under Miss Cameron, sang works by Morley, Weelkes, and Dowland, and Bach's Cantata 'Sing we the Birth.'

Music in Ireland

BELFAST.—The Philharmonic Society, conducted by Mr. E. Godfrey Brown, sang the Gloria, Credo, Sanctus, and other choruses from the B minor Mass, at Ulster Hall, on March 24, and the fine effect of the performances was worthy of the high reputation of the choir. The selected solo-parts were sung by Miss Margaret Balfour and Mr. Keith Falkner. The Suite in D was also played, the orchestra joined Mr. J. H. McBratney in Handel's tenth Organ Concerto, and the choir sang Holst's 148th Psalm.

DUBLIN.—Under the direction of Mr. Turner Huggard the Philharmonic Society sang with great effect in Stanford's 'Stabat Mater' and Hamilton Harty's 'The Mystic Trumpeter,' on March 31. The orchestra was conducted by Col. Fritz Brase in a 'Parsifal' selection and a Concerto Grosso of Handel's, in which Commandant Sauerzweig was oboe soloist.——A part of Bantock's 'Vanity of Vanities' was sung by the Culwick Choral Society on March 24, under the direction of Miss Culwick.

LONDONDERRY.—The concert edition of 'Carmen' was given by the Philharmonic Society, under Mr. A. J. Cunningham, on March 29. The solo parts were taken by four members of the Carl Rosa Company.

Musical Notes from Abroad

GERMANY

STRAVINSKY'S 'ŒDIPUS REX' AT THE BERLIN STAATSOPER

Musical circles at Berlin had looked forward with the greatest interest to the first German performance of Stravinsky's most recent work, his 'Œdipus Rex.' For one who (as was the case of the writer of these lines) had attended the Paris première last year, it was an agreeable surprise; for the Paris performance raised doubts as to whether it would be possible to realise Stravinsky's intention to produce 'Œdipus' on the musical stage not as an oratorio (as was done on that occasion) but as an opera-oratorio. How could this be carried through? The production had, of course, to be in keeping with the style. Now we know that Stravinsky, in 'Œdipus' more than in any other work of his last period, concentrated on a musical idiom borrowed from the past, though closely connected with his own rhythmical energy.

Otto Klemperer, when making up his mind to perform 'Œdipus Rex,' was fully conscious of the difficulties in the way of helping the spectator to realise the essence of an opera so far removed from what is usually meant by this term. Happily he could depend upon the skill of his collaborator, Ewald Duelberg, who, in producing an ordinary opera, may be hampered by his dogmatism, but in an unusual work like this finds an opportunity for carrying out his ideas. Klemperer, himself an anti-romantic, is the right conductor for a man like the later Stravinsky. Unfortunately for him the public has still a deeply rooted tendency towards the emotional. Strangely enough, the first public performances of 'Œdipus Rex' took place before a circle of spectators who had expected, and indeed were entitled to expect, ordinary opera. This proved fatal to the success of the work at Berlin. It was certainly the most interesting evening in the Staatsoper, though it failed to fill the house. The second public performance of 'Œdipus' would have taken place before empty seats, if the Kroll Oper had had to count on 'paying' spectators. Obviously, the unemotional, even in its most interesting form, drives the public out of the theatre. This behaviour of the average opera-goer may be unjust, but it is a natural consequence of his conservatism. All that suggests passion was avoided in the movements of the actors, who achieved a very good performance. The chorus, also with limited mask-like movements, was wonderful in accompanying the action. 'Mavra' and 'Petrouchka,' which completed the programme, were not able to change the fate of this Stravinsky performance, which on the whole, however, met with the approval of the press.

When, after a week, Klemperer devoted a whole concert to Schubert, the result was a comment on his 'Œdipus' performance, for he endeavoured to apply his 'non-espressivo' style to a task which demanded the reverse. With all respect to his musicianship, it cannot be denied that Schubert greatly suffered from the lack of warmth of which Klemperer seems to be so proud.

SCHÖNBERG'S DRAMA WITH MUSIC AT BRESLAU

The Breslau opera house was known to be little behind the times. Since Prof. Josef Turnau has been appointed intendant of this musical stage, it seems to have become far more enterprising. This may be partly due to the fact that Turnau called Dr. Herbert Graf from Vienna, a young man in the twenties, but full of initiative, with high gifts, musical as well as theatrical. Of this, proof was given by the first German performance of Schönberg's drama with music, 'Die glückliche Hand,' on March 24, which was honoured by the presence of the composer, who even undertook to give a lecture between the two performances of his opera which took place on the same evening. The bitter pill was somewhat sweetened by a so-called 'Ravel Ballet,' which was a mere pasticcio. Everybody knows that Schönberg by his very nature is unable to write for the musical stage, as the public understands and likes it. He is a monologist, and at the time of this composition he was rather a pessimist, on the ground of that romanticism which he has never abjured, as have so many others among his contemporaries. This monodrama (like the other called 'Erwartung') evolves in a very short time —about twenty minutes. But the play is so rich in events, so varied in scene and colour, that the attention of those who are willing to listen is held in the highest degree. The aphoristic musical language of this monodrama, compared with which that of Alban Berg's 'Wozzeck' is loquacious, is hardly interrupted by some verses of the chorus. Kapellmeister Fritz Cortolezis, vigorously supported by the stage management of Dr. Graf, conducted 'Die glückliche Hand,' which inevitably did not arouse the enthusiasm of the Breslau public.

FRANZ SCHREKER'S FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY, AT BERLIN

It is always painful to state that a living composer has survived his glory. This, however, seems to be the case of Franz Schreker, who, fifteen years ago, was greeted as the saviour of opera, and as the man who had overcome not only Richard Strauss, but Wagner himself. After having enjoyed an ever increasing reputation in the provinces, Schreker saw his various operas mounted at Berlin, where the first doubts concerning his importance were expressed. Since then he has had to content himself with provincial glory, and with the homage paid to him by the German bourgeoisie; neither at Berlin nor abroad have his operatic achievements met with similar enthusiasm. Nevertheless, he is a representative musical personality as director of the Berlin High School of Music, a position which enables him to influence the minds of young composers. It must, however, be said that he does not abuse it.

HARRIET COHEN AS BACH PLAYER

It is long since Harriet Cohen was last heard in a Berlin concert hall. Now she has returned to this town as a more mature artist, scoring considerable success. She played in the Berlin Beethovensaal with a chamber orchestra under the baton of Michael Taube. It will not be very easy to find a woman so fully informed with the Bach spirit. The clarity and purity of her style, and the surety of her technique, made a most favourable impression upon a public of connoisseurs. ADOLF WEISSMANN.

ITALY

THE PREMIÈRE OF 'DAFNI' AT THE OPERA REALE AT ROME

Giuseppe Mulè's new opera 'Dafni' is representative of the best type of modern operatic composition in Italy, and when produced last month at the new Royal Opera at Rome, it was favourably received by both critics and public.

Franco Lo Giudice sang the rôle of Dafni, and was fairly successful in a part that notwithstanding severe difficulties is quite agreeable. The part of Egle was sung by Sciacciati, and that of Sileno by the baritone Maugeri. The Venus of Bertana and the Cinisca of Gramegna were both efficient. Maestro Marinuzzi conducted, and with the composer shared the warmly expressed approval of the large audience.

AN EXPERIMENTAL THEATRE

Rome is trying to wrest the musical supremacy from Milan, and is showing in numerous directions the results of her efforts. The Experimental Theatre is already deservedly established in public favour. The idea is to present, say, four Acts of different operas in one evening, in order to enable as many young artists and students as possible to appear and take part in the rehearsals. These latter are under the direction of competent and experienced directors, and should go a long way in starting the younger generation in the right path, and so regenerating Italian lyric art.

Milan has already responded with an experimental theatre on a larger scale and under the most capable direction available, and to the time of writing has put on quite a large number of works. This example is one that England might well follow. Possibly it would provide a solution to the various problems of popularising opera, as well as giving opportunities to students and conductors.

SOME OF THE MONTH'S CONCERTS

It will seem strange that the first performance at Florence of Scarlatti's 'Stabat Mater' was as recent as last month. This work returns after two centuries of oblivion, and brings with it a type of beauty that is apparently new to the musical Italy of to-day. There are many such works that, however well known abroad, are seldom if ever performed here. The 'Stabat Mater' was directed by Franchetti, and the entire work was encored. At the same concert the conductor's symphony 'Giovanile' was given its first performance in this city for some twenty years.

At Rome, Renzo Bossi conducted a concert of his father's music. Marcus Enrico Bossi was a prominent composer of the late '90's onward, and also made a name in America, where most of his works were composed, and where he was well known as an organist.

At Milan, the double quintet Italiano, under the direction of Peracchio, gave a concert of music that gained nothing by the inclusion of an excerpt from Verdi's 'Otello.' More interesting was the C major Overture of Bach. This was followed by Malipiero's 'Stornelli e ballata,' a work of very considerable merit.

The Poltronieri Quartet's concert this month included Boccherini in B minor and Beethoven's Op. 59, No. 1. The evening's novelty was a first performance at Milan of Mezio Agostini's Sonata for violoncello and pianoforte, with the composer at the latter instrument. The 'cellist was Valisi, already popular here.

Interesting as a link with the past was the concert of the pianist, Alonso Cor de Las, who played a programme of music by his teacher, Anton Rubinstein. It is singular that Rubinstein should be so neglected by the virtuosi of to-day. This concert demonstrated conclusively that he was a wonderful composer of pianistic music.

San Remo this month saw the successful debut of Miss Inez Wilson, a daughter of the late Dr. Robert H. Wilson, Surgeon-Major of the Prince of Wales's Rifles. Miss Wilson has studied under the celebrated Madame Arkel at Milan for the last five years, and with the gift of a beautiful natural voice has developed an organ of superlative loveliness, controlled by an exceptional intelligence and technique. She is a graduate of McGill University, where she also studied music, and is in private life the wife of Mr. William H. Hirst, a well-known New York barrister.

AT LA SCALA

The last of the operas to be directed by Richard Strauss was 'Le Nozze di Figaro.' It was not too kindly received, and for this the blame is due largely to the inability of the artists selected to perform the music as it should be performed. They all appeared to be unable to discover the restraint that is yet perfectly free, with the result that the performance was stilted. The work of the orchestra was, on the contrary, of a high standard. The baritone, Stabile, was the most praiseworthy of the singers.

After the Strauss operas and 'Le Nozze' came the turn of Puccini with 'La Bohème'; Rosita Pampanini was the Mimì. She made several slips in the first Act, but redeemed herself honourably afterwards. The Rodolfo of Minghetti left something to be desired, and with the smaller parts none too well managed the general standard of the representation was unworthy of the Scala.

'La Tosca' was the next opera, and under Santini found somewhat more favour. Dalla Rizza sang the title-rôle, and Pertile was the Cavaradossi. Stabile was an effective though reserved Scarpia, and the minor parts were efficiently done. CHARLES D'IF.

HOLLAND

The usual performances of the Bach Passions, those according to St. Matthew and St. John, have this year maintained their high standards without creating any remarkable record. The 'St. Matthew' Passion takes the place here which is generally accorded to Handel's 'Messiah' in England, and the performances range from those on a complete scale and a high rank under Mengelberg, Storm, and other leading conductors to small church choir efforts. A very important and interesting revival this year has been the 'Passion' of the 15th-century Dutch composer, Jacob Obrecht, by the Amsterdam 'Schola Cantorum,' under Rupert Cuypers. The work is short, for a cappella chorus and in motet form, and is one of rare beauty of expression. Cuyper's interpretation raised some discussion as to the legitimacy of 'outlining' thematic and melodic points, but though one might differ from the conductor on certain details, there was no question that he had done a great service to the old Netherlands music and to present-day audiences by his revival of the music itself, as well as by the beauty of his interpretation in general.

Propaganda for British music still continues its steady course, and one of the most effective of the smaller efforts has been that of a lecture-recital by Evlyn Howard-Jones. His remarks, although not those of a practised lecturer, won favour with critics and a considerable public, and his playing of works by Farnaby, Bull, Purcell, Ireland, Delius, Dale, and Bax, gave great delight. The severest criticism which the music received was on purely pedantic grounds, nearly all the critics finding fault with the form of Ireland's Sonata, just as the previous week they had done with that of Arnold Bax when Harriet Cohen won golden opinions for her playing. Evert Cornelis, at Utrecht, recently conducted Bantock's 'Pierrot of the Minute,' which met with a real success. Several performances at Amsterdam of a translation of Shakespeare's 'The Tempest,' with Purcell's music, have aroused a great deal of interest in the latter. The performance of this music was due to the initiative of Mr. L. M. G. Arntzenius, one of the ablest of the younger critics, who also conducted.

Other items of interest in recent programmes are a pleasant 'Intermezzo pastorale' by Johan Wagenaar, the director of the Royal Conservatorium at The Hague, and Kódaly's 'Psalmus hungaricus,' which looks like being a regular feature wherever the necessary choral and orchestral resources are available. These were given by the Residentie Orchestra under Dr. van Anrooy, with an admirable 'scratch' choir in the Kódaly work. Mengelberg and Mahler are almost inseparable, and the performance of the first Symphony (D major) was a great delight. Further hearings of the 'Lied von das Erde,' however, only confirm my former unfavourable impression.

HUDDERSFIELD CHORAL SOCIETY

In the wider travels of some of Sir Henry Coward's great choruses Holland has, for one reason or another, been passed over, and it was not until the summer of 1927 that any definite idea of paying a visit here was mooted. The financial and social stability of the Huddersfield Choral Society, as well as its musical excellence, pointed to this being the most likely of the choirs Sir Henry conducts to make the venture, and after preliminary difficulties, overcome by the energy and enthusiasm of both parties, an invitation by the Society Netherland-England to give one concert at Amsterdam and one at The Hague was accepted. These concerts were given respectively on Tuesday and Wednesday in Easter week. The result justified the venture to the fullest extent, and it may safely be said that nothing had previously been done that has born such fruit in the musical understanding of the two nations. Holland is itself a country of choral singing of the finest character, and therefore the visit was in some sort a challenge. 'You who do so well yourselves,' it was said in effect though not in words, 'come and hear what we can do. We think we can do even better than you!' The one drawback was the date of the visit, but it was the only one on which the British amateurs could send a thoroughly representative team. Preparations for the festival in celebration of the forty years' existence of the Amsterdam Concertgebouw prevented the participation of the famous orchestra associated with that building, and also militated against the attraction of a large audience. In both cities, however, the number of people who attended the concerts was considerable, and the enthusiasm of both public and critics was agreeably surprising, for the Dutchman who is not critical is a rare exception.

Some of the things that attracted the most interested comment were, it must be said, small details of a peculiarly English character—e.g., the singing of W. H. Monk's 'Abide with me,' and other hymns, and the uniform white dresses of the women's section. The voices of the choir, particularly of the sopranos, won a degree of admiration that was scarcely short of wonder (the 'inner discipline' of the choir—some critics considered that the discipline in matters of standing and sitting, &c., left something to be desired—was a cause of hearty congratulation), and the balance of the parts, the vigour and the expression of the choral singing, were all regarded as exemplary. In each of these, it was said, the local choirs had something to learn from their guests. 'What a marvel of tone and of discipline,' was the comment of one of the ablest Dutch conductors.

The choice of the programmes, as well as the works themselves, came in for adverse criticism. At Amsterdam Elgar's 'Dream of Gerontius' and a large selection from Handel's 'Israel in Egypt,' the former entirely unknown here and the latter not familiar, made up the programme. At The Hague a demand for something more 'modern' brought the inclusion of Holst's 'The Hymn of Jesus,' with a more varied Handel selection in addition to the Elgar work. The 'Dream' was generally regarded as dating somewhat, and as having a certain monotony. That it is a work of high talent, and containing much that is very expressive and beautiful, was generally admitted. Holst's work was welcomed as one of great power and individuality, not altogether without traces of influence, but a sincere expression of a strong personality. A word of high praise should be given here to the members of the Residentie Orchestra who accompanied the singers both at Amsterdam and The Hague. Sir Henry had been at The Hague since Good Friday, and had had several rehearsals at which it was evident that the players were individually and as a body determined to get a complete understanding of their conductor and the works they had to play. The soloists, Miss Muriel Brunskill, Messrs. Walter Widdop and Horace Stevens, also had very considerable success.

Of the magnificent social reception, of the sight-seeing and gatherings for supper, luncheon, dinner, &c., this is not the place to make more than passing reference. The British Minister and Lady Granville, who since their arrival here not quite two years ago have by their patronage done much for our music, held a reception of the Committees of the two Societies and a number of other guests, and Netherland-England organized a perfect orgy of varied entertainments. At these there was again music, songs by Miss Brunskill, hymns, and part-songs. For the occasion a complimentary verse to the Dutch people had been set to the Dutch national melody, 'Wien Neerlands bloed,' and came into service frequently. It puzzled some of the Dutchmen to hear their own song to words they could scarcely comprehend, until the idea that it was a supplement to their national expression was realised by reading the words:

'Though British blood be in our veins,
We'll not forget to sing
In praise of Holland's gracious Queen
As well as England's King,
To Wilhelmina and her folk
We proffer friendship's hand,
And thus together we can sing
Voor Vorst en Vaderland,
Voor Vaderland en Vorst,' this last line being the refrain of the original Dutch song. By these social means almost as much as by the actual concerts the cause of British music in this corner of Europe has received a distinct impetus. From the Dutch side the suggestion that their own choirs should study Holst's 'Hymn' and other English works has already ensued.

HERBERT ANTCLIFFE.

[Vienna Notes arrived too late for insertion.—EDITOR.]

Obituary

LESLIE STUART (Thomas Augustine Barrett), at Richmond, Surrey, on March 27. He was born at Southport, on March 15, 1866, and when only fifteen was appointed organist at the Roman Catholic Cathedral at Salford, a post he retained for seven years. He then spent a further seven years in a similar appointment at the Church of the Holy Name, Manchester. His earliest successes as a composer were won with songs written for Foli, 'The Bandolero' making a great hit. In 1896 he settled in London, and produced a series of highly successful comic operas—'Floradora,' 'The School Girl,' 'The Belle of Mayfair,' &c. Of his many popular songs the best was perhaps 'The Soldiers of the Queen.' A well-trained musician, he was able to give his music the touch of quality that enabled it to live far beyond the brief span enjoyed by the average popular ditty. This was proved by the astonishing success of a recent revival, by himself and his daughter (Miss Mary Leslie-Stuart) of songs written by him thirty years ago.

MADAME MEDORA HENSON (Mrs. Waddington Cooke), in London, April 14, aged sixty-seven. The daughter of Dr. Henson, an American divine, she came to England in her youth. She was a pupil of Henschel and Randegger, and studied also in Italy, France, and Germany. Her debut here was made in Sullivan's 'Ivanhoe,' at the English Opera House (now the Palace Theatre). The soprano part in 'Caractacus' was first sung by her, at Leeds, Gloucester, and Sheffield Festivals. In 1898 she toured England with Grieg, singing his songs. She had latterly been a successful teacher at the Guildhall School of Music and the Royal College of Music.

BURNHAM HORNER. He was born in 1848, and for a time served on the staff of the Morning Post as music critic. He had acted also as assistant-organist at the Chapel Royal, Hampton Court.

HARRY SANDIFORD TURNER, at Glasgow. (Blind) organist of Queen's Park West U.F. Church, Glasgow, and for thirty-six years on the teaching staff of the Athenæum School of Music, Glasgow. He composed some attractive organ music.

ERRATA.—Owing to the disappearance of a proof, our Obituary column last month contained several slips. In the note on Sir Herbert Brewer it was stated that 'in 1865 he went to Bristol Cathedral.' He was elected to the Bristol Cathedral post, but never actually took up the appointment; and the date was 1885. The third error was in the note concerning the late Henry Mills, the Secretary of the Sunday League; his name was given as Miller.

Miscellaneous

The City of Capetown Municipal Orchestra held its Fourteenth Anniversary Festival on February 28-March 3. Five concerts were given, the chief items in excellent programmes being a 'Brandenburg' Concerto, Elgar's first Symphony, Delius's 'Dance Rhapsody,' 'Till Eulenspiegel,' Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto (Mr. Ellie Marx), and W. H. Bell's 'A South African Symphony' (first performance). A chamber concert was devoted to Schubert, Dibdin's opera 'The Quaker' was revived, and the Municipal Choral Society gave a concert version of Gounod's 'Faust.' The conductor-in-chief was Mr. William J. Pickerill, Mr. Walter Swanson and Mr. Alban Hamer directing 'The Quaker' and 'Faust' respectively.

Any of our readers who are subscribers to the British Home and Hospital for Incurables are asked to give their votes on behalf of Mr. Joseph Davies, who is suffering from acute rheumatoid arthritis (largely as a result of war service) and is unable to work. He was lately in the employ of Messrs. Chappell, and Mr. E. Goodman, Director of that firm, will be grateful to receive votes at 50, New Bond Street, W.1; or they may be sent direct to the Secretary of the Home.

Our Milan correspondent, M. Charles d'If, recently gave in that city a lecture-recital on Purcell. According to a press report the event had been 'eagerly awaited,' and was attended by 'a large and cultured audience.' M. d'If was assisted by the American pianist, Carl Kammerer, who played a group of keyboard pieces and also accompanied the lecturer's performance of some songs. 'After insistent recalls, the two artists had to concede several encores, and at the close received an ovation.'

The National Temperance Choral Union announces a Fête at the Crystal Palace on July 7, in celebration of its Diamond Jubilee. There will be vocal solo and choral competitions, organ recitals, a pageant and concert by three thousand junior performers, and another concert by a large adult force, conducted by Mr. W. G. Hedges, of Eastleigh. Full particulars from the hon. secretary, Mr. W. T. Sayers, 20, Knowsley Road, Cosham, Portsmouth.

Purcell's 'King Arthur' will be performed at Chelsea Wesleyan Church School, King's Road (next door to Town Hall), on May 17, at 8, by the augmented choir and orchestra of the Church. The programme will include also madrigals and part-songs, and Bach's B minor Suite for flute and strings. Mr. Arnold Foster will conduct. Tickets (2s. 4d. and 1s. 2d.) are to be had at the door.

DEGREES IN MUSIC

Oxford Preliminary Arts, and Durham Matriculation, Also B.A. and B.Sc.

EXPERT TUITION BY CORRESPONDENCE.

For terms, testimonials, &c., address,
Mr. J. CHARLESTON, B.A.,
14, ELSHAM ROAD, KENSINGTON, W.14.

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Schubert's Style. II.—Pianoforte and Voice. By Richard Capell | 401 |
| Rimsky-Korsakov. By Leonid Sabaneev | 403 |
| Ad Libitum. By 'Feste' | 405 |
| 'Boris Godunov' as Moussorgsky Wrote it. II.—The Initial Version. By M.-D. Calvocoressi | 408 |
| The Editing of Old Keyboard Music | 412 |
| The Future of Music according to Honegger. By F. Bonavia | 413 |
| The School of English Church Music | 414 |
| Teachers' Department: | |
| The Self-Expression of Children in Music. I.—By R. H. Hull | 415 |
| A Few Thoughts on Pianoforte Playing. By I. Philipp | 416 |
| Points from Lectures | 417 |
| The Use and Importance of Improvisation at the Keyboard. By H. A. B. Crawford | 418 |
| Answers to Correspondents | 419 |
| Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi | 421 |
| Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus' | 421 |
| Player-Piano Notes | 424 |
| Occasional Notes | 424 |
| New Music | 426 |
| The Musicians' Bookshelf | 431 |
| Church and Organ Music | 438 |
| Royal College of Organists | 438 |
| Letters to the Editor | 439 |
| The Amateurs' Exchange | 446 |
| Sharps and Flats | 446 |
| Royal Academy of Music | 446 |
| Union of Graduates in Music Incorporated | 447 |
| A New Choral Work | 447 |
| Board of Trade Inquiry on Gramophone Royalties | 447 |
| London Concerts | 449 |
| Music in the Provinces | 453 |
| The Bournemouth Festival | 455 |
| Competition Festival Record | 456 |
| Music in Scotland | 458 |
| Music in Wales | 459 |
| Music in Ireland | 460 |
| Musical Notes from Abroad | 460 |
| Obituary | 462 |
| Miscellaneous | 463 |

MUSIC.

| | |
|---|---|
| 'Rose May.' Four-part Song for Mixed Voices. Arranged by Edgar L. Bainton | 433 |

TWO EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS are given with this number:
1. 'In Derry Vale' ('The Londonderry Air'), with Descant. Arranged by Geoffrey Shaw.
2. 'There is a lady sweet and kind.' Four-part Song. By Eric H. Thiman.

DURING THE LAST MONTH.
Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED.

BAINTON, EDGAR L.—"Rosy May." Scottish Folk-Tune. Arranged as a Four-part Song for Mixed Voices. (No. 1023, The Musical Times.) 3d.

BANKS, REV. C. PENDOCK.—The Holy Eucharist. Set to music in the key of C. 8d.

BARNE, KITTY.—"Madge." A camp-fire play, introducing Folk-songs, sung and acted. 1s.

BOYCE, ETHEL.—"The Wooded Hill." Four Two-part Songs:
1. "The Early Spring." (No. 239, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 4d.
2. "Summer Heat." (No. 240, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 3d.
3. "Autumn Time." (No. 241, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 4d.
4. "The Holly." (No. 242, Novello's Two-part Songs.) 4d.

BREWER, A. HERBERT.—"God within." Motet for Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ. Composed for the 274th Festival of the Sons of the Clergy. 1s.

FANING, EATON.—"The Miller's Wooing." (A Choral Ballad.) Arranged as a Trio for S.S.A. by John Pointer. (No. 523, Novello's Trios, &c., for Female Voices.) 6d.

MANN, FREDERIC G.—"O Great First Cause." Hymn-Anthem for those in peril in the air. 2d.

PARRY, C. H. H.—An English Suite for String Orchestra. Arrangement for Pianoforte Duet by Emily Daymond. 5s.

—— "Forward through the glimmering darkness." Chorus from "War and Peace." (No. 858, Novello's Octavo Choruses.) 6d.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

RIVAS, COUNTESS MARY DE.—"The King of Kings." Hymn. 3d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 431, contains the following music in both notations. "The Campbells are comin'," arranged with Descant by GEOFFREY SHAW. "The Ferry." Two-part Song by ERIC H. THIMAN. 2d.

SCHOOL SONGS.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

| | | A. | B. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Book 307. | National Songs with Descants. (Set 4.) Arranged by GEOFFREY SHAW. | 8d. | — |
| No. 1488. | "The Apple Elf." (Unison Song.) CECIL SHARMAN | 2d. | — |
| 1489. | "The nice, neat pig." (Unison Song.) CECIL SHARMAN | 2d. | — |
| 1490. | "A Pillar-Box Song." (Unison Song.) CECIL SHARMAN | 2d. | — |
| 1491. | "Annie Laurie." (Arranged with Descant.) GEOFFREY SHAW | 2d. | — |

SELLARS, BASIL.—"Lord, grant me light." (No. 83, Novello's Hymns and Tunes for Sunday School Festivals.) 1½d.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| No. 2559. | Communion Service in G. H. A. CHAMBERS ... ... ... ... | 6d. |
| 2560. | "The Islet." Four-part Song. PERCY E. FLETCHER ... ... | 2d. |
| 2561. | "The strife is o'er." Easter Anthem. ERIC H. THIMAN... ... ... | 3d. |
| 2562. | "O Christ, the Heavens' Eternal King." Easter Anthem. ERIC H. THIMAN ... ... ... ... | 3d. |

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK.

FREED, ISADORE.—"Darest thou now, O soul." Part-Song for Women's Voices, with Mezzo-Soprano Solo. 15 cents (8d.).

GOLDSWORTHY, W. A.—A Sketch. For Organ.

JAMES, PHILIP.—"The Guardian Roses." Song for High Voice. 50 cents (2s.).

LAUBIN, E. F.—"He is risen." Sacred Song for High Voice. 50 cents (2s.).

LUTKIN, P. C.—"The Lord is my Shepherd." Two-part Chorus. 20 cents (10d.).

MARTIN, R. W.—Canzonetta. For Organ.

NEARING, HOMER.—"God be merciful to me." Sacred Song for High Voice. 50 cents (2s.).

PEELE, DUDLEY.—"I heard the sound of harpers." Concert Piece for Organ.

WENDT, THEOPHIL.—"The Coming of Summer." Part-Song for S.S.A. 15 cents (8d.).

AFTER 30 YEARS' SERVICE

THE "KIRBY" ORGAN BLOWERS

ARE STILL IN CONSTANT USE.

OVER 2,000 SUPPLIED.
ELECTRIC AND HYDRAULIC DRIVEN.
COMPLETE PLANTS FROM £30.
ESTIMATES AND ADVICE FREE.

J. KIRBY, Specialist,

Phone: Central 1741. NORTHUMBERLAND PLACE,
Estab. 1894. NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

MADAME ALBA, Professor of Singing (Italian Bel Canto). Specialist—Breath Control. Cramer's Studios, 139, New Bond Street, W.1. Please note only address.

FREDERICK C. HAGGIS, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L., specialises in VOICE-TRAINING and SINGING. Pupils are offered, in addition to private tuition, exceptional advantages in Class-Singing, for the further study of Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, and Interpretation. Address: 14, Hanover St., W.1.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER (Organist, Tewkesbury Abbey) is open to exchange duties during two or three Sundays in August. Seaside or abroad preferred. Hazeldene, Tewkesbury.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for the Mint Wesleyan Church, Exeter. 3-manual organ, pneumatic action. Apply, stating qualifications, and salary required, to A. Bradbeer, 1, West Avenue, Exeter.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER WANTED, St. Mary, Hornsey Rise. Musical services, congregational singing. Evangelical ministry; communicant desired. Salary, £50 per annum. Apply, enclosing testimonials, Vicar, 73, Sunnyside Road, N.19.

ACCOMPANIST (lady), EXPERIENCED. Good Sight-Reader. Requires engagements, with teachers, vocalists, or instrumentalists. F. L. Hinton, 30, Addiscombe Avenue, Croydon.

TENOR REQUIRED for The Annunciation, Bryanston Street, W. Good reader. £20. Rev. A. Ebdon, 1, Denning Road, Hampstead, N.W.3.

TENOR REQUIRED for St. Peter's, Vere Street, W.1. One accustomed to Church services. Address, "Organist," 98, Ardgowan Road, S.E.6.

SECOND TENOR WANTED for S. Peter's, Bayswater. Salary, £15 p.a. Please write, Leonard Butler, 28, St. Stephen's Avenue, Ealing, W.13.

SINGING PROFESSOR wishes to DISPOSE of furnished house and well-established practice. Good garden. London. Illness sole cause. "L. O. G.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

LADY, A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., ORGANIST, desires return to England. Six years at present post. Box 36, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

NO SINGER need SUFFER with huskiness or any form of throat trouble. Amateurs or professionals should, by appointment, consult Mr. Bladon Hackett, Voice Specialist, Grotrian Hall, Wigmore Street, W.1. Overwhelming evidence regarding his methods is available.

AS NEW. HALF COST. TWO-MANUAL Reed Organ. English built. R.C.O. pedals; Church organ console. Seen London. Write, "J. H.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

REED ORGAN. EXCELLENT CONDITION. 13 stops, knees-well, stool. £17, or offer. Hollander, 150, Coningham Road, W.12.

SEVENTEEN GUINEAS OFFERED for Anniversary Tunes. Particulars from JAMES BROADBENT & SON, Ltd., Boston Spa, Yorks, on receipt of stamped envelope. Also good full-scale Anthems for Harvest and Advent desired.

CLEAR COPIES of MUSIC, MSS. or Typescript. Prompt service, multiple apparatus. Inquiries invited, estimates given. Percy Rowe, 28, The Causeway, Teddington.

JUST PUBLISHED

IN TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION.

A SONG OF DESTINY

(SCHICKSALSLIED)

COMPOSED BY

JOHANNES BRAHMS.

OP. 54.

PRICE ONE SHILLING

Staff Notation Edition, price 1s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

ANTHEMS FOR ASCENSIONTIDE

*Above all praise and all majesty ... ... Mendelssohn 2d.
Achieved is the glorious work ... ... ... Haydn 1½d.
*Achieved is the glorious work (2nd Chorus) ... Haydn 2d.
*All glory to the Lamb ... ... ... ... ... Spohr 2d.
Awake up, my glory ... ... ... ... ... M. Wise 4d.
*Christ became obedient unto death ... ... J. F. Bridge 3d.
Christ is not entered into the Holy Places ... ... E. Faning 2d.
Come, ye children ... ... ... ... ... H. J. King 4d.
For it became Him ... ... ... ... ... O. King 2d.
*God goeth up with shouting (1st Chorus) ... ... ... Each 6d.
God is gone up ... ... ... *Croft, 6d. ; W. B. Gilbert 3d.
*God, my King ... ... ... ... ... ... Bach 3d.
*Grant, we beseech Thee ... A. R. Gaul, 4d. ; H. Lahee 3d.
*Hallelujah, unto God's Almighty Son ... ... Beethoven 4d.
*How excellent Thy Name, O Lord ... ... ... Handel 2d.
*If ye then be risen with Christ ... ... ... I. Atkins 6d.
If ye then be risen ... *F. O. Carr and J. Naylor, ea. 4d.
If ye then be risen (Two parts) F.W.Wadeley,2d.; M. B. Foster 4d.
In My Father's house ...H. E. Button and J. M. Crament, ea. 4d.
In that day ... ... ... ... ... ... G. Elvey 6d.
In that day (Open ye the gates) ... ... F. C. Maker 4d.
*It shall come to pass ... ... ... ... B. Tours 3d.
I will not leave you comfortless ... ... ... W. Byrd 4d.
*King all-glorious ... ... ... ... ... ... J. Barnby 8d.
King all-glorious (with Chorus arr. for four voices) J. Barnby 6d.
*Leave us not, neither forsake us ... ... ... J. Stainer 3d.
Let not your heart ... E. Faning and G. Gardner, each 4d.
Let not your heart be troubled (Double Chorus unac.) M.B.Foster 4d.
*Let not your heart (Four-part) ... ... M. B. Foster 4d.
*Let their celestial concerts all unite ... ... ... Handel 2d.
*Lift up your heads ... Handel and J. L. Hopkins, each 2d.
*Lift up your heads ... ... ... S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.
Lift up your heads ... ... ... ... ... W. Turner 3d.
*Look, ye saints ... ... ... ... ... M. B. Foster 4d.
Now at Thy feet Creation lies (Chorale) ... ... ... Bach 2d.
O all ye people, clap your hands ... ... ... H. Purcell 4d.
O clap your hands ... ... M. Greene, 6d. ; *J. Stainer 8d.
O clap your hands ...J. L. Hopkins, 4d. ; T. T. Trimnell 4d.
*O God, the King of Glory ... ... ... ... H. Smart 6d.
*O God, when Thou appearest ... ... ... ... Mozart 4d.
*O how amiable ... ... ... ... ... J. Barnby 4d.
O Lord our Governour... ... Marcello, 3d. ; *H. Gadsby 4d.
*O risen Lord ... ... ... ... ... J. Barnby 3d.
*Open to me the gates ... ... ... ... F. Adlam 6d.
*Rejoice in the Lord ... ... ... ... J. B. Calkin 2d.
*Sing unto God ... ... ... ... ... F. Bevan 4d.
*Ten thousand times ten thousand ... ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
The earth is the Lord's ... ... ... ... T. T. Trimnell 6d.
*The Lord ascendeth up on high. Hymn (arr. by H. G. Ley) J. Schicht 2d.
*The Lord is exalted ... ... ... ... ... J. E. West 3d.
The Lord is King H. Gadsby, 8d. ; H. J. King, 6d. ; W. King 3d.
Thou art a priest for ever ... ... ... ... S. Wesley 4d
*Unfold, ye portals ... ... ... ... ... Ch. Gounod 4d.
*Where Thou reignest ... ... ... ... ... Schubert 4d.
Who is this so weak and helpless ... ... ... Rayner 3d.

ANTHEMS FOR WHITSUNTIDE

And all the people saw ... ... ... ... ... J. Stainer 8d.
*And suddenly there came ... ... ... H. J. Wood 4d.
And when the day of Pentecost ... ... C. W. Smith 4d.
*As pants the hart... ... ... ... ... Spohr 3d.
*As the hart pants... ... ... ... ... Mendelssohn 2d.
Behold, I send the promise ... ... ... J. V. Roberts 6d.
*Come, Holy Ghost ... ... ... ... ... Attwood 3d.
Ditto (Three-part, S.S.A.) ... ... Attwood 4d.
Come, Holy Ghost ... ... Elvey and J. L. Hatton, each 6d.
Ditto ... ... ... ... Tallis, 3d. ; E. H. Thiman 4d.
Come, Holy Ghost ... C. L. Williams and *Palestrina, each 3d.
Come, Thou Holy Spirit ... ... ... J. F. Barnett 4d.
Do not I fill heaven and earth... ... ... H. Blair 4d.
*Eye hath not seen (Two-part or Four Voices) M. B. Foster, ea. 4d.
Fear thou not ... ... ... ... ... ... J. Booth 2d.
Give thanks unto God ... ... ... ... ... Spohr 6d.
Glorious and powerful God ... ... ... ... O. Gibbons 4d.
*God came from Teman... ... ... ... ... C. Steggall 6d.
*God is a Spirit (Two-part or Four Voices) ...Bennett, ea. 2d.
Ditto (Male Voice, A.T.B.B.) ... ... Bennett 3d.
Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost ... ... ... ... H. Blair 4d.
*Great is the Lord... ... ... ... ... W. Hayes 6d.
*Grieve not the Holy Spirit ... ... ... ... J. Stainer 4d.
Hail ! breath of life ... ... ... ... ... T. Adams 4d.
Happy is the man ... ... ... ... ... E. Prout 1s.
He that dwelleth in the secret place... ... ... ... J. Booth 6d.
*Holy Spirit, come, O come (Ad Spiritum Sanctum) G.C. Martin 3d.
I was in the spirit ... ... ... ... ... ... Blow 8d.
*I will magn'fy Thee ... ... Bunnett, 4d. ; J. H. Parry 4d.
*I will not leave you comfortless ... ... ... B. Steane 3d.
*I will pray the Father ... ... ... ... G. W. Torrance 3d.
If I go not away... ... A. J. Caldicott, 4d. ; *T. Adams 3d.
If ye love Me ... Bunnett, 4d. ; B. Steane, 3d. ; C. S. Heap 3d.
*If ye love Me ...W. H. Monk, Tallis, and R. P. Stewart, each 3d.
*If ye love Me H. W. Wareing and W. J. Westbrook, each 4d.
*In divers tongues ... ... ... ... ... Palestrina 3d.

ANTHEMS FOR TRINITYTIDE

*Almighty and everlasting God ... ... ... Gibbons 3d.
Almighty God, Who hast promised ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
*Angel Spirits, ever blessed ... ... ... Tchaikovsky 3d.
Ascribe unto the Lord ... ... ... ... S. S. Wesley 6d.
Behold, God is great ... ... ... ... E. W. Naylor 6d.
*Beloved, if God so loved us ... ... ... J. Barnby 2d.
Beloved, let us love one another ... ... ... G. F. Cobb 2d.
Be ye all of one mind ... ... ... ... A. E. Godfrey 4d.
*Blessed Angel Spirits ... ... ... ... Tschaikowsky 3d.
*Blessed is the man ... ... ... ... ... J. Goss 6d.
Blessing and glory ... ... ... ... ...Boyce 3d.
*Blessing, glory ... ... ... ... ... ... Bach 8d.
Come, ye children ... ... ... ... ... J. Booth 4d.
*God came from Teman ... ... ... ... C. Steggall 6d.
*God so loved the world ... ... ... ... M. Kingston 2d.
Grant, O Lord ... ... ... ... ... ... Mozart 3d.
Grant to us, Lord ... ... ... ... ... H. E. Button 1½d.
*Hail, gladdening Light ... J. T. Field, 3d. ; G. C. Martin 6d.
*Holy, holy, holy ... ... ... ... ... Crotch 4d.
Holy, Lord God Almighty ... ... ... ... T. Bateson 6d.
*How goodly are Thy tents ... ... ... ... F. Ouseley 3d.
*How lovely are Thy dwellings ... ... ... Spohr 3d.
*Hymn to the Trinity (Nos. 1 and 3) ... Tchaikovsky, each 3d.
I am Alpha and Omega Ch. Gounod and J. V. Roberts, each 4d.
*I am Alpha and Omega... ... ... ... ... J. Stainer 3d.
I beheld, and lo ! ... ... ... ... ... ... Blow 8d.
I know that the Lord is great ... ... ... F. Ouseley 3d.
I saw the Lord ... ... ... *C. Harris, 4d. ; *J. Stainer 8d.
I will magnify ... ... ... ... ... J. Shaw 4d.
I will sing of Thy power ... *A. Sullivan, 3d ; Greene 6d.
I will sing unto the Lord ... ... ...H. Wareing 4d.
*In humble faith ... ... ... ... ... G. Garrett 3d.
*In Jewry is God known ... ... ... J. Clarke-Whitfeld 3d.
In sweet consent ... ... ... ... E. H. Thorne 4d.

 Anthems marked thus () may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d. to 3d. each.*

LONDON : NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

COMPOSITIONS BY FRANZ SCHUBERT.

CANTATAS, MASSES, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Song of Miriam, The (Sol-fa, 8d.; Sol-fa, Welsh words, 8d.) ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Lazarus (Selection only) ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| Mass in E flat ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| do. A flat ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| do. F (Sol-fa, 1s.) ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| do. B flat ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| do. C ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| do. G ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |

SERVICES.

| | | | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Communion Service in | A flat | ... ... ... | | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | B flat ... ... ... | | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | C ... ... ... | | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | E flat ... ... ... | | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | F ... ... ... | | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | G ... ... ... | | 3 | 0 |

ANTHEMS.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Christ has risen (Sol-fa, 2d.) ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| Good it is to thank the Almighty ... ... ... | 0 | 8 |
| Great is Jehovah the Lord (Solo Tenor and T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 3d.) ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| Great is Jehovah the Lord (with Chorus for S.A.T.B.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| Lord, in thankful love adoring ... ... ... | 0 | 2 |
| The Lord is my Shepherd. S.S.A.A. (Sol-fa, 2d.) ... | 0 | 6 |
| do. do. do. S.A.T.B. (Sol-fa, 2d.) ... | 0 | 6 |
| Where Thou reignest (Sol-fa, 2d.) ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |

PIANOFORTE SOLOS.

PIANOFORTE ALBUMS.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 47. | Four Impromptus (Op. 90) ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 48. | do. do. (Op. 142) ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 49. | Moments Musicals, Adagio and Rondo ... | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 50. | Ten Variations, &c. ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 51. | Adagio, Allegretto, &c. ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 52. | Five Klavierstücke and Two Scherzi ... | 1 | 6 |

ORGAN ARRANGEMENTS

For particulars see NOVELLO'S CATALOGUE.

PART-SONGS, ETC.

MIXED VOICES.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Dance we so gaily ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| Forth to the Meadows ("Rosamunde") (Sol-fa, 2d.) ... | 0 | 4 |
| God in the Thunderstorm (Sol-fa, 2d.) ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| Hail to the Chief (Boat Song) (arranged) ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| How merry is life ("Rosamunde") (Sol-fa, 2d.) ... | 0 | 3 |
| Hymn to the Eternal ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| To Sylvia. Arranged by John E. West (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Welcome Spring (Op. 33). A Suite of Vocal Dances: | | |
| 1. Welcome Spring2. How sweet to wander ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| 3. Come, O come, dearest4. As the watcher longs5. I'm in no hurry to marry ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| 6. When gallant lovers7. An end will I bring to doubt ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| 8. Her true love she greeteth9. As dew-drops at morn10. Hark! silv'ry bells chiming ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| 11. Tender music all inviting ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |

MALE VOICES.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Far beyond all mortal ken (Chorus of Spirits, from "Rosamunde"). T.T.B.B. (Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... | 0 | 2 |
| Gondolier's serenade. T.T.B.B. (Sol-fa, 2d.) ... | 0 | 6 |
| Hail to the Chief (Boat Song). (T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Night is cloudless and serene, The. (T. solo, T.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 8 |
| Song of the spirits over the waters. (Double chorus, T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 8d.) ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Spectres' Dance, The. T.T.B.B. ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |

FEMALE VOICES.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Five Choruses ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Or singly:— | | |
| Coronach (Sol-fa, 2d.) ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| Glory to the Lord Almighty ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| God in Nature. (A. Solo.) (S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. (S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Serenade. (A. Solo and Chorus. S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 3d.) ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 8 |
| Forth to the Meadows ("Rosamunde") (arranged for Two parts, with three-part Semi-Chorus) (Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| To Sylvia (arranged for S.S., or C.). Staff and Sol-fa combined ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 2 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

COMPOSITIONS BY CHARLES VILLIERS STANFORD.

ORATORIO, CANTATAS, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| BATTLE OF THE BALTIC, THE. (Op. 41.) Ballad for Chorus and Orchestra. Words by T. Campbell | 2 | 6 |
| String Parts | 6 | 9 |
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| Book of Words (per 100) | 9 | 6 |
| CARMEN SÆCULARE. (Op. 26.) An Ode. Words by Tennyson | 2 | 6 |
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| EAST TO WEST. (Op. 52.) Words by A. C. Swinburne. (For Chorus and Orchestra) | 2 | 6 |
| String Parts | 6 | 0 |
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| EDEN. (Op. 40.) A Dramatic Oratorio in Three Acts. Words by R. Bridges. (For Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra.) | | |
| Paper cover | 7 | 6 |
| Paper boards | 8 | 6 |
| Cloth | 11 | 6 |
| Vocal Parts, each | 2 | 6 |
| Book of Words, with Analytical Notes (per 100) | 66 | 8 |
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| GOD IS OUR HOPE AND STRENGTH. (Op. 8) | 3 | 0 |
| Vocal Parts, each | 0 | 8 |
| String Parts | 10 | 3 |
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| MASS IN G. (Op. 46.) (For Soli, Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ) | 4 | 0 |
| String Parts | 10 | 3 |
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| REVENGE, THE. (Op. 24.) A Ballad of the Fleet. Words by Tennyson. (For Chorus and Orchestra) | 2 | 6 |
| German Words Edition | 3 | 0 |
| Tonic Sol-fa | 1 | 0 |
| Full Score | 26 | 6 |
| String Parts | 7 | 6 |
| Wind Parts | 18 | 4 |
| Cornets (Transposed from Trumpet Parts) | 1 | 6 |
| Book of Words, with Analytical Notes (per 100) | 33 | 4 |
| Words only (per 100) | 6 | 6 |
| VOYAGE OF MAELDUNE, THE. (Op. 34.) Words by Tennyson. (For Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra.) | | |
| Paper cover | 4 | 0 |
| Paper boards | 5 | 0 |
| Cloth | 6 | 0 |
| Vocal Parts, each | 1 | 0 |
| String Parts | 18 | 6 |
| Wind Parts | 36 | 0 |
| Full Score, MS. | | |
| Book of Words, with Analytical Notes (per 100) | 33 | 4 |

ORCHESTRA

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| SUITE for VIOLIN SOLO and ORCHESTRA. (Op. 32):— | | |
| Full Score | 26 | 6 |
| String Parts | 10 | 3 |
| Wind Parts | 18 | 4 |
| Violin and Pianoforte Arrangement | 11 | 6 |
| SYMPHONY No. 3, in F minor. (THE IRISH.) (Op. 28):— | | |
| Full Score | 30 | 0 |
| String Parts | 15 | 6 |
| Wind Parts | 33 | 2 |
| SYMPHONY No. 4, in F major. (Op. 31):— | | |
| Full Score | 30 | 0 |
| String Parts | 15 | 6 |
| Wind Parts | 34 | 5 |

CHAMBER MUSIC, ETC.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| QUINTET in D minor (Op. 25). For two Violins, Viola, Violoncello, and Pianoforte:— Score and Parts | 19 | 0 |
| SUITE (Op 32). For Violin and Orchestra. Arranged for Violin and Pianoforte | 11 | 6 |
| THREE INTERMEZZI (Op. 13). For Clarinet, Violoncello or Violin, and Pianoforte | 6 | 0 |
| TRIO in E flat major (Op. 35). For Violin, Violoncello, and Pianoforte | 16 | 0 |

PIANOFORTE DUET

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| SYMPHONY No. 3, in F minor. (THE IRISH.) (Op. 28.) Arranged by CHARLES WOOD | 11 | 6 |
| SYMPHONY No. 4, in F. (Op. 31.) Arranged by CHARLES WOOD | 16 | 0 |

ORGAN

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| FOUR INTERMEZZI (Op. 189) each | 2 | 0 |
| 1. Pastorale. 3. Hush Song. | | |
| 2. Marcia Eroica. 4. Intermezzo. | | |
| PRELUDE and FUGUE in E minor | 1 | 6 |
| THREE PRELUDES and FUGUES (Op. 193) each | 2 | 0 |
| 1. In C. 3. In B minor. | | |
| 2. In C minor. | | |

SONGS

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| BLARNEY BALLADS (Baritone). (Arranged) each | 1 | 6 |
| 1. The grand ould man. | | |
| 2. The march of the men of Hawarden. | | |
| 3. The wearing of the blue. | | |
| BLUE WINGS (Mezzo-Soprano or Baritone) | 1 | 6 |
| DAY IS DYING Ditto | 1 | 6 |
| FOR EVER MINE (Tenor) | 2 | 0 |
| SWEET SPRING-TIME (Mezzo-Soprano or Soprano) | 1 | 6 |
| IRISH SONGS AND BALLADS. (Arr.) Album, complete | 6 | 0 |
| Or, separately from the above:— | | |
| § The March of the Maguire (Baritone) | 2 | 0 |
| § Sweet Isle (Baritone) | 2 | 0 |
| Our Inniskilling Boy (Baritone) | 2 | 0 |
| Chieftain of Tyrconnel (Baritone) | 2 | 0 |
| § Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |

SERVICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| TE DEUM in B flat. A Unison Part (with some divisions into two parts) for Men's voices Voice part | 0 | 3 |
| KYRIE ELEISON in B flat | 0 | 2 |
| MORNING, COMMUNION, AND EVENING SERVICE in B flat. (Op. 10) | 3 | 0 |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| TE DEUM (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Full Score, 6s.; String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts | 7 | 4 |
| JUBILATE (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 4 |
| BENEDICTUS (Tonic Sol-fa, 4d.) | 0 | 6 |
| *Full Score, 6s.; String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts | 8 | 2 |
| COMMUNION SERVICE (Kyrie, Creed, Sursum Corda, Sanctus, Gloria.) | 1 | 0 |
| Full Score, 9s.; String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts | 12 | 4 |
| MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS | 0 | 6 |
| Tonic Sol-fa | 0 | 2 |
| Full Score, 7s. 6d.; String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts | 6 | 8 |
| MORNING, COMMUNION, AND EVENING SERVICE in A. (Op. 12) | 3 | 0 |
| Or, separately: Te Deum, 6d.; Jubilate, 4d.; Benedictus, 6d.; Kyrie, Creed, Sursum Corda, Sanctus, Gloria, 1s.; Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, 8d. | | |
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts of Magnificat and Nunc dimittis from above, MS. | | |
| MORNING, COMMUNION, AND EVENING SERVICE in F. (Op. 36) | 3 | 0 |
| Or, separately: Te Deum, 6d.; Jubilate, 4d.; Benedictus, 6d.; Kyrie, Creed, Sursum Corda, Sanctus, Gloria, 1s. 6d.; Magnificat and Nunc dimittis, 6d. | | |
| COMMUNION SERVICE in G. (Op. 46.) For Soli, Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ | 4 | 0 |
| String Parts | 10 | 3 |
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |

ANTHEMS, ETC.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AND I SAW ANOTHER ANGEL (All Saints' Day) | 0 | 3 |
| AS WITH GLADNESS (Christmas Carol) | 0 | 2 |
| BLESSED ARE THE DEAD (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| CAROL OF THE NATIVITY (Christmas Carol) (Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 3 |
| (Words only, 3s. per 100.) | | |
| HOW BEAUTEOUS ARE THEIR FEET (Saints' Days) (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| I HEARD A VOICE FROM HEAVEN | 0 | 3 |
| IF THOU SHALT CONFESS (St. Andrew's Day) | 0 | 3 |
| JESUS CHRIST IS RISEN TO-DAY | 0 | 4 |
| LO! HE COMES | 0 | 4 |
| O PRAISE GOD IN HIS HOLINESS (Psalm cl.) (Chant) | 0 | 2 |
| THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD | 0 | 8 |
| WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED | 0 | 4 |

PART-SONGS, ETC.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| SIX ELIZABETHAN PASTORALS (First Set). (Op. 49):— | | |
| To his flocks | 0 | 4 |
| Corydon, arise (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Diaphenia (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Sweet love for me (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Damon's Passion | 0 | 4 |
| Phœbe (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| SIX ELIZABETHAN PASTORALS (Second Set). (Op. 53):— | | |
| On a hill there grows a flower | 0 | 3 |
| Like desert woods | 0 | 3 |
| Praised be Diana (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Cupid and Rosalind (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| O shady vales | 0 | 3 |
| The shepherd Doron's jig (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| DIAPHENIA (A.T.B.B. or T.T.B.B.) | 0 | 3 |
| SOFT, SOFT WIND (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| SING HEIGH-HO (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| AIRLY BEACON | 0 | 3 |
| THE KNIGHT'S TOMB (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| PEACE, COME AWAY | 0 | 3 |
| WHITHER AWAY ("Voyage of Maeldune"). Trio. S.S.A. | 0 | 4 |
| WORSHIP (Unison Song) | 0 | 2 |
| SUMMER'S RAIN AND WINTER'S SNOW (Unison Song) | 0 | 2 |
| Ditto (Two-Part Song) | 0 | 2 |

COMPOSITIONS BY EDWARD ELGAR

VOCAL

PART-SONGS (MIXED VOICES)

Unaccompanied (unless otherwise stated).

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| AFTER MANY A DUSTY MILE (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 4 |
| ANGELUS (Tuscany) (Op. 56, No. 1) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| BIRTHRIGHT, THE (Marching Song) | 0 | 4 |
| DITTO, for Unison-Singing (Bugle and Drum parts, on hire only.) | 0 | 2 |
| §CHRISTMAS GREETING, A (Op. 52). For two Sopranos (Soli or Chorus), Tenor and Bass Chorus, ad lib. With accompaniment for two Violins and Pianoforte (Sol-fa, 4d.) Violin Parts, 8d. each. | 0 | 8 |
| DEATH ON THE HILLS (7 parts) (Op. 72) (Sol-fa, 6d.) | 0 | 8 |
| EVENING SCENE (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| FEASTING I WATCH (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 4 |
| §FLY, SINGING BIRD (Arranged by J. POINTER) (Op. 26, No. 2) (Sol-fa, 4d.) | 0 | 8 |
| FOUNTAIN, THE (5 Parts) (Op. 71, No. 2) (Sol-fa, 6d.) | 0 | 8 |
| FOUR PART-SONGS (Op. 53) (Sol-fa, 1s. 6d.) Complete | 2 | 6 |
| Or, separately— | | |
| 1. There is sweet music (8 parts) (Sol-fa, 6d.) | 0 | 8 |
| 2. Deep in my soul (6 parts) (Sol-fa, 4d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Ditto, German Words | 0 | 6 |
| 3. O wild West wind (8 parts) (Sol-fa, 4d.) | 0 | 6 |
| 4. Owls (an Epitaph) (5 parts) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| GO, SONG OF MINE (6 parts) (Op. 57) (Sol-fa, 4d.) | 0 | 8 |
| §GOD SAVE THE KING (Arranged) (Sol-fa, 1½d.) (Full Score, 4s.) | 0 | 4 |
| HOW CALMLY THE EVENING (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| IT 'S OH! TO BE A WILD WIND (Sol-fa, 2d) | 0 | 3 |
| LOVE (Op. 18, No. 2) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| LOVE'S TEMPEST (5 parts) (Op. 73, No. 1) (Sol-fa, 6d.) | 0 | 8 |
| MY LOVE DWELT IN A NORTHERN LAND (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| DITTO, German words | 0 | 6 |
| O HAPPY EYES (Op. 18) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| REVEILLE, THE (Sol-fa, 6d.) | 0 | 8 |
| SERENADE (Op. 73, No. 2) (Sol-fa, 4d.) | 0 | 6 |
| SHOWER, THE (Op. 71, No. 1) (Sol-fa, 4d.) | 0 | 6 |
| §SNOW, THE. (Arranged by J. POINTER) (Op. 26, No. 1) (Sol-fa, 4d.) | 0 | 8 |
| §SPANISH SERENADE (Stars of the Summer Night) (Op. 23) (Sol-fa, 3d.) (Full Score, 7s. 6d.) | 0 | 4 |
| WEARY WIND OF THE WEST (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| WHETHER I FIND THEE (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| §WITH PROUD THANKSGIVING (Chorus). Words by LAURENCE BINYON. Arranged from "For the Fallen," for S.A.T.B., with accompaniment for Military or Brass Band, or Organ, or Pianoforte (Sol-fa, 6d.) Military Band Accompaniment, 9s.; Brass Band Accompaniment, 6s. | 0 | 8 |
| YEA, CAST ME FROM HEIGHTS OF THE MOUNTAINS (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |

§ Orchestral Parts may be had.

PART-SONGS (MALE VOICES)

T.T.B.B. (unless otherwise stated).

(Unaccompanied.)

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| AS TORRENTS IN SUMMER ("King Olaf") (Op. 30). Arranged for A.T.B.B. | 0 | 3 |
| FIVE PART-SONGS (Op. 45, Nos. 1—5) (The words from the Greek Anthology.) | 2 | 6 |
| Or, separately, English words only— | | |
| After many a dusty mile (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Feasting I watch (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| It 's oh! to be a wild wind (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Whether I find thee (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Yea, cast me from heights of the mountains (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 4 |

Vocal Parts (German words only), 8d. each.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| HERALD, THE (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 4 |
| REVEILLE, THE (Sol-fa, 6d.) | 0 | 8 |

PART-SONGS (MALE VOICES)—continued.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| WANDERER, THE (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 4 |
| ZUT! ZUT! ZUT! (Remember) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 4 |
| BIRTHRIGHT, THE (Unison School Song) Staff and Sol-fa Notations together | 0 | 2 |
| §FOLLOW THE COLOURS (Unison). Marching song for soldiers (Voice Parts, 3d.) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |

§ Orchestral Parts may be had.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IT COMES FROM THE MISTY AGES (Unison) ("The Banner of St. George"). (Staff and Sol-fa Notations together) (Sol-fa only, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |

PART-SONGS (FEMALE VOICES)

(Accompanied.)

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| AS TORRENTS IN SUMMER ("King Olaf") (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| §CHRISTMAS GREETING, A (Op. 52). With accompaniment for two Violins and Pianoforte. (Sol-fa, 4d.) Violin Parts, 8d. each. | 0 | 8 |
| §DOUBT NOT THY FATHER'S CARE (Op. 29) ("The Light of Life"). (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| †§FLY, SINGING BIRD (Op. 26, No. 2). With accompaniment for two Violins and Pianoforte. (Sol-fa, 4d.) Violin Parts, 8d. each. (Full Score, 7s. 6d.) | 0 | 8 |
| HOW CALMLY THE EVENING (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 4 |
| MY LOVE DWELT IN A NORTHERN LAND (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 4 |
| §PRAISE TO THE HOLIEST ("Dream of Gerontius") (Op. 38). Chorus and Semi-Chorus, S.S.A.A. (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| †§SNOW, THE (Op. 26, No. 1). With accompaniment for two Violins and Pianoforte. (Sol-fa, 4d.) Violin Parts, 8d. each. (Full Score, 7s. 6d.) | 0 | 8 |
| §SPANISH SERENADE (Stars of the summer night). With Accompaniment for two Violins and Pianoforte (Op. 23) (Sol-fa, 4d.) | 0 | 8 |

Violin Parts, 8d. each.

† Editions with German Words may also be had.

§ Orchestral Parts may be had.

SEPARATE NUMBERS FROM THE CHORAL WORKS

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| APOSTLES, THE (Op. 49). | | |
| Prologue. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me | 0 | 8 |
| BANNER OF ST. GEORGE, THE (Op. 33). | | |
| It comes from the misty ages. Epilogue (March) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Ditto (Unison Song) (arranged) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| CARACTACUS (Op. 35). | | |
| Britons, alert (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Lament—(O, my warriors) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| The March triumphal thunders (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 8 |
| DREAM OF GERONTIUS (Op. 38). | | |
| Softly and gently, dearly ransomed soul (Full Score, 9s.) | 0 | 8 |
| Litany | 0 | 3 |
| Be merciful | 0 | 4 |
| Go forth upon thy journey | 0 | 6 |
| Praise to the Holiest (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| KING OLAF (Op. 30). | | |
| A little bird in the air (Sol-fa, 4d.) | 0 | 8 |
| As torrents in summer (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Ditto (arranged for male voices) | 0 | 3 |
| Ditto (arranged for female voices) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| The challenge of Thor (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| The Wraith of Odin (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| LIGHT OF LIFE, THE (Op. 29). | | |
| Doubt not thy Father's care (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Light of the World, we know Thy praise (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Seek Him that maketh the seven stars (Male Voices) | 0 | 8 |

Orchestral Parts may be had of the above Choruses.

COMPOSITIONS BY EDWARD ELGAR

VOCAL

ORATORIOS

THE APOSTLES. For Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 49.) (Tonic Sol-fa, Choruses and Words of Solos only, 4s.) .. .. .. 7 6
(Vocal Parts, 2s. 6d. each.)

Full Score, £5 5s. Book of Words, with Analysis, 1s. 4d., or 7s. net per 100. Words only, 8d., or 4s. 8d. net per 100. An Interpretation of the Libretto by C. V. GORTON, M.A., 1s. 6d. Vocal Score, with German words (Deutsche Übersetzung von JULIUS BUTHS), 12s. Chorstimmen, 3s. each. Textbuch, 8d. Erläuterung von Max Hehemann, 1s. 4d. String Parts, 34s.; Wind Parts on hire only.

THE DREAM OF GERONTIUS. For Mezzo-Soprano, Tenor, and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 38.) (Tonic Sol-fa, Choruses only, 2s. 6d.) .. .. .. .. 5 6
(Vocal Parts, 2s. 6d. each.)

Full Score, £3 3s. Miniature Full Score, paper, 11s. 6d.; cloth, 16s. Book of Words, with Analysis, 1s. 4d., or 6s. 8d. net per 100. Words only, 8d., or 3s. 4d. net per 100. Vocal Score, with German and English words (Deutsche Übersetzung von JULIUS BUTHS), 9s. Chorstimmen, each, 3s. Textbuch, 3s. 4d. per 100. Vocal score, with French words (Traduction française de J. d'Offoël), 9s. Parties de Chœur, 3s. each. Livret, 3s. 4d. per 100. String Parts, 29s. 6d.; Wind Parts on hire only.

Sanctus Fortis. Tenor Solo from above. Transposed to A flat, 6d. Full score, 5s. 6d. String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts on hire only.

THE KINGDOM. For Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 51.) (Tonic Sol-fa, Choruses and Words of Solos only, 4s.) .. .. .. 7 6
(Vocal Parts, 2s. 6d. each.)

Full Score, £5 5s. Book of Words, with Analysis, 1s. 4d., or 7s. net per 100. Words only, 8d., or 4s. 8d. net per 100. An Interpretation of the Libretto by C. V. GORTON, M.A., 1s. 6d. Vocal Score, with German words (Deutsche Übersetzung von JULIUS BUTHS), 7s. 6d. Chorstimmen, 3s. each. Textbuch, 8d. each. String Parts, 37s. 6d; Wind Parts on hire only.

THE LIGHT OF LIFE ("Lux Christi"). A Short Oratorio. For Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, and Baritone Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 29) .. .. 4 0
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d. Full Score, £2 2s.; Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100. String Parts, 20s.; Wind Parts on hire only.

CANTATAS

BANNER OF ST. GEORGE, THE. For Chorus (Soprano Solo ad lib.) and Orchestra. (Op. 33) .. .. .. 2 6
Full Score, 25s. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d. Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100. String Parts, 12s. 6d.; Wind Parts, 28s. 11d.

BLACK KNIGHT, THE. For Chorus and Orchestra. (Op. 25) .. .. .. .. .. 3 0
Full Score, 31s. 6d. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100. String Parts, 13s. 6d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
(Vocal Parts, 1s. 6d. each.)

CARACTACUS. For Soprano, Tenor, Baritone, and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 35) .. .. 5 6
Full Score, £3 3s. Tonic Sol-fa (Choruses and Words of Solos only), 2s. 6d. Book of Words, with Analysis, 1s. 4d., or 6s. 8d net per 100; Words only, 8d., or 3s. 4d. net per 100. String Parts, 36s. 6d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
(Vocal Parts, 2s. 6d. each.)

KING OLAF. For Soprano, Tenor, and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 30) .. .. .. .. 4 6
Full Score, £3 3s.; Tonic Sol-fa (Choruses only), 2s. 6d. Book of Words, with Analysis, 1s. 4d. or 6s. 8d. net per 100. Words only, 8d., or 3s. 4d. net per 100. String Parts, 34s. 6d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
(Vocal Parts, 2s. 6d. each.)

MUSIC-MAKERS, THE (Op. 69). Ode by Arthur O'Shaughnessy. For Contralto Solo, Chorus, and Orchestra.. 4 0
Tonic Sol-fa, 2s. 6d.; Vocal Parts, 1s. 6d. each; Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100. String Parts, 13s. 6d. Wind Parts on hire only.

SPIRIT OF ENGLAND, THE (Op. 80). A poem by Laurence Binyon. Set for Tenor or Soprano Solo, Chorus, and Orchestra .. .. .. .. .. .. complete 4 0
Tonic Sol-fa, 2s. 6d. Full score, complete, 25s. Complete String Parts, 10s.; Wind Parts on hire only. Vocal Parts on hire only. Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100.
Or, Singly—

1. THE FOURTH OF AUGUST .. .. .. .. .. 1 6
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Full Score, 13s.; String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
2. TO WOMEN .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 1 0
Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.; Full Score, 7s. 6d.; String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
3. FOR THE FALLEN .. .. .. .. .. .. 1 6
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Full Score, 16s.; String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts on hire only. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

ANTHEMS, SERVICES, &C.

§CORONATION OFFERTORIUM (Op. 64) .. 0 3
DOUBT NOT THY FATHER'S CARE ("The Light of Life") (Op. 29). Duet, S. and C. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 0 3
FEAR NOT, O LAND (Harvest) .. .. .. .. 0 4
(Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.)
§GIVE UNTO THE LORD (Psalm xxix.) (Op. 74) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 1 0
§GREAT IS THE LORD (Psalm xlviii.) (Op. 67) 1 0
(Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.)
JESU, LORD OF LIFE AND GLORY. Anthem. Adapted from Op. 2, No. 2 (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. 0 4
JESU, MEEK AND LOWLY. Anthem. Adapted from Op. 2, No. 3 (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. .. .. 0 4
JESU, WORD OF GOD INCARNATE (Ave Verum) (Op. 2, No. 1). Motet. English and Latin Words (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. 0 3
DITTO. English Words only (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. 0 3
§LIGHT OF THE WORLD ("The Light of Life") (Op. 29). S.A.T.B. (Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. 0 4
LO! CHRIST THE LORD IS BORN. Carol .. .. 0 1½
O HEARKEN THOU (Arranged from the Coronation Offertorium) (Op. 64) .. .. .. .. .. 0 4
O MIGHTIEST OF THE MIGHTY (Coronation Hymn) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 0 1½
SEEK HIM THAT MAKETH THE SEVEN STARS ("The Light of Life") (Op. 29). Tenor Solo and Chorus for T.T.B.B. .. .. .. .. .. .. 0 3
§TE DEUM AND BENEDICTUS IN F. For Chorus (S.A.T.B.), Orchestra, and Organ. (Op. 34) .. .. 1 6
THEY ARE AT REST. Elegy (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) 0 4

MOTETS (LATIN WORDS)

AVE VERUM (Op. 2, No. 1) (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.).. 0 3
AVE MARIA (Op. 2, No. 2).. .. .. .. .. 0 4
AVE MARIS STELLA (Op. 2, No. 3).. .. .. 0 4
§INTENDE VOCI ORATIONIS MEÆ (Coronation Offertorium) (Op. 64) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 0 3

SONGS

§ANGEL'S SONG, THE: "My work is done" ("Gerontius") (Op. 38). For Mezzo-Soprano .. .. .. 1 6
AS A SPIRIT DIDST THOU PASS BEFORE MINE EYES ("The Light of Life") Op. 29. Tenor .. 2 0
CHILD ASLEEP, A (Contralto) .. .. .. 2 0
§FOLLOW THE COLOURS (Marching Song) .. 2 0
IN MOONLIGHT (arranged from the Canto popolare in the Concert-Overture "In the South," Op. 50). (In G, F, and E flat) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 2 0
OH, SOFT WAS THE SONG (Op. 59, No. 3). In D and E (Orchestral Parts in E only).. .. .. .. 2 0
PLEADING (Op. 48, No. 1). In A flat, G, and F (Orchestral Parts in G only) .. .. .. .. .. 2 0
RIVER, THE (Op. 60, No. 2). In G minor, A minor, and B minor (original). (Orchestral Parts in A minor only) .. 2 0
SWORD SONG, THE ("Caractacus," Op. 35). In E flat and F (Orchestral Parts in F only) .. .. .. 2 0
§THERE ARE SEVEN THAT PULL THE THREAD ("Grania and Diarmid") (Op. 42). Mezzo-Soprano or Baritone .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 2 0
TORCH, THE (Op. 60, No. 1). In F, G, and A (Orchestral Parts in G only) .. .. .. .. .. .. 2 0
§TWILIGHT (Op. 59, No. 6). Contralto .. .. 2 0
§WAS IT SOME GOLDEN STAR (Op. 59, No. 5). Contralto .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 2 0

§ Orchestral Parts may be had.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

COMPOSITIONS BY
C. HUBERT H. PARRY

ORATORIOS, CANTATAS, ETC.

BEYOND THESE VOICES THERE IS PEACE. MOTET. (S.B. SOLI.)

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (5) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 15 | 0 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |

BLEST PAIR OF SIRENS ("At a Solemn Music"). (CHORUS ONLY.) ODE BY MILTON.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 11 | 6 |
| String Parts (4) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Wind Parts... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 13 | 6 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 0 |
| Ditto. German Words by Walter Josephson ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| Ditto. Italian Words by A. Visetti ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| Vocal Parts. German Words by Walter Josephson ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| Book of Words (per 100) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 6 | 6 |

CHIVALRY OF THE SEA, THE. (NAVAL ODE.) WORDS BY ROBERT BRIDGES. SET TO MUSIC FOR FIVE-PART CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 0 |

DE PROFUNDIS. 130TH PSALM. (S. SOLO.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (4) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 6 | 9 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Vocal Parts... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 1 | 6 |

ETON. AN ODE BY ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE. SET TO MUSIC FOR THE 450TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUNDATION OF THE COLLEGE.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

ETON MEMORIAL ODE. NOVEMBER 18TH, 1908. WORDS BY ROBERT BRIDGES.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |

GLORIES OF OUR BLOOD AND STATE, THE. (CHORUS ONLY.) A FUNERAL ODE, BY JAMES SHIRLEY.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |

GOD IS OUR HOPE. 46TH PSALM. ANTHEM. (B. SOLO.) COMPOSED FOR THE 250TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FESTIVAL OF THE SONS OF THE CLERGY.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |

I WAS GLAD WHEN THEY SAID UNTO ME. ANTHEM.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 6 |

INVOCATION TO MUSIC. AN ODE (IN HONOUR OF PURCELL). BY ROBERT BRIDGES. (S.T.B. SOLI.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |

JOB. AN ORATORIO. (S.T. BAR. B. SOLI.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 42 | 0 |
| String Parts (4) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 17 | 6 |
| Wind Parts... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 33 | 10 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa, Choruses only ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Vocal Parts... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 1 | 6 |
| Book of Words (per 100) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 33 | 4 |

JUDITH; OR, THE REGENERATION OF MANASSEH. AN ORATORIO. (S.S.A.T.B. SOLI.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score, MS. | | |
| String Parts (4) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 42 | 0 |
| Wind Parts... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 76 | 9 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| Ditto ... ... ... ... ... ... paper boards | 8 | 6 |
| Ditto ... ... ... ... ... ... ... cloth | 11 | 6 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa, Choruses only ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Vocal Parts... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 2 | 6 |
| Book of Words, with Analysis, by F. HUEFFER (per 100) ... | 66 | 8 |
| Ditto without Analysis (per 100) ... ... ... | 33 | 4 |
| GOD BREAKETH THE BATTLE (Tenor Solo from the above) | 2 | 0 |
| String Parts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 8 |
| Wind Parts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 4 |

ORATORIOS, CANTATAS, ETC.—(contd.).

KING SAUL. AN ORATORIO. (S.A.T. BAR. B. SOLI.)

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (4) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 41 | 0 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| Ditto ... ... ... ... ... ... paper boards | 8 | 6 |
| Ditto ... ... ... ... ... ... ... cloth | 11 | 6 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa, Choruses only... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| Vocal Parts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 2 | 6 |
| Book of Words, with Analysis by JOSEPH BENNETT (per 100) ... | 66 | 8 |
| Ditto without Analysis (per 100) ... ... ... | 33 | 4 |

L'ALLEGRO ED IL PENSIEROSO. (S.B. SOLI.) POEM BY MILTON.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (4) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 16 | 0 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |

LOTOS EATERS, THE CHORIC SONG FROM THE. BY TENNYSON. (S. SOLO AND RECITER.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (4) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 | 3 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

LOVE THAT CASTETH OUT FEAR, THE. SINFONIA SACRA. (A.B. SOLI.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (5) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 16 | 0 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| Vocal Parts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 1 | 6 |

MAGNIFICAT. LATIN WORDS ONLY. (S. SOLO.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (4) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |

ODE ON ST. CECILIA'S DAY. (S. BAR. SOLI.) (POEM BY POPE.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score, MS. | | |
| String Parts (4) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 12 | 6 |
| Wind Parts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 28 | 1 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Vocal Parts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 1 | 0 |
| Book of Words, with Analytical Notes, by J. BENNETT (per 100) | 19 | 0 |
| Ditto. Without Analysis (per 100) ... ... ... | 9 | 6 |

ODE ON THE NATIVITY. (S. SOLO.) THE WORDS BY WILLIAM DUNBAR.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, hire only. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Ditto. Paper Boards ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| Ditto. Cloth ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 6 | 0 |

ODE TO MUSIC. (S.S.A.T.B. SOLI.) POEM BY ARTHUR C. BENSON.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 6 |

PIED PIPER OF HAMELIN, THE. (T.B. SOLI.) POEM BY ROBERT BROWNING.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 42 | 0 |
| String Parts (5) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 11 | 3 |
| Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Ditto ... ... ... ... ... ... paper boards | 4 | 0 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Vocal Parts... ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 1 | 6 |
| Book of Words (per 100) ... ... ... ... ... | 6 | 6 |

PROMETHEUS UNBOUND. (S.A.T. BAR. B. SOLI.) SCENES FROM SHELLEY'S POEM.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 6 |

SOLDIER'S TENT, THE. SONG FOR BARITONE. THE WORDS FROM THE BARD OF DIMBOVITZA. ENGLISH VERSION BY ALMA STRETTELL.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... folio | 2 | 0 |

SONG OF DARKNESS AND LIGHT, A. (S. SOLO.) AN ODE. BY ROBERT BRIDGES.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (4) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 12 | 6 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 0 |

COMPOSITIONS BY
C. HUBERT H. PARRY

ORATORIOS, CANTATAS, ETC.—(contd.)

SOUL'S RANSOM, THE. (S.B. SOLI.) A PSALM FOR THE POOR. SINFONIA SACRA.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Orchestral Parts, MS. | | |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

TE DEUM IN D. COMPOSED FOR THE CORONATION, 1911.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (5) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 6 | 8 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |

TE DEUM. GLOUCESTER FESTIVAL, 1913. (S.B. SOLI.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (5) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 14 | 3 |
| Vocal Score. English Words... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |

VISION OF LIFE, THE. A SYMPHONIC POEM. (S.B. SOLI.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (5) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 18 | 0 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Words only (per 100) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 10 | 0 |

VOCES CLAMANTIUM (THE VOICES OF THEM THAT CRY). MOTET. (S.B. SOLI.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (5) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

WAR AND PEACE. A SYMPHONIC ODE. (S.A.T.B. SOLI.)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Full Score and Wind Parts, MS. | | |
| String Parts (5) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 21 | 6 |
| Vocal Score ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 6 |
| Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa (Choruses and Words of Solos only) | 2 | 6 |
| Vocal Parts... ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 1 | 6 |
| Book of Words, with Analytical Notes ... ... ... ... | 0 | 8 |
| Ditto, without Analysis (per 100) ... ... ... ... | 12 | 6 |

ORGAN

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Bridal March and Finale from the music to "The Birds" ... | 2 | 0 |
| Elegy ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Fantasia and Fugue ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Finale, "Blest Pair of Sirens" ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| In the Lord put I my trust ("King Saul") ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Interlude (Allegro), in E (see Village Organist, Book 30) ... | 1 | 6 |
| Intermezzo from the music to "The Birds" ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Introduction to "Judith," Act I., Scene 2 ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |

Seven Chorale Preludes. (1st Set) ... ... ... ... ... 5 6

On the following tunes:

"Dundee." "Melcombe."
"Rockingham." "Christe, Redemptor omnium."
"Hampton." "St. Ann's."
"Old 104th."

Seven Chorale Preludes. (2nd Set) ... ... ... ... ... 5 6

On the following tunes:

"Croft's 136th." "Eventide."
"Martyrdom." "St. Cross."
"St. Thomas." "Hanover."
"St. Mary."

Three Chorale Fantasias ... ... ... ... ... ... 3 0 or, Singly: No. 1, 1s. 6d.; No. 2, 1s.; No. 3, 1s. 6d.
Toccata and Fugue ("The Wanderer") ... ... ... ... 3 6

CHAMBER MUSIC

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Quartet in A flat, for Violin, Viola, Violoncello, and Pianoforte | 15 | 0 |
| Quintet in E flat, for two Violins, two Violas, and Violoncello | 6 | 0 |
| Sonata in A, for Violoncello and Pianoforte ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| Trio in B minor, for Violin, Violoncello, and Pianoforte ... | 10 | 6 |

VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Capriccio in C (from Twelve Short Pieces) (3rd Set) ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Land to the leeward, ho! (See "Junior Violinist," Book 2) ... | 2 | 0 |
| Suite No. 1, in D ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 5 | 6 |

1 Prelude
2 *Capriccioso
3 Scherzo
4 Dialogue
5 Finale

VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE—(contd.)

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Suite No. 2, in F ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 5 | 6 |

1 Prelude
2 Intermezzo
3 Capriccioso
4 Retrospective
5 Finale

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Suite in F (Lady Radnor's Suite) ... ... ... ... ... | 5 | 6 |

1 Prelude
2 Allemande
3 Sarabande
*4 Bourrée
*5 Slow Minuet
*6 Gigue

* Separately, 2s. each.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| TWELVE SHORT PIECES, in Three Sets. Each Set ... ... | 4 | 0 |

| FIRST SET. | SECOND SET. | THIRD SET. |
|---|---|---|
| 1 Idyll | 1 Prelude | 1 Preamble |
| 2 Romance | 2 Romance | 2 Romance |
| 3 Capriccio | 3 Capriccio | 3 Capriccio |
| 4 Lullaby | 4 Envoi | 4 Envoi |

PART-SONGS

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| SIX LYRICS, FROM ELIZABETHAN SONG BOOKS ... complete | 1 | 6 |

Or, separately:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1 Follow your saint (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 2 Love is a sickness (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 3 Turn all thy thoughts to eyes (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... | 0 | 3 |
| 4 Whether men do laugh or weep ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| 5 The sea hath many a thousand sands (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| 6 Tell me, O love (S.S.A.T.B.B.) (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) ... | 0 | 4 |
| SIX MODERN LYRICS ... ... ... ... complete | 1 | 6 |

Or, separately:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1 How sweet the answer ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 2 Since thou, O fondest (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 3 If I had but two little wings (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 4 There rolls the deep (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 5 What voice of gladness ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| 6 Music, when soft voices die (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.)... ... | 0 | 3 |
| SIX FOUR-PART SONGS ... ... ... ... ... complete | 1 | 6 |

Or, separately:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1 In a harbour grene ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 2 My delight and thy delight (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| 3 Prithee, why ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 4 Sorrow and pain ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| 5 Sweet day, so cool (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 6 Wrong not, sweet Empress (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| EIGHT FOUR-PART SONGS ... ... ... ... complete | 1 | 6 |

Or, separately:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1 Phillis ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 2 O love, they wrong thee much (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) ... | 0 | 3 |
| 3 At her fair hands ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| 4 Home of my heart ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| 5 You gentle nymphs ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 6 Come, pretty wag, and sing (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 7 Ye thrilled me once (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| 8 Better music ne'er was known (Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.) ... | 0 | 4 |
| An Analogy (A.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| Ditto (S.A.T.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| †Descend, ye nine ("Ode on St. Cecilia's Day") (Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| †Forward through the glimmering darkness (War and Peace) | 0 | 6 |
| Hang fear, cast away care (humorous) (A.T.B.B.) ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| Ditto ditto (S.A.T.B.) ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| In praise of Song (Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.) ... ... ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| Love wakes (A.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| Ditto (S.A.T.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| Orpheus (humorous) (A.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| Out upon it (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| That very wise man (humorous) (A.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| Ditto ditto (S.A.T.B.) (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| The mad dog (humorous) (A.T.B.B.) (Tonic Sol-fa, 4d.) ... | 0 | 6 |

PART-SONGS FOR FEMALE OR BOYS' VOICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| If I had but two little wings (Two-part song) ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| Land to leeward, ho! (Unison) (Staff and Tonic Sol-fa) ... | 0 | 2 |
| (Tonic Sol-fa only) | 0 | 1½ |
| Rock-a-bye (Cradle Song) (Unison) (Staff and Tonic Sol-fa) | 0 | 2 |
| (Tonic Sol-fa only) | 0 | 1½ |
| Ditto (Two-Part Song) ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 2 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NEW EDITION

POCKET SING-SONG BOOK

FOR SCHOOLS, HOMES

AND

COMMUNITY SINGING

CONTENTS

A-hunting we will go
All people that on earth do dwell (Old 100th)
All through the night
Arethusa, The
Ash Grove, The
Auld Lang Syne
Bay of Biscay, The
Begone, dull care
Bells of Aberdovey, The
Blow, blow, thou winter wind
Blue Bell of Scotland, The
Bonnie Banks of Loch Lomond, The
British Grenadiers, The
Campbells are comin', The
Camptown Races
Charlie is my Darling
Coasts of High Barbary, The
Come, lasses and lads
Come, let's be merry
Dashing away with the smoothing iron
Down among the dead men
David of the White Rock
Drink to me only with thine eyes
Early one morning
Flight of the Earls, The
Girl I left behind me, The
Glory to Thee, my God, this night (Tallis)
God rest you merry, gentlemen
God save the King
Golden Vanity, The
Good-morrow, Gossip Joan
Harp that once through Tara's halls, The Heart of Oak
Heave away, my Johnny
Here's a health unto His Majesty
I saw three ships
John Brown's body
John Peel
Keel row, The
Land of my Fathers
Lass of Richmond Hill, The
Last Rose of Summer, The
Let the hills resound
Londonderry Air
March of the Men of Harlech
Marching thro' Georgia
Marseillaise, The
Meeting of the Waters, The Mermaid, The
Minstrel Boy, The
My Lady Greensleeves
Now thank we all our God
O no, John !
Oak and the Ash, The
Oh, dear ! what can the matter be
Oh ! we can play
Old Folks at Home
Old King Cole
One man went to mow
Onward, Christian Soldiers
Poacher, The
Polly Oliver
Polly-wolly-doodle
Rio Grand
Rounds: Come, follow me
'Tis humdrum
Chairs to mend
Rule, Britannia
So early in the morning
Summer is a-coming in
There was a simple maiden
This great world is a trouble
Tight little Island, The
Twelve days of Christmas
Vicar of Bray, The
Wanderer, The
We be Three Poor Mariners
When I was a Tailor
When Johnny comes marching home
Wi' a Hundred Pipers
Widdicombe Fair
Will ye no come back again
Young May Moon, The

Size 6½ in. by 5 in., rounded corners, and lined paper cover. The songs are generally set in low keys with simple pianoforte accompaniments. The voice part is printed in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa notations.

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE.

Words only, price 4*d*.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

A

SELECTED LIST OF SONGS

BY

MODERN BRITISH COMPOSERS

PRICE 2*s.* EACH; those marked * 1*s.* 6*d.*

Abbreviations: (S) Soprano; (M-S) Mezzo-Soprano; (C) Contralto; (T) Tenor; (Bar.) Baritone; (B) Bass.

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| IVOR ATKINS | |
| Elleen. E flat (Bar.); F (T) ... ... ... ... | ... B♭—E♭ |
| My true love hath my heart. E flat (C or M-S) ... | ... B♭—F |
| Thou art come. D (M-S or B) ... ... ... ... | ... B—G |
| Too late. C (C or Bar.); E flat (M-S); F (S or T) | ... G—E |
| *Virgin's Lullaby, The. G minor (M-S) ... ... | ... D—F |
| Year's at the Spring, The. C (M-S)... ... ... | ... D—F |
| GRANVILLE BANTOCK | |
| *In a myrtle shade. D flat (S or T) ... ... ... | ... D♭—A♭ |
| Love's Secret. E (T) ... ... ... ... ... | ... E—G |
| Wild Flower's Song, The. C (S or T) ... ... | ... D—G |
| HERBERT E. CRIMP | |
| Sonny. B flat (B); C (Bar.) ... ... ... ... | ... B♭—D |
| Vine, The. F (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... | ... C—A |
| BENJAMIN J. DALE | |
| Two Songs from Shakespeare: | |
| 1. O mistress mine. D (Bar.); F (T) ... ... | ... B—E |
| 2. Come away, death. D flat (Bar.); E (T) ... | ... D♭—E♭ |
| EDGAR F. DAY. | |
| Night in the desert. D (Bar. or C); G (S or T) ... | ... B—E |
| THOMAS F. DUNHILL | |
| Four Songs from Vagabondia. (Bar.) | |
| 1. Sea Gipsy, The. D minor ... ... ... ... | ... B—E |
| 2. Rover's Song, A. F ... ... ... ... ... | ... C—D |
| 3. Daisies, The. C ... ... ... ... ... | ... C—F |
| 4. Hill Song, A. D ... ... ... ... ... | ... B—E♭ |
| ERNEST B. FARRAR | |
| *Brittany. E flat (Bar. or B); F (M-S); G (S or T) | ... B♭—E♭ |
| O mistress mine. F (Bar.); A flat (T) ... ... | ... C—F |
| Two Pastorals: | |
| a. Come you, Mary. B flat (Bar.); C (T) ... | ... D—F |
| b. Who would shepherd pipes forsake. E flat (Bar.); G (T)... ... ... ... | ... B♭—F |
| Two Songs: | |
| a Diaphenia. G (Bar. or B); B flat (T) ... | ... B—E |
| b. Lover's Appeal, The. D minor (Bar. or B); F minor (T) ... | ... B♭—D |
| BASIL GRAHAM | |
| Dreamland and you. D flat (C or Bar.) ... ... | ... B♭—D♭ |
| Within your eyes. E flat (B); F (C or Bar.); G (S or T)... ... | ... B♭—E♭ |
| HAMILTON HARTY | |
| Across the door. C (C or M-S) ... ... ... ... | ... B—F |
| Cradle Song, A. A minor (C) ... ... ... ... | ... D—E |
| Drover, A. C minor (Bar.) ... ... ... ... | ... C—F♯ |
| Homeward. C minor (Bar. or B) ... ... ... | ... C—E |
| Rachray Man, The. D minor (M-S) ... ... ... | ... C—F |
| Rann of Wandering, A. B flat (S or T) ... ... | ... D—F♯ |
| Stranger's Grave, The. G minor (Bar.) ... ... | ... C—F |
| Wake Feast, The. D minor (Bar.) ... ... ... | ... C♯—E |
| JOSEPH HOLBROOKE | |
| Come, let us make love deathless. B flat minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... ... | ... F—A♭ |
| I heard a soldier. A (B or Bar.) ... ... ... | ... D—F |
| My own sad love. B (Bar. or B) ... ... ... | ... D♯—E |
| O dreamy, gloomy, friendly trees. B flat (S or T)... | ... C—A |
| Requital, The. A (T) ... ... ... ... ... | ... E—F♯ |
| J. ST. A. JOHNSON | |
| Fiddler, The. A minor (Bar.) ... ... ... ... | ... C—F |
| Sandy the Piper. E (Bar.) ... ... ... ... | ... C♯—F♯ |
| WILLIAM McNAUGHT | |
| Dancing at the Lurgan. D (C); E (M-S); G (S) ... | ... B—E |
| *In Derry Vale (The Londonderry Air) (arranged). E flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... | ... B♭—G |
| Piper, The. D (B); E flat (C or Bar.); F (M-S) ... | ... D—D |

| | Range of Lowest Key |
|---|---|
| JOHN POINTER | |
| Come to me, gentle sleep. A (S or T) ... ... | ... E—G |
| Farewell. C (C or Bar.) ... ... ... ... ... | ... G♯—F |
| How shall I sing that Majesty (with Chorus for S.A.T.B. ad lib.). C (Bar. or M-S); D (S or T) ... | ... C—G |
| I love thee. F (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... | ... E—A |
| I loved a lass, a fair one. E flat (Bar.); F (T) ... | ... C—F |
| I sigh for night's sweet coming. G (C or Bar.); B flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | ... G—F |
| Lordly Gallants. E (Bar.) ... ... ... ... | ... C♯—F♯ |
| Love's Philosophy. E (Bar.); A flat (T) ... ... | ... B—E |
| Lullaby, A. E flat (C) ... ... ... ... ... | ... B♭—E♭ |
| Rosamond. D minor (Bar.); F minor (T) ... ... | ... B—F♯ |
| Shall I wasting in despair. F (T) ... ... ... | ... D—A |
| Two Little Songs: | |
| a. Lark, The. F (M-S) ... ... ... ... | ... D—F |
| b. Bumble-Bee, The. B flat (M-S) ... ... ... | ... F—G |
| When all the world is young. G (S or T) ... ... | ... D—G |
| HAROLD RHODES | |
| Evening Confession, An. B♭ minor (B) ... ... ... | F D♯ |
| Woman's Love, A. C (T) ... ... ... ... | ... E♭—G |
| CYRIL B. ROOTHAM | |
| Four Dramatic Songs: | |
| 1. Imagination. B flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | ... E♭—B♭ |
| 2. Unwelcome. A (S or T)... ... ... ... ... | ... D♯—G♯ |
| 3. St. Andrews. G minor (S or T) ... ... ... | ... D—G |
| 4. Over the Hills. E minor (T) ... ... ... ... | ... D—A |
| Vignette, A. D flat (C) ... ... ... ... ... | ... C—E♭ |
| ETHEL M. SMYTH | |
| Four Songs for M-S or Bar.: | |
| 1. Odellette. C minor ... ... ... ... ... | ... C—A♭ |
| 2. Dance, The. E minor ... ... ... ... ... | ... B—E |
| 3. Chrysilla. E flat ... ... ... ... ... ... | ... B♭—F |
| 4. Anacreontic Ode. F minor ... ... ... ... | ... C—G |
| ERIC H. THIMAN | |
| *Birds, The. C (M-S or Bar.); D (S or T) ... ... ... | ... D—F |
| God of Love my Shepherd is. F (C or B); A flat (M-S or Bar.) ... ... ... ... | ... A—D |
| In the bleak mid-winter. D (C or Bar.); F (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... | ... A—E |
| Jesus the very thought of Thee. B flat (C or B); D (M-S or Bar.) ... ... ... ... | ... E♭—D |
| *My Master hath a garden. F (M-S or Bar.); G (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... | ... C—F |
| The Silver Swan. B flat minor (M-S or Bar.); C minor (S or T) ... | ... D♭—F |
| LEONARD J. WALKER | |
| My life is like a garden. B flat (C or B); C (M-S or Bar.); D (S or T) ... ... | ... E♭—E♭ |
| Summertime of Love, The. B flat (C or B); C (M-S or Bar.); D (S or T) ... ... | ... B♭—E♭ |
| There 's a pathway through the heather. D flat (C or Bar.); E flat (M-S); F (S or T) ... ... | ... D♭—F |
| FELIX WHITE | |
| Golden Slumbers. F (M-S); G (T) ... ... ... ... | ... C—F |
| Sing care away. E flat (Bar.); F (T) ... ... ... ... | ... B♭—F |
| Thou hast left me ever, Jamie. D minor (M-S); E minor (S) ... ... ... ... | ... C♯—F |
| GERRARD WILLIAMS | |
| Bailiff's daughter of Islington, The. (Arranged.) E flat (B or Bar.) ... ... ... ... | ... D—E♭ |
| *Despair. F♯ minor (C or Bar.); A minor (S or T) ... | ... B—E |
| Love outwitted (Duet for Voice and Pf.). C (T) ... ... | ... C♯—A |
| March Morning. C (C); E flat (M-S) ... ... ... | ... C—D |
| Time. A minor (C or Bar.); C minor (S or T) ... ... | ... A—E |
| Two Songs: | |
| 1. Absence. Low, Medium, High ... ... ... | ... B♭—E♭ |
| 2. Serenade. ,, ,, ,, ... ... ... | ... B—D |

For songs by Elgar, Fletcher, German, Mackenzie, Parry, Stanford, &c., see separate lists.

LONDON: NOVELLO & COMPANY, LIMITED

A SELECTED LIST OF # NOVELLO'S LIGHT PIECES
FOR PIANOFORTE

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| ARENSKY, A. | Romance in A flat | 2 | 0 |
| ARMSTRONG, F. ALFORD | Autumn Leaves | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, ,, | White Heather. Valse | 2 | 0 |
| BREWER, A. HERBERT | Auf Wiedersehen | 2 | 0 |
| CARSE, ADAM | Gavotte in G | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Three Miniatures: 1. Humoresque 2. Love Song 3. Scherzetto — Complete | 2 | 6 |
| COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. | Four Characteristic Waltzes: 1. Valse Bohemienne 2/- 2. Valse Rustique 2/- 3. Valse de la Reine 2/- 4. Valse Mauresque 2/- — Complete | 4 | 0 |
| COWEN, FREDERIC H. | Four English Dances, in the Olden Style: 1. Stately Dance 2. Rustic Dance 3. Graceful Dance 4. Country Dance — Complete | 4 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Minuet d'Amour | 2 | 0 |
| ELGAR, EDWARD | Chanson de Matin | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Chanson de Nuit | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Mazurka | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Serenade Mauresque | 2 | 0 |
| ESIPOFF, STEPÁN | L'Absence | 2 | 0 |
| FLETCHER, PERCY E. | Reflections (after verses from Longfellow): 1. Snowflakes 2. Spring 3. Sunset — Complete | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Toy Soldiers' March | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Two Bagatelles: 1. Valsette 2. Pizzicato | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Valse Arabesque | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Valse Lyrique ("Smile of Spring") | 2 | 0 |
| GERMAN, EDWARD | Three Dances from "Henry VIII": 1. Morris Dance 2. Shepherds' Dance 3. Torch Dance — Complete | 3 | 0 |
| HOLBROOKE, JOSEF | Souvenir de Printemps | 2 | 0 |
| HOLLINS, ALFRED | Intermezzo | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Spring Song | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Valse Impromptu | 2 | 0 |
| MANNS, OTTO, JUNR. | A Northern Cradle Song | 2 | 0 |
| PITT, PERCY | Air de Ballet | 2 | 0 |
| RAWLINSON, HAROLD | Aubade | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Serenade | 2 | 0 |
| SCOTT-BAKER, H. | Mazurka | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Pantomime | 2 | 0 |
| WEBSTER, ERIC | Vignettes: 1. Valse 2. Reverie 3. Petit Scherzo — Complete | 2 | 0 |
| WENDT, THÉOPHIL | Cantique d'Amour | 2 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

ORGAN MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR PERFORMANCE AT CINEMAS, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| J. BENEDICT | | |
| Variations on Arne's "Where the bee sucks" | 2 | 0 |
| DUDLEY BUCK | | |
| At Evening | 2 | 0 |
| WALFORD DAVIES | | |
| Solemn Melody | 2 | 0 |
| EDWARD ELGAR | | |
| Contrasts (The Gavotte) | 2 | 0 |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | | |
| Fountain Reverie | 3 | 0 |
| Matinale | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD GERMAN | | |
| Morris Dance (Henry VIII.) | 2 | 0 |
| Shepherds' Dance | 2 | 0 |
| Torch Dance | 2 | 0 |
| R. G. HAILING | | |
| Chanson de Joie | 1 | 6 |
| KING HALL | | |
| Canzone | 2 | 0 |
| ALFRED HOLLINS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso | 1 | 6 |
| Barcarolle | 1 | 6 |
| Berceuse | 2 | 0 |
| Evening Rest | 3 | 0 |
| In Springtime | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in D flat | 2 | 0 |
| Maytime (Gavotte) | 1 | 6 |
| Minuet | 2 | 0 |
| Morning Song | 2 | 0 |
| Spring Song | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD J. HORSMAN | | |
| The Curfew | 2 | 0 |
| BERNARD JOHNSON | | |
| Pavane in A | 2 | 0 |
| S. KARG-ELERT | | |
| Harmonies du Soir | 1 | 6 |
| EDWIN H. LEMARE | | |
| Andantino in D flat | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson d'Eté | 2 | 0 |
| Elegy in G | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in B flat | 2 | 0 |
| Madrigal | 2 | 0 |
| Minuet Nuptiale | 2 | 0 |
| Pastorale in E | 2 | 0 |
| Reverie in E flat | 3 | 0 |
| Romance in D flat | 3 | 0 |
| J. A. MEALE | | |
| Chanson d'Espoir | 2 | 0 |
| J. RAFF | | |
| Cavatina | 1 | 6 |
| SCHUBERT | | |
| Ave Maria | 1 | 6 |
| Serenade | 1 | 6 |
| BERTHOLD TOURS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso | 1 | 6 |
| Menuetto | 1 | 6 |
| TSCHAIKOWSKY | | |
| Chanson Triste | 1 | 6 |
| Chant sans Paroles | 1 | 6 |
| Andantino (Symphony No. 4) | 3 | 0 |
| ERIC WEBSTER | | |
| Berceuse | 1 | 6 |
| H. DAVAN WETTON | | |
| Andantino in D flat | 1 | 6 |
| H. A. WHEELDON | | |
| Cantilene | 3 | 6 |
| Canzona | 3 | 0 |
| W. WOLSTENHOLME | | |
| Canzona | 3 | 6 |
| Romanza and Allegretto in E flat | 3 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWENTY SHORT AND EASY PIECES

FOR THE ORGAN

SET VI.

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | ADAGIO FROM SEXTETT (OP. 81) | BEETHOVEN |
| 2. | ALLEGRO GRANDIOSO | HUGH BLAIR |
| 3. | LARGO IN E FLAT | E. BUNNETT |
| 4. | MODERATO | GEORGE CALKIN |
| 5. | BERCEUSE | CÉSAR CUI |
| 6. | ADAGIO IN D | OTTO DIENEL |
| 7. | POSTLUDE | EDMONDSTOUNE DUNCAN |
| 8. | IMPROMPTU IN A | A. M. GOODHART |
| 9. | WEDDING MARCH | A. GUILMANT |
| 10. | MARCH FROM "ODE ON ST. CECILIA'S DAY" | HANDEL |
| 11. | LIEDER OHNE WORTE, No. 9 | F. MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY |
| 12. | ALLEGRO IN C | GUSTAV MERKEL |
| 13. | ANDANTE | REISSIGER |
| 14. | POSTLUDE IN F | J. VARLEY ROBERTS |
| 15. | PRELUDE | B. LUARD-SELBY |
| 16. | PRELUDE IN A | HENRY SMART |
| 17. | ANDANTE CON MOTO | CHARLES STEGGALL |
| 18. | ALLEGRETTO GRAZIOSO | BERTHOLD TOURS |
| 19. | COMMUNION IN B FLAT | FERRIS TOZER |
| 20. | CON MOTO | JOHN E. WEST |

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

Cloth, Six Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

THE ENGLISH COUNTRY DANCE

GRADED SERIES

CONTAINING THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DANCES TOGETHER WITH THE TUNES

BY

CECIL J. SHARP

VOL. 1.

BRIGHTON CAMP.
*GALOPEDE.
*NANCY'S FANCY.
*THE BLACK NAG.
*GATHERING PEASCODS.
*RUFTY TUFTY.

VOL. 2.

RIBBON DANCE.
GODDESSES.
*THE MARY AND DOROTHY.
*IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
PICKING UP STICKS.
*HASTE TO THE WEDDING.

VOL. 3.

BONNETS SO BLUE.
THE MAID PEEPED OUT AT THE WINDOW.
CHRISTCHURCH BELLS.
*HEY, BOYS, UP GO WE.
*SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MERRY, MERRY MILKMAIDS.

VOL. 4.

SAGE LEAF.
EPPING FOREST.
CHILDGROVE.
*THE OLD MOLE.
HIT AND MISS.
NEWCASTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS EACH VOLUME.

* The Dances marked with an asterisk may be had for Brass and Military Band.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWELVE COUNTRY DANCE TUNES

COLLECTED BY

CECIL J. SHARP

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS OR MILITARY BAND

By GORDON JACOB

IN THREE SETS

PRICE ... ... 4*s.* 6*d.* EACH.

Separate Parts, 3*d.* each.

SET 1.

THE BUTTERFLY
GALOPEDE.
HASTE TO THE WEDDING.
NANCY'S FANCY.

SET 2.

GATHERING PEASCODS.
RUFTY, TUFTY.
HEY BOYS.
THE BLACK NAG.

SET 3.

IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
THE OLD MOLE.
SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MARY AND DOROTHY.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JUST PUBLISHED

CONCERT EDITION

OF

TALES OF HOFFMANN

OPERA FANTASTIQUE

BY

J. OFFENBACH

(Arranged by MAURICE JACOBSON).

Price 5/- net.

For full particulars write to

CRAMER'S CHORAL LIBRARY

Edited by MARTIN SHAW.

| | | O.N. Tonic. |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | A FAERY SONGGranville Bantock, S.C.T.B. ... | 6d. 4d. |
| 2. | LAMENT FOR MACLEAN OF ARDGOURHeathcote Statham, S.C.T.B. ... | 6d. 4d. |
| 3. | FALERO, LERO, LOO!Vincert Thomas, S.S.C.C. ... | 6d. 3d. |
| 4. | THE WILLOW TREEE. T. Sweeting, S.A.T.B. ... | 4d. 2d. |
| 5. | TWANKYDILLOArr. E. T. Sweeting, S.A.T.B. ... | 4d. 2d. |
| 6. | TURMUT-HOEIN'Arr. E. T. Sweeting, T.T.B. ... | 4d. 2d. |
| 7. | MAN'S MEDLEYVincent Thomas, T.T.B.B. ... | 4d. 2d. |
| 8. | THERE'S NONE TO SOOTHE MY SOUL TO REST (both notations combined.)Ernest Bullock, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 4d. — |
| 9. | SERVICEMartin Shaw, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 4d. — |

Write for Specimen copies to

J. B. CRAMER & CO., LTD., 139, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1.

NATIONAL SONGS

WITH

DESCANTS

SET I. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 271

THE BAY OF BISCAY (English)
A HUNTING WE WILL GO (English)
JOHN PEEL (English)
ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT (Welsh)
SCOTS, WHA HAE (Scottish)
THE OAK AND THE ASH (Scottish)
EARLY ONE MORNING (English)
OH, DEAR! WHAT CAN THE MATTER BE? (English)
THE BRITISH GRENADIERS (English)
THE ASH GROVE (Welsh)
GOOD KING WENCESLAS (Traditional)
THE FIRST NOWELL (Traditional)

SET II. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 275

COME LASSES AND LADS (English)
WI' A HUNDRED PIPERS (Scottish)
DAVID OF THE WHITE ROCK (Welsh)
THE YOUNG MAY MOON (Irish)
THE GOLDEN VANITY (English)
THE FLIGHT OF THE EARLS (Irish)

SET III. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 276

MEETING OF THE WATERS (Irish)
THERE'S NAE LUCK (Scottish)
DRINK TO ME ONLY WITH THINE EYES (English)
LET ERIN REMEMBER (Irish)
THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON (English)
THE BELLS OF ABERDOVEY (Welsh)

SET IV. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 307

THE CAMPBELLS ARE COMIN' (Scottish)
IN DERRY VALE (The Londonderry Air) (Irish)
THE AGINCOURT SONG (English)
ANNIE LAURIE (Scottish)
AUTUMN'S GOLDEN LEAF (English)
SILENT, O MOYLE (Irish)
MINE EYES HAVE SEEN (American)
OFT IN THE STILLY NIGHT (Irish)
I SAW THREE SHIPS (Traditional)
SHEPHERDS! SHAKE OFF YOUR DROWSY SLEEP (Traditional)

(PRICE EIGHTPENCE EACH SET)

(Each Song can be had separately.)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

VOCAL COMPOSITIONS BY EDWARD GERMAN

SONGS

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE. D, E flat, and F ... ... each | | 2 | 0 |
| CHARMING CHLOE. D flat, E flat, and F ... ... each | | 2 | 0 |
| FIRST FRIEND. (Boy Soprano) ... ... ... ... ... | | 2 | 0 |
| HIS LADY. (Mezzo-Soprano) ... ... ... ... ... | | 2 | 0 |
| IT WAS A LOVER AND HIS LASS. G and B flat... each | | 2 | 0 |
| JUST SO SONG BOOK, THE ... ... ... cloth, net | | 7 | 6 |
| LONDON TOWN. C, E flat, and F ... ... ... each | | 2 | 0 |
| LORDING'S DAUGHTER, THE. D minor and F minor ea. | | 2 | 0 |
| MERROW DOWN. (Baritone) ... ... ... ... ... | | 2 | 0 |
| *ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE. (Soprano or Tenor) ... | | 2 | 0 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO. *G minor and A minor each | | 2 | 0 |

PART-SONGS (S.A.T.B.)

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| CHASE, THE ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| IN PRAISE OF NEPTUNE ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| LONDON TOWN ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 4d. | 0 | 6 |
| MY BONNIE LASS SHE SMILETH ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| O LOVELY MAY ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| O PEACEFUL NIGHT ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE (4-part) ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| Do. do. (8-part) ... ... ... ... | | 0 | 6 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 6 |
| SLEEPING ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| SWEET DAY SO COOL ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| THREE KNIGHTS, THE ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| WEEP YOU NO MORE (Sleeping)... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| WHO IS SYLVIA? ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |

MALE VOICES (T.T.B.B.)

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| LONDON TOWN ... ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 6 |
| O PEACEFUL NIGHT (German words, 6d.) ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO ... ... ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 6 |
| SLEEPING ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| THREE KNIGHTS, THE ... ... ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| WEEP YOU NO MORE (Sleeping) ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |

FEMALE OR BOYS' VOICES

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| BEAUTEOUS MORN (S.C.C.) ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE (S. & A.) ... ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| IN PRAISE OF NEPTUNE (Unison) ... ... ... ... | | 0 | 4 |
| *IT WAS A LOVER AND HIS LASS (S. & A.) (Folio, 3s.) | | 0 | 4 |
| Do. ... ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | | |
| MY BONNIE LASS SHE SMILETH (3 Voices) ... ... | | 0 | 4 |
| O LOVELY MAY (S.S.C.) ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| O PEACEFUL NIGHT (3 voices) ... ... ... ,, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| *ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE (S.S.A.) (Folio, 3s.) ,, | 1½d. | 0 | 4 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO (S. & A.) ... ... ,, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| *SHEPHERDS' DANCE (arranged as two-part or Unison Song). From Henry VIII. ... ... Staff Notation | | 0 | 4 |
| Do. Staff and Sol-fa Notations combined | | 0 | 4 |
| Do. Sol-fa only ... ... ... ... | | 0 | 3 |
| String Parts, 3s.; Wind Parts, 4s. 4d.: Full Score, MS. | | | |
| WHO IS SYLVIA (S. & A.) ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, | 3d. | 0 | 4 |

SERVICE, ANTHEM, ETC.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| BREAD OF HEAVEN, ON THEE WE FEED Sol-fa, | 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| GRACE, "NON NOBIS DOMINE" ... ... ... ... | | 0 | 2 |
| Do. do. T.T.B.B. ... ... ... | | 0 | 2 |
| INTERCESSORY HYMN. In E flat and D flat Sol-fa, (Words only, 2s. per 100.) | 3d. | 0 | 3 |
| DITTO (Welsh words). In D flat ... ... ... ,, (Words only, 2s. per 100.) | 3d. | 0 | 3 |
| TE DEUM LAUDAMUS, IN F ... ... ... ... ... | | 0 | 8 |

* Orchestral parts may be had.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.
"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC
BY
J. H. MAUNDER

HARVEST ANTHEMS.

| | Staff Notation. | Tonic Sol-fa. |
|---|---|---|
| Sing to the Lord of Harvest ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| While the earth remaineth ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Blessed be the Name of the Lord ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |

SERVICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| SERVICE IN G ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Benedicite, omnia Opera ... ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Benedictus ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Jubilate ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion ... ... | 10d. | 8d. |
| Pater Noster from the above ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Amen ditto ... ... ... | 1½d. | 1½d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) ... ... | 1s. 4d. | 10d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion ... ... | 8d. | 6d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Te Deum in B flat... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) | 4d. | 2d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |

ORGAN.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Voix Seraphique (for Recitals)... ... ... ... | 2s. 6d. | — |

CHURCH CANTATA.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use) ... | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

JOHN GILPIN
POEM BY
WILLIAM COWPER.
SET FOR FEMALE (OR BOYS') VOICES
IN UNISON.
(Second Part Optional.)
WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT
(Two Violins and Percussion Optional)
BY COLIN TAYLOR.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

New Numbers in the "YORK SERIES."

ALLELUIA HAIL WITH GLADNESS.
J. LAMONT GALBRAITH.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

CROWN OF LIFE.
NOEL HANNENFORD.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

THE SHEFFIELD CATHEDRAL DESCANTS.
(24 Settings of Popular Hymn Tunes.)
By T. W. HANFORTH.
Price 6d.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

UNIQUE

ORGAN RECITAL PIECES

Played by Mr. H. L. Balfour, Mr. G. D. Cunningham, Mr. R. Goss Custard, Mr. H. F. Ellingford, Dr. Alfred Hollins, Mr. Arthur Meale, Mr. Herbert Walton, &c., &c.

Minuet Antique, in D flat, 2*s.*
Marche Héroïque, in E flat, 2*s.* 6*d.*) — H. F. Watling

Bohemesque in G, 2*s.* 6*d.* ...
Rondino in D flat, 2*s.* ... ... — W. Wolstenholme

Toccata in D minor, 2*s.* 6*d.*....
Fantasia in E, 2*s.* 6*d.* ... ... — T. G. Osborn

PUBLISHED IN THE

NATIONAL INSTITUTE EDITION

OF THE WORKS OF

BRITISH BLIND COMPOSERS

BY

RYALLS & JONES, LTD.,

107, GRANGE ROAD, BIRKENHEAD.

London Agents:

EVANS & CO., LTD., 72, Wells Street, W.1.

Obtainable through any Music Dealer.

NOVELLO'S ELEMENTARY MUSIC MANUALS

No.

1.—PART-WRITING FOR BEGINNERS, by J. W. IVIMEY. The Rules tabulated are for the guidance of beginners in the Art of Part-writing. Many of them change from rules to recommendations, when the students become more advanced. Bound in linen covers. Price 8d.

2.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Many elementary students of harmony can satisfactorily add parts to figured basses, but are unable to harmonize even simple melodies. This book gives minute instruction which any student can understand. Part I. Price 2s. 6d.

3.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa), by GEORGE LANE. The Exercises are written in the Treble and Bass Clefs, in order that the Book may be used by Male and Female voices in one class. Suitable for Evening Continuation Schools. Part I. Price 8d.

4.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa). by GEORGE LANE. Part II. Price 8d.

5.—HINTS TO YOUNG VIOLINISTS, by C. EGERTON LOWE. Price 1s. 6d.

6.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Part II. Price 2s. 6d.

7.—ADDITIONAL EXERCISES IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Price 8d.

8.—HINTS ON PIANOFORTE TEACHING (chiefly to Boys), by E. D. RENDALL. Price 2s. 6d.

9.—SCHOOL CHOIR TRAINING, by MARGARET NICHOLLS. A Practical Course of Lessons on Voice Production for the guidance of Teachers of Class Singing. Price 3s.
(The Appendix, published separately: Hints on Part-Singing and Exercises, 3d.; Sol-fa, 3d.)

10.—THE COMPOSITION OF SIMPLE MELODIES, by ROBERT T. WHITE. Price 2s. 6d.

11.—PHYSICAL EXERCISES IN THE INFANT SCHOOL, by MARGARET A. HUGHES. Price 4s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NEW FOREIGN PUBLICATIONS

PIANOFORTE SOLO

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| AURIC.—Petite Suite ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| CHARLES-HENRY.—Le Jouer de trombone ambulant ... | 1 | 6 |
| LAPARRA.—Le Livre de l'Aurore: | | |
| No. 11. Ma nourrice au rouet ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| No. 12. Et nous au clos joli ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| LOURIÉ.—Valse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| —— Marche ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| NABOKOFF.—Short Stories ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| —— Sonate ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 5 | 0 |
| PÉRILHOU.—Conte de Fées ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| RABEY.—Marionettes ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| —— Fleurs de bois ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| SAUGUET.—La Chatte: | | |
| No. 2. Invocation à Aphrodite ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| No. 8. Hymne final ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| TURINA.—Ninerias: | | |
| No. 2. Ce qu on voit sur la Giralda ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| No. 3. Défilé des soldats de plomb ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| No. 5. Danse des poupées ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| No. 8. Jeux ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| —— Verbena Madrilena ... ... ... ... ... ... | 5 | 0 |
| —— Mallorca Suite (complete) ... ... ... ... ... | 5 | 0 |
| No. 2. Une nuit sur la baie de Palma ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| BREVILLE.—2me Sonate ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| MORET.—Une Flûte et un Rossignol dans un parc ... ... | 3 | 6 |

FLUTE AND PIANOFORTE.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| HERMAN.—Les Soirées du Jeune Flûtiste: | | |
| No. 39. Le Carillon (Massenet) ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| SAUGUET.—Sonatine ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 5 | 0 |

VOICE AND PIANOFORTE.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| CARTAN.—Trois chants d'été ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| DELANNOY.—Pâle chanson ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| LAPARRA.—Le Missel Chantant: | | |
| No. 88. Un joli cœur ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| No 89. La Belle de Grancey ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| No. 90. Je plaings le tempo ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| No. 91. Fermez-lui l'huis au visage ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| NABOKOFF.—Chants à la Vierge Marie ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| OLLONE.—Ta voix ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| RODRIGO.—Cantiga ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| SAUGUET.—Six Sonnets de Louise Labé ... ... ... ... | 5 | 0 |

In connection with the SCHUBERT CENTENARY Messrs. Novello & Co. have for sale a number of the volumes of the complete edition of Schubert's works published by Breitkopf & Härtel. The prices of any of the series will be sent on request.

In the same edition they have also for sale volumes of:

BEETHOVEN—Complete works.
BACH—Gesellschaft edition.
HANDEL—Gesellschaft edition.

lists and prices of which will be sent on application.

In addition to their own extensive catalogue, Messrs. Novello & Co. have a large stock of foreign publications, the comprehensive nature of which can be judged by the following list:

PIANOFORTE—Solos, duets, &c., transcriptions and arrangements of all kinds.

VOCAL—Operatic, concert, and classical solos, duets, glees, exercises, vocal scores of operas, oratorios, &c., and orchestral parts.

ORGAN.—Original compositions, transcriptions, and arrangements, in volumes and separately.

HARMONIUM—Duos, trios, quartets, transcriptions, &c.

INSTRUMENTAL—Solos, duets, trios, quartets, &c.

ORCHESTRAL—Scores and parts, miniature scores, pianoforte arrangements, studies, exercises, &c., for all instruments.

Inquiries for little-known or unknown works will be welcomed, and any compositions not in stock can be obtained at short notice.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Years Ahead

The past is present only in careful, painstaking construction ; for the Chappell Piano is the really modern instrument embodying the inventive genius of the present age, and designed exclusively for to-day and the future. In many important features, the Chappell Piano is far ahead of the times, and will be "up-to-date" for some time to come. That is why the Chappell is becoming ever more and more the Piano chosen by the great musicians.

THE CHAPPELL PIANO CO. LTD.
50, NEW BOND ST., LONDON,
W.1.

CHAPPELL

"DIX PIECES GAIES"
BY
N. TCHEREPNINE
FOR PIANOFORTE SOLO

Price Three Shillings net

MR. ARTHUR ALEXANDER, Professor at the Royal College of Music, writes :

"I feel I would like to send you some words of appreciation of the little book of pieces "Dix Pièces Gaies" by Tcherepnine recently published by your firm.

"In my opinion these pieces are amongst the very few recent works that one can use with absolute satisfaction at almost all stages of a pupil's career. The composer, while using deliberately limited means, has yet contrived to give us pieces, not only of considerable musical feeling in a modern idiom, but also, more importantly, pieces that are exceptionally useful in the acquisition and retaining of most of the main principles of modern technique in their simplest form.

"Also, they seem to me invaluable as studies in rhythm."

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD.,
11, Great Marlborough Street, London, W.1.

London:—Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1, Tuesday, May 1, 1928.

In Derry Vale

(THE LONDONDERRY AIR)

WITH DESCANT

Words by W. G. Rothery Arranged by Geoffrey Shaw

London: Novello and Company, Limited: New York: The H. W. Gray Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.

Andante con moto legato
mp
In Der-ry vale, be-side the sing-ing
Doh = E♭
Andante con moto mp legato riv-er, So oft I strayed, ah, ma-ny years a-go, And culled at morn the gold-en daf-fo-dil-lies That came with Spring to set the world a-glow. Oh, Der-ry vale, my thoughts are ev-er turn-ing To your broad

Copyright, 1926, by Novello and Company, Limited MADE IN ENGLAND stream and fai - ry - cir-cled lea,

For your green isles my ex-iled heart is yearn-ing, So far a - way . . a - cross the sea.
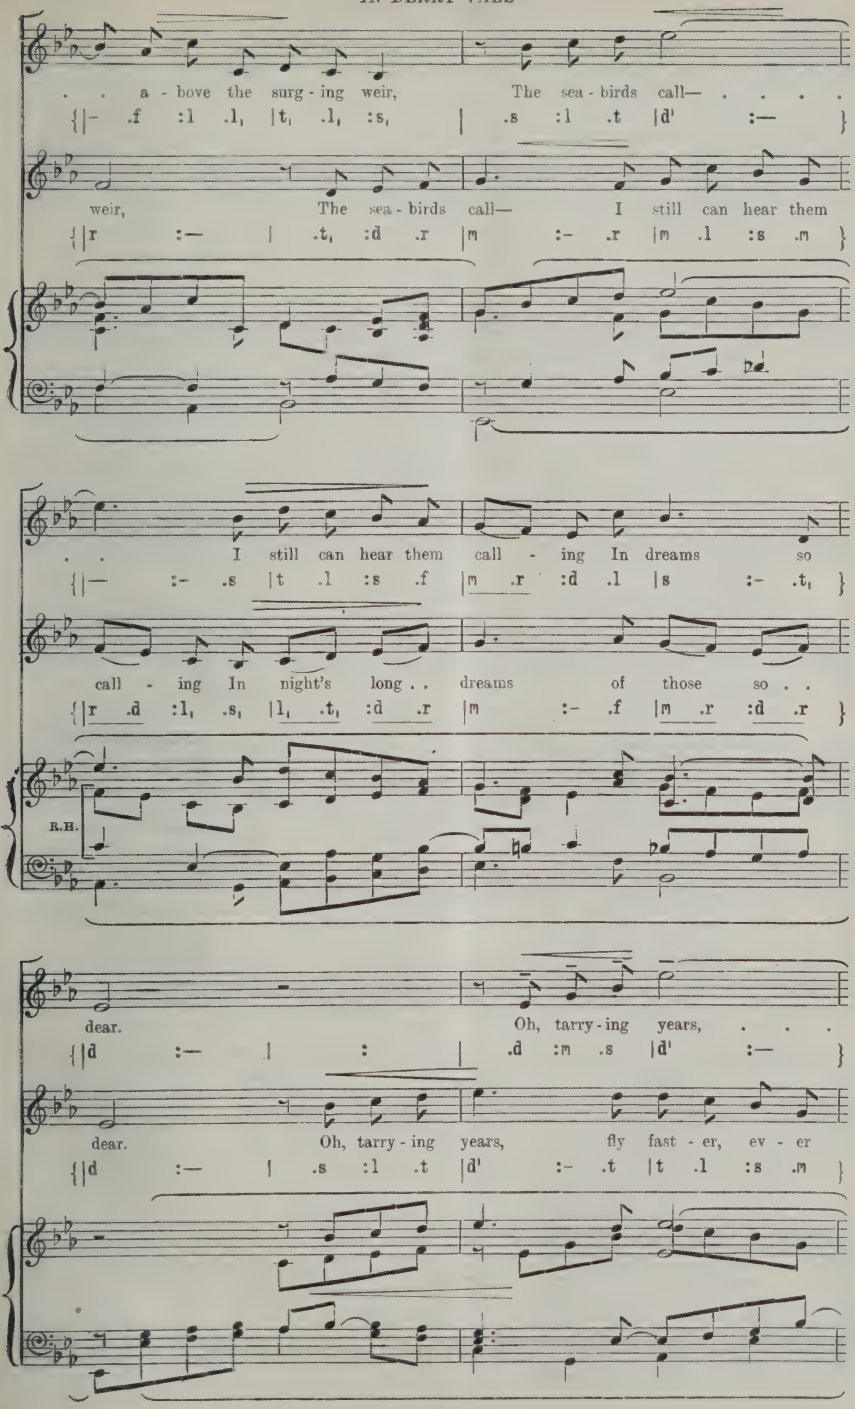
DESCANT
In Der - ry vale . . . .
MELODY
(The Melody slightly predominant)
In Der - ry vale a - mid the Foyle's dark
. . . a - mid dark wa - ters, The sal - mon leap . . . .
wa - ters, The sal - mon leap a - bove the surg - ing



. . a - bove the surg - ing weir, The sea - birds call— . . . .
weir, The sea - birds call— I still can hear them
. . I still can hear them call - ing In dreams so call - ing In night's long . . dreams of those so . .
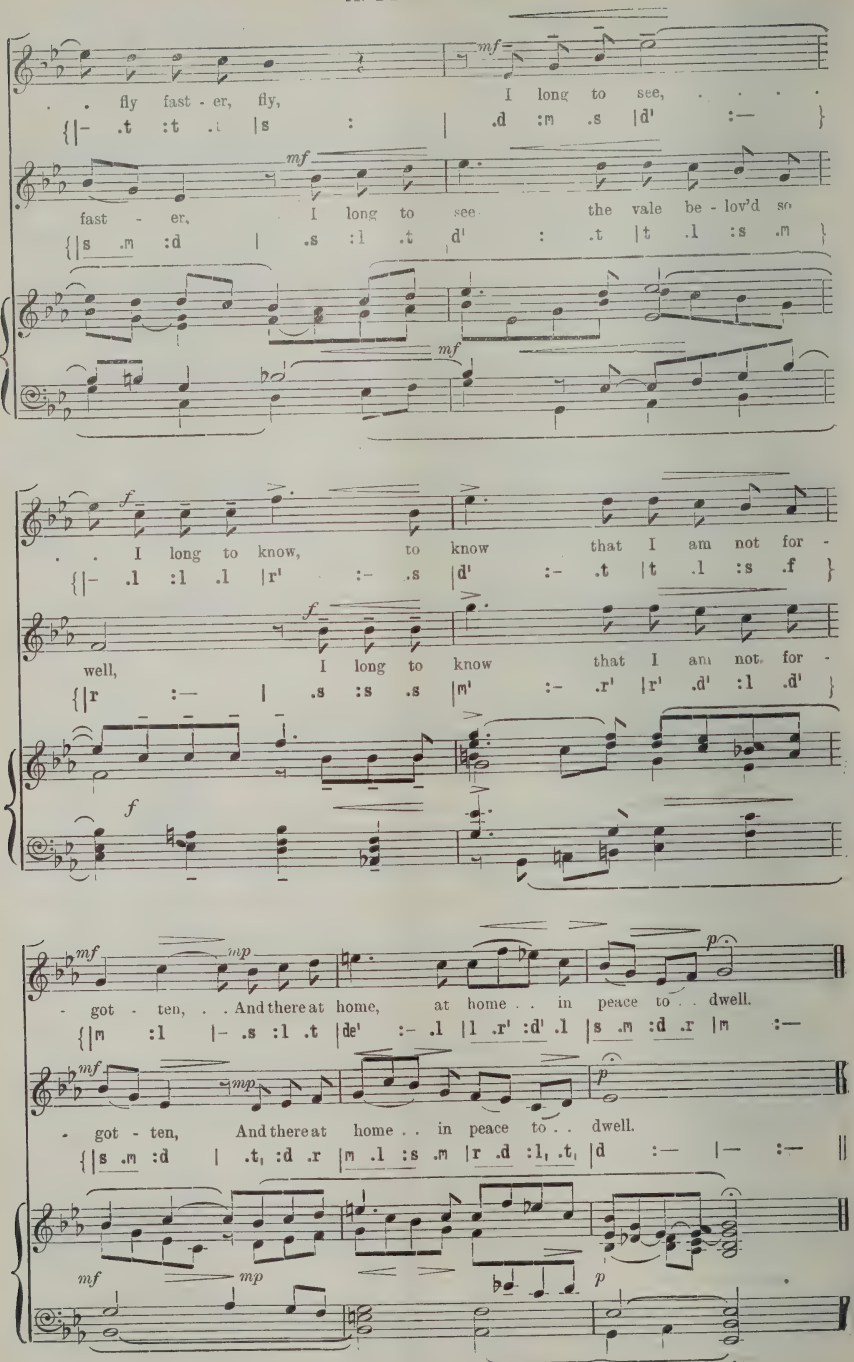
R.H.
dear. Oh, tarry - ing years, . . .
dear. Oh, tarry - ing years, fly fast - er, ev - er



mf
. . fly fast - er, fly, I long to see, . . . .
{|- .t :t .t |s : | .d :m .s |d' :— }
mf
fast - er, I long to see the vale be - lov'd so
{|s .m :d | .s :l .t d' : .t |t .l :s .m }
mf
f
. . I long to know, to know that I am not for -
{|- .l :l .l |r' :- .s |d' :- .t |t .l :s .f }
f
well, I long to know that I am not for -
{|r :— | .s :s .s |m' :- .r' |r' .d' :l .d' }
f mf mp p
- got - ten, . . And there at home, at home . . in peace to . . dwell.
{|m :l |- .s :l .t |de' :- .l |l .r' :d' .l |s .m :d .r |m :—
mf mp p
- got - ten, And there at home . . in peace to . . dwell.
{|s .m :d | .t, :d .r |m .l :s .m |r .d :l, .t, |d :— |— :— ||
mf mp p

No. 1435. THERE IS A LADY SWEET AND KIND.—Eric H. Thiman. Price (4*d.*).

NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF PART-SONGS, GLEES, AND MADRIGALS.

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Our Native Land ... | Reichardt | 3d. |
| 2 | Cricketers' Song (T.T.B.B.) | Macfarren | 3d. |
| 3 | Boating Song ... ... ... | Monk | 3d. |
| 4 | Song of the Railroads | Macfarren | 4d. |
| 5 | Good-morrow, fair ladies | Morley | 3d. |
| 6 | Home Fairy (T.T.B.B.) ... | Winter | 3d. |
| 7 | The Wreath ... ... ... | Benedict | 3d. |
| 8 | Countryman's Song ... | Rimbault | 4d. |
| 9 | Student's Greeting (T.T.B.B.) | Berner | 3d. |
| 10 | Magdalen College Song ... | Monk | 3d. |
| 11 | Integer Vitæ (T.T.B.B.) | Flemming | 6d. |
| 12 | Orpheus with his lute | Macfarren | |
| 13 | Harvest Song ... ... | Macfarren | 3d. |
| 14 | Come, heavy sleep ... | Douland | 3d. |
| 15 | Fisherman's Song ... | Rimbault | 3d. |
| 16 | In all thy need ... ... | Douland | 3d. |
| 17 | All among the barley ... | Stirling | 3d. |
| 18 | When icicles hang ... | Macfarren | 3d. |
| 19 | Jolly Cricket Ball ... ... | Monk | 3d. |
| 20 | Emigrant's Song ... | Macfarren | 3d. |
| 21 | Shepherd's Song ... ... | Brewer | 4d. |
| 22 | Pedlar's Song ... ... | Douland | 3d. |
| 23 | Fairies' Song (S.S.S.S.) ... | Bishop | 8d. |
| 24 | June (S.S.A.) ... ... ... | F. Dun | 3d. |
| 25 | Awake! the starry | Mendelssohn | 3d. |
| 26 | Fair Flower ... ... ... | Rimbault | 3d. |
| 27 | O happy he who ... ... | Gastoldi | 3d. |
| 28 | Green Leaves ... ... ... | Taylor | 3d. |
| 29 | Dirge ... ... ... ... | S. Wesley | 3d. |
| 30 | Angler's Trysting Tree ... | Corfe | 4d. |
| 31 | The Dream ... ... ... ... | Stewart | 3d. |
| 32 | God speed the Plough ... | Richter | 3d. |
| 33 | There is a ladie sweete ... | Ford | |
| 34 | Football Song ... ... ... | Monk | 4d. |
| 35 | Haymakers' Song ... ... | Stewart | 4d. |
| 36 | Come away, Death ... | Macfarren | 4d. |
| 37 | Old May-day, in A ... | Benedict | 2d. |
| 38 | Invocation to Sleep ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 39 | A Night Song ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 40 | Dirge for the faithful lover | ,, | 2d. |
| 41 | A Drinking Song (T.T.B.B.) | ,, | 4d. |
| 42 | Sylvan pleasures ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 43 | Consolation ... ... ... | H. Smart | 2d. |
| 44 | Good-night, thou glorious Sun | ,, | 2d. |
| 45 | Hunting Song ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 46 | Lady, rise, sweet Morn's | ,, | 2d. |
| 47 | Summer Morning ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 48 | The Sea King ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 49 | Orpheus with his lute | Macfarren | 2d. |
| 50 | When Icicles hang ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 51 | Come away, Death (S.A.T.T.B.) | ,, | 4d. |
| 52 | When Daisies pied ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 53 | Who is Sylvia ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 54 | Fear no more the heat ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 55 | Blow, blow, thou winter wind | ,, | 4d. |
| 56 | The Belfry Tower ... | J.L. Hatton | 2d. |
| 57 | England ... ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 58 | Come, celebrate the May ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 59 | Song to Pan ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 60 | The Indian Maid... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 61 | The Pearl Divers ... ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 62 | Robin Goodfellow | G.A. Macfarren | 4d. |
| 63 | Break, break on thy cold grey | ,, | 2d. |
| 64 | Echoes (The Splendour falls) | ,, | 2d. |
| 65 | Song of the Railroads | ,, | 2d. |
| 66 | Christmas ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 67 | Adieu, Love, Adieu ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 68 | Sir Knight, Sir Knight | Macirone | 2d. |
| 69 | The Wounded Cupid | ,, | 2d. |
| 70 | Woman's smile ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 71 | Autolycus' Song ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 72 | Footsteps of Angels ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 73 | The Sun shines fair ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 74 | The Pilgrims ... ... | H. Leslie | 2d. |
| 75 | My soul to God ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 76 | Awake, the flow'rs unfold | ,, | 2d. |
| 77 | How sweet the moonlight | ,, | 2d. |
| 78 | Land, Ho! ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 79 | Up, up, ye Dames ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 80 | Thine eyes so bright ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 81 | All is not gold ... ... | Westbrook | 4d. |
| 82 | Hark how the birds ... | H. Lahee | 4d. |
| 83 | All ye woods (S.S.A.T.B.) | ,, | 2d. |
| 84 | My love is fair (S.A.T.B.B.) | H. Leslie | 2d. |
| 85 | Charm me asleep (S.S.A.T.B.B.) | ,, | 4d. |
| 86 | When twilight dews ... | H. Hiles | 2d. |

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 87 | A Finland love song... | H. Hiles | 2d. |
| 88 | Evening ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 89 | To the Morning Wind | ,, | 4d. |
| 90 | To Daffodils ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 91 | Summer longings ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 92 | Night, lovely Night ... | F. Berger | 2d. |
| 93 | Essay, my Heart ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 94 | Childhood's melody ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 95 | Now ... ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 96 | Sunset ... ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 97 | Arise, the sunbeams hail | ,, | 4d. |
| 98 | Night winds that ... | J. B. Calkin | 2d. |
| 99 | Breathe soft, ye Winds ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 100 | My lady is so wondrous fair | ,, | 2d. |
| 101 | Chivalry of Labour (S.S.A.T.B.) | ,, | 6d. |
| 102 | Come, fill, my boys (A.T.T.B.) | ,, | 4d. |
| 103 | Echoes ... ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 104 | Phœbus ... ... ... | J. Barnby | 2d. |
| 105 | Luna ... ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 106 | A Wife's Song ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 107 | Home they brought... | ,, | 2d. |
| 108 | Annie Lee ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 109 | Starry Crowns of Heaven | ,, | 2d. |
| 110 | The Wind ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 111 | The Skylark ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 112 | The Sand's of Dee | G.A. Macfarren | 2d. |
| 113 | Alton Locke's Song... | ,, | 2d. |
| 114 | The Starlings ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 115 | The Three Fishers ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 116 | The World's Age ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 117 | Sing heigh ho! ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 118 | Fairy Song... | ...A. Zimmermann | 2d. |
| 119 | Good-Night ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 120 | Gone for ever ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 121 | Flowers ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 122 | To Daffodils ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 123 | Good Morrow ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 124 | Sigh no more, ladies | Macfarren | 2d. |
| 125 | You spotted snakes (S.S.A.A.) | ,, | 4d. |
| 126 | Take, oh take those lips away | ,, | 2d. |
| 127 | It was a lover and his lass | ,, | 6d. |
| 128 | O mistress mine ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 129 | Under the greenwood tree | ,, | 2d. |
| 130 | Hark, hark the ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 131 | Tell me where is fancy bred | ,, | 2d. |
| 132 | The Violet ... ... ... | H. Leslie | 4d. |
| 133 | One morning sweet in May | ,, | 4d. |
| 134 | Daylight is fading ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 135 | Down in a pretty valley | ,, | 2d. |
| 136 | The Primrose ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 137 | Arise, sweet love ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 138 | 'Tis break of day ... | H. Smart | 3d. |
| 139 | My true love hath my heart | ,, | 3d. |
| 140 | Doth not my lady come | ,, | 2d. |
| 141 | Spring Song ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 142 | The Curfew ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 143 | Hear, sweet spirit ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 144 | Spring Voices ... ... | S. Reay | 4d. |
| 145 | Waken, lords and ladies gay | ,, | 4d. |
| 146 | As it fell upon a day... | ,, | 4d. |
| 147 | Huntsman, rest ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 148 | 'Tis May upon the mountain | ,, | 4d. |
| 149 | Take, oh take those lips away | ,, | 2d. |
| 150 | The Rainy Day... | ... A. Sullivan | 2d. |
| 151 | Oh, hush thee, my babie | ,, | 4d. |
| 152 | Evening ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 153 | Joy to the Victors ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 154 | Parting gleams ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 155 | Echoes ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 156 | Spring ... ... ... | W. Macfarren | 2d. |
| 157 | Summer ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 158 | Autumn ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 159 | Winter ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 160 | You stole my love ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 161 | Dainty love... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 162 | Drops of Rain ... | ...J. Lemmens | 2d. |
| 163 | The Fairy King... | ,, | 4d. |
| 164 | The Light of Life ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 165 | Oh, welcome him ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 166 | Sunshine through the | ,, | 4d. |
| 167 | The Corn Field... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 168 | Wake! to the hunting | H. Smart | 2d. |
| 169 | Dost thou idly ask ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 170 | A Psalm of Life ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 171 | Only Thou ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 172 | I prithee send me back | ,, | 2d. |

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 173 | The Moon ... ... ... | H. Smart | 4d. |
| 174 | A Spring Song ... | ...Ciro Pinsuti | 4d. |
| 175 | An Autumn Song ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 176 | The Two Spirits ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 177 | The Crusaders... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 178 | The Caravan ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 179 | Stradella ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 180 | When evening's twilight | Hatton | 2d. |
| 181 | Absence ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 182 | April showers ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 183 | The red, red rose ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 184 | Beware, beware ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 185 | The Sailor's Song ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 186 | Good-Night ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 187 | Blythe is the bird ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 188 | Stars of the summer night | ,, | 2d. |
| 189 | The hemlock-tree ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 190 | Jack Frost ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 191 | I loved her ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 192 | The Village Blacksmith | ,, | 2d. |
| 193 | Bait, The (Come live with me) | ,, | 2d. |
| 194 | Softly fall the shades of | ,, | 4d. |
| 195 | Auburn (Sweet village) | ,, | 4d. |
| 196 | Bird of the wilderness | ,, | 4d. |
| 197 | The Summer gale ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 198 | I met her in the quiet lane | ,, | 3d. |
| 199 | If thou art sleeping ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 200 | Spring Song ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 201 | Good wishes ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 202 | Parting and Meeting ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 203 | Whether kissed by sunbeams | ,, | 4d. |
| 204 | The roses are blushing | ,, | 2d. |
| 205 | The Rivals ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 206 | The village dance ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 207 | Song of the Gipsy maidens | ,, | 2d. |
| 208 | The Waterfall ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 209 | Over hill, over dale ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 210 | Love me little, love me long | ,, | 4d. |
| 211 | Going a-maying ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 212 | See, the rooks are homeward | ,, | 4d. |
| 213 | Sweet Lady Moon ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 214 | Hark, the Convent bells are | ,, | 4d. |
| 215 | When evening's (male voices) | ,, | 2d. |
| 216 | Warrior's Song ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 217 | Absence ... ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 218 | April showers ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 219 | The red, red rose ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 220 | Beware, beware ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 221 | The happiest land ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 222 | The Sailor's Song ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 223 | Busy, curious fly ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 224 | Good-night, beloved ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 225 | Bacchanalian Song ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 226 | Stars of the summer... | ,, | 2d. |
| 227 | King Witlaf's Song ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 228 | Tars' Song ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 229 | The hemlock-tree ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 230 | Jack Frost ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 231 | The Lye ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 232 | I loved her ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 233 | Village Blacksmith ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 234 | The Letter ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 235 | Shall I wasting in ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 236 | Way to build a boat ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 237 | I loved a lass ... ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 238 | The Lifeboat ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 239 | Shepherd's farewell... | H. Smart | 2d. |
| 240 | The waves' reproof ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 241 | Ave Maria ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 242 | Spring ... ... ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 243 | Morning ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 244 | Hymn to Cynthia ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 245 | Cradle Song ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 246 | The joys of Spring ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 247 | Dream, baby, dream | ,, | 2d. |
| 248 | A song for the Seasons | ,, | 4d. |
| 249 | O say not that my heart | ,, | 3d. |
| 250 | Love and mirth ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 251 | Sweet Vesper hymn | ,, | 4d. |
| 252 | Crocuses and Snowdrops | ,, | 2d. |
| 253 | Stars of the summer night | ,, | 2d. |
| 254 | Wind thy horn... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 255 | The land of wonders ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 256 | Ye little birds that sit and sing | ,, | 3d. |
| 257 | How soft the shades of | ,, | 2d. |
| 258 | How sweet is summer | ,, | 3d. |

MADE IN ENGLAND.

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 878 | Bridal Song ... ... | H. Leslie | 6d. |
| 879 | Resurgam ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 880 | We roam and rule the sea ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 881 | Lullaby of Life... | ,, | 6d. |
| 882 | The Rainbow ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 883 | Kind Words ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 884 | When he who adores thee Craddock | | 3d. |
| 885 | God save the King Arr. by E. Elgar | | 4d. |
| 886 | Irish Wedding Song J. B. Rogers | | 4d. |
| 887 | The Harvest Rose T. R. G. Jozé | | 4d. |
| 888 | O Sullivan Mór... | ,, | 3d. |
| 889 | When through life ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 890 | A Lament ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 891 | The English Girl ... | B. Steane | 4d. |
| 892 | A Dream of Calm ... | H. Leslie | 6d. |
| 893 | Cottager to her Infant | Akerman | 3d. |
| 894 | The Long Day Closes | A Sullivan | 3d. |
| 895 | The Message-Bringers | Warner | 6d. |
| 896 | The Flight of Summer | F. Tozer | 4d. |
| 897 | So saith my fair ... | L. Marenzio | 4d. |
| 898 | 'Twas on a bank of daisies | Hullah | 4d. |
| 899 | Come, let me take thee ... | J. Pullein | 3d. |
| 900 | As through the land ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 901 | Weary wind of the West | E. Elgar | 4d. |
| 902 | O Gentle Sleep ... | H. Leslie | 6d. |
| 903 | A Spring Song ... | A. D. Culley | 4d. |
| 904 | Now is the month of maying | Holst | 4d. |
| 905 | Matin Song ... | W. H. Bell | 3d. |
| 906 | Charm me asleep | J. B. McEwen | 4d. |
| 907 | Coronach... | G. A. Macfarren | 3d. |
| 908 | Where are you going to | F. Romer | 4d. |
| 909 | Lilian ... | John Pullein | 3d. |
| 910 | If I had but two little ... | Barnett | 4d. |
| 911 | Capture of Cremona (arr. by) | Jozé | 4d. |
| 912 | Fly not yet ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 913 | After the Battle ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 914 | 'Twas one of those dreams ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 915 | Love and Beauty | W. H. Bell | 4d. |
| 916 | I loved a Lass ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 917 | Woodmen, Shepherds | West | 4d. |
| 918 | Lacking my love | John E. West | 4d. |
| 919 | O sleep, fond fancy ... | J. Benet | 3d. |
| 920 | The Heroes ... | F. H. Cowen | 6d. |
| 921 | My love on an island story E. Faning | | 4d. |
| 922 | Let me the canakin clink | McEwen | 6d. |
| 923 | Away to the Woodlands | Warner | 4d. |
| 924 | The village choir ... | E. Cutler | 4d. |
| 925 | A Song of Summer | Moellendorff | 4d. |
| 926 | Night Whispers ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 927 | The Poet's complaint John E. West | | 4d. |
| 928 | When flow'ry Meadows Palestrina | | 2d. |
| 929 | Sir Patrick Spens (8-part) | Pearsall | 6d. |
| 930 | I can but love thee | P. Cornelius | 4d. |
| 931 | Welcome Spring ... | H. Leslie | 2d. |
| 932 | The Year of Life | D. Protheroe | 4d. |
| 933 | Blwyddyn Bywyd ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 934 | Up Hill ... ... | C. H. Lloyd | 4d. |
| 935 | Hard by a fountain | H. Waelrent | 2d. |
| 936 | Cradle Song ... | Arthur Stenz | 3d. |
| 937 | O Peaceful Night | E. German | 4d. |
| 938 | Vagabonds ... | Eaton Faning | 8d. |
| 939 | The Smith ... | R. Schumann | 3d. |
| 940 | Song to Pan ... | H. W. Wareing | 4d. |
| 941 | Music all Powerful T. F. Walmisley | | 3d. |
| 942 | Hark, Jolly Shepherds | Hathaway | 3d. |
| 943 | Adieu, sweet Amaryllis ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 944 | In praise of Song C. H. H. Parry | | 6d. |
| 945 | Come sleep ... | A. G. Wathall | 4d. |
| 946 | Hark, how the birds ... | Wareing | 4d. |
| 947 | Thou didst delight my eyes | Holst | 3d. |
| 948 | The sun is bright H. Elliot Button | | 3d. |
| 949 | Sweet content ... | W. G. Alcock | 4d. |
| 950 | Sir Harold the hunter John E. West | | 6d. |
| 951 | Sweet bird of Hope | H. M. Higgs | 4d. |
| 952 | The Heroes rest | Peter Cornelius | 4d. |
| 953 | Dear in death ... | C. H. Lloyd | 3d. |
| 954 | God in the thunderstorm F. Schubert | | 4d. |
| 955 | Under the greenwood tree. | Opilvy | 4d. |
| 956 | Hymn to the Eternal | F. Schubert | 4d. |
| 957 | Spring ... ... ... | J. Müller | 4d. |
| 958 | The tear ... | H. W. Wareing | 4d. |
| 959 | O Death ! thou art ... | Cornelius | 6d. |
| 960 | The Angel's greeting ... | J. Brahms | 4d. |
| 961 | Mary and the Boatman | ,, | 3d. |
| 962 | Mary's wandering ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 963 | The Hunter ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 964 | A Prayer to Mary ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 965 | Mary Magdalene ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 966 | In praise of Mary ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 967 | Christmas Song | M. Prætorius | 3d. |
| 968 | Awake, Awake ... | G. Bantock | 4d. |
| 969 | Evening has lost her throne ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 970 | O what a lovely magic hath ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 971 | All for my true love | H. D. Wetton | 4d. |
| 972 | Amintor's well-a-day John E. West | | 4d. |
| 973 | As Amoret with Phillis sat ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 974 | How sweet the moonlight E. Faning | | 4d. |
| 975 | Lullaby ... ... | A. R. Mote | 4d. |
| 976 | Waken, Lords and Ladies | Gilbert | 4d. |
| 977 | Surrender of the soul | Cornelius | 6d. |
| 978 | A baby's feet ... | C. H. Lloyd | 4d. |
| 979 | Troll the bowl ... John B. McEwen | | 4d. |
| 980 | Throne of mercy ... | Cornelius | 6d. |
| 981 | At her fair hands | James Elliott | 6d. |

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 982 | If love his arrows shoot | Wareing | 4d. |
| 983 | If to my lady fair | John Pointer | 4d. |
| 984 | Bendeemer's Stream ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 985 | The whispering waves | C. Wood | 3d. |
| 986 | I call and I call ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 987 | Wanderer's night song | G. Wood | 3d. |
| 988 | Welcome to Spring | Moellendorff | 6d. |
| 989 | Footsteps of Angels | J. Holbrooke | 4d. |
| 990 | She 's up and gone ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 991 | Italian Salad ... | R. Genée | 6d. |
| 992 | Excelsior ... | M. W. Balfe | 6d. |
| 993 | The Swords o' Dee ... | Oliver King | 3d. |
| 994 | To Daffodils ... | Harold E. Darke | 3d. |
| 995 | A wink from Hesper | Wendt | 3d. |
| 996 | A Ballad ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 997 | Prithee, why so pale | John Stainer | 4d. |
| 998 | Mopsa ... ... | C. Lee Williams | 4d. |
| 999 | Comfort in tears | Peter Cornelius | 6d. |
| 1000 | Evening scene... | Edward Elgar | 6d. |
| 1001 | Why should Thy face | Cornelius | 3d. |
| 1002 | By the waters of Babylon ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1003 | Jerusalem ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1004 | Morning... | G. Molyneux Palmer | 3d. |
| 1005 | You gave me your heart | S. Webbe | 3d. |
| 1006 | Song of the Pedlar ... | Williams | 4d. |
| 1007 | Come to me, gentle sleep | Cowen | 4d. |
| 1008 | The Tempest ... | P. Cornelius | 6d. |
| 1009 | Love and Youth ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1010 | The Primrose ... | John E. West | 3d. |
| 1011 | Amaryllis I did woo ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1012 | Marriage of the Frog... | Brewer | 4d. |
| 1013 | Night her shade | Goldschmidt | 3d. |
| 1014 | The Shepherd's Song | Wareing | 4d. |
| 1015 | The Shrouds | Moellendorff | 4d. |
| 1016 | Ballade of Midsummer | Wendt | 4d. |
| 1017 | Ballade of Spring ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1018 | Tell me, thou soul ... | H. Brian | 4d. |
| 1019 | My sweet sweeting ... | Simson | 4d. |
| 1020 | Allen-a-dale ... | John B. McEwen | 4d. |
| 1021 | In the Garden ... | C. Lee Williams | 3d. |
| 1022 | The Queen of May | John Stainer | 4d. |
| 1023 | The Trysting Place ... | J. Brahms | 4d. |
| 1024 | Dry those fair, those crystal | West | 3d. |
| 1025 | The Heroes ... | J. Holbrooke | 4d. |
| 1026 | Justice (8 voices) ... | Hathaway | 8d. |
| 1027 | Weep you no more ... | B. Johnson | 3d. |
| 1028 | Love ... ... | Edward Elgar | 6d. |
| 1029 | We must not part ... | H. Willan | 3d. |
| 1030 | Fain would I change... | Williams | 3d. |
| 1031 | A Lament ... | John E. West | 3d. |
| 1032 | Come with me, fairest | J. Brahms | 4d. |
| 1033 | Oh maiden dearest ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1034 | Keel Row (arr. by) | T. F. Dunhill | 3d. |
| 1035 | Mother's Lamentation ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1036 | The Counsel ... | H. F. Simson | 3d. |
| 1037 | Allan Water (arranged) ... | ... | 3d. |
| 1038 | My heart is sair ... | ... | 3d. |
| 1039 | Annie Laurie ... | ... | 3d. |
| 1040 | Drink to me only with (arranged) | | 3d. |
| 1041 | Three fishers went sailing | Rogers | 6d. |
| 1042 | The river floweth strong ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1043 | The Storm ... ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1043* | Ditto Welsh Words ... | | 6d. |
| 1044 | The Battle of the Baltic | Lloyd | 6d. |
| 1045 | Now the golden morn ... | West | 3d. |
| 1046 | Memories (S.A.T.B.) ... | H. Leslie | 4d. |
| 1047 | Hymn of Trust | A. Zimmermann | 3d. |
| 1048 | The three fishers ... | Oliver King | 8d. |
| 1049 | Who rides for the King | Somerville | 4d. |
| 1050 | To Zante ... | J. Holbrooke | 4d. |
| 1051 | Welcome, Spring (1, 2) | Schubert | 4d. |
| 1052 | Ditto (Nos. 3, 4, 5) | ,, | 4d. |
| 1053 | Ditto (Nos. 6, 7) | ,, | 4d. |
| 1054 | Ditto (Nos. 8, 9, 10) | ,, | 4d. |
| 1055 | Ditto (No. 11) | ,, | 4d. |
| 1056 | There is sweet music | E. Elgar | 6d. |
| 1057 | Deep in my soul ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1058 | O wild West wind ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1059 | Owls (An Epitaph) ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1060 | Sleep ... | J. W. G. Hathaway | 3d. |
| 1061 | Let the bells ring ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1062 | On Himalay ... | G. Bantock | 8d. |
| 1063 | Stars of the summer night | H. Brian | 8d. |
| 1064 | Young Herchard... | R. Boughton | 4d. |
| 1065 | Tender and Pure ... | J. Brahms | 4d. |
| 1066 | The hunter went a-riding ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1067 | The Naiades ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1068 | To the Holy Martyr ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1069 | The White Dove ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1070 | O Jesus, tender Shepherd ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1071 | Saint Raphael ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1072 | Now is my Chloris ... ... | F. Idle | 4d. |
| 1073 | Promise... ... ... | ...James Lyon | 4d. |
| 1074 | An Empire Song | A. C. Mackenzie | 4d. |
| 1075 | To Daffodils ... ... | H. J. King | 4d. |
| 1076 | Sea-Drift ... | S. Coleridge-Taylor | 8d. |
| 1077 | A Lullaby ... ... | John B. Lott | 4d. |
| 1078 | The Curfew... ... | J. W. Elliott | 4d. |
| 1079 | Lovely Night ... | F. X. Chwatal | 2d. |
| 1080 | In Absence ... ... ... | ...D. Buck | 3d. |
| 1081 | Departure ... ... ... | ... F. Abt | 3d. |
| 1082 | Evening... ... ... | L. de Call | 3d. |
| 1083 | The Three Chafers ... | H. Trühn | 2d. |
| 1084 | Tears, idle tears ... | E. Adkins | 4d. |

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1085 | O Most Holy One ... ... ... ... | | 2d. |
| 1086 | Farewell, thou lovely ... | F. Abt | 2d. |
| 1087 | The Chapel ... ... ... | C. Kreutzer | 4d. |
| 1088 | Hail to the Chief ... | F. Schubert | 3d. |
| 1089 | Vineta ... ... ... ... | Franz Abt | 4d. |
| 1090 | The Sabbath Call ... | C. Kreutzer | 2d. |
| 1091 | The Angel's Call ... ... | Viotta | 2d. |
| 1092 | The Two Roses ... ... | Werner | 3d. |
| 1093 | The Northman's Song | F. Kücken | 3d. |
| 1094 | The Sheep Shearing (arr.) | Sharp | 4d. |
| 1095 | By a gentle river laid ... | West | 4d. |
| 1096 | Know ye the land ... ... | Spohr | 4d. |
| 1097 | Old Affection ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 1098 | God rules alone ... ... ... | J. Raff | 3d. |
| 1099 | Lover's wraith (arr. by) | J. Brahms | 4d. |
| 1100 | Merry time of maying ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1101 | Morning Song ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1102 | Death, the Reaper ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1103 | Angelic hunter ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1104 | Upwards ... ... ... ... | Spohr | 4d. |
| 1105 | At Andernach ... ... ... | F. Abt | 4d. |
| 1106 | Lord, I pray Thee ... | Kalliwoda | 2d. |
| 1107 | The Black Monk ... | R. Boughton | 4d. |
| 1108 | Men of Harlech ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1109 | A Christmas greeting ... | E. Elgar | 8d. |
| 1110 | Sleep ... ... ... ... | R. H. Walthew | 2d. |
| 1111 | Milton ! thou should'st | Bullivant | 6d. |
| 1112 | Where the Bee sucks ... | Arne | 2d. |
| 1113 | To a Bee ... | T. W. Stephenson | 4d. |
| 1114 | Phyllis is my only joy ... | West | 4d. |
| 1115 | The pride of Youth ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1116 | Ye mariners of England | H. Leslie | 6d. |
| 1117 | Sorrow's tears ... | ...P. Cornelius | 3d. |
| 1118 | Land of beauty ... | Mendelssohn | 2d. |
| 1119 | Farewell meeting ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1120 | Dim and grey appear ... | F. Abt | 4d. |
| 1121 | A forest scene ... ... | H. Goetz | 4d. |
| 1122 | Calm is the Lake ... ... | F. Abt | 4d. |
| 1123 | O Fatherland ... ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1124 | Rest, dearest, rest ... | F. Kücken | 4d. |
| 1125 | Every rustling tree ... | Kuhlau | 2d. |
| 1126 | Hunter's Farewell | Mendelssohn | 4d. |
| 1127 | The dear little Shamrock (arr.) ... | | 3d. |
| 1128 | Spirit of Night ... ... | G. Bantock | 8d. |
| 1129 | Out of the darkness ... ... | ,, | 8d. |
| 1130 | He left the upland lawns... | Lloyd | 4d. |
| 1131 | In a harbour grene | C. H. H. Parry | 3d. |
| 1132 | Sweet day, so cool ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1133 | Prithee why? ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1134 | Sorrow and pain ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1135 | Wrong not, sweet Empress ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1136 | My delight and thy delight ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1137 | The golden year... ... | H. Leslie | 8d. |
| 1138 | Fairy spring | Meyer-Olbersleben | 3d. |
| 1139 | Day dreams... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1140 | Thrush sings ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1141 | By woodland and wayside | Franz | 3d. |
| 1142 | In a lazy summer noon ... | Franz | 3d. |
| 1143 | Come forth, the summer's ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1144 | When the world is gay | Franz | 4d. |
| 1145 | Chloe, that dear ... ... | H. Willan | 3d. |
| 1146 | Empire of the sea ... ... | Harriss | 6d. |
| 1147 | Chorus of Empire ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1148 | A Hymn of the Homeland | Sullivan | 10d. |
| 1149 | The Snow ... ... | Edward Elgar | 8d. |
| 1150 | Fly, singing bird ... ... | ,, | 8d. |
| 1151 | Thuringian Volkslied ... ... | Abt | 2d. |
| 1152 | O bounteous nature ... ... | Hegar | 4d. |
| 1153 | The Spring is here ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1154 | A gallant Swabian captain ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1155 | The nightingale in ... | Hans Sitt | 3d. |
| 1156 | When Sunday's Bells ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1157 | The birds are singing ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1158 | Night softly falling ... ... | Lewin | 4d. |
| 1159 | High in Heaven's domain | F. Curti | 4d. |
| 1160 | Sir Spring doth ride... ... | Gade | 4d. |
| 1161 | O come with me and wander far | ,, | 4d. |
| 1162 | The Autumn fields ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1163 | When woods are dight ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1164 | Go, song of mine ... | E. Elgar | 8d. |
| 1165 | In the silent West ... | G. Bantock | 6d. |
| 1166 | The Leprehaun ... ... ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1167 | Angelus... ... ... ... | E. Elgar | 6d. |
| 1168 | In the north land | Cliffe Forrester | 4d. |
| 1169 | Come away, Death ... ... | Arne | 3d. |
| 1170 | Kitty of Coleraine ... | C. H. Lloyd | 3d. |
| 1171 | The young May moon ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1172 | Rest (12 voices) ... ... | Hathaway | 6d. |
| 1173 | How sweet thy ... | A. S. Burrows | 6d. |
| 1174 | Had I a cave ... ... | H. Willan | 3d. |
| 1175 | The red sun is ... ... | H. Leslie | 6d. |
| 1176 | The Three Ships ... | C. Taylor | 4d. |
| 1177 | Empire and Motherland | C. Harris | 4d. |
| 1178 | Emer's lament ... ... | G. Bantock | 4d. |
| 1179 | To Claribel ... ... ... | ...D. Price | 3d. |
| 1180 | Irene (madrigal) ... | C. E. Miller | 4d. |
| 1181 | The Springtide ... ... | A. Jensen | 4d. |
| 1182 | Comrades' Song of Hope... | Adam | 3d. |
| 1183 | North or South ... ... | Schumann | 4d. |
| 1184 | Wind of the waters ... ... | ,, | 4d. |

No. 1435 NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK (SECOND SERIES) Price (4d.)

THERE IS A LADY SWEET AND KIND

FOUR-PART SONG

WORDS BY THOMAS FORD

MUSIC BY

ERIC H. THIMAN

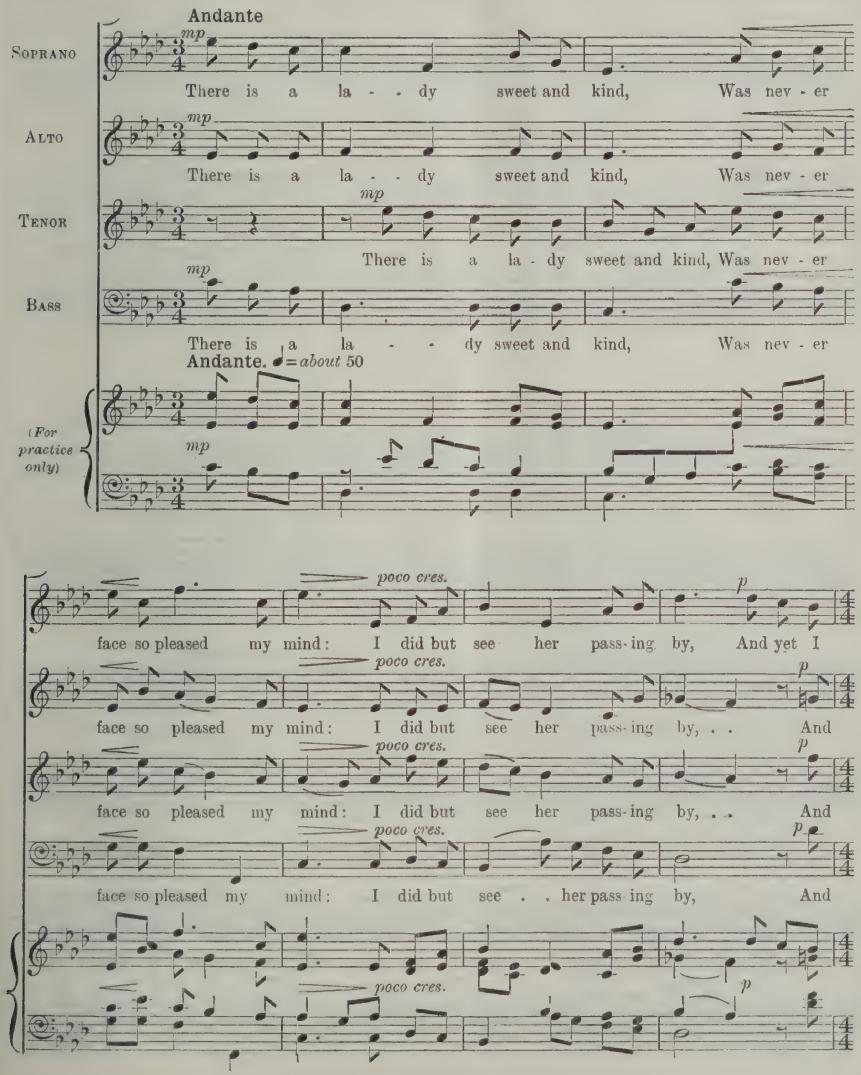
LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.



Andante
mp
SOPRANO
There is a la - - dy sweet and kind, Was nev - er
ALTO
There is a la - - dy sweet and kind, Was nev - er
TENOR
There is a la - dy sweet and kind, Was nev - er
BASS
There is a la - - dy sweet and kind, Was nev - er
Andante. ♩ = about 50
(For practice only)
poco cres.
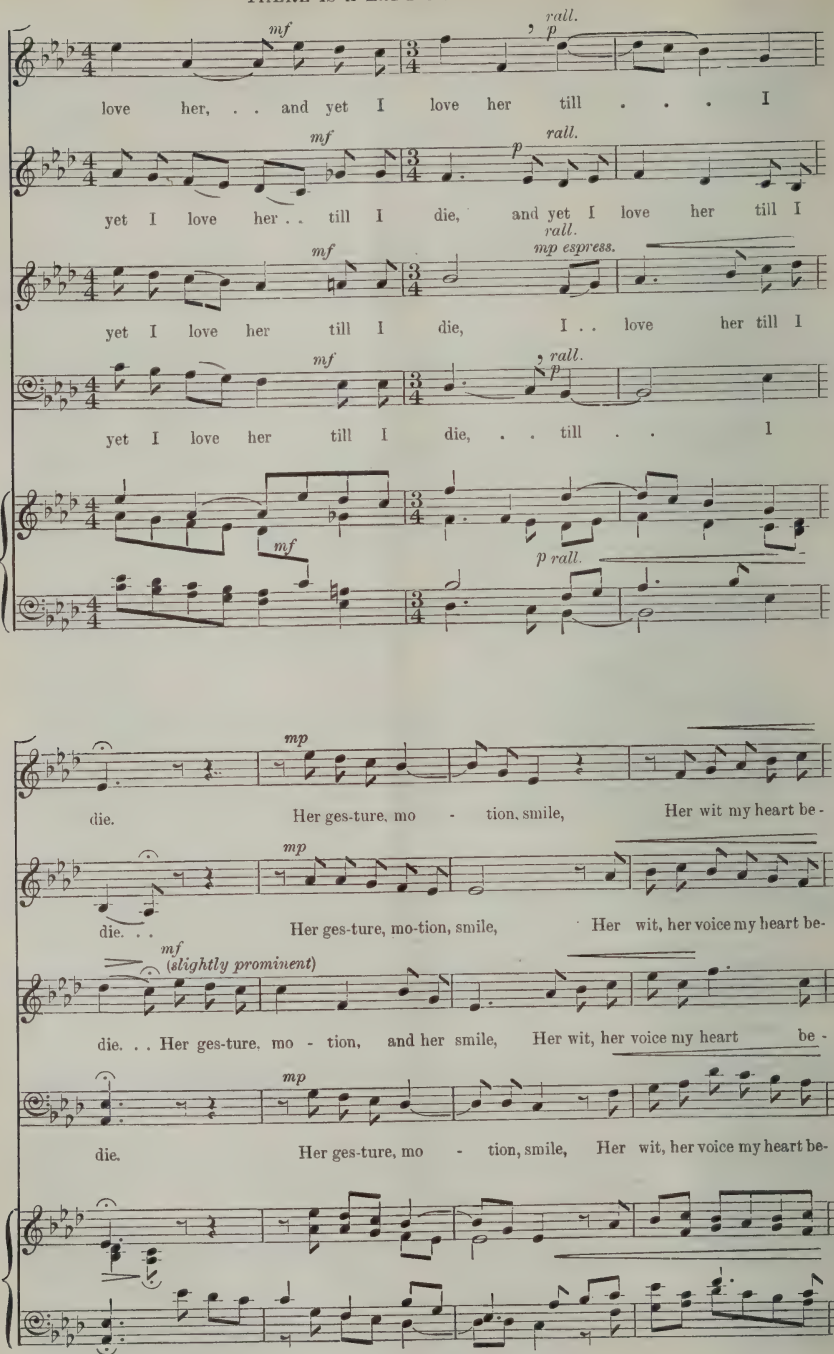
p face so pleased my mind: I did but see her pass-ing by, And yet I face so pleased my mind: I did but see her pass-ing by, . . And face so pleased my mind: I did but see her pass-ing by, . . And face so pleased my mind: I did but see . . her pass-ing by, And

Copyright, 1927, by Novello and Company, Limited



mf
rall.
p love her, . . and yet I love her till . . . I mf
rall.
p yet I love her . . till I die, and yet I love her till I
rall.
mf
mp espress.
yet I love her till I die, I . . love her till I
mf
rall.
p yet I love her till I die, . . till . . I
mf
p rall.
mp
die. Her ges-ture, mo - tion, smile, Her wit my heart be - mp
die. . . Her ges-ture, mo-tion, smile, Her wit, her voice my heart bemf
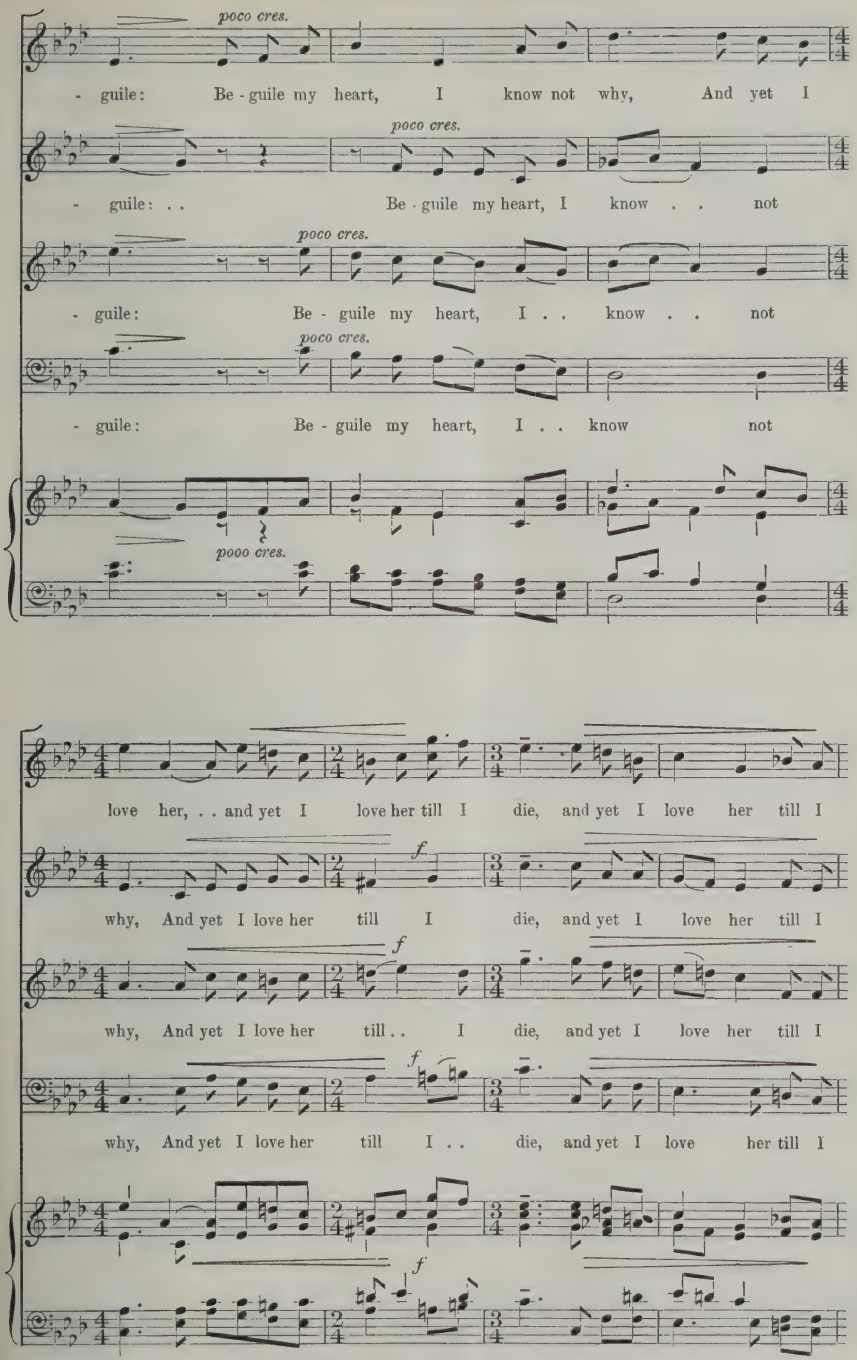
(slightly prominent) die. . . Her ges-ture, mo - tion, and her smile, Her wit, her voice my heart be -
mp
die. Her ges-ture, mo - tion, smile, Her wit, her voice my heart be-



poco cres.
- guile: Be - guile my heart, I know not why, And yet I
poco cres.
- guile: . . Be - guile my heart, I know . . not
poco cres.
- guile: Be - guile my heart, I . . know . . not
poco cres.
- guile: Be - guile my heart, I . . know not
poco cres.
love her, . . and yet I love her till I die, and yet I love her till I
f why, And yet I love her till I die, and yet I love her till I
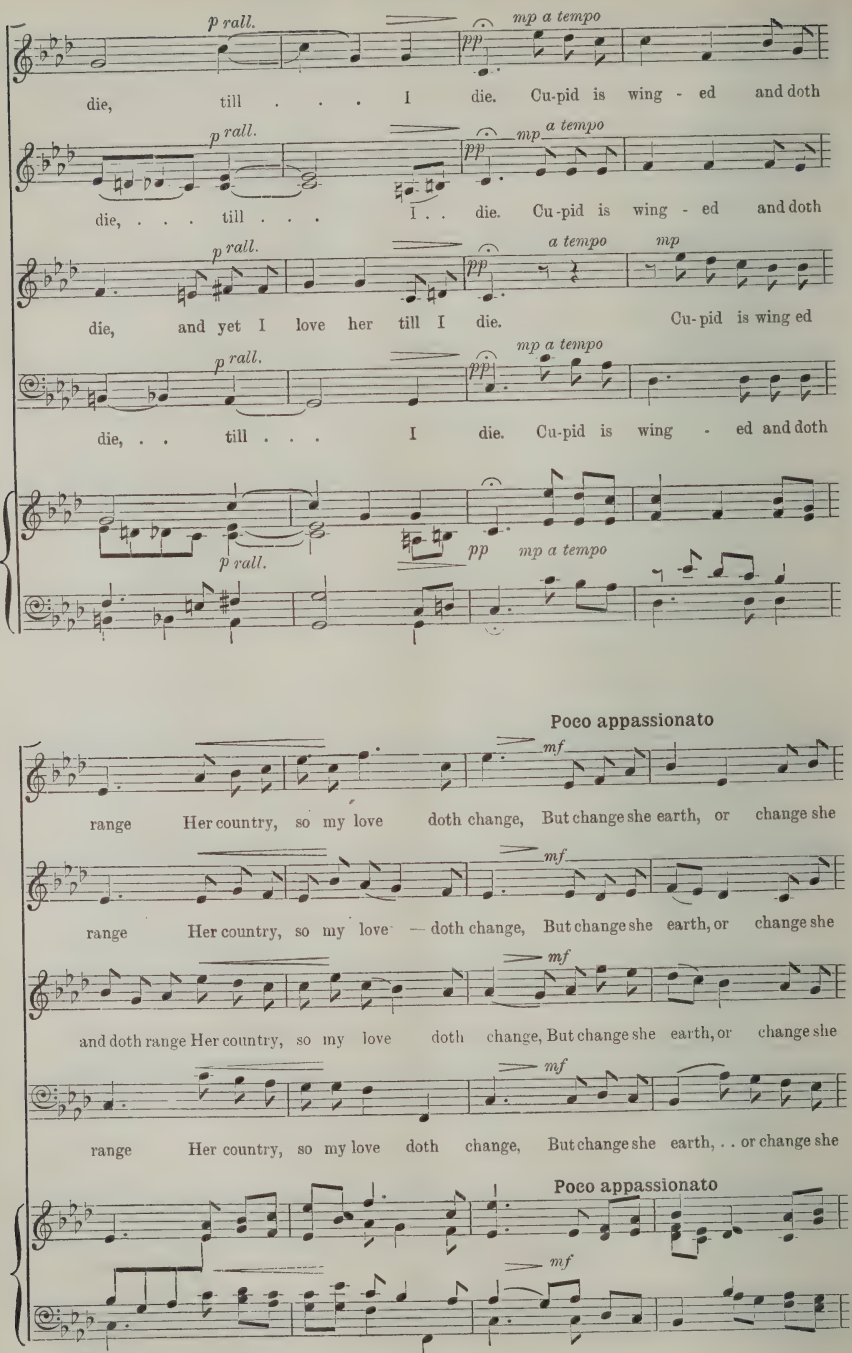
f why, And yet I love her till . . I die, and yet I love her till I
f
why, And yet I love her till I . . die, and yet I love her till I
f



p rall.
mp a tempo
pp die, till . . . I die. Cu-pid is wing - ed and doth
p rall.
mp a tempo
pp die, . . . till . . . I . . die. Cu-pid is wing - ed and doth
p rall.
a tempo
mp
pp die, and yet I love her till I die. Cu-pid is wing ed
p rall.
mp a tempo
pp die, . . till . . . I die. Cu-pid is wing - ed and doth
p rall.
pp mp a tempo
Poco appassionato
mf range Her country, so my love doth change, But change she earth, or change she
mf range Her country, so my love — doth change, But change she earth, or change she
mf
and doth range Her country, so my love doth change, But change she earth, or change she
mf range Her country, so my love doth change, But change she earth, . . or change she Poco appassionato
mf

sempre cres.
rall.
sky, Yet will I love her, . . yet will I love her, . . yet will I
sempre cres.
rall.
sky, . . Yet will I . . love her till I . . die, yet will I sempre cres.
rall.
sky, . . Yet will I . . love her till . . I . . die, yet will I sempre cres.
rall.
sky, Yet will I love her till I die, . . . yet will I
sempre cres.
rall.
ff
lunga molto dim. pp
p Meno mosso
rall.
pp
love her till I die, till . . . . I die.
molto dim. pp
lunga
p
rall.
pp
love her till I die, . . . will I love her till I die. . .
molto dim. pp
lunga
mp espress.
rall.
pp
love her till I die, . . . will I love her till I die. . .
lunga
molto dim. pp
p
rall.
pp
love her till I die, till . . I die.
lunga
Meno mosso
rall.
molto dim. pp
p
pp
lunga

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1185 | Swiftly fly the birds ... | Schumann | 2d. |
| 1186 | The Cruiskeen Lawn | G. Bantock | 4d. |
| 1187 | Forest Bride ... | R. Schumann | 4d. |
| 1188 | The lonely hunter ... | Schumann | 2d. |
| 1189 | For Empire and for King | Fletcher | 8d. |
| 1190 | Out upon it ... ... | C. H. H. Parry | 3d. |
| 1191 | Wounded Youth... | R. Schumann | 3d. |
| 1192 | The King of Thule ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1193 | Gay madcap ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1194 | The Storm ... ... ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1195 | The Nun ... ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 1196 | The Minstrel ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 1197 | My soul would drink... | Mackenzie | 6d. |
| 1198 | Midnight by the Sea ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1199 | Qui Vive ... ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1200 | A song of love's coming ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1201 | Phillida flouts me ... | Williams | 4d. |
| 1202 | Spring enchantment... | G. Bantock | 4d. |
| 1203 | Twilight (8 vv.) | C. Lee Williams | 4d. |
| 1204 | Music ... ... ... ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1205 | Crossing the Bar ,, | ,, | 3d. |
| 1206 | The Heart of the night | ...H. Bath | 4d. |
| 1207 | The winter it is past... | ...Bainton | 3d. |
| 1208 | Kindred hearts | ...C. Lee Williams | 3d. |
| 1209 | A Lament (Volkslied) (arranged) ... | | 3d. |
| 1210 | Come, lasses and lads ,, | ... | 4d. |
| 1211 | Joan to the Maypole ,, | ... | 4d. |
| 1212 | The Cheshire Cheese ,, | ... | 4d. |
| 1213 | O Canada! ... ... ... | C. Lavallée | 4d. |
| 1214 | Come out across the | A. Jensen | 4d. |
| 1215 | Lullaby... ... ... ... | J. Brahms | 2d. |
| 1216 | Beside the River... ... | A. Jensen | 3d. |
| 1217 | When the tendrils deck | ,, | 3d. |
| 1218 | My Love and I ... ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1219 | When lilies are blowing ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1220 | Coronation Day ... | P. E. Fletcher | 4d. |
| 1221 | June ... ... ... | ...F. H. Cowen | 4d. |
| 1222 | Bring me a golden pen | ,, | 4d. |
| 1223 | A Nocturne... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1224 | The Little Sandman (arranged) ... | | 4d. |
| 1225 | Our Island Home ... | E. Faning | 4d. |
| 1226 | Our Sailor King... | ...C. H. Lloyd | 4d. |
| 1227 | Adieu, sweet ... | C. Macpherson | 4d. |
| 1228 | The Three Knights ... | E. German | 4d. |
| 1229 | Puck is king... ... ... | Frank Idle | 4d. |
| 1230 | Song of Proserpine ... | S. C.-Taylor | 3d. |
| 1231 | The Lee Shore ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1232 | Land of my Fathers... | ...J. James | 4d. |
| 1233 | David of the White Rock (arr.) ... | | 3d. |
| 1234 | Out of a silence ... | G. Rathbone | 8d. |
| 1235 | Daybreak ... ... ... | H. Brian | 4d. |
| 1236 | Evenèn in the Village | Gardiner | 4d. |
| 1237 | The Stage Coach ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1238 | The Beleaguered | ... A. Sullivan | 3d. |
| 1239 | Sweet day, so cool ... | E. German | 4d. |
| 1240 | Sleeping ... ... ... | E. German | 4d. |
| 1241 | Evensong ... ... | M. F. Phillips | 3d. |
| 1242 | The Weasel... | F. de la Tombelle | 4d. |
| 1243 | The Two Fiddlers ... | A. Chapuis | 8d. |
| 1244 | The Marseillaise Hymn ... ... ... | | 2d. |
| 1245 | In praise of Neptune | E. German | 4d. |
| 1246 | Far o'er the Bay... ... | C. Franck | 4d. |
| 1247 | My bonnie Lass... ... | E. German | 4d. |
| 1248 | Love is a sickness ... ... | P. Pitt | 4d. |
| 1249 | The Stricken Hunter ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1250 | Duncan Gray (arranged)... ... ... | | 4d. |
| 1251 | Cargoes... ... ... | H. B. Gardiner | 4d. |
| 1252 | Spring ... ... ... | John E. West | 4d. |
| 1253 | How eloquent ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1254 | Blow, breeze ... ... | G. Elvey | 4d. |
| 1255 | Cherry ripe ... ... ... | W. G. Ross | 3d. |
| 1256 | Sweet May morning... | Forrester | 4d. |
| 1257 | The Ash Grove (arranged) ... ... | | 4d. |
| 1258 | Lie still, my little one | C. Harriss | 4d. |
| 1259 | Wedding is great Juno's | B. Tours | 3d. |
| 1260 | Remembrance ... ... | A. Robins | 4d. |
| 1261 | She is not fair ... ... ... | F. Idle | 4d. |
| 1262 | A Franklyn's Dogge... | Mackenzie | 6d. |
| 1263 | Fisher Folk Lullaby... | H. Grace | 4d. |
| 1264 | Queen and Huntress W. W. Starmer | | 3d. |
| 1265 | Waken, lords and ladies gay ,, | | 4d. |
| 1266 | Pack, clouds, away ... ... ,, | | 4d. |

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1267 | Twilight time ... | W. W. Starmer | 4d. |
| 1268 | The Goslings ... ... | J. F. Bridge | 4d. |
| 1269 | Weep you no more | A. Somervell | 4d. |
| 1270 | Ryghte Merrie ... | W. W. Pearson | 6d. |
| 1271 | Ben Bowlegs ... ... ... ,, | | 4d. |
| 1272 | Call John ... ... ... ,, | | 4d. |
| 1273 | The Carrion Crow ... ... ,, | | 4d. |
| 1274 | The Cuckoo Clock ... ... ,, | | 4d. |
| 1275 | The Snow-white Doe ... ,, | | 6d. |
| 1276 | Three Children Sliding ... ,, | | 4d. |
| 1277 | Three Doughtie Men ... ,, | | 4d. |
| 1278 | Three Merry Fishers ... ,, | | 4d. |
| 1279 | The Ironfounders ... ... ,, | | 4d. |
| 1280 | The Iron Horse ... ... ... ,, | | 6d. |
| 1281 | Sweet to live amid ... ... ,, | | 3d. |
| 1282 | March of the Cameron Men | G. B. | 4d. |
| 1283 | O can ye sew ... ... | G. Bantock | 4d. |
| 1284 | Love the Harlequin ... | Wareing | 4d. |
| 1285 | Perfection ... | ...A. C. Mackenzie | 8d. |
| 1286 | O say, ye Saints... | ...J. L. Rogers | 3d. |
| 1287 | My dear mistress | John E. West | 4d. |
| 1288 | Welcome, heroes | Mendelssohn | 4d. |
| 1289 | Longing... ... ... ... | H. Keeton | 3d. |
| 1290 | The World is too much | G. Bantock | 4d. |
| 1291 | From piercing steel ... | ... Greene | 4d. |
| 1292 | A Water Party ... | ... C. H. Lloyd | 4d. |
| 1293 | Sweet day, so cool ... | D. Stephen | 3d. |
| 1294 | Soldier, rest... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1295 | Welcome, young Spring ... | Pearson | 3d. |
| 1296 | What shall we dance ... | Cowen | 6d. |
| 1297 | The Shower... ... ... | ...E. Elgar | 6d. |
| 1298 | The Fountain ... ... ... | ,, | 8d. |
| 1299 | Death on the Hills ... ... | ,, | 8d. |
| 1300 | Love's Tempest... ... ... | ,, | 8d. |
| 1301 | Serenade ... ... ... ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1302 | Gather ye rosebuds ... | J. Pointer | 4d. |
| 1303 | Song of the Thrush ... | Walthew | 6d. |
| 1304 | Where shall the lover | Bairstow | 6d. |
| 1305 | Youthful Chloe ... | W. McNaught | 4d. |
| 1306 | Winds gently whisper | J. Whittaker | 3d. |
| 1307 | Breathe soft, ye winds | W. Paxton | 2d. |
| 1308 | The Birthright ... ... | ...E. Elgar | 4d. |
| 1309 | The sun was gaily ... | E. Cutler | 4d. |
| 1310 | The Boy ... ... | A. H. Brewer | 4d. |
| 1311 | Belgian National Song ... ... ... | | 2d. |
| 1312 | Here's a health unto His Majesty | | 3d. |
| 1313 | Oh! say not ... ... | H. M. Higgs | 4d. |
| 1314 | Song of the Grey Seas | ...Fletcher | 8d. |
| 1315 | Peace ... ... ... ... | J. F. Bridge | 6d. |
| 1316 | The Olden Time ... | E. Cutler | 4d. |
| 1317 | Garibaldi's Hymn ... ... ... ... | | 3d. |
| 1318 | The Arethusa ... ... | W. Shield | 4d. |
| 1319 | Vox ultima Crucis ... | Rathbone | 4d. |
| 1320 | The Crown of Empire ... | Faning | 4d. |
| 1321 | Sir Eglamore (arranged)... ... ... | | 4d. |
| 1322 | American National Songs ... ... | | 2d. |
| 1323 | The Frog ... ... ... | E. Newton | 4d. |
| 1324 | Welcome Yule ... | C. H. H. Parry | 3d. |
| 1325 | I sing the birth ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1326 | Hymn before Action... | W Davies | 4d. |
| 1327 | Rolling down to Rio ... | E. German | 6d. |
| 1328 | Off to Sea ... | W. W. Pearson | 6d. |
| 1329 | The Cyclist ... ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1330 | Trab, Trab, Trab ... | B. Smith | 2d. |
| 1331 | Hail, sweet peace ... | J. B. Lott | 4d. |
| 1332 | Rule Britannia (in G) ... | Arne | 3d. |
| 1333 | The King ... ... | A. H. Brewer | 3d. |
| 1334 | The Beacon ... ... | Adam Carse | 4d. |
| 1335 | God bless the Prince | Richards | 2d. |
| 1336 | Spring (Humorous) ... | J. F. Bridge | 4d. |
| 1337 | The Deil's awa' wi' the Exciseman | | 4d. |
| 1338 | Soldier, Rest! ... | W. W. Pearson | 4d. |
| 1339 | Pibroch of Donuil Dhu ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1340 | The Anglers ... ... ... ... | | 3d. |
| 1341 | Departed joys ... ... ... ... | | 3d. |
| 1342 | 'Tis Morn ... ... ... ... | | 4d. |
| 1343 | The Cryes of London | T. Weelkes | 6d. |
| 1344 | The Promised Land | M. B. Foster | 4d. |
| 1345 | The Cryes of London | ...Gibbons | 8d. |
| 1346 | Ditto | R. Deering | 8d. |
| 1347 | The Fairies were | E. D. Tayler | 4d. |
| 1348 | The Dream of Home | W. W. Pearson | 3d. |

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1349 | Summer and Winter | W. W. Pearson | 3d |
| 1350 | There 's beauty in the deep | ,, | 2d. |
| 1351 | Jäger Chorus ... ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1352 | The Lifeboat ... ... ... ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 1353 | The Ocean... ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1354 | The Oyster Dredgers ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1355 | The Silent Land ... | A. R. Gaul | 4d. |
| 1356 | Evening ... ... | W. W. Pearson | 3d. |
| 1357 | Under the Trees ... ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1358 | Woods in Winter ... ... ... | ,, | 12d. |
| 1359 | The Erl-King ... ... | A. R. Gaul | 4d. |
| 1360 | Jack Frost ... ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1361 | Old Neptune ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1362 | Footsteps of Angels ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1363 | Sweet Spring ... | W. W. Pearson | 4d. |
| 1364 | Soul of Living Music ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1365 | Nymphs of the Ocean ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1366 | The Coral Grove ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1367 | The Lake ... ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1368 | Over the mountain side ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1369 | Blow, western wind ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1370 | The River ... ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1371 | Stars of the Night ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1372 | The Skaters ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1373 | The Stormy Petrel ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1374 | Hunting Song ... | J. G. Williams | 4d. |
| 1375 | Ah! what is love | W. McNaught | 4d. |
| 1376 | The Evening Star ... | G. Tootell | 4d. |
| 1377 | From the lone shieling | M. Maclean | 4d. |
| 1378 | Tewkesbury Road | E. T. Sweeting | 4d. |
| 1379 | Peace ... ... ... | ...C. Lee Williams | 3d. |
| 1380 | Sigh no more | J. A. Sowerbutts | 4d. |
| 1381 | When Laura smiles | J. G. Williams | 4d. |
| 1382 | Sweet Kate ... ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1383 | Wi' a hundred pipers (Scottish Air) | | 4d. |
| 1384 | When May is in ... | Ireland | 4d. |
| 1385 | The Village Blacksmith | Weiss | 4d. |
| 1386 | Fair, sweet, cruel | J. G. Williams | 4d. |
| 1387 | An old song resung | H. B. Gardiner | 6d. |
| 1388 | London Town ... | E. German | 6d. |
| 1389 | Freeman's Song | T. Ravenscroft | 4d. |
| 1390 | Johnnie Cope (arr.) | E. T. Sweeting | 4d |
| 1391 | Folly's Song ... | P. E. Fletcher | 4d. |
| 1392 | Dream-Love ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1393 | Orpheus, with his lute (4-part) | E. German | 4d. |
| 1394 | ,, ,, (8-part) | E. German | 6d. |
| 1395 | Lady, lay those frowns aside | E. Halsey | 4d. |
| 1396 | Yea, cast me from heights of the mountains ... ... | E. Elgar | 3d. |
| 1397 | Whether I find thee ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1398 | After many a dusty mile ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1399 | It 's oh! to be a wild wind ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 1400 | Feasting I watch ... ... | | 4d. |
| 1401 | Weep you no more ... | G. Rathbone | 4d. |
| 1402 | On May morning ... | E. Boyce | 4d. |
| 1403 | Sweet Echo ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1404 | Grass of Parnassus ... | G. Bantock | 4d. |
| 1405 | The Song of the Gale | M. B. Foster | 4d. |
| 1406 | Rough wind, that moanest | J. Pointer | 3d. |
| 1407 | Who would true valour see | G. Shaw | 4d. |
| 1408 | Wanton, come hither | M. Cavendish | 2d. |
| 1409 | Fair are those eyes ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 1410 | Farewell, despair ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 1411 | Sly thief ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 1412 | What thing more cruel ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 1413 | Nursery Rhymes (humorous) | A. Carse | 4d. |
| 1414 | Over hill, over dale | Ed. Bunnett | 4d. |
| 1415 | My lady fell a-sighing | W. H. Reed | 4d. |
| 1416 | Bushes and Briars (arranged) ... | | 3d. |
| 1417 | Evening (6 voices) | E. T. Sweeting | 4d. |
| 1418 | Wrlh fyn'd i'm gwely bach fy hun | R. Edwards | 3d. |
| 1419 | Y Lanaf Oriana ... | J. Wilbye | 4d. |
| 1420 | The Pilgrim Fathers | P. E. Fletcher | 4d. |
| 1421 | Yn iach, fwyn Amarilis | J. Wilbye | 3d. |
| 1422 | Coming through the craigs o' Kyle | A. Rowley | 4d. |
| 1423 | Hoyda, Hoyda, jolly rutterkin | A. Palmer | 4d. |
| 1424 | The Trees they do grow high (arr.) | E. T. Sweeting | 4d. |
| 1425 | A-maying, a-playing ... | A. Rowley | 4d. |
| 1426 | Rosa Mystica (Carol) | B. J. Dale | 4d. |
| 1427 | Cradle Song (Carol) ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 1428 | The Drums of Freedom | H. E. Crimp | 4d. |
| 1429 | Charming Chloe ... | E. Boyce | 4d. |
| 1430 | By Marykirk a sweet bird sang | W. Jackson | 3d. |
| 1431 | The Reveille ... ... | E. Elgar | 8d. |
| 1432 | The Camel's Hump | E. German | 4d. |

(To be continued.)

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,024—Vol. 69.
Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

JUNE 1 1928

Price 6*d.*; Postage, 2*d.*
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING
(Season, 1928-1929.)

There are now VACANCIES in the CHOIR for SOPRANOS, CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. Applicants should have STRONG VOICES OF GOOD QUALITY, and must be prepared to pass an examination in SIGHT-READING. Address, The Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.7.

The Royal College of Music

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING / HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, C.V.O., M.A., D.Mus., D.Litt.

MIDSUMMER HALF-TERM

THE MIDSUMMER HALF-TERM will commence on Monday, June 11th, 1928.

COMPLETE MUSICAL EDUCATION
is provided by Teachers of the highest eminence.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT
Classes are held for pupils under sixteen, whose time is also occupied by their general education.

SPECIAL CLASSES ARE HELD FOR:
Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet.

OPERATIC CLASSES
The College possesses a fully equipped College Opera Theatre for an audience of 600.

SCHOLARSHIPS, EXHIBITIONS
Upwards of 70 Scholarships and Exhibitions are provided from a permanent endowment fund.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES
There are Vocal and Instrumental Ensemble Classes, and Pupils sufficiently advanced in this work are given the opportunity of putting their knowledge into practice at College Concerts.

A.R.C.M.

Examinations for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) are held three times a year, in September, December, and April.

Full particulars obtainable from the Registrar.

Guildhall School of Music

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting, Fencing, French Classical Drama.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £12 12*s.* and £14 14*s.* Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons:
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.
H.R.H. THE PRINCESS LOUISE (Duchess of Argyll)

President:
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.

Principal:
JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., D.Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

MIDSUMMER HALF-TERM

BEGINS MONDAY, 11TH JUNE

ORCHESTRAL CONCERT,

QUEEN'S HALL.
(Sole Lessees: Messrs. Chappell & Co., Ltd.)
TUESDAY, 12th JUNE, at 3 p.m.
Conductor: SIR HENRY J. WOOD, D.Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

CHAMBER CONCERT,

DUKE'S HALL, WEDNESDAY, 20th JUNE, at 3 p.m.

VACATION COURSE FOR TEACHERS.

PIANOFORTE.
CLASS-SINGING.
AURAL TRAINING.
MUSICAL HISTORY and APPRECIATION.
SEPTEMBER 11th to 14th, 1928.

L.R.A.M.

Last day of entry for the September Examination, 30th JUNE.

Prospectuses and all information from
A. ALGER BELL, Secretary.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE

SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D.Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1927-1928

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music. Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—
H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.
Paradise Street, Birmingham.

GLASGOW
ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC

SESSION 1927-28

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 12 to December 3, December 5 to March 10, and March 12 to June 8.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes. Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:
STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by MR. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, Mrs. MARION COLE, Secretary.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY
Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are requested to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36 Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Coruse, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

Manchester School of Music

Founded by J. A. CROSS (1892)

Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.
Director: LEOPOLD H. CROSS, M.A.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras. Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, Aural Training, &c.

Students prepared for all Royal Academy and Trinity College Exams.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING

New Address: 2, Gray Street, Duke Street, W.1 (near Selfridge's).
President: A. NETTLEFOLD
Principal: DAVID GODELL

Instruction in all Vocal Subjects. Voice-curing Courses.

A thorough musical education if desired.

Two Free Scholarships to be competed for on Thursday, May 24th. All voices.

Particulars from Secretary, Miss MAIMIE M. HEATH. Mayfair 3819

JOIN THE ORGAN CLUB

PRESIDENT: J. MARTIN WHITE, ESQ.

AND VISIT

ROEHAMPTON PARISH CHURCH, JUNE 9.
BLOOMSBURY CINEMA, JUNE 24.
ETON COLLEGE, JULY 28.

Further attractive visits to follow.

Entrance Fee, 2s. 6d. Annual Subscription, 10s. 6d.

For full particulars apply Hon. Sec.,
28, HILLMORE GROVE, SYDENHAM, S.E.26.

The Royal College of Organists

THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING will be held at 2.30, and the DISTRIBUTION OF DIPLOMAS by the President, Dr. W. G. ALCOCK, M.V.O., at 3 o'clock, on Saturday, July 21st. An ORGAN RECITAL by Mr. H. L. BALFOUR, and a CONVERSAZIONE, will follow the Distribution. Members and their friends are invited to attend. No tickets required.

The SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Toccata in D minor (Dorian), J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 10, p. 196; Augener, p. 360; Peters, Vol. 3, No. 3.)

Prelude (in form of a Chaconne), Op. 88, No. 2, Stanford. (Stainer & Bell.)

Romanza, "La Reine de France," Haydn. (Best's arrangements, Vol. 1, p. 199.)

The selected pieces for the July, 1928, A.R.C.O. Examination, differ from those set for January, 1928.

All candidates for the next examinations must send in their names for FELLOWSHIP by JUNE 7TH, for ASSOCIATESHIP by JUNE 14TH. In the case of NEW MEMBERS, proposal forms, duly filled up, must be sent in before MAY 31ST. No names will be entered after the above dates.

For the convenience of members, past examination papers have been bound in one volume: Fellowship and Associateship Organ Work, January, 1913, to July, 1927; Paper Work, July, 1924, to July, 1927. Price 4s., to be obtained by members only.

Examination Regulations, list of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College. Associateship or Fellowship, 6d. each (post free).

The College is open daily from 10 to 4, Saturdays 10 to 1.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD
OF THE R.A.M. AND THE R.C.M.
FOR LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING
President. H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS A)

Written Examinations held in March and November at all centres. Practical Examinations in March-April and November-December at all Centres. Entries for the November-December Examinations close Wednesday, October 10th, 1928.

"SCHOOL" EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS B).

Held throughout the British Isles three times a year, viz., March-April, June-July, and October-November. Entries for the October-November Examinations close Wednesday, October 3rd, 1928.

ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS will be held at certain fixed centres in March-April, June-July, and November-December each year. For full particulars see special Elocution Syllabus.

The Board offers annually SIX EXHIBITIONS tenable at The R.A.M. or The R.C.M. for Two or Three Years.

Syllabuses A and B, Elocution Syllabus, Entry Forms, and any further information, may be obtained post-free from:

THE SECRETARY, 14 & 15, Bedford Square, London, W.C.1.

EDWIN H. LEMARE

is paying a visit to England, and will be available for

ORGAN RECITALS

during July, August, and September.

For terms, vacant dates, &c., apply

Edwin H. Lemare, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd.,
160, Wardour Street, W.1.

HOW DO YOU MEMORISE YOUR MUSIC?

Alfred Cortot
Serge Koussevitzky
Vaclav Talich
Tobias Matthay
Harold Bauer
Myra Hess
Irene Scharrer
Leff Pouishnoff
Katharine Goodson
Stewart Macpherson
Ivor Newton
Adrian Boult
Maurice Cole
Maurice Besly
Percy Scholes
Keith Douglas
Rae Robertson

recommend the
MACKINNON COURSE

How would you answer a pupil if he asked you this important question?

Many well-known teachers, though themselves possessors of perfect Musical Memory, are unable, through the very spontaneity of their gift, to analyse the process by which they play by heart.

THE
Mackinnon Course

gives a simple and practical method, a method by means of which the teacher may develop the memory of pupils of all grades—primary, intermediate, and advanced.

Read what Teachers say:

"I should like to take this opportunity of saying how very useful I have found the lessons both in my own memorising and in my general teaching work."

"Your knowledge of psychology is amazing."

"I myself am over fifty, and had never been able to memorise. Now, with the aid of your system I am able to memorise and depend on my memory. I have also had success with a pupil who had no gift for memorising."

"I find the Course has not only helped me in my own memorising, but it enables me to cultivate my pupils' memories on correct and lasting lines."

"Your System is perfect."

COMPLETE IN SIX POSTAL LESSONS FOR £3 : 3 : 0

SEND FOR FREE BOOKLET
(FIX COUPON INSIDE ENVELOPE).

TO MISS LILIAS MACKINNON, 1, Paultons Square, London, S.W.3.

Without any obligation on my part please send me your free booklet on "MEMORY TRAINING."

Name.....

Address.....

.....

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal:

JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

LICENTIATESHIP EXAMINATION.

EASTER, 1928.

The following CANDIDATES were SUCCESSFUL:

SINGING.—As TEACHERS: David Blair, Elizabeth Rebecca Briggs, Doris N. Cassé, Irene Grace Gairdner, Celia Barbara Harris, Winifred Edith Hurt, Felicia Rawlinson, Elizabeth Daisy Smith, Georgina Isobel Smith, Mary Josephine Venning.

As PERFORMERS: Mary Douglas Adams, Alice S. L. Beckett, Elsie Dorothy Blakeborough, Gertrude Merenda Browes, May Brownridge, Clara Coutts, Elizabeth May Davies, Ernest George Spafford Everard, Hilda Mary Farmery, Marjorie Garrett, Annie Lois Gifford, John Greenwood, Nathalie Grieve Hill, Gwladys Hughes, Margurita Hughes, Edward Humphreys, Doris Emma Hupton, Gwladys Jones, Marjorie Alison King, Lilian Ethel Marsh, Anna Mary Margaret Martin, Clara Evelyn Wier McCubbin, Harold Noble, Clare Price, May Jemima Robertson, Nina Frances Robinson, Olive Salmon, George Bassett Stevens, Winifred Townsend, Isabelle Unsworth, Marjorie Walker.

EXAMINERS: Ethel Bilsland, Maurice d'Oisly, Caroline Hatchard, J. Frederick Keel, Frederic King, Evelyn Langston, Thomas Meux.

PIANOFORTE.—As TEACHERS: Edith Janet Christine Allen, Winifred Violet Allen, Phyllis Minnie Ansell, Daisy Julia Archer, Marjorie Arthur, Mary Catherine Bacon, Frances Betty Bannister, Cecilia Beard, Dorothy Frances Bettoney, Nancy Eileen Bevan, Joan Florence Black, Kathleen Barron Black, Nesta Mary Blackler, May Brierley, Dulcie Mary May Bull, Florence Edith Burgess, Kathleen Florence Burke, Vera A. Burns, Eva Butterworth, Henrietta McIntosh Cameron, Violet Jane Baird Cameron, Barbara Chester Chambers, Harry Checkley, Catherine Law Clark, Mary Gertrude Clark, Phyllis Mary Clough, Charles Leslie Coles, Marjorie Mary Earle Collins, Emily Collins-Cox, Florence Ida Comley, Dorothy Cook, Kathleen Cosgriff, Ellaline Cowley, Kathleen Clare Craig, Margaret Grace Crowley, Ellinor Turner Culbert, Agnes Beryl Cunliffe, Olive Elsie Cutler, Dorothy Davies, Georgie Alicia Davis, Edith May Dawe, Freda May Dawe, Dorothy May Dickinson, Minnie P. W. Dunn, Constance Edinborough, Joyce May English, Martha Bolon Erwin, Gwenda Evans, Mildred Vera Evans, Dorothy Heynes Everall, Grace Everitt, I. Maud Fahey, Molly Farr, Jean C. D. Ferguson, Alma Ferrier, Eliza Dorothy Filby, Catherine Mary Firth, Violet E. Foden, A. Leonard Foster, Bernard Foster, Mary Fotheringill, Marie Margaretta Frederiksen, Edith Constance Hamilton Fyfe (Christmas, 1927), Mary Gardiner, Janet Gass, Kathleen Marjorie Gibbs, Edith H. Godfrey, Annetta Goldsmith, Maisie Linscott Goode, Gwendoline Mary Graham, Vera Grand, Beatrice May Grant, Dorothy Maude Green, Dorothy Greenaway, Kathleen Maud Greenwood, Mary Hamilton, Fred Hanesworth, Hilda Frances Harris, Phyllis Blandford Harris, Cecil Thomas Hart, Gilbert Hart, Aileen Elisabeth Hartley, Mary Heasman, Alice Frances Hedges, Daisy Margaret Henwood, Eileen Nora Herbert, Leonard Herivel, Doris Louise Hickman, Glennie Hill, Hilda May Hince, Eileen Mary Hine, Wadia Mary Hourani, Marjorie Hudson, Bertha Davies Hughes, Ella Hulme, Raymond Laing Humphries, Theresa Gertrude Hussey, Esmond William George Ingall, Doris Evelyn Irish, Helen Dunbar Hamilton Jacob, Margaret Doris Jeffreys, Janet Henzell Jobling, Catherine Eiluned John, Elizabeth Margaret Eunice Jones, Blanche A. Kirby, Vera Pauline Bush Knapp, Millicent Kramer, Mary Edith Lamb, Amy Madeline Lawrence, Mary Margaret Lenton, Jean Le Poidevin, George Charles Lewis, Barbara Locke, Winifred May Lunt, Margaret Macnab, Anne Dorothy Lynn Marchant, Catherine Mary Marshall, Kit Eedy Martin, Cyril Allan T. C. Matcham, Fred Mayo, Penelope Weir Melvin, Elsie Minnion, Joan Morby, Florence Morgan, Harold Llewelyn Morrow, Mary Munn, Helen Burnaford Mutton, Catherine Jane Nelson, Beryl Esme Nicolai, Evelyn Rose Nock, Evelyn Honor Richmond Norman, Pauline Mary Norman, Kathleen Oyler, Gertrude May Parkes, Joan Parsons, Beryl Millicent Peckham, Lilian Emma Pengelly, Kathleen Mary Perry, Ronald Peters, Florence Margaret Phillips, Elsie Anne Pickering, Hilda Winifred Pitcher, Mary Constance Radcliffe, Nellie Hilda Raven, Hilda Helen Margaret Reith, Winifred Hamilton Ritchie, Edith May Roberts, Freda Patricia Robertson, Lily Rogers, Dorothy Mary Rita Sampson, Margaret Sanders, Edith Mary Shaw, Ivy Shippick, Laurence Gilbert Shrive, Norma Marguerite Simmonds, Nan Simpson, Dorothy Amy Sims, Lilian Dorothy Skinner, Belona Maude Smith, Gabrielle Mary Cotton Smith, Mildred Victoria Smith, Robert James Snell, Annie Dempster Snowball, Leslie Cyril Soden, Mary Evelyn Spackman, Florence Spier, Norah Stevenson, Rachel Louise Stone, Ethel Maud Sutton, Isabel J. C. Syme, William Henry Symonds, Edith Gwendoline Taylor, Frank Leslie Taylor, Nancy Edith Thatcher, Ada Elizabeth Thomas, Hilda Mary Gwendoline Thomas, Lena Marjorie Thomas, Clarice Beeby Thompson, Kathleen Torr, Maud Trimingham, Doris Gertrude Tulloch, Jenny Turner, Ethel Veitch, Esther Marjorie Vinall, Winifred Ada Voke, Catherine Hoey Wallace, Marjorie Walpole, John Walton, Edith Winifred Grace Ward, Helen Frances Esme Watkins, Evelyn Weare, Beryl Eileen Webb, Kathleen V. Welch, Clarice Crossley Wheatcroft, Daisy Whitefoot, Eric Whiteside, Dora Mildred Wilkins, Doris Laura Williams, Mary Henrietta Williams, Eileen Louise Willmott, Marjorie Ethel Wise, Irene Woodard, Agnes Mary Worsey, Alice Worsley.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC (continued).

As PERFORMERS: Violet Lilian Barnett, John Frederick Batsford, Muriel Phyllis Berry, Ella Mary Elizabeth Collins, Alice Edouard Louise Goossens, Caroline Elizabeth Iles, Clifford Herbert Lewis, George Thomas Marnitz, Marie Nicholson, Edna de Lacy Ross, Rose Mary Symondson, L. Gordon Thorne, Dorothy Tranter.

EXAMINERS: Victor G. Booth, York Bowen, Edgar Carr, Ambrose Coviello, Harold Craxton, Claude Gascoigne, Eric Grant, Isabel Gray, Welton Hickin, Elsie Horne, W. J. Kipps, Thomas B. Knott, Vivian Langrish, Dora Matthay, Frederick Moore, A. Brian Nash, John Pauer, Reginald Paul, Max Pirani, Claude F. Pollard, Charles F. Reddie, A. Wesley Roberts, Felix Swinstead, B. McCara Symons, Egerton Tidmarsh, Percy Waller, Septimus Webbe.

ORGAN.—Muriel Eileen Harris, Irene Ellen Hannah Moorbouse.

EXAMINERS: Stanley Marchant, D. Mus. Oxon., Reginald Steggall.

ORCHESTRAL INSTRUMENTS.—VIOLIN.—As TEACHERS: Ivy Grace Angold, Eleanor Dora Davey, Lilian Davies, Margaret Ellen Diggles, Dorothy May Edwards, Ruth Heyworth, Sophia Jochelman, Kitty Devonald Lewis, Wynifred Kate Owles, Dorothy Adela Sargent, Simone Terrell.

As PERFORMER: Arthur John O'Brien.

VIOLONCELLO.—As PERFORMERS: Kathleen Jacobs, Phyllis Juler.

EXAMINERS: Spencer Dyke, Marjorie Hayward, James T. Lockyer, Mario Lorenzi, B. Patterson Parker, J. Solomon, Herbert Walenn, W. E. Whitehouse, Herbert Withers, E. Rowsby Woof.

PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT.—Phyllis Mary Gayler, Lilian Gwendoline Lee, Thomas Philip Miles, Florence Isabel Willmer.

EXAMINERS: Welton Hickin, Maurice d'Oisly, Vivian Langrish, Montague Phillips.

AURAL TRAINING AND SIGHT-SINGING.—George Watson Brownlow, Mildred L. Burt, Bessie Isabel Duncan, Doris Kathleen Fox, Olga Joyce Woodcock Goodbody, Gwendoline Edith Holt, Elsie Annie Kininmonth, Margaret Lucy Tame, Irene Phyllis Wilde.

EXAMINERS: Arthur J. Greenish, D. Mus. Cantab., Ernest Read, Frederick G. Shinn, D. Mus. Dunelm.

VOICE-CULTURE AND CLASS-SINGING.—John Ernest Death, Wilfrid Thomas Edward Jarvis, Kathleen Mary La Trobe, Clifford Lodge, Marjorie Florence Ward.

EXAMINERS: Stewart Macpherson, Stanley Marchant, D. Mus. Oxon., Ernest Read.

ELOCUTION.—As TEACHERS: Ethel Olga Allen, Betty Rose Bradford, Enid M. Brett, Nancy M. Fletcher, Lilla Freda Gibbs, Gladys Winifred Habershon, Muriel Knight, Ivy Lane, Margaret Sneddon Macmillan, Anne Marsden, Doris Florence Martin-Harvey, Rosemary Agnes Von Velten Minnis, Marjorie Carrington Pigg, Frank Benjamin Rendall, Daniel John Roberts, Eden Rogers, Penuel Grant Ross, Margaret Tripp, Violet Rosemary Eve Turner, Helen Ruth Tyson, Mavis Vaughan-Richards,

As PERFORMERS: Nesta May Barnes, Marjorie Joy Bennett, Eileen Marjorie Hann, John Sinclair Hurnall, Alban George Hardy Jeynes, Grace Cecilia Keyte, Dorothy M. Lang, Marian Townend Ockleston, Kathleen Emily Stafford, Olive Thomson, Frederica C. K. Tomlinson.

EXAMINERS: A. Acton-Bond, Wilton Cole, Cairns James, Cecil Martin, Constance Newell, Katie Thomas.

A. ALGER BELL, Secretary.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS

FOUNDED 1913

PRESIDENT FOR 1928: J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, are eligible. Register of vacant appointments. All particulars on application to the Hon. Secretary. De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

BAMBRIDGE PIANOFORTE SCHOLARSHIP, VALUE £100 A YEAR.

A Competition open to British subjects of either sex for this Scholarship, tenable at the College in London, will be held in July next; last day of entry, July 7th.

Candidates must be not less than seventeen nor over twenty-one years of age.

The Examination consists of:

1. The performance of two or more Pianoforte pieces, names of which must be submitted for approval;
2. Reading at sight;
3. Viva voce questions on Rudiments and Form;
4. Ear-Tests.

Full particulars of this and other Scholarships, with entry forms, may be obtained from the Secretary, Trinity College of Music, Mandeville Place, London, W.1.

YOUR DEGREE OR DIPLOMA FOR £1 PER MONTH.

FREE GUIDE. Matric: M.B., A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O. L.R.A.M. A.R.C.M.

HUNDREDS of SUCCESSES.

Please state Exam.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE 20, SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

CONSERVATORY of BASLE
(SWITZERLAND)

DIRECTOR: FELIX WEINGARTNER.

TWO CLASSES OF CONDUCTING

Under the personal direction of
MR. FELIX WEINGARTNER.

1. CLASS FOR BEGINNERS, from the 1st of October, 1928, to the 30th of June, 1929.
2. MASTER-CLASS, in June, 1929, three lessons a week, of three hours each. Full Orchestra (professionals).

INFORMATION BY THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE CONSERVATORY.

THREE CHOIRS FESTIVAL
GLOUCESTER.

SEPTEMBER 2nd, 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th, 1928.

For the Benefit of the Widows and Orphans of the Clergy of the Dioceses of Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford.

Patrons:
THEIR MAJESTIES THE KING AND QUEEN.
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES.
THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK.
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF GLOUCESTER.
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE GEORGE.

Principals:
MISS JOAN ELWES. MISS DORA LABBETTE.
MISS DOROTHY SILK. MISS ELSIE SUDDABY.
MISS MARGARET BALFOUR. MISS BETTY BANNERMAN.
MISS MURIEL BRUNSKILL. MISS ASTRA DESMOND.
MR. PARRY JONES. MR. FRANK TITTERTON.
MR. WALTER WIDDOP. MR. STEUART WILSON.
MR. ROY HENDERSON. MR. ROBERT MAITLAND.
MR. ROBERT RADFORD. MR. STUART ROBERTSON.
MR. HORACE STEVENS. MR. HAROLD WILLIAMS.
MR. W. H. REED (Solo Violin). MR. LIONEL TERTIS (Solo Viola).
MISS BEATRICE HARRISON (Solo Violoncello).
LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
(Principal 1st Violin: MR. W. H. REED).
Organists: SIR IVOR ATKINS AND DR. HULL.
CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA OF ABOUT 400 PERFORMERS.
CONDUCTOR:
MR. HERBERT W. SUMSION, Mus.Bac., F.R.C.O.

For Programmes (post free, 7*d.*) and full details, apply—
A. A. G. JONES, Secretary, Eldon Chambers, Gloucester.

The Pianist's Hands

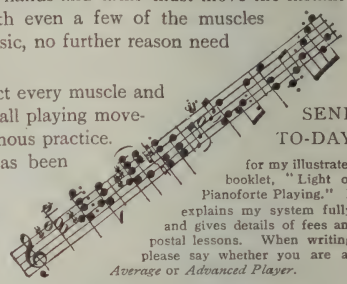
The Times says: "The excellence of Mr. Macdonald Smith's methods has been abundantly proved."

PREVALENT among pianists is the idea that you cannot play well unless you have a special sort of hand; this is a mistake. It is obvious, however, that the hands must be in perfect condition, otherwise the many technical difficulties to be overcome will be found insuperable. For a pianist every single muscle of the hands and arms must move the instant it is required to do so, and if this fails to be the case with even a few of the muscles brought into play in any complicated passage of music, no further reason need be sought to account for failure.

Let the "From Brain to Keyboard" System perfect every muscle and nerve in your hands and give you instant control over all playing movements without any of the usual drudgery and monotonous practice. Why not learn something about the System that has been used by many of our eminent musicians.



SEND TO-DAY for my illustrated booklet, "Light on Pianoforte Playing." It explains my system fully, and gives details of fees and postal lessons. When writing, please say whether you are an Average or Advanced Player.

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

M. C. MACDONALD SMITH, 94, GOWER STREET, LONDON, W.C.1

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.
London Address: 34, Spencer Hill, Wimbledon, S.W.19.
Please mention this paper when writing.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD"

SIGHT-READING LESSONS

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."

Music: "Goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint. Cannot fail to be of service."

A PUPIL WRITES: "Dr. —— tells me to practise more, and I feel all the time I am practising on the wrong lines, and not improving at all."

AFTER SECOND LESSON.—"I find I have more confidence, and Dr. —— says my reading is certainly more fluent. Your hints have helped me considerably at both organ and piano."—
(F.R.C.O. Exam.)

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON,
and WEEKES'S STUDIOS, 14, HANOVER ST., W.1
('Phone: Croydon 2703)

"SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER

(Registered No. 692810)

FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

A simple and very effective appliance for giving strength and flexibility to the fingers.
Recommended by Editor of the Musical Times.

IMPROVED MODEL
Price 2*s*. 6*d*.; postage and packing, 3*d*.

BYEWAYS, CLIFF ROAD, SEABROOK, HYTHE, KENT.

THE TECHNIQUER

A BOON TO ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS
Invented and Patented by Mr. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.
BUSONI and THE TECHNIQUER

Extract from a letter:
"A pianist is not imaginable without hands. Their physical culture is therefore of importance.
In fact, there are some functions which belong exclusively to the mechanical department.
Mr. Pitcher's apparatus . . . proves helpful against stiffness and inflexibility of the hands. I wish his good results may ever increase."—FERRUCCIO BUSONI.

Send for list of testimonials and full particulars post free
"Hand Development," with 16 Photos, 1*s*. 6*d*.
Secretary: MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

PIANO REPAIRS. "WIGMORE HALL FINISH"

denotes a standard not obtainable elsewhere.
THE MOST HIGHLY SKILLED WORKMANSHIP.
THE FINEST MATERIALS (regardless of cost).
PERFECT SATISFACTION.

WIGMORE HALL AND PIANO GALLERIES, 32-40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O.
REVISION COURSES ... ... 10 Lessons. £1.
MODERN CORR. COLLEGE. Sherwin Rd., Nottingham.

CAN YOU PLAY FROM MEMORY?

MANY musicians of really exceptional ability never receive due recognition of their talents, never command the respect and popularity they deserve. The crucial moment—the test of playing in public—finds them wanting. Brilliant in touch, execution, and technique, they fail because the ordeal unnerves them. Probably your ability is greater than you know. THE MASTER-METHOD OF MEMORY-PLAYING will banish all fear of the criticism of your most candid friend. It will develop your powers of concentration, create self-confidence when playing before others, and above all give you a reliable memory which will "never let you down." I guarantee your success or return the fee in full, which proves that memorising can be taught.

THE MASTER-METHOD OF MEMORY-PLAYING

POST THIS COUPON FOR MY FREE BOOK.
(Unsealed envelope, ½d. stamp only.)

MR. REGINALD C. FOORT, F.R.C.O.,
194, BEACON HOUSE, HEMSTAL ROAD,
LONDON, N.W.6.

Please send me, free and post free, a copy of your Book, "THE MASTER-METHOD OF MEMORY-PLAYING." I play the Piano, Violin, 'Cello, Organ, and am a Beginner, Intermediate, Advanced Player. (Cross out which do not apply to you.)

Name
(MR., MRS., or MISS.)
Address

NORTHERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal:
ALBERT JOWETT, Mus. Bac., Oxon.

COACHING FOR EXAMINATIONS:
Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Trinity College, &c.

Many notable Successes,
amongst which was the celebrated Composer and Pianist,
WILLIAM BAINES,
who was entirely trained by Mr. JOWETT.

PIANOFORTE PLAYING AND INTERPRETATION.
SINGING, VOICE-PRODUCTION AND INTERPRETATION.
PERSONAL LESSONS IN LEEDS AND NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.
Including all Modern Work: Italian, French, German, Spanish, &c.

COMPLETE COURSE IN COMPOSITION.

A simple and completely successful system of
SIGHT READING.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS:
"Your splendid lessons."
'After fifth lesson: "I have received considerable enlightenment."

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.
LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, ACCOMPANIMENTS WRITTEN TO SONGS.

State Exam. or Subject.

HEATHFIELD, MOORLAND DRIVE, HARROGATE ROAD, LEEDS

FIELD-HYDE VOCAL SCHOOL

VOICE TRAINING. SOLO SINGING.
PRIVATE LESSONS.
TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSES.

Specialist preparation for the professional diploma examinations (L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.).

A Course of Lecture-Demonstrations in the ART OF VOICE TRAINING with special preparation for the above examinations will be commenced next term.

Of the last fifty candidates taking the L.R.A.M. or A.R.C.M. from Mr. FIELD-HYDE'S personal tuition, forty-two passed the practical section at first sitting, and only one pupil has ever failed at second sitting for Teachers' diploma.

For tests, advice, and final coaching before the September examinations, apply early to:

SECRETARY, FIELD-HYDE VOCAL SCHOOL,
43, Upper George Street, Bryanston Square,
London, W.1.

LONDON SEMI-NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD,

CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 15th, 1928

MALE-VOICE CHOIRS ... ... PRIZE £75
MIXED CHOIRS ... ... ... PRIZE £25
SOLOS, ETC.

SYLLABUS (two penny stamps) of Hon. Secs.,
J. DAVIES, 107, Falmouth Road, London, S.E.1.
W. J. WILLIAMS, 37, Denmark Hill, London, S.E.5.

NOTTINGHAM
MUSICAL FESTIVAL.
OCTOBER 24, 25, 26, and 27, 1928.

72 CLASSES IN VOCAL AND INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC AND ELOCUTION.

ADJUDICATORS:
SIR R. R. TERRY, D. Mus. JAMES LYON, D. Mus.
ALAN STEPHENSON, B. Mus. HERBERT FRYER.
MISS EDITHA KNOCKER. MISS M. GULLAN.

SYLLABUS (price 6*d.*) to be had from the Hon. Sec.,
W. F. BARTON, 28, Park Row, Nottingham.

ST. NICHOLAS COLE ABBEY, E.C.

The 2,000th RECITAL will be given on Tuesday, June 26th, at 1 p.m.
BACH'S MASS IN B MINOR
(Selection).
Vocalists:
MISS OLIVE STURGESS.
MISS MARGARET BALFOUR.
MR. ANDREW CLAYTON.
MR. TOPLISS GREEN.

ST. PAUL'S, WESTON-SUPER-MARE
(Walliscote Road).

AN ORGAN RECITAL will be given every MONDAY at 7.30
by
MR. CLIFFORD ROBERTS.

ST. VEDAST'S, FOSTER LANE, CHEAPSIDE.

MR. ARTHUR MASON, formerly Organist of Sydney Town Hall, Australia, will give four Organ Recitals as hereunder (on Mondays, at 1.10 p.m.):

June 11th.—Passacaglia (Bach), "Rhosymedre" (Vaughan Williams), Dithyramb (Harwood), Concerto in F (Handel), Adagio (Mozart), Toccata and Fugue in D minor (Bach).

June 18th.—94th Psalm (Reubke), Choral Preludes (Bach), Allegro, 5th Symphony (Widor), Barcarolle (Wolstenholme), Toccata in F (Bach).

June 25th.—Fantasia and Fugue in G minor (Bach), "Angel-Scene" (Humperdinck), Choral No. 3 (Franck), Choral Preludes (Brahms), Pastoral Sonata (Rheinberger).

July 2nd.—Fugue in B minor (Bach), Litanei (Schubert), "Nun danket alle Gott" (Karg-Elert), Intermezzo and Finale, 3rd Symphony (Vierne), Adagio (Beethoven), Finale in B flat (Franck).

PRELIMINARY COURSES.
HARMONY. COUNTERPOINT. FORM, ETC.
10 LESSONS, 12*s.*
MODERN CORR. COLLEGE. Sherwin Road, Nottingham.

TWENTY-NINTH YEAR

THE KEY TO VOCAL SUCCESS.
WILLIAM WOLLER'S
HOLIDAY AND WEEK-END COURSES for Teachers, Choirmasters, and Vocalists.

The entire study of Voice-Culture and Solo Singing placed on a logical, constructive basis, dealing with every difficulty met with in every-day teaching.

SPECIAL COURSE OF LECTURE-LESSONS will be held in LONDON during AUGUST—also in Bournemouth, Bristol, and Cardiff.

The same Course by Correspondence, and Private Lessons as usual.
37, CASTLETOWN ROAD, BARONS COURT, LONDON, W.14.

SALE BY AUCTION
OF THE
MUSIC LIBRARY Dr. Werner Wolffheim.
FIRST PART
From JUNE 13th to 16th, 1928

CONTAINING:
1. Collected works of the Musical Classics, Series of the "Denkmaeler," Re-impressions and Facsimilia of Old Music Editions.
2. Musical Journals and Periodicals.
3. Bibliography, Musical Dictionaries, Catalogues of Music Libraries, Thematic Lists.
4. MUSICAL THEORY AND SCHOOLS FROM THE 15TH TO 18TH CENTURIES.
5. Musical Instruments.
6. A UNIQUE COLLECTION OF TABLATURES. 30 Numbers.
7. OLD AND VALUABLE INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC: Piano, Organ, Violin Music, music of other Instruments with and without Accompaniment.

The most Important Music Library which has been for Sale for 50 years.

Catalogue sent on application.

Martin Breslauer,
Verlagsbuchhändler u. Antiquar,
Berlin, W.8.
Franzosische Str. 46. I.

Leo Liepmannssohn,
Antiquariat,
Berlin, S.W.11.
Bernburger Strasse 14.

Parcels of Piano or Organ Music.

Having just purchased a Music Library in which a very large selection of Piano and Organ Music is included, we have decided to make the following offer to readers of the Musical Times:—We will send a Bargain Parcel of 12 pieces of Piano or Organ Music for 3*s.* (Piano) or 4*s.* (Organ), post free in U.K. State whether Piano or Organ is desired. Every parcel will give satisfaction. Lists of the Music are not available.

QUOTE OFFER 122/BP.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,
119, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

YOUNG SINGERS
Their Voice Cultivation and Preservation.

A concise, comprehensive, up-to-date guide to all engaged in teaching voice-production, enunciation, and singing to boys and girls

By JAMES BATES

To be obtained from:—
MESSRS. STAINER & BELL, 58, Berners Street, London, W.1.

Price One Shilling and Twopence, post free.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING.
12,000 WORDS. ILLUSTRATED METHOD.
2*s.* 6*d.* Post free; Abroad, 3*s.* Pre-eminent Technique.
It will thoroughly prepare you for the position of "Conductor."
M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool.

Summer Holiday Course
For MUSIC TEACHERS and PIANISTS.

Monday, JULY 30th to Saturday, AUGUST 4th

(Opening Reception by invitation, Sunday, July 29th, at 8.15.)

12 LECTURES, 6 DEMONSTRATIONS,
3 MASTER-CLASSES.

personally conducted by

MARIA LEVINSKAYA

Fellow (late) Imperial Moscow Conservatoire · Member of the Council Faculty of Arts.

TRIBUTES FROM PAST MEMBERS.

A School Principal writes :

"The 'wonder' of last week is still with me, and I seem to be inspired. The Lectures thrilled me, and I came away full of new ideals and determination to carry them out. Specially did you help me in the method with beginners, and I am trying to start work in the 'Kindergarten' next term on these lines. . . ."

MARY E. KIDNER.
August 10th, 1927. Pembroke House School, Norwich.

An L.R.A.M. writes :

"Most helpful and enjoyable Holiday Course . . . We all left taking with us far more than we ever hoped or imagined we should gain, mentally, physically, and spiritually. . . . You seem to have given my nerves a grip, as well as my fingers."

KATHLEEN JANSEN.
The Vicarage, Newton Solney, Burton-on-Trent.
August 8th, 1927.

An A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., A.C.S.M., L.I.S.M., &c. :

"Why is one so helpless to express one's gratitude for all you have given us within this week? You have really solved the problems round which I myself have been groping so long."

GRACE MABEL HUDSON.
The Studio, 28, Sellons Avenue, Harlesden, N.W.
August 6th, 1927.

A Teacher of 20 years' experience writes :

"Each Lecture had so much food for thought, especially in the controversial points connected with technique. I am a teacher of 20 years' experience, so I could appreciate the amount of work, experience, and research, which lay behind each one of your Lectures."

November 14th, 1927. 13, Beaconsfield Place, Aberdeen.

CHRISTMAS COURSE, 1927-28.

The Head of Musical Department of Guildford High School writes :

"Thanks to your vivid and intensely artistic presentation of your philosophy of music, I am able to return to my teaching full of enthusiasm and hope, feeling that my feet are now set in the right path—after having wavered some time between the old and new schools of technique."

M. R. LOUGHBOROUGH
January 16th, 1928. Wynnstay, Guildford.

A School Music Mistress writes :

"I have talked so much of you, your lectures, your personality, and the hundred and one experiences of that week, that I have 'enthused' all the folk here to such an extent that they all want to pack up and rush for your help. . . . I would like to possess your touches and be put in a position to apply them in such a way as to begin, and carry on, any new pupils that come to me, entirely on your system."

M. A. MCNAUGHTON.
January 13th, 1928. 15, Orrell Lane, Aintree, Liverpool.

Principal of a Music School writes :

"You have opened up fresh avenues of thought which have greatly stimulated us in our teaching, and given us definite ideas of technique where before we had such hazy notions."

N. M. COX.
March 24th, 1928. 18, Carlton Crescent, Southampton.

An L.T.C.L. writes :

"Madame Levinskaya combines the Artist, the Scientist, and the Teacher in one, and speaks with authority, as for every 'why' she has a 'because,' which gives evidence of detailed personal research."

C. H. M. RICHARDSON (Ellison).
March 12th, 1928. 31, Clarence Road, Wood Green, N.22.

Write for Complete Syllabus of Lectures and Demonstrations, Fees, Residential Terms, &c., to Secretary :

LEVINSKAYA PIANOFORTE COLLEGE,

(The only Residential in London)

2, LEINSTER GARDENS, HYDE PARK, W.2.

PADDINGTON 0370.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES

BLANCHE ALLEN
SOPRANO

"A good and charming soprano voice made listening a pleasure."
—Birmingham Post.

Future bookings : Pump Room, Leamington ; Bexhill "Colonnade."
ORATORIO, OPERA, CONCERTS, MASONICS.
36, Albany Road, W.13. Tel. : Ealing 4756.

MISS LYDIA JOHN
(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.

Lecture-Recitals of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Professor of Voice-Production and Singing.
Pupils prepared for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., Scholarships and Festivals.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Lessons given at above address or West-End Studio, Cricklewood Conservatoire of Music, N.W.2 ; and Highbury Conservatoire, N.5, &c. Primrose 3869.

HAROLD KNOWLTON
TENOR.

Soloist, St. Paul's Cathedral.
Shirley, Park Road, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

WILLIAM LOMAS
(Late Royal College of Music, Manchester)
TENOR,
GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL.
ORATORIO, OPERA, BALLAD, AND SACRED.
45, St. Mary Street, Gloucester.

VERNON HARRISS
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medalist. BASS.

Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.
Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING.

ALBERT GARCIA
CARRIES ON THE TRADITIONS OF HIS GRANDFATHER, THE LATE MANUEL GARCIA.

STUDIO : 59, QUEEN'S ROAD, N.W.8.

H. N. HORTON
F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.

GIVES LESSONS IN PIANOFORTE AND SINGING
SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO VOICE PRODUCTION

Apply for particulars,
Messrs. Weekes's Studios, 14, Hanover Street, W.1. ; or 515, London Road, Thornton Heath.

MISS MARY LINDSAY
L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing.
Moderate Terms.
26, Onslow Square, S.W.7. Tel. : Kensington 3627.

MR. J. C. BRYDSON, MUS.B.,
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION.
Fees from 10*s.* 6*d.* for 10 lessons, according to Course.
"Balcary," KEGWORTH, near Derby.

ERNEST NEWTON, M.A,
(COMPOSER AND EDITOR).
Revises MSS. for publication. Lessons in Harmony and Composition, personally or by post.
Address : c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

E. SIMS-HILDITCH
LECTURER AND ADJUDICATOR.
Address, 37 Victoria Street, Crewe.

MISS PITT SOPER F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing, Royal Academy of Music, London.
Prepares Candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Examinations (Teachers and Performers).
For particulars, apply Wigmore Hall Studios.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.

Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London,
Gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to Candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1. Langham 3909.

VALENTINE HEMERY

(L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.).
Author of "Artistic Singing" (Curwen).
PROFESSOR OF SINGING.
Coaches for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Diplomas, Teacher or Performer.
14, Hanover Street, W.1.
Organists or others requiring well-trained Vocalists, please communicate.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF

SOLO PIANIST.
RUSSIAN MUSIC.
CONCERTS AND RECITALS.
TALKS AT THE PIANO.
For terms, apply to
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

YOUNG MUS. DOC.

COACHES BY CORRESPONDENCE.
ALL branches of Music, including Paper Work for Professional and Higher Examinations.
Send stamped, addressed envelope and specimen of work for FREE LESSON.
FEES FROM 2*s.* EACH LESSON.
"H. K." c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PAPER WORK BY Mus. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1,100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS
"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."
SUCCESSES (with those for January, 1928) include 3 F.R.C.O. (1 for Jan., 1928). 3 A.R.C.O. 2 L.R.A.M.
2*s.* 6*d.* per lesson and postage.
"E. B." c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

GEORGE A. ARMSTRONG, Mus. Bac., A.R.M.C.M., L.Mus. T.C.L. Correspondence Lessons in all subjects. Preparation for diplomas. 131, Warbreck Drive, Blackpool, N.S.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight-Reading Courses, Study Aids, 9*d.* Studies in Modulation, 3*s.*
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B. Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Street, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teacher of Singing), prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations. Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

MR. VICTOR BEIGEL (teacher of the late Gervase Elwes, Hubert Eisdell, John Goss, Lauritz Melchior, &c.) will teach at Bayreuth, during the Wagner Festival. Special courses for teachers. For details apply to Secretary, 18, Howley Place, London, W.2.

POSTAL TUITION by F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L. (Registered Teacher). Any Exam. One guinea ten lessons. Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, &c. Courses in History, Choir-Training, Aural Tests, Analysis, R.C.O. exams. Recent successes, F.R.C.O., July, 1927; A.R.C.O., January, 1928. Address: BM/JRMB, London, W.C.1.

L. R.A.M., A.R.C.M., PIANOFORTE.—Special Coaching by Arthur Ellarshaw, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

FREDERICK GREEN, Mus. B., F.R.C.O., &c. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator Prep. for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. 1, Newington, Liverpool.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-28... 334 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-28... 90 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work. (25 Successes.)
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint. (21 Successes.)
(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Organist and Musical Director, The City Temple), 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17. Telephone: Battersea 0916.
Special preparation for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Also L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. ORGAN EXAMINATIONS.
SINGLE LESSONS and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. inst. Also large four-manual organ. Pieces registered and phrased.
RECENT SUCCESSES IN ORGAN WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 L.R.A.M., Dec., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 1 A.R.C.M., April, 1920. | 1 A.R.C.O., July, 1921 |
| 1 L.R.A.M., April, 1924. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 1 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 4 A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 1 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 5 A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 4 A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 4 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 2 F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 4 A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. | 5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |

"Hints for R.C.O. Candidates" to be obtained from the Publishers, Reid Bros., 26, Eastcastle Street, Oxford Circus, W.1. 2/8 post free.

FREDERICK C. HAGGIS, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L., specialises in VOICE-TRAINING and SINGING. Pupils are offered, in addition to private tuition, exceptional advantages in Class-Singing, for the further study of Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, and Interpretation. Address: 14, Hanover St., W.1.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 413 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and the paper-work requirements for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas in pianoforte playing. For terms, &c., apply to 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922, L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

TO COMPOSERS.—Complete and systematic course, by correspondence, in Military Band Instrumentation. Write, Captain Charles Hoby, M.B.E., Mus. Doc., Oxon., Director of Music, Royal Marine Barracks, Chatham.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London.
SUCCESSES IN ORGAN PLAYING SINCE 1910:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1910 | ... | 8 | 1919 | ... | 11 |
| 1911 | ... | 10 | 1920 | ... | 7 |
| 1912 | ... | 20 | 1921 | ... | 9 |
| 1913 | ... | 18 | 1922 | ... | 15 |
| 1914 | ... | 25 | 1923 | ... | 15 |
| 1915 | ... | 25 | 1924 | ... | 7 |
| 1916 | ... | 18 | 1925 | ... | 14 |
| 1917 | ... | 2 | 1926 | ... | 11 |
| 1918 | ... | 3 | 1927 | ... | 12 |

5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

DR. W. HUNT, Mus. D. Durham (1926), F.R.C.O. Gives Lessons by Correspondence, for degrees and diplomas in music. Thorpe Road, Melton Mowbray.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, Sept., 1927, Mus. Doc., 3 Final Mus. Bac., and three 1st Mus. Bac. passes. Also in 1927—4 Mus. Doc. and 3 Mus. Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition. 200 successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, Mus. Doc., University of Toronto; F.R.C.O., F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons. Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning" prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Specialist in Pianoforte Playing, Touch, Technique, and Interpretation. Thirty years' experience in preparing for examinations. More than 1,000 of Dr. Middleton's pupils have gained Degrees and Diplomas. Address: Weekes' Studios, 14, Hanover Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 23 pupils' successes Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c. 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

MISS E. VAN OOSTVEEN, A.R.C.M. Returned from Paris with highest certificates, teaches violin, harmony, counterpoint, and fugue. Sole assistant at l'Ecole Normale de Musique to Eugène Cools (composer, Counterpoint and Fugue Professor at Conservatoire). Write, 66, Holland Road, W.14.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.
Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering." 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6d.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture, Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes. 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

"BY CORRESPONDENCE"

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING, Mus. Doc., Lond., L.R.A.M.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work
(3.) Touch, and Technique (for Pianoforte Diplomas)
(4.) Trinity College Diplomas
(5.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O.
(6.) Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. (London and Durham)
(7.) Separate Subjects
NUMEROUS SUCCESSES.
Dr. SPRANKLING also gives PERSONAL LESSONS in Bristol and London. Special Coaching for all Pianoforte Diplomas.
Address: Dr. NORMAN SPRANKLING, 46, Clarendon Road, Redland, Bristol. Telephone: Bristol 3033.

DR. A. E. TAYLOR. PUPIL GAINED STILLIE Bursary for Cpt.; Gold Medal for Cpt., Ass. Board; Gold Medal for Har., Ass. Board; C. C. Scholarship; A.R.C.O., A.T.C.L., Mus. B. Compositions revised and accompaniments written. Portland Place, Lancaster.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS (all music Exams.) by recognised and well-qualified Professor. 1s. 6d. per lesson, and postage. Stamp for specimen. Composers advised and assisted. "W. H. D.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O.
SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) Mus. Bac. Degree.
Several recent successes in all these examinations.
R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."
SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.
319 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
189 F.R.C.O. " " "
RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. | 10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. | 7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921. | 8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. | 9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924 |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 8 F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928 | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

MISS IRENE BRETTELL, Pupil of Prof. Sevcik. Berners Street and West-end Studios. Apply, 352, Camden Road, N.7.

YOUNG LADY, L.T.C.L., PIANOFORTE TEACHER, residing in Bedfordshire, DESIRES visiting or resident POST in a School. Box No. 37, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

YOUNG SINGING PROFESSOR is willing to pay (premium) to one anxious to retire from good existing connection. Reply, "W. G.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1.

CONDUCTOR (experienced) will GIVE SERVICES to any Choral, Orchestral, or Operatic Society, London or Provinces. Box 38, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ST. PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL, DUBLIN.—ALTO WANTED. Salary, £175 per annum, rising to £220 after six months; additional £20 for light duty in Trinity College choir. Applications, giving references, age, &c., to be sent to The Succentor, St. Patrick's Cathedral, not later than June 15th.

ALTO REQUIRED at All Souls' Church, Langham Place, W. £20. Applications by letter only, giving experience, to Director of Music.

CANTERBURY CATHEDRAL.—There is a VACANCY for a TENOR LAY-CLERK. For particulars apply to The Precentor, Precincts 21, Canterbury.

LAY-CLERK (TENOR).—There is a VACANCY for a tenor lay-clerk in the Carlisle Cathedral Choir. Salary, £100. Attendance is usually required on week-days at the afternoon service only. Applications, with testimonials or references, should be sent not later than June 12th, to the Chapter Clerk, Dean and Chapter Registry, Carlisle, from whom further particulars may be obtained.

TENOR WANTED.—£25 PER ANNUM. Dr. Reginald Hunt, St. Mary's, Bryanston Square, W.1.

TENOR REQUIRED for St. Stephen's Walbrook, E.C. £15. Good reader. Light duties. G. Metzler, 2, Edgarley Terrace, S.W.6.

SOLO TENOR REQUIRED for St. Peter's, Vere Street, W.1. £25. One accustomed to Church services. Address, "Organist," 98, Ardgowan Road, S.E.6.

BASS LAY-CLERK WANTED for St. Michael's College, Tenbury, next September. Salary, £80, rising to £100. Age under 30. Apply, with three recent testimonials, to the Rev. The Warden.

SOLO and CHORUS MEN supplied for Church work, Weddings, &c. Apply, G. Hugh Weedon, 485, Green Lanes, Harringay, N.4.

CHELSEA OLD CHURCH.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED IMMEDIATELY. Salary, £90. Apply by letter only, stating age, qualifications, experience, testimonials, and references, to Rev. Maude-Roxby, 22, Embankment Gardens, Chelsea, S.W.3.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for All Hallows' Parish Church, Tottenham, N., to commence duties September 2. £70 per annum. Communicant, good choir-trainer, and should be resident or within reasonable distance. Apply, by letter only, with two testimonials, and stating experience, qualifications, &c., to Secretary, 17, Ruskin Road, Tottenham, N.17.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED. Hexham Abbey. Must be experienced choir-trainer. Commencing salary, £120. Apply, enclosing testimonials, Rector.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED for U. F. High Church, Forres. Good modern two-manual Norman & Beard organ. Liberal salary. Apply, with testimonials, to C. M. Fraser, Solicitor, Forres, Clerk to Deacons' Court.

ORGANIST REQUIRED for West (Presbyterian) Church, Ballymena. Full particulars and conditions of appointment may be obtained from the Session Clerk, with whom applications should be lodged not later than 6th June.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED for the Highbury Quadrant Congregational Church, London, N.5. Salary, £80 per annum. Applications, endorsed "Organist," to reach the Church Secretary on or before Friday, June 8th.

ASSISTANT-ORGANIST REQUIRED at Highgate Parish Church. Prefer one living N. London, and willing to sing in choir. In return: coaching (exam.), and free organ practice. Large organ, electrically blown. All previous assistants have posts. Mr. G. T. Pinches, F.R.C.O., 4, Hornsey Lane Gardens, London, N.

EXPERIENCED ORGANIST and CHOIR-TRAINER, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., can DEPUTISE August and September. Good organ essential. Box 43, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1.

EXPERIENCED PROVINCIAL ORGANIST (F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.) can deputise in London, two consecutive Sundays in August. Reasonable fee. "P.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TEMPORARY Work. Experienced ORGANIST-Choir-trainer (F.R.C.O.). Communicant. At liberty for a few months. London or suburbs. Write, "L.R.A.M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

R.C.O. EXAMS.—Finishing lessons given on replica of R.C.O. organ at National Institute for the Blind, London. Apply, Mr. H. V. Spanner, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., 79, Crofton Road, London, S.E.5. Candidates are advised to apply early.

ESSAY.—A.R.C.O., July next. Secure now. New Series of 6 Model Essays on the book set for the Exam.: Success assured. Also valuable "hints" on writing the Essay. Enclose 4s. 6d. to "Essays," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN CLASS (Saturdays, 2 p.m.)

ORGAN LESSONS by well-qualified teacher, on large organ, situated within easy access of City and West-End. Organists desiring individual high-class tuition at very moderate fees, should write to "R. C. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1, for full particulars of the above.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—1s. 4d. an hour (pupils, 9d.). Hydraulic-blown, two-manual and pedal organ, at the Fulham School of Music, 2, Edgarley Terrace, S.W.6.

ORGAN LESSONS at ST. STEPHEN'S WALBROOK, E.C.4. GEORGE METZLER, F.R.C.O. Tel.: Putney 4208.

AUTHORS and COMPOSERS.—SONGS and Musical Compositions Wanted for publication. We compose Music to Lyrics. Advice free to new authors and composers. Send MSS. to The Carlton Music Agency, 151, Nevill Road, London, N.16.

IMPORTANT TO COMPOSERS.—Send stamp for our latest prospectus on music publishing. The Norman Reed Music Company, 133A, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

BAND PARTS ARRANGED, Songs, Solos, &c. COPYING of any description by retired Conductor. Coulton, 7, Museum Street, Warrington.

CLEAR COPIES of MUSIC, MSS., &c. Prompt service. Multiple apparatus. Inquiries invited. Estimates given. Percy Rowe, 28, The Causeway, Teddington.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS, Glenholme, Hessle High Road, Hull, Yorks.

MUSIC COPYING, Transposition, Arrangements, Band Parts, &c., Smith, 40, Coniston Rd., Muswell Hill, N.10.

THE REVISION OF MSS. is UNDERTAKEN by musical critic and song composer. Lessons in piano, singing, theory. Herbert H. Nelson, 9, Grange Rd., Canonbury, N.1.

MUSIC DUPLICATING.—All kinds, any number; perfect copies. Specimens and prices on application to E. Herrick, at 37, Amherst Road, West Ealing, W.

LYRICS WANTED, for Sentimental and Humorous Songs, Ballads, Vocal Dances, &c. Send MSS. LYRICS FOR SALE. We can supply Composers with excellent material for any kind of Song. Send stamp for lists. The Lyric Agency, 151, Nevill Road, London, N.16.

CHILDREN'S FESTIVAL HYMNS.—Send for specimen Prize tune set for "Jesu, meek and gentle," also a pleasing one for "Once in royal David's city." Together, 2d. (Novello.) J. J. Jones, 4, Temple Street, Bristol.

CHURCH CHOIRS' FESTIVALS.—Send for specimen three attractive tunes to well-known Hymns. Press notices: 1, "Splendidly serviceable tunes"; 2, "The music is delightful." Together, 3d. (Novello.) J. J. Jones, 4, Temple Street, Bristol.

CHOIR MUSIC FOR SALE, Cheap.—Anthems for Harvest, Christmas, Easter; Te Deum settings, Canticles, and various other music. List from Rector, Patching, Worthing.

FOR SALE. BECHSTEIN FULL GRAND. Ebonized case. Good condition. Further particulars, apply Box 40, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—Broadwood Boudoir Grand PIANO. Apply, Bradby, 75, Elgin Crescent, London, W.11.

FOR SALE.—BRINSMEAD PIANOFORTE, with Norman & Beard pedal attachment: also Wolseley touring car, 4-seater. Splendid condition. Orton, 23, The Drive, Golder's Green.

BLÜTHNER Drawing-Room GRAND. Aliquot scaling. Excellent order. £90. Seen by appointment. Write, BM/GDNX, London, W.C.1.

FOR SALE.—CHEAP, ORGAN, 198 PIPES, Wooden, 8-ft. by 7-ft., 30-in. deep. Beautiful "Wald flute" tone. Suitable for small Church or hall. Apply, Mrs. Glass, Merchant Kintore, Aberdeenshire.

FOR SALE.—First-class Two-Manual PEDAL ORGAN. Swell and Great. 15 Speaking Stops. Two 16-ft., one 8-ft. on Pedal. Five couplers. Built on pneumatic system; electric motor. Cost £900. Accept £600. Splendid condition, suitable for Chapel. Built by Taylor, Leicester. Apply Box 41, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—TWO-MANUAL REED ORGAN (with Pedals), by Karn. 10 Stops; 6 sets of reeds. Excellent case. In good condition. Box No. 39, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MASON & HAMLIN TWO-MANUAL ORGAN, R.C.O. pedals. Latest model. £90. "J. Y.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

NEW CHURCH ORGAN. Two-manuals (61). Angle stops jambs. Fine oak case. £550, including erection. Photo, &c., Dalladay, 4, Wellington Gardens, Hastings.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

ORGAN MUSIC, PIANO MUSIC, FOR SALE.—Cheap. Stamp for lists. 168, Ivydale Road, Peckham, S.E.15.

WANTED to PURCHASE, Second-hand Orchestral Scores by Wagner, Berlioz, Schubert, Mozart, Elgar, Franck, Delius, and modern composers. Also musical literature by the best authors. Send lowest prices and full particulars by letter to Raymond, 109, Queens Road, Finsbury Park, London, N.4.

WANTED (purchase), PIANO-TEACHING CONNECTION or (small) PREPARATORY SCHOOL. Coast preferred. Box 42, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour St., W.1.

"GROVE'S DICTIONARY OF MUSIC." A gentleman with good connection among music teachers, band conductors, organists, &c., is required by a well-known publishing house to obtain subscribers for this famous work. Previous selling experience not essential if applicant is well-known in musical circles. Write, giving full particulars, to "J. E. H.," The Globe Publishing Co., Ltd., 112, Strand, London, W.C.2.

FORM: ESSAY: MUSICAL HISTORY: A.R.C.O.: F.R.C.O.

5 LESSONS. ANY SUBJECT, 6s.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE. Sherwin Rd., Nottingham.

Being a collection of the lesser known works of the Great Masters, and the best works of the lesser known Masters. For Pianoforte and Voice.

Something New, Something "Different" in Music.

Beautiful pianoforte selections and Songs not often heard—some unpublished before in this country.
Use Coupon below and learn the facts.

Variety is the spice of music, as well as of life itself. You love the oft-played classics, but you long for new musical sensations.

Here is a collection of pieces for pianoforte and voice that have been selected for two qualities—beauty and comparative rarity. All the second-rate hackneyed pieces have been left out. Every selection is a classic, and many will be new to you. We offer you Schubert songs specially translated for us from the German, we give you Brahms selections never before published in this country.

We give you selections from "The Beggar's Opera," with our own copyright musical setting.

From a 17th-century gem by Couperin to Brahms's "Maiden's Curse," from a Scarlatti selection written for the harpsichord to Borodin's intensely Russian music, from a charming Spanish study by Jensen to a drinking song by Chopin (probably you have never heard of this last), there is originality of selection, sparkling beauty, and true musical interest.

The pieces are bound in four volumes de luxe, and would cost an enormous figure if you tried to collect them separately. You may have them on very easy terms.

JUST A FEW OF THE SELECTIONS FOR PIANO AND VOICE.

Le Carillon de Cythère (Piano) Couperin.
Pastorale (Piano) ... Scarlatti.
Rigaudon de Dardanus (Piano) Rameau.
"The Beggar's Opera" (four Songs) Gay.
Le Coucou (Piano)... Daquin.
Largo Appassionata (Opus 2, No. 2) (Piano) ... Beethoven.
Largo al Factotum, from "Barber of Seville" (Song, in English) Rossini.

"Rosamund" Music (Piano) ... ... } Schubert.
Wohin (Song) ... }
Die Forelle ... ... }
Death and the Maiden (Songs) ... ... }
Two Nocturnes (Piano) } Chopin.
Two Preludes (Piano) }
One Polonaise (Piano) }
Drinking Song ... }
Nocturne, Opus 23, No. 4 (Piano) Schumann.
The Loreley (Song) ... Liszt.

Serenade (Piano) ... ... Raff.
The Maiden's Curse (Song) ... ... } Brahms.
Rhapsodie, Opus 119, No. 4 (Piano) ... }
Au Couvent (Piano) Borodin.
Play away, Oh my Pandora (Song) Jensen.
Danse Chinoise (Piano) ... } Tschaikowsky.
Andante Cantabile (Piano) ... ... }
Musical Box (Piano) Rebikow.
Basso Ostinato (Piano) Arensky.

2/6 First Payment brings you the four magnificently bound volumes with over 100 selections. But send no money now.

Send Coupon below and learn the facts.

FREE We will send you a prospectus that will tell you the whole story, of interest to everyone who loves music. It gives the full contents of the four volumes and tells the very easy terms on which this unique collection is sold.

THE WAVERLEY BOOK CO., LTD. (Dept. M. Times, E.), 96 & 97, FARRINGDON STREET, LONDON, E.C.4.

Please send your FREE Book with particulars and sample music pages of THE WAVERLEY COLLECTION OF RARE AND BEAUTIFUL MUSIC, also information as to your offer to send the complete work for a small first payment.

NAME.....
(Use unsealed envelope, ½d. postage, or send postcard.)

ADDRESS.....

M. Times E. 1928.....

CRAMER

MAGNIFICENT 1928
LATEST MODELS

| | |
|---|---|
| BABY GRAND ... | 120 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT GRAND | 65 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT PLAYER FULL SCALE LATEST DEVICES | 103 Gns. |

Write for our very generous Hire-Purchase Terms.

J. B. CRAMER & CO., Ltd.,
139 NEW BOND ST., W.1.
46 MOORGATE, E.C.2.
128/130 KENSINGTON HIGH STREET, W.8.

JOSEF HOLBROOKE
CHAMBER WORKS

Violin and Pianoforte Sonata (No. 3). "Orientale."
Violin Concerto in F (Op. 59).
Trio for PIANO, VIOLIN, and HORN (or VIOLA).
Trio for PIANO, OBOE, and CLARINET (or FLUTE).
Piano Quartet in G minor.
Piano Quintet in G minor.
Quintet No. 1—for TWO VLNS., VIOLA, 'CELLO, and CLARINET.
Quintet No. 2—for TWO VLNS., VIOLA, 'CELLO, and CLARINET.
Sextet (Dances) No. 1—for PIANO, TWO VLNS., VIOLA, 'CELLO, and CLARINET.
Sextet No. 2—for PIANO, FLUTE, OBOE, CLARINET, and CORNET.
Sextet No. 3—for PIANO and STRINGS.
Sextet No. 4. "In Memoriam." For PIANO and STRINGS.
Suites Nos. 1 and 2—for STRING ORCHESTRA.

For full list of Pianoforte Music and Songs apply to

W. PAXTON & Co., LTD.
22, HIGH STREET, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from

STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1.
'PHONE: MAYFAIR 6641-5.

PIANOS

BY

Bechstein, Bord, Schiedmayer,
Chappell, Rogers, Gors, & Kallmann

and other celebrated makers

The Profession most cordially invited to inspect our large and varied stock of New and Second-hand Pianos. Cash, Hire, or Hire-purchase. Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:

CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: MUSEUM 0439.

JUST PUBLISHED.

GOD WITHIN

MOTET

FOR CHORUS, ORCHESTRA, AND ORGAN

Composed for the 274th Festival of the Sons of the Clergy

BY

A. HERBERT BREWER

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

FRANZ SCHUBERT
1928
CENTENARY PUBLICATIONS.

12 PIANOFORTE PIECES.

PRICE
1/-

CONTENTS:
Military March; Entr'acte and Ballet Music (Rosamunde); Impromptu, Op. 90, No. 3; Op. 142, Nos. 2 and 3; Valse; Moment Musical, No. 3; Menuetto; Andante, Op. 78, from Sonatas, Nos. 1 and 3.

12 FAMOUS SONGS

PRICE
1/6

CONTENTS:
The Erl King; Serenade; In Praise of Tears; Hark! Hark! the Lark; Litany; Ave Maria; Who is Sylvia?; Adieu; The First Loss; The Post; Impatience; Cradle Song.

ENGLISH AND GERMAN WORDS.

OF ALL MUSIC DEALERS, or
W. PAXTON & CO., LTD.,
NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

FERD. KUECHLER'S

(Teacher at the Leipsic Conservatory)

COURSE of VIOLIN INSTRUCTION

is a

TRIUMPH

of practical teaching

TO KNOW IT IS TO RECOMMEND IT

Send for a specimen copy from the publishers, or ask your music-seller to let you have one on approval.

HUG & Co.
MUSIC PUBLISHERS.
LEIPSIC

CONDUCTING and CHOIR TRAINING

are being specially dealt with at the

"MUSICIANS' HOLIDAY"

at

SEASCALE

August 2nd to 30th.

For a bracing, healthful, and enjoyable time in congenial company, the "Seascale Musicians' Holiday" is ideal. LECTURE COURSES—which are entirely optional—include:

CONDUCTING AND CHOIR-TRAINING.
Sir Henry Coward, M.A., Mus. D.; Mr. Robert McLeod, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O.; Mr. Ernest Read, F.R.A.M.; Mr. H. Wiseman, M.A.

MUSICAL APPRECIATION.
Dr. Percy C. Buck, M.A., Mus. D., A.R.C.M., F.R.C.O.; Mr. Ernest Fowles, F.R.A.M.

PIANOFORTE TEACHING.
Miss Nellie Holland, A.R.C.M.; Mr. Percy A. Whitehead, A.R.C.M.

HARMONY. Mr. E. Fowles.

MEMORY TRAINING. Miss L. Mackinnon, L.R.A.M.

PSYCHOLOGY.
Dr. Buck and Mr. Ernest Hunt.

Chamber Music, Aural Culture, Eurhythmics, Folk-Dancing.

Apply for illustrated booklet, to the HOLIDAY COURSE MANAGER
TRAINING SCHOOL FOR MUSIC TEACHERS,
73, HIGH ST., MARYLEBONE, W.1.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF HUDDERSFIELD.

"MRS. SUNDERLAND" COMPETITION.

PRIZES FOR ORIGINAL MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS.
Open to Natives of Yorkshire or Ten Years' Residents.

Adjudicator: DR. E. C. BAIRSTOW.

1. TWO-PART SONG for SCHOOLS.
   1st Prize—£5 5s. and £5 towards cost of publication.
   2nd Prize—£2 2s.
2. SOPRANO or TENOR SOLO.
   1st Prize—£5 5s. and £5 towards cost of publication.
   2nd Prize—£2 2s.
3. HYMN-TUNE (to specified words).
   1st Prize—£1 1s. 2nd Prize—10s. 6d.

Compositions to be forwarded on or before July 1 next.

Further particulars may be obtained from the Secretary, MR. T. THORP, care of Technical College, Huddersfield.

MATRIC.
SUCCESSES ... ... ... ... ... 155
MODERN CORR. COLLEGE. Sherwin Rd., Nottingham

JUST PUBLISHED.

MADGE

A CAMP-FIRE PLAY

BY

KITTY BARNE

INTRODUCING

FOLK-SONGS, SUNG AND ACTED

Price One Shilling.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.

Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:

Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus.D., F.S.A.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus.D.

Wednesdays, June 6th, 13th, and 27th, at 3 p.m.—Students' Concert.

Wednesday, June 20th, at 3 p.m.—Concert by vocalists in Miss W. Vincent's class.

June 23rd.—Last day of entry for the July Diploma examinations, to be held at certain approved Provincial Centres, as well as at the College in London.

July 7th.—Last day of entry for the Open Competition for the Bambridge Pianoforte Scholarship (see special advertisement) and for Two Pianoforte, One Violin, Two 'Cello, One Clarinet, One Bassoon, One French Horn, and One Trumpet Scholarships.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Dramatic and Operatic Elocution. The Lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student; pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open to sufficiently competent persons who are not College Students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors' Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

NOW READY.

LOVE IN A VILLAGE

MUSIC BY

DR. ARNE AND OTHERS.

ARRANGED BY

ALFRED REYNOLDS.

COMPLETE VOCAL SCORE of the Bickerstaffe-Arne Comic Opera, as now being performed at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith.

"The score is particularly interesting to music-lovers, for it contains examples of a remarkable number of old noteworthy composers."—Referee.

"A wealth of lovely tunes."—The Times.

PRICE SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.
(By post, 7*s.* 11*d.*)

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,
20, KINGLY STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD'S PORTRAIT CLASSICS SERIES

INCLUDES

Schubert Album

The Centenary of this Composer falls on Nov. 19th, 1928.

TWO ECOSSAISES, Op. 33
VALSE, Op. 9a
LITTLE VALSE, Op. 9b
GERMAN DANCES, Op. 33
MOMENT MUSICAL, Op. 94, No. 2
MOMENT MUSICAL, Op. 94, No. 3
MOMENT MUSICAL, Op. 94, No. 6
MENUET, Op. 78, No. 3
IMPROMPTU, Op. 90, No. 1
IMPROMPTU, Op. 90, No. 3
" " 90, " 4
" " 142, " 2
SCHERZO, B flat major
" D flat major
IMPROMPTU, Op. 142, No. 3
MARCHE MILITAIRE, Op. 51, No. 1
BALLET from "ROSAMUNDE"
SYMPHONY IN B MINOR ("Unfinished" Symphony)

Portrait Cover, 3/6 Edition 1119. Cloth Cover, 6/6

A SUCCESSFUL CHORAL WORK.

ALBERT W. KETÈLBEY'S PATRIOTIC ODE

MEN OF ENGLAND

Words by THOMAS CAMPBELL (1777-1844)

FOR CHORUS (S.A.T.B.)

PRICE SIXPENCE NET

With Organ, Pianoforte, or Orchestral Accompaniment. (Orchestral Parts may be hired.)

Tonic Sol-fa Arrangement just Issued. Price 4d. net.

This work received enthusiastic receptions when featured at the Kingsway Hall (and broadcast) on several recent occasions.
A specimen copy will be forwarded to any professional musician who is interested.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,
8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Specially composed for the Blackpool Musical Festival, 1928.

THE BLESSED DAMOZEL

BY

D. G. ROSSETTI

SET TO MUSIC FOR FEMALE VOICES

BY

JULIUS HARRISON

Price, One Shilling and Sixpence

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Reproduced from a photograph by Russell, London

W. Amon del Orchard

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

JUNE 1 1928

(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 558.)

MR. W. ARUNDEL ORCHARD

Among the visitors to whom London is now giving welcome, there is a musician from overseas to whom we gladly extend a greeting. Mr. W. Arundel Orchard is the Director of the State Conservatorium of Music at Sydney, an institution of great and growing importance that amply serves the populous city of which it is the musical centre. In figures the strength of the Conservatorium is soon told; the teaching staff numbers over fifty, and last year there were sixteen hundred pupils. Moreover we gather, from particulars modestly granted to our questioning by Mr. Orchard himself, that the work of the institution is as alert as its numbers are flourishing.

The Conservatorium, which occupies a prominent position on one of the best sites at Sydney, was founded in 1915, and Mr. Henri Verbrugghen was the first Director. When he resigned, in 1921, the Government called far and wide for applications, and ultimately Mr. Orchard was appointed. A Londoner born, the new Director had made Australia his home for many years, and had worked his way to a prominent position among the musicians of Sydney. His claim to the appointment asserted itself against the usual preference for a directing mind unaffected by local associations. It says much for Mr. Orchard's character and abilities that the customary principle was overruled. Under his guidance the Conservatorium has steadily grown in prestige and popularity, and has now won its way to a high academic standing. Knowing that many of our readers would be interested in these matters, we asked Mr. Orchard for a sketch of the work carried on at the Conservatorium, and the following is what he told us.

One of the root principles of the teaching is that proficiency in any single subject should be founded on a broad knowledge of the whole art. To this end all pupils are given free instruction in theory and harmony, and are required to attend a three years' course of lectures in musical history. The majority of the pupils, it is hardly necessary to state, are singers, pianists, and violinists. As a definite objective for their studies they are offered an examination test with the diploma of the Conservatorium as a warrant of merit. An advanced examination on their first period of study admits them to the diploma class, which they attend for two years as a qualification for the final test. This is in four sections. The first consists of two paper examinations on their general knowledge of the art of music. The second is a public recital with a programme that lasts about an hour and a half. At the third the candidate plays a concerto or sings an aria with orchestral accompaniment. The fourth is a test of ensemble performance in a chamber work or, in the case of a singer, a concerted scene from opera. It is evident that the Conservatorium does not scatter its awards lightly. We wonder how many of our West-End recital-givers would succeed in satisfying a Sydney board of examiners. For students of the composer class who do not specialise in performance there is an equivalent examination that puts their diploma on the same level of difficulty as a Mus. Bac. degree.

The orchestra, which takes a prominent part in the Conservatorium activities, is made up of the professors and of advanced students selected from the most proficient of the sixty holders of orchestral scholarships. The orchestra is conducted by the Director, and, in addition to its regular concerts, frequently co-operates with visiting artists such as Dame Nellie Melba, Kreisler, Heifetz, Backhaus, and others who have visited Australia during the past three years. As a feeding ground for the larger orchestra, there is another, known as the Students' Orchestra, which meets every week for rehearsals and has a thorough grounding in orchestral technique under the conductorship of Mr. Alfred Hill, who is an enthusiast in this sphere of work. There are also two junior orchestras for strings only. Thus every care is taken to ensure that the young players have had at least two or three years' orchestral experience before joining the Director's orchestra.

This orchestra might well stand as a source of pride to the institution, for it is the principal orchestra not only of the Conservatorium, but of Sydney itself. For its acquaintance with the greater symphonic works the city is entirely dependent upon the Conservatorium concerts. The repertory is, of course, founded on the classics, both for the good of the students and for the good of the audiences, and also as a condition of material success. Mr. Orchard has discovered, as so many others have discovered, that missionary work cannot stand alone in programme-making. In the long run, Sydney audiences, like London audiences, need to be offered works of known value as an inducement to encounter the unknown. With such safeguarding,

Mr. Orchard has been able to venture beyond the common repertory and introduce to Sydney such works as—to name those of British origin—Holst's 'The Planets' and 'St. Paul's Suite,' Elgar's Violin Concerto, Vaughan Williams's 'Pastoral Symphony' and 'The Lark Ascending.'

About fifteen symphony concerts are given during the year, six of them to large audiences of children, who are duly helped in their listening by Mr. Orchard's 'tales out of school.'

The orchestra also works in conjunction with the Conservatorium choir. Avoiding the standard choral works such as 'The Messiah' and 'Elijah,' which are performed by the exterior choral bodies, the Conservatorium choir is able to indulge in a freer choice and perform works like the B minor Mass and Beethoven's Mass in D. It has also given the first performance in Australia of Bantock's 'Sea Wanderers' and 'The Time Spirit,' and of two sets of Holst's 'Hymns from the Rig Veda.' The advantage of having a choir and orchestra of students is that the conductor may rehearse them as often and as long as he likes, and a performance may be put off until he is satisfied that all has been done to bring it up to standard. Mr. Orchard says that the greater part of a year's work went to the preparation of the B minor Mass.

Some years ago Mr. Orchard gave a performance of Bantock's 'Omar Khayyám,' the work causing a profound impression. This was prior to his advent to the Conservatorium.

Chamber music is diligently cultivated at the Conservatorium. There are first-year, second-year, and third-year classes, each of which meets twice a week, and concerts are given by a quartet of professors. The leader is Mr. Gerald Walenn, a violinist formerly well known in London (his brother is Mr. Herbert Walenn, the Principal of the London School of Violoncello Playing). As a result of the many public performances of this quartet, there has grown up at Sydney a school of chamber music listeners. Mr. Orchard declares that if a first-class Quartet like the London or the Léner came to Sydney it could be confident of filling the Conservatorium Hall (which seats eleven hundred) for at least two or three concerts.

There is, of course, an operatic class, and every year one grand opera is studied, the works hitherto undertaken being 'Figaro,' 'The Immortal Hour,' and 'Euryanthe.' The performances are given for a week during the last term of the year, with a double cast of principals.

The Conservatorium does not always put a closure on its work at the end of term. Twice a year during vacation it sends out a touring party consisting of a pianist, a violinist, a 'cellist, and two singers, to give concerts in remote places where very little, if any, good music penetrates in the ordinary course. Usually about six towns are visited, and the concert-halls are always crowded. The artists give their services, retaining only travelling expenses, and the net proceeds (often over a hundred pounds) are given to local charities. These concerts are extremely popular and so much in demand that Mr. Orchard thinks that he could safely send out six parties a year, instead of two, were it possible to do so.

How the Conservatorium rises to a big occasion is shown by the programme of its Beethoven Centenary celebration of last year. During the week's festival, three concerts were given, the programmes of which included the first 'Rasoumovsky' Quartet, the Trio in B flat (Op. 97), and the Septet; the second 'Leonora' Overture, 'Abscheulicher' from 'Fidelio,' and the Violin Concerto; the third 'Leonora' Overture, the C minor Pianoforte Concerto, and the Choral Symphony. There can be few schools of music able to make so imposing a display as this.

Such in brief are the activities of the Sydney Conservatorium. It will be seen that far more than any kindred institution in London it is the centre of a city's musical life. Without it the musical people among Sydney's million and a quarter would be in a poor way. They could import famous artists now and then, as they occasionally do. But famous artists do not favour so widespread a touring ground as Australia, where hundreds of miles separate one concert platform from the next. They come but seldom, and the sum total of their efforts—with, perhaps, a fortuitous visit by a touring opera company—would make a meagre programme for the musically inclined. An organization, therefore, that keeps up a regular supply of choral, orchestral, and chamber concerts is a great asset to the city, and one, we gather, that is well appreciated. The public responds with good audiences. Appreciation of another kind is shown by the private citizens who have supplied the funds for about twenty open scholarships. Unofficially, Sydney is indeed a musical city. We have to qualify the statement because officially the city holds aloof from musical matters. The only substantial request made of the Municipality, that it should lower the pitch of the Town Hall organ to that of Mr. Orchard's orchestra, has hitherto been refused.

Mr. Orchard is now enjoying a short Wanderjahr which has brought him to London for the first time in twenty-five years. As it is no part of his plan to spend a purposeless holiday, he has occupied his time in exploring the Continent of Europe for music schools, seeking instruction and example, and no doubt discovering here and there that he had more to teach than he had to learn. His tour of inspection has taken him to Naples, Florence, Milan, Vienna, Salzburg, Prague, Munich, Nuremberg, Dresden, Berlin, Leipsic, Frankfort, and Cologne. He says that he has been delighted with the cordiality and helpfulness with which his visits have been received everywhere. Asked for his impressions, Mr. Orchard talked chiefly of Vienna, where the intensity of the musical life struck him as being phenomenal. He found that two first-class opera-houses were running simultaneously, usually both full, and that if a symphony concert occurred on the same evening as two operas, it would nevertheless gather a crowded audience. If at the same time a chamber concert or recital were proceeding, that, too, would contrive to fill its hall. Under these conditions, for instance, Mr. Orchard witnessed a scene of great enthusiasm at a Schubert recital given, not by a European celebrity, but by a local singer. At the opera Mr. Orchard attended the first performance of Stravinsky's 'Œdipus Rex' and on the same evening Alfano's 'La Madonna Imperia.' He was also able to compare the productions of 'Turandot' at Naples and at Vienna, much to the advantage of the latter. At Vienna, he says, there was more art in the stage setting and action, and more truth in the whole atmosphere of the production. At Prague, Mr. Orchard found that people were just as keen in musical matters as they were at Vienna, and showed the same attachment for their own composers and works.

We would have liked to discover what impression our own state of musical affairs made upon Mr. Orchard after his experience of these highly musical nations on the Continent. We might have heard some flattering things, or some pertinent remarks that would have tried Mr. Orchard's powers of diplomacy. The situation was eased by the fact that he had scarcely been long enough in this country to form any impression at all, except of the beautiful unconcern with which late-comers disturbed him at Covent Garden. At Vienna, he said, this would be considered neither clever nor polite.

As we write, Mr. Orchard is somewhere in Britain, an alert watcher for signs and symbols, unable to distinguish perhaps whether he is a home-comer from exile or a visitor to a strange land. Certain ready writers are fond of informing us that in the last twenty-five years we have converted ourselves into an entirely new nation, and on the whole are rather pleased about it. It needs one who has not been a spectator of the change to draw a sudden contrast between memory and actuality and to tell us whether we have suffered a re-birth or whether we are the same miscellany slightly re-sorted. We hope at least that Mr. Orchard will not find that we have grown deficient in habits of cordiality and hospitality to the friend from overseas, and that his afterthoughts of the visit will be stirred by many pleasant memories. Our readers, we are sure, will join us in wishing him continued success and honour in his work.

M.

Photo by] [A. J. Kent

THE STATE CONSERVATORIUM, SYDNEY, NEW SOUTH WALES

SCHUBERT'S STYLE

By Richard Capell

III.—Accentuation

Schubert's song-writing represents a special agreement between music and verse not quite like any known before or since. Classical music never attained to his close terms with poetry. The later romantic music was to become more intimate with the poets even than Schubert's was—and, indeed, to the point of subserviency. Schubert's song-writing was in general a rendering of the mood of his enthusiastic reading. It was not a style of point-by-point illustration. But Schubert had eyes, he glanced rapidly, and he took in the main features of a poet's scene as no musician before him had done. The metre or the shape of some key-phrase in the text engendered the cell of a melody; and a hint of landscape, of atmosphere, or of an accompanying movement or gesture, struck his fancy and started in him picturesque musical figures of a unique vividness.

The action of literary influence had existed from all time in music; what was new was the degree of Schubert's free naturalism. Bach's music, of course, and Handel's, is full of derivations from the authors they set. The outcome was highly formalised in the stately manner of the time. Neither of those great men possessed literary taste, but again and again their melodies and recitatives make the impression of being a kind of sublime extension of the sound of poetic speech. The sound of words, and hence, too, the sense, are indeed to be reckoned as the more or less distant kinsmen of musical tones, and not alien allies. How would great poetry have fared in Bach's and Handel's hands? The problem did not arise, since their country was devoid of poets; and Handel, in all his years in London, cultivated no feeling for English letters, and consequently never approached the sensitiveness and subtlety of Purcell's arioso style.

Goethe came, and made all the difference to music. Mozart and Beethoven occasionally set his poems (e.g., 'Das Veilchen' and 'Wonne der Wehmut'), but Schubert was almost Goethe's offspring. Of a boy with a genius for music and a bent for poetry, Goethe, one day in 1814, suddenly made a man—the day (October 14) when the seventeen years old Schubert composed 'Gretchen am Spinnrade,' and so composed it that we cannot believe he could have done it better in 1828. Let us remember how modest and tentative was all Schubert's instrumental music at that time and for long after. Dozens of the most admired songs came before he was fully himself in symphony, quartet, and sonata, in which his first memorable attainments were the unfinished C minor Quartet of 1820 and the unfinished B minor Symphony of 1822. There are abundant records to show how Schubert was accustomed to be seized and transported by the chance reading of a poem—Spaun's account, for instance, of the inspired creation of 'Erlkönig,' and Randhartinger's of 'Die schöne Müllerin.' We know how he lived among versifiers, and himself attempted once at least to put one of his deepest experiences into rhyme. It is our advantage that this passion of Schubert's should have rendered to the language of music, as he had learned it, such new, living forms and glowing colours; and also that it was not, for all his transports, a disintegrating passion—that music, after all, came first.

Admirable works were built on different bases before and after. The beauty of the agreement which he reached does not invalidate the grandeur of 18th-century formalism, any more than Schubert's art was impaired by the engaging subtleties of the song-writing of a later generation for whose taste his style was not nearly literary enough. The time came before the end of the century when such a practice of Schubert's as his repetition of every one of Goethe's lines in the course of a song (e.g., 'Wer nie sein Brod') seemed intolerable. Well, Wolf's concentration and exquisiteness are good; and so also the freedom and eager stride of Schubert's musical movement. Later still, certain broken songs from which the literary conscience has worked to expel songfulness have made Schubert's style often look simply reckless—recklessly musical. Music after all was the channel of Schubert's mind, a broad main stream which took in swelling tributaries but remained master of them all. For his time he was singularly susceptible to the extra-musical influences; but we at the distance of a few generations see how far he formalized these influences. He, le plus poète, was too much the musician to be diverted into any not recognisably musical way. His ordinary working methods were thoroughly traditional—and traditional even, in some of the early pieces written during pauses of his inflamed fancy, to the point of quaintness and primness. Witness the setting of Goethe's 'Sehnsucht' of December, 1814, in which a swift, anapæstic lyric has all the wind taken out of its sails by Schubert's succession of demure little recitatives and coy warblings. At the other end of his career, there is the astonishing 'Doppelgänger,' in which the word is closely hugged from line to line, giving the casual listener the impression of the loosest sort of dramatic arioso, but in which there is an underlying plan of four-bar phrases, of the utmost terseness, that calls to mind the classical passacaglia.

The tune in Schubert springs from the poet's tune. Sometimes the suggestion is to be traced to the contour of a striking phrase, at other times to the general swing of a metre. A bold lilt with plenty of trisyllables and double or triple rhymes caught his ear and awakened tunes in his head. His romantic poets revelled in such a movement (to give an English equivalent) as 'Bird of the Wilderness, blithesome and cumberless!' In many of Schubert's songs we can imagine him as having hummed over some such verbal tune until it grew into a full-fledged melody. His ear was unsophisticated. Experiments in classic metres, dear to several of the German poets, meant nothing much to him. He could set the asclepiads of Hölty's 'Wann der silberne Mond durch die Gesträuche blinkt,' like Brahms after him, without a suspicion of their form. (Observe, by way of comparison, Wolf's scrupulousness towards Goethe's elegiacs in 'Anakreons Grab.') But Schubert, given a simple ripple of rhymes, was off like a bird. This sort of thing was the delight of his easier hours:

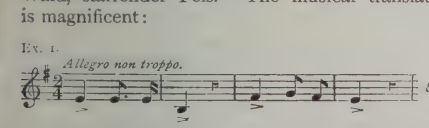
Herze, das sehnende,
Auge, das thränende,
Sehnsucht nie endende,
Heimwärts sich wendende
Busen, der wallende
Klage verhallende,
Abendstern blinkender,
Hoffnungslos sinkender!

If Schubert's melody was suggested by the poet's phrases or metre, what of his lapses into false accentuation? Well, when these occur, Schubert has, we shall find, just seized, or is about to seize, on a point in the text which has appeared to him of superior importance. His susceptibility to the tune of words is proved somewhere or other in nearly every song he wrote. But when he had hold of the heart of the matter it was enough. He fitted music insurpassably well to the text at the crucial points, and was apt to leave a certain looseness elsewhere. This was not only because he often worked in too debonair a mood and with strokes too broad and rapid for such perfected attentiveness to the verbal stresses as is found in Hugo Wolf's style; it was also because musical form as he knew it had claims of its own to which it was only proper that a text, no matter how august, should make allowance. Here was the traditionalist in Schubert, the Schubert who was too deep in music to abandon it by an eccentric leap: who moved, indeed, but in a way which he made sure did not lose him the element that was his breath. Wolf was similarly a traditionalist, whose later art was to ripen in the light of Schubert's, Schumann's, and Wagner's examples.

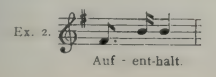
'Aufenthalt' shows us Schubert's method typically. The melody is dictated by the force of the stresses in 'Rauschender Strom, brausender Wald, starrender Fels.' The musical translation is magnificent:

Ex. 1.



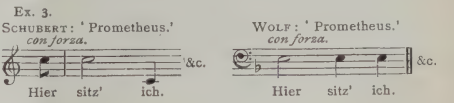
Let us call these feet choriambi. In the poet's fourth line the stress is shifted. 'Aufenthalt' is a dactyl. But Schubert must have a final heavy syllable to set off against 'Strom,' 'Wald,' and 'Fels.' For the sake of musical symmetry he brings 'halt' in on a down-beat. Wolf can better be imagined writing something like:

Ex. 2.



We are not for a moment deploring Schubert's practice, while sensible to Wolf's delicate pains. The generations of men lose here to gain there. The careless rapture of song which came in with Schubert went out with him. Even the positive negligences here and there discerned in his accentuation are an insignificant charge on a music so swift and joyous and untrammelled. Here is one in 'Prometheus' which is noticeable if we are comparing Wolf's setting of the poem:

Ex. 3.



and again:

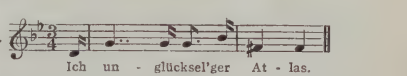
Ex. 4.

where the point of the hero's boast is, as Wolf has made plain, that he will found a race of freemen 'like unto Me.'

However, arbitrariness in Schubert is casual, and rare at that. In principle he was all against such high-handedness as is found in Brahms, who can hardly have had an ear for prosody, and who in some of his supremely fine songs seems to have fitted verses to an existing melody (e.g., 'WIE bist du MEINE Königin').

Wolf would not have set the first phrase of Heine's 'Atlas' with Schubert's disregard for just emphasis:

Ex. 5.



But passing to the very next words, we observe that for 'Eine Welt, die ganze Welt' Schubert has found the perfect match. That, then, is what has struck his fancy—'a world, the whole world of woe, is my burden.' For that key-phrase he devised a finely adequate motif. It formed the musical cell from which the rest grew. In this phrase 'Eine Welt,' the 'eine' has suggested the strongly marked 'anacrusis' or up-beat by which the musician conveys a gathering of forces for the uplifting of the burdensome 'Welt':

Ex. 6.

By an extension of the idea, all his exordium must, he feels, be a preparation for that rising minor sixth and weighty minim. Working back, then, he sets the opening words twice over to a motive which, while it does not, as we have seen, fit 'Ich, unglücksel'ge,' serves to assure his principal stroke by minor attacks at the same spot (anacrusis of semiquaver instead of dotted quaver and semiquaver, interval of fourth instead of minor sixth).

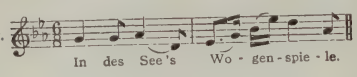
Working further back still, he sets the bass of the pianoforte prophesying with a fragment, likewise anacrusic, of the 'Atlas' motive. In a word, 'I' is nothing and the intolerable world everything. The whole theme (to which the double striking of the tonic is preliminary) is now one of symphonic grandeur.

Those familiar with Wolf's vocal writing may feel that Schubert's practice of placing prepositions and conjunctions on an important beat needs excusing. The apparent stressing of 'in,' 'auf,' 'wenn,' and so on, is frequent; as, for example:

Ex. 7.

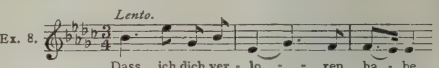


Wolf's inclination was to make his writing foolproof by lifting the weight from such an 'in'; but that is not enough reason for wishing for anything in Schubert's music that would be detrimental to the breadth and ease of its periods and their natural songfulness. There is to be prized in Schubert an overflowing spirit, care-free and irresponsible almost, whose like is not to be met with in music. The lines just quoted would not, as a matter of fact, have been set otherwise by Wolf—simply because he, with his acute and searching mind, would not have condescended to touch Bruchmann's trifling barcarolle, or any other of a hundred such texts of Schubert's, whose words were in themselves idle, not worth a significant style of declamation, and yet served well enough to release in Schubert the spirit of the burgeoning May morning, and song in a kind of natural, wild state.

But we have also said that the stressing of the prepositions is apparent. It is actual only to the literal-minded singer who has not got beyond counting beats and bars to a feeling of rhythm. Schubert did not reckon on an interpreter to whom words would be meaningless. Thought for the words formed part of his general charge to the singer: without which thought the actual musical effect of the songs is impoverished. There is a rhythmical impoverishment if the singer considers nothing but note-values, and sings his part as a clarinettist would play it. The voice is rare that can match the purity of the clarinet's tone, but the singer has another means of interest, and that is the accent which is dictated by the verbal interest. In the first bar from 'Am See,' quoted just above, the singer will not give the usual down-beat accent to the first note, for the word 'See's' claims a special stress. In the next bar the first beat is strong and the second exceptionally weak. The metre is indicated by the note-values, the rhythm by the words; and due observance of the latter, which often results in the effect of a cross-rhythm against the pianoforte, makes one of the charms and subtleties of Schubert's song-music.

The opening of 'Am Grabe Anselmo's' is an example of the sort of phrase that is often spoilt by being sung metrically and not rhythmically:

Ex. 8.



It is not one of the great melodies which can survive almost any rough treatment. It is modest, and begs for a little sympathy. The phrase quoted, taken without words or harmony, is not very significant. It is enriched on the one hand by pathetic harmonies, and on the other by the moving cry in the text. 'Verloren' is, of course, the heart of the phrase. 'Dass' is hardly anything, and 'habe' is not much, compared with that inconsolable word, which should appear written in fire before the singer. The only accent worth mentioning, then, falls on the first beat in the second bar; and the singer has no other for some time until he comes to the word 'Grabe.' But observe how Schubert was at pains, even in this youthful and quite secondary song of his, in which pianoforte and voice keep very much to the same theme, to distribute the interest. For while the voice throughout the first bar is leaning forward, as it were, towards the second the pianoforte has a heavy dominant seventh upon the word 'dass,' which it at once resolves. It is, in fact, concluding its prelude while the voice begins. Then in the next bar Schubert has strongly accented the second beat in the pianoforte part, while it is quite out of the question for the voice to stress its corresponding note. In effect, while the metre of the two parts is the same, the composer has indicated different rhythms—but indicated them insufficiently, if the singer is one for whom a peremptory-looking down-beat can obliterate the thought of the loss of Anselmo, his dearest friend. In short, the question of the prepositions in Schubert is simply solved by the singer's sense.

THE DESTINIES OF MUSIC

By Leonid Sabaneev

It may very well be that music in general is 'finished'—music as an historical document of the culture of the European world. Personally I am more and more inclined to this exceedingly pessimistic opinion, though I confess that I should be very glad if I were mistaken.

The fact is, any sphere in which the phenomenon of culture is created is a finished, a limited sphere. From one and the same material, such as sounds manifestly are, it is impossible to produce indefinitely that which is ever new and at the same time conforms to the conditions of the beautiful. This domain is already built over, as it were, and there is no room for anything else, and nothing else to build. All the beautiful music is more or less written, and if we may conjecture that a little still remains unrevealed, it is only a drop in the ocean of what has been accomplished. The times have gone when it was possible to compose Schubert's 'Forellen' melody, and it was new and fresh and powerful. Music then had space at its command, and much of it was unexplored. There was much of the mystery that always goads and stimulates art, and the tonal realm still contained naïve and simple melodies as yet undivined. Now it is so no longer. Everything has been thoroughly studied, all the melodies have been composed, all the harmonies, right down to the most incredible, written. It is inconceivable that anything great and at the same time simple can now be produced. Freshness has vanished. In musical creation it is no longer sought; the quest is for the extraordinary and, what is more, for certain degraded, monstrous abortions of the tonal organisms. Mystery has disappeared from the realm of music, everything has become plain and easy to understand—as is the case throughout the world, which has also lost its mysteriousness, has shrunk and diminished from the once unfamiliar and spacious world to the dimensions of the wedding tour of some worthy clerk. I have not the slightest desire to talk in paradoxes, but for me it is clear that the annihilation of mystery in the world, its 'accessibility,' has also destroyed the sense of mystery in the hearts of men, has made their psychology dull and ordinary. Culture is completing its cycle, and our contemporaries who have witnessed the putting together of this extraordinary structure, like the Romans of the Decline are hardly in a position to appreciate the greatness of what has been attained.

Music has grown old. It often happens that old age creeps on unobserved at first, and all at once we notice that 'the man has aged.' Such is the case with music. It seems suddenly to have wrinkled and withered, and this has occurred of late years, almost during the war and post-war period. Musicians have apparently ceased to love music, at all events with that great and intimate affection which they formerly bestowed upon it. I personally have a very real feeling that the 'oxygen' which existed in the psychological atmosphere before the war has now disappeared, so that music has no means of breathing and becomes organically useless, even to those who once occupied themselves with it enthusiastically. Owing to a certain inertia, as parts of the immense mechanism of the life of cultural music, wound up in bygone times, the wheels of the musical world still move, but there is no vital power in them. And the attitude to music has become different. I am not disposed to argue concerning tastes, especially as we know how strong is the force of habit and that we can even grow accustomed to any kind of vileness. But I am thoroughly convinced that it is impossible to love the contemporary music of, let us say, Stravinsky, with the love which our generation gave to Wagner and Bach. Nowadays they are interested in music, but they do not love it, whereas it used to be an object of enthusiasm; it was cherished like a human being, and even more than a human being. It produced a trembling, a state of ecstasy; but now the leader himself soothes the feelings of his audience, and declares that expressiveness is unnecessary, that feeling is provincial, that romanticism is the religion of old maids.

If everything rests on another plane, if instead of the category of beauty, ecstasy, adoration, they propose the category of amusement and 'interestingness,' then I will not argue. Beyond all doubt the music of Milhaud and Stravinsky is far more interesting than Wagner's or Bach's, just as the scenario of the cinema and novels of adventure are considerably more amusing than what is called 'great literature.' The very approach to music is altered. Something different is expected and desired of it. The fundamental meaning of the modern anti-romantic and other fashionable tendencies consists precisely in the fact that the artistic organization has changed.

The change is undoubtedly due to the influence of the hurried march of civilisation (not of culture—the two concepts must be strictly differentiated). The fundamental attainment, or, more correctly, the inevitable consequence of civilisation, is the extension of the market at any cost. Everything is democratised, or, better, 'vulgarised.' This is all very well when it is a question of tramways or telephones, but we get a rather different picture when the process of extension connected with vulgarisation embraces art.

Music in its fundamental form, in the roots from which it sprang, owes its existence to a certain musical temperament of the soul, which in its turn produces the actual tonal phenomenon of music. I am not so naïve a thinker as to imagine that in the early days the world was on the whole more poetic, and man in the mass more musical or less practically and materially minded. There has always been an overwhelming majority remote from art of any kind. And, conversely, there are to-day many high-minded men—possibly even more than formerly—with music in their soul. The difference between past and present does not consist in the number of representatives of this or the other conception of the world, but in the fact that in earlier times the musical art was exercised, was employed and cultivated only, or almost only, by those who had a natural and innate propensity for music, a musical temperament. The cultivation of music in daily life was the outcome of this temperament, this propensity. Now, owing to the extension of the area of musical culture, it has taken possession of several spheres which formerly had no interest whatever in music. People who are by nature essentially non-musical, who have no intimate concern with music, have been gripped by it: civilisation has induced them, almost forcibly, to enter the world of musical phenomena. This is by no means democratisation. Democratisation is the extending of the phenomenon of art to new social classes who are inclined to it, but who, owing to political or economic causes, have hitherto lacked the possibility of associating themselves with it. But the phenomenon in question concerns the almost mechanical, partly elementary process of dragging into the world of art and musical culture those who have no inward inclination for it, and who find themselves there simply because the atmosphere of civilisation makes it imperative that everybody should have at least a verbal knowledge of 'everything about everything.'

Hence the present-day hypertrophy of the phenomena of fashion in music. Fashion has always existed, but there was a certain equilibrium between it and the inner question of art. Fashion imposed its seal, but it was not essentially concerned with art. Nowadays the equilibrium has been destroyed; fashion absorbs the phenomenon of art almost entirely. The musical world is filled to overflowing with a mass of non-musical people, who nevertheless are assigned, as it were, to the world of music, who work and act in it. They may be managers, publishers, performers, composers, critics—it does not alter their fundamental non-musical nature. It seems that it is possible to be at the same time a composer and a non-musician. The musical world, which earlier was hierarchically constituted, organizing within itself groups of amateurs around a sincere and trustworthy musical centre—represented by the great composers—is now chaotically constructed; the inner musical forces which formerly organized it have grown dim and feeble, and consequently it is subjected to the action of the general principles and forces working within it, primarily economic factors: questions of sale and offer—the game of love of fame and patronage—extra-musical problems in general.

Music is by nature a profoundly meditative art. It needs quiet surroundings and, more than that, it demands concentration on the part of the musician himself. Modern life is not very helpful to this, nor to the formation of the psychical type of the man of concentration. The rhythmics of life have become anti-musical. This is keenly felt at every modern performance of the old things; it is difficult to listen to them, as they are out of accord with the rhythm of life, and one has somehow to reconstruct the inner rhythm to which one is accustomed and which for contemporary man is, of course, inert, into something archaic, slow, and tranquil. He keeps pace with the general rhythm of the city and no longer notices his impetuous tempo; it is easier for him to adhere to it than to slow down. The rhythms of Bach, and even of Beethoven, become like a horse waggon which has intruded upon a great street crowded with motors. It is difficult for it to get along, and it hinders the traffic. The reception of music, which used to be simple and easy, direct and natural, demands a certain expenditure of energy—to extricate itself from the contemporary rhythm and to avoid getting into it.

The musical world of to-day is diluted by elements essentially foreign to it, which nevertheless find a place in the musical profession. Music is, of course, not merely a profession—it also includes psychology. Nowadays it is a profession and nothing more. Non-musicians who follow music cannot behave otherwise than they do, and it is not they who are to blame, but the process which attracted them to a strange world for which they had no inward need. They regard that world, not as something extremely precious and satisfying in itself, for the sake of which it is worth while living, but only as a casual profession, cold and abstract. Publishers issue the works of composers, but they might have dealt in soap; a manager runs Jascha Heifetz, but he might have run a menagerie of lions. A composer writes symphonies and oratorios, but he might have been a good commercial traveller; a critic turns out articles on music and analyses its qualities, but he might have written on politics or traded in electric lamps.

All the curious phenomena of the new music depend directly on the indifference with which the inundation of the musical world by strangers to it is received. People also listen to music with indifference—listen, because in our civilised world it is 'the correct thing' to attend concerts, and not because of an inward urge. The number of sincere concert-goers is insignificant. It is just in this that there is no democratisation, but there is vulgarisation; it is possible that those who have music in their souls cannot afford expensive concerts, and so the latter are filled with a crowd of uninterested snobs. They do not receive music 'musically,' but by other paths. More important for them are the label, the 'firm,' the celebrity of the performer or the composer, his vogue, a good advertisement, a skilfully conceived title of a work—and not the direct impression. If the same music bore the signature of an unknown person and not of a celebrity, nobody would notice it, neither the critics nor the public, nor even the composers themselves; on the other hand, anything signed by a 'name' arouses enthusiasm in advance. The motive and purpose of the composers' activity are not supplied by a musico-creative process unique of its kind and incapable of repetition, nor by creative experiences which can be compared in intensity with erotic and mystical experiences only, but by various extraneous circumstances—material success, fame, notoriety, and lastly, the mere inertia of existence. Hence the striving for tricks, for the amazing and the diverting, since these new non-musical workers who have invaded the musical sphere neither understand nor receive musical categories, and to them these purely musical experiences are an incomprehensible language. They understand the other, the external lineaments of the musical art, which consequently presents itself to them deprived of its essential characteristics, but still preserving a superficial, lifeless resemblance to that art. Lacking its essence, conserving a certain semblance of its form, and constantly losing it because the form is conditioned by the spirit, music now becomes a dance of corpses, as it were; and its mechanisation, the fashionable doctrines of aromanticism, impressionism, and so forth, are only the natural consequences of the process I have just described.

Hence in this new musical world, composed for the most part of persons who lack the musical temperament, tradition has died out and a criterion is lost. People organically foreign to the musical language, though accustomed to the sounds, cannot form a plain and direct opinion, just as anyone ignorant of a language cannot judge of the quality of anything written in that language. Their opinion is based on incidental circumstances and methods; they are guided by the strength of the editorial puff, by the notoriety acquired in various ways, by the cleverness of the tricks and the amount of amusement derived from the thing they have heard, by the number of the extra-musical impressions. They love music, but it is with an epithelial love; in the best case they have a gastronomic fondness for it, just as they are fond of wine, and tobacco. In this sort of love, habit plays a great part. Some are accustomed to 'smoke' Bach, others Stravinsky—but essentially it is one and the same thing. This accounts for the possibility nowadays of composers who invent a method of playing the pianoforte with the elbows, or introduce new instruments into the orchestra, such as domestic utensils, electric bells, oyster shells, and whips. Before long we shall surely have choruses of dogs and frogs, pianoforte-playing with footballs, and other acquirements. The musical art has offered its hand to the circus and the music-hall turn. In the view of the indifferent crowd the incomprehensible but still 'esteemed' language of Beethoven's symphonies and the hubbub of the new orchestra of oyster-shells and gudki* are one and the same thing.

There is a vast difference between innovation in art and these new phenomena, and an immense gulf separates the attainments of art based on the development and refinement of reception, such as were the stages of Wagner, Debussy, and Scriabin, from music the nature of which is based on the coarsening of reception, on its reduction to the non-musical level. At one time very great and advanced musicians understood the language of the new attainments of genius. Contemporary geniuses, on the contrary, appeal to a public very little versed in musical impressions, who are quite indifferent as to what they hear, and who therefore react to cacophony without any concern. In our days a similar substitution of ideas has come into use—the reactionary and retrograde and, what is more, the atavistically barbarous are mixed up and put forward as the new and advanced. The contemporary tendencies in their typical, their extreme, forms are profoundly reactionary and not 'advanced'—they denote, not the perfecting of the language of tones, but its reduction to the neutrally-chaotic state in which it was before the era of tonal culture. Then also savages played on instruments of percussion and blew into oyster-shells, and a savage of this sort might be expected to perform on the pianoforte with his elbows—which is now given out as the 'latest achievement.' The cold and raw air of the street has burst into the musical hot-house which was created and cherished by the ages. The precious plants of music perish, and a victory is celebrated by an ochlocratic, barbarous, primitive taste, which is often masked by beautiful literary phrases; but the essence of the matter is not altered thereby.

In our time the structure of the musical world has been destroyed. I know that there are many musicians and many of the public who have preserved their feeling for music, who for a quarter of a century have suffered from the mockery of their ears and of their faculty of distinguishing the qualities of resonance—a faculty which is wanting in their gay and happy contemporaries, who care not whether it is a Beethoven Symphony or the banging of utensils. The criterion is lost, and the composer's world is filled with charlatans and maniacs, for whom every one respectfully makes way, since any of them may suddenly be declared to be geniuses, and nobody likes to risk his reputation as an up-to-date connoisseur of modern music. In the schools of music and the conservatories training will soon be generally discontinued, for there is nothing to teach now, 'everything is permissible'; the musical boots can be wrongly sewn and everyone will wear them as the handiwork of innovators. But it is not quite so simple to reinstate that which has fallen to pieces before our eyes. History, of course, does not repeat itself. Mankind cannot restore the lost simplicity. It is possible to assume it, and to play at Bach and Handel, but it will be the pitiful picture of an old woman who rejuvenates and beautifies herself, but from whom comes the breath of decay. Such are the new composers. They pretend to be naïve, but it is only pretence. When they are simple they are savages. For a great and simple art, such as it was down to Wagner's time, the tonal realm is exhausted. It only remains to create ingenious things, but composers have little ability or desire for this. The evident tendency is rather in the other direction—they want to be silly and frivolous. Contemporary music takes the form of a ponderous and laboured joke, requiring for its production a vast number of people, wearisome rehearsals, the discomposure of the audience, and enormous expense which, in the main, is never recovered. Is it worth it all? There is nothing more stupid and distasteful than a ponderous and expensive joke. And to re-create an atmosphere of serious music it is necessary to begin all over again, to re-organize a musical world of musicians, to create a new line of tradition, a new culture of precious things, old and new. Nevertheless this task will certainly have to be undertaken, if true musicians do not wish their art to be handed over to new and strange men, to be plundered and for ever ruined. The tragedy of the situation consists in the fact that there is little possibility of such restoration; that there are very many data indicating that all these processes are not fortuitous; that decay has overtaken music, not through negligence, but owing to its completed growth; that music has aged in a natural way, has grown old together with European culture, which is approaching its end. The tree of culture, which formerly produced the fine flowers of music, can no longer do so and yields only malformed fruits. Let us hope that from them will be scattered on some future soil the seeds of a new art.

* The gudok (pl. gudki) is an ancient Russian bowed instrument with three strings. (Trans. note.)

(Translated by S. W. Pring.)

---

'BORIS GODUNOV' AS MOUSSORGSKY WROTE IT

By M.-D. Calvocoressi

III.—The Complete 'Boris Godunov'

For the sake of brevity, the complete 'Boris Godunov' may be described as consisting of the first four scenes of the initial version (to which Moussorgsky made a few additions between 1872 and 1874), a new and considerably enlarged version of the scene in the Tsar's apartment, the Act in Poland, the Council and the death of Boris, and the Revolution scene.

I have already stated that of the first four scenes, two contain portions now revealed for the first time. It will be convenient to start by examining those portions whose function in the whole musical and dramatic scheme of 'Boris' is, I repeat it, all-important.

The first scene ends, not with the chorus of the Wandering Pilgrims, as in the 1874 and subsequent editions, but with a discussion characteristically stolid in tone between the people, who express their bewilderment, and wonder who the Tsar may be whom they are urged to yell for. The Police Officer interrupts their dialogue and orders them to be at the Kremlin on the morrow, there to await instruction. They accept the inevitable as a matter of course: 'If we must shout, why not shout at the Kremlin? All the same to us.'

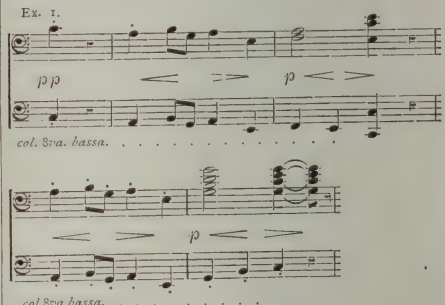
The music of this final section is built upon a simple, very telling working-out of the opening motive, which by this reappearance acquires its full significance, and is asserted with the emphasis due to so important a theme (see January Musical Times, p. 19, on the point of its importance). It sets in in A minor (I leave questions of modes untouched, so as not further to overburden this article), following without modulatory transition upon the A flat major of the Pilgrims' Chorus—a typical instance of the abrupt but apposite changes of key to which Moussorgsky resorts whenever he feels them advisable, to the great distress of his censors—and gradually reverts to C sharp minor, the initial key of the Prelude: so that, both thematically and tonally, the structure of the whole scene is perfectly symmetrical and rounded-off.

The section is also significant dramatically. It emphasises an essential point: the indifference and ignorance of the people whose fate hangs in the balance. M. Igor Gliebov, in the admirable pamphlet from which I have quoted already, points out that the very words, 'No matter where we shout: all the same to us,' predetermine the character and tone of the Coronation scene.

> The scene is not, as Rimsky-Korsakov made it, mere operatic pomp. The people hail Boris not willingly, but under compulsion—and, accordingly, in a surly, lifeless way. Shuisky urging them to rejoice is but another incarnation of the Police Officer with his cudgel in the previous scene. Moussorgsky could very well have written a scene of pure pomp and splendour and unmixed joy, but he did not. Even his choice of the 'official' tune of the 'Slava' [Glory be] indicates the character he aimed at and achieved—one of constraint. From the beginning to the end of the scene, as Moussorgsky wrote it, there is no progression. The whole scene remains at a standstill, as if frozen.
>
> . . . . . .

In the scene in the cell, the narrative by Pimen of the murder of the Tsarevich serves to knit the plot (a plot within a plot, as I shall presently show), by stimulating Grigory to action exactly as the second narrative—in front of the Tsar and Council, that of the miracle accomplished on the tomb of the Tsarevich—serves to bring about the final collapse of Boris. Indeed, Moussorgsky's stage directions ('Grigory listens intently; Grigory rises majestically,' &c.) mark the particular significance which he ascribes to it in this respect. And the musical functions of the narrative correspond to this dramatic significance. From the point of view of musical texture, let it be noticed that the main element of the first narrative is:

Ex. 1.



and that of the second is:

Ex. 2.

Truly a noteworthy example of adaptation to contrasting ends: on the one hand gloom and tragedy, on the other mystic serenity.

This main element (Ex. 1) undergoes various transformations in the course of the narrative, and the first form in which the Dimitri motive is introduced:

Ex. 3.

emanates from it directly. The derivation as previously known of this Dimitri motive, from the opening motive and from a motive expressing in a more general way the sombre forebodings of Tsar Boris, was referred to in the January number. Now, with the complete text of 'Boris Godunov' before us, we have the genealogy of the motive in full: a genealogy whose significance is commensurate with the special importance of the functions which the motive fulfils in the course of the work.

. . . . . .

This constitutes a signal example of Moussorgsky's art of preparing, heralding, and, if need be, dovetailing. His method is as original as it is effective. Throughout the score of 'Boris' we can notice seeds that germinate each in due time, brief passages embodying allusions to, or containing germs of, music that will unfold itself later, and playing a part in the extraordinary unity of texture that characterises 'Boris.' We may not perceive these as leitmotives whose reappearances and transformations need be watched: they do their work all the more thoroughly and subtly for that reason. Quite possibly, Moussorgsky was not conscious of every connection that arose as he wrote the music of 'Boris.' It is quite admissible that the main elements, at times, just grew out of one another, their mutual relation being as logical, as inevitable, as that of a branch to the root of the tree.

This may or may not be the explanation of analogies such as this: during the Secretary of the Council's speech to the people (Scene 1: 'Boris, despite our entreaties, refuses the crown . . .') we hear music which foreshadows both the character and the actual design of motives that will be extensively used in connection with Tsar Boris; for instance, of which underlines more especially his preoccupations and fears.

Ex. 4.

Ex. 5.

Most of the parts that were transferred from Moussorgsky's early opera 'Salammbo' to 'Boris Godunov' are linked with their new surroundings in some similar fashion. In point of fact, the motives from the Council scene to whose relation with the opening motive I referred (January Musical Times, p. 20, Ex. 4), are part of the music taken from 'Salammbo.' So is the motive introduced in the second version of the Tsar's monologue, as mentioned in the quotation from Prof. Gliebof (May Musical Times, p. 410), which I had also adduced for its connection with the same motive—quite forgetting at the time to refer to an essay by the Russian critic, Karatyghin (published at Petrograd in 1909), in which all such transfers are catalogued. But the facts remain: if we did not know that the passages in which these motives occur were taken from 'Salammbo,' we could never suspect that they were not originally devised for 'Boris'—except perhaps in one instance, the last bars of the Tsar's dying prayer, which may appear, especially to those of us who are wise after the event, to stand somewhat stiffly among their surroundings. In every other case, not only the eminent appositeness but the continuity of texture and the thematic relations would preclude the suspicion.

. . . . . .

So much for the unity of texture of 'Boris.' The unity of structure may be shown in a very few words. The balance and proportions of the structural scheme are almost faultless (if it is admitted that the insertion of the Act in Poland—merely a long intermezzo, charming or impressive in parts, but at times, I think, tedious—need not be placed on the debit side of the structural account, then one may strike out the word 'almost'). At the beginning, the people are seen clamouring, by order, for Boris. At the end, the revolution scene, that soul-stirring conclusion of what is probably the most soul-stirring lyric drama ever written, shows the same people in revolt, hailing the usurper as blindly as they had hailed Boris. Within the compass of this social and political tragedy (to use Prof. Gliebof's words) is enclosed the tragedy of Tsar Boris, from his first appearance in the Coronation scene (with the words, 'My soul is sad, a secret terror haunts me'), and from Pimen's first narrative, to his death, brought about by the shock of Pimen's second narrative as well as by his fear of the ghost that haunts him and of the advancing Pretender. In the initial version the balance is different, but no less perfect. From the people clamouring for Boris, and Boris coming into contact with them after being anointed, the action moves speedily towards the point at which Boris is again in contact with his people, but in an atmosphere of anguish and revolt; and thence towards his death

Stassov, by a piece of careless writing, had established the notion that Moussorgsky, having composed the Revolution scene, had tried placing it alternatively before and after the Death scene. We know by now that Moussorgsky did nothing of the kind. The reversal of the order he adopted produces indeed an appalling anti-climax. It is possible after a fashion—and, unfortunately, all producers of 'Boris Godunov' according to the Rimsky-Korsakov arrangement have availed themselves of the possibility. It is likewise possible to place the scene in the cell before the Coronation scene, as was done at Paris in 1908, and perhaps elsewhere—so that (as one critic remarked at the time) one first heard Pimen deploring that a regicide should be holding the throne of Russia, and afterwards witnessed the regicide's coronation. If one overlooks such things as these, if one is mindless of musical fitness and gradation, one may indeed allege that 'Boris Godunov' is loosely constructed—especially if a couple or so of the keystones in the structure are knocked out as well. I remember hearing in France the story of an officer who said to a private: 'This button of your tunic is loose.' Upon the private respectfully protesting, the officer tugged at the button for a minute or so, twisted it, considered matters for a while, and finally, drawing out a pocket-knife, cut the threads, remarking, 'There! you see it was loose!' Thus, but not otherwise, is the looseness of 'Boris Godunov' demonstrable.

. . . . . .

Now that we have the whole text of 'Boris Godunov,' can there be any reason for not producing the work in its entirety? The only one which might be adduced is, it seems to me, the length of the score. It is not a very good reason. 'Boris Godunov' is no longer than the 'Götterdämmerung,' the 'Meistersingers,' or 'Parsifal.' Surely, what is done for Wagner's masterpieces can and must be done for Moussorgsky's. The complete version is longer than the primitive version, but makes up for its length by affording opportunities for relaxation and points of repose which, far from breaking or unduly delaying the course of the action, co-operate in it. In the scene in the Tsar's apartment, the songs and games are not only delightful in themselves, but serve a definite purpose. They evoke an atmosphere of peace and potential happiness, and impart a particular significance to the sudden irruption of Boris, grim and shaky, furious at seeing the old nurse startled by his appearance. The episode of the parrot is a gem of poesy and music (I can remember a production of 'Boris' from which it was cut out, as it usually is; but by way of compensation, a special point was made of including in the stage settings a large cage containing a stuffed parrot), and has its function in the display of the psychology of Boris: the noises announcing the parrot's escapade startle him not a little; when his son brings him an account of the humorous happening, he listens with obvious relief. It has already been pointed out that the Act in Poland provides plenty of relaxation. Producers have even availed themselves of the Polonaise in it to introduce a little dancing—which is a venial sin in comparison with the instances of omission and commission of which I have spoken in the course of this survey.

To sum up, in 'Boris Godunov' the interest is extraordinarily sustained, balanced, and well distributed. The effect of the cuts practised so far was to illustrate the truth of the old paradox that 'cuts make plays and musical works longer' (it is intentionally that I call it a paradox, not a 'bull'). The only 'Boris Godunov' which should be performed from now on is the unrevised and complete 'Boris Godunov' which appears at a time when many of us had almost given up all hope of the original manuscript ever being published.

---

THE JEW'S HARP A CENTURY AGO

By Anthony Clyne

Just a hundred years ago Eulenstein created a sensation in London by playing upon sixteen jew's harps. This expert performer played before George IV., and seems to have been a really fine musician. He had a very successful career in Germany before coming to London, and later in Scotland and at Bath. We must not imagine the instrument he played is beneath our notice. It is small and simple to make, but by no means simple to play with real musicianly skill. Unfortunately most of us derive our impressions of its performance from the raucous and unmelodious exercises of callow youths repeating vulgar and trashy tunes. Played thus, it produces excruciating cacophony, but so does any other instrument managed in a similar fashion.

A hundred years ago there was considerable interest in the instrument. Sir Charles Wheatstone, the founder of practical telegraphy, at that time published an elaborate essay on its technique in the Quarterly Journal of Science. Wheatstone was then an excessively shy young man of twenty-five, ostensibly engaged with his brother in the business in the Strand, inherited from their uncle, of a musical instrument maker. Wheatstone had gone there at fourteen, spending most of his time in researches in acoustics. His investigation of the jew's harp was but a small fraction of his vast study of sound and sound-producing apparatus.

Why the jew's harp should be so called remains an enigma. This was certainly the original form of its name, according to the high authority of the 'Oxford English Dictionary,' though no connection with Jews has been discovered. Some etymologists, uneasy at this obscurity, have endeavoured to trace the origin of the name to some relationship with 'jaw,' making out it was a 'jaw's harp,' others to some relationship with the French 'jeu,' meaning 'play.' They have failed to establish any case. Of old it was commonly called a 'jew's trump,' a name that may still be heard in some localities.

The jew's harp has been known throughout Europe for many centuries. In France called 'guimbarde,' it used to be called 'trompe,' a name still sometimes used, reminding one of its old designation in this country. In Italy it has various names, the most usual being 'spassa-pansiero.' In Germany it was formerly called 'Maultrommel,' or by some 'Brummeisen.' It was in Germany that the interest in it of a century ago first arose, when all manner of novel and ingenious musical instruments were being experimented with. There the instrument was then rechristened 'Mundharmonica.'

The memoirs of Madame de Genlis first drew serious attention to its musical capabilities, by an account of the performances of Koch. He was a poor German soldier in the service of Frederick the Great. One night he was on sentry duty beneath the King's window at Potsdam. Apparently he thought to gratify the monarch's well-known love of music, for he began to play a pair of jew's harps in his most skilful style. Frederick awoke, listened, and was fully persuaded of being unaccountably serenaded by an orchestra. He looked out, to see only the private. He called to him, learnt the source of the music, and told him to enter and come to the chamber. Koch, suspecting a test of military discipline, respectfully refused, stating that he could not leave his post until relieved by the officer of the guard, and that if he did so the King would punish him in the morning for the dereliction of duty.

The next morning the soldier was presented to Frederick. He again charmed the King by his skill, and received his free discharge from the ranks and a present of fifty dollars. Koch made his fortune by travelling about the Continent, performing in public and private. He was accustomed to ask that all lights should be extinguished, in order that the illusion produced by his playing might be increased. A hundred years ago he was living in comfortable retirement at Vienna, at an age of something over eighty.

The peasants of the Tyrol had a practice, possibly they still have, of using two harps together, one tuned a fourth above the other. This greatly increases the range, and only by this means can really musical performances be accomplished. It is perhaps necessary to explain to the uninitiated that the harp is an instrument of percussion. A slender tongue of steel is fastened at one end to the base of a pear-shaped metal frame, the other end, with the termination bent at right-angles, loose between the arms of the frame. The frame is pressed firmly against the teeth and the steel tongue set vibrating by a sharp blow, producing a fundamental note and its harmonics. These harmonics may be isolated at will by altering the capacity of the mouth cavity and therefore its resonance. The lower harmonics are very difficult to obtain. The usual instruction to the player is to put the mouth as though pronouncing the different vowel sounds, though this is only an approximate description of what happens in the mouth of a really good performer. The niceties of the technique would require much space to elucidate.

By using two harps, with the difference of a fourth in the fundamental notes, an adequate scale is possible. What that scale is, every musician of course can immediately realise from what has been said. It was with two harps that Koch performed. The great Charles Eulenstein injured his teeth by playing so much, spending ten years practising many hours a day before he attained his mastery, and he had to relinquish playing almost entirely until a dentist found a way to prevent trouble with his teeth. He had an ingenious device. He used sixteen harps, tuning them by placing varying quantities of sealing-wax at the extremities of the tongues. He took each harp up as required, acquiring consummate dexterity in doing so swiftly. With sixteen possible fundamentals and their harmonics at his command, he could reproduce faithfully any melody he wished, and had an extraordinary talent for varying the timbre by some mysterious method of arranging his mouth.

---

HANDEL'S MUSIC-PAPER: WITH OTHER NOTES

By P. Robinson

Some notes on various matters connected with Handel are set down here, in the hope that they may be found of interest, and have a value for future biographers.

HANDEL'S FAVOURITE MUSIC-PAPER

For the greater part of his works Handel used a paper with a watermark in which the letters 'L V G' are prominent. It had been supposed generally that this was an English paper; but on January 17, 1925, the late W. Barclay Squire wrote to me with regard to the 'L V G': 'This I have identified as L. Van Gerbrevinck—Dutch paper, but used by Handel in England.' This paper had probably a high reputation and a wide circulation, since we find it used for the cantata 'Io languisco,' which must have been written in Italy before Handel came for the first time to England.

THE 'CUCKOO AND NIGHTINGALE' CONCERTO

This Organ Concerto (1740) is merely an adaptation of a Grand Concerto (1739), with notes for cuckoo and nightingale added. In R. A. Streatfeild's 'Handel,' p. 335, we find the remark: 'It would be extremely interesting to know something about the provenance of the so-called "Cuckoo and Nightingale" Concerto (No. 2 of the second set).' The probable clue may be discovered in a sentence of Burney's 'History of Music,' iii., 561: 'His [Vivaldi's] Cuckoo Concerto during my youth was the wonder and delight of all frequenters of country concerts; and Woodcock, one of the Hereford waits, was sent for far and near to perform it.' Charles Burney was born in 1726, so it is fair to assume that Vivaldi's concerto was popular in England about 1739, and that Handel in consequence added similar imitative passages when adapting the Grand Concerto for the organ. And yet this concerto by Vivaldi would seem to have vanished from the face of the earth, despite its temporary popularity.

KERL'S CANZONA

I showed in a letter to the Musical Times, November, 1924, that this canzona must have been known to some in London, and may quite possibly have been still a popular piece when it was adapted for 'Israel in Egypt.'

CURIOUS SETTLEMENT OF A DATE DISPUTE

Handel's 'Dixit Dominus' and 'La Resurrezione' were completed in April, 1707, and April, 1708, respectively. But there have been curious differences of opinion as to what are the days of the month written on the autographs. Schoelcher read both as 4; Chrysander, both as 11; Rockstro thought one probably 4, the other 11. Owing to a copy of 'La Resurrezione,' and not the original, having been put by mistake into my hands some twenty years ago, I could not try my luck. Yet I knew that Easter Day in 1708 fell on April 8; and we have learnt since that the work was in fact performed on that day (Newman Flower, 'George Frideric Handel,' p. 71). Consequently, when W. Barclay Squire (who had at one time hastily read the figure as 11) was cataloguing the MSS., I suggested the advisability of a close scrutiny. The result was most surprising. On neither autograph is there any figure at all. What had been taken for a 4, or 11, is really the word 'li,' the equivalent of 'the,' which is followed by a distinct gap: 'li d'Aprile.' Handel must have been uncertain about the exact date, when completing each work, and never afterwards did he repair the omission.

A NEW 'URIO' OR 'URIA' MS.

In July, 1925, W. Barclay Squire purchased at a sale a manuscript which he judged to have been written by an Italian between 1700 and 1750. At his request I described and discussed it fully in the Bulletin de la Société 'Union Musicologique,' 1926, Part 1. A copy of this issue now lies along with the MS. in the Royal Music Room of the British Museum, and there is another copy at the Royal College of Music, London. The MS. is a copy of that Te Deum which has been ascribed to F. A. Urio, but which ought to be credited to Handel, as I have contended (in 'Handel and his Orbit,' 1908, and a supplement in the Musical Times, July, 1924), mainly on the strength of a chain of thematic resemblances, the force of which reaches practically mathematical certainty. Analysis of the MS. evidence then available showed that only the words 'Te Deum' and 'Urio' could have stood on the archetype or original MS. in England.

Now on this recently-discovered MS. we find a pencilling at the top right-hand corner of the front page—a pencilling now so faint as to be only visible in the right light and from the right point of view. This reads: 'Te Deum Urio,' with no perceptible break between the words, or 'Te Deum Uria,' which W. Barclay Squire thought the more probable—so that very likely we have here the archetype. It is true that the MS. now contains practically the same sham-Italian and blundering ascription to Uria (sic) Bolognese as the British Museum copy (made in 1781), the 'Uria' alternative having been chosen when the addition was made, probably about 1780. Different inquirers, in fact, interpreted and amplified the pencilling in all good faith. It is said that an Australian journalist, being confronted with a telegram from England, 'Lincoln ob dean swift rosy dawn,' expanded it into: 'We regret to announce the decease at Lincoln of the celebrated Dean Swift, the author of the well-known hymn, "The roseate hues of early dawn."' Yet the real meaning was that a horse with the strange name of Ob had won the Lincolnshire Handicap. However, though in all probability this pencilling was the source of all the later amplifications, there is no need to be gratuitously positive. Handel's authorship is conclusively proved in other ways.

DATE OF THE BIRTHDAY ODE

It is generally stated that Handel's setting of Queen Anne's Birthday Ode was performed on February 6, 1713. The authority is Burney (b. 1726). But Burney made many mistakes about these early dates; besides, there might be a confusion between the old and new styles.

There should hardly be a doubt that the performance was on February 6, 1714. The Ode celebrates the Queen as the bringer of lasting peace to the earth, and this phrase can only refer to the peace of Utrecht. Now, the treaty was not signed till March 31, 1713, and on February 6 the negotiations were at a standstill, owing to Louis XIV. obstinately refusing one of the proposed conditions. There could be no point in running a risk of ridicule through prematurely celebrating a future possibility—next year would do equally well.

The later date is supported by the notes found on the autograph, which is undated. The spellings of the names of two male singers, which were 'Elfurth' and 'Whale,' or 'Wahle' on the autograph of the 'Utrecht Jubilate'—performed in July, 1713—have become 'Eilfurt' or 'Eilfort,' and 'Whaly' on the Birthday Ode autograph. The German 'h,' we notice, has now vanished from the first name, and the German accentuation of a final 'e' has given place to an English 'y,' thus approximating to the later form, 'Whely.' Handel's knowledge of English had improved, though he still spelt by ear. The short Te Deum in D major, which is assigned to 1714, has the spellings 'Eilfort' and 'Whely.' Again, the two female singers were Mrs. Barbier and Anastasia Robinson, who both sang in the operas of 1714. Anastasia appeared then for the first time in opera, and there is no reason to suppose that she had sung previously, except at her own or her father's semi-private concerts.

THE EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY OF ARTS

By Arthur T. Froggatt

Having accomplished my annual search for every reference to music on the walls of the Academy, I find that the proportion of works in which any such reference can be discovered amounts to nearly the same as last year, being about one in fifty-six. I cannot help wishing that it were greater. However, I had not far to go before meeting with one of the objects of my search. 'The Flute Player' (24), by William Dring, depicts a gentleman in the act of assaying a composition by Handel. I am sorry to say that the flute is not quite so straight as it ought to be; but I have noticed that some artists when painting certain objects (e.g., the keyboard of a pianoforte), appear to despise straight lines. So I pass on to 'The Fair, Hampstead' (32), by Miss Billie Waters, and ask myself, shall I include this in what is pretty sure to be a small collection? But why not? In this unassuming picture I spy a roundabout, and where there is a roundabout I know there is music; and I can believe it quite possible that if my ears had never been accustomed to something better they might have been capable of deriving pleasure and refreshment from the music which accompanies a roundabout; so down No. 32 shall go in my list. The more so that I have to work through the second and third galleries, drawing both blank.

In Gallery No. 4, 'Macarthur Ovenden, Esq.' (209), by T. Binney Gibbs, is seated beside a pianoforte, to which latter the criticism in the above paragraph by no means applies. The picture is not of the 'decorative' order, and in this respect contrasts strongly with 'Venetian Night' (236), by Arthur Spooner. Here we have a cloudless sky of deepest blue, the Rialto in the background, gondolas with brightly-coloured lanterns, and in the foreground a man engaged in playing a mandoline. In Gallery No. 5, the only suggestion of music is 'Mid-day, Tenno' (273), by Harry Watson; a small picture with one or two figures, including a man playing a concertina.

'Don Juan challenging the Commander' (421), by Charles Ricketts, is the diploma work deposited by the artist on his election as an academician, which I immediately recognised as having appeared in a former exhibition of the Academy—that of 1924. But why does the Statue squat in order to reach the hand of the Don? Leporello merely says, 'O ciel! chinò la testa.' And why is the Statue attired as a soldier of the classic age?

'The Lute Player' (451), by Walter E. Webster, is a small picture containing only two figures, both in white, of whom one is a ballerina. The costumes are well contrasted with the deep blue of an Italian night; a pleasant piece for the eye to rest upon.

The only work in the Academy in which music really comes to the front is 'The Spanish Guitar' (526), by Harold Harvey. The modern six-stringed instrument is well delineated, and there is plenty of colour in the composition; but the general effect is flat and wanting in atmosphere. 'The Waterloo Drum' (544), by William Wallace, is really a view of an interior—a rather uninteresting interior, I should have thought, but very well painted. Lest it should escape observation, I may say that the drum is placed at the side of the picture; probably because it is a side drum.

'Lauda Sion' (559), by Mark Symons, draws its inspiration from mediæval sources, and is a very elaborate composition. The Madonna and the Holy Child occupy the centre, with a charming group of children below, three of whom are playing long straight trumpets of narrow bore. The face of the Christ Child is very beautiful. 'Music' (618), by James Clark, consists of three figures in classic attire, one of whom is performing upon a lute or some such instrument. The last picture in gallery No. 10 is a portrait of 'John Ireland, Esq.,' (657), by Arnold Mason. 'Bernhard Ord, Esq.,' (658), by Hugh Buss, is shown in the act of playing upon a two-manual harpsichord.

Among two hundred and twenty-two water-colours, I was able to discover only half-a-dozen containing any sort of musical instrument. 'Pierrot alone, and then Pierrette, and then a story to forget' (721), by Edward Osmond, portrays Pierrot with a four-stringed mandoline—an effective but sad picture. In 'The Herald of Spring' (844), by Mrs. Averil Burleigh, are three figures, one with a lute and another with a small trumpet. 'The Return from the Hunt' (857), by Noel L. Nisbet (Mrs. H. Bush), includes a performer upon a small hunting horn. Musical instruments are also to be seen in two more of Mrs. Averil Burleigh's works—'The Popinjay' (870) and 'The Troubadour' (889), the latter a half-length. 'The Flute Player' (904), by Miss Jessie Bayes, is somewhat in the style of Dulac.

Among the Miniatures I was greatly taken with 'The late William Metcalfe, Esq., fifty years lay-clerk at Carlisle Cathedral' (976), by Miss Mary Slee, beautiful not only as a work of art but also as an index of character. A remarkable work of totally different description is 'The Foreign Devil' (1,087), by Miss Violet Brunton: a female form in the grip of a Chinese dragon, the latter forming the framework of a large harp.

I found no suggestion of music among the drawings and etchings; and in the Architectural Room only 'Stowe School Chapel' (1,352), by Sir Robert Lorimer—the west end, showing a well-designed organ case.

A hundred and twenty-nine pieces of sculpture yielded barely six musical subjects: 'Melody' (1,419), by Kellock Brown, a handsome bronze statue, holding a five-stringed chelys, is undoubtedly the most important of these. 'Song of the Sea' (1,453), bronze statuette-group, by Richard Garbe, shows, not Arion, but a female figure seated on a dolphin, with nothing musical about it beyond the title. 'Pan' (1,468), a marble bust by Thomas Tyrrell, gives eight reeds—I doubt if the god possessed so many. I admire the caution of Henry Poole, who in his 'Young Pan' (1,491), a marble head, declines to allow him any pipes at all. As this is Mr. Poole's diploma work, deposited on his election as an academician, his critical caution will remain part of his monument for all time. 'The Chorister' (1,519), by Charles L. Hartwell, with his little frilled collar, concludes my survey of the exhibition.

NEW LIGHT ON LATE TUDOR COMPOSERS

By W. H. Grattan Flood

XXXIV.—Anthony Holborne

Among the many lutenists and lute composers of the late Tudor period, Anthony Holborne claims an honoured place, yet his biography so far available is practically a blank. He was brother to William Holborne, the madrigal composer, whose 'Six Short Airs or Canzonets to Three Voices' are included in Anthony Holborne's 'Cittharn Schoole' (1597), one of the pieces being a Song on the death of 'Bonny Boots.'

So far as internal evidence goes, Anthony was the elder of the two brothers, and was a married man, but William was apparently a bachelor. Anthony's birth may be dated as about the year 1565, and he cultivated the lute. There is some lute music by him in the University Library, Cambridge, dated 1588, and he was also a poet, for there are commendatory verses by him prefixed to Thomas Morley's 'Plaine and Easie Introduction to Practicall Musicke,' in 1597, and to Giles Farnaby's 'Canzonets to Foure Voyces with a Song of Eight Parts,' in 1598.

From an interesting letter in the Hatfield MSS. (Part 3), dated September 28, 1589, it seems that Holborne was also an expert lute-maker, and lived some time at Winchester. In another letter in the same series (Part 4), Francis Derrick, writing from Antwerp to Henry Wickham, in October, 1594, asks him earnestly to procure 'a bandora or orphtrye of the new fashion which hath the bridge and the stops slope, and as well the treble as the other strings wired; the best you can find, wherein you must use the help of some who have skill in that instrument'; and also to 'procure some principal lessons for the bandora of Holborne's making, and other most cunning men in that instrument, and whatsoever you lay out, either for the instrument or the lessons, he will repay you with great thanks.' He adds: 'And, withal, I pray you remember my request to send over some proper youth, cunning in music, specially in that instrument or the lute whose entertainment shall be such as I dare warrant you he shall well like and give you thanks.'

Apparently 'incorrect and unauthorised coppies' of Holborne's compositions had been in circulation in 1595 and 1596 (some of which are quoted in William Barley's 'New Book of Tablature,' 1596), and at length, in 1597, he published 'The Cittharn Schoole,' dedicated to Thomas Lord Burgh, the patron of John Daniel, as has been seen in No. 32 of the present series. On the title-page of this work he describes himself as 'Gentleman, and servant to her most excellent Majestie,' and in Dowland's 'Varietie of Lute Lessons' (1610) he is more definitely called 'Gentleman Usher to Queen Elizabeth.'

Two years later, in 1599, Holborne issued 'Pavans, Galliards, Almains, and other short Aers both grave and light, in five parts, for Viols, Violins, or other Musicall Winde Instruments,' printed by William Barley, London, of which a slightly imperfect copy is in the British Museum. A year later, John Dowland, in his 'Second Book of Ayres,' dedicates his song, 'I saw my lady weep,' to our composer, whom he describes as 'the most famous Anthony Holborne.'

Robert Dowland's 'Musical Banquet' (1610) includes a song, 'My heavie sprite' (words by the Earl of Cumberland), composed by Anthony Holborne, whom he designates 'this most famous and perfect artist.' There is also a piece by him in R. Dowland's 'Varietie of Lute Lessons' (1610).

Specimens of Holborne's lute music may be found in the British Museum (Add. MSS. 31,392) and in Jane Pickering's Lute Book (1616), Egerton MSS. 2,046, Brit. Mus. In the latter volume is a piece entitled 'The Countess of Pembroke's Funerall.' Fullsack's collection, printed at Hamburg in 1607, has four pieces by him. It may be well to note that a copy of the 'Cittharn Schoole' (formerly belonging to Evelyn the diarist) is in the library of the Royal College of Music, and another copy is at Cambridge.

Previous writers have given the date of Holborne's death as 'unknown,' but from a letter written by his wife Elizabeth, on November 29, 1602, it appears that the great lutenist was at that date in a dying condition. This letter, which is headed, 'Elizabeth, wife of Anthony Holborne, to Sir Robert Cecil,' is among the Hatfield MSS. (Part 12, p. 491), and is thus summarised in the printed 'Calendar' issued by the Hist. MSS. Commission: 'The care my husband had of your business in studying to effect the same took such a cold that I fear will be his life's loss. And by his death I shall be left a desolate widow, unable to give him that burial that befitteth a man of his place. Most humbly I beseech your Honour to comfort him dying, as his hope was only in you living, for in his life's passage hitherto his senseless mind and speeches tend only to your Honour's service.' As this letter is endorsed by Sir Robert Cecil: 'Primo December, 1602. Widow Holborne,' it may be concluded that Anthony Holborne died on November 30, or December 1, 1602.

WHO WAS BEETHOVEN'S 'FIRST MÆCENAS'?

In the dedication of his Op. 9, Three String Trios, to Count Browne, Beethoven describes the Count as 'the first Mæcenas of his Muse,' and alludes to the Count's 'munificence at once delicate and liberal.' This was in July, 1798. Two years previously Beethoven had dedicated to the Countess Browne his Twelve Variations on a Russian Air. The great master was befriended by the Brownes from 1795 to 1803, and readers of Beethoven's life will remember the story of the horse which Countess Browne gave him as a gift. Yet strange to say, all our reference books, including the new edition of Grove's 'Dictionary of Music,' persist in describing the Count as 'of the Russian service,' while Dr. A. C. Kalischer says that nothing practically is known of him, save that his name disappears after the year 1805. The question, therefore, remains to be answered as to who was Count Browne that was so signally honoured by Beethoven? Let me at once answer that the Count was an Irishman, at least the grandson of an exiled Irish soldier from co. Limerick.

Count Philip George Browne was the second son of Field-Marshal Count Browne (who married the daughter of the Viceroy of Naples), who died of wounds received at the Battle of Prague on June 26, 1757. He was born at Novara on June 2, 1727, and at the age of twenty-eight became a colonel of the 49th Infantry, taking part in numerous engagements, including the battle of Prague. In 1760 he was promoted Lieut.-General, having previously been ennobled with the Grand Cross of the Order of Marie Therese. In 1792 he visited his grandfather's estate in co. Limerick, and received a most cordial welcome in various parts of Ireland. His grandfather was the celebrated Colonel Baron Ulick (Ulysses) Browne, of Camus, co. Limerick, who was created a Count of the Holy Roman Empire (on March 13, 1716), and whose son was Field-Marshal Maximilian Ulysses Browne (1705-57).

Count Philip George Browne married the daughter of the Russian Duke Wittenhoof, and eventually settled at Vienna, where, from 1795 to 1803, his house was the Mecca of artists and musicians. Beethoven was ever a welcome guest under the friendly roof of the Brownes, and he dedicated numerous pieces to them, the last being Op. 48, 'Six Sacred Songs,' written for Count Browne. The Count was present at the first production of Beethoven's 'Mount of Olives' (April 5, 1803). Soon after he fell seriously ill, and his death took place at Vienna on December 19, 1803.

Thus Beethoven's 'first Mæcenas' was a brilliant Irish soldier whose father and grandfather were also brilliant soldiers of the Austrian service—one of the 'Wild Geese' whose deeds are emblazoned on Continental battle-fields 'from Dunkirk to Belgrade.'

W. H. G. F.

REACTION AND PREJUDICE

By J. H. Elliot

The case for what is generally known as the 'reactionary' viewpoint has of late months received considerable attention in the pages of the Musical Times. The statement of a viewpoint which, though not altogether hostile, is at the same time not entirely confirmatory, may, therefore, be apropos at the present time. Lest I should be accused of self-contradiction, however, it must be stated at the outset that my article 'A Note on Fashion' (Musical Times, March, 1928) was not so much an indictment of modernism—most aspects of which, rightly or wrongly, I find myself able to admire—as a warning against the acclamation of one musical tendency at the expense of another.

The two recent articles from the authoritative pen of Leonid Sabaneev proclaim that he at any rate is uncompromisingly on the 'reactionary' side of the fence; and there is, of course, much to be said—M. Sabaneev has in fact said a great deal that is strongly convincing—for the anti-modernist viewpoint. Yet it is none the less possible that a particular bias may so take possession of the critical faculty that purely subjective computations arising from it may appear to their creators in the light of absolute values, and that, applied to modernistic tendencies, they will retain the apparently authentic ring of what may be termed objective criticism. Doubtless it is late in the day to point warning fingers towards the detractors of Beethoven, Wagner, and other innovators who have long since receded into the conservative camp; yet these poor critics, who seem to us to have been so misguided, and who have so frequently been pilloried as specimens of the merely egregious, no doubt believed that they held the key to an absolute standard, whereas their fault was, in all probability, simple bias—an unshakeable belief in existing standards, and in them only.

Even M. Sabaneev himself, moreover, betrays signs of a particular prejudice which may account to some extent for his own critical outlook. This functions not so much as a reverence for historical tradition as a preoccupation with romanticism per se. 'Severe' is not, for instance, a word which many musicians would apply to the style of Bach, even though romanticism was not the general tendency of his art; and M. Sabaneev makes reference to the 'Netherland masters, who created an art nearer perhaps to mathematics or the chess-board than to music in its poetic aspect'—as though the 'poetic aspect' should have sprung up full-grown simultaneously with the establishment of fundamental principles.

Looking round upon modern musical tendency, and observing the secession of romanticism, M. Sabaneev has, presumably, deduced therefrom that the foundations of the art are quivering, and that music is delivered into the hands of the Philistines. But this is surely inconclusive. Granting always that buffoons and mountebanks are to be found in the arena, are we to take it that every composer of modernistic tendency is, ipso facto, deliberately cutting himself off from the popular appreciation which still responds principally to romantic stimuli—and, as a consequence, is lessening his chances of financial gain—for the sake merely of contravening the conservative formulæ, or of gaining at all costs a reputation for modernity? From a purely commonplace standpoint one would naturally expect to find such vandalism applied not so much to the routing of tradition as to a common pillage of the coffers! It is surely fantastic to accuse modernists in the mass of wholesale slaughter of the conventions for the mere sake of the thing; and is it not possible that M. Sabaneev takes so pessimistic a view partly on account of an obvious regard for the romanticism which is now commonly eschewed?

As I have had occasion to say elsewhere, 'true progress is a matter of carrying forward rather than of opening a fresh account.' Yet, regarding a contemporary work at, so to speak, close quarters, it is often difficult to perceive the items brought forward; all that meets the eye is, often enough, an apparent upheaval of everything previously associated with musical experience. Could the early critics of Wagner detect, as we to-day can detect, the Beethoven, Schubert, Weber, and other entries which had been carried over and added in? What guarantee have we that modernistic idioms are not, one and all, similarly derived? A little longer time, a little more perspective, a few more shocks to our slow-moving sense of values, may reveal much, as they have done in the past. I, for one, see need for patience rather than cause for despair.

But bias is a root of much destructive criticism; and for some occult reason the quality is far more evident in the musical than in other artistic spheres. A recent criticism of Stravinsky was strongly condemnatory largely on account of the writer's possessing, from no clearly assignable cause, a prejudice against the artistic progenitor of that composer, Rimsky-Korsakov. What hope can we entertain of comprehending, still less of enjoying, modern tendencies if we permit our sensibilities to become wholly enraptured by any one aspect of the music of the past—or, on the other hand, if we take strong exception to some particular trend which, in the natural order of things, must throw out a branch from the ever-growing musical tree? The art of music is, however, peculiar in this respect. It is not considered incompatible to enjoy Henry Fielding along with Anatole France, or to read both Thomas Hardy and P. G. Wodehouse. Yet violent prejudice and partizanship are commonly—nay, almost invariably—met with in the course of musical activity. But why? Without necessarily attempting to draw artistic comparisons, there is no reason in the world why we should not be prepared to accept every formula of significance, from that of Palestrina to those of Debussy and Scriabin; and the first step to attaining a clear vision of contemporary music is to remove what mists of prejudice and bias may obscure our view of the ramifications of the music of the past.

The Musician's Bookshelf

The Music Section of the State Publishing Department, Moscow, has just issued Part 1 of 'The Outlines of the History of Music in Russia from the Earliest Times to the End of the 18th Century.' The author is Prof. N. F. Findeisen, the veteran worker in the Russian musical field, who tells us in the Preface that he began the collection and examination of his material forty years ago.

His original intention was to confine himself to the 17th and 18th centuries — the period covering the introduction, the culmination, and the decline of foreign influences in Russian music and the development of a musical culture of its own. This work was completed in 1918, but in 1919 Prof. Findeisen was appointed to the chair of Russian Musical History at the Petrograd Archæological Institute, and found it necessary to extend his labours to include the musical archæology and palæography of the country. This led to the investigation of the state of music in Russia from the earliest days.

The History is to be completed in seven parts, and will deal exhaustively with every aspect of the musical life from the time of the predecessors of the Slavs to the end of the 18th century.

Part 1 discusses the musical culture of the Scythians and Sarmatians, the Greek colonists settled on the shores of the Black Sea, and the Volga Bulgars and other inhabitants of the more northerly parts of Russia; the folk-music of the heathen Slavs, particularly the ritual and ceremonial songs; and the Russia of which Kiev was the centre of government, and which was closely associated with Byzantium. The volume is admirably printed, and contains many illustrations and an abundance of explanatory notes.

It is to be hoped that an English edition of this very important work by an authoritative writer, who has gone to the fountain-head for his facts, will be published. To those of us who imagine—if we think about it at all—that Russian music began with Glinka, it will be a revelation. S. W. P.

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

'The Language of Music.' By E. Stanley Roper and R. J. Wickham Hurd. Pp. 49 + Appendix, pp. 32. Oxford University Press, 5*s*. (The Exercises can be had separately, 1*s*. 6*d*.)

'Studies in the Art of Counterpoint.' By Stewart Macpherson. Pp. 172. Joseph Williams, 7*s*. 6*d*.

'Community Singing.' By J. T. Bavin. Pp. 37. Hawkes, 1*s*. 6*d*.

'Operatic Translations.' By H. F. V. Little. Vols. 1 and 2. Gramophone Publications, 2*s*. per volume.

'Behold these Daniels.' Being Studies of Contemporary Music Critics. By Basil Maine. With a Preface by Compton Mackenzie. Pp. 82. H. & W. Brown, 5*s*.

Fourteenth Annual Report of the Carnegie United Kingdom Trust. Pp. 114. Edinburgh: T. & A. Constable.

'Loneliness, and other Essays.' By Agnes J. Larkcom. Pp. 158. Duckworth, 4*s*. 6*d*.

'Le Manuscrit Musical M.222 C.22, de la Bibliothèque de Strasbourg (XV^e siècle), brulé en 1870, et reconstitué d'après une copie partielle d'Edmond de Coussemaker.' By Charles van den Borren. Pp. 219. From the Author, 55, rue Stanley, Bruxelles.

'Les Luthistes.' By Lionel de la Laurencie. Pp. 128. Paris: Henri Laurens.

'Evolution Disproved.' By the Rev. William A. Williams. Pp. 125. From the Author, 1202, Atlantic Avenue, Camden, New Jersey, U.S.A., 1 dollar.

'Novice Corner.' An Elementary Handbook of the Gramophone. Pp. 63. Gramophone Publications, 1*s*.

Music in the Foreign Press

MOZART

The April number of Die Musik is a special Mozart number, containing articles by Edwin Fischer, Richard Specht ('The Mozart Legend of To-day'), Felix Boghen (on the hitherto unknown oratorio, 'Isacco'), Fritz Lauhöfer, Eberhard Preussner, Peter Epstein, Felix Günther, and Karl Grünsky (on the Masses).

FRANZ SCHREKER

The March-April number of the Musikblätter des Anbruch is devoted to Franz Schreker on the occasion of his fiftieth birthday. The contributors include Schönberg, Oskar Bie, Bittner, Paul Bekker, Alban Berg, Krenek, Petyrek, and Szymanowsky.

BOSSI'S MUSIC FOR CHILDREN

In Il Pensiero Musicale (February) Melchiorre Rosa writes in praise of Marco Enrico Bossi's pianoforte pieces for children. These are intimate, straightforward, and spontaneous in character, original, interestingly worked out within their limited compass, and altogether delightful. The list comprises: Op. 80, six easy pieces (Izzo); Op. 85, six easy pieces (Hug); five pieces (Peters, 1918); Op. 102, 'Jugend' (Hug); Op. 133, six morceaux d'enfants (Peters); and several books published by Carisch, Milan.

ON BYZANTINE MUSIC

The revived Tribune de Saint-Gervais (of which there will be six numbers every year) is very beautifully printed and got up. The first issue contains an essay by A. Gastoué on mediæval Latin documents referring to Byzantine music.

BEETHOVEN'S DEAFNESS

Le Ménestrel (April 20-27) contains an important contribution by Dr. Raoul Blondel (who is known as a composer under the name Raoul Brunel) to the study of the causes and psychological effects of Beethoven's deafness.

THE PRESENT STATE AND THE FUTURE OF FRENCH MUSIC

Among the interviews on this topic published in the French daily Comœdia (of which those with Honegger and Vincent d'Indy were noticed in last month's Musical Times), none is more pessimistic than the one in which Florent Schmitt expresses his views:

> It is no longer in France that the true tradition of French music is to be found: better seek it in America (where Nadia Boulanger's pupils are cases in point), in Spain, in Italy, in Russia, or wherever the younger composers have learnt the lesson taught by our great masters. Here the position is disastrous. With a few exceptions our young composers think of nothing but self-advertisement and money-making. They devote no energy to work. Who or what is responsible for this state of things? Stravinsky (whose 'Rite of Spring' I admire) pointed out the path of simplicity. Our youngsters followed the suggestion eagerly, because it meant to them the law of lesser effort. But there is a good deal of hypocrisy in Stravinsky's case: he showed the way to others while carefully refraining from following it. In this respect his influence proved disastrous.

YOUNG COMPOSERS IN LENINGRAD

In the April Melos, Igor Gliebof commends the following young composers working at Leningrad: Kushnaref (born 1890, of Armenian origin), whose best works are a Passacaglia with Fugue and a Sonata for organ; Riassanof; Judin; Schillinger (born 1895), whose pianoforte pieces, Op. 12, Sonate-Rhapsodie, Op. 17, and Symphonic Rhapsody 'October' are specially mentioned; Karnovich, Tulin, and several others.

A NEW WORK BY VIVES

In the April Revista Musical Catalan, Llius Millet praises the new choral 'Follies i Paisatges,' by Amadeu Vives, recently performed by the Orfeó Catalá.

GLAZOUNOV CONTRA 'BORIS GODUNOV'

In the Moscow Sovremenny Teatr (April 10) V. Belaiev quotes the following views set forth by Glazounov in the Krasnaya Gazeta:

> I emphatically advocate continuing to perform 'Boris Godunov' in Rimsky-Korsakov's arrangement, in which the lack of fluency of Moussorgsky's music is made good, and whose orchestration was devised according to the impressions produced on Rimsky-Korsakov by Moussorgsky's own rendering of 'Boris' at the pianoforte. Moussorgsky, being an excellent pianist, conveyed when playing a far greater intensity and variety of colour than there is in his actual orchestral setting.

Profs. Steinberg and Jitomirsky, of the Leningrad Conservatorium, are also in favour of the revised version; but there is a strong majority in favour of the genuine text. M.-D. CALVOCORESSI.

New Music

CHORAL MUSIC

MIXED-VOICE

Kenneth Finlay's settings of 'Ours is the land' (Scotland) and 'The auld ash tree' show an agreeable feeling for pleasant sentiment, and for the smooth weaving of straightforwardly written parts (S.A.T.B.). In the first song, a few voices add a fifth part on the last page (Stainer & Bell).

'As Moshiach vet kummen' is a Jewish folk-song arranged by S. Alman for S.A.T.B., with short bits of solo tenor recitative. The words are (presumably) in Yiddish; there is no English translation, so we cannot tell what the song is about. Taken at a dignified pace, this would sound fairly impressive, though the harmony is conventional (Oxford University Press).

Avery Robinson has arranged for S.A.T.B. the negro 'spiritual' 'Water Boy' (the lad who brings water to negro convicts, working on the roads). The harmony is strongly coloured, and humming is effectively employed (Rogers). W. R. A.

MALE-VOICE

Peter Warlock has made an arrangement of 'One more river' (the ditty giving the details of the progressive numeralogical dispositions of those sentient beings, the simple relation of whose system of organized locomotion is interrupted by the frequent repetition of the inspiriting slogan 'Vive la compagnie'). This jollification is for a baritone soloist and T.T.BAR.B. choir. It is advisable to choose as pianist a person with large and sinewy hands; if he does his duty, his brow will certainly be wet with honest sweat by the time all are gathered in (Rogers).

PART-SONGS FOR CHILDREN'S AND FEMALE VOICES

Eaton Faning's 'Voyaging,' for two equal voices, is a bright 'make believe' song for those who are not too grown up. The same composer's 'The Miller's Wooing' is a choral ballad, which John Pointer has arranged for S.S.A.—a lively, graceful, pleasantly old-fashioned piece, that a great many choirs will tackle with pleasure (Novello).

H. A. Chambers has arranged Alberto Randegger's 'Night' for S.S. (or S. and M-S.). This is easy music, that Sunday School choirs might look at (though it is suitable for every-day use as well) Another arrangement is that of C. H. Lloyd's 'The way for Billy and me' (S.S.). Lloyd had a charming touch. This is simple, happy music. 'The Wooded Hill' is the general title of four songs by Ethel Boyce, which are respectively called 'The Early Spring,' 'Summer Heat,' 'Autumn Time,' and 'The Holly.' The first, in its lower part, goes down to C sharp, the second to A, the third to B, and the last to B flat. The titles fairly suggest the moods (the Autumn one is grave); the music flows fluently, the parts interweaving and the melodies singing just as we know they will at this composer's graceful bidding. With a bracing descant on 'The Campbells are comin',' by Geoffrey Shaw, is printed E. H. Thiman's brief 'The Ferry,' for S.S., a bright setting of Christina Rossetti's 'Ferry me across the water, do, boatman, do.' National Songs with Descants, Set 4, contains 'The Campbells,' with nine other songs, deftly and judiciously treated by Geoffrey Shaw and H. A. Chambers, as well as a preface full of sensible advice, put in a few words, about the way to get the best out of descant singing. This collection costs 8*d*. (Novello).

UNISON

Three songs by Cecil Sharman are 'The Apple Elf,' 'The Nice, Neat Pig,' and 'A Pillar-Box Song.' The first and last have a gently-breezy air, and the second swings in a curly-tail fashion, in six-eight. All are suitable for quite small singers (Novello).

Singing games by Eleanor Farjeon are 'Bertha,' 'Gentle Lady,' 'The Green Cap,' and 'The Daisy-Field.' The first would be appropriate for fairly small people; the other two can be sung by the older ones of the singing-game age. There is a touch of distinction about the verses, that I like. It would be a good thing if pieces such as these were chosen as festival tests. Not always are the words that the kiddies are given to sing the best food for the imagination (Oxford University Press).

Three of Peter Warlock's songs have been arranged for two- and three-part singing. 'The bayley berith the bell away' is for S. (or M.-S.) and A. (top note E flat, lowest G). This is slow and rather plaintive. 'Mourn no moe' and 'Lullaby' ('Golden Slumbers') are for S.S.A. The first in particular is chromatically rich. The accompaniments will need careful balancing against the voices, for they are important, though not technically difficult. Music of this calibre ought to be welcomed by women's choirs of some experience in the use of vocal colour (Rogers).

VIOLIN

An Irish Folk-Tune ('Little Red Lark'), an Old English Dance ('Newcastle'), and a Cornish Folk-Tune ('Where be going?'), arranged for violin and pianoforte by Colin Taylor, are published by the Oxford University Press. All three pieces may be commended without reservation. The adapter has not tried to deck out these simple and beautiful melodies in the latest fashion; but at the same time he has neglected no opportunity to add a little seasoning where such an addition was an advantage. What is perhaps still more important, the writing for the violin is intelligent; that is to say, a maximum of effect is secured with a minimum of effort. This is exactly where William Kroll's 'Bizarresque' (Schirmer) fails. This piece is just a little too easy to tempt a very good player, and a little too difficult for a violinist of moderate skill. I have the impression that in writing the composer imagined something different from what the practical test of performance will reveal. The fingering of bar 18 of the violin part is unnecessary; of the last bar but two, arbitrary. There are two or three ways of fingering such passages, and the player will invariably choose that which suits him best—with or without the composer's leave.

F. B.

VIOLONCELLO

Cedric Sharpe has written two very pleasant and effective little pieces—Gavotte in G minor and 'The Angelus'—for violoncello and pianoforte (Joseph Williams). Indeed they are so good that one cannot help wishing the composer had taken counsel with those of his friends who have made composition their special study, and touched up the harmony here and there. No doubt Mr. Sharpe can reply that a Gavotte is an old form, and that a surfeit of tonic and dominant is not so objectionable when the soloist has something interesting to say. But it is no use pretending that we are not living in the year of grace 1928. And modern composers can do some pretty things with old forms.

More elaborate is the harmonic treatment of William Clifford Heilman's 'Romance' for 'cello (or violin) and pianoforte (G. Schirmer). But the melody does not flow so easily as one would expect in a drawing-room piece.

F. B.

CHAMBER MUSIC

Alec Rowley's Quartet for pianoforte, violin, viola, and 'cello, 'Water Colours' (Winthrop Rogers), is a conscientious piece of writing. It consists of four short pieces ('Simonette,' 'Shepherd's Holiday,' 'Oriental Vase,' 'Rain in the Valley'), every one of which has a clearly-defined 'mood' which the music describes adequately. The writing is modern in character, but not extraordinarily modern, and the use of dissonance is not the result of a desperate desire to be original, but of a taste which delights in its piquancy.

Schumann's 'Garden Melody' has been arranged for string quartet or string orchestra with pianoforte by Charles Tourville, Sidney Robjohns contributing editing, bowing, and fingering (Joseph Williams). The result is more harmonious than one would think, considering that three different cooks have contributed to this modicum of broth. The melody is less than thirty bars in length.

F. B.

PIANOFORTE DUETS

The pianoforte-duet repertory steadily maintains its interest and value, not only in the matter of original work, but also in regard to the important part played by four-handed arrangements of orchestral and chamber music. There is no better way of getting at the inside of a work, and in most cases the material is unexpectedly effective in its transcribed form. Emily Daymond's arrangement of Parry's 'English Suite' for string orchestra (Novello) should be welcomed by duettists. The music is very characteristic of Parry in its frank tunefulness and robust—at times bluff—humour. Such things show him as the 'English Bach' far more than anything else in his output. It is impossible to play this Suite without being reminded of the 'Brandenburg' Concerto and the String Suites. The arranging has been well done, although some players may think (as we do) that the primo L.H. is taken down too frequently into territory already occupied by the secondo R.H. A more liberal employment of the top of the keyboard would have avoided this, as well as adding brilliance to the music. This detail apart, the transcription is a capital bit of work. The music is only moderately difficult, so a host of pianists will be able to enjoy this healthy, breezy work.

In the way of original music, is a first-rate set of six duets by Thomas F. Dunhill, under the title 'Pastime and Good Company' (Oxford University Press; in two books). The grade is 'C. D.,' with, we think, more of D. than C. The pieces show Mr. Dunhill at his best. We have enjoyed them all, especially the 'Morrice' (1), 'Piccaninnies' (4), and the rousing 'English Jig' (6).

---

Messrs. Chester have added two numbers to their 'Répertoire Collignon'—'Three Old English Songs' and 'Vieilles Chansons Françaises,' both sets arranged, with pianoforte accompaniment, by Guy Weitz. (The French songs number seven.) The settings are an engaging mixture of simplicity and sophistication, and a singer with a light, highish voice and a sense of humour and characterisation could make much of them. A deft pianist is called for, though the accompaniments are not really difficult. As in the voice-part, the question is one of style rather than of technique.

The Oxford Library of Standard Songs, edited by Steuart Wilson, is developing into a very useful repertory. The latest batch we have received includes such diverse fare as 'Voi, che sapete,' 'Widdicombe Fair,' Purcell's 'Evening Hymn' and 'I'll sail upon the dog-star,' 'The lass with the delicate air,' Salvator Rosa's 'Star Vicino,' &c. The Mozart and other classical arias are provided with fresh translations by Edward J. Dent and the Editor; the accompaniments to folk-songs are mainly by Gordon Jacob, who has hit a sensible mean between baldness and over-elaboration. He deserves a good mark, above all, for writing entirely diatonic harmony to the 'Londonderry Air.' In fact, his folk-song accompaniments are among the best we have seen. A few others in the series are less happy. Harold Davidson, for example, in 'The harp that once,' attempts more, but his hits are out-balanced by the misses—e.g., bar 4 of the last page, where the harmony of the third beat is clumsy. Ronald Biggs sets out to be interesting in 'Oft in the stilly night,' but the persistent clashes become monotonous, and are not in keeping. In 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring' is a prefatory note which dodges the question of the relative value of the dotted quaver and the triplet by quoting Schweitzer, who says that 'is merely the old, inexact method of notation for and Tovey ('when Bach wants 9-8 time he can write it. The guiding principle in these 18th-century rhythms is that, while meaningless distinctions are ignored, expressive distinctions are emphasised'). The note goes on: 'The singer must not imagine that he is exempt from thinking about the musical problems of the accompaniment.' To which the singer might retort that the earnest editor must not imagine he is doing his work by sitting on the fence. His job is to guide his customers. Here the combined courage of Steuart Wilson and Gordon Jacob (the arranger) ought to have been sufficient for a definite view. Both Schweitzer and Tovey being right, the solution is found in the style of the piece in which the problem arises. It is clear that the constant clash of against is opposed to the flow of the music and the mood of the words, and the answer is as certainly in favour of treating both figures as triplets.

The cases covered by the Tovey view are exceptions, and are unmistakable by a performer who looks at the whole instead of at details. We add that Mr. Jacob, despite that hedging prefatory note, treats the dotted quaver figure in what we believe to be the wrong way. Does he really believe that Bach wants the lovely, flowing movement spoilt by such a stuttering, dot-and-carry-one method as this?:

---

'When George III. was King' is 'a dramatised concert programme of old English music,' the dialogue written, and the music chosen and arranged, by H. J. Taylor (Curwen). There is material here for an evening's entertainment by about a score of performers. Scenery (interiors) and costumes are prescribed, but they are not indispensable in these days, when Shakespeare is acted in modern dress with a mere backcloth. The numbers are for vocal and instrumental soloists and ensembles. The music comprises thirty-four pieces, mostly old friends, from John of Fornsete's round onwards. The connecting dialogue could be made not unfunny, but 'tis after all secondary to the music. We like all the pieces except Mr. Taylor's 'spoof' anthem on 'the wicked flea'—a piece of questionable taste and poor music—which can be omitted without damaging the scheme.

---

The Oxford University Press sends a couple of Bach Cantatas. No. 152, 'O walk the heavenly way,' edited and arranged by Charles Kennedy Scott, with English words by Beatrice E. Bulman, is for two solo voices (soprano and bass) and solo instruments (flute, oboe, viola d'amore, viola da gamba, and continuo)—a combination used in no other Cantata. The work is of sustained beauty, and consists of a Sinfonia (the main subject of which, in a major key, was used by Bach in the Organ Fugue in A), two bass recitatives, fine arias for bass and soprano, and a duet. The other Cantata is No. 31, 'The heavens shout.' Here the two chief numbers are the vigorous opening sonata and the long, jubilant five-part chorus (S.S.A.T.B.). There are also solos for soprano, tenor, and bass. The editor is Dr. Whittaker, and the English text is by Prof. Sanford Terry.

We have received the full score of Gustav Holst's Choral Ballet, 'The Golden Goose' (Oxford University Press). The story, adapted from Grimm by J. M. Joseph, lends itself well to the form. Though scored for full orchestra, the work can be played by a force of strings and one each of flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, horn, and trumpet, or by strings and pianoforte. The choral portion is for S.A.T.B., but when performed by children it may be sung in unison, except for one short passage where a second part (alto) is essential. The Ballet may be done in- or out-of-doors. The score promises a very attractive show.

Vol. 2 of 'The Oxford Song Book,' collected and arranged by Dr. Thomas Wood (Oxford University Press), is supplementary to the volume already compiled by Prof. P. C. Buck. It is divided into five sections—General Songs (35), Sea Songs (20), Frivola (i.e., nonsense songs such as 'Old King Cole,' 'Owd Joe Braddles,' &c.) (19), Rounds (14), and Fiddle Tunes and Fragments (52). The last section —a happy idea—consists of jolly things 'apt for fiddling, fluting, and whistling,' as the Preface says. The pianoforte part is rightly simple; as the melody always appears at the top, even a poor pianist can help the singer when necessary. Moreover, the songs can be played as little pieces. Dr. Wood has no objection to the more skilled accompanists adding frills to his simple schemes, but he pleads for his basses to be respected. The collection is for chorus rather than soloist—hence the Rounds. There are notes, historical and explanatory—all homely and at times racy. This is a compilation for school, camp, and fireside—pretty well everywhere, in fact. The musician who is above and beyond it has our condolences.

AN ERROR

We regret that a typographical error occurred in the advertisement of Challen Pianos Ltd. (14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, London) that was printed on the third page of the cover of our issue for May. The price of the new 'Miniature' Grand Pianos is not 108 guineas but 99 guineas.

Gramophone Notes

BY 'DISCUS'

H.M.V.

Apparently Franck's Symphony has not hitherto been electrically recorded. The set of records made by the Philadelphia Symphony, under Leopold Stokowski, is good, with a few disappointing moments. There are some fine climaxes, and the treatment generally is vivid. But it is a pity the weak 'Faith' theme is made even weaker by being drawn out and sentimentalised. Most of us who are jealous for Franck's future would get over that lapse as quickly as decency allows. In the middle section of the slow movement the delicate passage for violins loses its usual fascination owing to the tremolando not coming through. We hear plain, single notes instead of rapid repetitions (D1404-08).

An orchestral arrangement of Bach's organ Toccata and Fugue in D minor is played by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leopold Stokowski (D1428). Much of Bach's organ music may be effectively transcribed for orchestra, but this work is not among it, I think. The writing throughout is essentially that of the keyboard; and in the frequent building-up of dissonances over a pedal-point nothing in the orchestral battery can approach a real big organ pedal stop. However, despite some eccentric changes of pace in this performance, and a few blurred effects, there are many fine moments.

Having waited long for a recording of Delius's 'On hearing the first cuckoo in Spring,' we get two in one month. My preference is for the Beecham record, mentioned below. The H.M.V. recording was made by the London Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Geoffrey Toye. It is far from clear (E505).

On the whole, pride of place in this batch must go to the records of Chopin's Twelve Studies, Op. 10, played by Backhaus. Here is not only first-rate playing, but tone-quality and clarity far above the average. Such records as these do really constitute a menace to the pianoforte recital. One could hardly wish for anything better. The Studies fill three records (DB1132-34), and in order to make an album worth while, a fourth record is added, giving the Berceuse and the E flat Waltz, no less well played and recorded (DB1131).

Certain of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsodies have been recorded so many times that Mark Hambourg does well to break new ground with a capital reading of No. 8 (B2667).

Schubert's Sonatina in G minor, for violin and pianoforte, is played by Isolde Menges and Arthur de Greef—beautifully by the former, noisily by the latter. Mr. de Greef drowns the fiddle at times, and fairly smites poor Schubert's chords. Why play the pianoforte part of a slight Schubert chamber work as if it were a Liszt Rhapsody? (D1398-99).

A good addition to Schubert Centenary material is the record of four of the songs—'Im Abendroth,' 'Die Vogel,' 'Die Post,' and 'Wohin?'—delightfully sung by Elisabeth Schumann (D1411).

A less good addition is a record of Master Lough singing 'Hark! hark! the lark' and 'Who is Sylvia?' (B2681). A maturer voice is needed, and I'm sorry to find this accomplished youth developing a pronounced tremolo. He can still make the average woman soprano sound clumsy when high notes have to be taken with ease and perfect accuracy: a pity he threatens to join her in that curse of modern singing, the perpetual wobble. 'Hark! hark!' has a second verse—not by Shakespeare—tacked on: something about 'silent night, and starry hosts on high.' Why? Is there no longer a place for the perfect miniature? And, as usual, the text of 'Who is Sylvia?' gives us the Bard 'improved.' There ought to be a society to stop this sort of thing.

John Goss and the Cathedral Male-Voice Quartet are heard to even more than usual advantage in four shanties—'Blow the man down,' 'Tom's gone to Hilo,' 'Lowlands,' and 'Highland Laddie' (B2698).

If songs of the Paul Rubens and Kennedy Russell type are to be sung, let it be by Peter Dawson. He is first-rate in 'The Admiral's Yarn' and 'At Santa Barbara.' Capital tone and style, unforced humour, and diction that gives us every word clear and significant (B2661).

A couple of unusually effective operatic records call for note—Elisabeth Rethberg in 'Elsa's Dream' and 'Elizabeth's Greeting' (D1420); and a Quartet from 'Rigoletto' and a Sextet from 'Lucia,' sung by Galli-Curci and other stars of equal glory. Here is the maximum of effect with the minimum of musical worth—a fine, resounding din that will delight many a parlour over and over again (DQ102).

Some recent H.M.V. organ records are discussed on p. 527.

COLUMBIA

Several important orchestral recordings are to be noted. 'Till Eulenspiegel,' played by the Brussels Conservatoire Orchestra, under Defauw, has, I feel, only one really weak spot, and that is at the end. Poor Till's sudden arrest and taking-off somehow have a less moving quality than usual. Still, this work of Strauss's—perhaps the best, and certainly the most human—makes a fine addition to the gramophone repertory (9375-76).

The 'Rhine Maidens' Song' (L1993) and 'The Ride of the Valkyries' (L1994), are played by the New Queen's Hall Orchestra, conducted by Sir Henry Wood. Expectations are hardly realised in the 'Ride,' which I have heard more vividly gramophoned.

Finished playing and clear reproduction are the distinguishing qualities in the records of Haydn's 'Clock' Symphony, played by the Hallé Orchestra under Sir Hamilton Harty. There is a growing public for Haydn, and this is the playing that will increase it. It was a happy thought to use the spare side for an unfamiliar work by Weber—the Overture to 'Abu Hassan.' The sprightly little piece is a worthy companion to the Symphony (L2088-91).

Beecham was the best of choices as conductor of Delius's 'On hearing the first cuckoo.' The orchestra is the Philharmonic, and the result is, I think, the best Delius record so far issued (L2096).

Chamber music recordings have a popular addition in Dvorák's 'Nigger' Quartet, played by the London String Quartet, who give a sensitive performance of this beautiful work (L2092-94).

In choosing a Dvorák Slavonic Dance, Spizeti has been unable to get away from the G minor one that has already been recorded several times. With it is an effective Largo by Veracini, arranged by Corti (L2097).

Another hackneyed choice is that of Sascha Jacobsen's, who adds to the records of the Poldini-Kreisler 'Poupée Valsante.' His companion piece is Moya's 'The Song of Songs,' a poor, sentimental thing, with which his playing is in keeping (4771).

There are three good pianoforte records. Pouishnov does well to give us in full Schubert's Sonata in G, of which the Finale is specially attractive (9396-400). The odd side on the last record is of Schubert's Impromptu in A flat. Why does Pouishnov, like most other pianists, play the D flat section at so furious a pace? It is simply a whirl of notes. The composer indicates no change of speed at all. (But what did he know concerning the performance of his own music? Ask the Pouishnovs and Gray-Fisks.)

Another Schubert record is of a number of the little Viennese Valses, strung together under the title, 'Old Vienna,' arranged and brilliantly played by Ignaz Friedman (L2107).

Mendelssohn's 'Spring Song' comes up quite fresh in the performance by William Murdoch, who brackets with it Paderewski's Minuet in G (9372).

A new-comer in the vocal line is Bella Baillie. She will be a stayer, if we may judge from the brilliant form shown in 'O come, do not delay' and 'You, who have knowledge,' from 'Figaro' (9373).

Player-Piano Notes

ÆOLIAN

Duo-Art.—Although pianoforte transcriptions of orchestral works are rarely satisfactory, they have their use, in that they enable those out of reach of orchestral performances to gain acquaintance with the finest of the classics. The 'Eroica' Symphony has been arranged and is performed by Frederic Lamond, a part of the first movement being on Roll 1 (531).

With the exception of Moszkowski's attractive Scherzo-Valse, brilliantly played by Nadia Reisenberg (7153), and Arensky's Study in F sharp, Op. 36, played by Gitta Gradova (7152), the standard of works in this list is mediocre. It is a pity that some of the intellectual energy expended on the excellent 'World Music Series' could not be spared for this department.

It is difficult to understand the use of Duo-Art song accompaniments. A good singer would surely be irritated by being bound down to an accompaniment which carries him on, or holds him back, regardless of his own ideas of interpretation. The boot is on the wrong leg: the singer has to adapt himself to the pianoforte, instead of vice versâ. The accompaniment to 'The lass with the delicate air' (0102) is very bad rhythmically, and the roll is likely to do harm by encouraging a slovenly, sentimental method of singing. On the other hand, a few good rolls which do not allow (as this one does) a singer to hang on to high notes just because they are high, or to distort the time-values, would be a wholesome corrective. It would do the rhythmless warblers a power of good to be kept moving by an inflexible roll. 'The little brown owl' accompaniment, in D, is better (0123), but even here one wearies of the rubato of the singer for whom it was played.

Hand-Played.—It is good to have Schumann's 'Carnival,' though the violent and agitated rushes of Robert Schmitz are somewhat disconcerting and make for confusion (A1065*e*).

The best of the batch is one of Paderewski playing Chopin's Mazurka in B flat minor, Op. 24, No. 4. It is really first-rate, as might be expected (A1069*f*).

There is also Nevin's 'Gondoliers' ('A day in Venice'), played by Robert Armbruster (A1067*a*).

Metrostyle.—These include a four-hand arrangement of Jensen's 'Wedding Music' which is quite attractive and jolly (T30373*c*-34*c*), and a set of good Valses by L. Emilie Bach, the second roll of which is considerably more interesting than the first. All these could stand, with advantage, a slightly quicker pace than the line suggests (T30371*c*-72*c*). Gabriel-Marie's Impromptu Valse is bearable only when played at a good round pace (T30370*c*).

BLÜTHNER

First on the list is a very successful four-handed arrangement of Beethoven's Quartet in A, Op. 132, on five rolls. As is to be expected the Andante suffers from the inevitable defects of a pianoforte transcription, but the other movements come off remarkably well, and the whole set makes a fine acquisition to the musician's library (58589-58593).

Francis Planté gives a brilliant performance of Chopin's Scherzo in B flat minor (55792), though the change in the tempo of the Trio seems over-violent.

Pierné's light music is always both attractive and good, and his Valse, Op. 5, is no exception. It is delightfully played by himself (57101).

The Polish Dances, Nos. 1-3, Op. 37, of Rozycki Ludomir, seem to have an authentic flavour. They are fairly exciting and unusual, and Karol Szreter treats them with a good deal of brilliance (59589).

Paul Schramm plays two attractive things by Bortkiewicz—Pièces Lyriques, Op. 11, No. 6 (55810), and Prelude, Op. 13, No. 6 (55811). They are well contrasted and out of the ordinary.

Two more pieces of the light type, and very good, are Schütt's Menuettino, Op. 43, No. 1, and Moto Appassionata, Op. 43, No. 3 (59723 and 59725 respectively). The first-named has rather too much repetition, but Franz Wagner does much to mitigate this by brilliant playing. There is also an arrangement of Brahms's 'Wiegenlied,' Op. 49, No. 4, played by Felix Gieseking (59429).

D. G.

Wireless Notes

By a Mere Listener

At the Congress of the British Music Society, the other day, a letter was read from Mr. Cyril Scott. 'At one time,' he wrote, 'music was an art. It has now become a vice.' Gramophones and wireless, he added, were now habits instead of pleasures.

Well, one of the few gleams of light among the dull inanities of M. Charlot's interminable 'Hours' was the playing by Mr. Cyril Scott of one or two of his own compositions. So why this cynicism, Mr. Scott?

And how listening to gramophones of the older type, with their horrible 'scratch' and their frequently grotesque interpretation of the music recorded, should have been more pleasant than listening to the greatly improved gramophones of to-day, I really can't understand.

As for wireless, those of us who have been constant listeners for several years are well aware of the fact that the wireless transmission of nearly every kind of music has improved tremendously. It will continue to improve. And though Mr. Cyril Scott may tell us that listening by means of a wireless set to his own compositions—or even those of other composers!—is more a habit than a pleasure, we shall continue to listen to those programmes which happen to contain music suited to our needs.

For we—and there are many thousands of us—are people who, for one reason or another, have little chance of hearing music, and especially good orchestral music, at first hand. This is why we welcome wireless. This is why, I think, every professional music critic should welcome us. But few of them do. We are tired of being told—or, at any rate of having it implied—that to enjoy the full flavour of any musical performance it is necessary to be in the hall where the performance takes place; that a symphony, for instance, cannot be listened to with real pleasure unless he who listens is also able to watch the movements of the players, the antics (sometimes) of the conductor, and the bored expression on the faces of the critics. This is one of those half-truths which, the critics seem to think, if they repeat often enough will become the whole truth. As a matter of fact the other half is much more likely to become true as time goes on, namely, that the listener, sitting quietly in an armchair, with an efficient wireless set and ear-phones, is in a better position, both physically and mentally, really to enjoy a fine performance of any kind of music than many of the people who are actually present in the concert-hall.

Moreover, many of such listeners will look out for, and read with interest, what the critics have to say regarding performances which have been broadcast. Thus the critics are gaining a very large number of new readers. This ought to please them. And instead of writing of us as if we were nincompoops, they should use any influence, either direct or indirect, they may possess, to persuade the B.B.C. to give us better music, and more of it. At present the Corporation seems to have got the idea firmly fixed in its head that the more-or-less-unmusical mob (for which it caters so assiduously) cannot stand orchestral music unless it is 'arranged for,' and played by, a 'military band.' Nonsense! There is no reason whatever why the B.B.C. should not form a really good orchestra, and give us two or three programmes each week of orchestral music of a class which would not only please medium-browed listeners, but also that large number of slightly lower-browed people who are perfectly capable of appreciating good orchestral music if they hear it often enough for its beauties to become familiar to them.

H. E.

'THE DREAM OF GERONTIUS' IN LINCOLN CATHEDRAL

Sir Edward Elgar can have no reason to complain that his works are neglected in these days. It is true that we should welcome more frequent hearings of the two Symphonies, and especially of 'Falstaff,' but the oratorios are far from being forgotten, and as regards 'The Dream of Gerontius,' which is perhaps his most characteristic work, it has been strongly in evidence of late. By a strange coincidence it was given three times within a week by important societies at Leeds, Bradford, and Sheffield; all of them performances which may be described as brilliant, and on May 9 it was heard in Lincoln Cathedral, at a service which recalled the old festivals held alternately at Lincoln and Peterborough. For various reasons these have been in abeyance since 1910, on which occasion Elgar conducted his 'Gerontius.' It was chosen again for this occasion, when, under Dr. J. G. Bennett's direction, it was given on a rather smaller scale, but with a perfectly adequate force. The choir, of about two hundred and ten voices, was purely local, consisting of the Lincoln Musical Society and the Cathedral Choir, the latter representing, with a few contraltos, the semi-chorus, in which the expert singers had a task which they fulfilled to perfection. The orchestra of sixty-three was chiefly from the Hallé Orchestra, with five trumpets and trombones of the Leeds Symphony Orchestra and some twenty amateurs, and Mr. H. S. Trevitt was at the organ.

The soloists were one and all artists of the first rank. Mr. Steuart Wilson has no superior in the part of Gerontius, which suits his voice and his artistic personality to perfection. His vocal powers have advanced in recent years, and to them he adds a certain note of earnestness and spirituality which is so essential to a perfect realisation of the character. Miss Muriel Brunskill is a contralto whose vocal endowment has always been exceptional, and if in dramatic power she has been less distinguished, her experience with the British National Opera Company afforded a training which has been of great service to her. The baritone, Mr. Howard Fry, with his good voice and refined style, completed a cast upon which it would not be easy to improve. ♂ ♀ ✕ ♀

One of the reasons for discontinuing the festivals was the objection to erecting a temporary platform in the church, so the choir had to be placed on the level, and this undoubtedly made it more difficult for the conductor to get into touch with the singers, and affected to some extent the brilliance of the performance and the smartness of the attack. All the more credit is therefore due for the good ensemble sustained throughout, and the effect of the great chorus, 'Praise to the Holiest,' with its climax of splendour, was most impressive. One could not but feel how much it, and indeed the whole work, gained from being given in an ancient church with all its solemn associations.

Advantage was taken of the occasion to offer a tribute to the Centenary commemoration of Schubert's death, and it took the form of the great Symphony in C. The choice was, of course, unexceptionable, and it was unfortunate that time did not allow of the whole work being given. The first and second movements, and the first section of the Scherzo, were all that was played, and it could not be denied that this resulted in some sense of anti-climax, for it was impossible not to remember the splendour of the Finale, with its unsurpassed effect of irresistible energy, growing in force and grandeur as it proceeds. Still, half a loaf is better than no bread, and what we heard was Schubert at his best, performed adequately under a conductor whose intimate sympathy was shown unmistakably. Not the least effective feature of the service was the singing of two hymns, 'Praise my soul, the King of Heaven' (Goss) and 'Now thank we all our God,' the orchestral accompaniment to the former by B. J. Dale, and the latter by Dr. Bennett.

The problem of finance was intensified by the fact that admission was free, but a preliminary appeal for donations towards the necessarily heavy expenses was not ungenerously met, and the collection, from a congregation which filled nave and transepts to overflowing, amounted to £114, so that one may hope the Dean and Chapter, on whom anxieties concerning the repair of the fabric have of late fallen heavily, may be encouraged to repeat an experiment which has had such a successful outcome.

HERBERT THOMPSON.

Teachers' Department

THE PERSONAL ELEMENT IN TEACHING MUSIC

BY BARBARA HOWARTH

During the last twenty or thirty years a great change has taken place in the method of teaching. In the days when it was not thought necessary to consider pupils as units, teachers knew little and cared less about psychology, and all one had to do was to shepherd the flock down a well-worn track, beginning with 'Home, sweet home' and ending in 'The Maiden's Prayer.'

Nowadays in the light of modern thought, we know that it is the individual which matters—first, last, and always.

But in spite of what we hear and read on the subject, it must be admitted that a number of present-day teachers, although fully equipped for the educational side of their work, have not advanced beyond the old-fashioned system of mass production. These people divide their pupils into two sets, 'Workers' and 'Non-Workers,' and deal with them on the broad principle, 'If you practise you are very, very good, if you don't practise you are horrid.'

This somewhat conservative method is not only ineffective, but is directly responsible for many failures, the reason being of course that an opinion based on results is not always to be depended upon. In other words, it is not what a pupil does, but the reason why he does it, which is of importance. By way of explanation, we will look at two or three well-known types of student, starting with one, generally a child, who, with more or less candour, refuses to practise.

A little pupil who shows a marked antipathy towards his work usually does so from one of two reasons; either he has no natural liking for music, or his interest is dormant. The wise teacher instead of wasting the lesson in useless invective, gets to work in a different way. He knows that love of music is not given to each one of us, and that maybe an unmusical child is being forced to take lessons. If that child is offered sympathetic encouragement to do something he doesn't want to do, he will make an effort to respond, but if his fumbling attempt is accompanied at every step by scolding, he will surely rebel and come to an inglorious and sudden full stop. Moreover, his dislike for music has become hatred—he has had enough.

On the other hand it may happen that a child has that innate power called talent, and won't work simply because his interest is asleep. In all probability the teacher of such a child as this, recognising the latent ability, has, with ideas of a technique-to-be, placed him on a course of scales and exercises, backed up by pieces of the strictly classical school. Now very few children will stand this kind of treatment for long, and the same thing occurs, practice is not done, and in consequence such pupils are put in the 'Won't work' category, with the additional label 'lazy.'

Should we go a little deeper into the source of the trouble, and substitute 'dormant imagination' for 'dormant interest,' the remedy is clear.

Children enjoy a piece they can grasp. 'The Goblin up the Chimney' grips their imagination, whereas 'Sonatina in C' leaves them unmoved; we must remember that 'tell me a story' applies to music as well as to books.

Competition, especially for an older child, often works wonders, and a musical evening for pupils only, when each one performs, has a three-fold advantage; it helps to overcome self-consciousness, teaches the value of criticism, and most vital of all, by bringing pupils into touch with one another's work, arouses enthusiasm.

And now we come to the other extreme—the plodder. A title given to one who, while lacking real ability, practises with laborious diligence. Tradition tells us that practice makes perfect; here is a student who practises, but who, far from becoming perfect, makes little, if any, headway, and the question arises—what are we going to do about it? Are we to praise his industry and overlook the quality of his work, or should we give a candid and honest opinion?

The answer depends largely on the pupil himself. If he takes music as an accomplishment, we can proceed on the assurance that education is never wasted, qualifying the statement by the knowledge that if a man 'hath no music in his soul' we cannot remedy matters by an external process, and therefore must not expect too much. But if music is intended to become a means of livelihood, I think that we who know from experience that our profession is overcrowded with teachers unfitted for the work, should offer a warning before the victim becomes a square peg in a round hole. As Sarah Grand says:

> How kind 't'would be of you, who never seem
> With self-doubt plagued, to look into my state,
> And, finding me the powerless victim of a dream,
> To tell me true you think me second-rate.

ON 'LEARNING MUSIC'

By A. H. Peppin

A little girl was once observed by her mother to be deeply engrossed in a corner of the nursery with a box of paints and a drawing-board. 'What are you painting, dear?' said the mother. 'I'm painting a picture of God,' replied the child. 'But you can't do that,' objected the mother, 'none of us know what He is like.' 'Well, they will know when I have finished this,' was the answer.

This anecdote is related in no spirit of irreverence, but merely as a text from which may be extracted a moral that should be useful to teachers of music more perhaps than to most of those who are engaged in the task of education. The little girl was, in her crude, childish way, aiming at self-realisation, and she was unconsciously aiming at it in the only way that is educationally sound—namely, by the method of achievement. And the moral that I wish to extract from the story is the principle that self-realisation through achievement should be the main end of education, and that there are few, if any, educational subjects that offer the genuine educator such golden opportunities of putting this principle into effective practice as the study of music carried out on what I venture to characterise as sound lines.

For present purposes, then, I intend to consider music-study as the handmaid of education, convinced as I am, as the result of the experience of many years, firstly, that the best educational results are coincident with the most artistic musical results; and, secondly, that those methods of music-study which are in accordance with the soundest educational theories will generally train students of music to the most thorough appreciation of the art.

There seems indeed to-day sufficient excuse for my desire to emphasise the truth thus stated, inasmuch as teachers of music—at any rate in schools—seem inclined to consider, and in many quarters are encouraged to consider, the study of instrumental music as a thing to be disparaged. It is becoming fashionable to speak slightingly of 'learning music' through the medium of the pianoforte, and if you want to be on the crest of the wave you must point to successful efforts in communal choral singing or in the encouragement of 'musical appreciation.' Now let me say at once that none of these efforts are to be slighted or discouraged. Their good results deserve to be recognised, and must be far-reaching. Nor are they incompatible with the methods that I advocate. But in the long run they are short cuts, and with most educational short cuts they share the implication of superficiality. They are achievements sometimes of a high and admirable order, but achievements less of the taught than of the teacher. My contention is that the highest aim of the teacher, if he is also to be an educator, is not to point to his own achievements but to encourage achievement, and through it self-realisation, in his pupils. This is less conspicuous, and more difficult.

I may perhaps be forgiven for forestalling criticism and preventing misconception by stating that it is now twenty-seven years since I started in one great public school orchestral concerts of classical music the programmes of which were successfully introduced to their youthful audience by explanatory and illustrated lectures, and thirteen years since I introduced similar concerts in another great public school. In both these schools the series has been carried on (on the same lines) up to the present date by my successors, and in each the concerts are an established institution. I cannot therefore be justly accused of undervaluing the systematic encouragement of 'musical appreciation.' It is, however, my firm conviction that valuable though such means are in effecting, on masses of boys, 'conversions' to an interest in music, their value is less than that of the bulk of inconspicuous work done at the pianoforte in the joint effort of master and pupil in 'learning music'—this with the important provisos that the pianoforte work must be relentlessly thorough; that it must aim at results that are artistic, if modest; that in the end it leads the pupil (as such study can hardly help leading him) to serious study, and finally to some degree at least of self-realisation by the path of achievement. This is not the place to offer detailed suggestions of methods by which 'learning music' may be truly educational; but to prove its purely musical value as well as its potentialities it is only necessary to point to what is actually being done in some schools and brought to the light of day by school concerts and instrumental competitions. And if I am asked why its value is questioned, I reply, 'because many music teachers shrink from the effort which it demands of themselves and their pupils—shrink from relentless thoroughness, and, being thus precluded from winning artistic results and from leading their pupils on to tangible achievement, take refuge in short cuts and are content with the second best.'

This point, however, I do not desire to press home. My object is not destructive criticism but constructive suggestion. And here let me say in parenthesis that though I illustrate my contention chiefly by reference to pianoforte study as the most ready to hand medium, yet, speaking generally, the same principles apply to the study of any instrument and to serious work (not dabbling) at composition.

In the first place, then, it is a statement that needs only to be made to be admitted that there is a gulf between those who have devoted serious and thorough study to the technique of any art, and those who have either not studied or have studied in a dilettante style. Any experienced student of any art can at once detect the difference, even in a casual conversation. He perceives that the criticisms of the dilletante exhibit an imperfect apprehension; that his appreciation, though it may be enthusiastic and genuine, is vague and disproportioned; that as a critic his judgments are not to be relied upon. And this applies correlatively to his enjoyment. An enjoyment that is not enlightened by knowledge need certainly not be valueless, but it has not the same value that comes of thought, experiment, close attention, and effort. It is apt to be found in the wrong things for the wrong reasons, and therefore cannot generally be much more than skin deep.

On the other hand, an almost necessary concomitant of serious study and effort is some degree at least of achievement. Here we reach what is from the educational point of view the root of the matter. Prof. Huxley stated the main purpose of education to be 'to enable us to do the things we ought to do, when we want to do them, whether we like them or not.'* That is to say, in so many words, that the main object of education should be the acquisition of power, and it is through achievement that power, and with it self-realisation, grows. Here stands revealed the supreme value of serious music-study—for it is not difficult to see how power must grow in the mind and character of the instrumental student in the mastery, by dint of serious and thoughtful effort, of piece after piece of properly graduated difficulty: each piece being another rung in the ladder, another step up the hill attempted and accomplished, with an ever-widening view, luring on towards the rainbow's end that will never be reached, in a chase that is its own reward. Here is power steadily and surely growing, and with it self-realisation. Assuredly the conclusions of modern psychology are falsified if this process is not a most valuable aid to the highest aims of education of both mind and character. The dilettante with his 'appreciation' stands on one side of the gulf, the serious student with his achievement on the other.

I have said that no apology is needed for thus treating music study as the handmaid of education in general, because the best educational results are coincident with the best musical results. I have also stated reasons for holding that the enjoyment and 'appreciation' of music are imperfect that are not founded on attention, knowledge, and effort.

Let us, then, briefly consider the quality of the enjoyment of music which is the prerogative of the student who has studied the pianoforte with that serious thoroughness which alone can have led to solid achievement.

In the first place he has learned to listen minutely and attentively to the sounds that he makes; then to note details of emphasis and phrasing; to hear accurately the notes which form a chord; to grasp the structure of the composition that he plays with a knowledge that it is not hearsay, but first-hand. He has acquired an aural sensitiveness which has quickened his perception of the differences between pleasing and unpleasing sounds, and has given him a sense of tone. If he has a first-hand grasp of the structure of one (say) sonata movement or fugue, or of a simpler form, he has acquired the ability to compare one example of that form with another and to know implicitly, if not explicitly, the differences between them. He has begun to realise what is meant by polyphony, and to hear the inner parts. All these things, and others too subtle to set forth, form the equipment of the student who has 'worked at the bench'—provided that his work has been under guidance that has combined thoroughness with sympathy, encouragement with minute criticism, experience with enthusiasm.

Effort, no doubt! But we get nothing for nothing in this world, and an apprehension of the subtleties of any art (without which 'appreciation' is superficial and enjoyment vague) is not to be won without effort, and whilst the effort is a worthy one the hope of reward is great.

Lastly, there is a growing recognition among educational theorists of the value of team-work. And, whether educational theorists or no, many musical instructors of youth seem fully alive to it and ready to make use of it. But it should not be forgotten that the value of team-work depends largely upon the individual achievement of the members of the team. It is not necessary to be a mathematician to know that $0 + 0 = 0$.

To shrink from the effort required both of teacher and pupil in serious 'working at the bench' in the study of instrumental music is surely not only to let slip opportunities of the highest educational value, to deprive the young student of unparalleled possibilities of acquiring power and self-realisation through solid achievement, but also to let slip his best opportunities of acquiring a sound critical faculty (which is the real meaning of 'appreciation') and the fullest enjoyment of the best.

* Cited by Dr. H. Crichton Miller, 'The New Psychology and the Teacher' (Jarrold).

POINTS FROM LECTURES

Much of the biographical matter given by lecturers during the Schubert Centenary is well known, yet the usual stories read fresh and winsome as the composer's music. In a phrase or two, Mr. Carlos Vazquez caught this spirit in his lecture at Enfield. 'This master of melody,' he said, 'was one of the most lovable of composers. One might at first approach the souls of other great composers, such as Bach and Beethoven, with awe, even though one learnt to love them, but with Schubert one could feel nothing but interest and love for his music from the very first. The beauty of his melodies alone prevented even the least satisfactory of his works from being dull.'

'The Musician and the Community' was the subject of a lecture at Liverpool by Mr. Stewart Macpherson. He finds that the gramophone and the wireless, though powerful factors in the enjoyment of music, have given the coup de grace to many a desire for individual music-making, and the number of young people taking an active part in singing or playing duets, trios, or quartets, or going to concerts, is becoming smaller. Teachers received letters like this: 'Dear Mr. ——, I shall not be taking any more lessons this term. You see, we are going motoring, and besides, we have got a wireless, which we can take with us.' Composers and publishers, he added, could hardly expect to benefit from the mechanisation of music, seeing that the sales of sheet music had dropped to the extent of from 25 to 50 per cent. during the last two or three years.

Kilmarnock Rotarians have had the benefit of listening to the experiences of Mr. A. M. Henderson in Germany, Russia, and France during his student life. In those days the best brains of Germany seemed to be directed towards the army. At Berlin the music masters and their students were drawn from all countries of Europe. The life thus presented to a musical student had immense advantages. Going on to Riga to join the staff of the Conservatoire,

Mr. Henderson found the place was then bi-lingual, and he gave his lessons in German. His interest was aroused in the wonderful musical art of Russia, and in the Russians, than whom he had never known a more generous, kind, and warm-hearted people. The mention of political matters being forbidden, the cultured classes devoted their energies to other things. The economic position had since become quite untenable for the group that was now trying to control it, and changes were inevitable. Mr. Henderson had interesting things to say of some of the distinguished musicians now living in Russia, and of their hardships and discomforts. At Paris he made many delightful friendships among his fellow-students, some of whom had now international reputations. In the countries named, the arts were subsidised in a very generous and splendid way. To outsiders visiting us it was preposterous how disproportionate was the attention paid by the press to sport. The time is long overdue when we should begin to give the cultural arts a bigger place in life.

Mr. P. J. Duffy, to a Dublin audience, expressed his regret that music has not got the place in the public mind that it had twenty or thirty years ago. On the Continent great institutions of musical culture were subsidised; in Great Britain there was very little, while in Ireland there was none—except the broadcasting station which, however, received licence fees. From 1913 to 1927 there was no symphony orchestra in the Free State, and there was also an absence of popular concerts. During those years a new generation had grown up, and in 1928 there was a public that had lost touch with musical culture. There was, too, a tendency among musicians to put forward ambitious programmes that the public did not understand. He hoped that in the reconstruction of the social and cultural life of the country a place of honour would be found for the spirit of music and harmony among the people.

Cheltenham, having come into possession of a new Town Hall organ built by Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper, invited Mr. W. C. Cooper of that firm to give an address at a luncheon. Although the organ had been associated with Church music for many centuries, he said, it was originally a secular instrument. A new era had begun in its adaptation to the uses of picture theatres. Unlike other instruments, organs had clearly marked national characteristics. American, French, German, Italian, and English, each was a distinct type in which the national temperament could be clearly traced. Organs could again be subdivided into individual classes, wherein the temperamental peculiarities of the builder were readily distinguishable. To-day the rotary fan and electric motor had solved the problem of 'raising the wind,' and made possible varied pressures to give richness and refinement to different departments of the instrument, thus placing at the disposal of the player a tonal structure of almost infinite variety.

Stories of Sterndale Bennett provided the human interest that was the making of a recital of his works by Mr. L. G. Winter, at Worcester. Remarkable feats of memory were described. The Leipsic publisher acknowledged receipt of the Caprice in E major for pianoforte and orchestra, but the solo part was missing. It had never been written out, though Bennett had played it at concerts. It was supplied from memory. Bennett undertook to write a Sonata for 'cello and pianoforte for Piatti, who found, two hours before the concert, that the work was still unfinished. Piatti played his part at sight without a rehearsal, from Bennett's manuscript, and the composer, at the pianoforte, trusted entirely to what was in his mind of the pianoforte part, not a note of which had ever been written down.

Mendelssohn's music suffered from what he himself called his 'habitual cheerfulness.' This point in a lecture on Mendelssohn, by Mr. Samuel Broughton, at Accrington, was contrasted with the saying of Schubert: 'My music is the product of my genius and my misery, and that which I have written in my greatest distress is that which the world seems to like best.' Much of Mendelssohn's music had lost its hold on the public, but, said Mr. Broughton, 'Elijah' still ranks as one of the finest oratorios ever written.

J. G.

---

EASY PIANOFORTE MUSIC

From Joseph Williams come three numbers of the Berners Edition of classical and modern pieces graded and selected for educational purposes. Tchaikovsky's Mazurka, Op. 39 (Lower Division), edited by George Farlane, gives useful practice in phrasing and staccato. A flowing little Prelude in C minor by Bach (Lower Division) and Schumann's 'The Wayside Inn,' Op. 82 (Intermediate), have been edited by C. Egerton Lowe. The same publishers send also Donald Edeson's 'Two Pieces' under one cover—(a) Humoresque; (b) 'Robin Redbreast'—which are fluently-written and likely to please (Lower). A set of eight pieces by Ernest Austin, under the title 'Diversions' (Augener), while not as a whole showing this facile composer at his best, contains some attractive pages, and may be recommended (Lower).

Additions to the admirable Oxford Pianoforte Series, edited by A. Forbes Milne, come from the Oxford University Press. E. Markham Lee's 'Cliff and Tide-rip' is a well-written set of five pieces which would interest players of Intermediate standard. Fluent finger-work is called for in 'Spindrift' (Allegro vivace) and 'White Horses' (Allegro strepitoso), and most of the pieces require a full-sized hand. Suitable for the same grade are Norman Peterkin's 'Two Tunes for Pianoforte'—'The Drowsy Tune,' mainly in four-part harmony, and 'The Lively Tune'—both of which are characteristic examples of this composer's harmonic methods. Five short pieces under the title 'Sea Horses,' by Sybil Fountain, make an attractive and useful set for juniors. Plenty of interesting work is given to the left hand (Elementary-Lower).

Fritz Kirchner's 'Jugend-Album' (Bagatelles) contains six easy pieces which are rhythmical and tuneful, though somewhat obvious and conventional (Keith Prowse). 'Six Little Sketches in Pen and Ink,' by Gladys A. Wood, may be recommended (Leonard). They are well varied, and will prove useful in developing phrasing and rhythm (Elementary-Lower). Jameson Blair's 'Miniature Suite' (Paxton) contains six little pieces in dance form which would make useful recreation for elementary players. For beginners, Cyril C. Dalmaine has provided an admirable collection of short and easy pieces under the title 'Penny-Pieces' (Forsyth). These are attractive, and, for technical purposes, excellent.

G. G.

No. 3 of Alec Robertson's little booklets on 'How to Use the Gramophone in School' is entitled, 'Why and How.' Like its companions, it is full of commonsense 'tips,' delivered in an easy-going style. (Free, from the Education Department, the Gramophone Company.)

We have not much faith in 'fancy' methods of teaching youngsters the mysteries of the clefs, lines, spaces, &c. Our experience is that with the normal intelligent youngster who wants to learn music the elementary powder needs little or no jam. But we like a book just published by Aird & Coghill, Glasgow—'B-A-B-E and a dozen other Clef Spelling Songs,' words and music by Marcus Dods, with a Prologue set to music by Sir Walford Davies, and our liking for it is on the ground that the songs are attractive to youngsters, whether they know the clefs or not. Mr. Dods makes the most of the potentialities of the letters of the stave, beginning with B-A-B-E, and rising to such heights as B-E-E-F, and (attendant on that noble viand) C-A-B-B-A-G-E; there are also B-A-G, and B-A-G-G-A-G-E. Each song is headed by the title expressed in notation. The songs are for singing and playing by adults. Educational? Perhaps; but certainly good fun.

A delightful version of the folk-song, 'Lavender's blue,' is that by Kenneth Sterling Mackinlay (Curwen). It may be sung in the ordinary way as a solo, but by dividing the tune and adding simple extra parts Mr. Mackinlay has made it into something like a tiny operatic ensemble. Two or three youngsters may thus join the adult in charge, and make an early and enjoyable start in holding their own.

Nothing could be better in their way than two little collections of pianoforte pieces sent by Winthrop Rogers—'Sailor Tunes' (14) and 'Soldier Tunes' (12), arranged by Alec Rowley and Edgar Moy respectively. They are easy, and excellently laid out and fingered; a verse of the song appears over the music, and there are clever drawings by Joyce Dennys.

Mr. Moy is also responsible for 'Four Scenes,' for pianoforte duet, wherein the primo is mainly in octaves. The secondo part, though less easy, is not beyond a player able to deal with simple broken-figure and chordal writing. Within these limitations, Mr. Moy has contrived to write music unexpectedly fresh and attractive (Oxford University Press).

THE APPRECIATIVE STUDY OF MUSIC

(The substance of the Inaugural Lecture by Ernest Fowles, at the Easter Course, Training School for Music Teachers, London.)

A comparison of the fundamental equipments needed for the appreciation of the various arts will show that the elementary powers which follow upon the exercise of cultured observation, and which enable the message of painting or of poetry to be grasped by those unskilled in the practice of either, are not of immediate service in the study of music. General education joined to habits of reasonable observation prepare the mind for the understanding of painting, and the same factors developed by a growing imagination provide a vantage ground for the perception of poetry; but, beyond the very rudimentary manifestations of rhythm and tune, little help is afforded by the customary curricula of early education in the way of a clear grasp of the bases upon which music rests.

THE FOUR ELEMENTS

The bases of all musical enlightenment may be described under four heads: Tone, Rhythm, Harmony, Melody. Music is emphatically the language of tone. Rhythm is the manifestation of its life. Harmony is one of the properties peculiar to music, without direct analogy or kinship in respect of any other art of man. Melody is an element at once simple and exceedingly complex. Musical culture, it has well been said, starts when the individual identity of two concurrently moving tunes has become a distinct mental experience.

It is of course an axiom that each of these four elements should in the first place be an experience of the ear. Yet, in these days of instrumental enthusiasm, it is not always easy to apply the obvious teaching of the axiom. The chief fault would appear to lie in the narrowness of range usually accorded to what is known as aural culture. It is not an accident, but the direct issue of decades of misdirection, that but comparatively few marks are allotted by prominent examinations for actual tests of hearing!

EAR-VITALITY

It is therefore vital to musical progress that the function of ear-training should be viewed from a much wider standpoint than has hitherto prevailed. The subject naturally divides into two sections: (a) Technics; (b) Æsthetics. This classification places the cult of ear-training on the same basis as that of an instrument. Regarded educationally, there is no difference between the treatment required for the two forms of energy. Both are concerned with the development of a sense. Both are equally dependent upon technical and æsthetic means of advancement. It is easy to foresee that the aural class of the future will touch each of the four integral elements of music, and that no work of the kind will be held to be of value which does not train the student (a) to perceive the varieties and subtleties of tone; (b) to realise the structural side as well as to feel the momentum of rhythm; (c) to hear the kaleidoscopic forms of harmony; and (d) to listen to the horizontal line, or more exactly, the lines, of melody.

TASTE

The appreciative study of music implies the development of taste. It is impossible to obtain a refined taste from music alone. The mind empty of all things save music is a danger to the race. Taste requires the stimulant which follows a living interest in the wide concerns of humanity. Literature only can provide the need. The musician is known by his books, and the same law operates in the case also of teachers of music. Music is the most responsive of the arts to the claims of taste, and a cultured taste in literature finds a ready echo in the imagination of those who live by music. The world is ruled by taste, and it is the privilege of the teacher so to develop his own, that insensibly he becomes an influence tending to the uplifting of taste in his students. The teacher whose mind is stored with truths culled from art and literature is in possession, not of an occupation, but of a vocation. One who teaches music with an equipment wholly musical can rarely if ever rise above the mere technician.

STYLE

The appreciative study of music suggests a perception of style. The study of style in any form of art begets insight, which, of course, is the power to perceive from within. To make a study of style, say, in poetry is a very salutary experience for any teacher. It is then an easy process to apply the lesson to music. The music teacher is too prone to pass from composer to composer, from piece to piece, from style to style, and to ignore the supremely differentiating force of this aspect of music. It is a good plan to keep in the memory, ready for performance at a moment's notice, one piece characteristic of the style of various masters. Bach, Handel, Scarlatti, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, Brahms, Grieg, Debussy, may all be made to contribute to so delightful a means of remembrance. Should this be too ambitious for some teachers, there is an alternative: Let one thought (subject) be selected from the music of each master. Let the thoughts be memorized as a whole, together with their individual features and points of resemblance or of difference, and an important step in the understanding of musical style will have been taken.

ANTICIPATION

The appreciative study of music demands an attitude of anticipation or expectation. Music is to the hearer just what he expects it to be—that, and nothing more. The average man expects tune; harmony, counterpoint, cultured device, may be there, but he hears them not. This naturally leads us back to the elements of tone, rhythm, harmony, and melody. The equipped listener will anticipate the presence of the four, and, in consequence, will receive each in its due proportion towards the effect of the whole.

This side of musical culture is bound up with clearly defined principles of psychology. Poverty of anticipation may, it is true, spring from mental apathy or from a condition of boredom, but it is far more likely to be the offspring of a mind destitute of the eternal verities of music. No real and enduring art can exist in the absence of a full and ardent expectancy. We get out of music exactly what we put into it. Great expectations lead to great ends. The lack or minimising of expectation spells mediocrity and failure.

MEMORY

The appreciative study of music infers an intelligent use of the memory. As a rule we do not, in connection with music, use the memory (or, to speak more exactly, the memories—for we have many) with the skill that we are accustomed to employ it in letters. Yet we are approaching the time when it will be universally conceded that the fortified musical mind is that which proves its strength by the power to read music in precisely the same manner as books are read, that is, as an exercise of the mind energized by aural perception. A musician able thus to read a composition apart from physical reproduction, and to realise its effect unhelped by actual performance, will never experience difficulty in committing it to memory.

Is it not axiomatic that the mental and spiritual profit derived from the sane use of literature and art is operative in exact proportion as our powers of memory are kept keen and free from the rust of unorganized thought? This, in so many words, means that the ultimate profit of our excursions into literature and art arises, not so much from what we read or what we do, as from what we remember of that which we have read or done. Can you, mentally, go through a symphony or a sonata with the same vividness that you can recall the details of a book which has held and fascinated you? That, at any rate, is one of the surest tests of your powers of memory in the realm of music.

HISTORY

The appreciative study of music implies a possession of the historic sense. The younger teachers of to-day are generally deficient in this all-essential need. They are saturating themselves with 'modern' music to the exclusion of that through which alone it is possible even elementarily to seize the spirit of the experimental art of to-day. To be unhistoric in the survey of any art is a sign of the absence of a standard of apprehension, and to lack a stable means of assessment can lead only to superficiality, both of aim and of achievement.

All teachers should hold permanently in the mind the characteristics of the several periods of musical history. They should know (to take some examples) the outstanding features of the great contrapuntal period, the reason for the attenuated harmonic outlook which followed immediately upon that period, the method by which the various forces inherent in music combined to form what is known as the classic school, the general features of the post-classic age and their vast culmination at the passing of the last century, and so on.

Every lecturer on the æsthetics of music must feel the deadweight, arising from ignorance of history, so often manifest in audiences of the present day. Perhaps he is discoursing upon a phase of Beethoven's work. He, on his part, holds in his mind the influences which produced Beethoven as well as the promise held out by the master to future generations. His audience, on the other hand, will probably be incapable of linking up the work of the masters of the pre-classic and post-classic periods, and the lecture, in consequence, will be robbed of its vital point. Lectures on 'appreciation' are still very much to the front. May they continue! At the same time, they constitute a danger to a race of students who so often lack the sense through which alone it is possible, truly and thoroughly, to get into the spirit of art as it progresses from age to age.

LOVE

Perhaps the greatest impetus towards understanding may be found in this small word. But the love must be that which endureth all things. That is to say, it must be a love reached through discipline of the spirit, and not sentimentality born of dilettantism. What we put into art is returned to us in fullest measure. Art means effort to the end, to the last gasp. It spells sacrifice of pleasure, leisure, and often, it may be, of friends. But its rewards to the spirit of man are infinite, and therein may we find its true purpose in human life.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

R. E. U. holds certain certificates in pianoforte and theory and wishes to know if these would help her to obtain a post as junior pianoforte teacher in a school. Among the certificates are those of the Intermediate and Advanced Grades of the Associated Board. The answer is clearly in the negative. Certificates of the kind are valuable as a proof of a certain standard of studentship, but are not intended to convey an intimation of teaching qualifications. The gateway to a music teacher's career is through one of the professional examinations accepted by the Board of Registration, to which must obviously be added a course of training in the art of teaching itself. At the same time, 'R. E. U.' may find a post in an elementary school in which, while working under proper supervision, she may prepare for the examination and, meanwhile, attend the requisite courses of lectures. These requirements may be condensed in the form of an advertisement issued either in the Musical Times or the School Music Review, or in both. Information with regard to the lectures may be obtained from the Secretary of the Training School for Music Teachers, 73, High Street, Marylebone, W.1.—E. F.

POMPA.—(1.) The address of the Conservatoire de Musique is Rue du Faubourg-Poissonière (Paris) 15. (2.) A desire to study music on the Continent shows enterprise on your part, but if you go for that one purpose and devote yourself to it alone, it is quite certain that you will be grievously disappointed. If, on the other hand, you intend to use the experience in the larger sense, that is, with a view, not only to the music, but to the language, art, and habits of another people, you will gain greatly from a stay abroad. But there is no city in the world which offers greater musical advantages at the present time than London. As to the foreign city you should choose, much depends upon the department of study which you intend to pursue. In France, there is naturally Paris, though you would find excellent schools, allied with the Paris Conservatoire, at Lyons, Dijon, &c.; in Germany, we believe Dresden offers good opportunities; in Italy, possibly Milan or Florence. (3.) A very interesting book for technical daily study is 'Ten Minutes Daily,' by J. Michael Diack (Paterson, Glasgow).—E. F.

SUPERTONIC.—(1.) The diploma you mention is a good one, though of less standing than the L.R.A.M. or A.R.C.M. (2.) We don't know what F.O.N.C. stands for. The holder of this mysterious distinction is right when he tells you that the initials are less frequently met with than F.R.C.O., but this is evidently a case in which rarity is no proof of value.

CLAVIER.—(1.) Your trouble is very common and probably arises from a misapprehension of the method in which the muscles are used in playing. The whole tendency of modern muscular technique is towards purely natural movements. Consequently, progress depends less upon the development of digital dexterity than upon the formation of proper muscular habits. Look into Ching's 'Forearm Rotation' (Forsyth); then write to us again, mentioning, in particular, if new light has been thrown upon your problem. That at any rate will show exactly where you stand.—E. F. (2.) You ask for a good book about plainsong. Try 'The Teaching and Accompaniment of Plainsong,' by Francis Burgess (Novello). Although much has been discovered as to the historical aspect and method of performance since Helmore's day, we still have a liking for his 'Plainsong,' in the Novello Primer Series. The Plainsong and Mediæval Music Society has just published a book by Edgar T. Cook. We have not yet had an opportunity of reading it, but the author's name is a guarantee of soundness. If your inquiry has to do with the difficult art of accompanying this type of music, we recommend J. Arnold's 'The Accompaniment of Plainsong' (Oxford University Press, 10*s.* 6*d.*).

F. G. P. would like a few hints upon the form of Scarlatti's Capriccio, Chopin's Study in G flat, and Bach's Fantasia, these pieces being comprised within the Higher Local Examination book issued by Trinity College. Space does not of course permit of detailed analyses, but the following remarks will be of help. The Scarlatti piece is in Binary Form, and is therefore divided into two sections. The point of division is at the cadence in the dominant at the foot of the second page. The Study is very interesting. It is a very small replica of Sonata form, with first and second subjects (bars 1 and 9), return to first thought (recapitulation) at bar 25, and Coda (bar 37). The Fantasia is one of the few pieces of the period in which occurs a decisive return to first thought. Nominally it is in Binary Form, with the central cadence at the foot of the second page; actually, it has the spirit of three-part form, this being evident from the return in the 6th bar of the fourth page.—E. F.

M. M. G. has been offered a pianoforte teaching practice and asks us to suggest 'the usual percentage, on an annual income, for a purchase price.' We have often been asked that question, and our reply must always be purely non-committal. Much depends (a) upon the contrast in personalities, which may make or mar the incoming teacher, (b) upon the relative teaching power of the teachers concerned, which may be considerable in one case and a minus quantity in the other. You cannot buy a practice with the comparative certainty which attends the transference of a trade connection. Have a friendly interview with the other teacher, and find out for yourself what she considers to be fair. Then, you might suggest a commission on each pupil who remains with you during the following year. That, at all events, would be fair to you.—E. F.

J. W.—You don't specify the direction in which you want our advice. If it is in regard to the method of setting about publishing your compositions we can only say, as we have said to many others, send your manuscripts to a suitable publisher. But be prepared for disappointment; an unknown writer of sonatas and string quartets has a poor prospect in these days. Make a start, therefore, with your smaller pieces. We do not make a practice of looking at MSS., but if you care to let us see one of your sonatas we will give you a frank opinion as to whether we think you have any reasonable prospect of success.

CONVERT.—(1.) An organist should endeavour to pedal throughout the entire board without touching the seat with his hands to aid his balance. But this is a counsel of perfection, and there must be many players whose stature makes it impossible when engaged at the extremities of the board. But what does it matter, so long as the notes are correctly played and well phrased? (2.) Obviously, no player need feel bound to follow any footing marks, whether indicated by the composer or by an editor. The case is analogous to fingering, and no method is likely to suit all players.

A.R.C.O., STN.—The best footwear for organ pedalling? Most players prefer shoes, but we have known fine executants who preferred the old-fashioned elastic-sided boot. So long as the ankle is free, it doesn't matter which. As to weight and depth of heel: we like a thinnish sole and a heel about an inch in depth. Find out what suits you best, and stick to it. Keep a pair of shoes at your organ; the casual use of every-day walking shoes may lead one day to your finding yourself halfway through a recital with a piece of heel loose, or a weak spot in the sole.

ONSLOW.—The adjudicator is entitled to his opinion that your tune contains too many changes of key. We think the modulation to the dominant of D minor at the end of the sixth line is just one modulation too many. Of the eight lines only the first and last are in the tonic, which key therefore doesn't get a fair share. Apart from this we like the tune. It is sturdy in style, and the part-writing is good. (But it is pitched at least a tone too high. Hymns are for the crowd. What sort of a noise will they make on your high G?)

E. S. T. asks us if, in playing quickly repeated chords, the arm should be 'fixed,' so as to 'involve conscious tension of the muscles.' 'E. S. T.' must be more explicit and tell us, firstly, what is meant by a fixed arm, secondly, how he interprets the phrase 'conscious tension of the muscles.' Then we will do our best to help.—E. F.

C. S.—We do not know where you can obtain a complete analysis of Chaminade's 'Autumn' and Grieg's Sonata in E minor. But if your keyboard technique is equal to the Sonata you should know enough about form, &c., to be able to make an analysis for yourself. If not, your training has been lopsided.

G. I. C.—(1.) The harmony book you have is good, though you might well supplement it with Kitson's 'Harmony' (Oxford University Press). The counterpoint volume is less satisfactory. Read it, but work from Kitson's 'Counterpoint for Beginners' and 'Applied Counterpoint' (Oxford University Press). (2.) 'The Violin,' by Berthold Tours, will be very suitable (Novello).

D. H.—'Soldier, soldier, won't you marry me?' is in Series No. 1 of 'Appalachian Folk-Songs' (Novello); 'Ruggleton's Daughter,' Sharp's Folk-Songs, vol. 2 (Novello). We cannot trace 'My father has forty bright shillings.' Does a reader know it?

H. W.—Your description—'a book on the Italian Bel canto'—is too vague. All you need is (1) one of the many good singing manuals, (2) a good teacher, and (3) plenty of hard work. And the factor that matters least is No. 1.

CLARONE.—(1.) The difference between the clarinette-pédale and pedal clarinet is merely one of name. (2.) The sarrusophone family actually consists of eight members, but only two appear to be established in the orchestra—the bass and the contra-bass.

F. G.—(1.) The Academy you mention is, we believe, a very good teaching institution. (2.) We cannot recommend duets for singers whose capabilities and tastes are unknown to us.

F. P. Y.—We know nothing of the Union or its examinations and diplomas. If you will send us a prospectus we may be able to advise you.

I. S.—We prefer to give no metronomic rate for 'Ah! lo so!' A gramophone record of it will be more useful than a battery of metronomes.

LILIAN.—Write to the B.B.C., asking for a form to be filled up for audition. This form must be endorsed by a professional musician of standing.

T. J.—For church service accompaniment get 'Organ Accompaniment,' Bridge (Novello); 'Organ Accompaniment,' Richards (Joseph Williams).

H. I.—Borland's 'The Instruments of the Orchestra,' or, rather fuller, Prout's 'Instrumentation,' both published by Novello.

Church and Organ Music

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

The Annual General Meeting will be held on Saturday, July 21, at 2.30 p.m.

DISTRIBUTION OF DIPLOMAS

Members and friends are cordially invited to attend the distribution of diplomas to successful candidates at the Fellowship, Associateship, and Choir-Training Examinations on Saturday, July 21, at 3 p.m. There will be an address by the President, Dr. W. G. Alcock, M.V.O., and an organ recital, by Mr. H. L. Balfour, of pieces selected for the January, 1929, examinations. No tickets required. There will be an informal conversazione immediately after the recital, to which members and friends are invited. Tea and coffee. H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

THE ORGAN AND THE GRAMOPHONE

A batch of organ records affords an opportunity of reporting progress in what still is the most backward department of the gramophone repertory.

First, it is good to see that one company at least—H.M.V.—has realised the importance of taking up organ music seriously, and of making a start with standard works, classical and modern. 'Storms' and the sugary type of piece will continue to be recorded, like the feebler works for other instruments, for the practical business reason that there will always be people with a taste for nothing better. Organists will not complain of that, so long as the good stuff gets a fair show.

Organ recording, however, is still in a speculative state, though (as Mr. Batigan Verne's article in the April Musical Times showed) certain principles are becoming clear.

The most serious drawback at present is the failure of the gramophone to reproduce the two features that are vital to genuine organ music—the diapason tone and the pedal department. It is unfortunate that the most successful recording so far is of reed tone—the quality of which the ear tires the soonest. The glory of the organ is the feature peculiar to it—the diapason tone; and until the gramophone can reproduce this as faithfully as it now produces (say) the human voice or the string quartet, the finest organ music (which depends largely on diapason tone) will make only a passable show.

The experiments and research now being made will do much, but I believe that the existing organs, having been constructed for effect in large spaces, will never produce completely successful records. Their surroundings are an asset, of course; people like to hear a record of the instrument in this or that famous cathedral. But for records that will be satisfactory from the purely musical side, I think we must wait till an organ is built to a specification designed solely for recording purposes, and erected in a room with the right acoustic properties, i.e., with resonance just sufficient to avoid coldness on the one hand, and confusion on the other.

Meanwhile we must be thankful for the undoubted progress lately made in every respect—chiefly in regard to choice of music.

The records just issued by H.M.V. include three Bach works, and they serve to illustrate the remarks made above.

Dr. Alcock gives a beautiful performance, on the Salisbury Cathedral organ, of the first movement of the Trio-Sonata in E flat. For its full enjoyment, however, one has to ignore (if possible) some inequality and unsteadiness of tone. It would be interesting to know what registration is used—apparently, quiet solo stops of the flue department. The use of a 16-ft. on the pedal raises doubts; perhaps a telling 8-ft. alone would have been better. The record, however, despite its defects, provides a valuable lesson in this most important branch of organ technique. These Sonatas are an indispensable part of every player's studies, and I hope the Company will in due time make them all available. They can never be 'best-sellers,' but there are always a good many serious organ students ready to avail themselves of this means of instruction, and these—plus a fair number of gramophonists interested in organ classics—ought to make the enterprise worth while.

The record of this E flat Sonata movement (C1452) has on the reverse side the Prelude in D, the Fugue being given on the two sides of B2654. It is a pity the Prelude and Fugue are thus separated, but it is unavoidable, as the Fugue can hardly be 'cut.' Dr. Alcock plays the Prelude at the quick pace which saves its numerous sequential passages from becoming trite, and I am glad to find him using plenty of organ for the D minor passage at the end. It sounds finely dramatic on this record. In the Fugue he uses an amount of quiet registration that would be right for a first-hand hearing, but which is less successful on the gramophone. The final passages, where the full organ comes on, are rather confused. Still, as in the Sonata movement, the fine rhythm and continuity make it a valuable lesson.

The other Bach work is the Prelude and Fugue in G major—the best of the works in that key, and one too little heard (Novello Edition, Book 8). The player is Dupré, on the Queen's Hall organ. Here the registration scheme is decidedly French, with a predominance of reed tone, and the power is never less than forte. The result is successful; one tolerates the persistent reediness for the sake of the remarkable clarity. Dupré's playing, as usual, is rather mechanical, and he overdoes the staccato in the repeated chords that are a prominent feature in the Prelude. Despite the slickness which nowadays (I think) just spoils one's enjoyment of Dupré's brilliant playing, the record is one of the best so far made of Bach's organ music (D1402).

Harold Darke has two new records to his credit. He gives a fine performance of Mozart's Fantasia in F minor (C1448). His pace is quick, and the sections in which the big chords figure are fiery and impressive. The beautiful slow section comes out well. The fugal parts are inevitably less clear. His other record is less interesting musically—the Overture to the 'Occasional Oratorio' (C1464), but most of it records well. The St. Michael's Cornhill organ is certainly good for recording purposes, mainly, no doubt, because of its compactness, and also because the church is not very resonant.

An example of the reverse set of conditions is the record of the first movement of Widor's G minor Symphony, played at Liverpool Cathedral by Harry Goss Custard (C1465). Here the result is so confused that only the hearer who knows the work is able to follow it. The final portion is simply a noise, but so glorious a noise that it has claims on the ground of uniqueness. There is no other musical effect like this welter of tone, and no one need be ashamed of enjoying a wallow in it.

Stanley Roper is recorded at St. Margaret's, Westminster, in the Allegro of Handel's Concerto in D, No. 4, and the Finale of Guilmant's D minor Sonata (not the well-known work usually called Symphony). The Handel would have been better, I think, with a less violent contrast between the soft and loud passages. Clarity is good on the whole, and the loud pedal reed is used with fine results. The Guilmant movement is no great shakes as music, but it is undeniably effective, like most of Guilmant's work, and it makes a rousing record (C1446).

On the lighter side are records of Reginald Goss Custard (Queen's Hall organ) in his own Nocturne in D and Ireland's 'Villanelle' (C1466); E. H. Lemare in his Andantino in D flat, and Schumann's 'Dreaming' (C1455); and Quentin Maclean (Shepherd's Bush Pavilion) in Luigi's 'Ballet Egyptien' (Col., 4769-70). In the Goss Custard record we hear, on the whole, too little of the harmonic background; in Lemare's Andantino we hear too much, and the player's rubato is so exaggerated as to be fantastic. Maclean's playing is first-rate, and his organ records well, though the registration inevitably suits the cinema so well that it can hardly please organists. I suggest that the Columbia Company, having at its disposal this fine player and an organ evidently suitable for gramophone purposes, should let us hear him in some genuine organ music.

Two considerations suggest themselves after hearing a number of organ records. First, one speculates as to how far they are satisfactory in the case of gramophonists who have no knowledge of the works played. We organists can mentally sort things out from the confusion, and make good the deficient bass. It would be interesting to hear the views of a good musician who is quite ignorant of the organ repertory—as so many are.

Secondly, one is impressed by the educational possibilities of these records. To many organ students unable to take regular lessons they should be a boon. Above all, it is important that organists and the organ public generally should have ample proof (as they have in the records of standard works noticed above) that if organ-playing is unrhythmical and dull, the fault is not in the instrument, but in the player. Incidentally, such records will eventually make the public dissatisfied with any performance in which the music is held up from time to time while the player is hunting for stops. We shall no more tolerate such hold-ups in organ music than in any other kind of performance. Imagine an orchestra losing a bar while a wind-player changed his mouthpiece, or the violinists put on their mutes! Such anomalies are avoided by the orchestrator, and they must be avoided no less by the registrator, even if (as a correspondent suggested in last month's Musical Times) he has to call on an assistant to help with the stops. H. G.

---

Messrs. Harrison & Harrison have recently installed a new organ at All Saints', Woodham, Woking—a three-manual of twenty-one speaking stops. On May 14, the Rev. Ernest T. Allen gave a short talk in the Church on the function of the organ in worship, afterwards giving a recital, his programme including Mozart's F minor Fantasia, Franck's Choral No. 3, and short pieces by Bach, Stanford, and Parry.

---

The four-manual organ by Gern at St. John the Baptist's, Holland Road, W., is to be reconstructed by Messrs. Henry Willis.

COVENTRY CATHEDRAL

Dr. Harold W. Rhodes has been appointed organist of Coventry Cathedral. Dr. Rhodes has since 1912 been organist of St. John's, Torquay, and has taken a prominent part in the music of that district, having been conductor of the Torquay Philharmonic Society, and also of the Torquay Operatic Society. From 1908-10 he was assistant to Sir Walter Parratt, at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, and from 1910-12, music master and organist at Lancing College. He was given his first post as organist when only twelve years old, and two and a half years later became a student at the Royal College of Music. He promptly gained one of the open organ scholarships at the College, and shortly afterwards an open scholarship for composition. He obtained his A.R.C.O. diploma when a little over fifteen years of age, and his Fellowship when eighteen.

---

THE LATE DR. TOM HAIGH

A memorial tablet to the late Dr. Tom Haigh was unveiled at St. George's Church, Ramsgate, on May 14. Sir Hugh Allen performed the ceremony, and also accepted on behalf of the Royal College of Music a cheque for the endowment of a 'Tom Haigh Prize' for organ playing. The music, both choral and organ, used at this service was drawn mainly from Haigh's compositions.

---

On June 26, at 1 p.m., the two-thousandth weekly recital will be given at St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, when the solos from the B minor Mass will be sung by Miss Olive Sturgess, Miss Margaret Balfour, Mr. Andrew Clayton, and Mr. Topliss Green, with Mr. Herbert Hodge at the organ. It is worth noting that these recitals were instituted by Prof. Shuttleworth nearly forty-five years ago, the player being Mr. Ralph Norris until 1905, when Mr. Hodge was appointed. St. Nicholas was the pioneer City church in regard to musical services, and was first in the field with mid-day recitals for City folk. The list of vocal soloists who have taken part in these weekly performances is long, and contains many distinguished names.

---

Candidates for the forthcoming R.C.O. examination should note that Mr. H. V. Spanner will give a recital at the National Institute for the Blind, Great Portland Street, W.1, on June 6, at 3, drawing his programme almost entirely from the R.C.O. syllabus. As the organ at the Institute is a replica of that at the R.C.O., the occasion will be instructive to intending examinees.

---

At St. Andrew's Cathedral, Inverness, on April 25, a new organ was dedicated. The builders are Messrs. Hill & Son and Norman & Beard, and the instrument is a three-manual of thirty-one stops. Mr. D. E. Roberts, the organist and choirmaster, gave the opening recital, and the choir sang Ouseley's 'It came even to pass.'

---

The Coltishall and Halstead Choral Society performed Bach's 'God's time is the best' and 'My spirit was in heaviness,' at Halstead Church, on May 13. There was a small string orchestra and a quartet of capable soloists. The Rev. V. N. Gilbert conducted, and Mr. Bertie Norgate was at the organ.

---

A new organ has just been installed in Ormskirk Parish Church by Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper—a three-manual of fifty-six stops and fourteen couplers, seventy-two draw-stops, and thirty-five thumb and foot pistons. Recitals were given by Mr. Harry Goss Custard.

---

Nine choirs took part in the Wycombe Ruri-decanal Choir Festival at High Wycombe Parish Church on the Eve of the Ascension. The canticles were sung to plainsong with Morley's Fauxbourdons. Mr. Noel Ponsonby conducted.

---

'St. Paul' was sung at the Parish Church, St. Austell, by the Philharmonic Society, accompanied by organ, strings, and drums. The performance was under the direction of Mr. W. Brennand Smith.

(Continued on page 534.)

Stars of the Summer night

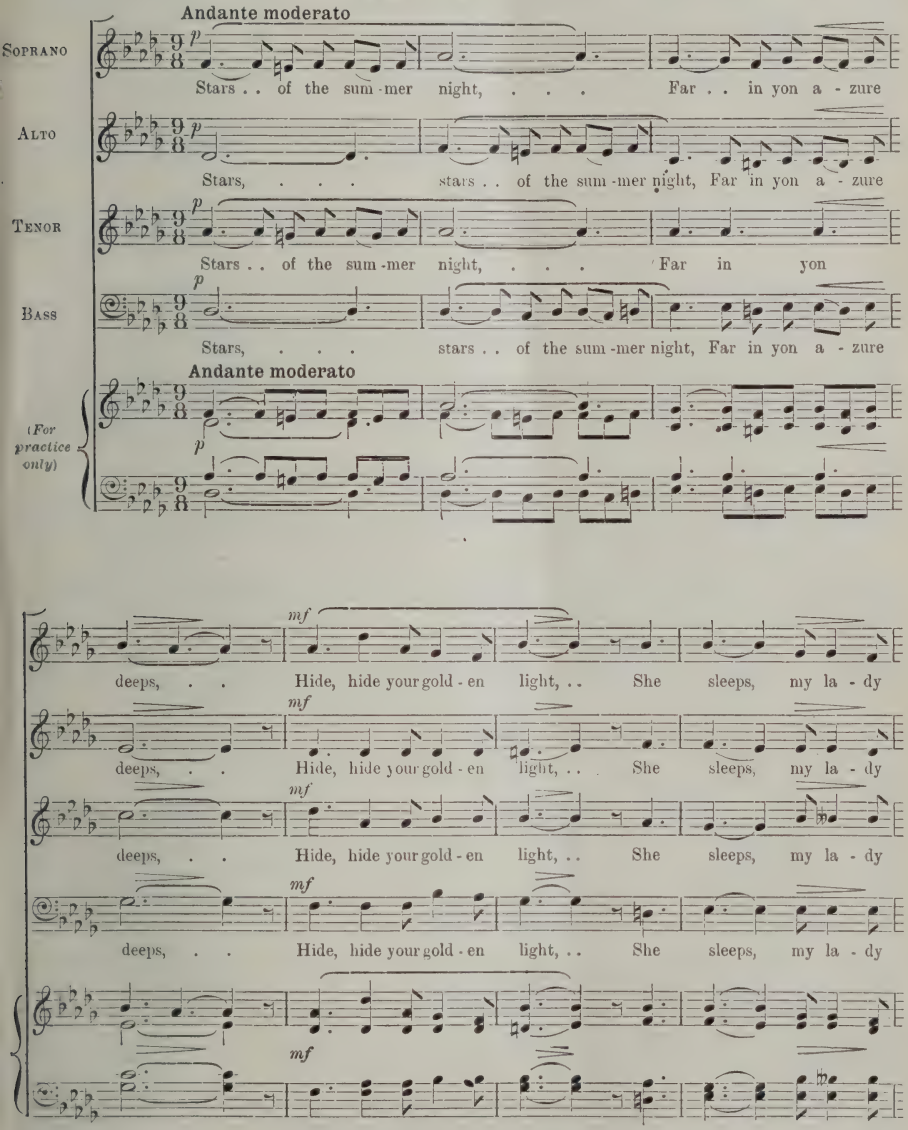
FOUR PART SONG

Words by Longfellow

Music by W. A. C. Cruickshank

London: Novello and Company, Limited; New York: The H. W. Gray Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Andante moderato
Soprano
Stars . . of the sum - mer night, . . . Far . . in yon a - zure
Alto
Stars, . . . stars . . of the sum - mer night, Far in yon a - zure
Tenor
Stars . . of the sum - mer night, . . . Far in yon
Bass
Stars, . . . stars . . of the sum - mer night, Far in yon a - zure
Andante moderato
(For practice only)
mf
deeps, . . Hide, hide your gold - en light, . . She sleeps, my la - dy deeps, . . Hide, hide your gold - en light, . . She sleeps, my la - dy deeps, . . Hide, hide your gold - en light, . . She sleeps, my la - dy deeps, . . Hide, hide your gold - en light, . . She sleeps, my la - dy

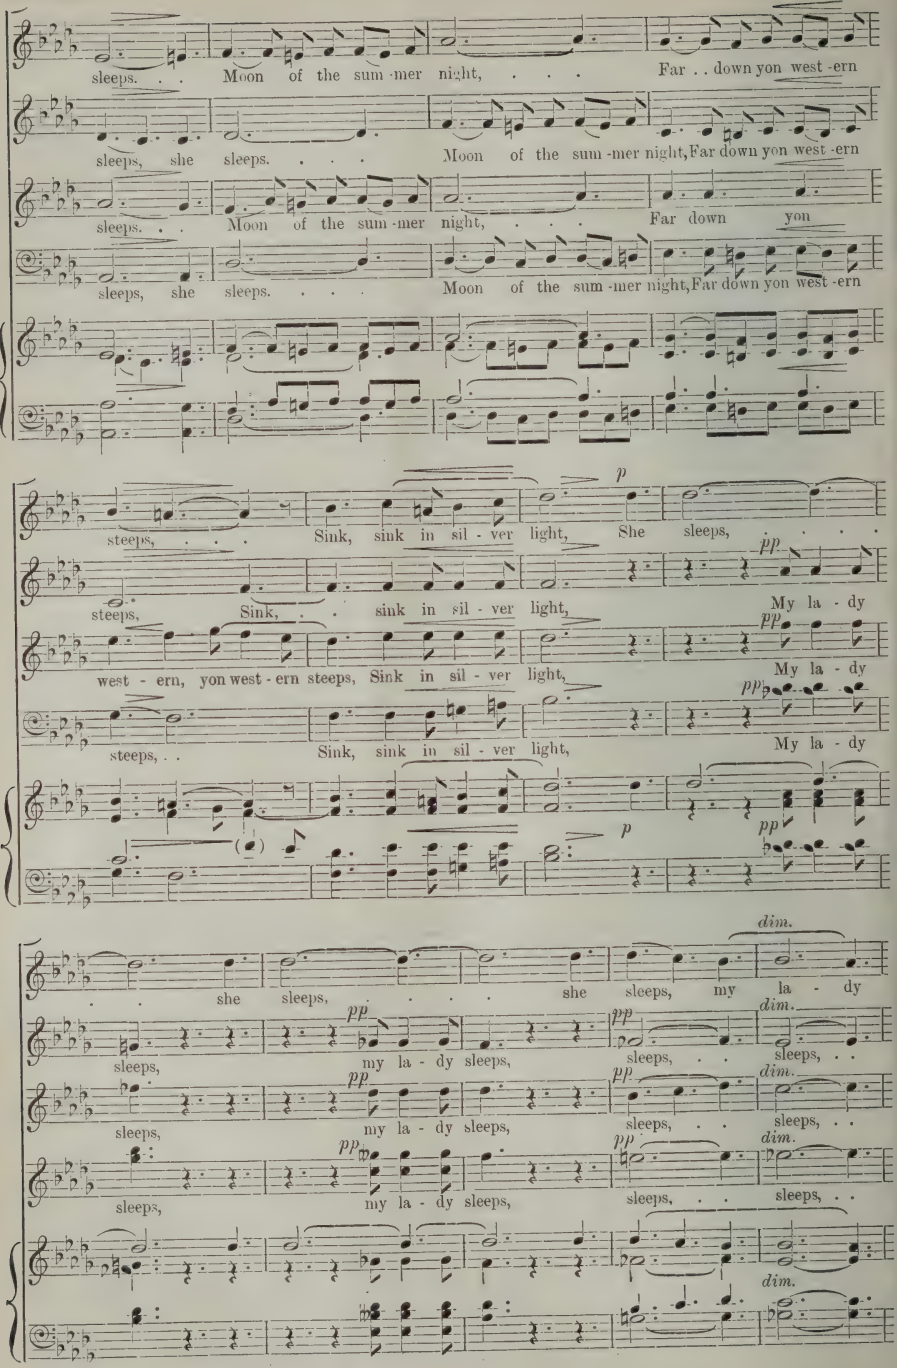
Original Version for A.T.T.B. in The Orpheus, No. 196

D



sleeps. . . Moon of the sum-mer night, . . . Far . . down yon west-ern sleeps, she sleeps. . . . Moon of the sum-mer night, Far down yon west-ern sleeps. . . Moon of the sum-mer night, . . . Far down yon sleeps, she sleeps. . . . Moon of the sum-mer night, Far down yon west-ern steeps, . . . Sink, sink in sil-ver light, She sleeps, . . . .
steeps, Sink, . . sink in sil-ver light, My la-dy west-ern, yon west-ern steeps, Sink in sil-ver light, My la-dy steeps, . . Sink, sink in sil-ver light, My la-dy
p
pp dim.
. . she sleeps, . . . she sleeps, my la-dy
sleeps, my la-dy sleeps, sleeps, . . sleeps, . .
sleeps, my la-dy sleeps, sleeps, . . sleeps, . .
sleeps, my la-dy sleeps, sleeps, . . sleeps, . .

poco rall.
sleeps, my la - dy she sleeps, my la - dy sleeps. .
poco rall.
sleeps, . . sleeps, she sleeps, . . she . . sleeps. .
poco rall.
sleeps, . . sleeps, she sleeps, . . she . . sleeps. .
poco rall.
sleeps, . . sleeps, she sleeps, . . she . . sleeps. .
poco rall.
a tempo
p
Wind . . of the sum - mer night, . . . . Where yon-der wood bine
a tempo
p
Wind, . . . . wind . . of the sum - mer night, Where yonder wood-bine
a tempo
p
Wind . . of the sum - mer night, . . . . Where yon - der wood - bine p a tempo
Wind, . . . . wind . . of the sum - mer night, Where yonder wood-bine p a tempo
mf creeps, . . Fold, fold thy pin - ions light, . . She sleeps, my la - dy
mf creeps, . . Fold, fold thy pin - ions light, . . She sleeps, my la - dy
mf creeps, . . Fold, fold thy pin - ions light, . . She sleeps, my la - dy
mf creeps, . . Fold, fold thy pin - ions light, . . She sleeps, my la - dy mf
mf

sleeps. . . Dreams of the sum-mer night, . . . Tell . . her, her lov-er keeps sleeps, she sleeps. . . Dreams of the sum-mer night, Tell her, her lov-er keeps sleeps. . . Dreams of the sum-mer night, . . . Tell her, her sleeps, she sleeps. . . Dreams of the sum-mer night, Tell her, her lov-er keeps watch, . . watch, While in slum-ber light She sleeps, . . . .
watch, watch, . . While in slum-ber light My la-dy lov-er . . keeps watch, While in slum-ber light My la-dy
watch, . . watch, While in slum-ber light My la-dy
. . . she sleeps, . . . . . she sleeps, . . my sleeps, my la-dy sleeps, sleeps, . .
sleeps, my la-dy sleeps, sleeps, . .
sleeps, my la-dy sleeps, sleeps, . .

la - dy sleeps, my la - dy she sleeps, my la - dy sleeps, . . sleeps, . . sleeps, she sleeps, . . she . .
sleeps, . . sleeps, . . sleeps, she sleeps, . . she . .
sleeps, . . sleeps, . . sleeps, she sleeps, . . she . .

Più lento
pp
rall.
sleeps, my la - dy sleeps, she sleeps, my la - dy sleeps.
sleeps, she sleeps, she sleeps, my la - dy sleeps.
sleeps, my la - dy sleeps, my la - dy sleeps.
sleeps, my la - dy sleeps, my la - dy sleeps.
Più lento
pp
rall.

(Continued from page 528.)

Mr. Allan Brown gave the opening recital on the new organ in the Congregational Church, Dovercourt, built by Messrs. Richard Tubb.

Owing to unusual pressure on our space we are unable to insert all the miscellaneous news items received.

RECITALS

Mr. Clifford Smith, St. Stephen's Walbrook—Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach; Fugue, 'Ad nos,' Liszt; Alla Marcia, Ireland.

Mr. E. Power Biggs, St. Dunstan-in-the-East, E.C.—Prelude on 'Rhosymedre,' Vaughan Williams; Symphony No. 6, Widor; Prelude and Fugue in G minor, Dupré.

Mr. John Pullein, St. Mary's Cathedral, Glasgow—Prelude and Fugue in E flat, Bach; Theme with variations (Sonata No. 10), Rheinberger; Benedictus, Reger; Elegy, Bairstow; Resurgam, Harvey Grace.

Mr. Arthur E. Watts, St. Matthew's, New Kent Road—Suite Gothique, Boëllmann; Introduction and Toccata, Walond; Spring Song, Hollins; Sonata No. 3, Guilmant.

Mr. Purcell J. Mansfield, Pollokshields Parish Church—Choral No. 3, Franck; Trio on 'Abridge,' Charlton Palmer; Triumphal March, Liszt; Five Short Variations on 'Gala Water,' Stuart Archer; 'The Angelus,' Mansfield.

Mr. Arthur Mason, St. Mary-le-Bow—'The Question' and 'The Answer,' Wolstenholme; Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, Bach; Final in B flat, Franck.

Mr. E. D. Gaylor Mason, United Methodist Church, Seven Kings—Fantasia in E, Osborn; A Song of Sunshine, Hollins; Romance, Watling; Finale in B flat, Wolstenholme.

Dr. Charles F. Waters, St. Stephen's Walbrook—Rhapsody, Heathcote D. Statham; Carillon, Godfrey Sceats; Three Studies on English Hymn-Tunes, Charlton Palmer; Canon Caprice and Moto Continuo, C. F. Waters.

Mr. W. Edward Kirby, University of Bristol — Three Chorale Preludes, Bach; Overture to 'The Magic Flute'; three movements from Symphony in F minor, Widor; 'In an Old Abbey,' Harwood.

Mr. James M. Preston, St. Hilda's, South Shields—Minuet and Trio, Schubert; Spring Song, Bonnet; Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; 'Blenheim' Fantasia, Silas.

Mr. J. C. Clarke, Christ Church, Cannes—'St. Anne' Fugue, Bach; Phantasie and Allegro agitato (Sonata No. 12), Rheinberger; Epilogue, Healey Willan.

Dr. Stanley Marchant, Parish Church of St. Margaret, Lee—Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Sonata in G, Elgar; Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn.

Mr. E. Emlyn Davies, Westminster Congregational Church—Prelude and Fugue in D minor, Glazounov; Sonata in F sharp minor, Reger; Symphony No. 2, Mahler; Overture to 'The Mastersingers.'

Mr. Stanley Roper, St. Margaret's, Westminster—Fantasia in G, Bach; Concerto in G minor, Handel; two Fugues on B A C H, Schumann; 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring,' Bach; Andante and Maestoso (Sonata), Harwood.

Dr. Harold E. Darke, Liverpool Cathedral—Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; Passacaglia and Three Chorale Preludes, Bach; Slow movement ('Sea Symphony'), Vaughan Williams.

Mr. W. J. Lancaster, Bolton Parish Church—Introduction to 'The Seven Last Words,' Haydn; 'Évocation à la Chapelle Sixtine,' Liszt; Monologue, Rheinberger; two Cathedral Preludes, Harwood.

Mr. George Metzler, St. Stephen's Walbrook—Toccata and Fugue in F minor, Noble; Sonata No. 4, Rheinberger; Chorale Preludes by Bach, Parry, and Wood.

Mr. J. Eric Hunt, St. George's, Bickley—Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Meditation, Harvey Grace; Introduction and Fugue in C sharp minor, S. S. Wesley; Two Chorale Preludes—'St. Peter,' Darke, 'On a Tune by Tallis,' J. Eric Hunt; Psalm-Prelude No. 1, Howells; Alla Marcia, Ireland.

Mr. Allan W. Bunney, St. Mary-le-Bow—Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Sonata in G minor, Purcell; Menuet-Scherzo, Jongen; Introduction and Fugue on 'Ad nos,' Liszt.

Dr. J. C. Bradshaw, Christchurch Cathedral, N.Z.—Moderato and Allegretto, Gade; Concert Overture in C minor, Hollins; Sonata No. 9, Rheinberger; Fantasia, Saint-Saëns; Imperial March, Elgar.

Miss Alice D. Barklie, St. Michael's, Bognor—'Dorian' Toccata, Bach; Prelude on 'Rhosymedre,' Vaughan Williams; 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring,' Bach; Toccata-Prelude on 'Pange Lingua,' Bairstow.

Mr. L. G. Allen, St. Peter's Wesleyan Church, Norwich—A Guilmant programme: March on 'Lift up your heads'; Pastorale (Sonata No. 1); Pastorale in A; Grand Chœur, &c.

Miss Lilian Coombes, St. Lawrence Jewry—Phantasie in A, Rheinberger; Rêverie on 'University,' Harvey Grace; Soliloquy, Lyon; Introduction and Fugue on 'Ad nos,' Liszt.

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. S. H. Baker, hon. Borough organist, Hove.

Mr. Arnold B. Bennett, choirmaster and organist, Christ Church, Surbiton.

Mr. Nicholas Choveaux, choirmaster and organist, St. John the Baptist, Wimbledon.

Mr. J. D. Macrae, choirmaster and organist, St. Peter's, Lutton Place, Edinburgh.

Mr. Laurence J. G. Marsh, choirmaster and organist, St. Columb's, Notting Hill, W.

Mr. R. Hugh Pill, choirmaster and organist, Church of the Holy Name, Leeds; assistant-organist, All Souls' (Hook Memorial) Church, Leeds.

Letters to the Editor

THE ETHICS OF BORROWING

Sir,—The correspondence and editorial comments in your journal about the use made in my recent book, 'Music: Classical, Romantic, and Modern,' of quotations and ideas from other authors without any or without sufficient acknowledgment have assumed a volume and a note of censure which have surprised me, and which I had not conceived possible. At first, and perhaps mistakenly, I regarded the complaints lightly, and as they contained statements involving lengthy explanation of perhaps little interest to persons unconcerned, I abstained from replying to them. But since authors of such standing as Mr. Newman and Mr. Rutter, and the translator, Mr. Pring, have joined in the complaints, I do not wish to appear disrespectful either to them or to others concerned by further ignoring the criticisms upon me, or to claim that my action has been either impeccable or that my view of it is infallible. On the other hand, whilst many of the statements made about me could be satisfactorily explained, I readily defer to the general trend of the criticism and beg to express in your columns my great regret for any unintentional fault I may have committed against either individual authors or against literary ethics in general.

The matter being one of principle, I will avoid personalities. Let me say at once that I disapprove literary brigandage and the appropriation of other writers' ideas without consent or acknowledgment as much as my critics, and that if in the eyes of professional colleagues whose opinion and goodwill I respect I have unwittingly sinned against this principle, I hereby express my regrets and apologies, and will make such amends as are possible in future editions of my book.

In fairness to myself, however, I point out that I consider my own good faith to the principle in question was made sufficiently manifest in the Preface to my book. It was a book involving the entire range of music, and involving the consideration of an immense mass of music, documents, and critical estimates, all needing to be hurriedly condensed into the compass of a popular volume. I expressly stated in the Preface that I had culled the material for it from numerous sources, some of whom I specified by name in the Preface, and others in the text or in foot-notes, and in the list of books of reference in Appendix V. Indeed I might have adopted the words of a famous author and said that the book was like 'a posy of flowers gathered from many gardens, and in which the compiler had contributed little more than the string which tied them together.'

Whilst that prefatory explanation surely relieves me of any imputation of wishing to pass off other writers' ideas as my own, let alone of the more odious imputation of literary dishonesty, I am willing to admit that I still may have insufficiently indicated my indebtedness to particular writers, and though some of them have assured me that they have no grievance whatever at what has been done, yet to those who take an opposite view I express my unfeigned regret, and, as above stated, will do my utmost to rectify the matter in future editions.

One or two complaints I must refer to in detail. With regard to Mr. Pring's translation of Sabaneev's book, I recognise that I ought to have first secured his more definite consent in writing to publishing quotations from it, which I might easily have done, as I was dealing regularly with him about other translation work at the time. But the allegation made against me of a 'violation of trust as a publisher's reader' is entirely unjustified, for the MS. concerned is a translation of an already well-known published work—and that, too, in Russia—where the European copyright does not, unfortunately, yet obtain. Moreover, judging from some later letters, in all probability the translation came to me first as a private individual. It was an oversight of mine not to have mentioned Mr. Pring's name as translator, and no one was more grieved than myself when I discovered it; but I am glad to state that Mr. Pring himself takes a less severe view of the matter than your editorial comment expresses, and that he has twice written me in very kind terms, assuring me that he is quite satisfied with my proposal to quote his name in connection with the passage in my next edition.

The next instance is that of the notice of the 'Descant Tune Book' in The Organ. The notice appeared as far back as July, 1926. I have no memoranda of it, nor recollection of having written it, though I may have done so; but I do not write all the reviews for The Organ. I have now obtained and examined the 'Tune Book,' and see that, if I reviewed it and was working fast, I might easily have overlooked the fact that the Preface bore initials different from those of the Arranger, and I have not the least doubt that my intention was to acknowledge the quotation and to supplement it by some comment of my own, which for some reason inadvertently failed to get written. However, although I have no recollection of having compiled the notice, I will now accept responsibility for it, and willingly express my regret to Messrs. Novello for the form the review took. But I would point out that it is unfair to suggest that either personal prestige or pecuniary gain could possibly accrue to myself from a notice which was anonymous and not paid for by 'space,' and which I was under no compulsion to contribute at all (being allowed great latitude of choice as to the books reviewed), and therefore which can only have been inserted with a view to giving gratuitous publicity to a new work.

With regard to your charge concerning the announcement of myself as editor of the Rheinberger Organ Sonatas, Mr. Voigt's letter in your issue of May 1 shows that I had good reason to expect that the work would have been entrusted to me. I admit being a little 'previous' in my statement, and as soon as I realised this I wrote to my publicity agents instructing them to remove the Rheinberger announcement in a reprint of the circular.

—Yours, &c., A. EAGLEFIELD HULL.

Melbourne House, Huddersfield.

April 28, 1928.

[We are glad to receive the above letter. It will be generally agreed that Dr. Hull has acted wisely—and, we might add, courageously—in writing so ample an amende. In closing this unpleasant controversy we assure him that our action throughout has been undertaken with reluctance, and entirely in our editorial capacity. Our personal relationship with Dr. Hull has been long-standing and amicable, and we trust that it may remain on that footing. —EDITOR.]

'THE NATURE OF HARMONY'

SIR,—The correspondence in the April number of the Musical Times, re the nature of the minor harmony, raises a few points of interest. Mr. V. W. Leatherdale, who writes all the way from India, asks whether the minor harmony, as c e♭ g, is not really a discord, seeing that 'the played e♭ clashes with the implied (and often heard) e♮?' Evidently Mr. Leatherdale, like many others, has difficulty in accepting the minor harmony as a 'somewhat altered' major harmony, which is the view advanced by Helmholtz. I can scarcely imagine that he really considers the minor harmony to be a discord, a major harmony that is out of tune to the extent of a complete semitone. This difficulty I have referred to in my January article, and dealt with fully in the two subsequent articles. These articles were not in your correspondent's hands when he wrote. I hope they have been of service to him in clearing up the point he refers to. If he is unwilling to accept the views there advanced, I am afraid he must continue to regard the minor harmony as a discord, the while his ear assures him it is really a concord.

Another correspondent, Mr. J. Morrison, brings forward two new 'chords' that up to the present have played no part in harmonic music; one of these has the proportions 16 : 19 : 24, the other 6 : 7 : 9. He thinks these are minor triads, whereas they are neither minor nor triads. When did the interval 6 : 7 become a minor third, or 7 : 9 a major third? His letter suggests that he has perused my articles rather hurriedly. These treat of the minor harmony from the standpoint of harmonic inversion, and I would be the last person to indulge in the pleasant pastime of picking out, in a perfectly arbitrary and haphazard way, any series of harmonic sounds and labelling them harmonic triads. The science of harmony has suffered enough from this childish game.

Finally, I notice that Dr. Froggatt is quite unable to discover any resemblance between the proportions that respectively determine the major and minor harmonies. I confess I imagined that the resemblance was sufficiently obvious, and that the views of such musicians and thinkers as Zarlino, Rameau, Tartini, Hauptmann, Riemann, and many others, who, however they may differ as to the origin of the minor harmony, all agree in pointing out this resemblance, would be shared by your readers. Unfortunately, I quite forgot about Dr. Froggatt. He is unable to understand how it is possible to describe the minor harmony as being determined by the same proportions as the major, but in the opposite direction. Accusing me of juggling with figures—this is depressing, for I had congratulated myself on having dispensed for the most part with figures or mathematical formulæ—he performs a little juggling on his own account, without much success. 'If,' he remarks, '4 : 5 : 6 represents the major triad, then 10 : 12 : 15 must represent the minor triad. If 6 : 5 : 4 stands for the minor, $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{5}$, $\frac{1}{6}$ must stand for the major. In either case the imaginary resemblance vanishes.'

Dr. Froggatt's non-success with his figures might have induced him to dispense with them altogether. A slight examination of the two harmonies would have convinced him that while the major harmony consists of a major third and a minor third, the minor harmony consists of the same intervals, but in the opposite direction—i.e., inverted. He suggests that in the inverted chord the notes are not exactly the same. Why, neither they are! Why should they be, and how is the chord to be inverted if the notes remain exactly the same. The inversion of the fifth, as c g, is the fourth, g c$^1$. The notes c and c$^1$ are different notes. Yet musical commonsense persists in regarding the fourth as the inversion of the fifth, even if it has failed to perceive all that such an inversion implies. And musical commonsense is right.

Dr. Froggatt should not have worried himself so much over his figures. He may be assured that whatever figures express the minor harmony, such a harmony is determined by the same proportions as the major, no matter whether we are dealing with vibrations or string lengths, seeing that the rate of vibration of a string is inversely proportional to its length. He is convinced that 'if 6 : 5 : 4 stands for the minor triad, $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{5}$, $\frac{1}{6}$ must stand for the major.' Seeing that the octave (1:2 or 1:½) and the fifth (2:3 or ½:⅓) play some part in the generation of both harmonies, we had better include their proportions thus: 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1, ½, ⅓, ¼, ⅕, ⅙, which is in no wise different from $\frac{1\ 2\ 3\ 4\ 5\ 6}{1,\ \frac{1}{2},\ \frac{1}{3},\ \frac{1}{4},\ \frac{1}{5},\ \frac{1}{6}}$. Dr. Froggatt fails to observe any 'resemblance' between the two proportional series, and is apparently unaware of the fact that the one series is generally described as being merely the inversion of the other!

He thinks also that my 'theory is identical with Dr. Riemann's.' Has he read Dr. Riemann's theory, and has he read my own account of the nature of the minor harmony? This is a statement I simply fail to understand. My writings on harmony are the result of my own labour and reflection, and are 'borrowed' from no other writer, dead or living.—Yours, &c.,

MATTHEW SHIRLAW.

The University, Edinburgh.

THE LARYNX AGAIN

SIR,—Your correspondent Mrs. Aubrey, in your last issue, in her advocacy of a high position of the larynx doubtless expresses what to her is a fact of seemingly first importance, in that it has enabled her to accomplish certain results in voice-training which she felt to be desirable. It is not the first time a high larynx has been advocated, and others have from time to time announced the 'discovery' of methods which have been claimed in a similar way as cures 'for every vocal defect.' Some years ago a German Lieder singer called on me to discuss a 'great discovery' he claimed to have made after much consideration of the problems of vocal tone. The gist of his discovery lay in the low larynx.

The relative merits of these contradictory principles I am not here concerned with, but rather with the fact that those who make such discoveries so often treat them as though they constituted fixed laws of voice use and were of universal application. The fact is that very few such devices can be held to be of universal application in teaching. Mrs. Aubrey's prescription may be of value in cases of abuse of the low larynx principle, and the amount of that is what gives point to her letter.

My chief concern, however, is the effect such a letter may have upon many young (and even older) teachers who are seeking that vital experience upon which good voice-training depends, and who may be led thereby to make experiments in their pupils upon the direct manipulation of the larynx. To make students endeavour to modify the position of the larynx by direct control is a practice which is fraught with possibilities of serious harm, by causing pupils to make efforts which generally prevent the supple adjustments by which alone perfect tone can be gained.

A skilled teacher whose ear is sensitive to the effect on the tone of wrong adjustments in the vocal organs of pupils may, on occasion, use successfully the direct method, but teachers who are thoroughly conversant with the potentialities of the various vowels for bringing about the right conditions in an easy, natural way never need to bother with such mechanical devices. It is one thing to know the positions which accompany certain tonal effects; it is quite another thing to prescribe direct, mechanical manipulations of the larynx for the purpose of securing correct tone.—Yours, &c.,

F. C. FIELD-HYDE.

SIR,—It was with great interest that I read the letter of Mrs. Aubrey on the subject of the raised larynx. I fear, however, that I cannot endorse her opinion.

Is not the raised larynx the chief cause of throatiness? Are not all throaty singers employing the larynx in this position? I believe so. Again, how can the thoracic resonator be brought into play if the larynx is raised? It is difficult, if not impossible.

No doubt it is wrong to force the larynx down by sheer, brute strength. But if a perfect tone is to be produced, the larynx must drop (shall I say, be allowed to drop?) easily and naturally. The mere singing of a perfect tone causes it to do so, almost without the singer's being aware of the fact. And yet in reality the lowered larynx is a cause of the perfect tone, and not the perfect tone the cause of the lowered larynx! (I am afraid this seems an Irish way of putting it.) It is my conviction that a singer with a lowered larynx could fill a large concert-hall with far less effort, and with far greater effect, than could a singer with a raised larynx.

Now what about the statement that a raised larynx is 'a cure for every vocal defect'? Dr. Curtis points out in his book ('Voice Building and Tone Placing') that a faulty method of singing will soon bring about vocal injury; and that the voice can be completely restored by a change of method—even if this new method be equally faulty. No doubt if, in time, the new method injured the voice, a cure could be effected by reversion to the old.

Now it cannot be denied that many singers, even though they employ the dropped larynx, sing incorrectly, and in time ruin their voices. But, from what has been said, it follows that a change in the method of singing (the larynx being raised) will soon restore the voice to its original healthy condition. Probably some people may think that this proves the efficiency of the 'raised larynx' method of singing. It does not, however, as will be seen from what has been said above.—Yours, &c.,

EDMUND P. A. C. OUTRAM.

Mundham Vicarage,
Chichester, Sussex.

SIR,—The letter of your correspondent, Mrs. E. Aubrey, in the May Musical Times, demands a reply, as students of singing may consider that she writes as an expert. One of our foremost vocal experts, well-known to the profession in this country, writes the following re your correspondent's letter: 'I would pity the listener (and not less the singer) if the larynx were as high as possible in the throat.' Also, 'Could it be called singing?' Will anyone with only a slightly critical ear experiment (an easy matter) by singing (?) with the larynx as high as possible in the throat? The proof of the pudding, &c.—Yours, &c.,

4, Hornsey Lane Gardens, N.6. G. T. PINCHES.

[We are able to insert only a few of the letters received on this subject.—EDITOR.]

THE REVIVAL OF MUSIC

SIR,—It is refreshing to find some one at last championing the cause of the sincere revivalist. Mr. Westrup is to be thanked for his defence (p. 440, May number) of the alleged 'undisciplined enthusiast.'

Without going into the question of press propaganda, which was brought up in the first place by Mr. Hull, may I be permitted to view the question of revival from another angle?

An argument of this description can go on indefinitely so long as sight is lost of one point, i.e., the spirit in which this old music is conceived. The man who approaches it as something which is archæologically interesting is thrilled in the manner of a profound and learnèd professor who discovers some scientific curiosity. He proceeds to dissect it under the musical microscope in the musical laboratory, and to place it piece by piece in jars on numerous shelves; and there it remains.

If approached, however, as something which was made to enhance the dignity and splendour of the liturgy, it will be found to be astonishingly alive. The Masses and Motets of the 15th and 16th centuries were written as a background for prayer. Take, for instance, the Te Deum Mass of Hugh Aston: it cannot be approached in the same light as the fifth Symphony of Beethoven. The one is the voice of the cloister—that much misunderstood term—the other the outcome of tempestuous passions. If the cloister and all that it means is considered to be a thing of the past, then the music appertaining to it once more becomes the dead fossil of the musty laboratory.

It may be argued that all this has nothing to do with the musical merit of these Tudor composers. Their contrapuntal skill in building up immense masses of sound around a long-drawn-out plainsong melody is truly amazing, and what is so often called the 'rambling counterpoint' of Aston may perhaps be read as the spiritual outpouring of the man's innermost soul, which after all is far greater in the end.

Having said so much, I should like to enter a plea that more of this music should be put forward in a more practical form. The edition of Tudor Church Music published by the Oxford University Press, and which is now nearing completion, is at present only for the few; the cost is beyond the pockets of a vast number of musicians, and it is not ideal for singing purposes. For the student's library it is a treasure; but only by actual performance will the works of Aston, Fayrfax, Pasche, Cornyshe, Applebye, and a host of others whose names are almost unknown become to be understood.

Mr. Westrup points out:

> 'What is amazing in the history of revivals is not that the enthusiasts should have been undisciplined, but that they should have had the courage and the vision to get performed forgotten works, many of which have now taken their place in the ordinary repertory of singers, players, choirs, and orchestras.'

Sir Richard Terry is a typical example of the sincere revivalist; his spade work at Downside Abbey thirty years ago, and, subsequently, his wonderful work at Westminster Cathedral in the face of constant opposition from numbers of eminent musicians, should be a complete refutation to the enemy of revival.

Thousands of Londoners who pass daily along Fleet Street know nothing of the delights of those quaint passages so full of pleasant and restful surprises: and those who know them are apt to be selfish, and to hope that they will not be discovered by the crowd. Let the musician explore the winding paths of the 'rambling counterpoint' of these old composers, and he will find some pleasant and restful surprises.—Yours, &c.,

CUTHBERT BATES.

THE EDITING OF OLD KEYBOARD MUSIC

SIR,—The unhappy statement on the cover (not the title-page) of my edition of 'Parthenia,' that it is arranged for the pianoforte, was added by the publisher without my knowledge, but it should be read in conjunction with the actual title-page and my Preface. These make clear the intention of the work, 'originally written for the virginal and translated into modern notation for the pianoforte . . . with original barring, accidentals, and ornaments.' Its principal feature is that there is no arrangement whatever. It is, frankly, not in the modern sense a performing edition, and not intended for the ordinary pianist, for whom I have fully provided elsewhere in the matter of Elizabethan music (including a number of pieces from 'Parthenia'). It is an antiquarian edition for those scholarly players and students who wish to know exactly what the original was and how it was written. As my Preface states, it is issued to supersede the garbled antiquarian version of Rimbault, 1847, and his reproducers, and it must be obvious that 'the errors of previous editions' refer to these and not to 'Parthenia' of 1611. My sole object is faithfulness to the original, even where that may err.

'Parthenia' stands on a different footing from any other publication. It was the first and the only volume of virginal music published before the 19th century, and therefore possesses a unique historical interest, and is worthy of being re-issued in its original state. The reason why Ex. 2 in your review is not written as Ex. 3 is because Ex. 3 is not the original text. The same applies to your reviewer's other suggestions.

When we come to virginal MSS. I am entirely in agreement with your critic as to the manner of reproduction. There are often three or four differing versions of the same piece in various MSS., and I am of opinion that it is inadvisable to issue any manuscript in the antiquarian manner. I have given up the best part of fifteen years of my life to examining and collating the whole literature of virginal music with a view to publishing the best of it in performing editions, and I have issued, with various publishers, in all sixteen volumes (with three more still to follow) in which I give a revised text chosen from all versions, with corrections separately, phrased and in modern notation with expression marks and without ornaments, so that my collection—extending to about three hundred pieces—is as readily intelligible as any modern publication. Yet your reviewer criticises my 'Parthenia' as though not a single one of my sixteen volumes of performing editions was in existence. Because I have produced a genuine scholars' edition of an important work I am branded as 'a blend of timidity and pedantry,' and the work to which I have given so much in order to popularise Tudor keyboard music, is not even mentioned. I ask, Is this fair play?—Yours, &c.,

MARGARET H. GLYN.

[Our reviewer writes: 'I have no desire to belittle Miss Glyn's work on behalf of early keyboard music. My concern being with the work entrusted to me for review, I saw no occasion to mention the other collections Miss Glyn has made, the more so as I gave a good deal of favourable notice to some of them in this journal a few years ago. As the review to which Miss Glyn takes exception was prompted mainly by a statement added to the cover of her book by the publisher, without her knowledge, her grievance is with him rather than with me.']

NEW LIGHT ON DR. NICHOLAS STAGGINS: FIRST CAMBRIDGE PROFESSOR OF MUSIC

SIR,—Our musical historians do not seem to have dealt fairly with Dr. Nicholas Staggins, who was created first Professor of Music in Cambridge University in July, 1684. He is called, 'One Staggins, who by Court favour was given the Chair of Music in Cambridge, in 1684'; and the late W. H. Husk, in Grove's 'Dictionary,' writes as follows:

'Nicholas Staggins was taught music by his father, a musician of little standing. Although of slender ability, he won the favour of Charles II., who, in 1682, appointed him Master of the King's Band of Musick; and in the same year the University of Cambridge, upon the King's request, conferred upon him the degree of Mus. D. The performance of the customary exercise being dispensed with, great dissatisfaction was occasioned, to allay which Staggins, in July, 1684, performed an exercise, whereupon he was appointed Professor of Music in the University, being the first who held that office.'

Mr. Henry Davey, in his 'History of English Music' (second edition, 1921), is even more severe: 'Nicholas Staggins was the son of a "common musician," probably one of the roving fiddlers or minstrels so much looked down upon by the educated artists. Staggins himself had received small tuition, but became Master of the King's Band in 1682; and Charles II. then ordered the University of Cambridge to create him Mus. D. The King was obeyed amidst much ridicule and dissatisfaction,' &c. 'He died in 1705.'

Now the facts of Staggins's career are as follows, and, as will be seen, they seem to correct some established errors, and to place him in a better light; also to rehabilitate his character as a musician. His father, far from being a 'common minstrel,' was a member of the King's Band of Music from 1660 until his death in 1684.

Nicholas Staggins was born about the year 1646, and was taught music by his father, one of the Court Band. In 1666, he was placed in the King's Band of Musick, under Grabu, and on December 21, 1671, he was appointed musician-in-ordinary for the violin, to date as from September 29, 1670. On August 15, 1674, he was appointed 'Master of His Majesty's violins in ordinary,' and on September 29, 1674, he was appointed Master of the King's Band of Musick, in succession to Lewis Grabu. Among the musicians who performed in the famous Masque of 'Calisto, or the Chester Nymph,' presented at Court on July 4, 1674, Nicholas Staggins was one of the violins, and, on January 29, 1675, he was confirmed in his post as Master of the Court Band ('The King's Musick,' p. 284*).

From the 'Calendar of State Papers, Domestic, of Charles II.' we learn that, on May 10, 1675, a warrant was issued 'to pay Nicholas Staggins, Master of the Musick, £100 a year, to commence from, Midsummer, 1673, without account.' He was also appointed 'musician-in-ordinary for the wind instruments in the place of Richard Hudson, deceased,' for which he received the sum of £48 7*s.* 6*d.*, being arrears for liveries due for three years ending St. Andrew's Day, 1674.

* 'The King's Musick.' By H. C. de Lafontaine. (Novello.)

An interesting fact is revealed in the 'Calendar of State Papers, Domestic, 1675-76,' namely, that on February 26, 1676, Nicholas Staggins had a year's leave 'to go and remain in Italy and other foreign parts, and to embark, with his servants, for transportation, and to return.' A month later, on March 27, 1676, he appointed his father, Isaac Staggins, as his 'true and lawful attorney,' and he also appointed his friend, Matthew Locke, as his deputy, to act as 'Master of his Majesty's Musick' during his absence.

We thus find that Staggins had gone to Italy for a year to perfect himself in the art of music, and he returned to England in July, 1677. A month later, Matthew Locke died, and on September 10, 1677, Henry Purcell was appointed 'Composer in ordinary with fee for the Violin, to his Majesty, in the place of Matthew Locke, deceased.' Four months later, on January 31, 1678, Staggins was paid £16 2*s*. 6*d*. for livery due St. Andrew's, 1675; and in July, 1678, he was paid for further arrears. Therefore it is not surprising that in 1682 the King recommended him to Cambridge University for the degree of Mus. D. I may also add that, in 1697, he gave a concert of his own music at York Buildings (May 13, 1697). He died early in 1700—not in 1705 as given in the reference books—for we learn from the Lord Chamberlain's Accounts that, on July 30, 1700, John Eccles was appointed 'Master of the Musick, in the room of Dr. Staggins, deceased.

Lastly, it cannot be denied that, though a clique had got up against Staggins on account of the royal favour extended to him, yet his compositions that have survived (duly praised by the Earl of Egmont and the Earl of Arran) are much above mediocre standard. Some of his songs were highly popular, and are included in 'Choice Ayres, Songs and Dialogues' (1675), while he also contributed some incidental music to Dryden's 'Conquest of Granada.'—Yours, &c.,

W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD.

Enniscorthy.

THE 'FALSE' HORN ENTRY IN THE 'EROICA'

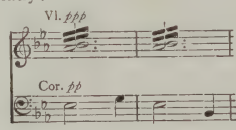
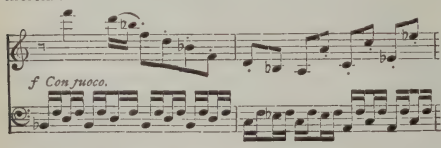
SIR,—Much ink has been spilt at various times, and but to little purpose, in an endeavour to account for the well-known horn entry:



just before the recapitulation in the first movement of the 'Eroica' Symphony (1804).

In playing the Rondo-Finale of the Pianoforte Sonata in D, Op. 10, No. 3 (1797), recently, I was much struck by the following forte accented clash of tonic and dominant found therein:



The obvious and ordinary thing to do here would, of course, have been to continue the left-hand semiquavers until the second crotchet of the second bar; but, no! Beethoven chooses to change the left-hand harmony on the first beat. (Incidentally, one may remark that this must have been one of the things that raised the ire of the writer in the Allgemeine Musikzeitung when, in referring to the first appearance of the three Op. 10 Sonatas, he spoke of 'the obscurity of art, or the art of obscurity.') One might entertain a suspicion that here was one of those still uncorrected engraver's errors against which Beethoven so frequently complained, but the succeeding four bars clearly show that he was so pleased with the novel effect obtained that he repeated it twice—first in G minor, then in E flat.

Though not entirely unversed in some of the Beethoven literature extant, I cannot remember that anyone has previously commented on this passage in the D major Pianoforte Sonata, especially with a view to connecting it with those puzzling two bars in the 'Eroica.'

But, after all, is there any puzzle? May it not well be that, having keenly relished the novel harmonic clash, forte, in one medium, Beethoven tried it again seven years later, only this time in another medium, and pianissimo?—Yours, &c.,

FELIX WHITE.

28, Hilldrop Crescent, N.7.

P.S.—Surely this is one of the earliest appearances of that now notorious damsel, 'Polly-Tonality.'

THE SMALLEST FOUR-MANUAL ORGAN

SIR,—I was interested in the 'Smallest Four-Manuals,' one at Oxford, the other at Cambridge.

There is, however, a smaller one at Trinity College, London, the specification of which, sent me some time ago by a friend, lies before me, as follows:

MANUALS CC to C=61; PEDAL CCC to g=32.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Great—Doub. Dulciana, 16; Open Diapason, 8; Claribella, 8; Wald Fl., 4 ... ... ... ... | = | 4 |
| Swell—Open Diapason, 8; Rohr Fl., 8; (Ec. Gam., 8; Vx. Cel., 8; Gemshorn, 4; Oboe, 8 ... ... | = | 6 |
| Choir—Lieb. Ged., 8; Dulciana, 8; Clarinet, 8 ... ... | = | 3 |
| Solo—Flauto Traverso, 8; Trumpet, 8 ... ... ... | = | 2 |
| Pedal—Double Dulciana, 16; Bourdon, 16; Bass Flute, 8 | = | 3 |
| | | 18 |

Couplers 10. Total Speaking Stops ... ... ... 18
Pistons 6 (really only 17, as probably the Great and Pedal Double Dulciana are identical).

Now this seems to me a excellent organ for pupils, especially when (as is frequently the case) they have not studied organ construction, and are at a loss when going to a four-manual for the first time. Moreover my friend tells me he heard E. H. Lemare give a capital and most effective recital upon it.—Yours, &c.,

THOMAS CURRY.

St. Paul's, Battersea.

ONE-HANDED PIANISTS

SIR,—There are many skilled pianists with only one arm, unfortunately. It seems a shame that they should be debarred from entering Musical Festivals. Would it be possible for committees to arrange a class for left-hand only? I am convinced that the need is a real one.—Yours, &c.,

ALEC ROWLEY.

FULL SCORES OF THE SAVOY OPERAS

SIR,—The inaccessibility of the Sullivan scores has always been a mystery to students of music, and it is to be hoped that the attention given to the matter by Mr. Dunhill and your reviewer will lead to publication. Although one can obtain orchestral parts of miserable selections from the operas, it is impossible to get parts of (say) the Overtures to 'The Gondoliers,' 'Patience,' 'The Yeomen of the Guard,' the cachucha from 'The Gondoliers,' or the 'March of the Peers' from 'Iolanthe.' All these would 'sell like hot cakes,' being ideal food for amateurs and holiday resort orchestras.

When I was studying at the R.C.M. I discovered, to my great delight, the full score of 'The Yeomen of the Guard' in the Parry Room. This, and two fragments in Cecil Forsyth's 'Orchestration,' are the only examples I have ever seen of Sullivan's exquisite scoring. May I suggest that a signed appeal, sent through your paper to Mr. D'Oyly Carte, might persuade him to make a start with the splendid Overture to 'The Yeomen of the Guard'?—Yours, &c.,

'A SULLIVAN ENTHUSIAST.'

BYRD GRAMOPHONE RECORDS

SIR,—In your review of Frank Howes's excellent book on 'William Byrd,' you say that 'It was a happy thought to give references to such [gramophone] records as are available.' Unfortunately, all the Byrd records made by the English Singers mentioned in Mr. Howes's list have now been removed from the catalogue and are unlikely to be re-recorded. Special 'pressings' of these records—which are, of course, old process—can be obtained in the ordinary way at the usual prices.—Yours, &c.,

THE GRAMOPHONE COMPANY, LTD.,
p.p. ALEC ROBERTSON
(Principal, Education Department).

A TRIBUTE TO THE LATE DR. ILIFFE

SIR,—The news of the death of Dr. Frederick Iliffe, of Oxford, to which brief reference was made in the March issue of the Musical Times, came as a great grief to me, as doubtless it did to many others of his former pupils and friends. I write this in default of a fitting tribute from an abler pen than mine, to the memory of one who rendered such splendid service to music. His long and honourable career as a teacher, as a church organist and choirmaster, as a composer of both sacred and secular music, and his notable contribution to musical literature in his masterly analysis of Bach's 'Forty-eight,' entitle him to a position of some distinction in the ranks of English musicians of modern times; added to which, his charm of manner, his geniality, his modesty, his unfailing patience, and his readiness to give a word of encouragement when occasion arose, endeared him to all his pupils, and made for him a very wide circle of friends.—Yours, &c.,

W. BERTRAM COLLINGWOOD.

Grahamstown, South Africa.

ORGANISTS' LONG RETENTION OF THE SAME POST

SIR,—I have been very much interested in Dr. Pearce's letter in your May issue regarding organists' long service. I have a vivid recollection of the R.C.O. examination in 1881, when I first made Dr. Pearce's acquaintance, which later on developed into sincere friendship. I must confess that I had forgotten who the other successful candidates were, and am glad to have their names brought back to me. My reason for troubling you with this letter is to clear up a small matter, i.e., that I do not now hold the post at St. Saviour's, Hampstead, having resigned at Easter last year on the completion of forty-five years' service as organist and choirmaster. May I add that my connection with St. Saviour's dated from the year 1873, when, as a boy, I joined the choir; and, apart from the years 1880-81, during which I was organist at St. Mary's Parish Church, Battersea, my association with the choir of St. Saviour's extended over a period of about fifty-three years.—Yours, &c.,

1, Steele's Road, N.W.3. ARTHUR J. GREENISH.

DIPLOMAS

SIR,—Apropos of the subject of degrees and diplomas, the late Sir Hubert Parry made some very wise remarks in an address he gave, in July, 1902, at the distribution of diplomas at the Royal College of Organists. In the course of his address he said:

'For the Universities to compete with the schools would be perfectly ridiculous. Sometimes people find it hard to understand what the prestige and value of a University degree is. It certainly is of very great value, though the value is much more indefinite than that of certificates given by schools which have to deal in a practical way with particular departments, the utility of which is more obvious to commonplace minds. People go in for degrees because they show a certain type of mind and capacity. Particular departments in these days have to deal with particular things. The examination for a Mus. D. at one of the great Universities is a thing which perhaps one man can pass, to a thousand who could pass the very hardest tests that could be devised in performance. A very difficult paper in harmony or counterpoint is one of the very hardest things the human mind can be set to solve. To ask the worker of such a paper to sit down and play a Bertini study afterwards would make you feel sick with humiliation! I say a Bertini study, because you cannot expect people to sit down after doing such work and play the very hardest studies of Liszt, or the Paganini Variations of Brahms. It is not the province of the Universities to test such special efficiencies. It is the province of the schools. Therefore, we must keep distinctly in view the difference of type between examinations. . . . We have the great comprehensive schools giving the highest tests in every kind of instrumental performance and artistic activity; and the Universities taking in hand the particular standard which represents the highest culture of the mind and a broader hold of musical principles than any which can be dealt with in the schools.'

I think the above remarks by the late Oxford Professor of Music help to clear the air in this discussion.—Yours, &c., G. SYDENHAM HOLMES.

26, Whitworth Road, S.E.25.

[We are unable to insert the numerous letters we have received on the diploma question. We are sorry for this, because several abusive attacks from the backers of bogus colleges would have provided our readers with some good light reading.—EDITOR.]

'Spinet,' a correspondent of some months ago, is asked to send his name and address. A letter awaits him at our office.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Viola player, good time-keeper, wanted to complete string quartet. Near Hammersmith.—XX, c/o Musical Times.

Pianist (gentleman) wishes to meet vocalist or instrumentalist for mutual practice. West London district.—S. H., c/o Musical Times.

Experienced accompanist wishes to meet advanced instrumentalist or vocalist. Classical work only. Also advanced pianist for two-pianoforte work.—A. V. H., 15, Hanover Park, S.E.15.

Advanced pianist (young) wishes to meet violinist or 'cellist for mutual practice. Write.—L. SUMNERS, Ivydene, Whoberley Avenue, Coventry.

Good 'cellist wanted for pianoforte-trio work. S.W. district.—A. BARTLETT, 157, Bedford Hill, S.W.12.

Lady pianist (advanced) wishes to meet good instrumentalist, either wind or string, for mutual practice of classical and modern works. N. London.—S. R., c/o Musical Times.

Lady vocalist, L.R.A.M., wishes to meet pianist for mutual practice. Must be good sight-reader. Evenings.—N. ROBINSON, 14, Belsize Crescent, N.W.3.

Pianist (lady) wishes to meet violinist or 'cellist for mutual practice. About two evenings weekly. Richmond, Isleworth, or Hounslow districts.—BILLINGTON, Silver Hall, Isleworth.

Pianist (lady) wishes to meet instrumentalist or vocalist, or would join quartet, trio, or small orchestra. Newcastle-on-Tyne district.—M. T., c/o Musical Times.

Lady vocalist wishes to meet pianist for mutual practice. Classical music. W. London.—M. K., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist wishes to meet accompanist for mutual practice, in London area.—A. E., c/o Musical Times.

Lady pianist wishes to meet vocalist for mutual practice.—B. D., c/o 287, High Street, Lewisham, S.E.13.

Lady pianist (advanced) wishes to meet soprano or violinist for mutual practice. Evenings only. Tufnell Park district.—E. E. C., c/o Musical Times.

Sharps and Flats

There is nothing of magic in the word 'creator.' It cannot be a function of the [Board of Trade Inquiry] Committee to inquire which is the greatest of, say—the composer of the 'Eroica' Symphony, the inventor of electrical recording, or the gifted author of 'Yes, we have no bananas.' I take off my hat to the first, I would like to be a client of the second, and I should like to hang the third.'—Rudolph Muntz. K.C.

A gramophone is a parody of music—a fair substitute, just as water is a substitute for strong drink. I wouldn't take one as a gift.—Judge Cluer.

In the good old days [of Grand Opera], when the late Lady Ripon's voice reigned almost supreme at Covent Garden, no lady of note or fashion would dare appear among that notable audience unless she was suitably gowned and wearing her finest jewels. Even her perfectly gloved hands lent an air of distinction to the proceedings. What gentleman would dare face the opera, except in evening tail-coat and white tie?

Now, alas! . . .—'Goodwisher,' in 'The Times.'

The name of Tom Burke is so commonplace that when the Press lately published a list of the singers for the season it was overlooked. So in future I propose to be known as Tomascovitch Bukalliapin. This may lead to the incredible situation of an English singer being taken as seriously as a foreign singer.—Tom Burke.

On Wednesday, in the Parish Church, the Choral Society will give a performance of Mozart's 'Twelfth Night.'—Local Paper.

There is an indescribable loveliness in Handel's 'Largo': words may seek to capture it, but may never hope for success. In exquisite waves the melody pulsated through the stillness. It seemed as if even Nature's turbulent heart had been softened by the perfect strains, for ere they died away a fugitive sunbeam stole in through the stained glass window and danced on the floor in the aisle.—Scottish paper's report of an organ recital.

Sir Hubert Parry has just composed a musical accompaniment for Oxford's Greek play, which contains a motor-horn as an integral instrument in the orchestra for the first time.—Sunday Graphic.

'Mr. M——'s part in the orchestra playing the double ass, contributed largely to the success of that part of the entertainment.'—New Zealand Paper.

We always like to hear people playing the buffoon. It is our favourite instrument.—Punch.

OCH HONE!

Later he gave a much appreciated interpretation of the 'Ave Maria,' his double stropping being very clean.—Berkshire Paper.

We should like to hear him in something from 'Il Barbiere.'—Punch.

I have had my hair cut!—Pachmann.

Sixty Years Ago

TO THE MUSICAL WORLD.—REQUIRED an ENGAGEMENT, or Engagements, for a CHILD, a really splendid Pianist. Has never played in public, therefore would be a novelty. Address, Amy, 378, City Road, Islington.

'The Bright and Morning Star.' Anthem for Epiphany. The music composed by the Rev. Edward Husband.

As for the anthem, 'The Bright and Morning Star,' we are puzzled what to say of it; a work altogether so strange and so original, never before came under our notice. The apparent ease with which half the rules in harmony, and all the laws of construction, are utterly set at defiance, is a matter which excites our wonder and admiration. . . . It would be impossible to do justice to this remarkable effusion, in a notice like the present, without the aid of music-type; and, wanting that, we can only say in all seriousness, that Mr. Husband should remember that the mere fact of writing an anthem is nothing unless the anthem be a good one; and the production of a hundred bad anthems would be less creditable to a man than one good hymn-tune.

GREENOCK.—The Trustees of the Wesleyan Chapel, Ardgowan Street, having made arrangements for the introduction of a harmonium to lead the psalmody of the congregation, an inaugural service of sacred music lately took place in the Chapel.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

The summer term began on Monday, April 30. It is very satisfactory to record the continued success of the Haydn String Quartet afternoons. The four young women, all pupils of Mr. Lionel Tertis—Miss McDonald, Miss Ryerson, Miss Copperwheat, and Miss Mulholland—who started last September to play the complete set of Haydn's Quartets, eighty-three in number, are well on their way to accomplish their aim, and this term will see the end of this great adventure. On Thursday, May 3, they played Op. 55, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, and an excellent performance they gave. They will play the remaining Quartets on the following Thursdays, June 7, 14, 21, and 28, and the public will be well advised to hear some of these interesting concerts.

At the Worshipful Company of Musicians' Dinner, on April 24, the programme consisted entirely of music composed by old students of the Royal Academy, and it was admirably performed by present students. On June 15 a concert of more than usual interest will be given at Æolian Hall, the entire proceeds being devoted to the Students' Aid Fund. The three items of the programme are a new Quartet by J. B. McEwen, Principal of the Royal Academy, which will be broadcast; the Pianoforte Quintet by Arnold Bax, an old R.A.M. student, with Miss Harriet Cohen at the pianoforte; and the Horn Quintet by York Bowen, also an old student, in which Mr. E. A. Chapman will be the horn player. On this occasion the work will be heard for the second time. The other artists at this concert will be the Virtuoso String Quartet.

Mr. Lionel Tertis, the famous viola player, has recently become possessed of a wonderful and, indeed, unique viola. It was in the well-known collection of Silvestre, of Paris, and was made by the great master, Gasparo da Salo, about 1590. It is intact, and in absolutely perfect condition. Mr. Tertis accounts for this by its large size, the body being 17⅞-in. in length, which must have prevented the ordinary run of people from playing it. The original pegs and small fingerboard are also in Mr. Tertis's possession, and he tells me that without any hesitation he considers it the finest viola in existence. It is well known to European and American connoisseurs, and many attempts have been made to buy it. Mr. Tertis is to be congratulated on his acquisition.

The annual operatic week at the New Scala Theatre will begin on Monday, July 9, when the following operas will be presented: Monday and Friday, July 9 and 13, 'Carmen'; Tuesday and Thursday, July 10 and 12, and Saturday, July 14, 'Madame Butterfly'; Wednesday and Saturday, July 11 and 14, 'The Mastersingers.' Owing to the great success and general appreciation of the performances of 'The Mastersingers' last July, it has been decided to repeat the work this year. F.

The following award has been made: Sterndale Bennett Scholarship (any branch of music) to Arthur John O'Brien (violin) (South Africa), Wilhelm Myers Foggin being highly commended.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The summer term may well be said to have opened with its usual severity, for something more than Sir Hugh Allen's description of the sunshine of Cannes, or the sight of the white-clad players on the College tennis court, has been needed to maintain our belief in May. But a busy month of a dozen fixtures (in some of which the College has acted as host) has warmed our hearts to life again.

Besides College concerts and recitals, three performances have been given in the theatre. Not the least interesting of these was the outcome of an invitation by the Director of the Royal College to the Principal of the Royal Academy. Last term the Opera Class of the R.A.M. produced, in its own theatre, three short operas: Mozart's 'Bastien and Bastienne,' and 'The Enchanted Garden,' by Thomas F. Dunhill, and 'Savitri,' by Gustav Holst, two distinguished ex-scholars of the College. This happy combination of College composers and Academy performers suggested to Sir Hugh Allen the possibility of a performance of the works at the College, and, his invitation to Dr. McEwen and the Royal Academy Opera Class being accepted, the whole programme was repeated with great success in the College Theatre on May 17, in the presence of the Heads of the two institutions and an equally representative audience of students. Apart from the lighting and some of the scenery, the Royal Academy students were responsible for the whole production, including orchestra, chorus, and stage-management.

The countless friends of the late Dr. Tom Haigh, a former scholar of the College, who died last autumn shortly after taking up his appointment as organist of Sydney Cathedral, will be interested to learn that his name is to be kept in memory. On May 14, at Ramsgate, in the church where Dr. Haigh had worked for many years, Sir Hugh Allen unveiled a tablet to his memory, and was handed a cheque for £100, which had been raised by subscription for the purpose of founding an organ prize at the Royal College of Music.

The competition for the Kent Scholarship, which is of the value of nearly £100 a year, and is tenable for three years, produced a large number of candidates born or resident in the county. A preliminary examination was held at Canterbury, when eight candidates were selected for the final examination at the College. The result of this final examination was that the scholarship was divided between Frederick C. Riddle (violin), of Chatham, and Marjorie Smith (soprano), of Margate.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The summer term has begun well with a number of new students. The inaugural address was given by Prof. Granville Bantock. A large audience was much interested in his subject, which dealt with 'Famous Musicians.'

At the Presentation Day ceremony of the London University, on Wednesday, May 9, at the Royal Albert Hall, the College Orchestra, under Mr. Joseph Ivimey, performed a programme of music suitable to the occasion. The Vice-Chancellor has conveyed an expression of the University's appreciation.

Successful distributions at which the College was represented have taken place at Plymouth, Stroud, Woolwich, Hastings, Shields, Grimsby, Cardiff, and Merthyr Tydfil.

At Warrington, Chester, Crewe, and Wrexham centres, distributions were also held at which demonstration concerts of the College syllabus were given by scholars of the College, under the direction of Prof. J. C. Bridge, the Director of Studies, who also gave addresses.

The recital of folk-songs by Miss Winifred Holloway at the College on Wednesday, May 16, was appreciated by a large and enthusiastic audience.

Rehearsals for 'Madame Favart,' to be given by the operatic class at the Scala Theatre on July 19, 20, and 21, are in active progress.

LONDON CENTRE

The annual presentation of exhibitions, prizes, and certificates took place on Saturday morning, April 28, at Central Hall, Westminster, before a very large audience. The Mayor and Mayoress of Westminster (Councillor Jacques Abady and Mrs. Abady) distributed nearly six hundred awards. Dr. John Warriner (chairman) welcomed the Mayor and Mayoress, and alluded to the famous musical traditions of the ancient City of Westminster; also to many worthies who had done honour to their calling and, in their turn, had been honoured. The local secretary (Mr. T. Lester Jones), in his report, said it was no longer necessary to study at famous Continental music centres, or to go abroad at all for a sound musical education. It was brought to our doors. Two or three generations of musicians had accomplished the seemingly impossible. Prof. Joseph C. Bridge urged young students to provide their own music, and not to rely too much upon other forms of musical entertainment. This, although good in its way, is calculated to produce laziness. He advocated greater attention to stringed instruments and to the useful study of elocution. The Mayor of Westminster, in reply to a vote of thanks proposed by Dr. E. F. Horner and seconded by the Rev. Jocelyn Perkins, said he had always admired Trinity College for what it had done for all forms of musical education. He still treasured certificates which had been awarded to him many years ago. Musical items were efficiently performed by Miss Muriel Haste, Miss Ruby Griggs, Miss Joan Rochford, Master Emanuel Yourovsky, Miss Rosie Roffey, Master Solomon Margolofsky, and Miss Ivy Seabrook.

The College Exhibitioners at the London centre are Muriel Haste, Tooting (senior pianoforte); Irene Richards, Palmers Green (senior pianoforte); Mollie Halls, Walthamstow (inter. pianoforte); Emanuel Yourovsky, Stamford Hill (junior pianoforte); William J. W. Effer, St. John's Wood (advanced inter. theory); Barbara Tansley, Paddington (winner of H.H. Princess Helena Victoria's exhibition of six guineas, preparatory pianoforte).

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD: AWARD OF MEDALS

The following candidates gained the gold and silver medals offered by the Board for the highest and second highest honours marks respectively in the final, advanced, and intermediate grades of the Local Centre Examinations in March-April last, the competition being open to all candidates in the British Isles: Final Grade Gold Medal, Norah E. Day, Folkestone centre (pianoforte); Final Grade Silver Medal, Nancy Russell-Davies, London centre (pianoforte); Advanced Grade Gold Medal, Megan Lloyd, Cardiff centre (violoncello); Advanced Grade Silver Medal, Kathleen Wilson, Middlesbrough centre (pianoforte); Intermediate Grade Gold Medal, Joan C. Tribe, Blackheath centre (pianoforte), and Elspeth M. C. Swanson, Enfield centre (violin) (these two candidates gained an equal number of marks); Intermediate Grade Silver Medal, Grace B. Davenport, Manchester centre (pianoforte).

PARRY'S 'JUDITH' AT ALTON

An enterprise of the past month which deserves record for its unusual character and the courage with which it was carried through was Miss Susan Lushington's two performances at Alton, on May 2, of Parry's oratorio 'Judith.' Following a plan which has been applied to some of Handel's oratorios (Miss Lushington herself gave 'Theodora' on the stage a year or so ago), 'Judith' was treated as an opera and given by a village company of singers in costume and with action. The majority of the choir of the Alton and District Choral Societies were not on the stage, but were seated with the orchestra. Their co-operation with those who took part in the action, who appeared as the worshippers of Moloch, as the captive Jews, and other participants in the drama, was one of the best managed features of the whole production. At the same time it should be said that we are now learning to expect a high standard of choral singing from village and small town choirs, and that in some of Parry's expansive choruses the quality of tone, intonation, and general style of interpretation fell below expectation. One must not expect too much from amateur solo singers in such music as this. The wonder lay in the way the representatives of the several personages grasped the character of their parts, and succeeded in compassing the music in spite of elementary vocal defects. Mrs. Otto Lund, who sang the difficult part of Judith, was the most conspicuously successful in this. She made a beautiful and dignified figure on the stage, and she managed somehow to get her voice round the tremendous phrases culminating in the entry on the high B flat, 'Ho! ye upon the walls,' which was originally designed for the grand manner of Anna Williams. The one professional importation, Mr. Helmar Fernback, a young tenor from the R.C.M., was considerably less near to his original (Edward Lloyd) in the music of Manasseh, but the vacillating weakness of that monarch is distressingly emphasised when he is put on the stage. An oratorio tenor may begin amidst human sacrifices and end with pious ejaculations. He may sit down after each number, but the stage representative has got to stand there and maintain the part. It is in the music of Manasseh that the oratorio is least adaptable to stage treatment. The little scene of the children with their mother, including the appealing ballad, 'Long since in Egypt's plenteous land,' was quite delightful, and was pleasantly sung by Miss Nora Selby and two children unnamed but well trained. But the strongest justification of the whole enterprise was that it brought a large number of people together to work at and enjoy a fine and generally neglected work. The whole was splendidly held together by the untiring energy of Miss Susan Lushington, who not only has all the enthusiasm and musicianship needed for such a task, but is that rare thing amongst women, a born conductor.

X.

ORGANISTS' LONG SERVICE ROLL OF HONOUR

Acting on the Editor's kind invitation, I propose giving in the Musical Times an 'Organists' Roll of Honour,' in which will be inscribed, in alphabetical order, the names of musicians, past and present, who have held, or happily are still holding, the same organ appointment—ecclesiastical or otherwise—for forty years in unbroken continuity.

Greatly assisted by my friend Mr. John E. West's invaluable book on 'Cathedral Organists,' of which a new and revised edition has recently been issued by Messrs. Novello, I begin this Roll with a list of organists who have held Cathedral or Collegiate appointments for the long period specified. Death, resignation, change of post, or other causes obviously exclude from so limited a list such honoured names as those of Henry Purcell, Orlando Gibbons, Maurice Greene, William Boyce, S. S. Wesley, John Goss, John Stainer, George C. Martin, J. Varley Roberts, and many others; but the names here given may truly be said to epitomise the progress of English Church music from Reformation times onward to the present day.

I shall be glad to receive, at the address given below, further names of organists who have fulfilled the conditions laid down. Letters or postcards giving such particulars, should reach me not later than the end of the first week in each month. — Dr. C. W. Pearce, 'The Paddocks,' Ferndown, Wimborne, Dorset.

LIST I.—CATHEDRAL AND COLLEGIATE ORGANISTS

| No. | Name | Appointment | Years of Tenure |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Armes, Philip, Mus.D., Oxon., Prof. Mus., Dunelm. | Durham Cathedral, 1862-1907 | 45 |
| 2 | Atkins, Robert Augustus | St. Asaph Cathedral, 1834-89 | 55 |
| 3 | Attwood, Thomas | (1) Organist, St. Paul's Cathedral; (2) Composer, Chapel Royal (held conjunctly), 1796-1838 | 42 |
| 4 | Banks, Ralph | Rochester Cathedral, 1790-1841 | 51 |
| 5 | Bates, Frank, Mus.D., Dublin | Norwich Cathedral, 1886-1928 | 42 |
| 6 | Bates, George | Ripon Cathedral, 1829-73 | 44 |
| 7 | Bevin, Elway | Bristol Cathedral, 1589-1637 | 43 |
| 8 | Bishop, John | Winchester College, 1695—1737 | 42 |
| 9 | Bridge, Sir Frederick, C.V.O., M.A., Dunelm., Mus.D., Oxon., King Edward Prof. Mus., Lond. | Westminster Abbey, 1875-1918 | 43 |
| 10 | Bridge, Joseph Cox, F.S.A., M.A., Mus.D., Oxon. et Dunelm., Prof. Mus., Dunelm. | Chester Cathedral, 1877-1925 | 48 |
| 11 | Buck, Zechariah, Mus.D., Cantuar. | Norwich Cathedral, 1819-77 | 58 |
| 12 | Byrd (or Bird), William | Chapel Royal, Whitehall, 1572-1623 | 51 |
| 13 | Camidge, John | York Minster, 1756-1803 | 47 |
| 14 | Camidge, Matthew (son of preceding) | York Minster, 1803-44 | 41 |
| 15 | Capell, Thomas | Chichester Cathedral, 1744-94 | 50 |
| 16 | Chard, George William, Mus.D., Cantab. | Winchester Cathedral, 1802-49 | 47 |
| 17 | Child, William, Mus.D., Oxon. | (1) Chapel Royal; (2) St. George's, Windsor (held conjointly), 1632-97 | 65 |
| 18 | Church, Richard | New College, Oxford, 1732-76 | 44 |
| 19 | Collinson, Thomas Henry, Mus.B., Oxon. | St. Mary's Cathedral, Edinburgh, 1878-1928 | 50 |
| 20 | Corfe, Arthur Thomas | Salisbury Cathedral, 1804-63 | 59 |
| 21 | Corfe, John Davis (son of preceding) | Bristol Cathedral, 1825-76 | 51 |
| 22 | Done, William, Mus.D., Cantuar. | Worcester Cathedral, 1844-95 | 51 |
| 23 | Ebdon, Thomas | Durham Cathedral, 1763-1811 | 48 |
| 24 | Elvey, Sir George Job, Mus.D., Oxon. | St. George's, Windsor, 1835-82 | 47 |
| 25 | Ford, Henry Edward, Mus.D., Cantuar. | Carlisle Cathedral, 1842-1909 | 67 |
| 26 | Frye, Frederick Robert, Mus.B., Cantab. | Chelmsford Cathedral, 1876 (at present) | 52 |
| 27 | Fuller, Richard | Limerick Cathedral, 1601-42 | 41 |
| 28 | Garland, Thomas | Norwich Cathedral, 1749-1808 | 59 |
| 29 | Garrett, George Mursell, M.A., Mus.D., Cantab. | St. John's College, Cambridge, 1857-97 | 40 |
| 30 | Gerard (Gerrard or Jarred), Alexander | St. Asaph Cathedral, 1694-1738 | 44 |
| 31 | Gerard, John (son of preceding) | St. Asaph Cathedral, 1738-79 | 41 |
| 32 | Hancock, Charles, Mus.B., Oxon. | Leicester Cathedral (St. Martin's), 1875-1927 | 52 |
| 33 | Hardy, Joseph Naylor, Mus.B., Dunelm. | Wakefield Cathedral, 1886 (at present) | 42 |
| 34 | Hawkins, James (senior) | Ely Cathedral, 1682-1729 | 47 |
| 35 | Hawkins, James (junior) | Peterborough Cathedral, 1714-59 | 45 |
| 36 | Hayden, Henry | St. Asaph Cathedral, 1794-1834 | 40 |
| 37 | Hayes, William, Mus.D., Oxon. | Magdalen College, Oxford, 1734-77 | 43 |
| 38 | Heather, Stephen | Eton College, 1788-1831 | 43 |
| 39 | Henman, Richard | Exeter Cathedral, 1694-1741 | 47 |
| 40 | Hesletine, James | (1) Durham Cathedral; (2) St. Katherine's Collegiate Church, by the Tower of London (held conjointly), 1710-63 | 53 |
| 41 | Hill, Thomas | Carlisle Cathedral, 1785-1833 | 48 |
| 42 | Hopkins, Edward John, Mus.D., Cantuar. | Temple Church, London, 1843-98 | 55 |
| 43 | Hopkins, John, F.R.C.O. | Rochester Cathedral, 1856-1900 | 44 |
| 44 | Iliffe, Frederick, Mus.D., Oxon. | St. John's College, Oxford, 1883-1928 | 45 |
| 45 | Isaac, Elias | Worcester Cathedral, 1748-93 | 45 |
| 46 | Jones, John | (1) St. Paul's Cathedral, 1755-96(2) Temple Church, London, 1749-96(3) Charterhouse, London, 1753-96 (all three held conjointly) | 414743 |
| 47 | Jones, Thomas Evance | Canterbury Cathedral, 1831-72 | 41 |
| 48 | Keeton, Haydn, Mus.D., Oxon. | Peterborough Cathedral, 1870-1921 | 51 |
| 49 | Loosemore, Henry, Mus.B., Cantab. | King's College, Cambridge, 1627-70 | 43 |
| 50 | Lott, John Browning, Mus.B., Oxon. | Lichfield Cathedral, 1881-1926 | 45 |

LIST I.—CATHEDRAL AND COLLEGIATE ORGANISTS—(continued)

| No. | Name | Appointment | Years of Tenure |
|---|---|---|---|
| 51 | Mann, Arthur Henry, Mus.D., Oxon., M.A., Cantab. | King's College, Cambridge, 1876 ... (at present) | 52 |
| 52 | Marchant, Charles George, Mus.D., Dublin ... | St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, 1879-1920 ... | 41 |
| 53 | Marks, James Christopher, Mus.D., Oxon. ... | St. Fin Barre's Cathedral, Cork, 1860-1903 ... | 43 |
| 54 | Marks, Thomas Osborne, Mus.D., Oxon. et Dublin | Armagh Cathedral, 1872-1916 ... ... ... | 44 |
| 55 | Merbecke (Merbeck or Marbeck), John, Mus.B., Oxon. ... ... ... ... ... ... | St. George's, Windsor, 1541-1585 ... ... ... | 44 |
| 56 | Mundy (Munday or Mundie), John, Mus.D., Oxon. | St. George's, Windsor, 1586-1630 ... ... ... | 44 |
| 57 | Muspratt, Frank ... ... ... ... ... ... | Limerick Cathedral, 1885-1928 ... (at present) | 43 |
| 58 | Mutlow, William ... ... ... ... ... ... | Gloucester Cathedral, 1782-1832 ... ... ... | 50 |
| 59 | Nicholson, Richard ... ... ... ... ... | Magdalen College, Oxford, 1595-1639 ... ... | 44 |
| 60 | Parratt, Sir Walter, M.A., Mus.D., and Prof. Mus. Oxon. ... ... ... ... ... ... | St. George's, Windsor, 1882-1924 ... ... ... | 42 |
| 61 | Perkins, William ... ... ... ... ... | Wells Cathedral, 1819-60 ... ... ... ... | 41 |
| 62 | Phillips, Matthew ... ... ... ... ... | St. David's Cathedral, 1730-82 ... ... ... | 52 |
| 63 | Porter, Samuel ... ... ... ... ... | Canterbury Cathedral, 1757-1803 ... ... ... | 46 |
| 64 | Pratt, John ... ... ... ... ... ... | King's College, Cambridge, 1799-1855 ... ... | 56 |
| 65 | Pring, Joseph, Mus.D., Oxon. ... ... ... | Bangor Cathedral, 1793-1842 ... ... ... | 49 |
| 66 | Randall, John, Mus.D., and Prof. Mus., Cantab. | King's College, Cambridge, 1743-99 ... ... | 56 |
| 67 | Reading, John ... ... ... ... ... ... | Chichester Cathedral, 1674-1720 ... ... ... | 46 |
| 68 | Rogers, Brendan J. ... ... ... ... ... | Dublin (R.C.) Pro-Cathedral, 1882-1928 (at present) | 46 |
| 69 | Rogers, Frederick Handel ... ... ... ... | Limerick Cathedral, 1835-85 ... ... ... | 50 |
| 70 | Simms, Edward ... ... ... ... ... | Coventry Cathedral (St. Michael's), 1828-86 ... | 58 |
| 71 | Skelton, George ... ... ... ... ... | Lincoln Cathedral, 1794-1850 ... ... ... | 56 |
| 72 | Smart, Sir George Thomas ... ... ... ... | Chapel Royal, 1822-67 ... ... ... ... | 45 |
| 73 | Smyth, William ... ... ... ... ... | St. Fin Barre's Cathedral, Cork, 1720-81 ... ... | 61 |
| 74 | Spofforth Samuel ... ... ... ... ... | Lichfield Cathedral, 1807-64 ... ... ... ... | 57 |
| 75 | Spofforth, Thomas (uncle of preceding) ... ... | Southwell Cathedral, 1764-1818 ... ... ... | 54 |
| 76 | Stanley, Charles John, Mus.B., Oxon. (blind) | (1) St. Andrew's, Holborn, 1726-86 ... ... | 60 |
| | | (2) Temple Church, London, 1734-86 ... ... | 52 |
| 77 | Stephens, James Brealsford ... ... ... ... | St. Fin Barre's Cathedral, Cork, 1811-60 ... ... | 49 |
| 78 | Stewart, Sir Robert Prescott, Mus.D., Dublin ... | (1) Trinity College, Dublin; (2) Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin (held conjointly), 1844-94 ... | 50 |
| 79 | Sudlow, William ... ... ... ... ... | Manchester Cathedral, 1804-48 ... ... ... | 44 |
| 80 | Tallis (or Tallys), Thomas ... ... ... ... | Chapel Royal, 1545-1585 ... ... ... ... | 40 |
| 81 | Tudway, Thomas, Mus. D., and Prof. Mus., Cantab. | King's College, Cambridge, 1670-1726 ... ... | 56 |
| 82 | Turle, James ... ... ... ... ... ... | Westminster Abbey, 1831-82 ... ... ... | 51 |
| 83 | Turle, Robert (brother of preceding) ... ... | Armagh Cathedral, 1823-72 ... ... ... ... | 49 |
| 84 | Vicary, Walter, Mus.B., Oxon. ... ... ... | Magdalen College, Oxford, 1797-1845 ... ... | 48 |
| 85 | Wood, Daniel Joseph, Mus.D., Cantuar. ... ... | Exeter Cathedral, 1876-1919 ... ... ... | 43 |
| 86 | Young, John Matthew Wilson ... ... ... | Lincoln Cathedral, 1850-95 ... ... ... ... | 45 |

C. W. PEARCE.

MUSIC IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Among recent public school activities two features of unusual interest are to be noted: the organization, at Cheltenham, of a series of orchestral concerts (by the City of Birmingham Orchestra), largely under the auspices of the Ladies' College, Cheltenham College, and Dean Close School; and the visit to Harrow of members of the Eton College Musical Society, this latter event being probably the first of its kind.

ABERDEEN (Robert Gordon's Colleges).—The annual concert, in February, had in its programme unison songs for trebles, basses, and massed voices; a chorus from Bach's 'Peasant' Cantata, and the slow movement of the Bach Concerto for two violins, in D minor. The orchestra accompanied all the songs, and played movements by Bach, Haydn, Schumann, and Mozart (Sinfonietta in D), and a March by Mr. Kimberley Smith, who conducted.

BRADFIELD.—The Musical Club concerts included a song recital by Mr. Owen Bryngwyn, a violin recital by Miss Marie Wilson, Octets by Mendelssohn and Svendsen, and a concert by the School Orchestra with songs by the audience. The programme of the annual orchestral concert, conducted by Mr. D. G. A. Fox, contained Schubert's C major Symphony, the Overture to 'Prince Igor,' and the 'Danse Macabre.' House competitions (instrumental and vocal combined) were judged by Prof. P. C. Buck. Rehearsals for the Greek play ('Rhesus') have been in progress throughout the term; the music to be used was composed by Dr. Ernest Walker for the O.U.D.S. performance in 1923.

BRUTON (King's School).—The programme of the Musical Society's Easter concert was partly operatic (the excerpts ranging from Handel to Sullivan), partly miscellaneous. Mr. N. W. Newell conducted. Charles Wood's 'Passion according to St. Mark' was given in Bruton Parish Church; and the house competitions, vocal and instrumental, were judged by the Rev. A. H. Peppin. Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas' is to be given during the summer.

CANFORD.—During the term there have been concerts of orchestral and chamber music. Mr. Plunket Greene gave a recital on March 21, with Mr. Liddle at the pianoforte. The choir sang Handel's 'Passion' on the last Sunday of term, when all the soloists, with one exception, were members of the School. Programmes of community singing have been conducted by Mr. S. B. Leonard.

CHELTENHAM (Dean Close).—At the end-of-term concert, which was almost entirely devoted to Schubert, the orchestra played the Ballet Music from 'Rosamunde' and the Military March; the Choral Society and a vocal quartet sang several of the songs in Dr. Bairstow's arrangements; the Violin Sonata in D and several pianoforte solos were played by boys; and the senior members of the Choral Society sang Jerrard Wilkinson's Choric Song for T.T.B.B. Mr. Heller Nicholls conducted. The outstanding Sunday concert of the term was a violin and pianoforte recital by Miss Marie Hall and Miss Dorothy Williams. The concerts by the Birmingham Orchestra are mentioned above.

CHIGWELL.—On March 3 a series of Trios was performed (Mendelssohn in D minor, Haydn, Gade, Quilter, and Bridge). Haydn's 'Creation' (Parts 1 and 2) was given in the School Chapel with organ and orchestral accompaniment. Masters took the male soloist parts, and Mr. H. S. Denton conducted.

ETON.—The principal events of the Lent term have been four organ recitals by Dr. Ley; Charles Wood's 'Passion according to St. Mark' (the College Choir); the Mass in B minor and the 'St. Matthew' Passion (the Windsor and Eton Choral Society), the latter in the College Chapel; a concert by the Guildford Orchestra, under Mr. Claude Powell; the concert given by boys of Eton College at Harrow; and the School concert. At this, Walford Davies's 'Three Jovial Huntsmen' was conducted by the composer; vocal quartets, songs, and part-songs were sung, and the orchestra played Haydn's Symphony in C (No. 7), and works by Schubert, Sibelius, and Edward German. Dr. Ley conducted.

FETTES.—There have been three Sunday concerts—a folk-song recital by Mr. Steuart Wilson, a song recital by Miss Joan Elwes, and a chamber concert, at which the Haydn String Quartet in E flat was played by boys. At a violin and pianoforte recital by Miss Marjorie Hayward and Mr. A. W. Dace the Franck Sonata was played, and the E major Concerto of Bach was accompanied by 'school' strings. The programme of the School concert included Parry's 'Ode to Music,' Thomas Wood's 'Master Mariners,' the Choral Dances from 'Prince Igor,' Trumpet Tunes by Purcell, part of Mozart's Clarinet Concerto, and a movement from the Bach Concerto for two violins in D minor. Mr. H. M. Havergal conducted, and all the soloists were boys in the School.

GIGGLESWICK.—There have been two concerts arranged by the Boys' Music Committee and one by the Shipton Permanent Orchestra, conducted by Mr. T. A. Davies, the programme including the 'Ruy Blas' and 'Magic Flute' Overtures. The Grail Scene from 'Parsifal' was sung in Chapel on Good Friday. The music competition was judged by Mr. Gill, a former music-master. The end-of-term concert had in its programme Holst's 'Bring us in good ale,' songs by Schubert, Berlioz's 'Marche Hongroise,' and part of Coleridge-Taylor's 'Othello' Suite.

HARROW.—The programme of the concert given by the Eton College Musical Society, to which reference is made at the head of these notes, contained movements from Mozart's Trio in E flat for pianoforte, violin, and viola; a Loeillet Sonata for flute and pianoforte; the Larghetto from Dvořák's Terzetto (for two violins and viola); a Veracini Sonata for two flutes; the first movement of the Schumann Pianoforte Quintet; and part-songs by Waelrant, Wood, Vaughan Williams, and Ravenscroft.

MALVERN.—The term's music included a programme of Wagner transcriptions for pianoforte (four and eight hands), with Miss Bertha Steventon and Mr. Peter Howard as soloists; a concert by the Cathedral Male-Voice Quartet; community singing; and a (stage) performance of 'Trial by Jury,' with a chorus of sixty, accompanied by the College Orchestra, conducted by Mr. F. H. Shera.

MARLBOROUGH.—The musical competitions were judged by Dr. R. S. Thatcher (Harrow). The list of events comprised pianoforte solos, house glees, solo singing, duets for two pianofortes, pianoforte sight-reading, solos for wood-wind, brass, strings, and organ; instrumental ensembles, and composition, vocal and instrumental.

OUNDLE.—A concert was given by the City of Birmingham Orchestra, conducted by Dr. Adrian Boult and Mr. C. M. Spurling. The programme consisted of Schubert's C major Symphony, the 'Casse-Noisette' and 'L'Arlésienne' Suites, the 'Hebrides' Overture, and the usual excerpt from Act 3 of 'The Mastersingers.'

RUGBY.—The School Orchestra's concert, conducted by Mr. K. A. Stubbs, included the 'Ruy Blas' Overture and works by Grieg, Tchaikovsky, and Brahms; with a movement of the Brahms Pianoforte Quintet and songs by Schubert. The band concert, conducted by Mr. H. W. Pearce, contained Vaughan Williams's 'Somerset Folk-Tunes,' the 'Tannhäuser' Overture, and items by Boccherini and Sullivan. A movement from Mozart's Horn Concerto in E flat, a Schumann 'Fantasiestück' for clarinet and pianoforte, and Haydn's Octet for wood-wind, were also played.

ST. PAUL'S.—The programme of a chamber concert included the Haydn Concerto in C, Preludes by Chopin and by Harold Darke (for organ), and a group of Sea Shanties with chorus. At the end-of-term concert the Musical Society sang Elgar's 'Banner of St. George,' under Mr. H. E. Wilson, the remainder of the programme being miscellaneous.

WELLINGTON.—The term's performances have been as follow: chamber concerts by the students of Reading University and the Virtuoso Quartet, with Mr. W. K. Stanton at the pianoforte; recitals by the Misses Ita Cope and Jean Duncan, and by Mr. Steuart Wilson; a concert by the School Orchestra (Schubert's Symphony in B flat, the 'Zauberflöte' Overture, Holst's 'Marching Song,' Dyson's Suite for flute and strings, and two horn solos); and the Mozart 'Requiem' in the College Chapel, both under Mr. W. K. Stanton. The competitions were judged by Dr. W. G. Alcock.

WESTMINSTER.—Recitals have been given by Messrs. Leslie Heward and Arnold Goldsbrough (works for two pianofortes); Mr. Steuart Wilson (songs); Miss Gertrude Newsham and Mrs. Thornton Lofthouse, with Mr. Lofthouse at the pianoforte (works for two violins). Mr. Bernard Shore and Mr. Ambrose Gauntlett have given lecture-recitals dealing respectively with the viola and 'cello. The programme of an informal concert contained, amongst other things, one of the Beethoven 'Æquali' for brass; movements for the C major Concerto of Bach for two pianofortes, and from the 'Brandenburg' Concerto in D; and a Fugue by F. D. Kidner, played by the composer. F. H. S.

SOME PROBLEMS IN THE PERFORMANCE OF BACH'S CHURCH CANTATAS

This was the subject of a paper by Dr. W. G. Whittaker at the meeting of the Musical Association held at Central Hall, Westminster, on January 10. The lecturer said that there were three fruitful sources of error with regard to these problems. One was that many conductors proceeded from a work like the B minor Mass to the Church Cantatas, instead of in the reverse direction, and so got a wrong angle of vision. Secondly, it was customary to try to adapt Bach to our modern conditions; and, thirdly, there had been a tendency to regard Bach as a crude and erring orchestrator, and to think that his works were palatable only when modernised.

One of the main troubles was that we began to perform Bach when we had become accustomed to big choral societies, and when our sole idea of a choral work was that it should be performed by a battalion of two hundred and fifty to four hundred voices, with an orchestra of forty-five to sixty. We should see the absurdity of the situation if we took the Cantata 'Actus Tragicus.' Its scoring was the most exquisite that could be imagined: two flutes, two viole da gamba, and continuo. How was it possible to give any idea of this subtle scheme if we had a choir of three hundred? As the choir was there it must be used, and conductors, overlooking the fact that the choice of orchestra was just as important a factor in the scheme as the chorus, re-scored for modern forces, and so lost the value of this side of the work.

It must be emphatically stated that the majority of the Cantatas were only suitable for performance with a small choir. That did not mean that our large choral societies must renounce these works altogether, but it did mean that care must be taken in selection. There were plenty of works on a big scale in which an ordinary concert orchestra could be adapted to the necessary requirements without very much trouble, but it was essential that if wind instruments were required they should be increased in proportion to the number of strings. Unless we carefully calculated the balance between choir and orchestra it was utterly impossible to give even a passable performance of the majority of these works. Bach had a marvellous power of surviving even the most appalling desecrations to which his music had been submitted. It sounded well under almost any conditions, but it was often performed in ways which falsified all his principles, and led Bach to be regarded frequently as an out-of-date composer who had to be furbished up before we superior moderns could put up with him.

The choice of suitable soloists was often difficult. Bach wrote for the particular voice he had in his choir at the time, using all its possibilities to the utmost. At one time there would be a high soprano, at another a low one; at yet another a singer whose middle notes were the best. It was not right to expect any one soprano to sing well the arias written for all these voices. There were few professional singers who were qualified mentally and musically to do Bach's recitatives and arias justice. They drawled out the recitatives, singing them with what they called 'expression.' They should be sung quickly, as if the words were being read in the ordinary way. Strict tempo should be observed as much as possible. Many singers thought that a recitative was an opportunity for destroying time and rhythm. Rubato was certainly permissible; but if it was impossible for the conductor to beat four in a bar, the recitatives lost their point.

Many vocalists sang arias without any thought of any one but themselves. They were concerned with the charms of their own voices, and considered only their own line. One result was that arias were almost invariably taken too slowly. In a great many cases the tempo of the aria must be settled by the instrumental portion, not the vocal. In nine cases out of ten that was the key to the solution. Generally speaking, we found Bach's solo vocal music most satisfactory when sung by the semi-amateur who combined intelligence and enthusiasm with willingness to be taught.

According to the article on 'Orchestration' in the new 'Grove,' 'neither to Bach nor to Handel was the art of the orchestra indebted for signs of development. To them the function of the orchestra was accompaniment for the most part.' These were utterly inaccurate statements. If the orchestra was a mere matter of accompaniment, why did Bach write the Overtures and 'Brandenburg' Concertos, and why did he put so many Sinfonias into his Church Cantatas? The orchestra was one of the chief factors in Bach's scheme of things. It was impossible to imagine his vocal works without the colour thus obtained. In the Church Cantatas alone there were a hundred and forty-three different orchestras demanded, and each of these furnished several different groupings in the Cantata to which it belonged. It was very rarely that within the limits of one Cantata the same orchestral combination was used twice, except where large choruses demanded the employment of all forces. How could it be said that a man who used so many hundreds of different combinations did nothing to advance orchestration? He was untiring in his life-long search for variety of colour. Bach thought just as much in terms of his orchestra as did Richard Wagner. It was because we had dealt sacrilegiously with his works that we had not discovered the charm in this direction. Conductors seemed to become possessed of an itch for arrangement directly they decided to perform a Bach Church Cantata. The more clearly we kept to Bach's scoring the more beautiful were the results, and the nearer we got to the spirit. No doubt there were miscalculations, but was there any composer of orchestral music who had not made miscalculations?

We must give up the idea that Bach had no sense of orchestration, and that we must re-arrange everything. We must try to find out by a close study of the scores as a whole what his underlying principles were, and perform his works accordingly. It was surely illogical to acknowledge Bach's supremacy in harmonic and contrapuntal writing, his nobility and expressiveness of ideas, and then to assume that he did not know his job of writing for his orchestra, when for a matter of forty years of his life he was in constant contact with instrumental forces, and for twenty-seven years he gave performances of works for choir and orchestra averaging more than one a week. His ideas of balance were not ours, and it was necessary to consider his point of view. For example, in 'Sleepers, wake,' an important feature of the opening number was the antiphonal treatment of strings against two oboes and taille. As one heard it often to-day, with eight or ten first violins and a corresponding proportion of other strings, answered by two oboes and cors anglais, it sounded absurd. With the composer, it was evident that the two forces were equal.

After dealing in detail with the differences between modern instruments and those of Bach's time, the lecturer referred to a statement in the new 'Grove' (s.v. 'Orchestration'): 'If some of Bach's flute passages are unplayable on the modern model, with Boehm's principle, they would have been the more impossible on the contemporary instrument.' There was, on the contrary, not a single passage which could not be played by a good amateur. It was difficult to know why such a statement was made at all. Another was as follows: 'The task for all the wood-wind group was to play the notes and keep in tune; expression and delicacy of phrasing were an after-thought.' An examination of the Flute Sonatas of Bach, particularly that in B minor, and of the flute parts in the Cantatas, was sufficient refutation.

The violin of Bach's time was a very different instrument from ours, and it was difficult to keep our strings generally soft enough to let the voices come through. The oboe played a large part in these works. Both Bach and Handel were very fond of that reedy quality of tone with which we to-day were not so much enamoured. Yet when we got accustomed to it there was a considerable charm which we would not readily surrender. In one matter we lost enormously, and that was the rarity of the oboe d'amore. A general revival of this instrument was absolutely essential for the future. There was no comparison between the effect of the ordinary oboe and the oboe d'amore where Bach had specially written for the latter.

As regards the well-known high trumpet parts written by Bach, Dr. Whittaker said his own experience bore out what Schweitzer said, that it is possible for a man who would do a little extra practice to play these passages, and to play them sufficiently softly to blend almost perfectly with the rest of a small orchestra.

---

Later in the evening the annual dinner was held at the Criterion Restaurant, Prof. J. C. Bridge, the President of the Association, being in the chair. The speakers, in addition to the chairman, were Sir Hugh Allen, Mr. J. Swinburne, Capt. Hoby, Mr. W. W. Cobbett, and Mr. J. Stuart Archer. This being the Centenary year of Schubert's death, the composer's Trio in B flat was played by Miss Winifred Small, Miss Marie Dare, and Mr. Maurice Cole.

---

CONFERENCE ON THE BOARD OF EDUCATION'S LATEST PUBLISHED SUGGESTIONS FOR THE TEACHING OF MUSIC

Under the auspices of the Tonic Sol-fa College a Conference of music teachers and others was held at the College of Preceptors on Saturday afternoon, May 19, the chairman being Sir Henry Coward. The subject of discussion was the Board of Education's latest published Suggestions for the Teaching of Music. The Conference, which was well attended, was opened with an address by Mr. Robert McLeod, of Edinburgh, on 'The Advantages of Teaching the Staff Time System through the medium of the Sol-fa Time Notation.' With the aid of blackboard illustrations, Mr. McLeod demonstrated the facility with which the Tonic Sol-fa notation expressed those subtleties of rhythm which could not be represented in the Staff notation. Comparing the reading of music with ordinary reading, Mr. McLeod emphasised the fact that no reading is intelligible which possesses false accentuation and ludicrous punctuation, yet the Staff notation supplied to the learner no indication of those necessary and fundamental essentials. He then showed on the blackboard how superior the Sol-fa time notation was in these respects. Every Staff notationist would benefit from a study of the Sol-fa time notation, because it would necessitate his concentrating on accentual values which are constantly appearing before his eyes. In the Sol-fa time notation the child from the earliest stages has a pictorial symbol for accent and a series of these symbols for measure, the measure being of course a group of accent markings. Was it not desirable that during the early years at least we should pictorially represent a factor which really makes music? By using the Sol-fa time notation we make music reading a very definite, conscious act, and are laying the foundation of a definite consciousness of musical phraseology. The longer he taught, the longer he was impressed with the value of the Sol-fa time notation as an aid to appreciation. And since appreciation loomed so largely in the schemes of musical work nowadays, surely anything which aids appreciation should be retained. If we left our children without a knowledge of the Sol-fa time notation as a basis of appreciation and a secure basis of technique for reading, we should be removing one of the stepping-stones to higher flights in musical thought. Not only this, but we should be heading to disaster in the musical life of the nation. What would Guido d'Arezzo not have given to have invented the Sol-fa notation in its entirety a thousand years ago? He was struggling with hand-signs and Sol-fa syllables then, as John Curwen did within the memory of many still with us. Some of our academically trained teachers will laud Guido but despise his legitimate successor, John Curwen.

Mr. McLeod was followed by Mr. Arthur Stork, Superintendent of Music to the Bradford Education Authority. Mr. Stork gave a brief criticism of the recent Suggestions of the Board of Education. He praised the many good points contained therein, but strongly objected to the suggestion that the Sol-fa notation should be dropped at an early stage, and to the statement that the Sol-fa time notation need never be taught, which was only a subtle way of saying that the Sol-fa notation itself need never be taught.

Sir Henry Coward next addressed the Conference, and asked why there was this attack upon an essential and vital part of the Tonic Sol-fa method of teaching music. It was evident to him that the originator of the suggestion to scrap the Sol-fa time notation had not yet got a sub-conscious grasp of the notation and was unable to realise the benefits arising from its use. It was a case of one who did not grasp the real musical content of the Sol-fa time notation. What was the inner musical content of the notation? (1.) It developed a sense of pulsation in time through its regular spacings. (2.) It developed a keen sense of rhythm by showing strong, weak, and medium accents, which sense is so often lacking in those, even fairly accomplished, musicians who have been taught entirely on the Old notation plan. (3.) It helped to elucidate complicated rhythms. He had had the honour of conducting a great many of Bach's Cantatas, the Passions, the B minor Mass, and, coming to modern works, pretty nearly all Parry's, Bantock's, Elgar's, Vaughan Williams's, and Holst's compositions. In these there often occurred what might be termed rhythmic problems, to elucidate which he found it expedient to put the knotty points into Tonic Sol-fa notation, because he found that difficult, elusive time problems were simplified by the Sol-fa time notation, just as tune and key problems were made clear by Sol-fa note notation. (4.) It afforded the best medium for learning the rhythm names, the educational values of which none would dispute, and which he frequently used to pattern difficult phrases in advanced works. He was speaking from the elementary education angle, and as one who had conducted at least twenty thousand children annually for twenty years, although at present he conducted only about seven thousand. He had spoken of the theoretical advantages of the Tonic Sol-fa notation, but here were some facts as to the practical advantages. At the last Blackpool Festival, Mr. Dawn's choir (from one of the poorest districts of Sheffield, where some hundred and fifty children had to have dinners provided for them every day) obtained 99 per cent. of marks for sight-reading: all Tonic Sol-fa! Last Saturday week, he said, Mr. Fletcher Sykes's Huddersfield Choir, in three intricate pieces, obtained 98, 96, and 94 per cent. of marks respectively, and Prof. Bantock and Mr. Julius Harrison said they had never heard such masterly, moving readings. This was from Staff notation entirely, but he might say that practically all the singers owed their skill to being so well grounded in Tonic Sol-fa, as all Huddersfield choralists are. He gave all his instructions in Sol-fa language to his Huddersfield Choir, which sang 'Gerontius,' 'Hymn of Jesus,' &c., in Holland in Easter week, and of which the Dutch papers said they had never heard such singing on the Continent of Europe before. That confirmed his own wide experience in many competitions. The sol-faists always came out top. In face of this, the man who had to decide things must have wide views, and not be ruled by bias, because the one-track-minded Government official in any department was a national danger, as was illustrated in this present menace.

Discussion ensued, in which the principal speaker was Mr. Field Hyde, who said that reading at sight from the Staff notation was so difficult that it was only possible to more or less gifted persons; that was why there were so many professional musicians who could not read at sight. Was musical education to be adapted to meet the needs of the few or of the many? It was his experience in training-college work that when he came across a good sight-reader from the Staff-notation, it more often than not turned out on inquiry that the student had come from Bradford, in the schools of which city it was the practice to lay a solid Tonic Sol-fa foundation.

In his concluding remarks, Sir Henry Coward proposed that a memorial should be sent to the Board of Education drawing attention to the objectionable portions of the Suggestions which had been criticised that afternoon, and this was unanimously agreed to.

Letters of apology for absence from the Conference, on account of prior engagements which could not possibly be put off, were received—from Dr. John E. Borland, late Musical Adviser and Inspector to the London County Council Education Department, stating that if only the great music schools would make a thorough knowledge of Sol-fa, including both tune and time, a necessity in the early education of their students, a musical millennium might be within reach during the coming few years; from Mr. Harvey Grace, editor of the Musical Times, expressing the hope that the Tonic Sol-fa College would be able to strike a blow for a cause which he was sure was of vital importance in the musical future of the country; and from Dr. W. G. Whittaker, of Armstrong College, Newcastle-on-Tyne, characterising the campaign against the Tonic Sol-fa notation as 'most fatuous' and the objections thereto as 'merely blind unreasoning prejudice.'

COVENT GARDEN OPERA SEASON

The Covent Garden Opera season began on April 30. A new syndicate is in power this year, but Lieut.-Col. Eustace Blois is again the managing director, and the policy follows the same lines as in 1924-27.

The first three weeks were given to German opera, the works presented being 'Der Ring des Nibelungen' (two cycles), 'Tannhäuser,' 'Die Meistersinger,' and Gluck's 'Armide' (in a German translation). Such a programme makes out a very strong case for the musical value of opera. It is regrettable that prices of seats are high, ruling out many music-lovers who would wish to hear such master-pieces; but it must be remembered, first that Covent Garden for all its vast size does not hold such numbers as some of the Continental opera-houses, and, secondly, that nowhere in the world is first-class opera cheap.

Wagner's spell remains all-powerful. 'The Ring' has probably never before had such a public. Musical exquisites have passed on to other things; but to a great mass of ordinary people it represents the richest and most romantic pleasure that the art affords. The audiences at Covent Garden have been a phenomenon sufficient to kill the legend—if it were not the peculiarity of legends that they can defy all evidence—that opera in London is a fashionable fad unrelated to musical appreciation. People do not nowadays sit for four or five solid hours at a spectacle because it is 'the thing.' 'The Ring' is attended because it is enjoyed. And, if one can afford it, how natural!

It is no doubt an ill-constructed and muddle-headed elucubration—considered apart from the music. Its morality, its celebration of stupid brute force, are odious. The last night of all—always considered simply as a dramatic argument—is a terrible exposure of Wagner's grossness in its blunt cruelty, its accumulations of clumsiness, its deadness to any of the finer values. The plot of 'Götterdämmerung' has sometimes been excused because it preceded the rest of 'The Ring,' and was related rather to the old-fashioned opera librettos. But the old-fashioned opera librettos surely were inclined to an almost mechanical decency rather than to Siegfried's and Gunther's negation of chivalry.

And yet all that hardly matters, at least at present, whatever may be the effect in a few centuries of the fire of humanity's criticism. The music of 'The Ring' obliterates every other consideration. At the end one is exalted as by the contemplation of the most wonderful scenes of nature, forest, mountain, and sea; and the personages of the drama afflict us as little as the bloody but obscure warfare of the brute creation in a sublime landscape.

For this same reason, it is really unnecessary to fuss about the stage presentation of Wagner. Musical criticism, we all know, has for fifty years made much of every little paradox or mishap in Wagnerian performances. By all means let the performances be as decent as may be; but the music is so immeasurably the principal business that the other things hardly count, and after a time the Wagnerian cares little or not at all whether Brünnhilde is thin or fat so long as she can sing, whether Grane is a cab-horse or a Derby winner, whether or no we see Valhalla burnt down—always provided that the musical performance satisfies the ear.

Covent Garden is an old-fashioned theatre, which may any year be turned into a 'movie' palace or a cabbage market; and it would be absurd to expect in an opera that is performed only twice in the season the machinery of Munich, or Bayreuth, or Berlin—favoured cities whose inhabitants, having lost a war, have hundreds of thousands to spend on stage pageantry. The Covent Garden 'Ring' was decent to the eye and very gratifying to the ear.

Bruno Walter conducted. We have known his Wagner for five years—vivid, excitable, overwhelming at the crises, sometimes jerky, always alive. He had a good orchestra, which in the second cycle got well into its stride. London players know their job, as we see when they are given a chance. On the stage we had in Wilhelm Rode a superb Wotan, who sang from end to end of the immense part softly and yet powerfully, without once being raucous or seeming over-taxed. The barking Wotans of the past have gone—witness Rode, Schorr, Nissen.

Good Brünnhildes and Siegfrieds are harder to come by. The new Brünnhilde, Madame Elisabeth Ohms, had an appealing profile but not an adequate voice. In 'Siegfried' she sang badly, in 'Walküre' and 'Götterdämmerung' moderately. She has not a good method. Because a dozen or so fine singers have come from Germany lately there is a tendency to consider all German geese swans. Swans that can sing remain a rarity, and a visit to Bayreuth is enough to dispel the illusion that a miracle has happened among German vocalists. Madame Ohms was appreciated for Wagner's sake, and because she was earnest and had artistic intentions. If she does not remedy her tremulousness of tone her singing will probably soon be squawking.

Rudolf Laubenthal was the brisk, bright young Siegfried. Again, purely as a singer, he gave us small pleasure; but still there have been many worse than he. He knows the part. There were two Frickas, Madame Rosetta Anday, who was ordinary—a competent singer, apart from a wobble—and Madame Olczewska, who was distinguished. The latter's Waltraute was also as good as need be. As for Madame Lotte Lehmann's Sieglinde, it was the ideal; and Lauritz Melchior as Siegmund was at his best. Nor could the giants, Otto Helgers and Ivar Andresen, have been surpassed. Other excellent singers in this 'Ring' were the Loge (H. Clemens), Alberich (E. Habich), and Gunther (H. Janssen). The English Rhinemaidens (Miss Odette de Foras, Miss Theresa Ambrose, and Miss Gladys Palmer) were particularly good in 'Götterdämmerung,' but Miss Busby's Freia was disappointing.

'ARMIDE'

Gluck is a composer who is over-honoured in the text-books and under-honoured in practice. This German performance of his French opera left us cold. Musically, the first Act is simply null. Here was an opera that required artful aid from the producers to gloss over its insufficiencies. No doubt the best that was possible in the circumstances was done, and we were grateful for the opportunity of hearing a rare work; but nothing gripped, and the eye was displeased. The German text gave the opera a show of earnestness which there was nothing to support. The story of the siren and the crusader was neither quaint nor yet serious—the siren being a particularly homely German one, Madame Frida Leider. She sang well. She has a method, a well-grounded notion of what is musical tone. Her higher notes strike one as being 'made,' not born. She does not carry one away by the natural splendour of her voice, but one is constantly appreciative of her art. The Rinaldo was Walter Widdop, whose singing has come on well of late, but who was not suited to the part. His quality was both fine and powerful in the robust music, but there were some trying high passages in which he tightened. A number of other English singers had small parts. It was quaint to get two English tenors (Mr. Widdop and Mr. Wendon) engaged in a colloquy in German.

'TANNHÄUSER' AND 'MEISTERSINGER'

'Tannhäuser,' which Robert Heger conducted, was not well cast. Surely Madame Leider (who sang Venus in a kind of Queen of the May costume) should have been Elisabeth. The Elisabeth was Madame Ljungberg, an over-rated singer who simply had not the voice for the part. The Greeting and the Prayer equally showed the lack of backing in her tone. This young person is suited only to pretty music. She should have bewared of exposing herself thus.

The Tannhäuser was Lauritz Melchior, who for the greater part of the evening 'let rip,' as the saying is, and only awoke to an intelligent, sensitive style in the third Act. The Wolfram, Herbert Janssen, showed good sense and a fine, dark tone, which was, however, much too heavy for some of the music, and which he could not adequately lighten. He, like other 'Ring' singers, has a fixed habit of singing individual words as though they were self-sufficient and fraught with a whole code. Well, at the end of 'The Ring,' such words as 'gold,' 'curse,' and 'worm,' undoubtedly have a complex sense; but normally a word depends on what goes before and after, and to underline 'angel' in the 'Star of Eve' song is no compensation for allowing the melody to go to pieces. The 'Star of Eve,' as a fact, requires technics of which many 'Ring' singers have only a small idea. The truly beautiful performance of the evening was Ivar Andresen's Landgrave. This new bass is assuredly one of the finest singers of the day. The suavity and mellowness of his tone were an unfailing delight to the ear.

'Meistersinger' was a good all-round performance with an artistic (if not very resonant) Sachs (E. Schipper), a Walther above the average (Laubenthal), a massive Pogner (Helgers), the wittiest and most finished of Beckmessers (Habich), a competent David (Clemens), and a charming Eva (Madame Lehmann, who was, however, a degree or two below her Sieglinde form). The orchestra was at its best.

C.

NINTH CENTENARY OF GUIDO D'AREZZO

On April 24, 25, and 26, there were celebrations at Rome to commemorate the ninth Centenary of Guido d'Arezzo, famous for having popularised the hexachord and creating Solmisation, and also for his share in the invention of the stave. The celebrations were inaugurated by the singing of a pontifical Mass by Mgr. Palice, at the Minerva. On the following day (April 25) Cardinal Cerretti sang the Mass at the Church of St. Cecilia, and on the third day the Holy Father, Pope Pius XI., celebrated a Mass at St. Peter's, assisted by Cardinal Bisletti, the protector of the Society of St. Cecilia, the liturgical music being splendidly sung by choristers from the Pontifical School of Music and the seminarists, conducted by Abbot Feretti and Mgr. Casimiri. Among the addresses was an eloquent discourse by Mgr. Raffaele Casimiri on the great musical achievements of Guido.

London Concerts

PROF. TOVEY

It is difficult to convey a clear idea of the impression made by the playing of Prof. Donald Tovey, for in some respects he stands well in the front rank amongst interpreters; in others he is less convincing; in one respect he seemed frankly unsatisfactory. In the three recitals he gave recently at Wigmore Hall we heard him play music by almost every important composer from Bach to Scriabin, and the experience showed once more how profound is the chasm which divides critic and interpreter. Those who are acquainted with Prof. Tovey's writings were probably expecting a flawless Bach performance and a less distinguished performance of Scriabin. As a matter of fact it was Scriabin who showed Prof. Tovey's interpretative talents in the best light and Bach who revealed his limitations. His playing is always lucid; in Schubert and Beethoven its clearness combined with penetrating sympathy makes it most fascinating. In Scriabin it became light and warmth—it revealed every detail; it fused details together: it conveyed the idea of unity as no other performance within our experience ever did before. Exactly the opposite happened in Bach. The very lucidity of the episodes contributed to defeat unity, since there was no solid rhythm to bind them together. One had the impression that Prof. Tovey relied perhaps on the strict logic of the composition, and that he believed nothing could draw apart threads so closely woven. It may be, however, that while tone-colour is his strongest point, rhythm is his weakest. If this is so the far from impeccable ensemble when Prof. Tovey was joined at the last recital by Miss Adila Fachiri, would be explained.

F. B.

CRYSTAL PALACE

The fame of Sir Thomas Beecham's reading of 'The Messiah' has gone forth. And justly. He has approached it with a single eye to its musical content, disregarding the tradition that has made it a document of Protestantism, or a ceremonial observance, or an occasion of respectable sentimentality. The result is like the interior of a church that has been cleared of the work of 'restorers'; its true proportions can be seen, and the real emotions that inspired it can be felt. But it was hardly to be expected that he would be invited to the temple of Handelian tradition, the Crystal Palace, in order to induce the large Handel Festival chorus to execute his untraditional view. He went, however, and he conquered.

What of tempi? Like any sensible musician, Sir Thomas Beecham knows that speed is relative to the size of buildings, of audiences, and of choirs, so that the actual pace on May 5 may not have been what it was at his first performance with a small choir at Queen's Hall. But the important thing was that though quick, the movement was always easy and flexible, with the result that 'And He shall purify' was not ponderous but buoyant, 'For unto us' full, not of heartiness but exaltation, 'And with His stripes' (sung unaccompanied) not turgid with theology but transparent with the clarity of good counterpoint; 'Behold the Lamb' was slower than usual; only in 'All we like sheep' did the choir become ragged.

The soloists (Miss Stiles-Allen, Miss Brunskill, Mr. Widdop, and Mr. Robert Easton), fell in with the general view of the conductor and sang their recitatives at a proper pace; they wisely made no attempt to force their tone in order to fill the large space, and so they filled it comfortably. Mr. Easton, who deputized for Mr. Harold Williams, proved worthy of a big occasion, with a fine big voice, clear articulation, and a good delivery.

F. H.

HAROLD BROOKE CHOIR

There are two ways of presenting Handel to a modern audience; one is the paraphrase of his score into terms of the large choir and orchestra, the other its acceptance as it stands and accommodation of the conditions of performance to it. It was the latter which Mr. Harold Brooke and his choir chose for their revival of 'Belshazzar' at Bishopsgate Institute on April 26, and their choice was the right one for them. The choir of about three dozen voices is approximately the size of Handel's choir, and the orchestra was chosen to match it. Mr. Brooke told the audience that he would like to increase his numbers a little to facilitate double-chorus work; incidentally he pleaded for more honorary members to secure the finances of the undertaking, and he declared that the hall of the Institute was chosen for the choir's performances because of its excellent acoustics and its suitable size. The performance then was to scale in all respects save one, viz., the organ, which Mr. Francis Sutton was inclined to use as though he had a Handel Festival choir to support. The continuo part was divided according to the accepted tradition between the organ for the choruses and the harpsichord (Mr. Bernard Ord) for the solos and recitatives. Though the conditions were those of Handel's day, the general spirit of the interpretation was thoroughly modern, which no doubt was also that of Handel's day, but not that of the conventional oratorio style of the last century. 'Belshazzar' begins with an accompanied recitative moralising on the rise and fall of civilisations, almost in the manner of Parry's 'A Vision of Life.' It turns from that attitude to the dramatic, which culminates in the vivid scene of Belshazzar's court and the portent of the writing on the wall. It includes many numbers of purely lyrical music, amongst them the exquisite chorus 'See, from his post Euphrates flies,' and ends with the ensemble of soli and choir 'I will magnify Thee,' adopted from the first Chandos Anthem. Some selection is necessary, and the abridged edition of Novello followed in this performance includes most of the best things. The solo singers were Miss Norah Scott Turner, Mr. Percy Manchester, and Mr. John Buckley, who all showed understanding of the proper treatment of the recitative and contributed to an ensemble which, despite several small accidents, was notably successful in conveying the wide reach of Handel's imagination and maintaining the continuous rhythmic life of the music.

C. H. H.

DELIUS'S 'MASS OF LIFE'

The Philharmonic Choir and Mr. Kennedy Scott deserve well of the musical community for their performance of Delius's 'Mass of Life,' at Queen's Hall, on May 16. Such a work would never be heard if there were not some uncommonly disinterested persons among us. It must mean hard work. It cannot be remunerative. And it is not very good fun for the choir. Still the audience's thanks at the end of this performance had a different ring from the ordinary, and were, we hope, some compensation for the labours of the singers and players.

The 'Mass of Life' is unpractical, ungrateful, unintelligible, and so on; but it contains an undefiled well of music—Delius at his best, and that is to say an expression of beauty unlike another's (the only possible source of some of it is the third Act of 'Parsifal'), and something that would be a singular loss if forgotten. Delius, when he tries to write an assertive choral movement, seems curiously ill at ease and awkward. But when he slips into his pastoral reveries (and they are numerous here) he is a great poet-musician. The next time 'A Mass of Life' is sung a little help might be given to us literal-minded people by an outline of Nietzsche's 'Zarathustra' in the programme. Delius's libretto gets more obscure the farther it goes. It also suffers from the oddest of professional song-translator's English. Mr. Roy Henderson sang the philosopher's rhapsodies in a way that enhanced a reputation first made in this work. The other soloists were Miss Caroline Hatchard, Miss Mary Morris, and Mr. Steuart Wilson.

C.

HAROLD SAMUEL

Five Partitas, five Suites, seventeen Preludes and Fugues, Toccatas, Fantasias, and Inventions galore were played (from memory, of course) by Mr. Harold Samuel at his annual week of Bach recitals which began at Æolian Hall on April 30. The miracle is performed by virtue of rhythm, and the audience is held in a grip like the Ancient Mariner's by rhythm, for Mr. Samuel does not command a great range of tone, which in loud passages is too dry for many tastes. But he is master of every rhythmic device employed by Bach within that unfaltering, unhurrying, fundamental pulse. There was a time when Mr. Samuel misjudged tempi. He still prefers a fairly fast turn of speed, but the part-playing, while still as smooth, is clearer in the more deliberate manner to which he has returned. There is still a certain monotony about this purling stream, which makes some of us prefer to hear Mr. Samuel in composers with less suggestive names. This is, no doubt, rank heresy, but we remember certain sonata recitals in which Mr. Samuel showed even more resource than he does in these remarkable Bach recitals.

F. H.

MESSRS. WIENER AND DOUCET

The pianola, it seems, has set up a new ideal before pianists—the beauty of machinery. Jazz is the perfect medium for achieving this ideal. Two pianofortes are more pianola-like than one. Eliminate all grades of tone but three, play your melodies so that they sound like that greasy-pole, the saxophone, and cultivate slickness to the *n*th degree. 'Horrible,' shudders the musician. But a small dose, imbibed in the sober environment of Wigmore Hall, can be most entertaining. After all, it does reflect one aspect of post-war life—it is cheerful, pleasantly cynical, without reverence (most Victorian of vices), efficient, shallow, heartless, and cheeky. Messrs. Jean Wiener and Clément Doucet played (on May 2) a programme of modern dance-music in which all these vital elements were present. The Waltzes of Johann Strauss eluded them—the machine has no grace or elasticity, but three South American Dances, with more kinship to the tango than to the fox-trot, were well done. Best, however, was a 'Black Bottom' by Henderson, whose North American characteristics were present in hundred per cent. strength. The programme began with Bach's Concerto in A: it sounded like a barrel-organ—only not so good, for human ensemble is not yet equal to the pianola, and human fingers show more tendency to run away than perforated paper or little bellows.

F. H.

SAMUEL DUSHKIN

As a soloist Mr. Samuel Dushkin commands respect. His technical equipment is considerable; his tone is invariably sweet and mellow; his conception of Boccherini or Debussy sound and thoughtful. But he lacks the crowning gift of an attractive personality. No one else plays just as he does—that is true of every fiddler, great or little, excellent or inadequate. But there is nothing by which he could be distinguished from other good violinists; nothing of which it could be said that only Mr. Dushkin can do so lucidly or so eloquently. The future, of course, may change all this. But in the meantime one hopes Mr. Dushkin will not be content to wait patiently further developments. His style clean and impeccable, his powers of execution, which are considerable, suggest a most valuable leader in an orchestra and an inspiring teacher. He might also try his hand at writing cadenzas. Nothing could be less effective than the cadenzas to the Boccherini Concerto he played at Æolian Hall.

F. B.

ANGUS MORRISON

It is almost harder to keep on doing well than to begin well. Mr. Angus Morrison, when he came out a year or two ago, certainly began well; he showed at his recital at Wigmore Hall on May 8 that he is continuing to develop. His playing is still too polite, especially in such things as the late A flat Sonata of Beethoven, and more of the natural man would have been welcome in a group of Albeniz. But his Bach (the C minor Partita) was delightful—clear, rhythmic, and flowing. Beauty of tone is his strongest point, and in that he could give lessons to many older pianists. He met the big technical demands of Brahms's Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Handel, and throughout the programme showed thought as well as sensibility. Now for a dash of devilment!

F. H.

With a performance of 'Caractacus' at Queen's Hall on May 2, the London Choral Society brought to an end a season that has been carried out with characteristic enterprise under Mr. Arthur Fagge. The solo parts were sung by Miss Miriam Licette, Mr. Frank Titterton, Mr. Kenneth Ellis, and Mr. Thorpe Bates.

BACH CANTATA CLUB

At its meeting on May 22 (Royal College of Music) the Club gave its supporters an unusually attractive instrumental programme, the soloists being Madame Landowska, Dr. Albert Schweitzer, and Mr. William Primrose. The two keyboard players are as the poles apart—Landowska brilliant and incisive, Schweitzer deliberate and inclined to bluntness. These qualities have little to do with the characteristics of their respective instruments, or even with the fact that the harpsichordist is a virtuoso always in playing trim, and the organist a many-sided man—theologian, musician, missionary, doctor, and author—who can have little time or energy to spare for the technical side of organ playing. It is rather a matter of temperament and point of view. Schweitzer likes his Bach to be clear, and is prepared to ensure this virtue by a sacrifice of such qualities as fire, dash, and energy, which many of us regard as no less essential. (In certain of the bravura works they are in fact of prime importance.) Thus, his pace in the D minor Toccata and Fugue was so deliberate as to run clean contrary to his own programme notes on the work: there were no 'rapid runs,' 'wonderful animation,' or 'onrushing movement.' A couple of quiet Chorale Preludes found the player more in agreement with the general view as to speed, though we should have preferred a more delicate registration and greater elasticity of rhythm. In the 'Great' B minor Prelude and Fugue, the Prelude had a loud, energetic treatment that was effective, but the Fugue moved at a slower pace than we have ever heard an English recitalist adopt. A crowded audience gave Dr. Schweitzer a warm welcome. Madame Landowska was heard in the G minor and F minor Clavier Concertos, and also gave a sparkling performance of the C minor Partita. Mr. Primrose played the E major Concerto—not impeccably in the matter of intonation. Mr. Kennedy Scott conducted.

The next meeting of the Club will be on June 19, at 8.15, at St. Margaret's, Westminster, when the scheme will include Chorale Preludes played by Dr. Alcock.

H. G.

Music in the Provinces

BILLINGBOROUGH (Lincs).—On April 3 the village Choral Society, under Dr. Bernard Jackson, gave very creditable performances of Haydn's 'Passion' and Bach's 'God so loved the world,' assisted by soloists from Boston.

BOSTON.—On April 12 the Choral Society gave Haydn's 'Spring,' with an orchestra led by the Yorkshire String Quartet. The programme also included Mozart's Symphony in G minor, solos, and unaccompanied part-songs. The soloists were Miss Nora Desmond, Mr. Cyril Wright, and Mr. James Rogers. Dr. Bernard Jackson conducted.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Recent programmes at the Winter Gardens have included a concert version of 'Tannhäuser,' Schumann's first Symphony, the Pianoforte Concerto made by Liszt out of Schubert's 'Wanderer,' Schubert's Symphony in C, Cadman's 'Thunderbird' Suite, and (at the final concert of the winter series) Brahms's second Symphony. The special programme given during the B.M.S. Congress included Ethel Smyth's 'On the Cliffs of Cornwall' (the composer conducting), Cyril Scott's 'Suite Fantastique' for chamber orchestra, S. H. Braithwaite's Elegy (Carnegie Award, 1927), a Rhapsody by Mary Lucas, and the 'London' Symphony of Vaughan Williams.

BURY ST. EDMUNDS.—On April 26 the Musical Society, under Mr. E. Percy Hallam, performed Parts 1 and 2 of 'Hiawatha,' and Parry's 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin.'

CATERHAM.—Elgar's 'Banner of St. George' and Cowen's 'John Gilpin' were successfully performed on April 24 by the Caterham Choral Society, assisted by a small but efficient orchestra, led by Miss Avice Sealy. Miss Muriel Humphreys was the solo vocalist, and Mr. Granville Humphreys conducted.

DARLASTON.—Mr. Edgar B. Morgan conducted an effective performance of Dvořák's 'The Spectre's Bride,' by the Choral Society, on April 23.

DONCASTER.—The Music Society brought its season to an end on May 10 with an excellent mixed programme that included Parry's 'Voces Clamantium,' three of Holst's 'Hymns from the Rig Veda,' and Stanford's 'Phaudrig Crohoore.' Mr. H. A. Bennett conducted. By way of contrast, Mr. William Primrose (violin) and Mr. Ivor Newton (pianoforte) played the 'Kreutzer' Sonata and that of Franck.

HASTINGS.—Sir Henry Wood recently came as guest-conductor, for the third time in twelve months, to the Pavilion, and conducted the 'New World' Symphony. During Mr. Cameron's absence at the end of April, the concerts were conducted by Mr. Julian H. Clifford, whose duties included Brahms's second Symphony on April 25. On this occasion Mr. Maurice Besly conducted his orchestral arrangement of Bach's Chorale Prelude 'Liebster Jesu.' Mr. Cameron's season came to an end on May 13.

HELSTON. — Although only a year old, the Choral Society, conducted by Mr. Leslie J. Ursell, is sufficiently advanced to tackle such works as 'King Olaf,' which was performed very competently on April 20 with the assistance of an orchestra of thirty.

LITTLEHAMPTON.—The most successful concert hitherto given by the Choral Society occurred on May 10, when the new conductor, Mr. Marcus Webster, directed performances of Elgar's 'The Black Knight' and some smaller choral numbers.

MAIDENHEAD.—At the Choral Society's second concert of the season, on May 1, the Rev. G. Barrington-Baker conducted Brahms's 'Song of Destiny,' Stanford's 'Songs of the Fleet,' and part-songs by Sweeting, Elgar, Stanford, Roberton, and Carse.

NEWBURY.—Assisted by the Amateur Orchestral Union the Choral Society gave Parry's 'Ode on St. Cecilia's Day' and Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas,' under Mr. Ramsey, on May 2.

NORTHAMPTON. — Parry's rarely-heard cantata, 'The Vision of Life,' was performed by the Musical Society under the direction of Mr. C. J. King, and the programme further included Schubert's 'The Song of Miriam.'

PORTSMOUTH.—The concert of the Portsmouth North End Choral Society, on April 18, was specially distinguished by the presence of Sir Edward Elgar, who conducted an excellent performance of 'Caractacus,' with Miss Elizabeth Mellor, Mr. Ivor Walters, Mr. Howard Fry, and Mr. Kenneth Ellis as soloists.——A concert of special interest was given at the Guildhall on April 28, by the Elizabethan and Bach Society. The choir sang 'Jesu, Priceless Treasure,' Byrd's 126th Psalm, and the 'Coffee' Cantata, and the orchestra contributed a Mozart Serenade for strings, Bach's Suite in D, and the 'Brandenburg' Concerto in D. The conducting was shared by Dr. Adrian Boult and Mr. Hugh A. Burry.

READING.—The Schubert Centenary was anticipated by the Philharmonic Society, on April 25, in a programme that included 'The Song of Miriam,' the 'Unfinished' Symphony, and 'The Lord is my Shepherd.' Mr. P. R. Scrivener conducted.

SALISBURY.—The Salisbury Musical Society gave its concluding concert of the season on May 1, under the able conductorship of Miss Nellie Harding. The programme included a Suite for strings by Klengel, a Concerto Grosso by Handel, and 'Northern Song and Dance' by Carse. Mr. Stuart Robertson sang songs by Vaughan Williams, Schumann, Schubert, Korbay, &c.

SITTINGBOURNE.—A crowded audience listened to the effective performance of 'Elijah' given on April 24 by the Sittingbourne and District Musical Society, under the direction of Mr. W. J. Keech.

SOUTHAMPTON.—The Philharmonic Society brought its thirty-fourth season to a successful close on April 25, with a performance of 'The Dream of Gerontius,' under the conductorship of Dr. Heathcote Statham. The solo parts were well sung by Miss Margaret Balfour, Mr. Andrew Clayton, and Mr. Eaton Cooter; and the work of both choir and orchestra reached a very high standard of excellence.

WOLVERTON.—On May 2, the Wolverton Science and Art Institute and District Choral Society gave a successful performance of 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast' and 'King Olaf.' The choir and orchestra of a hundred and forty were conducted by Mr. C. Kenneth Garratt.

WORCESTER.—On May 8, the St. George's Musical Society, conducted by Mr. C. H. Baker, gave a concert of works by composers associated with Worcestershire. These were: Elgar ('The Banner of St. George'), Julius Harrison, Alexander Brent-Smith, Sir Ivor Atkins, Edgar Cook, Edgar Day, Easthope Martin, Leonard Winter, and Constance Hill (the Society's accompanist since 1914).

WORTHING.—On April 25, at the Pavilion, the enterprising Madrigal Society gave Purcell's 'Ode on St. Cecilia's Day' and a selection of madrigals, under the direction of Mr. Frank Davey.

Competition Festival Record

ANDOVER.—Choirs in and around Andover gave encouraging support to the new competition Festival that was opened to them on April 24. The entries in the five classes made a total of thirty-seven, the winning choirs being Hurstbourne Tarrant (sight-reading), R.A.F. (choruses from Gluck's 'Orpheus'), Weyhill (madrigal), Weyhill (female-voice class), and R.A.F. (male-voice class). Act 2 of 'Orpheus' was performed in the evening in the concert of massed choirs, under Mr. Geoffrey Shaw.

BIRMINGHAM (May 7-12).—This year it was the children's turn at the Midland Festival, which strengthened its claim to be 'the leading children's festival of the kingdom,' even though the number of competing choirs had fallen from a hundred and sixty to a hundred and twenty-nine. The elaborate scheme of competitions included, beyond singing and playing in many forms, two days of English folk-dancing, several competitions for national dances other than English folk-dances, interpretation of music by movement, and other tests of the versatility of childhood. The climax of the children's part was a performance of Sydney Nicholson's 'The Luck of Edenhall' by massed choirs, under Dr. W. G. Whittaker. On the one day that was devoted to grown-ups the chief successes were won by Madame Lilian Green's Ladies' Choir, Birmingham, and by Bournville Works Choral Society (Mr. W. Bennett), who headed the mixed-voice and male-voice choirs.

CHELTENHAM (May 10-12).—The third Festival held under the Cheltenham Chamber of Commerce was highly successful, the entries having increased from three hundred to five hundred, and in the fifty classes there was good competition all round. String playing showed a marked improvement in quantity and quality. In the chief choral competitions, Winchcombe Choral Society (Mr. W. E. Haslam), St. Paul's College Male-Voice Choir (Mr. W. E. Haslam), and Cam Female-Voice Choir (Mrs. E. E. Thomas) carried off the prizes.

CHESTER (April 25-28). — For the first time in its history the Wirral and Eddisbury Festival occupied four days, largely owing to the introduction of folk-dancing competitions, an innovation that proved successful. The general syllabus is largely occupied by choral and other concerted work, solo contests being limited to a few, and the area covered is that within twenty-five miles of Chester. The most successful choirs were those of Mollington (in three competitions), Plemstall (in the novice class), Bebington Guild (Women's Institutes), and Chester Male-Voice Choir.

DEVIZES (May 5, 7, 8, 9, and 12).—The Festival of the Wiltshire Musical Competitive Association was again well supported by the junior and senior choirs of the county, which, but for a few classes for concerted playing, occupied the whole of the first four days' proceedings. The principal winners in a successful series of competitions were Corsham Choral Society (Mr. L. Spackman), Swindon College Choral Class (Mr. H. S. Fairclough), Corsley Women's Institute (Miss E. Martin), and Minety Church Choral Society (Rev. T. A. Ludlow-Hewitt).

DOUGLAS, I.O.M. (April 16-19).—This flourishing family affair among Manx musicians went off with its customary success, the interest being keen throughout and the standard of choral performance that by which Manx singing is known and respected on the mainland. The children made an excellent display, their own special 'festival' after their day's competitions were over being an enjoyable affair. In the choral contests, which occupied the whole of the last day, the chief prizes were won by Ramsay Ladies' Choir (Mrs. Black), the Wanderers' A.F.C. Male-Voice Choir (Mr. R. E. Cubbon), and Douglas Festival Choir (Mr. Noah Moore).

IPSWICH (May 11 and 12).—Last year's Suffolk Musical Festival, held at Bury St. Edmunds, brought three hundred and fifty entries; this year the entries for the fifth Festival, at Ipswich, approached five hundred, and the general success of the Festival was to scale. Four halls were in use on the last day. The following were among the chief prize-winners—village choral societies: Cavendish and Hundon; women's institutes: Cavendish and Pentlow; female-voice choirs, open: Ipswich Choral Society; male-voice choirs, open: Lowestoft; choral societies, open: Ipswich Choral Society; village orchestras: Bildeston Brotherhood; children's orchestras: Leiston Council School.

LEITH HILL (April 17-20).—Villages and towns in this region again showed their appreciation of the annual Festival opened to them nearly twenty years ago. In each of the four main divisions ('second-class' villages, 'first-class' villages, children, towns) the competitions were well supported, and there was some spirited massed singing at the evening concerts under the direction of the founder of the Festival, Dr. Vaughan Williams. The programmes included Part 1 of 'Elijah,' Bach's 'Lord, my soul doth thirst for Thee,' Schubert's seventh Symphony, and Parts 1 and 2 of Vaughan Williams's 'Sea Symphony.'

LIVERPOOL (April 28-May 5).—This Festival, founded in 1917, is not a rival to the famous festivals where the best Northern choirs congregate, but spreads its influence over a lower and fairly widespread plane. Choirs came to its choral day from Lancashire, Cheshire, and Wales. The best of the competitions was put up by six male-voice choirs, among whom the Metropolitan Vickers Choir from Manchester (Mr. A. E. Baker) was definitely superior. Other choirs were from Runcorn, Wavertree, Liverpool, and Stockport. The only female-voice choir was from Llanyblodwell (Mr. J. W. Lloyd). Seaforth Choral Society (Mr. Walter Deyes) was the best of five not very proficient mixed-voice choirs. St. John's Church Boys (Mr. T. L. Deurdon), Blackburn, winners at three National Eisteddfoddau, were unrivalled in the children's choral competitions.

MORECAMBE (May 3-5).—A day of exceptionally good choral singing helped to maintain the Morecambe standard of thirty-two years. The challenge shield for mixed-voice choirs was taken by a choir that had not entered before—Huddersfield Vocal Union, conducted by Mr. J. F. Sykes. Two experienced adjudicators said that its singing was a revelation in Wilbye's 'Sweet honey-sucking bees,' Handel's 'Wretched lovers' (from 'Acis and Galatea'), and Cornelius's 'The Surrender of the Soul.' Twelve female-voice choirs gave a splendid series of performances of Brahms's 'The Gardener' and Julius Harrison's 'Most gentle moon,' the first three places being taken, in close competition, by the Manx Ladies' Choir from Douglas, the Blackpool Glee and Madrigal Society, and Barrow Madrigal Society. Middleton Apollo was first in the male-voice section. The only orchestra was the Blackpool Amateur Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Mr. P. M. Dayman. This orchestra also took part, on the Friday evening, in a performance of 'Elijah,' given, under Mr. Julius Harrison's direction, by a choir of three hundred and fifty voices gathered from the Morecambe and Lancaster districts and trained by Mr. N. S. Wallbank.

MARY WAKEFIELD FESTIVAL.—The oldest competitive festival in England is the Westmorland Festival, held in alternate years at Kendal and still bearing the name of the foundress. In 1885 four vocal quartets met in competition at Miss Wakefield's country house, and in the following year the first choral competitions were held. A combination of circumstances enabled this Festival, which became the type of all in which competition and co-operation are combined, to grow into a flourishing affair able to give daily concerts of the highest order. The thirtieth Festival began on April 17, which was children's day. This was notable because the conducting of the combined choirs was undertaken for the first time by Miss Willow Wakefield, a niece of Mary Wakefield. The second day was notable in that it represented growth to the dimensions of a four days' Festival, and brought in a number of new competitors. There was even a class for places which could not raise four parts. This section could not take part in the combined singing, but it put its members on the way to part-singing, and produced one delightful performance by a tiny choir from Sedburgh of two folk-song arrangements by Dunhill. The complete inexperience of the new choirs, who managed in spite of their extreme caution to give quite a good account of Act 2 of 'Orpheus,' provided a striking contrast with the achievements of the senior choirs on the following days, when two Bach Cantatas, Wood's 'Dirge for Two Veterans,' and 'The Creation' (Part 1) were given under Dr. Adrian Boult. As usual, choirs as well as audience had the opportunity of hearing some orchestral works—Beethoven's eighth Symphony very roughly and Elgar's 'Enigma' Variations quite brilliantly played by the City of Birmingham Orchestra—and solos from Miss Dora Labbette, Mr. Steuart Wilson, and Mr. Keith Falkner. At this Festival the test-pieces are not utilised for combined singing at the concert — a somewhat extravagant way of going on, only made possible by the very highly evolved system of sending the chorus master round to visit the choirs during the preceding winter. In this way highly-polished results are secured, and there is a delightful atmosphere of enthusiasm about the whole Festival which has the momentum of an ever-growing tradition behind it. The 'county,' the manufacturers, their work-people, and the townsmen of Kendal work together in the happiest way, and all the high officials of the Festival are to be found going through the competitive mill year after year, to receive the dispassionate criticism of the judge (this year it was Dr. W. G. Whittaker) on equal terms with the newest recruit and the oldest stager.

F. H.

PETERSFIELD (April 23-26).—The district within twenty miles of Petersfield, made musical by this Festival, again gathered for a successful Festival, at which, according to custom, a series of concerts was the principal aim and interest. Under Dr. Adrian Boult as conductor-in-chief a fine set of performances was given by the competing choirs, visiting artists, and the Petersfield Festival Orchestra. The music included the Suite on Purcell's 'The Gordian Knot Untied,' Vaughan Williams's 'The Lark Ascending,' Bach's eleventh Church Cantata, Elgar's Introduction and Allegro, W. H. Reed's Rhapsody for viola and orchestra, with many test-pieces and solos of various kinds.

PORTSMOUTH (May 3-5).—The entries here maintained their former level, though the choral side was less strong than on some previous occasions. The vocal solo class brought forward an unusually large number of excellent voices. Instrumental music, especially violin and various chamber combinations, was above the average. There was abundant enthusiasm at the close, but attendances otherwise were disappointing, largely owing, no doubt, to the sudden spell of summery weather. The chief choral results were as follows: male-voice, Portsmouth Male-Voice Choir; mixed-voice, Clarion Choral Society; female-voice, Portsmouth Choral Society; church choirs (men and boys), St. Thomas's, Portsmouth (St. John's Church, Sandown, being a close second, one mark behind); church choirs (mixed voices), Stamford Street United Methodist.

SCARBOROUGH (April 26-28).—There was some choral singing of the finest quality to be heard at this Festival, the female-voice choral class, headed by York Old Priory, being an excellent gathering even for Yorkshire. The same choir was alone in the mixed-voice class, and Scarborough Harmonic was the only male-voice choir. This lack of support has been attributed to the difficulty of the test-pieces. Poor audiences were a secondary result, and the future of the Festival, held this year for the third time, is held to be insecure.

WHITBY (April 24-26).—The coming-of-age of the Eskdale Festival was marked by an appropriate ceremony on the second day, when twelve choirs from Whitby and the neighbourhood joined in a special service at St. Hilda's Church. At the end of a successful Festival a presentation was made to the Misses C. and M. Yeoman, who have long been honorary secretaries of the competitions.

Other competition Festivals held since Easter include the final competitions of the Dorset Choral Association at WEYMOUTH, a sequel to local preliminary tests at ten centres; the Mid- and West Herts Festival at BERKHAMSTED, where Mr. Arnold Foster's choir from Abbot's Langley went home with six first prizes, including that for S.A.T.B. quartet; the LYTHAM Festival; the North Northants competition at OUNDLE; the North and East Herts Festival at Haileybury College, HERTFORD; the Rutland Festival at UPPINGHAM; the Wensleydale Festival at LEYBURN; the school and village competitions at YORK; the Festival of the Essex Musical Association at CHELMSFORD; the Berks, Bucks, and Oxon Festival, held this year at OXFORD; the SCUNTHORPE Festival; the Cornwall Competitions, founded in 1910, by the late Lady Mary Trefusis, at TRURO; the Gloucestershire Countryside Festival at GLOUCESTER; the week-long Festival, mostly of solo work, at CROYDON; the South Somerset Festival at YEOVIL; the Worcestershire Competitions, held for the first time at DROITWICH; and the Teesdale Festival at BARNARD CASTLE. We regret that lack of space and the multiplicity of competition festivals compels us to deal thus summarily with so many deserving and important affairs.

SCOTLAND

ABERDEEN.—The fifteenth Aberdeen and North-East of Scotland Festival occupied five days. The outstanding features were the instrumental classes, ensemble and solo, and the work of the school choirs and Women's Rural Institute choirs. Principal awards: mixed choirs, L.O.A.S., Aberdeen, and Gallowgate U.F. Church Choir; men's choirs, Railway Choir, Aberdeen; women's choirs, Buckie Ladies' Choir and Maud and Alford W.R.I. Choirs; church choirs, Ferryhill Parish Church and Gallowgate U.F. Church; junior choirs, Frederick Street Evening School; school choirs, Rosemount, Mile-end, Causewayend, Hanover Street, Frederick Street, Woodside, Turriff, Strathdon, Kenmay, King Street, Stonehaven, Sunnybank; Scottish country dancing, L.O.A.S., Balgownie, and Central School; vocal solos, Miss Alice H. Horne; violin solos, Mr. Keith Rennie.

BORDER COUNTIES.—The ninth Border Counties Festival ran for a full week at Galashiels and Hawick, over three thousand competitors taking part. The best results were had in the school choir and instrumental solo classes. Principal awards: mixed choirs, Lanark Choral Society and Duns and District Choral Society; men's choirs, Galashiels United Services Choir; women's choirs, Carr's Works, Carlisle, and Lilliesleaf W.R.I.; junior choirs, Kelso High School; school choirs, Kelso, Duns, and Selkirk; Scottish country dancing, Newlands Adult Class, Lindean W.R.I., and Burgh School, Galashiels; vocal solos, Miss May Walker, Jedburgh; instrumental ensemble, D.M.C. Trio, Galashiels; pianoforte solos, Miss Margaret L. Henderson, Hawick.

BUTE.—The fourth Bute Festival, held at Rothesay, Isle of Bute, had over a thousand competitors and crowded audiences. Principal awards: church choirs, West U.F. Church, Rothesay; school choirs, Rothesay Academy and Ballianlay School; vocal solos, Mr. Alec Plumpton, Rothesay.

DUMFRIES.—The seventh Dumfriesshire Festival was held at Dumfries, two thousand four hundred competitors taking part. Principal awards: mixed choirs, Kirkcudbright Choral Society; men's choirs, Dumfries and Maxweltown Y.M.C.A.; women's choirs, Kirkcudbright Choral Society; church choirs, Glencairn Parish Church, Moniaive; school choirs, Lockerbie Academy, Noblehill School, Annan Academy, Catherinefield School, and Applegarth School; Scottish country dancing, Gretna, W.R.I.

DUNDEE.—The seventh Dundee Festival was held at Dundee. Competitors numbered three thousand three hundred, and some particularly good work was heard in the instrumental and school choir classes. Principal awards: mixed choirs, Arbroath Amateur Operatic Society, St. John's U.F. Church, Martyrs U.F. Church, Dundee, and Craigie Works, Dundee; men's choirs, Tay Choir, Dundee; women's choirs, Brechin Girls' Club; church choirs, St. John's U.F., Martyrs U.F., and St. Salvador's Episcopal, Dundee; junior choirs, Martyrs U.F. Church, Dundee; school choirs, Muirhead of Liff, Glebelands, Dundee, Townhead Central, Montrose, and Drumgeith; string orchestras, Dundee High School; Scottish country dancing, Blackness Evening School and Downfield Guides; violin solos, Miss N. Warden.

EDINBURGH (May 12-19).—Entries were at last year's level, though there was a falling off among the schools. The standard, especially in school work, was very high, and it was clear that a great deal of first-rate musical training is being done in this most important of departments. Youthful orchestral players also distinguished themselves. The one disappointing feature in an excellent Festival was the sparse attendance of the public. The many attractive sessions, held in admirable halls, and easy of access, deserved crowded audiences, and it is to be hoped that so musical a public as that of Edinburgh will realise that in the Festival they have an event not only of prime importance to amateurs, especially to the young, but also a source of enjoyment to themselves. We add a few of the principal results: school choirs, Grangemouth High School; junior choirs, St. George's Girls' School, Edinburgh; female-voice, Philomel Choir, Grangemouth; male-voice, Wallsend; mixed-voice, Socialist Choristers, Glasgow; church choirs, Pilrig U.F., Edinburgh.

GLASGOW.—The eighteenth Glasgow Festival ran for thirteen days, and occupied sixty-seven sessions; choirs numbered two hundred and eighty-nine—a hundred and seventy-eight school and junior, twenty-nine mixed, seventeen men's, thirty-nine women's, and twenty-six church. The best work was achieved in the Men's Choir Premier Class, Junior Choir Premier Class, and school classes. The final stages of the vocal solo classes produced some highly distinguished singing. The instrumental classes, except for a few good ensemble teams, were less notable. In the Pianoforte Solo Diploma Class, the diploma had to be withheld, none of the competitors reaching the requisite standard. The Scottish country dancing was on so uniformly high a level as to make judging a matter of difficulty. Perhaps the most perfectly presented piece of work of the entire Festival was an action-song performance of 'The Jolly Waggoner,' by the Glasgow Orpheus Choir Sangspiel. A Hymn Festival, under the direction of Dr. Staton, Chesterfield, on the final Sunday evening, made an effective finish to a crowded fortnight. Principal awards: mixed choirs, St. George Co-operative Choir, Glasgow; men's choirs, Glasgow Philharmonic Choir; women's choirs, Caledonian House Choir, Glasgow; church choirs, Radnor Park U.F. Church Choir, Clydebank; junior choirs, Glasgow Orpheus Junior Choir, Glasgow; school choirs, St. John's Grammar School, Hamilton; action-songs, Glasgow Orpheus Choir Sangspiel; string orchestras, Miss Isobel Marshall's String Orchestra, Glasgow; Scottish country dancing, Queen Margaret Settlement, Glasgow; Lieder class (voice and pianoforte), Mr. Robert H. Howie and Miss Phœbe Davie; vocal solos, diploma class, Miss Nellie Allan, Newmilns; vocal solos, honours class, Miss Gertrude Bayes, Clydebank; Scots songs, diploma class, Mr. Edmund Greig, Stirling; operatic solos, Mr. John Verrico, Glasgow; violin solos, diploma class, Miss Martha F. Dewar, Blantyre; instrumental ensemble, M'Inulty Trio, Wishaw.

MORAYSHIRE.—The sixth Morayshire Festival, held at Elgin, attracted three thousand five hundred competitors. The general standard of competition was good, except in the adult choir classes, but the principal feature was the keenness and enthusiasm of the audiences who thronged the halls throughout the entire week. Principal awards: mixed choirs, Elgin Choral and Orchestral Society; women's choirs, Grantown Grammar School former pupils; church choirs, Ness Bank Church, Inverness; junior choirs, General Anderson's Institution, Elgin; school choirs, Grantown Grammar School, Elgin East-end, Hopeman, Bogmoor, Urquhart, Mortlach; vocal solos, Mrs. E. S. Burr, Balnacoul; Scots songs, Miss Jenny Reid, Burghead.

NORTHERN COUNTIES. — The seventh Northern Counties Festival, held at Inverness, with a thousand and seven hundred competitors, kept the judges working at high pressure for three full days. The best work was done in the school choir and Scots and Jacobite song classes. Principal awards: mixed choirs, Ness Bank Church, Inverness; men's choirs, Inverness Academy; church choirs, Ness Bank Church, Inverness, and Dyke U.F. Church; school choirs, Inverness Academy, Merkinch, Avoch, Spean Bridge, and Brora; vocal solos and Scots songs, Mr. R. L. Maguire, Kinlochleven; Jacobite songs, Miss E. Masson, Inverness; pianoforte solos, Miss Elizabeth Robertson, Elgin; violin solos, Mrs. Macdermott, Inverness.

WEST LOTHIAN.—This purely choral Festival, now in its ninth year, was held at Linlithgow. The number of competitors—two thousand three hundred—showed a considerable increase on previous years in both adult and children's classes. Principal awards: mixed choirs, Linlithgow Choral Union and Bo'ness Operatic Choir; women's choirs, Bathgate Women Choristers; church choirs, Craigmailen U.F. Church; school choirs, Winchburgh, Grange, Bo'ness, and Bathgate.

IRELAND

BALLYMENA (May 7-14). — This year's Festival — the thirteenth—was notable for a fifty per cent. increase in the entry—from five hundred and eight to seven hundred and sixty-two. All records were broken in attendance as well, the hall being packed and many people turned away night after night. There can be few centres where festival crowds are so large, enthusiastic, and insatiable. The standard was high, especially in certain departments of school work, and in the Irish folk-song solo classes. Sight-singing by children, both in class and by soloists, reached high-water mark with repeated hundred per centers. We add a few of the chief results: male-voice choirs, Killowen; mixed-voice, Seven Towers; church choirs, Wellington Street Presbyterian, Ballymena; orchestras, Belfast Co-operative; Irish folk-song, Mr. J. Borton, Belfast.

CARRICKFERGUS (April 24-28). — This Festival has gradually advanced since its inauguration in 1924, but still lacks support in the choral classes. Only the male-voice class, with its five entries, was really a satisfactory contest. Castleton Choir, from Belfast, were easy winners. Among the solo competitors, Miss Sally McGifford distinguished herself by winning first prizes for pianoforte and violin playing.

DUBLIN.—The thirty-second Feis Ceoil is in progress during the making of these records, and the principal results will be known too late for inclusion in the present number.

DUNGANNON (April 24-27).—At the sixth Festival, which ran a successful course, the chief choral prizes were won by Castlecauldfield Choir (in two classes), Dungannon Men's Club (a choir of fine voices, well trained), and Belfast Choral Union.

---

The Thames Valley Orchestra, conducted by Mr. F. W. de Massi-Hardman, gave the second concert of its first season at the Surbiton Assembly Rooms on April 28, with a programme that included the first movement of the 'Unfinished' Symphony, and the conductor's tone-poem, 'The North-West.' The orchestra numbered fifty players.

Music in Scotland

EDINBURGH. — The Edinburgh Grand Opera Society showed considerable enterprise and courage in presenting Borodin's 'Prince Igor' at the King's Theatre. Mr. R. de la Haye conducted, and Mr. Hebden Foster acted as producer. The Edinburgh Opera Company, with Mr. Ralph T. Langdon as conductor and the veteran Mr. E. C. Hedmondt as producer, gave a week's performances in the Lyceum Theatre, the operas presented being Verdi's 'Aida' and Flotow's 'Martha.' Some time ago we commented on the dilatoriness of Edinburgh University in recognising the musical distinction of its own citizens, and asked whether it had never heard of Marjory Kennedy Fraser. Now comes the news that it has decided to offer the honorary degree of Doctor of Music to Mrs. Kennedy Fraser and Dr. Albert Schweitzer (of 'J. S. Bach' fame).

Music in Wales

ABERYSTWYTH.—At the ninth annual Festival, held on April 24 and 25, the orchestral items included Brahms's Violin Concerto, Borodin's 'On the Steppes of Central Asia,' the 'Siegfried Idyll,' Schubert's 'Rosamunde' Overture, the 'Eroica' Symphony and third 'Leonora' Overture, and Grieg's Pianoforte Concerto. A group of Schubert songs was contributed by Miss Dorothy Helmrich. The choral work for the occasion was 'The Dream of Gerontius,' in which the small College choir won high praise for its good tonal qualities and the delicate performance of the mystical portions of the work. Prof. de Lloyd conducted throughout the Festival.

CARDIFF.—The National Orchestra of Wales, conducted by Mr. Warwick Braithwaite, has continued its series of free concerts in the Museum and subscription concerts in the City Hall. Haydn's 'London' Symphony, Beethoven's first Symphony and 'Emperor' Concerto, Handel's 'Water Music,' arranged by Hamilton Harty, Saint-Saëns's 'Cello Concerto in A minor, Spanish Dances by Granados, Vaughan Williams's incidental music to the 'Wasps,' Kalinnikov's Symphony in G minor, Brahms's first Symphony, and Grieg's Pianoforte Concerto, have figured in the programmes. Audiences have been large and appreciative, and the unique method of co-operation adopted between the British Broadcasting Corporation and the national and civic bodies concerned is worthy of careful attention as showing a way for coping with present-day musical difficulties.

CWMAVON (Port Talbot).—The death is announced of Mr. Afan Thomas, an organist and composer who had gained a considerable amount of popularity in the Principality.

LLANELLY.—On April 17, Zion Choral Society gave 'A Tale of Old Japan' and 'The Revenge.' On April 30 a selection from 'The Messiah,' together with smaller choral works of Bach, and Parry's 'There is an old belief' were given in the Parish Church. A small orchestra from the County School assisted with the accompaniments. The conductor was Mr. Frank Phillips.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—On May 3 the Choral and Orchestral Society, conducted by Mr. W. J. Watkins, gave 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast,' Elgar's 'Go, song of mine,' Mendelssohn's G minor Pianoforte Concerto, and the first movement of Beethoven's fifth Symphony.

---

The seventh annual Congress of the British Music Society was held at Bournemouth during the week ending May 5. Everything in the programme—discussions, concerts, and the banquet—went off successfully under the direction of Mr. Hamilton Law as hon. secretary. Sir Dan Godfrey read a paper on 'The influence of the wireless and the gramophone on our musical life,' and there was an interesting discussion on 'The future of opera in England,' in which Dr. Lilian Baylis, Dame Ethel Smyth, Mr. Frederick Austin, and Mr. Rutland Boughton were the principal speakers. The visiting artists were Miss Dorothy Silk and Mr. Lionel Tertis.

Music in Ireland

CORK.—The St. Fin Barre's Oratorio Society, founded five years ago, has advanced to a high level of achievement under the guidance of Mr. J. T. Horne, as is amply proved by the programme of its concert on May 3: Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' Faning's 'Song of the Silent Land,' Howells's 'A Spotless Rose,' Dale's 'The Shepherds and the Mother' and 'Before the paling of the stars,' Holst's Two Psalms, and Schubert's 'Unfinished' Symphony.

DUBLIN.—The choir and orchestra of University College Musical Society gave the Finale from Act I of Mendelssohn's 'Loreley' and Brahms's 'Song of Destiny' at the College on May 9. The conductor was Mr. Robert O'Dwyer, whose Overture, 'Rosaleen,' opened the programme.

THE FIRST BALLAD OPERA:
ALLAN RAMSAY'S 'GENTLE SHEPHERD'

All our reference books are practically agreed that the first ballad-opera was Gay's 'Beggar's Opera'—produced at Lincoln's Inn Fields, on January 29, 1728. Yet, though priority of production may be ceded to the 'Beggar's Opera,' the credit of the genre known as 'ballad opera' must be given to Allan Ramsay's 'Gentle Shepherd,' which was published in 1725—more than two years before Gay wrote his better-known production. Earlier still, in 1720, Ramsay had published a Pastoral entitled, 'Patie and Roger,' which was the genesis of the 'Gentle Shepherd.' The preface of this Pastoral is dated 'Edinburgh, March 26, 1720,' and be it understood that the year was really 1720, and not 1721 as some have imagined, for at that period the year began with March 25. Further, a London pirated copy of 'Patie and Roger' was issued in July, 1720—about the same time as Ramsay's 'Wealth: or the Woody,' and his 'Scots Songs.'

In regard to the 'Gentle Shepherd,' which dates from June, 1725, the late Frank Kidson, in his interesting volume on 'The Beggar's Opera: its Predecessors and Successors' (Cambridge University Press, 1922), tells us that:

> 'It is doubtful whether Ramsay ever saw this pastoral play in Scotland, although Theophilus Cibber staged a version of it at Drury Lane in 1730, under the title "Patie and Peggy: or the Paid Foundling"—a ballad opera of one Act, with the Scotch dialect turned into English, and the whole condensed from Ramsay's Pastoral.'

Here it is sufficient to say that Ramsay did see his 'Gentle Shepherd' acted in Scotland, as he was present at a performance of it at Taylor's Hall, Edinburgh, on January 22, 1729, though it is only fair to add that Mr. Kidson admits Ramsay's ballad opera as 'giving the lead to Gay's "Beggar's Opera."'

Most articles on the subject of ballad opera tell us that Gay was influenced by Dean Swift in his suggestion for 'A Newgate Pastoral,' but Mr. Kidson, commenting on Pope's words, 'Dr. Swift had been observing once to Mr. Gay what an odd pretty sort of thing a Newgate Pastorale might make,' came to a wrong conclusion:

> 'In these words we have an indication that Swift and Gay had been reading or discussing "The Gentle Shepherd," the Scotch Pastoral; and Ramsay's employment of popular tunes for the songs must have given Gay a hint as to the method of introducing music.'

The point of this argument is obviously incorrect, for as a fact Dean Swift had made the suggestion to Gay about nine years before Ramsay's Pastoral was published. Swift wrote to Pope, on August 30, 1716, as follows:

> 'There is a young ingenious Quaker in this town [Dublin] who writes verses to his mistress, not very correct, but in a strain purely what a poetical Quaker should do, commending her looks and habits, &c. It gave me a hint that a Quaker pastoral might succeed if our friend Gay could fancy it, and I think it a fruitful subject. . . Or, what think you of a Newgate Pastoral among the w——s and thieves there?'

Thus we learn that as far back as August, 1716, Swift had actually suggested the theme of the 'Beggar's Opera' to Gay, though it is as well to remark that the suggestion seems to have been dropped, or lost sight of, for ten years, and it was not until Ramsay's Pastoral of the 'Gentle Shepherd' had been issued, in 1725, that Swift met Gay, the exact date being March, 1726. From Swift's correspondence it appears that the famous Dean was the guest of Gay during the late spring and summer of the year 1726—also foregathering with Pope and Congreve—and it is most probable that Ramsay's Pastoral then revived the hint which Swift had given in his letter of August, 1716.

Swift had suggested the germ of the idea, but Ramsay's Pastoral furnished the method of the ballad opera genre. It is well known that in the summer of 1726, when Ramsay's fame had been fanned considerably in London by the publication of his ballad opera, Swift, Pope, and Gay collaborated in evolving the famous 'Beggar's Opera.' Not only must Gay have been familiar with Ramsay's work at this date, but it is most likely that he actually paid a visit to Ramsay at Edinburgh, in November, 1726, and enjoyed the prospect from Ramsay's new shop, near St. Giles's, the windows of which, as Mr. J. Logie Robertson writes, 'looked out on the busiest, as it was the most central, scene of Edinburgh, the space round the old Market Cross.'

In the biography of Allan Ramsay, contributed to the edition of his works published at Edinburgh in 1808—the 'Gentle Shepherd' being issued in two volumes—it is stated that in 1726 Ramsay was visited by Gay:

> '. . . who, from the door of the shop, had remarkable characters pointed out to him, and often retired into it that Ramsay might explain to him the language of "The Gentle Shepherd," which, he observed, would enable him to do the same to Pope, who was likewise, he said, a great admirer of it.'

Thus it came to pass that on Gay's return to London, in February, 1727, he set to work on his Newgate Pastoral, basing his scheme for the 'Beggar's Opera' on Ramsay's libretto. In September following he had his work well in hand, and on October 22, Gay wrote to Swift:

> 'You remember you were advising me to go into Newgate to finish my scenes the more correctly. I now think I shall, for I have no attendance to hinder me; but my opera is already finished.'

Swift replied to this on November 27, expressing his satisfaction that the opera was completed; and Pope wrote to Swift, in January, 1728:

> 'John Gay's opera is just on the point of delivery: it may be called, considering its subject, "A Jail Delivery."'

Of course, long before the appearance of the 'Gentle Shepherd' there were musical plays and masques, Milton's 'Comus' (1634) being a notable example; and 'Prunella,' a pasticcio of airs from 'Arsinoe,' 'Camilla,' and 'Thomyris,' as well as ballad tunes, was performed at Drury Lane Theatre on February 12, 1709. However, Ramsay's 'Gentle Shepherd,' written in 1725, can claim to be the first of its genre, with spoken dialogue, a comic plot, and suitable songs set to selected airs, including folk-tunes, mostly old Scottish.

Lastly, it is safe to say that although Gay may be credited with the success attaching to the production of the 'Beggar's Opera,' yet Ramsay, with his 'Gentle Shepherd,' was undoubtedly the first in the field, and may thus be styled the inventor of ballad opera. As I write, I have before me a copy of Ramsay's 'Scots Pastoral Comedy,' the seventh edition, printed in 1737. It is in five Acts, and has twenty songs, opening with 'The Wauking of the Foulds,' and closing with 'Corn Riggs are bonny.' The original edition—dedicated to the Countess of Eglinton—was 'printed for the author by Thomas Ruddiman, and was sold by James McEwen, at Glasgow; by Matthew Bryson, at Newcastle; and by Mr. Farquhar, at Aberdeen.'

Owing to the feeling in Scotland against plays in general, it was not acted publicly for some years, but it was given a performance 'by a set of young gentlemen' at Taylor's Hall, Edinburgh, as an afterpiece to 'The Orphan,' on January 22, 172$^{8}_{9}$, for which Ramsay supplied an Epilogue.—Yours, &c.,

W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD.

Musical Notes from Abroad

HOLLAND

The celebration of the fortieth year of the Concertgebouw did not bring forward anything strikingly new, but gave a résumé of the methods and principles for which the orchestra has, under both its conductors, stood firm. Willem Kes, musically the founder and for seven years the conductor of the orchestra, was present, and at one of the concerts directed a thoroughly poetical performance of Schubert's 'Unfinished.' His successor, Willem Mengelberg, still comparatively young, in spite of his thirty-three years' service, took over the rest of the general programmes and gave magnificent readings of Beethoven's 'Choral' Symphony, Richard Strauss's 'Don Quixote' and 'Ein Heldenleben,' Mahler's second Symphony, &c. There was a programme of works by native composers, but apart from a pleasant little item by Johan Wagenaar there was nothing in it that was new and nothing of any striking quality. The programme that aroused the most interest was that of works by Igor Stravinsky, including his new opera-oratorio, 'Œdipus Rex.' Stravinsky is persona grata at Amsterdam, and even had the work been of less interest he was assured of a hearty welcome. He conducted this as well as 'Petrouchka,' and both the music and the man were warmly applauded. From the reports received from other places it would appear that nowhere has 'Œdipus' had such a critical and popular success as at Amsterdam. Whether this is because it contains many passages that bear a real relation to the classics, or whether the piquancy of its modernism tickled the fancy of its hearers, or whether the appeal was principally in the excellent performance by orchestra, chorus ('Toonkunst'), and soloists, it is difficult to say. One may not leave unnamed and unpraised the soloists, Louis van Tulder, a tenor of exceptional vocal and artistic gifts, Helen Sadoken, a soprano made for the part of Jocaste, Jac van Kempen, Gustave Huderbeau, and Thom Denijs. Whatever doubts as to its justification as a musical work may have been aroused on the part of the more conservative of its hearers, the skill with which 'Œdipus Rex' is constructed, the personality of its composer, and the excellence in every respect of the performance made it a tremendous success.

Besides the purely musical aspect of the festival there was also the personal and social one. Four of the members of the orchestra—Messrs. Kemman and Bauer (violinists), Bakker (violist), and de Groen (fagottist)—have served during the whole period of forty years, and received honours suited to the occasion. A great reception with entertainments both of a light and serious character was held, and speeches made by Ministers and others in the presence of a gathering representative of all classes of musicians and music-lovers. Except for a few recitals and one or two choral society concerts this practically closed the season. The Hague 'Toonkunst' Choir included in the programme of its spring concert the 'Vesperæ Solemnes' of Mozart with the recently discovered orchestration, a work which aroused interest and proved very pleasant without showing any great depth of feeling or religious insight. Dr. Wagenaar, who has been conductor of this choir for the past nine years, has announced his intention of retiring from that position after the spring concert of next year, at which will be celebrated the Centenary of the foundation of the Society. His reason for retiring is simply that at his age (he is sixty-seven), he thinks he should begin to make way for the younger generation. He will probably be succeeded by Dr. van Anrooy.

Among the recitals of the last few weeks the only one that has aroused more than ordinary interest was that of Nathan Milstein, a young Russian violinist, who with a somewhat awkwardly constructed programme and an instrument that was certainly not one of the best, showed technical and interpretative ability of a very high character. He seems to have a personality, also, that should lead to the development of a really great artist.

HERBERT ANTCLIFFE.

ITALY

The visit to Milan by the Philharmonic Orchestra of the Budapest Theatre Royal was the most important event of the past month. The Orchestra is directed by the pianist-composer Ernst von Dohnányi, and in two concerts it gave evidence of being a very efficient and well-drilled organization. The first programme included Goldmark's 'Sakuntala' Overture, Tchaikovsky's fourth Symphony, the conductor's 'Ruralia Hungarica,' and pieces by Liszt and Verdi—the 'Vespri Siciliani,' naturally. Interest was centred in the Goldmark and in Dohnányi's own work, particularly the latter, which, in three well constructed, highly-coloured, and well contrasted movements, contains some very serious and interesting music. The second concert was dedicated to Beethoven: the third 'Leonora' Overture, the second Pianoforte Concerto, and the 'Eroica' Symphony. In the Concerto, Dohnányi set himself the difficult task of playing the pianoforte and directing at the same time. The result was not so happy as could have been hoped. One was led to ask why a soloist had not been specially engaged. The conductor, no matter what his playing may have been once, is no longer a 'high light' at the keyboard, and one felt that a very much better executiorf of the Concerto would have been arrived at had the two jobs been distributed, as good British industry demands, 'a man apiece.' The 'Eroica' was quite the best thing the Hungarians presented that evening. The tempi were, however, open to question, and in the Funeral March there was not sufficient austerity.

It was interesting to note, too, the diverse tone-colours as compared with an Italian orchestra—for example, that of La Scala. Not taking into account the marked superiority of the latter body, it is difficult to say whether the difference mentioned lies in the instruments used or in the schooling of the players. The Hungarians, I noticed, but seldom employed even a slight vibrato. One could look round the entire row of bows and never see a left wrist move. The resultant tone, possibly for this reason, often uncannily resembled that of an organ.

FOUR CENTURIES OF ITALIAN MUSIC AT THE MILAN EXHIBITION

A well-devised and well-executed scheme of arranging a chronological programme covering four centuries in as many concerts, was the special musical attraction at the Fair during the last week of April. The first day's music was devoted to the 17th century, and proved in every way the most interesting. After some harpsichord music, transcribed for the pianoforte, and some of the best of the arias, there was given a performance of 'Tancredi and Clorinda.' The exquisite loveliness of the Monteverdi work, like that of the Scarlatti 'Stabat Mater' given at Florence recently, entirely won over the big public present. It is surprising and distressing to find such a vast ignorance of the classic masters here. These old works are scarcely known except to a few of the more advanced maestri.

The 18th-century programme was less interesting, owing no doubt to the poverty of that century in comparison with its immediate predecessor. Boccherini was the favourite of the early sonata writers, and a delightful performance of his third Sonata for 'cello and pianoforte proved grateful hearing. The principal work of the day was Cimarosa's 'An Italian Lady in London.' The 19th century was represented by 'La Falce' of Catalani, and virtuoso music of Martucci, Busoni, Bossi, &c., and some arias by Verdi, Donizetti, Bellini, and Rossini. This brought us up to modern times, with which the series ended.

AT LA SCALA

M. Panizza conducted a good performance of 'Andrea Chenier,' with the ever-popular and excellent Pertile in the title-rôle. Galeffi sang well as Gérard; Bruna Rasa sang her lines to satisfaction and acted her part as well as her lack of scena permitted. She has a good voice and diction, and when she adds plastique to her list of studies will do very well. As at Rome, there have otherwise been only repetitions of operas already given several times, and except that there were a couple of performances of 'Turandot,' with the tenor Jan Kiepura, nothing new remains to chronicle. CHARLES D'IF.

TORONTO

There have been one or two noteworthy events here during the past month, the most significant, so far as Canadian music is concerned, being a short tour by the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir to Detroit and Cincinnati. Dr. H. A. Fricker arranged an a cappella programme for the former city in exchange for a very welcome visit earlier in the year from the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. The Choir captured the hearts of the Detroit critics, and evidently established a new standard in choral achievement. Equally great was the success of the Canadians at Cincinnati, where they joined forces with Mr. Fritz Reiner's orchestra in a three-day Festival of four performances. Here again it was the high standard and finished musicianship of the singers which impressed the Americans. The programmes were built up mainly with works heard this year at the Toronto Festival.

A new choir has made its appearance in this city, organized by Dr. Ernest Macmillan at the Toronto Conservatory. The young body recently co-operated with Dr. Luigi von Kunits and the Conservatory Orchestra in a well-balanced performance of Mozart's 'Requiem.' The reading enhanced Dr. Macmillan's reputation. A few smaller works were tastefully given, the orchestra contributing two novelties, a Symphonic Poem by Vaughan Williams and the arrangement by Albert Coates of a Purcell Suite for strings.

Our own Toronto Symphony has given two concerts, presenting Miss Isabelle Burnada, a young contralto from Western Canada, and your very efficient pianist, Mr. Norman Wilkes. The orchestra offered familiar classics by Grieg, Rossini, and Smetana.

Leaving one of the best things to the end, we have at last heard your Westminster Glee Singers—and have thoroughly enjoyed, and at times marvelled at, the true English purity of vocalism. The performance was slightly marred in places by an unavoidable travel-tiredness of voice, but we heard enough to learn much to our advantage. We have only one criticism to offer—why do not these splendid artists from the Old Country bring out with them a professional accompanist? No man can do two jobs well during the same programme, even if he is an Englishman.

Excellent and well-attended recitals have come from such celebrities as Paderewski, Rachmaninov, Kreisler, Hans Kindler (the eminent Dutch 'cellist), our own Hart House String Quartet, and Ellen Ballon, a promising young Canadian pianist.

Quite a number of interesting events are crowding into the closing few weeks of our musical season. Maurice Ravel was welcomed, in association with the Hart House String Quartet. His works were unusually well received. The Hart House Strings gave his F major Quartet, Mr. Ravel played his Sonatine, and Lisa Roma (soprano) sang three Oriental songs—'Asie,' 'Scheherazade,' and 'Chanson Hébraïque.'

We have been fortunate enough to hear one of the finest American organists of the day, Lynnwood Farnam, who gave a recital on the new Yorkminster Church organ. Mr. Farnam is a native of Quebec, and, as perhaps you will remember, was trained at the Royal College, London. He is a masterful technician and a thorough musician.

Passion week brought the regular performance of Bach's 'St. Matthew' Passion, under the joint direction of Dr. Ernest Macmillan and Mr. Richard Tattersall; Mr. Campbell McInnes, as usual, taking the part of Christus, Mr. Joseph Lautner, of New York City, substituting for Mr. Alfred Heather, who is at present at New York.

A new venture has been successfully launched by Dr. Ernest Macmillan at the Conservatory—a week of opera in one of the town theatres, given by Conservatory pupils. To give experience to a larger number of students and to overcome the understudy problem, double casts were used alternately for performances of Humperdinck's 'Hansel and Gretel' and Sullivan's 'The Sorcerer.' An opera school of the English rather than the Italian style has been badly needed here for many years, and Dr. Macmillan has now started a ball rolling which should develop into an important Conservatory activity.

There has been quite an attractive array of solo artists—Poul Bai, an interesting Danish baritone, introduced many new Scandinavian songs; Margaret Metzenauer and Tudor Davies co-operated in a programme which drew special attention to purity of style and diction; Mark Hambourg gave a Beethoven programme; and Norman Wilkes, the English pianist, introduced into a varied scheme some attractive works by Jervis Read, Edwin Benbow, and Frank Bridge.

Two or three months ago I promised a word about the Harvard Glee Club. The programme given here by fifty-five members of the regular two hundred voices, under the direction of Mr. Archibald T. Davison, speaks for itself as being one of the most extensively representative choral presentations ever undertaken by a visiting choir. It is a significant illustration of the educational trend of American music that a University chorus can develop such a distinct sense of musicianship and true artistic beauty demanded by such a programme. Here are the items: choruses from Rimsky-Korsakov's 'Sadko'; French carols, 'Le Marche de St. Nicolas,' 'Les Anges dans nos Campagnes'; 'Chœur des Cahneliers' (Franck); 'Ave Verum' (Byrd); 'Sacrum Convivium' (Viadana); 'Cantate Domino' (Hans von Hasler); French-Canadian chansons, 'Mon Père a fait batir Mason,' 'La-bas sur ces Montagnes'; 'Der Gang zum Liebchen' (Brahms); six choruses from 'The Yeomen of the Guard' (Sullivan); 'The Campbells are comin',' 'The Hundred Pipers,' 'Gently, Johnny,' 'Swansea Town.' H. C. F.

VIENNA

SCHUBERT: A HUNDRED YEARS AGO, AND NOW

The Schubert Centenary is with us. Vienna, the master's own city, indulges in its blessings with even more intensity than all other musical centres. Schubert is being served to us day by day, in concert-halls, theatres, and newspapers alike. Critics and musicologists conjure the beloved shade to demonstrate, by comparison, the futility of present-day creative musical effort, with particular reference to Ernst Krenek's jazz opera, 'Jonny Spielt Auf'; famous conductors and recitalists seek to lend new interest to their programmes by allusions to the historical event, and minor artists gladly embrace the topical opportunity for increased activity; astute managers of all kinds try, as the Germans say, to 'boil their broth on Schubert's fire.' Thus we have had to endure the depressing spectacle of a scenic description of the 'Müller Lieder' interpolated in a second-rate revue; an 'historical operetta' with Schubert as its central figure presented in a circus; and a 'song play' based on Schubert's music, entitled 'The Musician from Lichtenthal,' and narrating the story of the master's life with less historical accuracy than well-aimed speculation upon the hearers' sentimentality. The pot-pourri is the work of Emil Berté, nephew of the gentleman who first plucked 'Lilac Time' and ample royalties from Schubert's inheritance, and who has apparently founded a dynasty of prosperous Schubert exploiters. Eduard Erhard, an operatic basso who has seen better days, contributed a portrait-like impersonation of Schubert, and his distant family bonds to the 'Song King,' appropriately discovered by him or by his alert press agent, helped to provide the otherwise lacking 'atmosphere.' The great master who left a fortune of sixty-three gulden and a hospital bill two or three times in excess of that sum, has indeed become a source of prosperity for many heirs!

More appropriate was a Schubert celebration held by the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde, the famous old Society which once declined Schubert's dedication of a Symphony—I believe it was that in C major—but which has at least earnestly laboured since to redeem its mistake. The concert was an exact duplicate of the one and only concert given at Vienna by Franz Schubert, and given to the day a hundred years ago. Then as now the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde was the patron of the concert; and then as now, the enthusiasm was great and the receipts comparatively small. The Rosé Quartet, the pianist Severin Eisenberger, Josef Manowarda (replacing the famous basso and friend of Schubert's, Johann Michael Vogl), Rosette Anday, and the Männergesang Verein joined forces for the occasion. To Carl Lafite fell the difficult task of replacing, at the pianoforte, him from whose inspired soul sprang all this lovely music.

GUEST CONDUCTORS

The conductors' question at the Staatsoper, long latent, has been temporarily solved by the engagement of Dr. Wilhelm Furtwängler for a series of guest appearances. The solution is a tentative one. The Staatsoper commands artists like Franz Schalk and Robert Heger for the 'big' operas, and Carl Alwin for the current répertoire. Richard Strauss figures as a 'stranger of distinction' for twenty guest-nights each year. Furtwängler, one is inclined to fear, will not be much more than that, with interesting and lucrative engagements abroad occupying much of his time. One may anticipate from him many a great performance, and his tremendous popularity at Vienna will insure the full houses which Strauss fails to draw. The hard-working, permanent conductor and drill-master that the Staatsoper needs, he is not and does not wish to be. A temporary solution, as I said.

A new conductor has been discovered by Vienna and proclaimed one of the few great ones: Nikolai Malko, a celebrity in the uncontrollable realms of his native Russia, conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic Orchestra. His debut, awaited with mingled interest and scepticism, marked the entrée of a new European figure into Vienna's musical life. He is a pupil of Mottl, but, if comparisons be permitted, reminds one more of Nikisch; not in languidness of pose (Malko is free from all affectation), but in fascination over orchestra and public. As a conductor of his native Russian music—Mjaskowsky's Fifth, for example—he is without rival in our region.

Lack of an economic sense was a drawback in a Symphony—his first—by Guido Binkau, a young Austrian composer-conductor. He, too, suffers from a superabundance of fancy, so to speak, and a temporary inability to subordinate it under the unwritten laws of musical discipline. His dash is Straussian, his themes at times Wagnerian, yet his distinct sense of orchestral sonorities, his talent for colouring, and his evident temperament, are clearly his own. At the close of his first movement he succumbs to the temptations of Mahlerian metaphysics and to an 'operatic fallacy'; his second movement, Spanish in colour, is attractive, and as the evening proceeded, conviction grew as to a talent of no common sort. It will be well to remember his name.

ROBERT HEGER AS COMPOSER

Great is Vienna's admiration for Robert Heger. His deep, solid musicianship, his serious, unswerving capacity for constructive work, have attained for this eminent musician a place which lesser minds more alert to public display are wont to gain more easily. Such qualities speak also from his choral composition entitled 'A Song of Peace.' It is rarely that a composition so clearly reflects the character and personality of its author: Heger, the earnest, unerring, idealistic musician, and Heger, the sincere, self-set personality who remains undisturbed by strife and slogans of the day. His 'Song of Peace' is not 'modern' in its mentality—rather it betrays an imaginative trend of mind quite foreign to the 'Sachlichkeit' of the period. Hans Pfitzner alone, perhaps, musters equal courage of his convictions; and it surely requires courage for an artist of this restless period to address himself to his public with a large choral work of such an idealistic, spiritual frame of mind. Bach, Handel, or Mendelssohn did so in an epoch which tended towards contemplation; in this epoch of machines and nerves it is only the deep musician who possesses—and expects from his hearers—the concentration and idealism that Heger presupposes in his audience. His inspiration, his craftsmanship, and his lofty conception of music won the day for him. His 'Song of Peace,' moreover, ought to be a boon to choral societies and conductors who have long vainly sought a new and worthy task for their abilities. A magnificent performance, under Heger's baton, put the virtues of the composition into brightest light. The ovations for Heger conveyed not only homage to the conductor, but also gratitude for the noble work that this musician has done for the musical cause at Vienna since his advent here.

PAUL BECHERT.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

GEORGE LEAKE at Hulse Road Nursing Home, Southampton, on May 8. Head of the Department of Music at University College, Southampton, since its inception in 1909, he became professor of music there in 1920. He was chairman of the Music and Syllabus Committee of the Southampton Competitive Musical Festival, in the inauguration of which he played an important part. A prominent member, and one of the initiators of the Hampshire Association of Organists, he was also for many years deputy-conductor, and finally conductor, of the Philharmonic Society; and he has held successively the post of organist at St. Mark's Church and the Parish Church of St. Mary. An active Freemason, Prof. Leake was a Past Master of Southampton Lodge 394, a P.P.G. Organist, and a Past First Principal of the Chapter of Concord, Royal Arch Masonry.

GEOFFREY HATTEN, in March, aged forty-three. He was educated at Tonbridge School, from whence he gained an organ scholarship at Caius College, Cambridge. He acted as deputy-organist to the late Prof. Charles Wood, under whom he studied composition. In 1905 he held the Stewart of Rannoch Exhibition in Sacred Music, and graduated Mus. Bac. In addition to being an excellent pianist and organist, he was a capable performer on the violoncello. By profession he was a solicitor at Gravesend and Northfleet, but maintained his interest in music, conducting the Northfleet Choral Society for many years.

EMILE BOHNKE, on May 11, in Pomerania, as a result of a motor accident. He was born at Zdunska Wola, in Poland, on October 11, 1888. He studied at Leipsic Conservatoire, under Sitt and Krehl, and became a teacher at Stern's Conservatoire, and viola player in the Bandler Quartet and also in the Adolf Busch Quartet. A few years ago Bohnke settled at Berlin as a composer and musical director, being made (1923) conductor of the Leipsic Symphony Orchestra. He also held the post of professor of viola at the Berlin High School of Music.

JULES WERTHEIM, at Warsaw, on May 6, suddenly, at a concert, while conducting 'The Mastersingers' Overture. Born at Warsaw, in 1880, he studied under Moszkowski, Sliwinski, and Noskowski. He won a gold medal at the Warsaw Conservatoire in 1901, and for some years was professor of instrumentation there. He afterwards went to Berlin, and achieved considerable success as a composer, writing several symphonies and a good many songs and pianoforte pieces.

HENRY REED, while playing the organ at Staveley, near Kendal, on May 13. He was eighty-one years of age, and had been an organist for sixty-five years. For a long period he played every Sunday at three Westmorland village churches—Inge, Kentmere, and Staveley.

MARJORIE BOOTH at Bristol, aged thirty-two. She was the wife of Mr. Dennis Noble, and was herself a successful singer, having frequently appeared at London concerts and at various B.B.C. stations.

JAMES LOVE, Falkirk, for fifty-one years organist of Falkirk Parish Church, forty years music-master in the Burgh schools, and for many years conductor of Falkirk Choral Union.

Miscellaneous

The State Opera of Dresden is planning a series of Festival performances from June 6 to July 1. The principal feature of the series is the first production of Strauss's latest opera, 'Die Aegyptisch Helena,' a setting of a libretto by Hugo von Hofmannsthal. This opens the Festival on June 6, and will be given six times in all. The other works of Strauss included are 'Intermezzo,' 'Elektra,' 'Rosenkavalier,' and 'Die Frau ohne Schatten.' An interesting sign of the times is the inclusion of Verdi's 'Macbeth' and 'Il Forza del Destino.' The former is an early work, dating from 1847. The other works in the list are 'Der Freischütz,' 'Così fan tutte,' 'Don Giovanni,' and 'Il Seraglio.' Wagner is represented by 'The Flying Dutchman' and 'Tannhäuser.'

Felix Weingartner is directing two classes for conductors at the School of Music and Conservatory at Basle, Switzerland, from October 1 next to June 30, 1929. For beginners there will be a weekly class of two hours. Advanced conductors will receive three lessons of three hours each per week. The orchestra will be the complete force of the Basler Orchester-Gesellschaft (forty-three members). At all lessons discussion of problems arising will be a valuable feature. Members of the beginners' class will be given free admission to rehearsals of the symphony concerts and operatic performances. Full particulars are to be had from the administration of the Conservatory.

Old Charlton Choral Society performed 'The Black Knight' and 'The Banner of St. George,' on April 28, under Mr. R. G. Martindale. A Violin Sonata by McEwen was played by Miss Joan Worsdell and Mr. Martindale.

In connection with the Society of Women Musicians Miss Myra Hess will give a recital at the Society headquarters (74, Grosvenor Street, W.) on June 13, at 8.15.

Three books of Studies in Sight-Reading for pianoforte, written by Dr. John E. Borland for the use of examinees in the three Divisions of Trinity College of Music Examinations, are in the press, and will shortly be obtainable from Messrs. Hammond.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

Charges for Advertisements:—

| | £ | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Two Lines ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 | 0 |
| Three Lines ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 | 4 |
| For every additional Line ... ... ... | 0 | 0 | 10 |
| One inch (displayed) ... ... ... ... | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| Half a Column... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| A Column ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 | 0 |
| A Page ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 10 | 0 |

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.

A remittance should be sent with every Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To insure insertion in their proper positions, Advertisements for the next issue should reach the Office, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, not later than

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20 (First Post).

CONTENTS.

| | Page. |
|---|---|
| Mr. W. Arundel Orchard (illustrated) ... ... ... ... | 497 |
| Schubert's Style. III.—Accentuation. By Richard Capell ... | 500 |
| The Destinies of Music. By Leonid Sabaneev ... ... ... | 502 |
| 'Boris Godunov' as Moussorgsky Wrote it. III.—The Complete 'Boris Godunov.' By M.-D. Calvocoressi ... ... | 506 |
| The Jew's Harp a Century Ago. By Anthony Clyne ... ... | 508 |
| Handel's Music-Paper: with other Notes. By P. Robinson ... | 509 |
| The Exhibition of the Royal Academy of Arts. By Arthur T. Froggatt ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 510 |
| New Light on Late Tudor Composers. XXXIV.—Anthony Holborne. By W. H. Grattan Flood ... ... ... ... | 511 |
| Who was Beethoven's 'First Mæcenas'? ... ... ... ... | 512 |
| Reaction and Prejudice. By T. H. Elliot ... ... ... ... | 512 |
| The Musicians' Bookshelf ... ... ... ... ... ... | 513 |
| Books Received ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 513 |
| Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi ... ... | 514 |
| New Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 514 |
| An Error ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 517 |
| Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus' ... ... ... ... ... | 517 |
| Player-Piano Notes ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 518 |
| Wireless Notes ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 519 |
| 'The Dream of Gerontius' in Lincoln Cathedral. By Herbert Thompson ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 519 |
| Teachers' Department: | |
| The Personal Element in Teaching Music. By Barbara Howarth ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 520 |
| On 'Learning Music.' By A. H. Peppin ... ... ... ... | 521 |
| Points from Lectures ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 522 |
| Easy Pianoforte Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 523 |
| The Appreciative Study of Music ... ... ... ... ... | 524 |
| Answers to Correspondents ... ... ... ... ... ... | 525 |
| Church and Organ Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 527 |
| Royal College of Organists ... ... ... ... ... ... | 527 |
| The Organ and the Gramophone ... ... ... ... ... | 527 |
| Letters to the Editor ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 534 |
| The Amateurs' Exchange ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 539 |
| Sharps and Flats ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 539 |
| Sixty Years Ago ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 540 |
| Royal Academy of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 540 |
| Royal College of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 540 |
| Trinity College of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 541 |
| The Associated Board · Award of Medals ... ... ... ... | 541 |
| Parry's 'Judith' at Alton ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 541 |
| Organists' Long Service Roll of Honour. By C. W. Pearce ... | 542 |
| Music in Public Schools ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 543 |
| Some Problems in the Performance of Bach's Church Cantatas | 544 |
| Conference on the Board of Education's Latest Published Suggestions for the Teaching of Music ... ... ... ... | 545 |
| Covent Garden Opera Season ... ... ... ... ... ... | 546 |
| Ninth Centenary of Guido D'Arezzo ... ... ... ... ... | 547 |
| London Concerts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 549 |
| Music in the Provinces ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 549 |
| Competition Festival Record ... ... ... ... ... ... | 550 |
| Music in Scotland ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 553 |
| Music in Wales ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 553 |
| Music in Ireland ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 554 |
| The First Ballad Opera: Allan Ramsay's 'Gentle Shepherd.' By W. H. Grattan Flood ... ... ... ... ... ... | 554 |
| Musical Notes from Abroad ... ... ... ... ... ... | 555 |
| Obituary ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 557 |
| Miscellaneous ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 558 |

MUSIC.

| | |
|---|---|
| 'Stars of the Summer night.' Four-part Song. By W. A. C. Cruickshank ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 529 |

TWO EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS are given with this number:

1. Portrait of Mr. W. Arundel Orchard.
2. 'Sleep.' Madrigal for Six Voices. (S.A.A.T.T.B.). By Bernard Johnson.

CHOIR LEADER (Soprano) WANTED at Brixton Unitarian Church. Small Salary. Apply Organist, 14, Daysbrook Road, S.W.2.

CAPABLE ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER WANTED for Winchmore Hill Baptist Church. Apply, A. E. Green, 65, Park Avenue, Bush Hill Park.

CHURCH ORGAN.—2 Manuals, 22 Stops, pneumatic pedals. Eminent builder. Very fine tone and condition. Entirely rebuilt, and is like new. Fully warranted. Handsome case. Bargain to immediate purchaser, including carriage and erection. Photo, &c., Le Marchant Organ Works, Torquay.

DURING THE LAST MONTH

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED

BAINTON, EDGAR L.—"If I were yonder wave." Part-Song for Men's Voices (T.T.B.B.). (No. 606, The Orpheus.) 4d.

—— "The Green Linnet." Two-Part Song. (No. 238, Novello's Two-Part Songs.) 4d.

CRUICKSHANK, W. A. C.—"Stars of the Summer Night." Arranged as a Four-Part Song (S.A.T.B.). (No. 1024, The Musical Times.) 3d.

HARRISON, JULIUS.—"The Blessed Damozel." For Female Voices. 1s. 6d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 432, contains the following music in both notations. "Under the greenwood tree" (Unison Song) (Tune, "Sellenger's Round"). "The Daisies" (Two-part Song). WALTER HATELY (arranged by H. A. C.). 2d.

SCHOOL SONG SERIES.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

| | A. | B. |
|---|---|---|
| No. 1492. "Hark! hark! the lark." (Unison Song) ... ... SCHUBERT"Cradle Song." (Unison Song) SCHUBERT | 2d. | |

STOCKS, H. C. L.—"Thus saith the Lord." (Short Unaccompanied Anthem for Saints' Days or General Use.) (No. 255, Novello's Short Anthems.) 2d.

THOMPSON, ROY.—"Since my sadness." Processional Hymn. (No. 1151, Novello's Parish Choir Book.) 2d.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK

CHILDE, C. S.—"In Fairy Glen." Part-Song for Mixed Voices. (No. 340, Modern Series.) 25 cents (1s.).

MILES, R. H.—"The Lake of Dismal Swamp." Choral Ballad for Women's Voices with Soprano Solo. 35 cents (1s. 8d.).

SEALY, F. L.—"O Israel, return unto the Lord your God." Anthem for Mixed Voices, with Tenor and Bass Solos. (No. 937, Church Music Review.) 15 cents (8d.).

TSCHESNOKOFF, P. (arr. by I. T. Gorakhoff).—"Praise ye the Name of the Lord." Anthem for Women's Voices. (No. 906, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (10d.).

VORIS, W. R.—"Praise ye the Lord." (A Pæan.) Anthem for Soprano Solo and Chorus of Mixed Voices. (No. 936, Church Music Review.) 30 cents (1s. 6d.).

TWO Double-Manual ORGANS. — For quick sale. 25 guineas and 40 guineas. In perfect condition. Apply, H. Pitchfork, 29, Buttermarket St., Warrington. Tel.: 946 & 1083.

ORGANIST AND MUSICAL DIRECTOR REQUIRED for East Ham Central Hall. Apply, the Mission Secretary, Wesleyan Central Hall, Barking Road, East Ham, E.6. State age, experience, qualifications, salary required.

JUST PUBLISHED

IN TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION.

A SONG OF DESTINY

(SCHICKSALSLIED)

COMPOSED BY

JOHANNES BRAHMS.

OP. 54.

PRICE ONE SHILLING

Staff Notation Edition, price 1s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

"LONELINESS"

and other Essays, also extracts from Lectures on Singing delivered to the Students of the Royal Academy of Music, London.

By AGNES J. LARKCOM, F.R.A.M.

Price 4s. 6d.; postage, 4d. extra.

GERALD DUCKWORTH & CO.,

3, HENRIETTA ST., COVENT GARDEN, or any bookseller.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SEVENTEEN SONGS

COMPOSED BY

HENRY PURCELL.

Edited and arranged, with accompaniment for the Pianoforte, by

ARTHUR SOMERVELL.

Price Four Shillings

CONTENTS.

A PASTORAL ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF MR. JOHN PLAYFORD.
AH! CRUEL NYMPH.
AH! HOW PLEASANT.
AH! WHAT PAINS.
AN ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF MATTHEW LOCKE
ANACREON'S DEFEAT.
CEASE, O MY SAD SOUL.
HOW DELIGHTFUL 'S THE LIFE.
I FAIN WOULD BE FREE.
IF MUSIC BE THE FOOD OF LOVE (2nd Version).
LET EACH GALLANT HEART.
LOVE ARMS HIMSELF.
OLINDA.
ON THE BROW OF RICHMOND HILL.
SAWNEY IS A BONNY LAD.
THE FATAL HOUR COMES ON.
THE QUEEN'S EPICEDIUM (ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF QUEEN MARY, 1695).

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

COMPOSITIONS BY EDWARD ELGAR

VOCAL

PART-SONGS (MIXED VOICES)

Unaccompanied (unless otherwise stated). s. d.

AFTER MANY A DUSTY MILE (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. o 4
ANGELUS (Tuscany) (Op. 56, No. 1) (Sol-fa, 2d.) o 6
BIRTHRIGHT, THE (Marching Song) .. .. o 4
DITTO, for Unison-Singing .. .. .. .. .. .. o 2
(Bugle and Drum parts, on hire only.)
§CHRISTMAS GREETING, A (Op. 52). For two Sopranos (Soli or Chorus), Tenor and Bass Chorus, ad lib. With accompaniment for two Violins and Pianoforte (Sol-fa, 4d.) o 8
Violin Parts, 8d. each.
DEATH ON THE HILLS (7 parts) (Op. 72) (Sol-fa, 6d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. o 8
EVENING SCENE (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. .. o 6
FEASTING I WATCH (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. o 4
§FLY, SINGING BIRD (Arranged by J. POINTER) (Op. 26, No. 2) (Sol-fa, 4d.) .. .. .. .. .. o 8
FOUNTAIN, THE (5 Parts) (Op. 71, No. 2) (Sol-fa, 6d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. o 8
FOUR PART-SONGS (Op. 53) (Sol-fa, 1s. 6d.) Complete .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 2 6
Or, separately—
1. There is sweet music (8 parts) (Sol-fa, 6d.) .. .. o 8
2. Deep in my soul (6 parts) (Sol-fa, 4d.) .. .. o 6
Ditto, German Words .. .. .. .. o 6
3. O wild West wind (8 parts) (Sol-fa, 4d.) .. .. o 6
4. Owls (an Epitaph) (5 parts) (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. o 6
GO, SONG OF MINE (6 parts) (Op. 57) (Sol-fa, 4d.) o 8
§GOD SAVE THE KING (Arranged) (Sol-fa, 1½d.) o 4
(Full Score, 4s.)
HOW CALMLY THE EVENING (Sol-fa, 2d.) o 3
IT'S OH! TO BE A WILD WIND (Sol-fa, 2d) o 3
LOVE (Op. 18, No. 2) (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. o 6
LOVE'S TEMPEST (5 parts) (Op. 73, No. 1) (Sol-fa, 6d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. o 8
MY LOVE DWELT IN A NORTHERN LAND (Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. o 4
DITTO, German words .. .. .. .. .. .. .. o 6
O HAPPY EYES (Op. 18) (Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. .. o 3
REVEILLE, THE (Sol-fa, 6d.) .. .. .. .. o 8
SERENADE (Op. 73, No. 2) (Sol-fa, 4d.) .. .. o 6
SHOWER, THE (Op. 71, No. 1) (Sol-fa, 4d.) .. o 6
§SNOW, THE. (Arranged by J. POINTER) (Op. 26, No. 1) (Sol-fa, 4d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. o 8
§SPANISH SERENADE (Stars of the Summer Night) (Op. 23) (Sol-fa, 3d.) (Full Score, 7s. 6d.) .. .. o 4
WEARY WIND OF THE WEST (Sol-fa, 2d.) o 4
WHETHER I FIND THEE (Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. o 3
§WITH PROUD THANKSGIVING (Chorus). Words by LAURENCE BINYON. Arranged from "For the Fallen," for S.A.T.B., with accompaniment for Military or Brass Band, or Organ, or Pianoforte (Sol-fa, 6d.) .. .. .. .. o 8
Military Band Accompaniment, 9s.; Brass Band Accompaniment, 6s.
YEA, CAST ME FROM HEIGHTS OF THE MOUNTAINS (Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. .. .. .. o 3
§ Orchestral Parts may be had.

PART-SONGS (MALE VOICES)

T.T.B.B. (unless otherwise stated).

(Unaccompanied.) s. d.

AS TORRENTS IN SUMMER ("King Olaf") (Op. 30). Arranged for A.T.B.B. .. .. .. .. .. o 3
FIVE PART-SONGS (Op. 45, Nos. 1—5) .. .. 2 6
(The words from the Greek Anthology.)
Or, separately, English words only—
After many a dusty mile (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. .. o 6
Feasting I watch (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. .. o 6
It's oh! to be a wild wind (Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. .. .. o 3
Whether I find thee (Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. .. .. .. o 3
Yea, cast me from heights of the mountains (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. o 4
Vocal Parts (German words only), 8d. each.
HERALD, THE (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. .. o 4
REVEILLE, THE (Sol-fa, 6d.) .. .. .. .. o 8

PART-SONGS (MALE VOICES)—continued. s. d.

WANDERER, THE (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. .. o 4
ZUT! ZUT! ZUT! (Remember) (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. o 4
BIRTHRIGHT, THE (Unison School Song) Staff and Sol-fa Notations together .. .. .. .. .. o 2
§FOLLOW THE COLOURS (Unison). Marching song for soldiers (Voice Parts, 3d.) (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. o 6
§ Orchestral Parts may be had.
IT COMES FROM THE MISTY AGES (Unison) ("The Banner of St. George"). (Staff and Sol-fa Notations together) (Sol-fa only, 2d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. o 4

PART-SONGS (FEMALE VOICES)

(Accompanied.) s. d.

AS TORRENTS IN SUMMER ("King Olaf") (Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. o 3
§CHRISTMAS GREETING, A (Op. 52). With accompaniment for two Violins and Pianoforte. (Sol-fa, 4d.) o 8
Violin Parts, 8d. each.
§DOUBT NOT THY FATHER'S CARE (Op. 29) ("The Light of Life"). (Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. .. .. .. o 3
†§FLY, SINGING BIRD (Op. 26, No. 2). With accompaniment for two Violins and Pianoforte. (Sol-fa, 4d.) o 8
Violin Parts, 8d. each. (Full Score, 7s. 6d.)
HOW CALMLY THE EVENING (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. o 4
MY LOVE DWELT IN A NORTHERN LAND (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. o 4
§PRAISE TO THE HOLIEST ("Dream of Gerontius") (Op. 38). Chorus and Semi-Chorus, S.S.A.A. (Sol-fa, 3d.) o 6
†§SNOW, THE (Op. 26, No. 1). With accompaniment for two Violins and Pianoforte. (Sol-fa, 4d.) .. o 8
Violin Parts, 8d. each. (Full Score, 7s. 6d.)
§SPANISH SERENADE (Stars of the summer night). With Accompaniment for two Violins and Pianoforte (Op. 23) (Sol-fa, 4d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. o 8
Violin Parts, 8d. each.
† Editions with German Words may also be had.
§ Orchestral Parts may be had.

SEPARATE NUMBERS FROM THE CHORAL WORKS

APOSTLES, THE (Op. 49). s. d.
Prologue. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me .. .. o 8
BANNER OF ST. GEORGE, THE (Op. 33).
It comes from the misty ages. Epilogue (March) (Sol-fa, 3d.) o 6
Ditto (Unison Song) (arranged) (Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. o 4
CARACTACUS (Op. 35).
Britons, alert (Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. .. .. .. o 4
Lament—(O, my warriors) (Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. .. o 4
The March triumphal thunders (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. o 8
DREAM OF GERONTIUS (Op. 38).
Softly and gently, dearly ransomed soul (Full Score, 9s.) .. o 8
Litany .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. o 3
Be merciful .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. o 4
Go forth upon thy journey .. .. .. .. .. o 6
Praise to the Holiest (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. o 6
KING OLAF (Op. 30).
A little bird in the air (Sol-fa, 4d.) .. .. .. .. o 8
As torrents in summer (Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. .. .. .. o 3
Ditto (arranged for male voices) .. .. .. .. o 3
Ditto (arranged for female voices) (Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. o 3
The challenge of Thor (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. .. o 6
The Wraith of Odin (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. .. .. .. o 6
LIGHT OF LIFE, THE (Op. 29).
Doubt not thy Father's care (Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. .. .. o 3
Light of the World, we know Thy praise (Sol-fa, 3d.) .. o 4
Seek Him that maketh the seven stars (Male Voices) .. o 8
Orchestral Parts may be had of the above Choruses.

COMPOSITIONS BY EDWARD ELGAR

VOCAL

ORATORIOS

s. d.

THE APOSTLES. For Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 49.) (Tonic Sol-fa, Choruses and Words of Solos only, 4s.) .. .. .. 7 6
(Vocal Parts, 2s. 6d. each.)
Full Score, £5 5s. Book of Words, with Analysis, 1s. 4d., or 7s5. net per 100. Words only, 8d., or 4is. 8d. net per 100. An Interpretation of the Libretto by C. V. GORTON, M.A., 1s. 6d. Vocal Score, with German words (Deutsche Übersetzung von JULIUS BUTHS), 12s. Chorstimmen, 3s. each. Textbuch, 8d. Erläuterung von Max Hehemann, 1s. 4d. String Parts, 34s.; Wind Parts on hire only.

THE DREAM OF GERONTIUS. For Mezzo-Soprano, Tenor, and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 38.) (Tonic Sol-fa, Choruses only, 2s. 6d.) .. .. .. .. 5 6
(Vocal Parts, 2s. 6d. each.)
Full Score, £3 3s. Miniature Full Score, paper, 11s. 6d.; cloth, 16s. Book of Words, with Analysis, 1s. 4d., or 6os. 8d. net per 100. Words only, 8d., or 33s. 4d. net per 100. Vocal Score, with German and English words (Deutsche Übersetzung von JULIUS BUTHS), 9s. Chorstimmen, each, 3s. Textbuch, 33s. 4d. per 100. Vocal score, with French words (Traduction française de J. d'Offoël), 9s. Parties de Chœur, 3s. each. Livret, 33s. 4d. per 100. String Parts, 29s. 6d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
Sanctus Fortis. Tenor Solo from above. Transposed to A flat, 6d. Full score, 5s. 6d. String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts on hire only.

THE KINGDOM. For Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 51.) (Tonic Sol-fa, Choruses and Words of Solos only, 4s.) .. .. .. 7 6
(Vocal Parts, 2s. 6d. each.)
Full Score, £5 5s. Book of Words, with Analysis, 1s. 4d., or 7os. net per 100. Words only, 8d., or 41s. 8d. net per 100. An Interpretation of the Libretto by C. V. GORTON, M.A., 1s. 6d. Vocal Score, with German words (Deutsche Übersetzung von JULIUS BUTHS), 7s. 6d. Chorstimmen, 3s. each. Textbuch, 8d. each. String Parts, 37s. 6d; Wind Parts on hire only.

THE LIGHT OF LIFE ("Lux Christi"). A Short Oratorio. For Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, and Baritone Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 29) .. .. 4 0
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d. Full Score, £2 2s.; Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100. String Parts, 20s.; Wind Parts on hire only.

CANTATAS

BANNER OF ST. GEORGE, THE For Chorus (Soprano Solo ad lib.) and Orchestra. (Op. 33) .. .. .. 2 6
Full Score, 25s. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d. Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100. String Parts, 12s. 6d.; Wind Parts, 28s. 11d.

BLACK KNIGHT, THE. For Chorus and Orchestra. (Op. 25) .. .. .. .. .. 3 0
Full Score, 31s. 6d. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100. String Parts, 13s. 6d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
(Vocal Parts, 1s. 6d. each.)

CARACTACUS. For Soprano, Tenor, Baritone, and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 35) .. .. 5 6
Full Score, £3 3s. Tonic Sol-fa (Choruses and Words of Solos only), 2s. 6d. Book of Words, with Analysis, 1s. 4d., or 66s. 8d. net per 100; Words only, 8d., or 33s. 4d. net per 100. String Parts, 36s. 6d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
(Vocal Parts, 2s. 6d. each.)

KING OLAF. For Soprano, Tenor, and Bass Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra. (Op. 30) .. .. .. .. 4 6
Full Score, £3 3s.; Tonic Sol-fa (Choruses only), 2s. 6d. Book of Words, with Analysis, 1s. 4d. or 66s. 8d. net per 100. Words only, 8d., or 33s. 4d. net per 100. String Parts, 34s. 6d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
(Vocal Parts, 2s. 6d. each.)

MUSIC-MAKERS, THE (Op. 69). Ode by Arthur O'Shaughnessy. For Contralto Solo, Chorus, and Orchestra.. 4 0
Tonic Sol-fa, 2s. 6d.; Vocal Parts, 1s. 6d. each; Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100. String Parts, 13s. 6d. Wind Parts on hire only.

SPIRIT OF ENGLAND, THE (Op. 80). A poem by Laurence Binyon. Set for Tenor or Soprano Solo, Chorus, and Orchestra .. .. .. .. .. .. complete 4 0
Tonic Sol-fa, 2s. 6d. Full score, complete, 25s. Complete String Parts, 10s.; Wind Parts on hire only. Vocal Parts on hire only. Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100.
Or, Singly—
1. THE FOURTH OF AUGUST .. .. .. .. 1 6
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Full Score, 13s.; String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
2. TO WOMEN .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 1 0
Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.; Full Score, 7s. 6d.; String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts on hire only.
3. FOR THE FALLEN .. .. .. .. .. .. 1 6
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Full Score, 16s.; String Parts, 3s. 4d.; Wind Parts on hire only. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

ANTHEMS, SERVICES, &C.

s. d.

§CORONATION OFFERTORIUM (Op. 64) .. 0 3

DOUBT NOT THY FATHER'S CARE ("The Light of Life") (Op. 29). Duet, s. and c. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 0 2

FEAR NOT, O LAND (Harvest) .. .. .. .. 0 4
(Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.)

§GIVE UNTO THE LORD (Psalm xxix.) (Op. 74) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 1 0

§GREAT IS THE LORD (Psalm x'viii.) (Op. 67) 1 0
(Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.)

JESU, LORD OF LIFE AND GLORY. Anthem. Adapted from Op. 2, No. 2 (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. .. 0 4

JESU, MEEK AND LOWLY. Anthem. Adapted from Op. 2, No. 3 (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. .. .. 0 4

JESU, WORD OF GOD INCARNATE (Ave Verum) (Op. 2, No. 1). Motet. English and Latin Words (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. .. .. .. .. 0 3

DITTO. English Words only (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) .. 0 3

§LIGHT OF THE WORLD ("The Light of Life") (Op. 29). S.A.T.B. (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) .. .. 0 4

LO! CHRIST THE LORD IS BORN. Carol .. 0 1½

O HEARKEN THOU (Arranged from the Coronation Offertorium) (Op. 64) .. .. .. .. .. 0 4

O MIGHTIEST OF THE MIGHTY (Coronation Hymn) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 0 1½

SEEK HIM THAT MAKETH THE SEVEN STARS ("The Light of Life") (Op. 29). Tenor Solo and Chorus for T.T.B.B. .. .. .. .. .. .. 0 8

§TE DEUM AND BENEDICTUS IN F. For Chorus (S.A.T.B.), Orchestra, and Organ. (Op. 34) .. .. 1 6

THEY ARE AT REST. Elegy (Tonic Sol-fa, 2d.) 0 4

MOTETS (LATIN WORDS)

AVE VERUM (Op. 2, No. 1) (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.).. 0 3

AVE MARIA (Op. 2, No. 2).. .. .. .. .. 0 4

AVE MARIS STELLA (Op. 2, No. 3).. .. .. 0 4

§INTENDE VOCI ORATIONIS MEÆ (Coronation Offertorium) (Op. 64) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 0 3

SONGS

§ANGEL'S SONG, THE: "My work is done" ("Gerontius") (Op. 38). For Mezzo-Soprano .. .. .. 1 6

AS A SPIRIT DIDST THOU PASS BEFORE MINE EYES ("The Light of Life") Op. 29. Tenor .. 2 0

CHILD ASLEEP, A (Contralto) .. .. .. .. 2 0

§FOLLOW THE COLOURS (Marching Song) .. 2 0

IN MOONLIGHT (arranged from the Canto popolare in the Concert-Overture "In the South," Op. 50). (In G, F, and E flat) .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 2 0

OH, SOFT WAS THE SONG (Op. 59, No. 3). In D and E (Orchestral Parts in E only).. .. .. .. 2 0

PLEADING (Op. 48, No. 1). In A flat, G, and F (Orchestral Parts in G only) .. .. .. .. .. 2 0

RIVER, THE (Op. 60, No. 2). In G minor, A minor, and B minor (original). (Orchestral Parts in A minor only) .. 2 0

SWORD SONG, THE ("Caractacus," Op. 35). In E flat and F (Orchestral Parts in F only) .. .. .. 2 0

§THERE ARE SEVEN THAT PULL THE THREAD ("Grania and Diarmid") (Op. 42). Mezzo-Soprano or Baritone .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 2 0

TORCH, THE (Op. 60, No. 1). In F, G, and A (Orchestral Parts in G only) .. .. .. .. .. .. 2 0

§TWILIGHT (Op. 59, No. 6). Contralto .. .. 2 0

§WAS IT SOME GOLDEN STAR (Op. 59, No. 5). Contralto .. .. .. .. .. .. .. 2 0

§ Orchestral Parts may be had.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

COMPOSITIONS BY FRANZ SCHUBERT.

CANTATAS, MASSES, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Song of Miriam, The (Sol-fa, 8d.; Sol-fa, Welsh words, 8d.) | 1 | 6 |
| Lazarus (Selection only) | 2 | 6 |
| Mass in E flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. A flat | 1 | 6 |
| do. F (Sol-fa, 1s.) | 1 | 6 |
| do. B flat | 1 | 6 |
| do. C | 1 | 6 |
| do. G | 1 | 6 |

SERVICES

| | | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Communion Service in | | A flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | B flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | C | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | E flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | F | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | G | 3 | 0 |

ANTHEMS

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Christ has risen (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Good it is to thank the Almighty | 0 | 8 |
| Great is Jehovah the Lord (Solo Tenor and T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Great is Jehovah the Lord (with Chorus for S.A.T.B.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Lord, in thankful love adoring | 0 | 2 |
| The Lord is my Shepherd. S.S.A.A. (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| do. do. do. S.A.T.B. (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Where Thou reignest (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |

PIANOFORTE SOLOS

PIANOFORTE ALBUMS.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 47. | Four Impromptus (Op. 90) | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 48. | do. do. (Op. 142) | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 49. | Moments Musicals, Adagio and Rondo | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 50. | Ten Variations, &c. | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 51. | Adagio, Allegretto, &c. | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 52. | Five Klavierstücke and Two Scherzi | 1 | 6 |

ORGAN ARRANGEMENTS

For particulars see NOVELLO'S CATALOGUE.

PART-SONGS, ETC.

MIXED VOICES

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Dance we so gaily | 0 | 4 |
| Forth to the Meadows ("Rosamunde") (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| God in the Thunderstorm (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Hail to the Chief (Boat Song) (arranged) | 0 | 3 |
| How merry is life ("Rosamunde") (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Hymn to the Eternal | 0 | 4 |
| To Sylvia. Arranged by John E. West (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |

Welcome Spring (Op. 33). A Suite of Vocal Dances:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. Welcome Spring2. How sweet to wander | | 0 | 4 |
| 3. Come, O come, dearest4. As the watcher longs5. I'm in no hurry to marry | | 0 | 4 |
| 6. When gallant lovers7. An end will I bring to doubt | | 0 | 4 |
| 8. Her true love she greeteth9. As dew-drops at morn10. Hark! silv'ry bells chiming | | 0 | 4 |
| 11. Tender music all inviting | | 0 | 4 |

MALE VOICES

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Far beyond all mortal ken (Chorus of Spirits, from "Rosamunde"). T.T.B.B. (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 2 |
| Gondolier's serenade. T.T.B.B. (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Hail to the Chief (Boat Song). (T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Night is cloudless and serene, The. (T. solo, T.T.B.B.) | 0 | 8 |
| Song of the spirits over the waters. (Double chorus, T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 8d.) | 1 | 6 |
| Spectres' Dance, The. T.T.B.B. | 0 | 3 |

FEMALE VOICES

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Five Choruses | 1 | 6 |
| Or singly:— | | |
| Coronach (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Glory to the Lord Almighty | 0 | 4 |
| God in Nature. (A. Solo.) (S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. (S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Serenade. (A. Solo and Chorus. S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 8 |
| Forth to the Meadows ("Rosamunde") (arranged for Two parts, with three-part Semi-Chorus) (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| To Sylvia (arranged for S.S., or C.). Staff and Sol-fa combined | 0 | 2 |

SONGS BY FRANZ SCHUBERT

VOL. 1

TWENTY SONGS

FOR A MEZZO-SOPRANO VOICE

SELECTED, EDITED, AND TRANSLATED BY

NATALIA MACFARREN

Price 2s. 6d.

Praise of Tears.
Knowest thou the land? (Mignon's first song in "Wilhelm Meister").
The Message of Flowers.
Nought may'st thou ask me (Mignon's second song in "Wilhelm Meister").
Oh, let me dream till I awaken (Mignon's third song in "Wilhelm Meister").
The greenwood calls.
The full-orbed moon (Romance from "Rosamund").
Hallow'd night, descend.
Huntsman, rest (Ellen's second song in "The Lady of the Lake").
Thro' the pine-wood.
The Summer waves.
Wanderer's night-song
Trust in Spring.
The maiden's lament.
To Mignon.
The passing-bell.
Alinda.
Ave Maria (Ellen's third song in "The Lady of the Lake").
The fisherman.
On the water.

VOL. 2

TWENTY SONGS

FOR A CONTRALTO VOICE

SELECTED, EDITED, AND TRANSLATED BY

NATALIA MACFARREN

Price 2s. 6d.

The wanderer.
Fisher's song.
The angry bard.
The unlucky fisherman.
Oldman's song.
The flight of time.
Litany for All Souls' day.
The weary heart.
Minstrel's treasure.
Soldiers' drinking song.
Sadness.
To the lyre.
Calm at sea.
Lay of the imprisoned huntsman.
Passing to Hades.
Comfort in tears.
Death and the maiden.
Crusaders.
Dithyramb.
Prometheus.

VOL. 3

TWENTY SONGS

FOR SOPRANO OR TENOR

SELECTED, EDITED, AND TRANSLATED BY

NATALIA MACFARREN

Price 2s. 6d.

The Erl King.
Omnipotence.
Love's unrest.
Rose among the heather.
Sad heart.
The band of roses.
Thou art repose.
Ganymede.
Mignon.
Secrets.
Hark, hark, the lark.
Thee would I greet.
To the beloved one.
Suleika's second song.
Presence of the loved one.
Laughing and weeping.
Margaret's prayer.
By the doorways I will wander.
To a brooklet.
To Sylvia.

VOL. 4

SWAN SONGS

(SCHWANENGESANG)

GERMAN AND ENGLISH WORDS

THE ENGLISH VERSION BY

J. TROUTBECK

Edited, with marks for phrasing, expression, and breathing

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER

Price 2s. 6d.

Love's message — Liebesbotschaft.
The soldier's presentiment—Krieger's Ahnung.
Longings in Spring—Frühlingssehnsucht.
A serenade—Ständchen.
The retreat—Aufenthalt.
In a strange land—In der Fremde.
Departure—Abschied.
Atlas—Der Atlas.
Her portrait—Ihr Bild.
The fishermaiden—Das Fischermädchen.
The town—Die Stadt.
By the sea—Am Meer.
The apparition — Der Doppelgänger.
The pigeon post—Die Taubenpost.

VOL. 5

"THE FAIR MAID OF THE MILL"

(DIE SCHÖNE MÜLLERIN)

GERMAN AND ENGLISH WORDS

THE ENGLISH VERSION BY

J. TROUTBECK

Edited, with marks for phrasing, expression, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER

Price 2s. 6d.

Wandering—Das Wandern
Whither—Wohin.
Halt!—Halt.
Gratitude to the brook—Dankesagung an den Bach.
Evening rest—Am Feierabend.
The question—Der Neugierige.
Impatience—Ungeduld.
Morning greeting—Morgengruss.
The miller's flowers—Des Müller's Blumen.
A rain of tears—Thränenregen.
Mine—Mein.
A pause—Pause.
With the green ribbon—Mit dem grünen Lautenbande.
The hunter—Der Jäger.
Jealousy and pride—Eifersucht und Stolz.
The pleasing colour—Die liebe Farbe.
The hateful colour—Die böse Farbe.
Faded flowers—Trockne Blumen.
The miller and the brook—Der Müller und der Bach.
The brook's lullaby—Des Baches Wiegenlied.

VOL. 6

"THE WINTER JOURNEY"

(WINTERREISE)

GERMAN AND ENGLISH WORDS

THE ENGLISH VERSION BY

J. TROUTBECK

Price 2s. 6d.

Good-night—Gute Nacht.
The weathercock—Die Wetterfahne.
Frozen tears—Gefrorne Thränen.
Benumbed—Erstarrung.
The linden tree—Der Lindenbaum.
A flood—Wasserfluth.
On the stream—Auf dem Flusse.
Looking back—Rückblick.
Jack-a-Lantern—Irrlicht.
Rest—Rast.
A dream of Spring—Frühlingstraum.
Loneliness—Einsamkeit.
The post—Die Post.
The grey head—Der graue Kopf.
The raven—Die Krähe.
The last hope—Letzte Hoffnung.
In the village—Im Dorfe.
The stormy morning—Der stürmische Morgen.
Delusion—Täuschung.
The sign-post—Der Wegweiser.
The hostelry—Das Wirthshaus.
Courage—Muth.
The mock suns—Die Nebensonnen.
The organ grinder—Der Leiermann.

THIRTY SONGS

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS, BOOK 273

IN BOTH NOTATIONS

Price 2s.

Ave Maria.
Courage.
Cradle Song.
Crusaders.
Erlaf-Lake.
Fishermaiden, The.
Fisherman, The.
Fisher's Song.
Full-orbed Moon, The.
Greenwood calls, The.
Hark! hark! the Lark.
Harper's Song, The.
Huntsman, rest.
Know'st thou the land.
Lay of the imprisoned Huntsman.
Litany.
Longing.
Ode to Joy.
Organ-Grinder, The.
Peace.
Rose among the heather.
Secrets.
Thou art repose.
To Music.
Trout, The.
Trust in Spring.
Wanderer's Night-Song.
Wandering Miller, The.
Whither.
Who is Sylvia?

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

VOCAL COMPOSITIONS BY EDWARD GERMAN

| SONGS | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE. D, E flat, and F ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| CHARMING CHLOE. D flat, E flat, and F ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| FIRST FRIEND. (Boy Soprano) ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| HIS LADY. (Mezzo-Soprano) ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| IT WAS A LOVER AND HIS LASS. G and B flat... each | 2 | 0 |
| JUST SO SONG BOOK, THE ... ... ... cloth, net | 7 | 6 |
| LONDON TOWN. C, E flat, and F ... ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| LORDING'S DAUGHTER, THE. D minor and F minor ea. | 2 | 0 |
| MERROW DOWN. (Baritone) ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| *ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE. (Soprano or Tenor) ... | 2 | 0 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO. *G minor and A minor each | 2 | 0 |

| PART-SONGS (S.A.T.B.) | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| CHASE, THE ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| IN PRAISE OF NEPTUNE ... ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| LONDON TOWN ... ... ... ... ... ,, 4d. | 0 | 6 |
| MY BONNIE LASS SHE SMILETH ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| O LOVELY MAY ... ... ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| O PEACEFUL NIGHT ... ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE (4-part) ... ... ,, 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| Do. do. (8-part) ... ... ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, 3d. | 0 | 6 |
| SLEEPING ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| SWEET DAY SO COOL ... ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| THREE KNIGHTS, THE ... ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| WEEP YOU NO MORE (Sleeping)... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| WHO IS SYLVIA? ... ... ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |

| MALE VOICES (T.T.B.B.) | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| LONDON TOWN ... ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, 3d. | 0 | 6 |
| O PEACEFUL NIGHT (German words, 6d.) ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO ... ... ... ... ,, 3d. | 0 | 6 |
| SLEEPING ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| THREE KNIGHTS, THE ... ... ... ... ,, 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| WEEP YOU NO MORE (Sleeping) ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |

| FEMALE OR BOYS' VOICES | | |
|---|---|---|
| BEAUTEOUS MORN (S.C.C.) ... ... ... Sol-fa, 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE (S. & A.) ... ... ... ,, 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| IN PRAISE OF NEPTUNE (Unison) ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| *IT WAS A LOVER AND HIS LASS (S. & A.) (Folio, 3s.) | 0 | 4 |
| Do. ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, 3d. | | |
| MY BONNIE LASS SHE SMILETH (3 Voices) ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| O LOVELY MAY (S.S.C.) ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| O PEACEFUL NIGHT (3 voices) ... ... ... ,, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| *ORPHEUS WITH HIS LUTE (S.S.A.) (Folio, 3s.) ,, 1½d. | 0 | 4 |
| ROLLING DOWN TO RIO (S. & A.) ... ... ,, 3d. | 0 | 4 |
| *SHEPHERDS' DANCE (arranged as two-part or Unison Song). From Henry VIII. ... ... Staff Notation | 0 | 4 |
| Do. Staff and Sol-fa Notations combined | 0 | 4 |
| Do. Wind Parts only ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| String Parts, 3s.: Wind Parts, 4s. 4d.: Full Score, MS. | | |
| WHO IS SYLVIA (S. & A.) ... ... ... ... Sol-fa, 3d. | 0 | 4 |

| SERVICE, ANTHEM, ETC. | | |
|---|---|---|
| BREAD OF HEAVEN, ON THEE WE FEED Sol-fa, 2d. | 0 | 4 |
| GRACE, "NON NOBIS DOMINE" ... ... ... ... | 0 | 2 |
| Do. do. T.T.B.B. ... ... ... ... | 0 | 2 |
| INTERCESSORY HYMN. In E flat and D flat Sol-fa, 3d. (Words only, 2s. per 100.) | 0 | 3 |
| DITTO (Welsh words). In D flat ... ... ... ,, 3d. (Words only, 2s. per 100.) | 0 | 3 |
| TE DEUM LAUDAMUS, IN F ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 8 |

* Orchestral parts may be had.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.

"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.

"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.

Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC

BY

J. H. MAUNDER

| HARVEST ANTHEMS. | Staff Notation. | Tonic Sol-fa. |
|---|---|---|
| Sing to the Lord of Harvest ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| While the earth remaineth ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Blessed be the Name of the Lord ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |

| SERVICES | | |
|---|---|---|
| SERVICE IN G ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Benedicite, omnia Opera ... ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Benedictus ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Jubilate ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion ... ... | 10d. | 8d. |
| Pater Noster from the above ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Amen ditto ... ... ... | 1½d. | 1½d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) ... ... ... | 1s. 4d. | 10d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion ... ... | 8d. | 6d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Te Deum in B flat... ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) . | 4d. | 2d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |

| ORGAN. | | |
|---|---|---|
| Voix Seraphique (for Recitals)... ... ... ... | 2s. 6d. | — |

| CHURCH CANTATA. | | |
|---|---|---|
| Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use) ... | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

JOHN GILPIN

POEM BY

WILLIAM COWPER.

SET FOR FEMALE (OR BOYS') VOICES

IN UNISON.

(Second Part Optional.)

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

(Two Violins and Percussion Optional)

BY

COLIN TAYLOR.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

New Numbers in the "YORK SERIES."

ALLELUIA HAIL WITH GLADNESS.
J. LAMONT GALBRAITH.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

CROWN OF LIFE.
NOEL HANNENFORD.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

THE SHEFFIELD CATHEDRAL DESCANTS.
(24 Settings of Popular Hymn Tunes.)
By T. W. HANFORTH.
Price 6d.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

NATIONAL SONGS

WITH

DESCANTS

SET I. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 271

THE BAY OF BISCAY (English)
A HUNTING WE WILL GO (English)
JOHN PEEL (English)
ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT (Welsh)
SCOTS, WHA HAE (Scottish)
THE OAK AND THE ASH (Scottish)
EARLY ONE MORNING (English)
OH, DEAR! WHAT CAN THE MATTER BE? (English)
THE BRITISH GRENADIERS (English)
THE ASH GROVE (Welsh)
GOOD KING WENCESLAS (Traditional)
THE FIRST NOWELL (Traditional)

SET II. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 275

COME LASSES AND LADS (English)
WI' A HUNDRED PIPERS (Scottish)
DAVID OF THE WHITE ROCK (Welsh)
THE YOUNG MAY MOON (Irish)
THE GOLDEN VANITY (English)
THE FLIGHT OF THE EARLS (Irish)

SET III. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 276

MEETING OF THE WATERS (Irish)
THERE'S NAE LUCK (Scottish)
DRINK TO ME ONLY WITH THINE EYES (English)
LET ERIN REMEMBER (IRISH)
THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON (English)
THE BELLS OF ABERDOVEY (Welsh)

SET IV. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 307

THE CAMPBELLS ARE COMIN' (Scottish)
IN DERRY VALE (The Londonderry Air) (Irish)
THE AGINCOURT SONG (English)
ANNIE LAURIE (Scottish)
AUTUMN'S GOLDEN LEAF (English)
SILENT, O MOYLE (Irish)
MINE EYES HAVE SEEN (American)
OFT IN THE STILLY NIGHT (Irish)
I SAW THREE SHIPS (Traditional)
SHEPHERDS! SHAKE OFF YOUR DROWSY SLEEP (Traditional)

(PRICE EIGHTPENCE EACH SET)

(Each Song can be had separately.)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

The School Music Review

No. 432. | MAY, 1928. | Price 3d.

Annual Subscription, Post Free, Four Shillings.

(PUBLISHED THE 15TH DAY OF THE MONTH.)

CONTENTS.

SOME SCHUBERT MUSIC ... ... ... ... By G. Kirkham Jones
MUSIC AND MORALS ... ... ... ... By Albert H. Radcliffe
A PAGE FOR PIANOFORTE TEACHERS ... By Ernest Fowles
JUSTIFYING MUSIC IN THE CURRICULUM By J. M. H. Sykes

MUSIC.

'MY BIRTHDAY' Music for the Kindergarten ... ... ... H. A. C.
'UNDER THE GREENWOOD TREE' Unison Song. Tune: Sellenger's Round
'THE DAISIES' Two-part Song ... ... ... ... Walter Hately

SPECIAL SUPPLEMENT:
SPECIAL CENTENARY SOUVENIR

CONTENTS:

Account of the Composer's LIFE AND WORKS
Written for Young People. By G. KIRKHAM JONES.
Portrait. Songs—'Hark! Hark! the lark' and 'Cradle Song.'

'WHITHER' Extra Supplement - Unison Song ... ... ... Schubert

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

NEW EDITION

POCKET SING-SONG BOOK

FOR SCHOOLS, HOMES

AND

COMMUNITY SINGING

CONTENTS

A-hunting we will go
All people that on earth do dwell (Old 100th)
All through the night
Arethusa, The
Ash Grove, The
Auld Lang Syne
Bay of Biscay, The
Begone, dull care
Bells of Aberdovey, The
Blow, blow, thou winter wind
Blue Bell of Scotland, The
Bonnie Banks of Loch Lomond, The
British Grenadiers, The
Campbells are comin', The
Camptown Races
Charlie is my Darling
Coasts of High Barbary, The
Come, lasses and lads
Come, let's be merry
Dashing away with the smoothing iron
Down among the dead men
David of the White Rock
Drink to me only with thine eyes
Early one morning
Flight of the Earls, The
Girl I left behind me, The
Glory to Thee, my God, this night (Tallis)
God rest you merry, gentlemen
God save the King
Golden Vanity, The
Good-morrow, Gossip Joan
Harp that once through Tara's halls, The Heart of Oak
Heave away, my Johnny
Here's a health unto His Majesty
I saw three ships
John Brown's body
John Peel
Keel row, The
Land of my Fathers
Lass of Richmond Hill, The
Last Rose of Summer, The
Let the hills resound
Londonderry Air
March of the Men of Harlech
Marching thro' Georgia
Marseillaise, The
Meeting of the Waters, The Mermaid, The
Minstrel Boy, The
My Lady Greensleeves
Now thank we all our God
O no, John !
Oak and the Ash, The
Oh, dear ! what can the matter be
Oh ! we can play
Old Folks at Home
Old King Cole
One man went to mow
Onward, Christian Soldiers
Poacher, The
Polly Oliver
Polly-wolly-doodle
Rio Grand
Rounds: Come, follow me
'Tis humdrum
Chairs to mend
Rule, Britannia
So early in the morning
Summer is a-coming in
There was a simple maiden
This great world is a trouble
Tight little Island, The
Twelve days of Christmas
Vicar of Bray, The
Wanderer, The
We be Three Poor Mariners
When I was a Tailor
When Johnny comes marching home
Wi' a Hundred Pipers
Widdicombe Fair
Will ye no come back again
Young May Moon, The

Size 6½ in. by 5 in., rounded corners, and lined paper cover. The songs are generally set in low keys with simple pianoforte accompaniments. The voice part is printed in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa notations.

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE

Words only, price 4d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS

SET IX. JUST PUBLISHED

HYMNS AND TUNES

SETS PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED

PRICE SIXPENCE PER SET. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

SET I.

1. COME, CHILDREN, ON AND FORWARD ... ... G. C. MARTIN
2. FOR THE FRESHNESS OF THE MORNING ... LADY EUAN-SMITH
3. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ... ... ... FREDERIC CLAY
4. COME, O COME! IN PIOUS LAYS ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. THINE FOR EVER! GOD OF LOVE ... ... W. C. HARVEY
6. JESU, WHOM THY CHILDREN LOVE ... ... H. E. BUTTON
7. SWEETLY O'ER THE MEADOWS FAIR ... ... F. A. CHALLINOR
8. WOULD YOU GAIN THE BEST IN LIFE ... ... C. J. MAY
9. ON OUR WAY REJOICING ... ... ... WALTER B. GILBERT
10. NOW THE DAYLIGHT GOES AWAY ... ... ... J. ADCOCK

SET II.

1. AGAIN THE MORN OF GLADNESS... ... ... ... J. STAINER
2. THE ANGELS' SONG ... ... ... ALBERTO RANDEGGER
3. FORWARD, CHRISTIAN CHILDREN ... ... ... ALFRED MOFFAT
4. THE GOLDEN SHORE ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR ... ... ... JOHN E. WEST
6. ENTER WITH THANKSGIVING ... ... ... F. H. COWEN
7. MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE ... J. V. ROBERTS
8. STARS, THAT ON YOUR WONDROUS WAY ... ... J. STAINER
9. THE DAY IS PAST AND OVER ... ... ... JOSEPH BARNBY
10. GOD WILL TAKE CARE OF YOU ... ... F. R. HAVERGAL

SET III.

1. WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY ... ... ... J. BARNBY
2. HARK! HARK! THE ORGAN ... ... ... G. J. BENNETT
3. O WHAT CAN LITTLE HANDS DO? ... ... ... H. E. BUTTON
4. WHILE THE SUN IS SHINING ... ... ... T. ADAMS
5. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ... ... ... H. J. GAUNTLETT
6. THE ROSEATE HUES OF EARLY DAWN ... .... A. SULLIVAN
7. LORD, THY CHILDREN GUIDE ... ... ... A. S. COOPER
8. IN OUR WORK AND IN OUR PLAY ... ... F. WESTLAKE
9. THE BEAUTIFUL LAND ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
10. GENTLE JESUS, MEEK AND MILD ... ... ... J. STAINER

SET IV.

1. THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ENGLAND ... ... ... J. STAINER
2. THE CROWN IS WAITING ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
3. THE CITY OF LIGHT ... ... ... ... E. J. TROUP
4. HE DWELLS AMONG THE LILIES ... ... LADY EUAN-SMITH
5. GOD IS IN HEAVEN! CAN HE HEAR ... ... H. E. BUTTON
6. THE GOOD SHEPHERD ... ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
7. A LITTLE KINGDOM I POSSESS ... ... ... R. S. NEWMAN
8. RAISE YOUR STANDARD, BROTHERS ... ... ... E. J. TROUP
9. FLOWERS ... ... ... ... ... ALBERTO RANDEGGER
10. JESUS, TENDER SHEPHERD, HEAR ME ... ... H. PARKER

SET V.

1. CREATOR, GOD, AND LORD ... ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
2. WHEN LOVE DRAWS NEAR ... ... ... E. J. TROUP
3. COME, PRAISE YOUR LORD ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
4. WE WILL PRAISE THEE ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. ABOVE THE CLEAR BLUE SKY ... ... HERBERT E. CRIMP
6. WE THANK THEE, LORD ... ... ... W. C. HARVEY
7. COME, FRIENDS, THE WORLD WANTS MENDING ... E. J. TROUP
8. COME, SING WITH HOLY GLADNESS ... ... G. W. TORRANCE
9. THE LESSON OF LOVE ... ... ... ... J. BARNBY
10. NOW THE DAY IS OVER ... ... ... ... F. W. BLUNT

SET VI.

1. HOSANNA WE SING ... ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
2. HEAVENLY FATHER, SEND THY BLESSING ... W. C. HARVEY
3. BLESSED JESU, WE CAN SEE THEE ... ... ... A. ROWLEY
4. THE DAYS OF OLD ... ... ... ... ETHEL BOYCE
5. WHAT IS THE GIFT ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
6. WHILE OUR LORD WAS PASSING BY ... ... ETHEL BOYCE
7. THE EARTH IS FAIR AND SWEET ... ... ... A. ROWLEY
8. PILGRIMS OF THE NIGHT ... ... ... ... O. KING
9. THE HOLY LIGHT ... ... ... ... ... C. H. LLOYD
10. NOW SINKS THE SUN ... ... ... ... ... C. J. MAY

SET VII.

1. LIFE'S GLAD MORNING ... ... ... ... G. C. MARTIN
2. JESU, BLESSED SAVIOUR ... ... ... A. HERBERT BREWER
3. COME, CHRISTIAN YOUTHS ... ... ... HARVEY GRACE
4. THY WORD IS LIKE A GARDEN ... ... ... E. H. THIMAN
5. GOD OF MERCY, THRONED ON HIGH ... ... HARVEY GRACE
6. GOD OF OUR FATHERS ... ... ... ... E. J. HOPKINS
7. WHEN THE LORD OF LOVE ... ... ... E. H. THIMAN
8. CHILDREN OF GOD ... ... ... ... ... F. G. RUSSELL
9. THE CHILDREN'S PRAYER ... ... ... ... R. MCLEOD
10. THE LORD BE WITH US ... ... ... ... ... C. J. MAY

SET VIII.

1. THE CHILDREN'S SONG ... ... ... GEORGE RATHBONE
2. THE CHILDREN'S FESTAL DAY ... ... ... J. H. ADAMS
3. SING ALOUD TO JESUS ... ... ... ... ALEC ROWLEY
4. LONG AGO SWEET VOICES CALLING ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
5. CHILDREN'S VOICES ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
6. AROUND THE THRONE OF GOD (Tune—"LASST UNS ERFREUEN") Arr. by IVOR ATKINS
7. GOD, WHO HATH MADE THE DAISIES ... ... ... R. MCLEOD
8. FOR EVER AND FOR EVER ... ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
9. FRAMER OF THE LIGHT ... ... ... R. WALKER ROBSON
10. THE JOYOUS DAY, O LORD, IS ENDING ... ... C. J. MAY

SET IX.

1. ALLELUIA! HEAR US SINGING ... ... ... H. E. BUTTON
2. SHEPHERD OF TENDER YOUTH ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
3. FATHER, HEAR THY CHILDREN'S PRAISES GEORGE RATHBONE
4. GOD OF THE MORNING ... ... ... ... CHARLES BURNEY
5. LET ALL THE WORLD IN EVERY CORNER SING H. E. BUTTON
6. OUR HEARTS ARE FULL OF GLADNESS ... ... ALEC ROWLEY
7. THANKSGIVING ... ... ... ... MYLES B. FOSTER
8. GOD WHISPERS ... ... ... ... ... ROBERT MCLEOD
9. GOD IN ALL ... ... ... ... ... ... EDGAR MOY
10. HEAR THY CHILDREN, GENTLE JESUS ... ... C. J. MAY

The Hymns and Tunes may also be had in separate numbers, price 1½*d.* each

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SMALL

| | Full Orchestra. | Small Orchestra. | Full Score. | Piano Conductor. | Violin Conductor. | Piano Solo. | Violin and Piano. | Violin 1mo. | Violin 2do. | Viola. | 'Cello and Basso. | 'Cello. | Basso. | Piccolo |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| AUSTIN, E., Sweet Night ... ... | ... | 2/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 4d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| BENDALL, Pas Seul ... ... | ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| BENNETT, Eventide Melody ... | ... | 4/4 | 4/- | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | .. |
| BLAIR, Serenata ... ... | ... | 5/4 | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | .. |
| BREWER, Auf Wiedersehen ... | ... | 4/4 | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | .. |
| CAMPBELL, Nocturne ... ... | ... | 7/4 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | .. |
| CARSE, Barbara Allen Variations | ... | 6/- | ... | 2/3 | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | ... | .. |
| „ Gavotte in G ... ... | ... | 5/4 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, Waltzes, Four ... | ... | 19/5 | ... | ... | ... | 4/- | 4/6 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | ... | .. |
| „ Hiawatha (Selection from Wedding-Feast)... | ... | 23/9 | ... | 2/3 | ... | ... | ... | 2/3 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | 1/6 | 1/6 | .. |
| „ (Nero Music. Prelude, 2nd Entr'acte | 17/- | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| „ Intermezzo ... ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | .. |
| „ Finale, 1st Entr'acte | 18/2 | ... | ... | 2/3 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 1/6 | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 1/6 |
| „ Eastern Dance ... ... | 11/8 | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| „ Novelletten, Nos. 1, 2, & 3 ea. | ... | 3/8 | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| „ „ No. 4 ... ... | ... | 6/2 | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| COWEN, English Dances, Four ... | ... | 22/2 | ... | ... | ... | 4/- | 4/6 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | ... | .. |
| „ February (Months, No. 2)... | ... | 6/4 | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | .. |
| „ May ( „ „ 5)... | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | .. |
| „ June ( „ „ 6)... | 4/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d |
| „ September ( „ „ 9)... | 10/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| „ November ( „ „ 11)... | 11/10 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 1/6 | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| „ December ( „ „ 12)... | 7/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | .. |
| „ Menuet d'Amour ... ... | 5/8 | ... | 5/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| DAVIES, Solemn Melody (str. & org.)... | ... | 2/4 | 3/- | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | .. |
| DUNHILL, Chiddingfold Suite ... | ... | 9/9 | 7/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | 1/6 | 1/6 | .. |
| ELGAR, Chanson de Matin ... | ... | 4/- | 4/- | 8d. | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | .. |
| „ Chanson de Nuit ... ... | ... | 3/8 | 4/- | 8d. | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | .. |
| „ Pleading (Solo parts extra) ... | ... | 3/4 | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | .. |
| „ Serenade (Wand of Youth) ... | ... | 2/4 | ... | 1/6A | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| „ Canto Popolare ... ... | ... | 6/4 | 4/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| FLETCHER, Bagatelles (strings only) ... | ... | 3/6 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 1/6 | ... | ... | .. |
| „ The Toy Soldiers' March... | ... | 8/- | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. |
| „ Valse Lyrique ... ... | ... | 9/6 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| GOUNOD, There is a green hill ... | 4/8 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | .. |
| HANDEL, Dance of Sailors ... ... | 7/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| HAYNES, Westwood Gavotte ... ... | ... | 6/4 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| HOLBROOKE, Souvenir de Printemps ... | ... | 4/4 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| IRELAND, Bagatelle ... ... ... | ... | 7/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| JOHNSON, Elves (Faerie Suite, No. 1)... | ... | 8/- | ... | 1/6 | ... | 3/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| „ Pavane in A ... ... ... | ... | 6/8 | ... | 8d. | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| KREUZ, Conversation Amoureuse ... | ... | 6/10 | ... | 1/6 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 1/6 | ... | ... | .. |
| LEMARE, Andantino ... ... ... | ... | 5/8 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| „ Chant sans Paroles ... ... | ... | 5/- | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | .. |
| „ Menuet Nuptiale ... ... | ... | 4/4 | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| MACKENZIE, Benedictus ... ... | 4/8 | ... | 7/6 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d.A | A | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| PURCELL, Gordian Knot Untied, 1st and 2nd Suites ... each | ... | 2/8 | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| „ Suite ... ... ... | ... | 2/8 | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| „ The Virtuous Wife (Incidental Music) | ... | ... | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| RAMEAU, Gavotte ... ... ... | 6/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| RAWLINSON, Serenade ... ... ... | ... | 3/8 | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| „ Aubade ... ... ... | ... | 6/- | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| REED, Serenade (Suite Venitienne) ... | ... | 4/8 | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| ROËCKEL, Graceful Dance ... ... | 6/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| ROWLEY, Andante Religioso in 4 time | ... | 2/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | .. |
| WADDINGTON, Intermezzo ... ... | ... | 7/4 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| WAREING, Summergold Gavotte ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| WENDT, Air de Ballet ... ... ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| WEST, Intermezzo ... ... ... | ... | 5/- | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| „ Marjorie Gavotte ... ... | 5/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |
| „ Maypole Dance... ... ... | 14/- | ... | ... | 2/3 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | .. |
| WOLSTENHOLME, Allegretto in E♭ ... | 6/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | .. |

N.B.—Parts marked A, B, C, D, E, or F, are printed together.

ORCHESTRAS. SUITABLE FOR CINEMAS, &c.

| Oboi. | Clarinetti. | Fagotti. | Corni 1 & 2. | Corni 3 & 4. | Trombe. | Cornetti. | Tromboni 1 and 2. | Trombone 3 | Euphonium. | Tuba. | Timpani. | Cassa. | Piatti. | Side Drum. | Triangle. | Tambourine. | Harp. | Solo-Corne or Euphonium. | Organ or Harmonium. | Harp or Piano. | Bells. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 2/3 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d.A | A | A | A | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d.B | B | 4d. | B | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | .. |
| †8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 8d.A | 8d.B | B | A | 4d.C | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | C |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 3/- | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d.A | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d.A | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. |
| 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... |
| ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... |
| ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d.B | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | B | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d.C | C | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... |
| D | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d.E | ... | E | 4d.F | F | ... | ... | F | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4dA. | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | 8d | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |

† Oboe has the Melody. X Flute has the Melody. § May be had as a complete Suite.

AN ABRIDGED EDITION

OF

BELSHAZZAR

AN ORATORIO

FOR SOPRANO, (ALTO), TENOR, AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

BY

G. F. HANDEL

"It includes on the whole the best of the Oratorio, and the best is very good indeed. The opening recitative moralizing on the fall of dynasties is one of the most striking things of its kind in Handel's works. The second part is . . . . one of Handel's greatest flights of imagination."—The Times.

"The work is distinguished by a succession of splendid choruses."—Evening News.

"The fine old Oratorio contains such brilliant choral writing that it may well have been started last night on a fresh career. The Persians' chorus, 'All empires upon God depend,' is in Handel's most splendid manner. There are also brilliant scenes of pagan merry-making, such as Handel loved; and the climax . . . is depicted very simply but with sheer genius in its dramatic effect."—Daily Mail.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS

The time of performance is about 1 hour 45 minutes, and the work is scored for Strings, 2 Oboes (2 Bassoons, 2 Trumpets, Drums), and Continuo.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JUST PUBLISHED

CONCERT EDITION

OF

TALES OF HOFFMANN

OPERA FANTASTIQUE

BY

J. OFFENBACH

(Arranged by MAURICE JACOBSON).

Price 5/- net.

For full particulars write to

CRAMER'S CHORAL LIBRARY

Edited by MARTIN SHAW.

| | | O.N. | Tonic. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. | A FAERY SONGGranville Bantock, S.C.T.B. ... | 6d. | 4d. |
| 2. | LAMENT FOR MACLEAN OF ARDGOURHeathcote Statham, S.C.T.B. ... | 6d. | 4d. |
| 3. | FALERO, LERO, LOO!Vincent Thomas, S.S.C.C. ... | 6d. | 3d. |
| 4. | THE WILLOW TREEE. T. Sweeting, S.A.T.B. ... | 4d. | 2d. |
| 5. | TWANKYDILLOArr. E. T. Sweeting, S.A.T.B. ... | 4d. | 2d. |
| 6. | TURMUT-HOEIN'Arr. E. T. Sweeting, T.T.B. ... | 4d. | 2d. |
| 7. | MAN'S MEDLEYVincent Thomas, T.T.B.B. ... | 4d. | 2d. |
| 8. | THERE'S NONE TO SOOTHE MY SOUL TO REST (both notations combined.)Ernest Bullock, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 4d. | — |
| 9. | SERVICEMartin Shaw, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 4d. | — |

Write for Specimen copies to

J. B. CRAMER & CO., LTD., 139, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

A SELECTED LIST OF SACRED SONGS

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS, except where otherwise stated.

Abbreviations: (S) Soprano; (M-S) Mezzo-Soprano; (C) Contralto; (T) Tenor; (Bar) Baritone; (B) Bass.

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| FRANZ ABT | |
| Ave Maria (O Lord most Holy). E (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | E—G♯ |
| THOMAS ADAMS | |
| Nearer my God to Thee. E flat (C or B); F (S or T) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| Radiant Morn, The. D (M-S, C, or Bar) ... ... ... | C♯—E |
| Rock of Ages. E (C or Bar); G (S or T) ... ... ... | B—E |
| IVOR ATKINS | |
| Virgin's Lullaby, The. G minor (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | D—F |
| EDGAR L. BAINTON | |
| Song of the Virgin Mother, A. D (M-S) ... ... ... | D—F♯ |
| JOSEPH BARNBY | |
| Elizabeth's Song. G minor (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D—E |
| Soft southern breeze. B flat (Bar); D flat (T) ... ... | D♭—F |
| When I view the Mother holding (Christmastide). D (C or M-S) ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D—D |
| JOHN F. BARNETT | |
| Rock of Ages, The. E minor (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | B—F♯ |
| JULIUS BENEDICT | |
| I mourn as a dove. A (S) ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯—A |
| Lord is very pitiful, The. F (T) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | E—G |
| O thou afflicted. D flat (C) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | A♭—D♭ |
| W. STERNDALE BENNETT | |
| His salvation is nigh them that fear Him. G (Bar); B (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D—E |
| O Lord, Thou hast searched me out. F (C) ... ... (1/6) | C—D |
| Whosoever drinketh of this water. E (B) ... ... (1/6) | B—E |
| A. HERBERT BREWER | |
| Virgin's Cradle Song, The. F (M-S) ... ... ... ... | D—F |
| GERARD F. COBB | |
| It came upon the midnight clear (Christmastide). D (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | D—E |
| WILLIAM COENEN | |
| Beyond. D flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... | D♭—F |
| Come unto Me. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) | C—D |
| Father, forgive them (Lent). F minor (S or T) ... ... | E—F |
| I shall see Thee again. F (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | E—F |
| Thou wilt remember us. C (C or B); D flat (Bar or M-S); E flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B—E |
| ANTONIN DVOŘÁK | |
| Inflammatus et Accensus (Latin words only). D minor (C) | A—E |
| EDWARD ELGAR | |
| Angel's Song, The. C (M-S) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯—E |
| As a Spirit didst thou pass. E flat (T) ... ... ... | F—A |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | |
| Hark! hark! my soul! C (C or B); E flat (S or T) ... | A—D |
| MYLES B. FOSTER | |
| O for a closer walk with God. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) | C—E |
| ALFRED R. GAUL | |
| Eye hath not seen. G (C); B flat (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | B—D |
| Ruth (Entreat me not to leave thee). B flat (M-S or S) (1/6) | C—F |
| CHARLES GOUNOD | |
| Angel hosts descending. F (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C—G |
| Holy Vision, The. D minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... | D—F♯ |
| Jerusalem. A minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... | E—B |
| Nazareth. E flat (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | B—F |
| Power and Love. A (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... | E—F♯ |
| There is a green hill. D (C or B), E (M-S or Bar); F (S or T)... ... ... ... ... ... ... | C♯—D |
| CARL H. GRAUN | |
| Lo! the heaven-descended prophet. B flat (S) ... ... | E♭—C |

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| ROBERT KING (Arranged by H. A. CHAMBERS.) | |
| Come, O Thou Traveller unknown. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar) | C—F |
| CHARLES H. LLOYD | |
| O Father all-creating (Weddings). E (S or T) ... ... | E—G♯ |
| ALEXANDER C. MACKENZIE | |
| Cross and Crown. B flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C—G |
| Dormi Jesu (The Virgin's Cradle Hymn) (Latin words only). E (C or M-S) | E—E |
| For lo, the winter is past. B flat and C (T)... ... ... | E—G |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. G (S) ... ... ... ... | E—G |
| EDWARD J. MARGETSON | |
| Far from my heavenly home. E flat (C or Bar); G (S or T) | B♭—E♭ |
| JOHN H. MAUNDER | |
| O lovely flowers (Harvest). G (C or Bar); A (S or T) ... | B—G |
| BERNHARD MOLIQUE | |
| Pour out thy heart before the Lord. A flat (T) ... (1/-) | E♭—A♭ |
| ALICE A. NEEDHAM | |
| Far from my heavenly home. C minor (C or Bar); D minor (M-S) | C—F |
| HORATIO W. PARKER | |
| Come, Holy Ghost (Whitsun). D (S) ... ... ... | D—G |
| Lo, now the shades of night. A flat (C) ... ... ... | A♭—E♭ |
| Declining now the sun's bright wheel. E flat minor (Bar) | B♭—E♭ |
| C. HUBERT H. PARRY | |
| Ballad of Meshullemeth, The. E flat (C) ... ... ... | B♭—F |
| God breaketh the battle. G (T) ... ... ... ... | D—A |
| Lady! thou Queen of Israel. E flat (S) ... ... ... | D—A♭ |
| Lord is long-suffering, The. (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D—E |
| D. PUGHE-EVANS | |
| Lead, Kindly Light. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); G (S or T) | C—E♭ |
| Return unto thy rest. E flat (C or Bar) ... ... ... | B♭—E♭ |
| HENRY PURCELL | |
| Now that the sun (Evening Hymn). E flat (C); G (S) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| J. JOACHIM RAFF | |
| Twilight is gently falling, The (Ave Maria). E flat (S or T) | E♭—A♭ |
| ROLAND ROGERS | |
| Lead, Kindly Light. F (C or Bar) ... ... ... ... | A—F |
| FRANZ SCHUBERT | |
| Litany for All Souls' Day. E flat (C or Bar) ... (1/6) | C—E♭ |
| JOHN STAINER | |
| My Maker and my King. D (S) ... ... ... (1/6) | C♯—F♯ |
| ALESSANDRO STRADELLA | |
| O God, have mercy (Pietà Signore). D minor (S or T) ... | D—G |
| ERIC H. THIMAN | |
| Birds, The. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) ... ... ... | D—F |
| God of Love my Shepherd is, The. F (C or Bar); A flat (M-S) | A—D |
| In the bleak mid-winter. D (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... | A—E |
| Jesus the very thought of Thee. B flat (C or Bar); D (M-S) | B♭—D |
| My Master hath a garden. F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) (1/6) | C—F |
| HERBERT W. WAREING | |
| Jesu, Lover of my soul. E flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... | E♭—F |
| H. LANE WILSON | |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); A flat (S or T) | B♭—E♭ |

For songs by Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn, &c., see separate lists and catalogues.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

A SELECTED LIST OF

NOVELLO'S LIGHT PIECES

FOR PIANOFORTE

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| ARENSKY, A. | Romance in A flat | 2 | 0 |
| ARMSTRONG, F. ALFORD | Autumn Leaves | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, ,, | White Heather. Valse | 2 | 0 |
| BREWER, A. HERBERT | Auf Wiedersehen | 2 | 0 |
| CARSE, ADAM | Gavotte in G | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Three Miniatures: 1. Humoresque 2. Love Song 3. Scherzetto } Complete | 2 | 6 |
| COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, S. | Four Characteristic Waltzes: 1. Valse Bohemienne 2/- 2. Valse Rustique 2/- 3. Valse de la Reine 2/- 4. Valse Mauresque 2/- } Complete | 4 | 0 |
| COWEN, FREDERIC H. | Four English Dances, in the Olden Style: 1. Stately Dance 2. Rustic Dance 3. Graceful Dance 4. Country Dance } Complete | 4 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Minuet d'Amour | 2 | 0 |
| ELGAR, EDWARD | Chanson de Matin | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Chanson de Nuit | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Mazurka | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Serenade Mauresque | 2 | 0 |
| ESIPOFF, STEPÁN | L'Absence | 2 | 0 |
| FLETCHER, PERCY E. | Reflections (after verses from Longfellow): 1. Snowflakes 2. Spring 3. Sunset } Complete | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Toy Soldiers' March | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Two Bagatelles: 1. Valsette 2. Pizzicato } | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Valse Arabesque | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Valse Lyrique ("Smile of Spring") | 2 | 0 |
| GERMAN, EDWARD | Three Dances from "Henry VIII": 1. Morris Dance 2. Shepherds' Dance 3. Torch Dance } Complete | 3 | 0 |
| HOLBROOKE, JOSEF | Souvenir de Printemps | 2 | 0 |
| HOLLINS, ALFRED | Intermezzo | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Spring Song | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Valse Impromptu | 2 | 0 |
| MANNS, OTTO, JUNR. | A Northern Cradle Song | 2 | 0 |
| PITT, PERCY | Air de Ballet | 2 | 0 |
| RAWLINSON, HAROLD | Aubade | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Serenade | 2 | 0 |
| SCOTT-BAKER, H. | Mazurka | 2 | 0 |
| ,, ,, | Pantomime | 2 | 0 |
| WEBSTER, ERIC | Vignettes: 1. Valse 2. Reverie 3. Petit Scherzo } Complete | 2 | 0 |
| WENDT, THÉOPHIL | Cantique d'Amour | 2 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

ORGAN MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR PERFORMANCE AT CINEMAS, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| J. BENEDICT | | |
| Variations on Arne's "Where the bee sucks" ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| DUDLEY BUCK | | |
| At Evening ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| WALFORD DAVIES | | |
| Solemn Melody ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| EDWARD ELGAR | | |
| Contrasts (The Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | | |
| Fountain Reverie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Matinale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD GERMAN | | |
| Morris Dance (Henry VIII.)... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Shepherds' Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Torch Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| R. G. HAILING | | |
| Chanson de Joie... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| KING HALL | | |
| Canzone ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| ALFRED HOLLINS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Barcarolle... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Evening Rest ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| In Springtime ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Maytime (Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Minuet ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Morning Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Spring Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD J. HORSMAN | | |
| The Curfew ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| BERNARD JOHNSON | | |
| Pavane in A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| S. KARG-ELERT | | |
| Harmonies du Soir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWIN H. LEMARE | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson d'Eté ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Elegy in G ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in B flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Madrigal ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Minuet Nuptiale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Pastorale in E ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Reverie in E flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Romance in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| J. A. MEALE | | |
| Chanson d'Espoir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| J. RAFF | | |
| Cavatina ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| SCHUBERT | | |
| Ave Maria ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Serenade ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| BERTHOLD TOURS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Menuetto ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| TSCHAIKOWSKY | | |
| Chanson Triste ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Chant sans Paroles ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Andantino (Symphony No. 4) ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| ERIC WEBSTER | | |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. DAVAN WETTON | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. A. WHEELDON | | |
| Cantilene ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| W. WOLSTENHOLME | | |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Romanza and Allegretto in E flat ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWENTY SHORT AND EASY PIECES

FOR THE ORGAN

SET VI.

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | ADAGIO FROM SEXTETT (OP. 81) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | BEETHOVEN |
| 2. | ALLEGRO GRANDIOSO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | HUGH BLAIR |
| 3. | LARGO IN E FLAT... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | E. BUNNETT |
| 4. | MODERATO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | GEORGE CALKIN |
| 5. | BERCEUSE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | CÉSAR CUI |
| 6. | ADAGIO IN D ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | OTTO DIENEL |
| 7. | POSTLUDE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | EDMONDSTOUNE DUNCAN |
| 8. | IMPROMPTU IN A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | A. M. GOODHART |
| 9. | WEDDING MARCH ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | A. GUILMANT |
| 10. | MARCH FROM "ODE ON ST. CECILIA'S DAY" ... ... ... ... ... | HANDEL |
| 11. | LIEDER OHNE WORTE, No. 9 ... ... ... ... ... ... | F. MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY |
| 12. | ALLEGRO IN C ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | GUSTAV MERKEL |
| 13. | ANDANTE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | REISSIGER |
| 14. | POSTLUDE IN F ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | J. VARLEY ROBERTS |
| 15. | PRELUDE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B. LUARD-SELBY |
| 16. | PRELUDE IN A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | HENRY SMART |
| 17. | ANDANTE CON MOTO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | CHARLES STEGGALL |
| 18. | ALLEGRETTO GRAZIOSO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | BERTHOLD TOURS |
| 19. | COMMUNION IN B FLAT ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | FERRIS TOZER |
| 20. | CON MOTO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | JOHN E. WEST |

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

Cloth, Six Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

THE ENGLISH COUNTRY DANCE

GRADED SERIES

CONTAINING THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DANCES TOGETHER WITH THE TUNES

BY

CECIL J. SHARP

VOL. 1.

BRIGHTON CAMP.
*GALOPEDE.
*NANCY'S FANCY.
*THE BLACK NAG.
*GATHERING PEASCODS.
*RUFTY TUFTY.

VOL. 2.

RIBBON DANCE.
GODDESSES.
*THE MARY AND DOROTHY.
*IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
PICKING UP STICKS.
*HASTE TO THE WEDDING.

VOL. 3.

BONNETS SO BLUE.
THE MAID PEEPED OUT AT THE WINDOW.
CHRISTCHURCH BELLS.
*HEY, BOYS, UP GO WE.
*SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MERRY, MERRY MILKMAIDS.

VOL. 4.

SAGE LEAF.
EPPING FOREST.
CHILDGROVE.
*THE OLD MOLE.
HIT AND MISS.
NEWCASTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS EACH VOLUME.

* The Dances marked with an asterisk may be had for Brass and Military Band.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWELVE COUNTRY DANCE TUNES

COLLECTED BY

CECIL J. SHARP

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS OR MILITARY BAND

BY GORDON JACOB

IN THREE SETS

PRICE ... ... 4*s.* 6*d.* EACH.

Separate Parts, 3*d.* each.

SET 1.

THE BUTTERFLY
GALOPEDE.
HASTE TO THE WEDDING.
NANCY'S FANCY.

SET 2.

GATHERING PEASCODS.
RUFTY, TUFTY.
HEY BOYS.
THE BLACK NAG.

SET 3.

IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
THE OLD MOLE.
SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MARY AND DOROTHY.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TECHNIQUE AND EXPRESSION IN PIANOFORTE PLAYING

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

In the course of my experience as a teacher of the pianoforte, an experience extending over many years, certain ideas have from time to time suggested themselves to me which have proved useful—to myself, as enabling me to express more clearly that which I desired my pupils to understand, and to my pupils, as tending to facilitate their comprehension of the various difficulties they have had to encounter, at the same time leading them to perceive the most practical means of overcoming them, and thus accelerating their general rate of progress.

These suggestions relate to both the mechanical and intellectual sides of the study of pianoforte-playing, or briefly, to Technique and Expression, the chief matters implied by the first of these terms being the production of various qualities of tone, the choice of suitable fingering, and the best methods of attacking certain difficulties; while the second, which may perhaps be more aptly designated the means of expression, includes rhythm, phrasing, variety and gradation of tone, the use of the pedals, et catera.

WITH NUMEROUS MUSICAL EXAMPLES FROM THE WORKS OF THE GREAT MASTERS.

PRICE, CLOTH GILT, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE NET.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S ELEMENTARY MUSIC MANUALS

No.

1.—PART-WRITING FOR BEGINNERS, by J. W. IVIMEY. The Rules tabulated are for the guidance of beginners in the Art of Part-writing. Many of them change from rules to recommendations, when the students become more advanced. Bound in linen covers. Price 8d.

2.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Many elementary students of harmony can satisfactorily add parts to figured basses, but are unable to harmonize even simple melodies. This book gives minute instruction which any student can understand. Part I. Price 2s. 6d.

3.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa), by GEORGE LANE. The Exercises are written in the Treble and Bass Clefs, in order that the Book may be used by Male and Female voices in one class. Suitable for Evening Continuation Schools. Part I. Price 8d.

4.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa), by GEORGE LANE. Part II. Price 8d.

5.—HINTS TO YOUNG VIOLINISTS, by C. EGERTON LOWE. Price 1s. 6d.

6.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Part II. Price 2s. 6d.

7.—ADDITIONAL EXERCISES IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Price 8d.

8.—HINTS ON PIANOFORTE TEACHING (chiefly to Boys), by E. D. RENDALL. Price 2s. 6d.

9.—SCHOOL CHOIR TRAINING, by MARGARET NICHOLLS. A Practical Course of Lessons on Voice Production for the guidance of Teachers of Class Singing. Price 3s.
(The Appendix, published separately: Hints on Part-Singing and Exercises, 3d.; Sol-fa, 3d.)

10.—THE COMPOSITION OF SIMPLE MELODIES, by ROBERT T. WHITE. Price 2s. 6d.

11.—PHYSICAL EXERCISES IN THE INFANT SCHOOL, by MARGARET A. HUGHES. Price 4s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NEW Foreign Publications

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| PIANOFORTE SOLO | | |
| BERR, J.—Valse Intime. Op. 82 ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| Gavotte and Musette.—"Musical Box" ... | 1 | 6 |
| Improvisation on "Bist du dei mir" (Bach)... | 1 | 6 |
| FAIRCHILD, BLAIR.—Pour les petits (six easy pieces): | | |
| No. 1. Le vieux mendiant ... ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| No. 2. Le petit mousse ... ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| No. 3. La chanson du bûcheron ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| No. 4. Dans la plaine ... ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| No. 5. Valse de la poupée ... ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| No. 6. Le petit nègre est triste ... ... | 0 | 6 |
| FAURÉ. Andante from 2me Quintet. Op. 115... | 2 | 6 |
| MARTIN.—Deuxième petite suite. Op. 156: | | |
| No. 1. La capricieuse ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| No. 2. Fantaisie sur 2 thèmes du "Freischütz" ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| No. 3. Petite câline ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| No. 4. L'entêté ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| No. 5. Valse lente ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| ,, No. 6. Stances ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| GOLESTAN, STAN.—Thème, Variations, Danse | 6 | 0 |
| VIOLIN AND PIANOFORTE | | |
| RAVEL.—Menuet (from "Le Tombeau de Couperin") ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Rigaudon. Do. ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| ROPARTZ.—3me Sonata (in A major) ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| ROUSSEL.—Segovia ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| TCHEREPNINE.—Elégie ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| VIOLONCELLO AND PIANOFORTE | | |
| DEBUSSY.—La Fille aux cheveux de lin ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| VOICE AND PIANOFORTE | | |
| FAIRCHILD, BLAIR.—Drifting ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

SCHUBERT CENTENARY

Messrs. Novello have in stock certain of the 21 folio volumes of Schubert's works, forming the Complete Edition as published by Breitkopf & Härtel. List and prices will be sent on application.

FOREIGN MUSIC

Students who have any difficulty in obtaining foreign music should write to Messrs. Novello, who, in addition to a very large stock, have exceptional facilities for collecting the publications of foreign houses.

Inquiries for rare or little-known works are welcomed, and any composition not in stock can be obtained at short notice.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

CHAPPELL & CO.'S
LATEST SONG SUCCESSES

FOR ALL VOICES.

BIRD SONGS AT EVENTIDE.
G (D-E), B flat ... ... ... Eric Coates

A SONG REMEMBERED.
F (C-E flat), A ... ... ... Eric Coates

LITTLE LADY OF THE MOON.
E flat (B flat-E flat), F, G ... ... Eric Coates

I THINK OF YOU, MY SWEET.
F (C-D), A flat ... ... ... Haydn Wood

BELOVED, I SHALL WAIT.
D flat (C-D flat), E flat, F ... ... Guy d'Hardelot

FLOW'R OF THE DESERT.
C (C-E), D ... ... ... ... Hermann Löh

SUNDAY.
D (A-D sharp), F ... ... ... Molly Carew

A GARDEN IS A LOVESOME THING.
A (C sharp-D sharp), C ... ... Teresa del Riego

ONE HOUR.
D (B-D), F, G ... ... ... Ernest Longstaffe

TREES.
C (A-E), D, F ... ... ... Oscar Rasbach

FOR SOPRANOS AND MEZZOS.

THE TIME OF ROSES.
C mi. (D-E), D mi., E mi. ... Roger Quilter

APRIL IS A LADY.
D flat (C-F), E flat, F ... Montague Phillips

SUN-FLAKES.
F (C-F), G ... ... ... Montague Phillips

THE FIDDLER OF JUNE.
B flat (B flat-F), C, D ... ... Leslie Elliott

FOR BARITONES AND BASSES.

THE HAPPY MAN.
B flat (A-D), C ... ... Thomas F. Dunhill

ARCHIE OF THE ROYAL AIR FORCE.
E flat (B flat-E flat), F ... ... Ernest Longstaffe

HINTON AND DINTON AND MERE.
C (C-D), D ... ... ... John C. Holliday

THE PRIDE OF TIPPERARY.
C (C-D), D, F ... ... ... A. Lochhead

The compass of the first key is given in brackets.
Price 2/- net each (by post 2/1).

CHAPPELL & CO., LTD., 50, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1.
AND MAY BE HAD OF ALL MUSIC SELLERS.

MOUSSORGSKY'S MASTERPIECE

BORIS GODOUNOV

IN ITS ORIGINAL FORM

WITH

(RUSSIAN, FRENCH, and ENGLISH TEXTS).

French version by ROBERT GODET and ALOYS MOOSER.

English version by M. C. H. COLLET.

This beautifully illustrated Vocal Score is of great musical and historical value, as well as being a wonderful example of the modern art of printing. The numerous illustrations include a series of portraits of the composer (some hitherto absolutely unknown) and his friends.

PRICE THIRTY SHILLINGS, NET.

J. & W. CHESTER, LTD.,
11, Great Marlborough Street, London, W.1.

London:—Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1, Friday, June 1, 1928.

No. 1434. SLEEP.—Bernard Johnson. Price (4*d.*).

NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF PART-SONGS, GLEES, AND MADRIGALS.

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Our Native Land ... | Reichardt | 3d. |
| 2 | Cricketers' Song (T.T.B.) | Macfarren | 3d. |
| 3 | Boating Song ... ... ... | Monk | 3d. |
| 4 | Song of the Railroads | Macfarren | 4d. |
| 5 | Good-morrow, fair ladies | Morley | 3d. |
| 6 | Home Fairy (T.T.B.B.) ... | Winter | 3d. |
| 7 | The Wreath ... ... ... | Benedict | 3d. |
| 8 | Countryman's Song ... | Rimbault | 4d. |
| 9 | Student'sGreeting(T.T.B.B.) | Berner | 3d. |
| 10 | Magdalen College Song ... | Monk | 3d. |
| 11 12 | { Integer Vitæ (T.T.B.B.) ( Orpheus with his lute | Flemming Macfarren | 6d. |
| 13 | Harvest Song ... ... | Macfarren | 3d. |
| 14 | Come, heavy sleep ... | Douland | 3d. |
| 15 | Fisherman's Song ... | Rimbault | 3d. |
| 16 | In all thy need ... ... | Douland | 3d. |
| 17 | All among the barley ... | Stirling | 3d. |
| 18 | When icicles hang ... | Macfarren | 3d. |
| 19 | Jolly Cricket Ball ... | Monk | 3d. |
| 20 | Emigrant's Song ... | Macfarren | 3d. |
| 21 | Shepherd's Song ... ... | Brewer | 4d. |
| 22 | Pedlar's Song ... ... | Douland | 3d. |
| 23 | Fairies' Song (S.S.S.S.) ... | Bishop | 8d. |
| 24 | June (S.S.A.) ... ... ... ... | F. Dun | 3d. |
| 25 | Awake! the starry | Mendelssohn | 3d. |
| 26 | Fair Flower ... ... ... | Rimbault | 3d. |
| 27 | O happy he who ... ... | Gastoldi | 3d. |
| 28 | Green Leaves ... ... ... | Taylor | 3d. |
| 29 | Dirge ... ... ... ... | S. Wesley | 3d. |
| 30 | Angler's Trysting Tree ... | Corfe | 4d. |
| 31 | The Dream ... ... ... ... | Stewart | 3d. |
| 32 | { God speed the Plough ... | Richter | 3d. |
| 33 | ( There is a ladie sweete ... | Ford | |
| 34 | Football Song ... ... ... | Monk | 4d. |
| 35 | Haymakers' Song ... ... | Stewart | 4d. |
| 36 | Come away, Death ... | Macfarren | 4d. |
| 37 | Old May-day, in A ... | Benedict | 2d. |
| 38 | Invocation to Sleep ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 39 | A Night Song ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 40 | Dirge for the faithful lover | ,, | 2d. |
| 41 | A Drinking Song (T.T.B.B.) | ,, | 4d. |
| 42 | Sylvan pleasures ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 43 | Consolation ... ... ... | H. Smart | 2d. |
| 44 | Good-night,thouglorious Sun | ,, | 2d. |
| 45 | Hunting Song ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 46 | Lady, rise, sweet Morn's | ,, | 2d. |
| 47 | Summer Morning ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 48 | The Sea King ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 49 | Orpheus with his lute | Macfarren | 2d. |
| 50 | When Icicles hang ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 51 | Cowe away, Death (S.A.T.T.B.) | ,, | 4d. |
| 52 | When Daisies pied ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 53 | Who is Sylvia ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 54 | Fear no more the heat | ,, | 4d. |
| 55 | Blow, blow, thou winter wind | ,, | 2d. |
| 56 | The Belfry Tower ... | J.L. Hatton | 2d. |
| 57 | England ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 58 | Come, celebrate the May | ,, | 2d. |
| 59 | Song to Pan ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 60 | The Indian Maid... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 61 | The Pearl Divers ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 62 | Robin Goodfellow | G.A.Macfarren | 4d. |
| 63 | Break, break on thy cold grey | ,, | 2d. |
| 64 | Echoes(The Splendour falls) | ,, | 2d. |
| 65 | Song of the Railroads | ,, | 2d. |
| 66 | Christmas ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 67 | Adieu, Love, Adieu ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 68 | Sir Knight, Sir Knight | Macirone | 2d. |
| 69 | The Wounded Cupid | ,, | 2d. |
| 70 | Woman's smile ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 71 | Autolycus' Song ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 72 | Footsteps of Angels ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 73 | The Sun shines fair ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 74 | The Pilgrims ... ... | H. Leslie | 2d. |
| 75 | My soul to God ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 76 | Awake, the flow'rs unfold | ,, | 2d. |
| 77 | How sweet the moonlight | ,, | 2d |
| 78 | Land, Ho! ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 79 | Up, up, ye Dames ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 80 | Thine eyes so bright... | , | 6d. |
| 81 | All is not gold ... ... | Westbrook | 4d. |
| 82 | Hark how the birds ... | H. Lahee | 4d. |
| 83 | All ye woods (S.S.A.T.B.) | ,, | 2d. |
| 84 | My love is fair(S.A.T.B.B.) | H. Leslie | 2d. |
| 85 | Charm measleep(S.S.A.T.B.B.) | ,, | 2d. |
| 86 | When twilight dews ... | H. Hiles | 2d. |
| 87 | A Finland love song... | H. Hiles | 2d. |
| 88 | Evening ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 89 | To the Morning Wind | ,, | 4d. |
| 90 | To Daffodils ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 91 | Summer longings ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 92 | Night, lovely Night ... | F. Berger | 2d. |
| 93 | Essay, my Heart ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 94 | Childhood's melody | ,, | 2d. |
| 95 | Now ... ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 96 | Sunset ... ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 97 | Arise, the sunbeams hail | ,, | 4d. |
| 98 | Night winds that ... | J. B. Calkin | 2d. |
| 99 | Breathe soft, ye Winds | ,, | 2d. |
| 100 | My lady is so wondrous fair | ,, | 2d. |
| 101 | Chivalryof Labour(S.S.A.T.B.) | ,, | 6d. |
| 102 | Come, fill, my boys(A.T.T.B.) | ,, | 4d. |
| 103 | Echoes ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 104 | Phœbus ... ... ... | J. Barnby | 2d. |
| 105 | Luna ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 106 | A Wife's Song ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 107 | Home they brought... | ,, | 2d. |
| 108 | Annie Lee ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 109 | Starry Crowns of Heaven | ,, | 2d. |
| 110 | The Wind ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 111 | The Skylark ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 112 | The Sands of Dee | G.A.Macfarren | 2d. |
| 113 | Alton Locke's Song ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 114 | The Starlings ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 115 | The Three Fishers ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 116 | The World's Age ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 117 | Sing heigh ho! ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 118 | Fairy Song ... | A. Zimmermann | 2d. |
| 119 | Good-Night ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 120 | Gone for ever ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 121 | Flowers ... ... ... | ,, | 4d |
| 122 | To Daffodils ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 123 | Good Morrow ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 124 | Sigh no more, ladies | Macfarren | 2d. |
| 125 | You spotted snakes(S.S.A.A.) | ,, | 4d. |
| 126 | Take, oh take those lips away | ,, | 2d. |
| 127 | It was a lover and his lass | ,, | 6d. |
| 128 | O mistress mine ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 129 | Under the greenwood tree | ,, | 2d. |
| 130 | Hark, the lark ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 131 | Tell me where is fancy bred | ,, | 2d. |
| 132 | The Violet ... ... ... | H. Leslie | 4d. |
| 133 | One morning sweet in May | ,, | 4d. |
| 134 | Daylight is fading ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 135 | Down in a pretty valley | ,, | 2d. |
| 136 | The Primrose ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 137 | Arise, sweet love ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 138 | 'Tis break of day ... | H. Smart | 3d. |
| 139 | My true love hath my heart | ,, | 3d. |
| 140 | Doth not my lady come | ,, | 2d. |
| 141 | Spring Song ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 142 | The Curfew ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 143 | Hear, sweet spirit ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 144 | Spring Voices ... ... | S. Reay | 4d. |
| 145 | Waken,lords and ladies gay | ,, | 4d. |
| 146 | As it fell upon a day... | ,, | 4d. |
| 147 | Huntsman, rest ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 148 | 'Tis May upon the mountain | ,, | 4d. |
| 149 | Take, oh take those lips away | ,, | 2d. |
| 150 | The Rainy Day... | A. Sullivan | 2d. |
| 151 | Oh, hush thee, my babie | ,, | 4d. |
| 152 | Evening ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 153 | Joy to the Victors ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 154 | Parting gleams ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 155 | Echoes ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 156 | Spring ... ... ... | W. Macfarren | 2d. |
| 157 | Summer ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 158 | Autumn ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 159 | Winter ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 160 | You stole my love ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 161 | Dainty love... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 162 | Drops of Rain ... | J. Lemmens | 2d. |
| 163 | The Fairy Ring... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 164 | The Light of Life ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 165 | Oh, welcome him ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 166 | Sunshine through the | ,, | 4d. |
| 167 | The Corn Field... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 168 | Wake! to the hunting | H. Smart | 2d. |
| 169 | Dost thou idly ask ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 170 | A Psalm of Life ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 171 | Only Thou ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 172 | I prithee send me back | ,, | 2d |
| 173 | The Moon ... ... ... | H. Smart | 4d. |
| 174 | A Spring Song ... | Ciro Pinsuti | 4d. |
| 175 | An Autumn Song ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 176 | The Two Spirits ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 177 | The Crusaders... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 178 | The Caravan ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 179 | Stradella ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 180 | When evening's twilight | Hatton | 2d. |
| 181 | Absence ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 182 | April showers ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 183 | The red, red rose ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 184 | Beware, beware ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 185 | The Sailor's Song ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 186 | Good-Night ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 187 | Blythe is the bird ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 188 | Stars of the summer night | ,, | 3d. |
| 189 | The hemlock-tree ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 190 | Jack Frost ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 191 | I loved her ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 192 | The Village Blacksmith | ,, | 2d. |
| 193 | Bait, The(Come live with me) | ,, | 2d. |
| 194 | Softly fall the shades of | ,, | 4d. |
| 195 | Auburn (Sweet village) | ,, | 4d. |
| 196 | Bird of the wilderness | ,, | 4d. |
| 197 | The Summer gale ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 198 | I met her in the quiet lane | ,, | 3d. |
| 199 | If thou art sleeping ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 200 | Spring Song ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 201 | Good wishes ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 202 | Parting and Meeting ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 203 | Whether kissed by sunbeams | ,, | 4d |
| 204 | The roses are blushing | ,, | 2d. |
| 205 | The Rivals ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 206 | The village dance ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 207 | Song of the Gipsy maidens | ,, | 2d. |
| 208 | The Waterfall ... ... | ,, | 4d |
| 209 | Over hill, over dale ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 210 | Love me little, love me long | ,, | 4d. |
| 211 | Going a-maying ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 212 | See,the rooks are homeward | ,, | 4d. |
| 213 | Sweet Lady Moon ... | ,, | 4d |
| 214 | Hark, the Convent bells are | ,, | 4d. |
| 215 | When evening's(male voices) | ,, | 2d. |
| 216 | Warrior's Song ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 217 | Absence ... ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 218 | April showers ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 219 | The red, red rose ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 220 | Beware, beware ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 221 | The happiest land ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 222 | The Sailor's Song ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 223 | Busy, curious fly ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 224 | Good-night, beloved ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 225 | Bacchanalian Song ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 226 | Stars of the summer... | ,, | 2d. |
| 227 | King Witlaf's Song ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 228 | Tars' Song ... ... ... | ,, | 4d |
| 229 | The hemlock-tree ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 230 | Jack Frost ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 231 | The Lye ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 232 | I loved her ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 233 | Village Blacksmith ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 234 | The Letter ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 235 | Shall I wasting in ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 236 | Way to build a boat ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 237 | I loved a lass ... ... | ,, | 6d. |
| 238 | The Lifeboat ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 239 | Shepherd's farewell... | H. Smart | 2d. |
| 240 | The waves' reproof ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 241 | Ave Maria ... ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 242 | Spring ... ... ... ... | ,, | 3d. |
| 243 | Morning ... ... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 244 | Hymn to Cynthia ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 245 | Cradle Song ... ... | ,, | 2d. |
| 246 | The joys of Spring ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 247 | Dream, baby, dream | ,, | 2d. |
| 248 | A song for the Seasons | ,, | 4d. |
| 249 | O say not that my heart | ,, | 3d. |
| 250 | Love and mirth... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 251 | Sweet Vesper hymn | ,, | 4d. |
| 252 | Crocuses and Snowdrops | ,, | 2d. |
| 253 | Stars of the summer night | ,, | 2d. |
| 254 | Wind thy horn... ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 255 | The land of wonders ... | ,, | 4d. |
| 256 | Ye little birds that sit and sing | ,, | 3d. |
| 257 | How soft the shades of | ,, | 2d. |
| 258 | How sweet is summer | ,, | 3d. |

No. 1434 NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK (SECOND SERIES) Price (4*d.*)

COMPOSED FOR AND DEDICATED TO MY FRIEND WILLIAM WOOLLEY, AND THE MEMBERS OF THE "WILLIAM WOOLLEY" CHORAL SOCIETY

SLEEP

MADRIGAL FOR SIX VOICES (S.A.A.T.B.B.)

WORDS SELECTED FROM LONGFELLOW'S SONNET

MUSIC BY

BERNARD JOHNSON

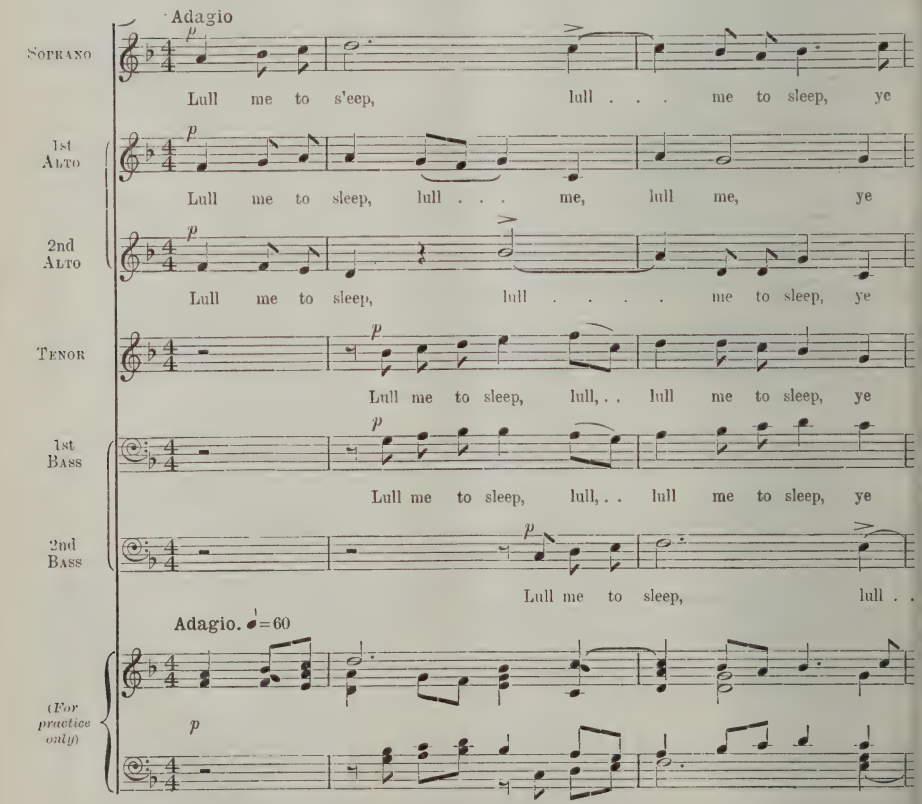
LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.



Adagio
Soprano
p
Lull me to s'eep, lull . . . me to sleep, ye 1st Alto
p
Lull me to sleep, lull . . . me, lull me, ye 2nd Alto
p
Lull me to sleep, lull . . . . me to sleep, ye
Tenor
p
Lull me to sleep, lull, . . lull me to sleep, ye 1st Bass
p
Lull me to sleep, lull, . . lull me to sleep, ye
2nd Bass
p
Lull me to sleep, lull . .
Adagio. ♩=60
(For practice only)
p

Copyright, 1927, by Novello and Company, Limited

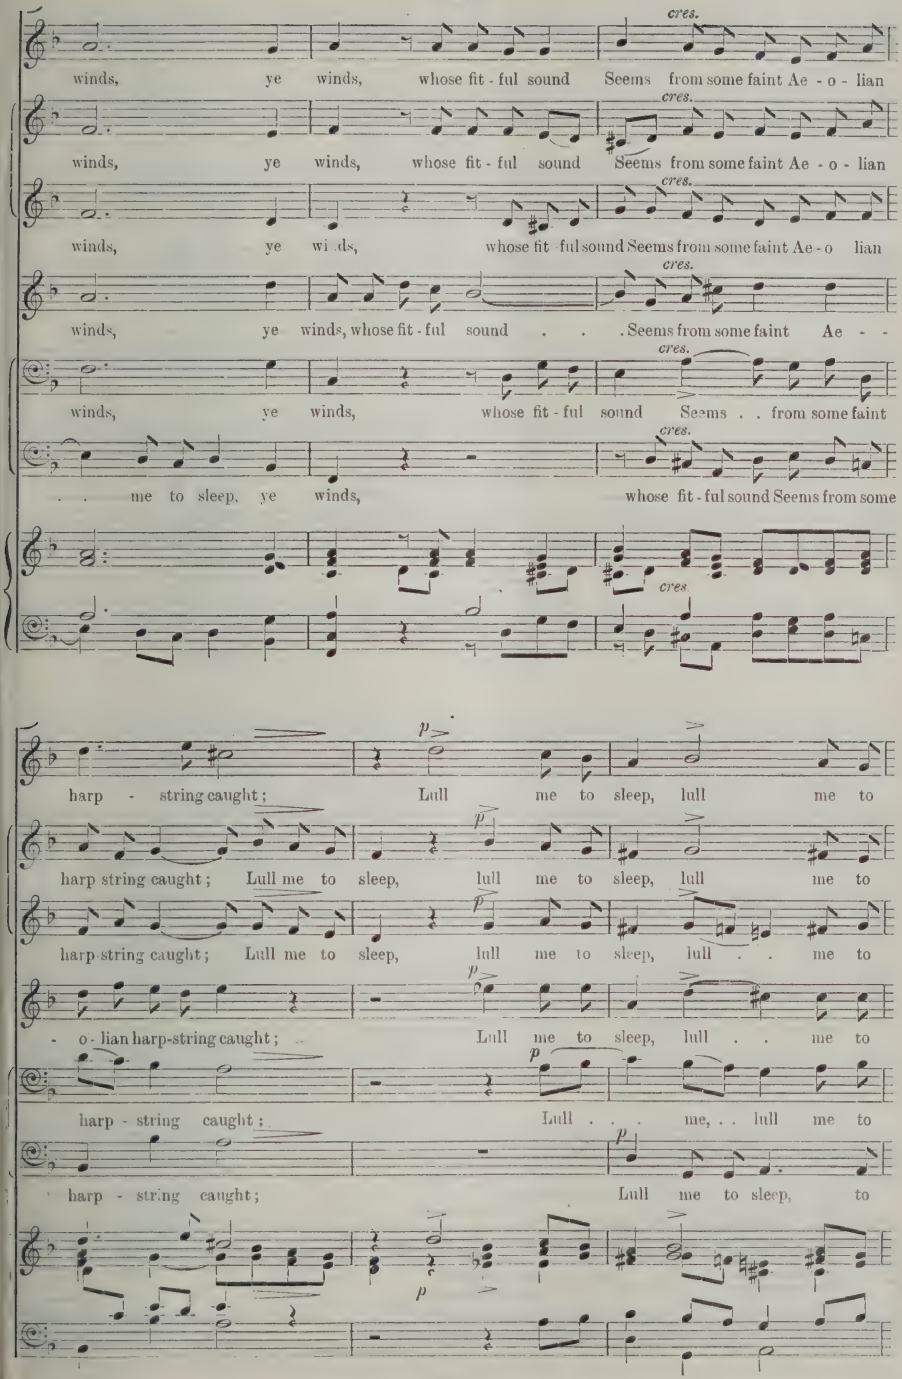
SLEEP



cres.
winds, ye winds, whose fit - ful sound Seems from some faint Ae - o - lian winds, ye winds, whose fit - ful sound Seems from some faint Ae - o - lian winds, ye wi ds, whose fit - ful sound Seems from some faint Ae - o lian winds, ye winds, whose fit - ful sound . . . Seems from some faint Ae - - winds, ye winds, whose fit - ful sound Seems . . from some faint
. . me to sleep, ye winds, whose fit - ful sound Seems from some cres
p harp - string caught; Lull me to sleep, lull me to harp string caught; Lull me to sleep, lull me to sleep, lull me to harp-string caught; Lull me to sleep, lull me to sleep, lull . . me to
- o - lian harp-string caught; Lull me to sleep, lull . . me to harp - string caught; Lull . . . me, . . lull me to harp - string caught; Lull me to sleep, to cres.

f
sleep, For I am wea - ry, for I am wea - ry, and am o - ver -
sleep, For I am wea - ry, for I am wea - ry, sleep, For I am wea - ry, for I am wea - ry, wea - ry, and am o - ver -
sleep, For I am wea - ry, for I am wea - ry, sl ep, For I am wea - ry, for I am wea - ry, and o - ver - sleep, For I am wea - ry, for I am wea - ry,
dim.
- wrought With too much toil, with too much care dis-traught;
and am o - ver - wrought . . With toil, with too much care dis-traught;
- wrought With too much toil, am o ver - wrought, with care dis-traught;
p
and am o - ver-wrought, and am o - ver-wrought, with care dis-traught; Lull . .
- wrought, and with too much care dis-traught; Lull, and am o - ver-wrought, with care dis-traught; Lull, . .

Lull me to sleep, lull me to sleep; Lay . . thy soft
Lull me to sleep, lull me to sleep; Lay thy soft hand up - on . .
Lull . . me to sleep, lull . . me to sleep;
. . me to sleep, to sleep, lull . . me to sleep; Lay thy soft
lull me to sleep, lull me to sleep;
. . lull me to sleep; . . . Lay thy soft hand up - on my brow and cheek, O peace-ful Sleep, . . . O peace-ful
. . my brow, my brow and cheek, O peace - - ful Sleep, O peace-ful Lay thy soft hand up - on my brow · and hand . . . up - on my brow and cheek, O peace-ful Sleep, O . .
Lay thy soft hand . . . up - on my cheek, O hand up - on my brow . . . and cheek, O
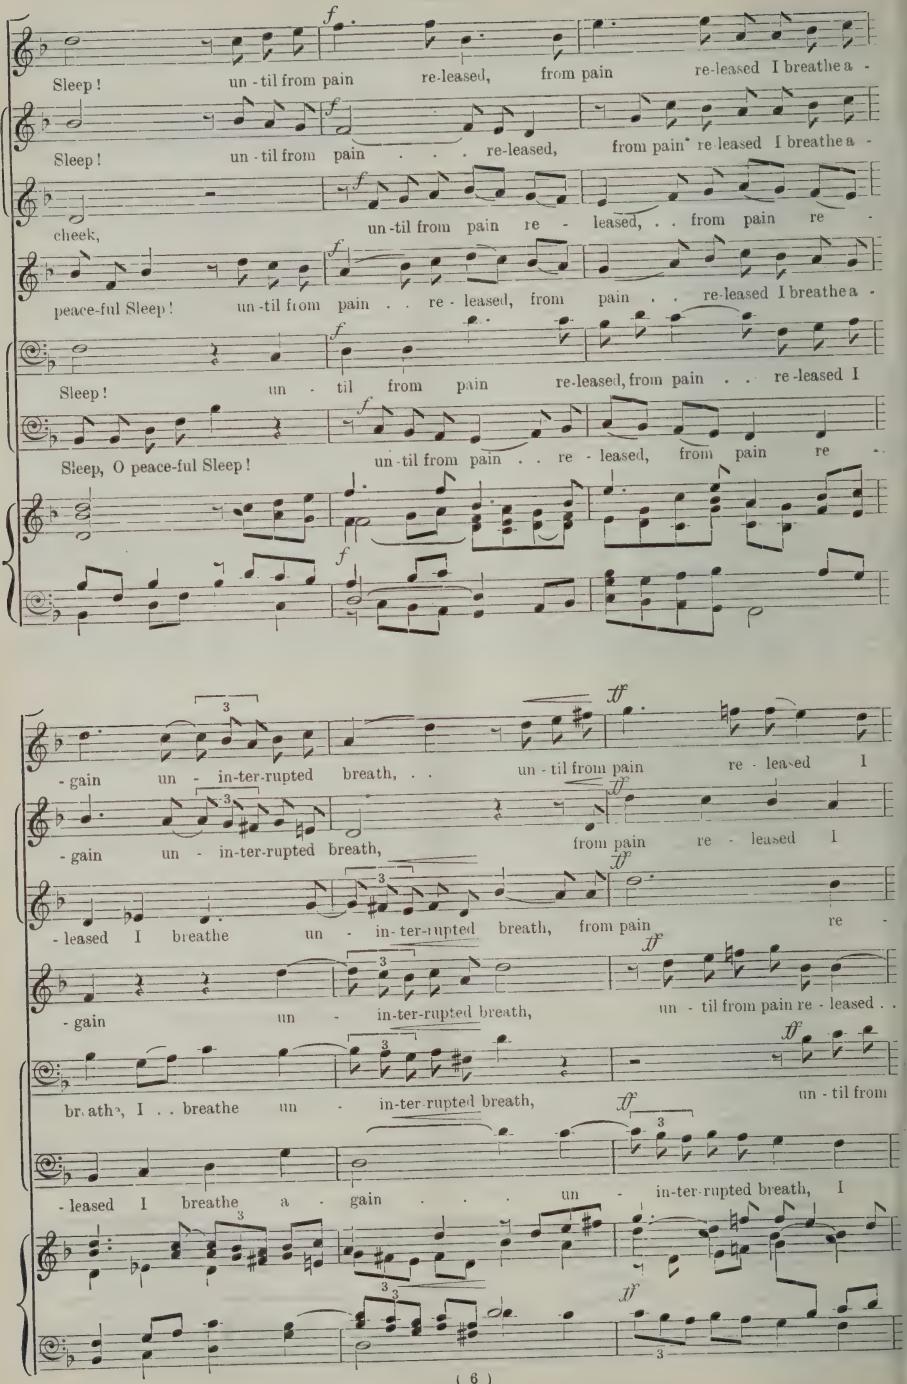
cres.



Sleep! un - til from pain re-leased, from pain re-leased I breathe a - Sleep! un - til from pain . . . re-leased, from pain re-leased I breathe a - cheek, un-til from pain re - leased, . . from pain re - peace-ful Sleep! un-til from pain . . re - leased, from pain . . re-leased I breathe a - Sleep! un - til from pain re-leased, from pain . . re-leased I Sleep, O peace-ful Sleep! un-til from pain . . re - leased, from pain re -
- gain un - in-ter-rupted breath, . . un - til from pain re - leased I
- gain un - in-ter-rupted breath, from pain re - leased I
- leased I breathe un - in-ter-rupted breath, from pain re -
- gain un - in-ter-rupted breath, un - til from pain re - leased . .
breath, I . . breathe un - in-ter-rupted breath, un - til from
- leased I breathe a - gain . . . un - in-ter-rupted breath, I breathe a - gain . . un - in-ter-rupt - ed breath! Lull . .

breathe a - gain . . un -in-ter -rupt - - ed breath! Lull . .
- leased I breathe un -in-ter rupt-ed breath! Lull me to sleep.
. . I breathe a - gain un -in-ter-rupt - ed breath!
pain re - leased I breathe un -in-ter-rupt-ed breath! Lull me to sleep, to breathe a - gain . . un - in - ter - rupt - ed breath! Lull me to . . me to sleep, lull me to sleep, lull me to sleep, to

. . me to sleep. lull me to sleep, . . lull me to sleep, to lull me to sleep, lull me, For I am wea - ry, for I am For I am wea - ry, Lull me to sleep, lull me to sleep, lull me to sleep, . . lull me to sleep, For I am sleep, to sleep, lull . . . me to sleep, lull me to sleep, lull me to wea - ry, for I am wea - ry, sleep. For I am wea - ry, I am wea - ry, wea - ry, . . I am wea - ry, I am wea - ry, Lull, sleep, For I am wea - ry, I am wea - ry, Lull . . .

pp rall. e dim. ppp
sleep, lull me to sleep, to sleep, to sleep. .
sleep, lull me to sleep, to sleep, to sleep. .
Lull . . me, lull me to sleep, to sleep. .
Lull me to sleep, lull me to sleep, to sleep, to sleep. .
lull me to sleep, lull me to sleep, to sleep . .
. . me, lull . . me to sleep, to sleep. .

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,025—Vol. 69. Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

JULY 1 1928

Price 6d.; Postage, 2d. Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING

(Season, 1928-1929.)

There are now VACANCIES in the CHOIR for SOPRANOS, CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. Applicants should have STRONG VOICES OF GOOD QUALITY, and must be prepared to pass an examination in SIGHT-READING. Address, The Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.7.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons:
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.
H.R.H. THE PRINCESS LOUISE (Duchess of Argyll)

President:
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.

Principal:
JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

MICHAELMAS TERM
BEGINS 17TH SEPTEMBER.

THE STUDENTS' ORCHESTRA.
Conducted by SIR HENRY J. WOOD, D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

VACATION COURSE FOR TEACHERS.
PIANOFORTE,
CLASS-SINGING,
AURAL TRAINING, and
MUSICAL HISTORY and APPRECIATION.
SEPTEMBER 11th to 14th, 1928.

CONDUCTORS' COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF CONDUCTORS.

OPERA COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF OPERATIC SINGERS.

SCHOLARSHIPS.
SEVENTY-TWO SCHOLARSHIPS AND EXHIBITIONS.

L.R.A.M.
Examinations held during the Summer, Christmas, and Easter Vacations.

PROSPECTUSES, ENTRY FORMS, and all other information on application.

A. ALGER BELL, Secretary.

GLASGOW ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC

SESSION 1927-28

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 12 to December 3, December 5 to March 10, and March 12 to June 8.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes. Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:
STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

The Royal College of Music

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING / HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, C.V.O., M.A., D.Mus., D.Litt.

CHRISTMAS TERM

THE CHRISTMAS TERM will commence on Monday, September 24th, 1928.

Entrance Examination on or about September 19th.

COMPLETE MUSICAL EDUCATION
is provided by Teachers of the highest eminence.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT
Classes are held for pupils under sixteen, whose time is also occupied by their general education.

SPECIAL CLASSES ARE HELD FOR:
'Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet.

OPERATIC CLASSES
The College possesses a fully equipped College Opera Theatre for an audience of 600.

SCHOLARSHIPS, EXHIBITIONS
Upwards of 70 Scholarships and Exhibitions are provided from a permanent endowment fund.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES
There are Vocal and Instrumental Ensemble Classes, and Pupils sufficiently advanced in this work are given the opportunity of putting their knowledge into practice at College Concerts.

A.R.C.M.

Examinations for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) are held three times a year, in September, December, and April.

Full particulars obtainable from the Registrar.

Guildhall School of Music

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting, Fencing, French Classical Drama.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £12 12s. and £14 14s. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS

FOUNDED 1913

PRESIDENT FOR 1928: J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, are eligible. Register of vacant appointments. All particulars on application to the Hon. Secretary, De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, Mrs. MARION COLE, Secretary.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY
Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are requested to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36 Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Coruse, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

Manchester School of Music

Founded by J. A. CROSS (1892)

Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.
Director: LEOPOLD H. CROSS, M.A.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras. Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, Aural Training, &c.

Students prepared for all Royal Academy and Trinity College Exams.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING

New Address: 2, Gray Street, Duke Street, W.1 (near Selfridge's).
President: A. NETTLEFOLD
Principal: DAVID GODELL

Instruction in all Vocal Subjects. Voice-curing Courses.

A thorough musical education if desired.

Two Free Scholarships to be competed for on Thursday, May 24th. All voices.

Particulars from Secretary, Miss MAIMIE M. HEATH. Mayfair 3819.

JOIN THE ORGAN CLUB

PRESIDENT: J. MARTIN WHITE, ESQ.

AND VISIT

ETON COLLEGE, JULY 28.
(To be arranged), AUGUST 18,
HOLY TRINITY, UPPER TOOTING, SEPTEMBER 15.

Further attractive visits to follow.

Entrance Fee, 2s. 6d. Annual Subscription, 10s. 6d.

For full particulars apply Hon. Sec.,
28, HILLMORE GROVE, SYDENHAM, S.E.26.

The Royal College of Organists

THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING will be held at 2.30, and the DISTRIBUTION OF DIPLOMAS by the President, Dr. W. G. ALCOCK, M.V.O., at 3 o'clock, on Saturday, July 21st. An ORGAN RECITAL, by Mr. H. L. BALFOUR, and a CONVERSAZIONE, will follow the Distribution. Members and their friends are invited to attend. No tickets required.

For the convenience of members, past examination papers have been bound in one volume: Fellowship and Associateship Organ Work, January, 1913, to July, 1927: Paper Work, July, 1924, to July, 1927. Price 4s., to be obtained by members only.

Examination Regulations, list of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College. Associateship or Fellowship, 6d. each (post free).

The College is open daily from 10 to 4, Saturdays 10 to 1.

N.B.—The College will be closed during August.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.
Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE
SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D. Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1927-1928

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.
Paradise Street, Birmingham.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

BAMBRIDGE PIANOFORTE SCHOLARSHIP, VALUE £100 A YEAR.

A Competition open to British subjects of either sex for this Scholarship, tenable at the College in London, will be held in July next; last day of entry, July 7th.

Candidates must be not less than seventeen nor over twenty-one years of age.

The Examination consists of:

1. The performance of two or more Pianoforte pieces, names of which must be submitted for approval;
2. Reading at sight;
3. Viva voce questions on Rudiments and Form;
4. Ear-Tests.

Full particulars of this and other Scholarships, with entry forms, may be obtained from the Secretary, Trinity College of Music, Mandeville Place, London, W.1.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.
London Address: 34, Spencer Hill, Wimbledon, S.W.19.
Please mention this paper when writing.

MEMORISE YOUR MUSIC

BY MEANS OF THE

Mackinnon Course

Read what correspondents say of the

MACKINNON COURSE

A successful L.R.A.M. candidate (1928) writes:

"I should like to thank you very, very much for the wonderful help received through your Memory Course. The lesson on nervousness was of more help to me than I can say. I also find that since taking your course I can learn pieces in an amazingly short time, and am simply delighted with the results in every way."

A successful A.R.C.M. candidate writes:

"I am very pleased to say that I passed the A.R.C.M. (solo performance) with 34 marks to spare."

Another correspondent writes:

"I have much more self-confidence and experience no nervousness when I play to my friends or an audience. I think it absolutely essential that examination candidates should take your Course."

The Course is recommended by Cortot, Matthay, Hess, and other famous musicians.

Write for free Booklet giving particulars, testimonials and guarantee to:

MISS LILIAS MACKINNON 1, Paultons Square, London, S.W.3.

—JUDGE BY RESULTS—

MATRIC. - - 155
(Durham, London, Dublin.)

1ST MUS. BAC. - - Mar., 1928.

"This constitutes my Second Success with you, as I gained L.Mus.T.C.L. after six months' lessons."

F.R.C.O. - - - Jan., 1928.

"This success is entirely due to your SPLENDID TUITION. This was my FOURTH ATTEMPT."
The above student passed after a Course of 10 lessons with the M.C.C.

A.R.C.M. (Pf.) - Jan., 1928.

"I obtained 123 marks out of 136 for Special Paper Work."

A. MUS. T.C.L. Average 82%

"I obtained an average of 82%, including 88% Counterpoint, 93% Musical History."

A.R.C.O. First Attempt.

"I attribute my success at FIRST ATTEMPT to the system and thoroughness of your course of training."

A.R.C.M. (Musical Appreciation.)
4 - All at 1st Attempt.

A.T.C.L. 93% (Art of Teaching.)

FREE - GUIDE TO DEGREES AND DIPLOMAS IN MUSIC.

PLEASE STATE EXAM.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE 20, SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

THREE CHOIRS FESTIVAL

GLOUCESTER.

SEPTEMBER 2nd, 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th, 1928.

For the Benefit of the Widows and Orphans of the Clergy of the Dioceses of Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford.

Patrons:

THEIR MAJESTIES THE KING AND QUEEN
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES
THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF GLOUCESTER
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE GEORGE

Principals:

Miss JOAN ELWES — Miss DORA LABBETTE
Miss DOROTHY SILK — Miss ELSIE SUDDABY
Miss MARGARET BALFOUR — Miss BETTY BANNERMAN
Miss MURIEL BRUNSKILL — Miss ASTRA DESMOND
Mr. PARRY JONES — Mr. FRANK TITTERTON
Mr. WALTER WIDDOP — Mr. STEUART WILSON
Mr. ROY HENDERSON — Mr. ROBERT MAITLAND
Mr. ROBERT RADFORD — Mr. STUART ROBERTSON
Mr. HORACE STEVENS — Mr. HAROLD WILLIAMS
Mr. W. H. REED (Solo Violin) — Mr. LIONEL TERTIS (Solo Viola)

Miss BEATRICE HARRISON (Solo Violoncello)

LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
(Principal 1st Violin: Mr. W. H. REED)

Organists: SIR IVOR ATKINS and DR. HULL

CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA OF ABOUT 400 PERFORMERS

CONDUCTOR:
Mr. HERBERT W. SUMSION, Mus.Bac., F.R.C.O.

For Programmes (post free, 7*d.*) and full details, apply—
A. A. G. JONES, Secretary, Eldon Chambers, Gloucester

FIELD DAY FOR MUSIC EDUCATIONISTS BRITISH AND AMERICAN

SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1928.

9.30 to 1.0. Session at Æolian Hall, New Bond Street, London, W.1.

2.30 to 5.30. Session at Amen House, Warwick Square, London, E.C.4.

6.45 for 7.15. Dinner at Verrey's Restaurant, Regent Street, W.1. (Morning Dress.)

Among the speakers will be:

Sir Hugh Allen. — Mr. Percy A. Scholes.
Dr. Ernest Bullock. — Dr. R. S. Thatcher.
Mr. Harvey Grace. — Mr. Herbert Wiseman.
Mr. F. H. Shera and Mr. A. Forbes Milne.

All the meetings of the "Field Day" are open to everyone engaged in any branch of musical or general education. The only charge is for the Dinner (10*s.*).

Full particulars from the Conference Secretary,
121, Bedford Court Mansions,
London, W.C.1.

LONDON SEMI-NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD,

CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 15th, 1928

MALE-VOICE CHOIRS ... ... ... PRIZE £75
MIXED CHOIRS ... ... ... PRIZE £25

SOLOS, ETC.

SYLLABUS (two penny stamps) of Hon. Secs.,
J. DAVIES, 107, Falmouth Road, London, S.E.1.
W. J. WILLIAMS, 37, Denmark Hill, London, S.E.5.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD"

SIGHT-READING LESSONS

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."

Music: "Goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint. Cannot fail to be of service."

A PUPIL WRITES: "Dr. —— tells me to practise more, and I feel all the time I am practising on the wrong lines, and not improving at all."

AFTER SECOND LESSON.—"I find I have more confidence, and Dr. —— says my reading is certainly more fluent. Your hints have helped me considerably at both organ and piano."—
(F.R.C.O. Exam.)

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON,
and WEEKES'S STUDIOS, 14, HANOVER ST., W.1
('Phone: Croydon 2703)

"SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER

(Registered No. 692810)

FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

A simple and very effective appliance for giving strength and flexibility to the fingers.
Recommended by Editor of the Musical Times.

IMPROVED MODEL
Price 2*s.* 6*d.*; postage and packing, 3*d.*

BYEWAYS, CLIFF ROAD, SEABROOK, HYTHE, KENT.

PIANO REPAIRS. "WIGMORE HALL FINISH"

denotes a standard not obtainable elsewhere.
THE MOST HIGHLY SKILLED WORKMANSHIP.
THE FINEST MATERIALS (regardless of cost).
PERFECT SATISFACTION.

WIGMORE HALL AND PIANO GALLERIES, 32-40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

THE TECHNIQUER

A BOON TO ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS
Invented and Patented by Mr. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.

Copy of Testimonial from the renowned organist, ARTHUR MEALE, ESQ.

"Westminster Central Hall, June 1, 1928.

"I have used the 'Techniquer' for a great number of years. It is the best means of keeping the fingers supple that I know of. Specially, lately, during convalescence, has it been invaluable, when not being able to endure the fatigue and strain of tonal practice, I have been able to use it for the preservation of finger and wrist suppleness."

Send for list of testimonials and full particulars post free
"Hand Development," with 16 Photos, 1*s.* 6*d.*

Secretary: MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

The Pianist's Hands

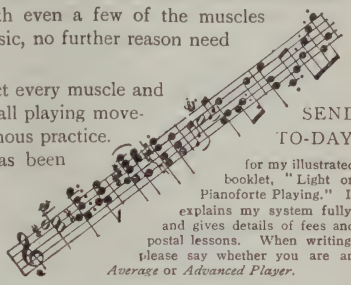
The Times says: "The excellence of Mr. Macdonald Smith's methods has been abundantly proved."

PREVALENT among pianists is the idea that you cannot play well unless you have a special sort of hand; this is a mistake. It is obvious, however, that the hands must be in perfect condition, otherwise the many technical difficulties to be overcome will be found insuperable. For a pianist every single muscle of the hands and arms must move the instant it is required to do so, and if this fails to be the case with even a few of the muscles brought into play in any complicated passage of music, no further reason need be sought to account for failure.

Let the "From Brain to Keyboard" System perfect every muscle and nerve in your hands and give you instant control over all playing movements without any of the usual drudgery and monotonous practice. Why not learn something about the System that has been used by many of our eminent musicians.



SEND TO-DAY for my illustrated booklet, "Light on Pianoforte Playing." It explains my system fully, and gives details of fees and postal lessons. When writing, please say whether you are an Average or Advanced Player.

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

M. C. MACDONALD SMITH, 94, GOWER STREET, LONDON, W.C.1

THE NORTHERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE

PRINCIPAL:
ALBERT JOWETT, Mus. Bac., Oxon.

A SPECIAL INTENSIVE COURSE during the month of August for the Diplomas in Singing, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Professional and Teacher's Diploma for the September Examination.

COMPLETE COURSE IN COMPOSITION

Mr. Jowett announces to readers of the Musical Times this important Course in Composition. A most notable success was the celebrated Composer and Pianist WM. BAINES, who was entirely trained by Mr. Jowett.

The College also offers Coaching for all important Examinations, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., &c.

Specialist Teaching in Singing, Voice-Production, &c. Personal Tuition in LEEDS, NEWCASTLE, and HARROGATE.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED. LYRICS SET TO MUSIC.

ACCOMPANIMENTS FOR SONGS, MELODIES HARMONIZED.

A well-known Song Composer advises in all matters relating to Song Writing.

NORTHERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
HEATHFIELD, MOORLAND DRIVE, HARROGATE ROAD, LEEDS.

THE NEW SCHOOL OF MUSIC

26, WESTBOURNE GROVE, W.2

Tel.: PARK 7249

Patrons:
THE COUNTESS OF LAUDERDALE
THE LORD BLANESBURGH, G.B.E.
LADY NEISH

Directors:
G. R. GALSWORTHY, A.R.C.M. J. M. SYMONS, M.C., A.R.C.M.
MISS M. E. GALSWORTHY, A.R.C.M.

Day and Evening Tuition in Singing, Piano, Strings, Wind Instruments, &c., and Theory, Composition, Ear-Training, Sight-Reading, Memorising, Elocution, &c.

ORCHESTRAS AND CHORUS
OPEN TO NON-STUDENTS

PREPARATION FOR R.A.M. and R.C.M. EXAMINATIONS

Prospectus on application to the Secretary.

CRAMER

MAGNIFICENT 1928
LATEST MODELS

| | |
|---|---|
| BABY GRAND ... | 120 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT GRAND | 65 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT PLAYER | 103 Gns. |

FULL SCALE
LATEST DEVICES

Write for our very generous Hire-Purchase Terms.

J. B. CRAMER & CO., Ltd.,
139 NEW BOND ST., W.1.
46 MOORGATE, E.C.2.
128/130 KENSINGTON HIGH STREET, W.8.

CINEMA ORGAN LESSONS

MR. FRANK NEWMAN
(F.R.C.O.)

Solo organist,
LOZELLS PICTURE HOUSE, BIRMINGHAM
(The well-known Broadcast Organist) gives Lessons in Cinema Organ playing on the Würlitzer Unit Organ at LOZELLS PICTURE HOUSE.

Single Lessons given.

For Terms, apply to FRANK NEWMAN, F.R.C.O., at above address.

FERD. KUECHLER'S
(Teacher at the Leipsic Conservatory)
COURSE of VIOLIN INSTRUCTION
is a
TRIUMPH
of practical teaching

TO KNOW IT IS TO RECOMMEND IT

Send for a specimen copy from the publishers, or ask your music-seller to let you have one on approval.

HUG & Co.
MUSIC PUBLISHERS.
LEIPSIC

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from

STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1.
'PHONE: MAYFAIR 6641-5.

PIANOS

BY

Bechstein, Bord, Schiedmayer,
Chappell, Rogers, Gors, & Kallmann

and other celebrated makers

The Profession most cordially invited to inspect our large and varied stock of New and Second-hand Pianos. Cash, Hire, or Hire-purchase. Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:

CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: MUSEUM 0439.

BLACKPOOL MUSICAL FESTIVAL

The Official Syllabus of Competitions for the 1928 Festival (81 Classes for SOLO, DUET, QUARTET, CHORAL, ORCHESTRAL, SCHOOL CHOIR, and FOLK-DANCE COMPETITIONS), which will be held on

OCTOBER 15th to 20th, 1928,

may be obtained on application, POST FREE, 6*d*.
(Four 1½*d*. stamps).

G. W. STANSFIELD, Hon. Sec.,
Festival Office, 91, CHURCH STREET, BLACKPOOL.

BLÜTHNER DRAWING-ROOM GRAND; also Mason Hamlin Two-manual organ, R.C.O. pedals. Both in excellent condition. £90 each. Seen by appointment. Write, "W. J.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES

MISS LYDIA JOHN
(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.
Lecture-Recitals of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Professor of Voice-Production and Singing.
Pupils prepared for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., Scholarships and Festivals.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Lessons given at above address or West-End Studio, Cricklewood Conservatoire of Music, N.W.2; and Highbury Conservatoire, N.5, &c. Primrose 3869.

HAROLD KNOWLTON
TENOR.
Soloist, St. Paul's Cathedral.
Shirley, Park Road, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

WILLIAM LOMAS
(Late Royal College of Music, Manchester)
TENOR,
GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL.
ORATORIO, OPERA, BALLAD, AND SACRED
45, St. Mary Street, Gloucester.

VERNON HARRISS
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medalist. BASS.
Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.
Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING.
ALBERT GARCIA
CARRIES ON THE TRADITIONS OF HIS GRANDFATHER, THE LATE MANUEL GARCIA.
STUDIO: 59, QUEEN'S ROAD, N.W.8.

MISS MARY LINDSAY
L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing.
Moderate Terms.
26, Onslow Square, S.W.7. Tel.: Kensington 3627.

MR. J. C. BRYDSON, MUS.B.,
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION.
Fees from 10*s*. 6*d*. for 10 lessons, according to Course.
"Balcary," KEGWORTH, near Derby.

RAGNHILD HUGHES
ACCOMPANIST, PRACTICE PIANIST.
Open to engagements for practices in London.
Address: 10, Electra House, Haslemere.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF
SOLO PIANIST
RUSSIAN MUSIC
CONCERTS AND RECITALS
TALKS AT THE PIANO
For terms, apply to
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

E. SIMS-HILDITCH
LECTURER AND ADJUDICATOR
Address, 37 Victoria Street, Crewe.

MISS PITT SOPER F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing, Royal Academy of Music, London.
Prepares Candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Examinations (Teachers and Performers).
For particulars, apply Wigmore Hall Studios.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London.
Receives pupils for Voice Production and Singing. Prepares candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas as Teacher or Performer. Also gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1. Phone: Langham 3909.

YOUNG MUS. DOC.

COACHES BY CORRESPONDENCE.

ALL branches of Music, including Paper Work for Professional and Higher Examinations.

Send stamped, addressed envelope and specimen of work for FREE LESSON.

FEES FROM 2s. EACH LESSON.

"H. K.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1,100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

SUCCESSES (with those for January, 1928) include 3 F.R.C.O. (1 for Jan., 1928). 3 A.R.C.O. 2 L.R.A.M.

2s. 6d. per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

MUS. DOC., LOND., L.R.A.M.

CORRESPONDENCE COACHING for EXAMINATIONS.

Special Courses as follows :—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work
(3.) Touch, and Technique (for Pianoforte Diplomas)
(4.) Trinity College Diplomas
(5.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O.
(6.) Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. (London and Durham)
(7.) Separate Subjects

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES.

Address : DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING, 46, Clarendon Road, Redland, Bristol. Telephone : Bristol 3033.

GEORGE A. ARMSTRONG, Mus. Bac., A.R.M.C.M., L.Mus. T.C.L. Correspondence Lessons in all subjects. Preparation for diplomas. 131, Warbreck Drive, Blackpool, N.S.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight-Reading Courses, Study Aids, 9d. Studies in Modulation, 3s.
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B. Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Street, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teacher of Singing), prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations. Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

MR. VICTOR BEIGEL (teacher of the late Gervase Elwes, Hubert Eisdell, John Goss, Lauritz Melchior, &c.) will teach at Bayreuth, during the Wagner Festival. Special courses for teachers. For details apply to Secretary, 18, Howley Place, London, W.2.

MR. AMBROSE COVIELLO, F.R.A.M., is arranging times for Revision Courses, Coaching, and Consultation Lessons throughout August and early September. The time available will be strictly limited, and applicants are requested to write early. Address, Mr. Ambrose Coviello, Wigmore Hall Studios, Wigmore Street, London, W.1.

POSTAL TUITION by F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L. (Registered Teacher). Any Exam One guinea ten lessons. Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, &c. Courses in History, Choir-Training, Aural Tests, Analysis, R.C.O. exams. Recent successes, F.R.C.O., July, 1927; A.R.C.O., January, 1928. Address : BM/JRMB, London, W.C.1.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES :—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-28... 334 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-28... 90 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES :

(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work. (25 Successes.)
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint. (21 Successes.)

(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Organist and Musical Director, The City Temple), 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17. Telephone : Battersea 0916.

Special preparation for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Also L.R.A.M and A.R.C.M. ORGAN EXAMINATIONS.

SINGLE LESSONS and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. inst. Also large four-manual organ. Pieces registered and phrased.

RECENT SUCCESSES IN ORGAN WORK :

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 L.R.A.M., Dec., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 1 A.R.C.M., April, 1920. | 1 A.R.C.O., July, 1921. |
| 1 L.R.A.M., April, 1924. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 1 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 4 A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 1 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 5 A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 4 A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 4 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 2 F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 4 A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. | 5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |

"Hints for R.C.O. Candidates" to be obtained from the Publishers, Reid Bros., 26, Eastcastle Street, Oxford Circus, W.1. 2/8 post free.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., PIANOFORTE.—Special Coaching by Arthur Ellershaw, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

FREDERICK GREEN, Mus. B., F.R.C.O., &c. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator Prep. for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. 1, Newington, Liverpool.

FREDERICK C. HAGGIS, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L., specialises in VOICE-TRAINING and SINGING. Pupils are offered, in addition to private tuition, exceptional advantages in Class-Singing, for the further study of Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, and Interpretation. Address : 14, Hanover St., W.1.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 413 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and the paper-work requirements for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas in pianoforte playing. For terms, &c., apply to 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922, L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, Organist and Director of the choir, Brighton Parish Church, has a vacancy for an ARTICLED PUPIL. Good experience in choir-training and preparation for R.C.O. exams. Special terms to one able to assist with Services. Address as above.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

TO COMPOSERS.—Complete and systematic course, by correspondence, in Military Band Instrumentation. Write, Captain Charles Hoby, M.B.E., Mus. Doc., Oxon., Director of Music, Royal Marine Barracks, Chatham.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London.

SUCCESSES IN ORGAN PLAYING SINCE 1910:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1910 | ... | 8 | 1919 | ... | 11 |
| 1911 | ... | 10 | 1920 | ... | 7 |
| 1912 | ... | 20 | 1921 | ... | 9 |
| 1913 | ... | 18 | 1922 | ... | 15 |
| 1914 | ... | 25 | 1023 | ... | 15 |
| 1915 | ... | 25 | 1924 | ... | 7 |
| 1916 | ... | 18 | 1925 | ... | 14 |
| 1917 | ... | 2 | 1926 | ... | 11 |
| 1918 | ... | 3 | 1927 | ... | 12 |

5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195

DR. W. HUNT, Mus. D. Durham (1926), F.R.C.O. Gives Lessons by Correspondence, for degrees and diplomas in music. Thorpe Road, Melton Mowbray.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, Sept., 1927, Mus. Doc., 3 Final Mus. Bac., and three 1st Mus. Bac. passes. Also in 1927—4 Mus. Doc. and 3 Mus. Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition. 200 successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, Mus. Doc., University of Toronto; F.R.C.O., F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons. Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning" prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.

10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Specialist in Pianoforte Playing, Touch, Technique, and Interpretation. Thirty years' experience in preparing for examinations. More than 1,000 of Dr. Middleton's pupils have gained Degrees and Diplomas. Address: Weekes' Studios, 14, Hanover Street, W.1.

L. R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 29 pupils' successes. Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c. 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.
Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering." 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6d.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture, Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes. 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

DR. A. E. TAYLOR. PUPIL GAINED STILLIE Bursary for Cpt.; Gold Medal for Cpt., Ass. Board; Gold Medal for Har., Ass. Board; C. C. Scholarship; A.R.C.O., A.T.C.L., Mus. B. Compositions revised and accompaniments written. Portland Place, Lancaster.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS (all music Exams.) by recognised and well-qualified Professor. 1s. 6d. per lesson, and postage. Stamp for specimen. Composers advised and assisted. "W. H. D.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MISS IRENE BRETTELL, Pupil of Prof. Sevcik. Berners Street and West-end Studios. Apply, 352, Camden Road, N.7. Ipswich visited weekly.

CONDUCTOR (experienced) will GIVE SERVICES to any Choral, Orchestral, or Operatic Society, London or Provinces. Box 38, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160 Wardour Street, W.1.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) Mus. Bac. Degree.
Several recent successes in all these examinations.
R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."
SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.
319 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
189 F.R.C.O. " " "
RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 2 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. | 2 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. |
| 4 | F.R.C.O., July, 1918. | 2 | A.R.C.O., July, 1918. |
| 1 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. | 3 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., July. 1919 | 3 | A.R.C.O., July, 1919. |
| 4 | F.R.C.O., Jan.. 1920. | 10 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., July, 1920. | 6 | A.R.C.O., July, 1920. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. | 7 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 6 | F.R.C.O., July, 1921. | 8 | A.R.C.O., July, 1921. |
| 5 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 5 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. |
| 4 | F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 5 | A.R.C.O., July, 1922 |
| 8 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 6 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 7 | F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 10 | A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 7 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. | 9 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., July, 1924. | 10 | A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 4 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 8 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 7 | F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 10 | A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 5 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 6 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 6 | F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 6 | A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 12 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 10 | A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 3 | F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928 | 12 | A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

MARGARET YOUNG, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Registered, Pianoforte, Singing, Theory. Personal or Postal Coaching. General Musical Advice. Bawburgh, Norwich.

ACCOMPANIST (lady), experienced. Good sight-reader. Requires permanent engagement with vocalist or instrumentalist. E. G. Orr, "Lynn Allen," Truro, Cornwall.

FREE TUITION for one month and then reduced fees to promising voice. Pure Italian method. West-End Studio. Write, "Audition," Box 49, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SOLO BOY WANTED for All Saints', St. John's Wood, N.W. £10 per annum. Apply, Rev. N. Bonavia-Hunt (Precentor), 96, Broadhurst Gardens, N.W.6.

CONTRALTO WANTED.—Synagogue, North London. Saturday afternoon Service: Tuesday rehearsal. Some week-day festivals essential. £15. Good reader. Apply, E. Gordon, 107, Dynevor Road, N.16.

ALTO AND TENOR REQUIRED, £20.—St. Andrew's, Ashley Place, S.W.1. Two Sunday Services, Friday rehearsal. Good sight-reader. Write, Mr. A. M. Hawkins, 30, Ashley Place, Westminster, S.W.1.

ALTO REQUIRED for St. Stephen's Walbrook, E.C. Good reader. Light duties, £15. Apply at once, G. Metzler, 2, Edgarley Terrace, S.W.6.

ALTO (experienced) AVAILABLE DEPUTISE. —Any week day; also Sundays, in August. Box 51, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

WANTED.—Christ Church, Victoria Street, Westminster, TENOR, £16; ALTO, £10. E. G. Yeo, 29, Wentworth Avenue, N.3.

TENOR, ALTO, and SOLO BOY required for Parish Church. Two Sunday services and rehearsal. State stipend required. "T.," c/o Murray & Co., 180, Brompton Road, S.W.1.

LINCOLN CATHEDRAL.
There is a VACANCY for a TENOR LAY-CLERK. For particulars, apply to the Chapter Clerk, 7, Bank Street, Lincoln.

TENOR SOLOIST WANTED for St. Gabriel's, Pimlico. £22. Communicant. Good reader essential. Letter only to E. E. Douglas-Smith, 39, Gauden Road, Clapham, S.W.4.

TENOR and BASS WANTED, All Saints', Devonshire Road, S. Lambeth, in return for lessons in singing, pianoforte, or organ. "W. A.," 21, Thurlestone Road, S.E.27.

ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE, TENBURY.—BASS LAY-CLERK WANTED, September. Salary, £80, rising to £100. Additional work obtainable in lawyer's office for capable clerk. Applications, with copies of three recent testimonials, to the Rev. The Warden, from whom particulars may be obtained.

ST. MARY CHURCH (Parish Church), S. Devon. ORGANISTS visiting the neighbourhood during August, willing to contribute to the series of recitals on Sunday evenings, will be welcomed. (Four-manual organ.) J. P. Lawson, Dartmoor Lodge, St. Mary Church.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for St. Columba's Church, Omagh. £100 per annum. Good field for tuition. Apply, James Cadden, Secretary, Select Vestry, Omagh.

WANTED, ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for Parish Church of Dursley. Three-manual organ. Salary, £52. Regular Communicant. Apply, giving qualifications, to Rector, Dursley, Glos.

ORGANIST WANTED for St. Peter's Church, Carmarthen. Salary, £100. Apply, Vicar.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED at an important North-west London Free Church. Salary, £100 per annum. Please apply by letter only to the Church Secretary, 106, Hampstead Way, Hampstead Garden Suburb, N.W.11.

ORGANIST WANTED for Wesley Church, Torquay. Fine three-manual organ, 53 stops. Salary according to qualifications (about £80). Apply, by letter only, stating experience, to the Rev. R. Winboult Harding, at "Briarfield," Torquay.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH, SOUTHAMPTON.—In consequence of the appointment of Dr. Heathcote Statham to Norwich Cathedral, the position of Organist and Choirmaster has become vacant. Mother Church, fine Willis organ. Salary, £150. Applications invited. Rev. R. B. Jolly, M.A., The Deanery, Southampton.

WANTED, KEEN CHOIRMASTER-ORGANIST. Three-manual organ (electric). Salary £75, rising. Vicar, 46, Belmont Road, Uxbridge.

EXPERIENCED ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., can deputise in London or neighbouring counties during August. Arthur Phillips, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., F.T.S.C., St. Christopher's, Blandford, Dorset.

PROFESSIONAL ORGANIST AVAILABLE on WEEK-DAYS during August for weddings, funerals, &c. Also other times possible by arrangement. Write, BM/XFAN, London, W.C.1.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER DESIRES RESPONSIBLE POSITION in England or the Colonies. At present holds one of the most important positions in the Episcopal Church of America, but desires to return to the British Flag. Has established position with a choir of ninety voices; is recitalist of note, and also head of endowed choir school. Is British born, and gained early experience in England. Married, with family. Present salary $4,000 per annum. Can offer high clerical and lay testimonials as to integrity and musical standing. Allow at least six weeks for a reply. Box 44, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PROFESSIONAL ORGANIST and CHOIRmaster (Nonconformist) desires change—must have scope for activities. Experienced conductor, pianist, teacher of singing, harmony, and counterpoint. Specialist in training competitive choirs (many successes in open classes), oratorios with orchestral accompaniment. Highest references. Box 50, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST CHOIR-TRAINER, experienced, seeks appointment in September. Write, "Organist," c/o 4, High Street, Petersfield.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER. Appointment required by retired civil servant in country parish, where small cottage available, with ultimate view to purchase. Enthusiastic, energetic, excellent testimonials. "S.," 8, Welham Road, Streatham, S.W.16.

WELL-KNOWN LONDON ORGANIST desires good board and comfortable surroundings in private family for August. Terms and full particulars, "Mus. Doc.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN CLASS (Saturdays, 2 p.m.)

ORGAN LESSONS by well-qualified teacher, on large organ, situated within easy access of City and West-End. Organists desiring individual high-class tuition at very moderate fees, should write to "R. C. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1, for full particulars of the above.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—1s. 4d. an hour (pupils, 9d.). Hydraulic-blown, two-manual and pedal organ, at the Fulham School of Music, 2, Edgarley Terrace, S.W.6.

ORGAN LESSONS at ST. STEPHEN'S WALBROOK, E.C.4. GEORGE METZLER, F.R.C.O. Tel.: Putney 4208.

A.R.C.M. (Pianoforte) desires post as visiting Music-Mistress in school. "S. W.," 6, Rostrevor Road, Fulham, S.W.6.

STUDENT WISHES TO SEE 1927 INTER-MUS. BAC. QUESTIONS. London. Write, Box 45, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CHURCH ORGAN with electric blowing. Two manuals (61). Angle stops jambs. Fine oak case. £550, including erection. Photo, &c., Dalladay, 4, Wellington Gardens, Hastings.

TWO-MANUAL PEDAL ORGAN for immediate SALE on account of rebuilding of Hall. 13 speaking stops. Bourdon (16-ft.) and Flute (8-ft.) on Pedal. Three couplers. New bellows. Front metal speaking pipes on three sides of case. Suitable for hall or chapel. £85. Also, set of R.C.O. pedals for sale. Vincent Stevens, 4, Nassau Road, Barnes, S.W.12.

FOR SALE.—First-class Two-Manual PEDAL ORGAN. Swell and Great. 15 Speaking Stops. Two 16-ft., one 8-ft. on Pedal. Five couplers. Built on pneumatic system; electric motor. Cost £900. Accept £600. Splendid condition, suitable for Chapel. Built by Taylor, Leicester. Apply Box 41, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

AMERICAN ORGAN FOR SALE, by Bell.—Two manuals, 21 Stops, hand or foot blown; fine condition and appearance. Suit small church or chapel, £85, or nearest offer; a bargain. Apply, Mrs. S. Y. Sloper, Dunleston, Bath Road, Devizes.

FOR SALE.—PIANO PEDALS. Norman & Beard. In good condition. Complete, with Stool. £9, or offer. Eddolls, "Hillsbro," Alresford, Hants.

FOR SALE.—R.C.O. ORGAN PEDAL BOARD. Slightly used; good condition. £5. Box 52, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—"ART OF ORGAN BUILDING" (G. A. Audsley). "Edition de Luxe" (limited to 250 copies). Bound full morocco. Box No. 46, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

BARGAIN! PANATROPE ELECTRICAL REPRODUCER, suitable for Cinema or Dance Hall. Complete with Amplifier, two Loud Speakers, and one set of Valves. Suitable for 200 to 250 volts D.C. Included in the equipment is necessary battery for valve filaments. Demonstration by appointment. Apply in the first instance to Box 48, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—BROADWOOD SEMI-GRAND Pianoforte. Excellent condition. £60. Write, Mr. Percy Harris, 11, Morpeth Mansions, Westminster, S.W.1.

BARGAIN!—SEMI-GRAND PIANO (Collard & Collard). Beautiful tone, excellent condition; good as new. Cost 90 guineas; will take £70. Removal reason for quick sale. Can be seen in my office. Broadbridge, 53, Central Buildings, 24, Southwark Street, London Bridge. Or phone: Hop 5320.

BÖSENDORFER 5-ft. 6-in. BABY GRAND. Ebonised case, excellent condition. £95. "L.," 154, Burdett Road, E.3.

WANTED.—VIRGIL CLAVIER. R. W. Aldridge, Hoghton Street, Southport.

FOR SALE.—Musical Times, 1915-1926 (incl.); Musical News (and Herald), 1912-1926. What offers? Write, Box 47, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TO A.R.C.O. CANDIDATES. M.S.: 24 Hymn Tunes for Transposition, 2s. 6d.; 24 Accompaniment Tests, 5s., or 2s. 6d. for 12. Modelled on latest Paper. F.R.C.O./L., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ESSAY.—A.R.C.O., July next. Secure now. New Series of 6 Model Essays on the book set for the Exam.: Success assured. Also valuable "hints" on writing the Essay. Enclose 4s. 6d. to "Essays," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS, Glenholme, Hessle High Road, Hull, Yorks.

THE REVISION OF MSS. is UNDERTAKEN by musical critic and song composer. Lessons in piano, singing, theory. Herbert H. Nelson, 9, Grange Rd., Canonbury, N.1.

MUSIC DUPLICATING.—All kinds, any number; perfect copies. Specimens and prices on application to E. Herrick, at 37, Amherst Road, West Ealing, W.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING.

12,000 WORDS. ILLUSTRATED METHOD. 2s. 6d. Post free; Abroad, 3s. Pre-eminent Technique. It will thoroughly prepare you for the position of "Conductor." M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool.

"WORTH TEN TIMES THE PRICE"

What subscribers think of

THE NEW

GROVE'S DICTIONARY OF MUSIC

"I should like to say that I have given the work a thorough examination and I consider it to be worth ten times the price. I have already made considerable use of it and have never yet found it wanting."—An unsolicited testimonial from Mr. Frank Whatmough, A.R.C.M., of Bury, Lancs. (May 19, 1928).

GOUNOD

NEW (THIRD) EDITION
in
5 Volumes
handsomely bound in Cloth or Half-Morocco
Over 4,000 pages
96 full-page illustrations (24 in colour)

THE passing of nearly a quarter of a century since the publication of the last edition of Grove's famous Dictionary of Music and Musicians marks a stage in musical history which has rendered much of the information in former editions obsolete, inadequate, or out of date. The announcement of a new and absolutely up-to-date edition could not come at a more appropriate time. Information which research has added to knowledge of ancient instruments, musicians, and music of the past, is in itself sufficient to warrant a new edition. A new generation of musicians and composers has grown up—a generation which represents important developments in music itself, apart from the merits of each individual. The whole of the material in the earlier edition has therefore been revised in the light of the very latest knowledge, many articles re-written, and many new subjects included.

7/6
as first payment brings the set to YOUR HOME IMMEDIATELY.

To the GLOBE PUBLISHING CO., Ltd.,
112, Strand, London, W.C.2
(Use unsealed envelope, ½d. stamp.)
Please send me Prospectus of the New Grove's Dictionary of Music, with full particulars of payment-out-of-income, and discount for cash.
Name.....
Address.....
M.T. 38. .....

POST THIS COUPON
TO-DAY
for Free Illustrated BOOKLET and SPECIMEN PAGES.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

A SELECTED LIST OF SACRED SONGS

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS, except where otherwise stated.

Abbreviations: (S) Soprano; (M-S) Mezzo-Soprano; (C) Contralto; (T) Tenor; (Bar) Baritone; (B) Bass.

FRANZ ABT

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| Ave Maria (O Lord most Holy). E (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | E–G♯ |

THOMAS ADAMS

| | |
|---|---|
| Nearer my God to Thee. E flat (C or B); F (S or T) ... | B♭–E♭ |
| Radiant Morn, The. D (M-S, C, or Bar) ... ... ... | C♯–E |
| Rock of Ages. E (C or Bar); G (S or T) ... ... ... | B–E |

IVOR ATKINS

| | |
|---|---|
| Virgin's Lullaby, The. G minor (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | D–F |

EDGAR L. BAINTON

| | |
|---|---|
| Song of the Virgin Mother, A. D (M-S) ... ... ... | D–F♯ |

JOSEPH BARNBY

| | |
|---|---|
| Elizabeth's Song. G minor (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D–E |
| Soft southern breeze. B flat (Bar); D flat (T) ... ... | D♭–F |
| When I view the Mother holding (Christmastide). D (C or M-S) ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D–D |

JOHN F. BARNETT

| | |
|---|---|
| Rock of Ages, The. E minor (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | B–F♯ |

JULIUS BENEDICT

| | |
|---|---|
| I mourn as a dove. A (S) ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯–A |
| Lord is very pitiful, The. F (T) ... ... ... (1/6) | E–G |
| O thou afflicted. D flat (C) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | A♭–D♭ |

W. STERNDALE BENNETT

| | |
|---|---|
| His salvation is nigh them that fear Him. G (Bar): B (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D–E |
| O Lord, Thou hast searched me out. F (C) ... ... (1/6) | C–D |
| Whosoever drinketh of this water. E (B) ... ... (1/6) | B–E |

A. HERBERT BREWER

| | |
|---|---|
| Virgin's Cradle Song, The. F (M-S) ... ... ... ... | D–F |

GERARD F. COBB

| | |
|---|---|
| It came upon the midnight clear (Christmastide). D (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | D–E |

WILLIAM COENEN

| | |
|---|---|
| Beyond. D flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... | D♭–F |
| Come unto Me. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) | C–D |
| Father, forgive them (Lent). F minor (S or T) ... ... | E–F |
| I shall see Thee again. F (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | E–F |
| Thou wilt remember us. C (C or B); D flat (Bar or M-S); E flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B–E |

ANTONIN DVOŘÁK

| | |
|---|---|
| Inflammatus et Accensus (Latin words only). D minor (C) | A–E |

EDWARD ELGAR

| | |
|---|---|
| Angel's Song, The. C (M-S) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♭–E |
| As a Spirit didst thou pass. E flat (T) ... ... ... | F–A |

PERCY E. FLETCHER

| | |
|---|---|
| Hark! hark! my soul! C (C or B); E flat (S or T) ... | A–D |

MYLES B. FOSTER

| | |
|---|---|
| O for a closer walk with God. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) | C–E |

ALFRED R. GAUL

| | |
|---|---|
| Eye hath not seen. G (C); B flat (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | B–D |
| Ruth (Entreat me not to leave thee). B flat (M-S or S) (1/6) | C–F |

CHARLES GOUNOD

| | |
|---|---|
| Angel hosts descending. F (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C–G |
| Holy Vision, The. D minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... | D–F♯ |
| Jerusalem. A minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... | E–B |
| Nazareth. E flat (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | B–F |
| Power and Love. A (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... | E–F♯ |
| There is a green hill. D (C or B), E (M-S or Bar); F (S or T)... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | C♯–D |

CARL H. GRAUN

| | |
|---|---|
| Lo! the heaven-descended prophet. B flat (S) ... ... | E♭–C |

ROBERT KING

(Arranged by H. A. CHAMBERS.)

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| Come, O Thou Traveller unknown. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar) | C–F |

CHARLES H. LLOYD

| | |
|---|---|
| O Father all-creating (Weddings). E (S or T) ... ... | E–G♯ |

ALEXANDER C. MACKENZIE

| | |
|---|---|
| Cross and Crown. B flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C–G |
| Dormi Jesu (The Virgin's Cradle Hymn) (Latin words only). E (C or M-S) | E–E |
| For lo, the winter is past. B flat and C (T)... ... ... | E–G |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. G (S) ... ... ... ... | E–G |

EDWARD J. MARGETSON

| | |
|---|---|
| Far from my heavenly home. E flat (C or Bar); G (S or T) | B♭–E♭ |

JOHN H. MAUNDER

| | |
|---|---|
| O lovely flowers (Harvest). G (C or Bar); A (S or T) ... | B–G |

BERNHARD MOLIQUE

| | |
|---|---|
| Pour out thy heart before the Lord. A flat (T) ... (1/-) | E♭–A♭ |

ALICE A. NEEDHAM

| | |
|---|---|
| Far from my heavenly home. C minor (C or Bar); D minor (M-S) | C–F |

HORATIO W. PARKER

| | |
|---|---|
| Come, Holy Ghost (Whitsun). D (S) ... ... ... | D–G |
| Lo, now the shades of night. A flat (C) ... ... ... | A♭–E♭ |
| Declining now the sun's bright wheel. E flat minor (Bar) | B♭–E♭ |

C. HUBERT H. PARRY

| | |
|---|---|
| Ballad of Meshullemeth, The. E flat (C) ... ... ... | B♭–F |
| God breaketh the battle. G (T) ... ... ... ... | D–A |
| Lady! thou Queen of Israel. E flat (S) ... ... ... | D–A♭ |
| Lord is long-suffering, The. (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D–E |

D. PUGHE-EVANS

| | |
|---|---|
| Lead, Kindly Light. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); G (S or T) | C–E♭ |
| Return unto thy rest. E flat (C or Bar) ... ... ... | B♭–E♭ |

HENRY PURCELL

| | |
|---|---|
| Now that the sun (Evening Hymn). E flat (C); G (S) ... | B♭–E♭ |

J. JOACHIM RAFF

| | |
|---|---|
| Twilight is gently falling, The (Ave Maria). E flat (S or T) | E♭–A♭ |

ROLAND ROGERS

| | |
|---|---|
| Lead, Kindly Light. F (C or Bar) ... ... ... ... | A–F |

FRANZ SCHUBERT

| | |
|---|---|
| Litany for All Souls' Day. E flat (C or Bar) ... (1/6) | C–E♭ |

JOHN STAINER

| | |
|---|---|
| My Maker and my King. D (S) ... ... ... (1/6) | C♯–F♯ |

ALESSANDRO STRADELLA

| | |
|---|---|
| O God, have mercy (Pietà Signore). D minor (S or T) ... | D–G |

ERIC H. THIMAN

| | |
|---|---|
| Birds, The. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) ... ... ... | D–F |
| God of Love my Shepherd is, The. F (C or Bar); A flat (M-S) | A–D |
| In the bleak mid-winter. D (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... | A–E |
| Jesus the very thought of Thee. B flat (C or Bar); D (M-S) | B♭–D |
| My Master hath a garden. F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) (1/6) | C–F |

HERBERT W. WAREING

| | |
|---|---|
| Jesu, Lover of my soul. E flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... | B♭–F |

H. LANE WILSON

| | |
|---|---|
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); A flat (S or T) | B♭–E♭ |

For songs by Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn, &c., see separate lists and catalogues.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

SONG & PIANO COLLECTIONS

USEFUL FOR ALL OCCASIONS

NOW READY

Twelve Piano Pieces by Schubert, Price 1s.

CONTENTS:

Andante, Op. 78; Military March: Entr'acte and Ballet Music (Rosamunde); Impromptu, Op. 99, No. 3; Valse; Moment Musical, No. 3; Andante, Sonata, No. 1; Menuetto, Op. 78; Impromptus, Op. 142, Nos. 2 and 3; Andante, Sonata No. 3.

Twelve Famous Songs by Schubert, Price 1s. 6d.

(English and German Words.)

CONTENTS:

The Erl King; Serenade: In Praise of Tears; Hark! Hark! the Lark; Litany; Ave Maria; Who is Sylvia?; Adieu; The First Loss; The Post; Impatience; Cradle Song.

Twelve Songs of Good Cheer, Price 1s.

(Arranged for Solo Voice with Pianoforte Accompaniment and Optional Unison or Harmonized Chorus.)

CONTENTS:

Here's a health unto His Majesty; Here's to the Maiden; Down among the dead men; The Roast Beef of Old England; Bren' Cheese an' Zider; Come, Landlord, fill the flowing bowl; Simon, the Cellarer; The good Rhine Wine; In Cellar Cool; Little Brown Jug; There's a Tavern in the Town; Auld Lang Syne.

Twelve Sailors' Songs and Chanteys, Price 1s.

(Arranged for Solo Voice with Pianoforte Accompaniment and Optional Unison or Harmonized Chorus.)

CONTENTS:

Blow the Man Down; Rio Grande; Shenadoa; Sally Brown; Tom's gone to Hilo; Reuben Ranzo; Blow, Boys, Blow; A-Roving; Hanging Johnny; The Dead Horse; Whisky for my Johnnie; Johnnie Bowker.

Twelve Comic Songs of Other Days, Price 1s.

(Arranged for Solo Voice with Pianoforte Accompaniment and Optional Unison or Harmonized Chorus.)

CONTENTS:

Villikins and His Dinah; The One-Horse Shay; The Ratcatcher's Daughter; Hot Codlings; Kiss behind the Door; Bubble and Squeak and Pettitoes; Oh! Cruel were my Parients; Mister Simpkins lived at Leeds; Teaching MacFadden to Dance; The Cork Leg; The Lost Child; My Lord Tomnoddy.

Twelve Negro Spirituals, Price 1s.

(Arranged for Solo Voice with Pianoforte Accompaniment and Optional Unison or Harmonized Chorus.)

CONTENTS:

The Gospel Train; Swing low, sweet chariot; Nobody knows de trouble I see; Deep River; I got a Robe; Peter, go ring dem Bells; I'm a rollin'; Steal away to Jesus; The Rocks and the Mountains; Ride on, King Jesus; In Bright Mansions above; My ship is on the ocean.

PAXTON: LONDON: 22, HIGH STREET, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.1.

COMPOSITIONS BY FRANZ SCHUBERT

CANTATAS, MASSES, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Song of Miriam, The (Sol-fa, 8d.; Sol-fa, Welsh words, 8d.) | 1 | 6 |
| Lazarus (Selection only) | 2 | 6 |
| Mass in E flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. A flat | 1 | 6 |
| do. F (Sol-fa, 1s.) | 1 | 6 |
| do. B flat | 1 | 6 |
| do. C | 1 | 6 |
| do. G | 1 | 6 |

SERVICES

| | | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Communion Service in | | A flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | B flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | C | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | E flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | F | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. | G | 3 | 0 |

ANTHEMS

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Christ has risen (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Good it is to thank the Almighty | 0 | 8 |
| Great is Jehovah the Lord (Solo Tenor and T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Great is Jehovah the Lord (with Chorus for S.A.T.B.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Lord, in thankful love adoring | 0 | 2 |
| The Lord is my Shepherd. S.S.A.A. (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| do. do. do. S.A.T.B. (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Where Thou reignest (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |

PIANOFORTE SOLOS

PIANOFORTE ALBUMS.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| No. 47. Four Impromptus (Op. 90) | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 48. do. do. (Op. 142) | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 49. Moments Musicals, Adagio and Rondo | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 50. Ten Variations, &c. | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 51. Adagio, Allegretto, &c. | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 52. Five Klavierstücke and Two Scherzi | 1 | 6 |

ORGAN ARRANGEMENTS

For particulars see NOVELLO'S CATALOGUE.

PART-SONGS, ETC.

MIXED VOICES

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Dance we so gaily | 0 | 4 |
| Forth to the Meadows ("Rosamunde") (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| God in the Thunderstorm (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Hail to the Chief (Boat Song) (arranged) | 0 | 3 |
| How merry is life ("Rosamunde") (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Hymn to the Eternal | 0 | 4 |
| To Sylvia. Arranged by John E. West (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Welcome Spring (Op. 33). A Suite of Vocal Dances: | | |
| 1. Welcome Spring2. How sweet to wander | 0 | 4 |
| 3. Come, O come, dearest4. As the watcher longs5. I'm in no hurry to marry | 0 | 4 |
| 6. When gallant lovers7. An end will I bring to doubt | 0 | 4 |
| 8. Her true love she greeteth9. As dew-drops at morn | 0 | 4 |
| 10. Hark! silv'ry bells chiming11. Tender music all inviting | 0 | 4 |

MALE VOICES

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Far beyond all mortal ken (Chorus of Spirits, from "Rosamunde"). T.T.B.B. (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 2 |
| Gondolier's serenade. T.T.B.B. (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Hail to the Chief (Boat Song). (T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Night is cloudless and serene, The. (T. solo, T.T.B.B.) | 0 | 8 |
| Song of the spirits over the waters. (Double chorus, T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 8d.) | 1 | 6 |
| Spectres' Dance, The. T.T.B.B. | 0 | 3 |

FEMALE VOICES

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Five ChorusesOr singly :— | 1 | 6 |
| Coronach (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Glory to the Lord Almighty | 0 | 4 |
| God in Nature. (A. Solo.) (S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. (S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Serenade. (A. Solo and Chorus. S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 8 |
| Forth to the Meadows ("Rosamunde") (arranged for Two parts, with three-part Semi-Chorus) (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| To Sylvia (arranged for S.S., or C.). Staff and Sol-fa combined | 0 | 2 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

SONGS BY FRANZ SCHUBERT

VOL. 1

TWENTY SONGS

FOR A MEZZO-SOPRANO VOICE

SELECTED, EDITED, AND TRANSLATED BY

NATALIA MACFARREN

Price 2s. 6d.

Praise of Tears.
Knowest thou the land? (Mignon's first song in "Wilhelm Meister").
The Message of Flowers.
Nought may'st thou ask me (Mignon's second song in "Wilhelm Meister").
Oh, let me dream till I awaken (Mignon's third song in "Wilhelm Meister").
The greenwood calls.
The full-orbed moon (Romance from "Rosamund").
Hallow'd night, descend.
Huntsman, rest (Ellen's second song in "The Lady of the Lake").
Thro' the pine-wood.
The Summer waves.
Wanderer's night-song
Trust in Spring.
The maiden's lament.
To Mignon.
The passing-bell.
Alinda.
Ave Maria (Ellen's third song in "The Lady of the Lake").
The fisherman.
On the water.

VOL. 2

TWENTY SONGS

FOR A CONTRALTO VOICE

SELECTED, EDITED, AND TRANSLATED BY

NATALIA MACFARREN

Price 2s. 6d.

The wanderer.
Fisher's song.
The angry bard.
The unlucky fisherman.
Old man's song.
The flight of time.
Litany for All Souls' day.
The weary heart.
Minstrel's treasure.
Soldiers' drinking song.
Sadness.
To the lyre.
Calm at sea.
Lay of the imprisoned huntsman
Passing to Hades.
Comfort in tears.
Death and the maiden.
Crusaders.
Dithyramb.
Prometheus

VOL. 3

TWENTY SONGS

FOR SOPRANO OR TENOR

SELECTED, EDITED, AND TRANSLATED BY

NATALIA MACFARREN

Price 2s. 6d.

The Erl King.
Omnipotence.
Love's unrest.
Rose among the heather.
Sad heart.
The band of roses.
Thou art repose.
Ganymede.
Mignon.
Secrets.
Hark, hark, the lark.
Thee would I greet.
To the beloved one.
Suleika's second song.
Presence of the loved one.
Laughing and weeping.
Margaret's prayer.
By the doorways I will wander.
To a brooklet.
To Sylvia.

VOL. 4

SWAN SONGS

(SCHWANENGESANG)

GERMAN AND ENGLISH WORDS

THE ENGLISH VERSION BY

J. TROUTBECK

Edited, with marks for phrasing, expression, and breathing

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER

Price 2s. 6d.

Love's message—Liebesbotschaft.
The soldier's presentiment—Krieger's Ahnung.
Longings in Spring—Frühlingssehnsucht.
A serenade—Ständchen.
The retreat—Aufenthalt.
In a strange land—In der Fremde.
Departure—Abschied.
Atlas—Der Atlas.
Her portrait—Ihr Bild.
The fishermaiden—Das Fischermädchen.
The town—Die Stadt.
By the sea—Am Meer.
The apparition—Der Doppelgänger.
The pigeon post—Die Taubenpost.

VOL. 5

"THE FAIR MAID OF THE MILL"

(DIE SCHÖNE MÜLLERIN)

GERMAN AND ENGLISH WORDS

THE ENGLISH VERSION BY

J. TROUTBECK

Edited, with marks for phrasing, expression, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER

Price 2s. 6d.

Wandering—Das Wandern
Whither—Wohin.
Halt!—Halt.
Gratitude to the brook—Danksagung an den Bach.
Evening rest—Am Feierabend.
The question—Der Neugierige.
Impatience—Ungeduld.
Morning greeting—Morgengruss.
The miller's flowers—Des Müller's Blumen.
A rain of tears—Thränenregen.
Mine—Mein.
A pause—Pause.
With the green ribbon—Mit dem grünen Lautenbande.
The hunter—Der Jäger.
Jealousy and pride—Eifersucht und Stolz.
The pleasing colour—Die liebe Farbe.
The hateful colour—Die böse Farbe.
Faded flowers—Trockne Blumen.
The miller and the brook—Der Müller und der Bach.
The brook's lullaby—Des Baches Wiegenlied.

VOL. 6

"THE WINTER JOURNEY"

(WINTERREISE)

GERMAN AND ENGLISH WORDS

THE ENGLISH VERSION BY

J. TROUTBECK

Price 2s. 6d.

Good-night—Gute Nacht.
The weathercock—Die Wetterfahne.
Frozen tears—Gefrorne Thränen.
Benumbed—Erstarrung.
The linden tree—Der Lindenbaum.
A flood—Wasserfluth.
On the stream—Auf dem Flusse.
Looking back—Rückblick.
Jack-a-Lantern—Irrlicht.
Rest—Rast.
A dream of Spring—Frühlingstraum.
Loneliness—Einsamkeit.
The post—Die Post.
The grey head—Der graue Kopf
The raven—Die Krähe.
The last hope—Letzte Hoffnung
In the village—Im Dorfe.
The stormy morning—Der stürmische Morgen.
Delusion—Täuschung.
The sign-post—Der Wegweiser
The hostelry—Das Wirthshaus.
Courage—Muth.
The mock suns—Die Nebersonnen.
The organ grinder—Der Leiermann.

THIRTY SONGS

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS, BOOK 273

IN BOTH NOTATIONS

Price 2s.

Ave Maria.
Courage.
Cradle Song.
Crusaders.
Erlaf-Lake.
Fishermaiden, The.
Fisherman, The.
Fisher's Song.
Full-orbed Moon, The.
Greenwood calls, The.
Hark! hark! the Lark.
Harper's Song, The.
Huntsman, rest.
Know'st thou the land.
Lay of the imprisoned Huntsman.
Litany.
Longing.
Ode to Joy.
Organ-Grinder, The.
Peace.
Rose among the heather.
Secrets.
Thou art repose.
To Music.
Trout, The.
Trust in Spring.
Wanderer's Night-Song.
Wandering Miller, The.
Whither.
Who is Sylvia?

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.

Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:

Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus.D., F.S.A.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus.D.

Saturday, July 7th, at 3 p.m. Invitation Orchestral Concert at Queen's Hall, Langham Place, W. (Sole lessees of the Hall: Chappell & Co.)

Thursday, July 12th, at 3 p.m. Invitation Chamber Music, and Choir Concert at the Grotian Hall, Wigmore Street, W.

July 19th and 20th, at 7.45 p.m. } Performances by the College Operatic Class of Offenbach's opera "Madame Favart," at the New Scala Theatre, W.
July 21st, at 2.45 p.m. }

Tickets, price 3*s.*, may be obtained from the Theatre Box Office only.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Dramatic and Operatic Elocution. The Lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student; pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open to sufficiently competent persons who are not College Students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

NOW READY.

LOVE IN A VILLAGE

MUSIC BY

DR. ARNE AND OTHERS.

ARRANGED BY

ALFRED REYNOLDS.

COMPLETE VOCAL SCORE of the Bickerstaffe-Arne Comic Opera, as now being performed at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith.

"The score is particularly interesting to music-lovers, for it contains examples of a remarkable number of old noteworthy composers."—Referee.

"A wealth of lovely tunes."—The Times.

PRICE SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.
(By post, 7*s.* 11*d.*)

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,
20, KINGLY STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD'S

SUCCESSFUL CHORAL WORK.

ALBERT W. KETÈLBEY'S PATRIOTIC ODE

MEN OF ENGLAND

Words by THOMAS CAMPBELL (1777-1844)

FOR CHORUS (S.A.T.B.)

PRICE SIXPENCE NET

With Organ, Pianoforte, or Orchestral Accompaniment. (Orchestral Parts may be hired.)

Tonic Sol-fa Arrangement just Issued. Price 4d. net.

This work received enthusiastic receptions when featured at the Kingsway Hall (and broadcast) on several recent occasions.
A specimen copy will be forwarded to any professional musician who is interested.

SIX SCHOOL SONGS

BY

EDWARD WATSON

Used by Teachers and Choirs in all the principal schools.

| | | Price |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | The Owl and the Pussycat. (Junior) ... ... ... | 4d. |
| 2. | Hot Cross Buns. (Junior) ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| 3. | I love little Pussy. (Preparatory) ... ... ... | 2d. |
| 4. | Oh hush thee, my baby. (Upper Forms) ... ... | 4d |
| 5. | Simple Simon. (Junior) ... ... ... ... ... | 2d. |
| 6. | The House that Jack Built. (Upper Forms) ... ... | 4d. |

SENT FREE. Organ and Choral Catalogues. Specimen copies of School Songs.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,
8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1

JUST PUBLISHED

NEW ORGAN PIECE

BY

SIGFRID KARG-ELERT

(Op. 100.)

PARTITA IN E

1. Entrata
2. Canzona
3. Corrente e Siciliano
4. Rigaudon (Alla Burla)
5. Sarabande
6. Gavotte e Carillon
7. Finale quasi ritorno

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Musical Times
AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR
JULY 1 1928
(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 659.)

RECONSTITUTION OF THE I.S.M.

It is a commonplace that the musical profession is in urgent need of a society that will both safeguard its interests and assist in the advancement of the art. Organizations already exist for one or other of these purposes, but they have so far been only partially successful for two reasons: (1) They are particular rather than comprehensive, representing not the profession but only one branch of it; and (2) they fail on the whole to realise that the two purposes mentioned above are inseparable. Concentration on the material interests of the profession is apt to develop into trades unionism—a desirable principle in matters of trade but inapplicable to the very different conditions which govern the practice of an art or science. On the other hand, no effort towards the advance of the art itself can proceed far without being confronted with a host of questions concerning the status of teachers, institutions, examining bodies, and so forth.

A study of the proposed new constitution of the Incorporated Society of Musicians indicates that, given due support, the Society will provide the profession with the organization of which it stands in need. The new constitution is the outcome of a lengthy series of deliberations by a committee consisting of Sir Hugh Allen, Sir Landon Ronald, Prof. P. C. Buck, Prof. Granville Bantock, Dr. Markham Lee, Dr. Harold Rhodes, Dr. A. T. Lee Ashton, and Mr. Lewis Hann. Dr. J. B. McEwen, Dr. E. F. Horner, and Mr. Frank Roscoe (representing the Royal Academy of Music, Trinity College of Music, and the Teachers' Registration Council respectively) attended certain meetings by invitation.

We discuss below the main lines of the policy aimed at by the Society.

EXAMINATIONS DROPPED

First, we are glad to see that the Society has taken the courageous step of abandoning its examinations. The Committee came to the conclusion that

> . . . it is not possible for a Society professing to be and assuming the functions of a professional Representative Body to have any proprietary interests in any particular scheme of education.

It therefore recommends that the Society's examinations shall cease on January 1, 1928, and that the power to resume such examinations shall also be relinquished. It has long been common knowledge that the examining activities of the I.S.M. kept many members of the profession from joining the Society. As the income of the Society has been mainly derived from the profits of the examinations, the Committee has by this stroke shown both courage and confidence. The new body will thus depend for its existence on the income from membership, and this being so we hope that the profession will give it due support. Moreover, the dropping of its examinations leaves the Society better able to take a part in the campaign against bogus diplomas. This point will be touched on later.

TITLE

The Report recommends that the word 'Incorporated' be dropped from the title, on the ground that it had 'become associated with a certain policy which will no longer be pursued.' We think, however, that an even better argument in favour of the change is that the proposed new title has the advantages of being shorter, more dignified, and more comprehensive.

NO TRADES UNIONISM

An addition has been made to Clause 2 of the Memorandum of Association. [The Clause sets forth the various ways in which the Society shall aim at furthering the cause of music and its practitioners]:

> Provided that the Society shall not support with its funds any object or endeavour to impose on or procure to be observed by its members or others any regulation, restriction, or condition which, if an object of the Society, would make it a trade union.

MEMBERSHIP

There are some important changes in the clauses dealing with this subject. It is rightly pointed out that the prestige of a professional society depends no less on the status of its members than on its numerical strength. 'The "right" kind of member must be attracted—the "wrong" kind debarred.' Hence the importance of care in framing conditions of membership.

The qualifying age has been lowered from twenty-five to twenty-one. (But students training for the profession may be admitted as Associate Members at eighteen years of age.) A candidate for election to full membership 'must have been solely engaged in the practice of music as a profession for a period or periods aggregating at least two years, and shall be actually practising at the time of his application for election solely as a professional musician.' Evidence must be forthcoming as to professional service, and also concerning education, both general and musical. We are glad to see this recognition of the importance of general education. Undoubtedly the musical profession has suffered much in status owing to the lack of all-round culture among a large proportion of its members. At the office of this journal many letters are received from correspondents who, though well-qualified musicians, are unable to write reasonably good English. We doubt if such an anomaly would be possible in any other profession. Here is the Society's educational test:

> On and from January 1, 1932, all candidates for membership must submit evidence of general education in the form of a school certificate, such as senior, local, or other first school certificate. In exceptional circumstances the applicant may submit proof of having attended a school or of having been under instruction in general subjects up to the age of sixteen with satisfactory results.

Our only criticism of this by-law is in the matter of date. Why wait until 1932? We should like to see the test imposed within a year of the new constitution becoming operative. No hardship need be involved, as the Council reserves to itself the right 'to waive the demand for school certificate in special circumstances.'

THE SOCIETY AND THE AMATEUR

After consideration, the Committee felt that although 'co-operation with the amateur is essential' for the furtherance of the Society's endeavour to form 'an educated public opinion,' it is not possible to obtain this co-operation by admitting amateurs to membership in a special section. Instead, it 'looks forward to the time when the Society shall be allied with an amateur society. Such a union of forces will combine the experience and practical competence of the professional with the enthusiasm and support of the amateur.' We think that this union is so important as to call for a more definite step on the Society's part in the near future. The reference to 'an amateur society' seems to imply a policy of waiting for the formation of a purely amateur organization corresponding in size and scope to the purely professional Society of Musicians.

We suggest that the Society should as soon as possible evolve a bold and comprehensive scheme whereby any amateur organization—choral, orchestral, or operatic society, music club, or what not—could be affiliated to the Society. The entire musical activities of the country could thus be linked up, to the benefit of all concerned. The ways in which a powerful professional society, working through its branches, could help the amateur organizations scattered up and down the country, are too obvious to need pointing out; the Society, in its turn, would profit by being placed in a position of stability otherwise impossible. We remember hearing Dr. Malcolm Sargent, at a recent Musicians' Company dinner, advocate strongly a more definite fusion of the amateur and professional elements; the most natural way of achieving this desirable end seems to be on the lines suggested above.

CO-OPERATION WITH OTHER SOCIETIES

An important step towards the unification of the musical profession is the endeavour of the Society to co-operate with other bodies.

Thus, it is suggested that the Music Masters' Association shall become a section within the Society, and there is also a prospect of a Music Mistresses' section being formed. These sections will have the same rights of representation on the Council as districts, i.e., each shall elect one member to the Council. Moreover, steps are being taken to establish connection, on the same basis, with the Royal College of Organists, the Union of Graduates in Music, the Scottish School Music Association, the Royal Philharmonic Society, and the British Music Society. The Teachers' Registration Council will also be represented on the Council. The profession thus has an opportunity of focussing and co-ordinating its activities and policy to a degree which a few years ago would have seemed impossible.

DUBIOUS EXAMINATIONS

There is to be no change in the policy of the Society in regard to examinations carried on for the personal profit of the promoters, but the word 'knowingly' has been added to the sentence referring to members who prepare pupils for such examinations. Assuming, however, that the Society becomes as large and representative as seems likely to be the case, it is obvious that the bogus diploma industry will at least be scotched, if not killed. Membership will be impossible for any musician who has official connection with examining bodies of a proprietary and irresponsible type. This meant little in the past, when the I.S.M. was a comparatively small and by no means representative organization, and one, moreover, that itself conducted examinations. Now, with its hands free, and given adequate support from the profession so far as membership is concerned, its ban will be something to be reckoned with. Furthermore, a representative society ought to be able to do in a systematic and convincing way what has so far been left to the sporadic efforts of individuals and a few musical journals, that is, instruct the public as to the relative value of diplomas. We shall be surprised and disappointed if the rebirth of the I.S.M. does not drive the first nail in the coffin of the bogus college. The speed with which other nails will follow depends on the measure of support received by the Society.

We have not space to go further into details of the constitution. It must suffice to add that the first fifteen Ordinary Members of the Council are Sir Hugh Allen, Sir Walford Davies, Sir Landon Ronald, and (we drop academical titles, to save space and repetition), Messrs. Granville Bantock, Percy Buck, Tobias Matthay, A. T. Lee Ashton, Walter Carroll, Markham Lee, Arthur Pollitt, W. G. Whittaker, Allen Gill, Lewis Hann, and Bernard Johnson. Add to these the fifteen District Members yet to be elected and the co-opted representatives of other institutions alluded to above, and the result is as powerful and comprehensive a body as can be desired.

. . . . . .

We have written the above because a study of the Committee's Report has convinced us that the musical profession has, for the first time, an opportunity of bringing into being an organization in every way fitted for the dual task of protecting its interests and furthering the progress of the art; and we urge readers to give careful consideration to the Society's claims on their support. New memberships will date from October 1, when the first year's subscription falls due; but it will be an encouragement and help to the Executive if assurances of a large number of enrolments are made before October. A request to the Secretary, I.S.M., 19, Berners Street, W.1, will bring full particulars and a form of application for membership.

SCHUBERT'S STYLE

By Richard Capell

IV.—Rhythm and Tempo

If a word is to be given to Schubert's rhythm, a premise must be allowed on a point of diction; namely, that metre is a matter of numerable things, bars and beats, and that rhythm lies in the usage of metres and accents. Thus, Schubert's fondness for Siciliano and Piffero metres is to be noted, and also his particular expression in the use of them—that is to say, the Schubertian rhythm. A poet or musician will habitually use metres in common with others; his rhythm is the purely personal factor. A great vehemence of accentuation may be one man's rhythm, and another's a virtual obliteration of metre.

Schubert used a great abundance of metrical forms. The variety of them in the song-books catches the eye, and gives the pages their individualistic, 19th-century look. He took up almost any form that came, for he, with his ninety poets to set, could not have too many; but, as with his poets, we feel that he did not go far out of his way to search for them. They were there, close at hand, only waiting to be thoroughly Schubertianised—the Ländler to be merrily mated with Shakespeare, if it so chanced, and the polonaise and quick-march with Scott. His assimilation of all he put his hand on was the proof of his sense of rhythm. No song is more Schubertian than the last of them all, 'Die Taubenpost,' but there is nothing elsewhere really like its syncopated dancing measure.

Not, of course, that there was a new measure every time. The oldest ones served again and again. That Schubert was consciously exquisite we cannot believe. His charm resembles that of certain poets who have written entrancingly on lines suggested by the first-opened hymn-book:

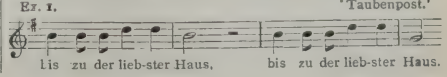
> Well, let them fight for honour's breath,
> Or pleasure's shade pursue—
> The dweller in the land of death
> Is changed and careless too.

In a good poet there is nothing deterrent in finding a familiar metre or stanza used again and again. So with Schubert's most usual movements—for instance, his favourite pastoral measure in 6-8 time with the predominating metrical foot of quaver-crotchet, quaver-crotchet. Matter and treatment can be counted on to be fresh. This Siciliano movement is found in his early, as in his latest, music, and we never tire of finding it, knowing that there will every time be a peculiar interest. In effect, these pastoral songs, which range from 'Schäfers Klagelied' (1814) to 'Das Fischermädchen' (1828), are full of charming Schubertisms, both modulatory and rhythmical, and they are rarely quite as innocent as they look at a first glance. 'Schäfers Klagelied,' indeed, brings off a happy but too audacious stroke which, if it had become habitual with Schubert, would be with difficulty defensible.

A musical period has sections corresponding to the lines of a poetic stanza. The four-bar section is the standard unit. Schubert adhered to it on principle, and departed from it on countless occasions. His general adherence is the sign of the reasonableness and normality of his art; the departures are its waywardness, playfulness, fancy. His flexibility and enterprise of rhythm have much to do with the charm that is first felt in his music by those who have never looked far into it, for rhythm makes the first call on attention. Looked into for a moment, it is seen to be for ever varying the prosaic way, while keeping to the direction; and we think of Schubert as the country child whose paths are free, and who delightfully takes a short cut or a long one more or less at his own sweet will—comparing him with a composer like Mendelssohn, the town child, whom we see as vivacious and yet prim, conscious of his gravelled walks and fenced-in grass plots.

A perfectly square period of eight bars is exceptional in Schubert, and is characteristic of his expression of studious simplicity or else of deep seriousness. 'Wohin?' is built up of precisely symmetrical sections, for the wanderer's tune is dictated by the regular babble of the unvarying brook to whose course he has confided his future. The unbroken rhythm of the C major melody in 'Am Meer' is in keeping with the poet's fatal vision of the desolate sea and the irresistible oncoming of night. Schubert's first and most obvious variation is the extension of the last section of his period by two bars, frequently a virtual repetition:

Ex. 1. 'Taubenpost.'



To prolong the period by an echoing of the cadence in the pianoforte part is almost a mannerism:

The device has a lingering and haunting effect, and Schubert's tenderness of heart and fond regretfulness come out in its uncounted recurrences.

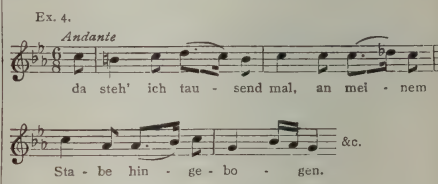
He was almost as fond of varying his rhythm by extending the second half of a period by a foot or a bar. The prelude to 'Frühlingsglaube' is an example. A charming instinct bade the composer repeat the second foot of the third bar at the beginning of the fourth:

We were half expecting the third and fourth bars to repeat the pattern of the first two, and the insertion causes a mild surprise, one that is matched in the delicate harmony. There is also a languorous little extension of the first period of the vocal part. The whole song, so transparently simple, is wonderfully written to express the rather tremulous welcome offered to the joyful season by a mind debilitated by sorrow.

For special purposes Schubert freely builds with melodious sections other than two or multiples of two. 'Täuschung' in the 'Winterreise' offers an example of the persistent use of three-bar sections. Its irregularity conveys a sense of oddity and unrest which is that of the illusory gleam described by the song; and the pianoforte's cæsural bars faintly mock the singer's words at the end of each line. The whole song is a remarkable work of the rhythmical imagination.

Quite as characteristic is Schubert's expressive play with the cæsura—by which, in music, is to be understood a much more variable quantity than in verbal prosody, the range of rhythmical expression in music being so much greater. We count as cæsuras, for instance, the pauses in the vocal part of the Rellstab 'Ständchen,' while the serenader seems to hold his breath to listen for a sign from the balcony and hears only the echo of his own cadence, taken up, as it were, by the nocturnal breeze and the rustling foliage. The singer of Schubert should scrutinise curiously the disposition of his rests. It is very artful, and is in fact one of Schubert's great devices for making vivid the emotional situation. Almost every other page offers an example. Observe in 'Die Post' the irregularity in the breaks—a bar, three bars, half a bar—all indicating the agitation of the cast-off lover, and the last gasping of his fond hopes, while the post-horn sounds in the street.

Schubert already played in masterly fashion with this device when quite young. It gives a special charm to 'Schäfers Klagelied.' The love-lorn shepherd's plaint begins in the most homely strain; but Schubert has a surprise for us in the fourth bar by his omission of the normal cæsura:



It is an example of the way in which Schubert was seized by the sense of a poem. Goethe has here led him to press on from 'On yon hillside often and often do I stand . . .' to '. . . leaning on my crook and staring down into the valley.' The average youthful composer of the time would assuredly have pulled up on a dotted crotchet at the end of the poet's second line. Schubert gets another foot into his melody in place of the conventional cæsural pause. His eight-bar period is built up not of 4 + 4, but of 2 + 4 + 2 sections. The rhythmical carrying-on between the fourth and fifth bars may be compared with the over-riding of the cæsura by the French symbolists of forty years ago in their alexandrines. The effect here makes for a dreamy melancholy. There is however, a sequel, an immediate sequel, to Schubert's interesting little stroke. With his extra foot he has used up a word of the third line before its due time. Goethe's lines have each three stresses, and so has each of Schubert's two-bar sections. But the melody has left the beaten track. It needs another word to help it back into the measure. What does Schubert do but adapt Goethe? He calmly adds a word and a fourth stress to the line ('hingebogen' for Goethe's 'gebogen'). It is safe to say that no one, hearing the song casually, would notice that the altered line limps. In the setting of the second quatrain the variation from the normal lies in the bar-long cæsura between lines 3 and 4, where the sorry shepherd pauses to reflect how vain is his errand. And so on. Only the fifth quatrain of the little song is rhythmically quite regular. The opening melody returns in the sixth quatrain, and again it is necessary to amend Goethe in the true interests of the musician's rhythmical variation. The word 'nur' is therefore interpolated into the last line but one. This licence is exceptional in he feels the need of an 'anacrusis' for the sake of expressive variation at the end of a song in which the principal phrases have begun on a down-beat, and he calmly inserts the last 'wer' into Goethe's verse. Ordinarily, however, Schubert was able to make reiteration of the poet's words serve such purposes. An example of this, of the same early period as the 'Schäfers Klagelied,' is in the refrain of the admirable 'Gretchen am Spinnrade.' The song is a long one, and with the sustained whirring of the wheel in the pianoforte part it would in another man's hands easily have become monotonous. As Schubert composed it, it is one of the lasting wonders of music. Calculated monotony is, indeed, its primary rhythmical characteristic; but against that is the beautiful variation in the second section of the refrain ('Ich finde sie nimmer'). This consists of an extension of a bar's length, on a repetition of the words, 'Ich finde,' giving us an irregular period of 4 + 5.

Schubert, but not unique. In the last period of 'Erster Verlust':

A glance at 'Das Fischermädchen' of 1828 shows with what refinement Schubert, at the end of his career, treated a simple 6-8 movement. The prelude of eight bars is quite unpunctuated, and this, taken at the 'rather quick' tempo indicated, gives a vague kind of flowing impression, a suitable background to the waterside courtship. The first two lines are set to four normal bars. The voice pauses, to allow the greeting and invitation to make their effect, while the pianoforte echoes the last two bars. The next two lines are set similarly, then repeated with a virtual repetition of the melody, and then there is a further extension—for, just when the close was expected, Schubert, with the effect of a nonchalant turn on his heel, takes the voice up a minor seventh from the tonic (with a diminished seventh in the accompaniment), and repeats the last line yet again. The settings of the three quatrains are alike, except that from A flat the middle one is taken into C flat. There is something about this modulation, as also about the repetitions of the words, that is elegantly idle and even a trifle impertinent. In short, Schubert, starting with a motive that looked the most familiar possible, made a song that is as individual as any. It is clear enough how the ground he broke by his rhythmical enterprise bore fruit in the general instrumental music, notably Brahms's, of the following generations.

It is not suggested that there is anything finicking about Schubert's refinements. Between the extremes of his most easygoing moods and his deepest earnestness the man is felt to be undeviatingly natural and unassuming. If there is an extravagance in Schubert it is nothing far-fetched, but a wild looseness of animal movement, a throwing of the reins to Nature. There is no perversity in the course, and no forcing of the pace. This 'pace' is what some would call Schubert's rhythm by a generalised use of the term, to which one may prefer the word 'tempo.' It can, perhaps, be roughly defined. It is a healthy and regular pulse, buoyant but not remarkably quick. As Schubert in actual time came between Mozart and Wagner, so his tempo is midway between Mozart's springy vivaciousness and Wagner's superb deliberation. Schubert's music does not care to race, for all its activity. It does not trouble to ponder, for all its sensibility. This music has the leisureliness of Nature.

It is more mistaken to sing Schubert too fast than too slowly. Slow singing may, if due regard is not paid to the rhythmical incidents, sound nerveless and dull; but excessive speed means the trampling down of all Schubert's characteristics. The richness of his texture, the full harmonies, and in particular the fine, sturdy basses, act as a brake. Music that would be speedy must strip. Look at 'Largo al factotum' and 'Numero quindici' in Rossini's 'Barber'; at Sullivan's 'Heavy Dragoon' song'; at 'Fin ch' han dal vino.' Schubert never wanted to spring so lightly. He gave his basses weighty work to do, and they put on muscle. Their handsome sturdiness it is, in good part, that has led one's fancy into seeing in Schubert a countryman, and in his music a similitude of the growths of the earth, sappy and ramifying. They behave with doggedness and native dignity; they disdain to pretend to be dapper and urbane. Almost every song might provide an example. One or two may be quoted as much as anything for the sake of pointing to a song or two that is rarely or never sung. 'Am Flusse' (1822) is perhaps the simplest of all the songs of Schubert's maturity. Nothing could be more bare, more transparent. Under the watery flow of the even quavers in the right hand there is a steadying value, an embanking, so to say, in this bass figure, which becomes slightly more pronounced in the course of the song:

Such a bass as that of 'Todtengräbers Heimweh' is the making of a song:

Schubert nearly always used German for his speed directions. They are curt, and do not convey much. Very rarely a quicker pace is indicated than a look at the music without reference to the text would have suggested. 'Geheimes' — marked 'etwas geschwind,' rather fast — is an example. But Schubert's 'geschwind' is not to be taken too excitedly. Invariably if 'geschwind' or 'schnell' is read as though the song were an instrumental piece it will be too fast, and the words will be more or less a gabble. 'Frühlingssehnsucht' is marked 'geschwind,' and a glance at the notes suggests a winged movement. But that is to reckon without such verbal obstacles in the path as 'Grünend umkränzet Wälder und Höh'! schimmernd erglänzet Blüthenschnee!' which are bound to reduce the haste if not the warmth of the rapturous expression. Similarly with 'Der Jäger,' in the Müllerlieder, which is commonly rushed into nonsense by English singers when they use the original text. Renouncing a little speed, the singer is more than compensated by the contribution made towards the expression of the young miller's excitement and anger by the hurtling of full-sized words that are like brickbats.

German has a heavy gait. Great energy, surprising to us, is generally applied to the articulation of everyday sentences. It is habitual to dwell on consonants and consonantal groups. The genius of the language naturally pervaded Schubert's style, when he, virtually the first to do so, set himself to write music for German poetry; and it unmistakably influenced his tempo. The German language strikes the stranger as uncouth and repellant; but the very ruggedness and asperity of its forms and sound are a value in the sum of Schubert's music, which is very little inclined to be mordant on its own account. This is one of several arguments for singing the original text of the songs—arguments which are, in the most favourable circumstances of performance, irresistible,* but not always and everywhere.

It is common to hear Schubert sung in German, some sort of German, when German is understood neither by singer nor audience. This is pedantry, which has done untold harm to music in England. It accounts for much tepid and accentless singing of Schubert's songs, in which, if the music is to give up its full sense, the images evoked by the words should all the time be felt by the singer and his listeners—should be seen passing before their very eyes. Perhaps (so it may occur to one when those images cannot well be focussed) it is necessary to be at least half-Germanised to apprehend Schubert in his true vividness; and the rest of us may be, as it were, merely peering through railings at the intangible garden. An upbringing amid a special lore alone can, so it is said, serve to discriminate all the poetical flavours of such a piece as 'Ueber allen Gipfeln.' It would have been better if from the first a really delicate attempt had been made to supply Schubert with a new poetry for the English world—if Victorians of the first order, like Tennyson, Fitzgerald, and Rossetti, had felt disposed to make free and exquisite translations. This would have meant a rather different Schubert, for poetry is not translatable, and what is called a translation can only be a new poem; but it would have given Schubert-singing in England a vitality which was denied by the pallor and flatness of the versions which occupied the field for nearly a hundred years, and equally by what may be called St. John's Wood German—a German which, even if correct on the singer's part, is not really vividly impressive to the listening circle, for it is useless to pretend that more than a meagre and reluctantly acquired knowledge of German is possessed by ordinarily literate English people.

A special training is needed to become disinterested in the text of the vocal music one hears. On this particular ground the English musical public, long accustomed to performances in more or less unknown languages and to ensuing licensed inarticulateness of singers, is no doubt as cultivated as any. There is no general principle to lay down. Performances of music are bound to become more and more adaptations, the farther they are removed from the music's time and circumstances of origin. We had best be pragmatists. It would be a practical mistake to translate 'Ombra mai fu,' for the text amounts to nothing, and the song translated would simply lose the open Italian vowels which are a good part of its music. The sensible singer similarly will not think of singing Brahms's Four Biblical Songs, Op. 121, to an English audience except in translation, since there exists a perfectly fitting English version (Paul England's), and since the strength of these songs lies so largely in the majestic words. The singer might indeed trust to his sense more often than he does; but the vogue to-day, in London at all events, is all for the imitation, as near as may be, of foreign tongues, a vogue which only exceptions like the 'St. Matthew' Passion, 'Elijah,' and the Brahms songs named can withstand.

Applying pragmatism to Schubert's songs, we find some that any singer who is, as well as the owner of a voice, a lively, communicative artist can hardly bear to sing in a language foreign to the audience—songs whose dramatic or evocative words are to such a singer no less than the notes a vehicle of his art. Thus 'Erlkönig'—unless the singer is certain that every listener has Goethe by heart—had surely better be translated, although so nearly untranslatable, and culture be speared on the point of the great story. 2 LO's broadcasting of 'Erlkönig' in German is surely the crowning of pedantry.

* Cf. Dante's dictum—'E però sappia ciascuno che nulla cosa per legame musaico armonizzata si può della sua loquela in altra trasmutare sanza rompere tutta sua dolcezza e armonia. E questa è la ragione per che Omero non si mutò di greco in latino, come l'altre scritture che avemo da loro' (Convivio, I. 7).

There are also songs whose words are either about nothing in particular ('Auf dem Wasser zu singen'), or else (e.g., 'Litanei') are much less fine than the theme and music have a right to. These are well enough left in the obscurity of German in circles where German is more or less obscure but still not unheard of. But pedantry has actually been known to introduce songs in German at village concerts and competition festivals, before audiences who are so naïve as to expect as the first thing when a person opens his mouth that intelligible words shall issue. In such surroundings any and every song must be translated, even the untranslatable ones.

The difficulties of translation are always formidable—a scope for the most ingenious pens. Sometimes they are insuperable; an example in Schubert is 'Sei mir gegrüsst,' for which no one has yet been able or is likely to find an English equivalent for the characteristic and repeated phrase with its essential rhyme, so perfectly matched in Schubert's music. The difficulties are increased by the general familiarity with the songs in their original form. This almost forbids alteration of note-values for the convenience of a new text, even alterations that would be of no real musical significance. The subtraction of a quaver from such a purely declamatory phrase as the last line of the 'Erlkönig' is at once noticed and censured. The pity is that the great composers, Schubert and Wagner in chief, had not foresight of our present needs. Then they would surely have called in skilled translators, and would have lent a helping and modifying hand at awkward corners. But Schubert actually lacked presage to the point of setting poems by Pope and Scott to music which does not serve the original text. Regard for a composer's least notes, even when their raison d'être has disappeared, amounts to superstition. In England it sometimes touches the height of absurdity, as, for instance, when Rossetti's 'Blessed Damozel' has to be rewritten from the French version when our choirs sing Debussy's setting, all for the sake of the composer's ipsissimæ notæ!

'Schubert's Songs Translated,' by A. H. Fox-Strangways and Steuart Wilson,* addressed the problem with a literary conscience not known before in this connection. Not one of the solutions in the book is without skill. Nothing could be more elegant than the best of them. Given this chance a generation or two ago, such pieces as 'Wohin?' 'Der Musensohn,' and 'Geheimes' (translated to perfection) would by now have become truly English songs. As for the version of 'Das Lied im Grünen' in this book, no English singer should be able to resist it:

> . . . Fair sights beckon all men and sundry to follow;
> The song of the lark and the flight of the swallow,
> The carpet of bluebells that fills every nook
> Lead on by the meadow and down to the brook
> In spring-time.

* Oxford University Press, 1924.

The versions which are less finished often have brilliant points. 'Aufenthalt' is rather spoilt by the flat-vowelled 'spate' for 'Strom' in the first line; but what could be better than 'Wind-circled tor, storm-riven trees'? The adagio songs are obviously hardest to translate. The curious thing to notice is how in the course of Englishing Schubert's songs not only the atmosphere and imaginative associations are changed but also the pace. The quick songs, as soon as fitted with the new words, go quicker still. The Oxford translators have pricked 'Der Musensohn' and 'Im Grünen' with spurs, and they race as no German song ever did. On the other hand, the slowest of Schubert's songs can never be provided with enough broad, dilatory vowels. These are, as well as crunched mouthfuls of consonants, a great characteristic of German. 'Heil'ge Nacht!' they say; it is as though the wheels of the busy day were indeed slackening speed, and under that round weight of speech Schubert's semiquavers naturally flag nearly to immobility.* Such words seem to charm time; and we remember how at another's 'Heil dir, Sonne!' day was arrested in the act of breaking.

'CHARLES AUCHESTER'

By Rutherford Crockett

'Were it not for Music, we might in these days say the Beautiful is dead.' So wrote Disraeli, in reflective vein, on the title-page of this extraordinary book, first published in 1853.

To him the youthful author—for Sara Sheppard was only twenty-three when she completed her task—dedicated her maiden essay in the literary field. Disraeli praised the tale with his usual flamboyance of phrase: 'No greater book,' he asserted, 'will ever be written upon music; one day it will be recognised as the imaginative classic of that divine art.'

From this judgment the musical critic Henry Chorley, in the classic pages of the Athenæum, violently dissented. 'Over-wrought, unreal, extravagant,' are among his milder epithets. But even he admits its charm, and suggests with bland condescension that 'neither the musician nor the amateur will be the worse for giving himself up to the spirit of the dream . . .' to an Arcady of art where 'the leaf fadeth never, and the fire never burns low.'

The modern reader, reverting to 'Charles Auchester' as a musico-literary curiosity, finds his attention divided between interest in its theme and surprise at its authorship. The daughter of a clergyman, reared in the stultifying Victorian atmosphere of London in the early 'thirties, seems an odd source for the vivid portraits, the informed enthusiasm, the penetrating critical flashes of 'Charles Auchester.' It is easy, and profitless, to dismiss with a shrug the youthful extravagance of language which colours the book; to smile at a flaming hero-worship in the etherealised portraits of Mendelssohn, Zelter, and Jenny Lind; to discount the rhapsodical descriptions of 'Messiah' and of the 'Mer-de-Glace' Overture. Blemishes abound in these vivid pages; faults of proportion and of judgment; but they are the vehement faults of youth, which leave the critic wistful even as he smiles. 'Et ego in Arcadia vixi ——' perhaps in this very Arcady of music where the goddess reigns over devout and earnest worshippers, and commercialised standards as applied to the divine art are put to shame.

* 'Nacht und Träume' (Collin), 1825.

Charles Auchester, born of an English father and a German mother, valued neither nationality so highly as that authentic Jewish strain in the maternal blood which linked his lineage with that of his hero, Mendelssohn (Seraphael), as well as with those ancient Hebrew poets he reverenced so profoundly. We are introduced to him as a youngster of eleven, scheming to obtain by hook or by crook a ticket for the triennial musical festival in his native city, with five sixpences in hand towards the necessary guinea and an unquenchable hope in his childish heart. The concert hall looked 'very still, very cold, very blank; the windows all shuttered, the doors all closed. But never mind, the walls were glorious! They glittered with yellow placards . . . announcing the day, the hour, the six-foot-long list of wonders and worthies.'

Charles realises his dream, and attends the three-days' Festival—not as a mere spectator, but as an alto in the chorus, singing in Pergolesi's 'Stabat Mater,' 'The Creation,' and 'The Messiah.' The fairy godfather who works these marvels for him is one Lenhart Davy (a portrait of John Hullah, one of the pioneers of popular singing classes in England).

Just as 'The Messiah' is about to be performed, an opportune accident to the chosen conductor ('a good old man, very steady, but lacking in unction'), provides a loophole for Fate—and for 'the Chevalier Seraphael' (Mendelssohn), then unknown in England, save by reputation.

'Swift as a beam of morning he sprang up the orchestra steps, and . . . bowed to the audience.' A great performance follows; 'the chorus was never so proudly true, so perfect, so flexible; . . . "Lift up your heads" and the "Hallelujah" will never again be heard in England as then.' Seraphael vanishes after the performance, leaving the city unknown, unnamed, as he had entered it.

Joining Davy's singing-class, Charles (escorted to and from the hall by his old German nurse) is initiated into what he half-apologetically refers to as 'choral life, or rather choral worship.' His account of Lenhart Davy's system of choral training ends characteristically: 'All he said . . . was to me a highly spiritual analysis of what most teachers endeavour to lower and to explain away—the mystery and integrity of the musical art.'

An evening party, to which Davy conducts his chosen pupils as performers, gives scope for some of those thumbnail sketches of musical society in which Charles excels. Here is the leading executant of the neighbourhood, 'Monsieur Mirandos, a haughtily-behaved being, warming his hands, gloves and all, and gazing with the self-consciousness of pianist primo; . . . he was the author of a grand fantasia which had neither predecessor nor descendant.' This chef-d'œuvre, 'Grande Fantasie sur des Motifs Militaires,' is duly performed, but when Mirandos, 'putting on the pedal, paused before the attacca,' Charles, who has 'a horror of his spreading hands,' hastily retreats.

He overhears a conversation between two performers, which seems to find an occasional echo in the 'artists' rooms' of our own day:

'The wind was very poor at the Festival, I heard,' observes one, a violinist.

'They always say so in London about county performances,' replies his companion; 'either at least about the wind or the strings . . . There sat Erfurt, groping, as he always does, for the organ pedals, and punching the keys; so we had fortissimo against the fiddles.'

'I wonder your conductor [the mysterious Seraphael] did not give one little tap upon Erfurt's skull!'

The duologue ends abruptly as the female pianist is called upon to perform; she plays 'a brilliant prelude, a more than brilliant fugue, short and sharp; then a popular air, with variations, few, but finely fingered; and last, after a few modulations, startling from the hand of a female, something altogether new' (a little 'tone-wreath' of Mendelssohn's).

Charles makes his way inevitably to Germany, where, under the rigid and eccentric discipline of one Aronach (Zelter, the master and friend of Mendelssohn, and a fervent Bach enthusiast) he studies the violin. Here, among German traditions and general musical enthusiasm, the boy finds his natural home and his inherited happiness. Here he meets Starwood Burney (the young Sterndale Bennett, then a child), who also studies under Aronach.

Not the least fascinating pages of the book are those depicting the musical life of Germany at the period. The Sunday services in the Lutheran churches—'the choir, so full and perfect, mounting its effects, as it were, upon those of the controlling organ-harmonies; the chorale so grave and powerful, with its interpieces light and florid; the unisonous pause, the antiphonal repose'—these made an irrevocable impression on a mind sated, at home in England, by Sternhold and Hatchardson, Tate and Brady, Sunday after Sunday the long year round.

In due course Aronach, who has himself inspired Seraphael, and retains for him that poignant affection of the master for the genius who has outstripped him in the race, sends his latest pupil to an adjacent college of music, the Cecilia. Here the interest focusses on the bitter controversy, then in full swing, between the Bach-ites and the Anti-Bachs among the musical fraternity. Milans-André (a maliciously witty portrait of Thalberg, the then immensely popular pianist, whom Liszt admired and the public adulated) leads the anti-Bach group, and Seraphael, of course, the Bachites. The former launches a bombastic opera of his own, 'The Modern Orpheus,' designed to diminish Bach's glory; 'the scenery,' Charles admits, 'is very good; the story rambling and fiendish.' Paganini takes the chief part, that of the fantastic fiddle-player who overthrows the old deities of music. Seraphael instantly counters with a free lecture on Bach, to which thousands flock. 'You know that Forkel has written a life of Bach?' remarks one of the audience. 'I have since been puzzled to find how such a poem [the lecture] as we listened to could have sprung from the prose of those dry memoirs.'

Among the staunchest adherents of the Seraphaelites is Anastase (Berlioz), who acts as a kind of pupil-teacher at the College, and is first violin in Seraphael's orchestra. When the composer of 'The Modern Orpheus' is finally evicted, Seraphael takes his place as leader of the academy, and at once proceeds to make war on the medal-system of competitive awards. The scene of the last prize-distribution under Milans-André's rule, when the growing popularity of Seraphael makes his entrance the signal for a furore of applause, interrupting the pianist during his favourite concerto, is inimitably done. Seraphael silences the clamour by playing the same Volkslied of Bach's with which he had allured the populace to attend his lecture. Then, prevailing upon the imperial pianist to re-seat himself, he turns over for him with unruffled courtesy until the coruscating concerto, by a process of sheer exhaustion, ends at last. 'There is something grotesque,' comments Charles, surveying the two contrasted figures, 'in talent, when genius, even in repose, is by.' Yet he finds in the discomfited elderly pianist, 'flushed and rather ruffled, but with a certain pomp it was trying to witness,' some touch of undefined pathos; the grass withereth, the flower fadeth, and the place thereof knoweth it no more.

Back in England, where Charles now takes pupils of his own, we encounter Clara Benette (Jenny Lind), and presently Mendelssohn himself, with the young Sterndale Bennett, whom he has adopted as a musical son. The portrait of Jenny Lind in youth is as exquisite, as fragile, and as compelling as heart could wish.

The young violin-master finds his pupils by no means monotonous. 'Of my senior pupils, one was immensely conversable; so conversable that, until he had disgorged himself of a certain quantity of chat, it was impossible to induce him to take up his bow; another, contemplative, so contemplative that I always had to unpack his instrument for him, and to send it after him when he was gone; a third, so deficient in natural musicality that he did not like my playing! and soon put up for a vacant oboe in the local theatre band, and left me in the lurch.'

The book ends with a singularly moving and poetic description of the scenes at Mendelssohn's funeral.

'A dark procession, bearing torches, with a darker in the midst of them than they . . . I watched the black shadows draw closer round the grave—one suffocating cry arose, as if all hearts were broken in that spasm, or as if Music herself had given up the ghost. But Music never dies. In reply . . . a burst, a peal, a shock of transcendent music fell from some distant height . . . nor was it a mourning strain. Triumphant, jubilant . . . it mingled into the arms of night.' It will be recalled that Mendelssohn's body, on its way to the grave, was actually met in the dusk by capellmeisters, who sang round the coffin till midnight; at Dessau, on the road, a one-time adversary, Schneider, brought his choir, and in the quiet darkness conducted a farewell which he had composed for his dead rival.

Enough has been said to indicate the fresh, vivid charm of this neglected 'classic of the divine art.' The deftness of the characterisation, the ironic portraits of contemporary celebrities such as Thalberg, the keen, glancing satire on musical fads and fashions of the moment, make it an entertainment with a flavour all its own.

And the devout enthusiasm for Bach—a rare quality among English minds of the period—reminds us once again that genius knows no boundaries; for Bach's supremacy found in the carefully sheltered product of a young ladies' seminary, in 1850, in the very heyday of an alien tradition, a lifelong and discriminating worshipper.

The last words of Aronach (Zelter), taking leave of his pupil, would serve for the cornerstone of any college of music to-day: 'Be assured that in all works that have endured there is something of the nature of truth; therefore investigate . . . not alone for the love of it, but in the fear of its service. Thus apply thyself to the compositions of Palestrina, of Purcell, of Alessandro Scarlatti, and the indefatigable Corelli; thus lend thyself to the masterpieces of Pergolesi, of Mozart, of Handel; thus lean with thine entire soul upon the might and majesty of Johann Sebastian Bach. All others in order, but these in chief, and this last generalissimo, until thou hast learnt to govern thyself.'

THE LIMITS OF MUSIC

By Leonid Sabaneev

There was a happy time when a question of this kind could not have been raised, when music had by no means reached its natural limits. But now, in these days of utter musical confusion, the question asks itself.

The occasion seems to be provided by those products of the new musical creation concerning which a natural doubt arises as to whether they belong to the sphere of music, or even of art in general. Every season more and more of them make their appearance, especially since their fabrication is not restricted by any laws, and the flooding of the musical market with wares of an inferior quality is accomplished with perfect freedom.

The question as to how and why the musical art has come to such a state is a complicated and difficult one. The chief cause is undoubtedly to be found in the fact that the musical realm is overbuilt and exhausted, and also in the desire of every worker in it to give expression to something of his own, even though it be useless and harmful. In music it has become crowded and stifling, hence the appearance of various undesirable phenomena; music has burst its bounds and is inundating the surrounding country, which in general has nothing to do with art. But, apart from this, there have been other reasons for this overflowing of its boundaries, and the principal of them is the shattering of all the norms and foundations on which the musical art (whether judiciously or otherwise is another question) has relied for hundreds of years, and by whose co-operation it has attained its enormous development in Europe. I do not dispute that many of the norms created by musical theory were arbitrary, and often narrow; but they provided musical creation with a certain framework or skeleton, and imparted stability to the actual structure of the musical art. These rules and improvised laws may have been imperfect, but without them music has proved to be an amorphous element, which is assuming the offensive and threatens to turn the musical art back to the days of the negroes and cannibals. Music, of course, is not an act but a process, the protracted, sempiternal process of the growth of a certain phenomenon known as 'musical culture.' It is necessary to tend this flower, to protect it from the inroads of an ever-watchful barbarism. The age-long culture of taste, essentially a conventional culture, is a precious treasure, and therefore anything that destroys it, that mutilates its precursors, must be regarded as a barbarism. These boundaries, these embankments which sustain the pressure of chaos in art, may even be arbitrary on the whole, but they must exist, since, just as an individual composition is obliged to have form, so music in general is always restricted in some way. Usually the great composers have been by no means hostile to limitations; indeed they have cherished the fetters which they themselves have imposed on their art, in order to emerge triumphantly from the almost sporting contest with the limitations of form. Bach shut himself up in the fugue, Beethoven in the sonata, Wagner in the system of leit-motifs, and it is only the contemporary barbarians who race unhampered about a free tonal field, imagining that, as artists, they gain something thereby.

Music is an art whose form is tone; it is consequently an artistic organization of the tonal world. But tone in itself has a two-fold nature: On the one hand it is purely the sensation of resonance, on the other it is 'expression,' and has for man, apart from any desire of his own, an emotional quality. In organizing the realm of resonances, music is bound to come into contact with both. If it wishes to be a complete exposition of the tonal world, it must organize the world of pure resonances as well as that of the emotions, usually inevitable, which accompany them.

The art of music is interpolated between these two immemorial, fundamental, and natural spheres. It is the plane of its existence, the space in which music lives. The design and purpose of the organization of the tonal plane is to provide, under given conditions, tonal impressions supremely agreeable to the ear. The organization of the emotional associations aims at obtaining the most vivid and distinct emotions with the least possible expenditure of its resources. In rejecting one or other of these spheres, music merely succeeds in voluntarily impoverishing itself. In depriving itself of emotional reaction, in suppressing the emotions in itself and in its tissue, music is converted into a dry and formal tonal design, into a tonal ornament, which has but little interest. The music which, for the gratification of expressiveness, definitely destroys the charm of tone, is already reverting to barbarism, to the unorganized expression of the emotions, to a state of savagery. These two spheres protect and preserve each other, and we notice that an equilibrium is maintained in the great musical works. In the struggle between them and in the achievement of this equilibrium is the meaning of music as mastery, as an art in the restricted sense of the term. And usually the great composers found the best expression of their genius, and imparted a polish to their mastery, in the mutual control of these two spheres and in inevitable subjection to both.

Tonal charm constituted the Apollinian moment of the musical art, its form; the emotional pathos implanted in it is its Dionysian moment, its 'content.' The mutual penetration of these two spheres is expressed in the law that tonal charm alone, deprived of emotional colouring, becomes unpleasing from the very fact that the double nature of tone protests, and demands equal rights for the other half of its entity; and in the law that emotionality alone, clothed in unacceptable tonal vestments, loses much of its effectiveness. Musical beauty is attained when both spheres are so equally balanced that one helps and does not hinder the other; we then get the maximum tenseness of tonal charm and emotional expression. This problem and the meaning of it all are almost mathematically clear, and there is no doubt that the ancient friendship between music—'the language of the gods'—and mathematics is due to the mathematical features involved in the problem.

Each of these spheres possessed a certain individual elasticity, and liked to protect its frontiers and safeguard its existence. Tonal charm or euphony formed the stable, conservative party in the musical parliament. It protected euphony and its principles (and even the casually-discovered theoretical formulæ) against the too passionate attempts of expressiveness. On the other hand the latter strove to wrest from the sphere of euphony the maximum freedom for the expression of its sensuous nature. The whole history of the musical art passed through this struggle, these clashings of the musical Whigs and Tories. And some degree of equilibrium was attained, which conditioned the growth and preservation of tonal culture, the development of an organic musical consciousness, and the education of taste.

For me personally there is nothing mysterious or debatable in all this. The limits of music are defined by these two spheres, and music ceases to be such when it is altogether lacking in even one of these attributes, and is quite categorically destroyed if simultaneously deprived of both. It then becomes a series of notes, a chaos, a mass of sounds, but not music. At the same time it must be borne in mind that tonal euphony and tonal expressiveness are an entirely concrete, and I might say a physiologically evident something, having its roots in our human organization. The laws of euphony and its attainment, like the laws of expressiveness and its attainment, are the laws of our organism, of our physiology. Essentially the artist in tones always solves one and the same problem by 'maximum and minimum,' to use a mathematical expression: in the given conditions to find the maximum of euphony and the maximum of expressiveness.

The laws of euphony and expressiveness and the methods by which they are to be attained have not yet been accurately formulated. Musical theory has lagged far behind intuition and artistic practice. The majority of the rules created by theorists are restricted to the sphere of euphony, and have no reference to the attainment of expressiveness. The whole of musical history as far as the 20th century is nothing less than the gradual instruction of composers in the art of imparting euphony to the most complex tonal combinations. The fault of the theorists is not that, in general, they took the liberty of attempting to establish certain rules and to make certain generalizations from their practice of the art of achieving musical euphony; it lies in the fact that they have so far been unable satisfactorily to formulate the complete and general laws of euphony—to produce the formulæ of the conditions precedent to the appearance of the phenomenon of euphony. We cannot blame them for it, since theoretical thought on the subject is still somewhat feeble. Musical theorists have, on the whole, been craftsmen rather than philosophers and scientific thinkers, and their mastery of scientific methods has sometimes been very poor and never very good. Instead of general formulæ they have given us a series of recipes for euphony which have proved to be too partial on the one hand and too general on the other, having included much that does not come within the concept of euphony. They were insufficient and not indispensable.

But life has drawn from this other conclusions for which there is little foundation. From the fact that these recipes, created hurriedly and by the home-made, journeyman method, did not cover the whole phenomenon of musical euphony, it is inferred that in general there are no norms whatever, that music is free, that it will not tolerate any limitations. From the unsuccessful attempts of theorists to formulate the laws of musical euphony it is concluded that the laws themselves have no existence in Nature. Is there, therefore, complete chaos and an utter lack of norms and limitations? If so, it is impossible to draw the line between music and a casual collection of sounds—which may even be formed without the assistance of the human will. Obviously, an hypothesis of this kind was most useful to untalented and not very musical men, to whom it opened a path to the temple of fame, and whom it relieved of the necessity of studying anything thoroughly. For some time, however, the native intuition of composers, and a certain inertia of style, and of the tonal habits accumulated through the ages, hindered the swift and overwhelming collapse of the temple of music which had taken so long to build. Men who in theory rejected principles in art, in practice often showed themselves to be sufficiently, though not systematically, guided by them, and even remained inert. The destruction of the edifice was, however, only deferred, and its downfall was hinted at just at the moment when musicians questioned the existence of the laws forming the norms of their art, because the attempts to formulate those norms had proved unsuccessful.

This was inevitably followed by its logical inference. Once there are no norms conditioning the phenomenon of beauty, musical beauty itself appears to be non-existent. Music, having been reduced to complete formlessness, since co-ordinates and landmarks of every kind have disappeared from it, has in these days arrived at the rejection of the fundamental spheres from which it set out—the spheres of expressiveness and euphony. The eras of the past established new paths to the attainment of beauty and new methods of acquiring the maximum of expressiveness, but this is not a characteristic feature of contemporary music, which denies the necessity for either. It desires frankly to be unexpressive and unbeautiful, and this leads to self-destruction, since labour devoted to things that have no beauty or emotional significance is of no use to anybody, and the significance of these principles (or lack of principles) cannot be likened to art, but must be included in the category of violations of the public peace and tranquillity.

This, of course, shows that music is exceeding its limits and is being transformed into non-music. On these questions I am quite objective. I know that many composers, conservative by conviction, are now writing indifferent, neutral, untalented, dull music, but it is music, and not something else. Even the very difficulty of producing interesting music to-day is perfectly natural and comprehensible because, as I have already said, the musical sphere is built over, and those musicians who might once have been recognized as geniuses, in view of their talents, must now be satisfied with the modest title of epigoni. In this is contained only a bitter truth. But, on the other hand, men have appeared who write 'violations of the public peace and tranquillity,' possibly works of genius, witty, diverting—but not music. Every concept has its limitations, and to confuse them is only in the interests of the charlatans.

Tonal combinations lacking even the desire to be expressive and euphonious have no right to be entitled music. You may tell me that the concepts of euphony and expressiveness are relative, but, whilst thoroughly agreeing with this, I would observe that the relativity of the concept of euphony consists merely in the fact that our ear gradually accustoms itself to a more and more complex tissue, on condition that the organization of the latter is such that its complexity becomes intelligible to us; or in the fact that the line of development of this tonal consciousness varies in different races and cultures. But euphony is fundamentally a physiological concept, and therefore its axioms are the same for all those who have the same physiological organization. The toleration of cacophony is usually the result of a bad ear, or of a defective tonal culture. In this consists the difference between contemporary methods and that enrichment of euphony which was evident in music prior to the 20th century. In the 19th century the complex tonal phenomena in the sphere of euphony were more and more restricted, and a tonal consciousness was developed, but we now find in it, not an extension of the concept of euphony, but of a taste for cacophony, and the musical consciousness becomes unexacting and rudimentary—it is a matter of indifference whether a thing be true or false, and on this point the musician, the contemporary composer, offers his hand to the man who simply has no ear for music.

Hence we now have in this art which has transgressed the bounds of music a series of characteristic phenomena. We saw earlier that at one time euphony was occasionally sacrificed for the sake of expressiveness—the innovators broke through the customary restraints of euphony in order to express new sensations. And conversely, expressiveness was diminished and curtailed for the sake of euphony, lest the former should exceed the limits of agreeableness. Now, however, there is confusion; the innovators destroy euphony for some reason unknown, since they reject the necessity for expressiveness. Music is occupying itself, strangely and without any justification, in the production of casual noises and sounds, and approximates more and more to unmitigated charlatanism, which counts on the public's confiding nature and want of development; or to the type of activity of the mentally afflicted. But the bulk of the people, who still possess the heritage of the age-long tradition of taste and simply an ear for music, unspoiled and not deficient, are beginning to understand that instead of bread they are offered a stone; that they are being nourished on products of an inferior quality; that their snobbish feelings are being played upon; and that the edifice of musical culture is being steadily undermined.

(Translated by S. W. Pring.)

CHOPIN: HIS WIT AND HUMOUR

By Mrs. Frank Liebich

From several 19th-century biographers of Chopin one seems to derive a more vivid impression of his moments of despondency than of his hours of geniality and happiness. It is to the best interpreters of his music that one turns for a far truer presentment of his sensitive, mercurial character as reflected in his compositions, which are as full of shifting light and shade as any typical April day of sun and shadow. As a teacher he was known to prefer his Polish pupils to those of any other nationalities, because of their verve and their impressionable, mobile temperaments. And it was these same racial qualities that coloured his personality and his outlook on life, and that gave strength to his frail organization to endure the varied pains and pleasures of his short and eventful career. As a child he was noted for his vivacity and for his irrepressible and versatile humour. Possessing an easy aptitude for caricaturing, he would portray the ludicrous side of any character, and many were the innocent practical jokes he would play on the different members of his family. This gift of humour, of seeing the lighter side of things, of separating the sweet from the bitter, helped him to keep beauty ever present in his mind and in his creative work. It preserved him from the contamination of the coarser natures with which he was brought in contact.

At the very outset his innate refinement caused him to shrink from making the acquaintance of the expansive, exuberant Aurore Dupin, wife of Casimir Dudevant, writing under the name of George Sand. The law of contrasts sometimes brings about strange matings. Chopin, according to Liszt, dreaded becoming acquainted with the chatelaine of Nohant. He kept resolutely out of her way. The novelist, however, had determined to track him down. By sheer force of will she succeeded. Soon afterwards Chopin was whirled off to Majorca by her, having slipped into the position of sixth in succession to Jules Sandeau, Alfred de Musset, Pagello, the poet's doctor, and Michel de Bourges. Their first abode in Majorca, surnamed by them 'Maison de Vent,' might more properly have been called 'Maison de Pluie,' for the rain fell daily and unceasingly. Chopin, unused to roughing it, became ill. The ignorant landlord, fearing infection, turned the couple adrift. They took refuge in a disused monastery. To George Sand, accustomed from early girlhood to the bucolic surroundings of Nohant, the circumstances in Majorca seemed all that was most romantic. For Chopin it was one long period of discomfort. There was no decent food to eat; no stove or means of properly heating the barely furnished, draughty rooms; no comfort of any sort or kind. In the words of George Sand, 'it was a frightful fiasco.'

Liszt's romantic story of the Prelude in B minor, composed to the accompaniment of the melancholy rhythm of the unceasing rain falling on to the ruined roof, is now known to be a legend. Like so many of Liszt's utterances, it was a figment of his brain and nothing more. In Réné Doumico's 'Life of George Sand' the author asserts that there is no echo of Valdemosa in any of Chopin's work. It is indeed difficult to imagine the fastidious Polish composer taking pains to reproduce any moments of those wearisome hours of that melancholy sojourn in his poetic Preludes. And Liszt in his biography of Chopin emphasises how much there was that was intolerably incompatible and secretly antipathetic between two natures who seemed to have been brought together by some sudden and factitious attraction only in order to use the force engendered by the inexpressible anguish and utter boredom of the circumstances to free themselves eventually from one another. 'Chopin fâché était effrayant,' said George Sand. His Etude in E♭ minor, No. 12, might stand as an exponent of that statement. And she adds: 'With the exception of myself and the children everything was abhorrent to him in Spain.' A few weeks later Chopin, returned to Paris and civilisation, writes to Fontana: 'My health improves; I am beginning to play, to eat, to walk, to talk, like everyone else, and when you receive these few lines you will notice that I write quite easily.' And yet the coarse-natured Sand woman was incapable of understanding his hatred of the then uncivilised places to which she had dragged him. His sense of humour, of fun, failed him utterly in Valdemosa.

Later, when the bucolic surroundings of George Sand's country home at Nohant bored him, he would amuse himself ridiculing the people he disliked. But his otherwise pleasant humour had become from sheer force of circumstances a bit acrid and very different from the irrepressible fun and mimicry of his happy days in Poland. It was never tinged with sarcasm in those early days. But at Nohant there must have been so much that was against the grain; while the monotony of the life must have been deadening. The great painter, Delacroix, describes it when writing to a friend from Nohant in June, 1842: 'I live,' he says, 'a conventional life here, each day is like the preceding one. Nothing takes place to vary the monotony. There is not even the diversion of meeting any neighbours or friends. In this part of the world everyone stays at home and looks after his acres and his cows. He wouldn't take long to turn into a fossil.' And Chopin tells his sister: 'I am not made for the country, though I enjoy the fresh air.' Nevertheless his latent humour and bonhomie usually asserted itself, and he could take a delight in the Sand children's marionettes, for which he would improvise little ballets. Maurice Sand and his young friends amused themselves arranging comic scenes and dances. Chopin would accompany them on the pianoforte, alternating from gay to grave, leading the dance according to his fantasy; comic and solemn, gentle and passionate, suiting his themes to the various little dramas, making himself the life and soul of the gay little throng.

When in a specially comic vein, in his home at Paris, he would reproduce all the different mannerisms of the various pianists of the day. Balzac mentions his fun and humour in his 'Homme d'Affaire.' Moscheles was astonished to find how great was his aptitude for mimicry and comedy. An Austrian, seeing his comic impersonation of the Emperor of Austria, had fears for him if ever he went to Vienna and repeated the imitation. He possessed a whole store of comic anecdote with which he would amuse young people. He could relate the drollest stories to them and enjoy the fun of it all as much as any of the youngsters. His features would become almost unrecognisable, said Liszt. He would twist them into all kinds of funny shapes, but even when he would reproduce any ugliness or grotesqueness he never lost his innate elegance and charm.

When he broke away from the woman who eventually bored him as much as she had finally wearied de Musset, he knew that he had been but one in a longish succession. It was almost a convention of the romanticism of the 19th century that artists should lead irregular lives. The estrangement begun in 1842 and became final in 1846. In no way did it affect Chopin's work. The compositions of that period—the Nocturnes in F minor, E♭ major, B major, and E major—rank in beauty of workmanship with any of the previous ones. The Berceuse, the Sonata in B minor, the Polonaise-Fantasia, were all written between 1844 and 1847. Chopin's irrepressible sense of humour kept him free from all absurdities, especially from some of the absurdities of the Romantic movement.

George Sand had quarrelled with her son Maurice and her daughter Solange. Chopin took the part of both son and daughter, knowing the trial their mother had been to her children. From that moment he passed out of her life.

A small volume might be filled with accounts of the dainty humour which was as a silver lining to the many dark days of Chopin's life, and as a buttress to his delicate health and sensitive disposition. At the last, when he could only make himself understood by signs, he refused to see people, and when this was mistaken for pride and ill-humour, Berlioz, who understood, refuted the wrong judgments. His wish to be alone was misinterpreted, said Berlioz; it was attributed by some to pride, by others to a gloomy melancholy; both equally remote from the character of this charming and excellent artist.

Chopin lives in his music. It explains his life and character, and these in their turn interpret and elucidate his work.

Music in the Foreign Press

AN ITALIAN CRITIC ON STRAVINSKY

The May Rassegna Musicale contains a remarkably instructive essay on Stravinsky by Guido Pannain.

It is possible to divide Stravinsky's output into three categories, corresponding to three periods. These may be labelled, very roughly, the 'academic-impressionistic,' the 'Russian,' and the 'historical.' In the first, Stravinsky is under the influence of Glazunov's and Scriabin's 'anonymous' style, and to a degree under that of Debussy. 'The Fire-Bird' marks the transition to the second period, the 'Russian,' which extends from 'Petrushka' (1910) to 'Noces' (planned in 1917). The third is a period of pseudo-classicism, in which Stravinsky is seen struggling against fetters which he has forged for himself.

Stravinsky lacks humanity and glories in this deficiency—which, according to his partisans, is the very foundation of his classicism, his objectivity, his constructive outlook. The history of his creative activities is primarily that of a struggle between his elemental, sensuous instincts and the conventional, empirical æsthetics which he acquired from the Paris literary circles.

His instinct asserts itself chiefly in terms of motion. Unrestrained, it tends to overstep all boundaries—as in the 'Rite of Spring,' in which we see him at his best. But whenever he becomes 'the champion of a decadent and paradoxical futurism,' he collapses; the classical work of art of which he dreams remains a dream, because he is incapable of striking a balance between his instincts and his æsthetics. There is fine music in his Concerto, his Sonata, and his Octet; but works such as these reveal the deep crisis in his conscience; they are confessions of impotence. Likewise 'Œdipus Rex' shows his inability to renovate his style. It shows him a prisoner of his literal, matter-of-fact conception of form, and renouncing the substance for the shadow. His conception is, in fact, a piece of sheer pedantry, which, in the musician of unquestionable genius he is, may interest, but remains pedantry for all that. Yet now and again in 'Œdipus Rex' his vitality gains the upper hand in the struggle, and he turns out powerful, impressive things such as the choral sections and specially the Finale.

MOZART'S D MAJOR VIOLIN CONCERTO AND BOCCHERINI

In the April Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft, E. von Zschinsky-Troxler writes:

> A Violin Concerto in D major by Boccherini was recently published by Schott, the editor being Samuel Dushkin. It was written in 1768, is the only one from the pen of this composer, and is of interest not only for its freshness and genuineness, but because it undoubtedly was used as model for Mozart's Violin Concerto in the same key (Köchel 218), composed in 1775. Not only many patterns, but the actual structure are similar, as the writer proceeds to demonstrate by a carefully carried-out comparative analysis with many musical examples. Boccherini's Concerto remained in MS., and Mozart probably owed his acquaintanceship with it to his friendship with the violinist Thomas Linley, who, like Manfredi, for whom Boccherini wrote it, was a pupil of Nardini, and may thus have got hold of a copy.

A LISZT NUMBER

The May Revue Musicale is a special Liszt number, with contributions by André Suarés, Constantin Photiades, Robert Bory, de Hevesy, Gil-Marchex, André Schaeffner, Antoine Molnar, and others. A poem by the Comtesse de Noailles and unpublished letters to Saint-Saëns and to Princess Wittgenstein are interesting features.

GENUINE TEXTS OR ARRANGEMENTS

In the March-April Auftakt, Werner Ladwig writes:

> Musical works must be protected against retouch and 'corrections.' But very often conductors who wish to put this principle into practice find it impossible to procure sets of parts giving exactly what the composer had written; all they can find is some edition or other 'for practical use,' in which, for instance, the phrasing and bowing are altered in accordance with the editor's notions. The difficulty is specially great with regard to Bach and the works of his period generally. Most competent conductors of to-day are perfectly capable of doing justice to the style of these works. But where are sets of parts to be found that will correspond exactly to what Bach has written?

They must be copied by hand if they are to be had at all; not even the firm which issued the standard edition of the full series can supply a set. To erase from 'edited' parts all that is not in accordance with the genuine text entails much tedious labour. Conductors should insist on genuine parts, on which indications of phrasing, bowing, &c., may be inscribed if need arises.

MIASKOWSKY'S SYMPHONIES

The April issues (Nos. 27, 28) of Sovremennaya Muzyka contains analyses of Miaskowsky's third and ninth Symphonies.

A BUSONI BIBLIOGRAPHY

The April Bolletino Bibliografico Musicale contains a catalogue of Busoni's compositions, transcriptions, and writings; it is followed by a short list of books and essays devoted to Busoni.

A CONDUCTOR AND ENCORES

In the May Courier Musical Frank Choisy writes:

> One day at Athens, an enthusiastic audience was repeatedly calling back a pianist after the performance of a concerto. The conductor informed the audience that the hour was getting late, and that if an encore was insisted upon, the last item on the programme (Ravel's 'La Valse') would have to be suppressed. The audience took no notice, encores were given, and 'La Valse' remained unperformed. The conductor certainly overstepped his rights; but a regulation against the nuisance of encores is desirable.

M.-D. Calvocoressi.

The Musician's Bookshelf

'Turcoman Music.' By V. Uspensky and V. Belaiev.

[State Editions, Moscow, 1928.]

This is a most important contribution to the study of the music of the Middle East. Both authors—Prof. Uspensky, who collected the materials, and Prof. Belaiev, who dealt with them from the historical and technical points of view—are to be heartily congratulated on their achievement.

The text is in two parts, a study of Turcoman music, in sixteen chapters, by Prof. Belaiev, and an account by Prof. Uspensky of his expedition (1925-26). The music consists of a hundred and fifteen tunes or pieces, instrumental or for solo voice with instrumental accompaniment.

It is almost impossible to do justice to Prof. Belaiev's thoughtful and scholarly survey within the compass of a brief summary—the subject is novel, and there are many novel points in his method of treatment. The special interest of Turcoman music, he tells us, lies in the complexity and subtlety of its workmanship as regards both form and harmonic texture, and the peculiarity of its materials and of methods of treatment, which are systematic, consistent, and carried out in accordance with a very old and strict tradition. This music is an important element of native culture, and can be thoroughly understood and appraised only in relation to this culture, of which we know comparatively little. The outer influences of which it shows traces are those of the music of Arabia, Persia, Afghanistan, and Azerbaïdjan.

It does not consist of folk-music only. The country has its schools, its professional musicians, its public concerts (of a kind), and even its musical controversies. So that we have to deal with music whose idiosyncrasies originate not only in certain instinctive, wholly or partly unconscious, tendencies of race and period, but in a deliberate policy founded upon tradition and conventions as well as upon impulses. Therefore it is as difficult for us Europeans to assess it as to assess the music of China or of India. It speaks a language of which we know neither the syntax nor the associations.

Of course, there are many points of contact, which will serve as a basis for exploration. Form, for instance, is in its essentials roughly similar to abstract form as practised among us. Prof. Belaiev's analyses show that certain pieces consist of three parts, each falling into three sections. One recognises quite clearly the exposition, a working out of sorts, and a recapitulation. Of the scales, some correspond to old Greek modes; others, such as:

do not. Certain contain one or two chromatic semitones. Prof. Uspensky suggests that all these scales may originate in two pentachords:

and Prof. Belaiev points out their analogy with the scale of Hucbald (see article, 'Diaphonia' in Grove's 'Dictionary').

The harmonies are very similar to those in use in Hucbald's time. Modulation may consist of a change of mode (or scale) without a change of tonic, or of a change of tonic without change of mode or scale. The modulatory plan is part of the structure. Both non-modulating and modulating themes are used. When themes are repeated, they undergo transformations affecting both the pattern and the 'tonality' or mode. Transitions and links are skilfully devised. In point of fact, according to Prof. Belaiev, the differences between Turcoman music and European lie far more in the materials used than in the technique of composition. But it lies also, in a large measure, in the thoughts governing the use of materials.

The descriptions of instruments (with photographs) are most instructive; and Prof. Uspensky's narrative and descriptions will be read with profit by Orientalists as well as by musicians.

M.-D. C.

---

'Letters of Richard Wagner.' Selected and edited by Wilhelm Altman. Translated from the German by M. M. Bozman. Two volumes.

[Dent, 21*s.* 6*d.*]

Because they are full of human interest and easily intelligible, Wagner's letters are worth all the rest of his literary work put together, though nobody would be more surprised and annoyed at such a valuation than Wagner himself. These two volumes comprise a selection chosen primarily with a view to supplementing the autobiography.

but the general reader will not be concerned with this point. He will enjoy the books because they are of the type into which one may dip at random, with certainty of finding interest. It is, in fact, one of the best collections of musical letters extant, written by one who, so far as literary expression was concerned, was at his happiest only as a casual correspondent. Here is humour, sagacity, and a rich store of sound sense on a variety of musical matters. On the human side we like perhaps best of all the two letters with which the book opens. They show the young Wagner hard up and anxious for a job of hack work. Here is letter No. 2, written to Breitkopf & Härtel. Every struggling student who thinks he is entitled to grouse or give up should learn it by heart :

> I ask your indulgence, Sirs, for troubling you with a petition, the success of which means very much to me. In substance, it is a request for work upon revisions and arrangements for the pianoforte, touching which I can offer for your consideration the most recent examples of my work in proof of my ability. I am driven to make this application by lack of employment and the desire to obtain work of this nature. To convince you, Sirs, of my usefulness, I venture to offer myself for gratuitous test-work in both departments, and, should I have the good fortune to win your confidence by this means, I should hold it an honour to serve you at less than the usual rate of pay. Punctuality and exactitude in my work will be my constant endeavour, in order that I may win your further confidence.
>
> In the hope of receiving some such trial-work at your earliest convenience,
>
> I remain, Sirs, your humble servant,
>
> Richard Wagner, Stud. Mus.

He wrote also to Peters, in the same strain, but in neither case was there work for Richard, and so both firms missed a fine copyist, as a glance at one of his beautiful manuscripts shows. The world is so familiar with the portrait of the Wagner of the velvet cap and the conquering chin that it is well to give a thought occasionally to the 'Stud. Mus.' offering free samples of his penmanship and willing to work at cut prices.

---

'The Story of Music ; An Historical Sketch of the Changes in Musical Form.' By Paul Bekker. Translated by M. D. Herter-Norton and Alice Kortschak.

[Dent, 10*s.* 6*d.*]

The word 'changes' in the title is the cue to the author's point of view. He holds that development does not necessarily imply improvement. Men have always been men, and at least as clever as ourselves ; we must not look down on them as primitive ; hence, in matters of art especially, what takes place is not development in the usual sense of the term, but transformation. There is a good deal to be said for this view ; undoubtedly the tendency of musical critics and historians hitherto has been to regard all past effort as a mere struggle towards our present comparative perfection. Even to-day we may hear, e.g., the revival of plainsong described as a putting back of the hands of the clock, a relapsing into barbarism, and so forth. But Mr. Bekker's principle may easily be pushed too far. Music has undoubtedly made progress in many respects, especially those wherein the craft of the instrument-maker has enlarged resources both of material and technique.

We need go no farther than the Symphonies of Beethoven to see a genius hampered by his tools—trumpets and horns whose limitations not only made their own contributions to the ensemble fitful and often hideous, but which also, by their inevitable insistence on tonic and dominant, narrowed the composer's key-schemes. Even an important theme often had to be considered from the point of view of suitability to the wretched brass. The Symphonies are masterpieces, we are told. True ; but how much finer they would have been had they been written after the orchestra had been developed instead of before ! So we cannot agree that the history of music is a record of change only, and not progress. Sweeping statements on either side sound well but mean little. Save on this point, and in a few details, Mr. Bekker's book is admirable. He discards biographical data that are easily accessible in books of reference, and confines himself to purely musical matters. His method is best shown by a quotation from Chap. I. :

> When I say that Beethoven lived from 1770 to 1827, he was born at Bonn and lived at Vienna, he wrote for the pianoforte, voice, and orchestra, he used mainly the sonata form ; even when I explain these statements more exactly I am only supplying knowledge which means little to the reader, and which he will soon have forgotten. But if I try to explain just why, at Beethoven's time, pianoforte, chamber, and orchestral music enjoyed such peculiar prominence, how the sonata form came to be established ; if I endeavour to make intelligible the conditions governing historical occurrences ; then, though the details of my exposition, too, will soon be forgotten, a different picture will remain. We shall see that history is not a collection of dates and incidents and so-called facts, but the great life-process of mankind, which we may comprehend, not by looking at it as a kind of historical costume parade, but only by trying to recognise the forces that control it.

On these lines he tells the story of the art from Gregorian music down to the present-day German composers, with thought and insight—a trifle cloudily at times, his natural tendency in that direction not having been blown away by the translators. And is there in Mr. Bekker's well-stored mind no room for a little knowledge of English music ? Her only composer to be mentioned is Purcell, and yet one meets with the Spohrs, Gounods, Puccinis, and even smaller men. Moreover, one would have expected a writer in a discussion of contemporary music to have found at least one Englishman worthy of mention beside such Germans as Schreker and Pfitzner. But it is clear that, wide as Mr. Bekker can glance when looking at the past, his eye where to-day is concerned is content to stay at home. A few statements about Beethoven cause a raised eyebrow. Thus : 'The number of his works is less than that of any of his predecessors, but each composition is of incomparably greater importance'—which everybody but Mr. Bekker will deny. Again : 'Almost everything Beethoven wrote is still alive, still our immediate spiritual possession.' Look down that immense list in 'Grove,' and see to what a slender proportion Mr. Bekker's 'almost everything' dwindles.

'Musical Meanderings.' By W. J. Turner.

[Methuen, 6s.]

'Let us have no meandering,' said the old lady in 'David Copperfield.' Only in brooks is the habit to be encouraged; in books it is one of the unforgivable offences. Happily, Mr. Turner does not meander; still, a book has to be called something or other, and the journalist who reprints his articles in book form finds it increasingly difficult to hit on a title. There are nearly forty papers in this set. Many are quite short, none are long, some are too topical to stand the test of book form, and all but a very few make capital reading. Mr. Turner is mellowing, apparently. Certainly he drags his coat-tail less frequently than of old. He still carries on his hopeless task of proving that Bach is a very much over-rated composer, oblivious of the fact that as yet there is an immense amount of the old man's music that is practically—or entirely—unknown to all save a few specialists. Bach will hardly be fully estimated in our time. All we can do is to marvel at and salute the astounding genius to whom no task, small or large, came amiss, and no pains seemed too great.

The chapter in which Mr. Turner sets out to prove that Bach was not a notable master of form merely proves by quoted examples that he had to learn his job like any other composer, and that during the process he made some mishits. Mr. Turner, in the rôle of an enthusiastic attendant at a Three Choirs Festival, gives one a pleasant shock. He went to Worcester—perhaps to scoff; but at all events he remained to praise. Mozart, as usual, calls forth some of his best writing. In a paper on Berlioz's 'Requiem,' he makes his customary mistake of trying to raise Berlioz's stock by throwing half-bricks at Bach, despite his disclaimer. ('I should like to give chapter and verse for my belief that Berlioz's 'Requiem' is as great a work as Bach's B minor Mass, and I will try to do so not in any foolish attempt to belittle Bach,' &c.) But the relative merit of the two works is not what matters. We all know that the 'Requiem' makes loud and thrilling noises; Mr. Turner's job is to convince us that it is also great, not that it is as great as another work which happens to be so different as to present hardly any bases of comparison. The end of this chapter shows a similar uncritical attitude: 'Let us give honour where honour is due, and, in future, dare to think of that magician Berlioz as the equal of that professional contrapuntalist, Bach.' Let 's, by all means. But we shall be a mighty small band—in fact, a one-man band, consisting of W. J. T.

---

'The Limitations of Music.' A Study in Æsthetics. By Eric Blom.

[Macmillan, 6s.]

We have an impression that Mr. Blom, like Mr. Turner, was at a loss for a title; for his book, although ostensibly concerned with the limitations under which composers work, is actually a set of first-rate essays on a variety of subjects. From time to time, it is true, Mr. Blom pulls himself up and gets back to his muttons, but he is soon off again on some topic that has only a remote connection with his title. This is as well, for the principle of limitation in art is sufficiently obvious and so generally accepted as to offer scope for little more than an essay. Mr. Blom, however, makes it a peg on which to hang his views on many aspects of music, and very well worth reading they are. For he has not only a well-stored mind (which, as we all know from painful experience, is no guarantee of ability to write a book—or, indeed, anything else); he has also a sense of humour and a good literary style. As an example of Mr. Blom's use of his main thesis as a peg, we take the chapter on 'Recapitulation.' He cites Manuel de Falla as a composer who is weakly repetitive. This leads to a sub-title, 'Folk-Music,' under which it is suggested at the start that the Spanish composer 'may possibly urge in his defence that his duplicated phrases are a feature of the Spanish folk-music which he transmutes artistically in his work,' &c. A few lines on this point, and we have about twenty pages of excellent common-sense on folk-song and nationalism in music—about the best discussion of the question we have seen. Mr. Blom is right, we think, in regarding the over-use of folk-tunes as a weakness. Some shrewd things are said concerning the extreme nationalists. For example:

> What is it that the fanatical nationalists really want? Is it not enough for a composer to be English or French or Spanish or what not by race, and to express himself naturally according to his racial disposition? May he not be allowed to give free rein to his personal idiosyncrasies as well? If the national principle be applied so rigidly, there is no reason why it should not be pushed to its logical conclsuion and become a parochial principle. There are, in fact, some composers who do go so far as that. They are not Englishmen or Frenchmen or Spaniards, but local patriots from Norfolk or Gloucestershire, Brittany or the Languedoc, Catalonia or Andalusia, and so on. The national composer has difficulty enough in all conscience to make himself heard abroad, but the local composer cannot even hope to make his dialect appreciated in the next county. His music is for the most part water from the village pump, which it is superfluous trouble to carry into the next parish.

Mr. Blom starts a promising hare by asking, 'Is it fantastic to attribute the fact that Germany has the most extensive literature of great art music to her extreme poverty in folk-music?' So far from being fantastic, there is a good deal in the idea. But it might be discounted if chorales are regarded as folk-music, which many of them are. Germany owes at least as much to the hymn-tune as any other country does to the folk-song.

---

'A Final Burning of Boats, Etc.' By Ethel Smyth.

[Longmans, Green, 10s. 6d.]

Again we see an author bothered over the title. Dame Ethel's, with that annoying 'Etc.,' is a clumsy one. The book is worthy of a better. It is a lively affair, as indeed is any bit of literary work by this author. True, its main theme—the due recognition of women's achievements in art and life generally—has been already overworked by Dame Ethel, among others. There is some ground for her complaints, but less than she imagines. We doubt if any composition by a woman has ever been shelved on the ground of sex. Occasionally it may even work out otherwise, e.g., would Dorothy Howell's 'Lamia' have had anything like so many performances had the composer been a young man instead of a young woman? We think not. In the department of small works, had Chaminade any lack of appreciation? Or Maude Valérie White? And in the literary world are not some women among the 'best sellers'? Indeed, the Dame herself has been remarkably (and deservedly) successful with her books. May it not be that many of us prefer her books to her music? A mortifying suggestion, but there may be much in it. Anyway, we think it would be easy to prove that for every one of Dame Ethel's neglected compositions there is to be found a parallel example of neglect of equally good work by male composers. Dame Ethel has some heartbreaking pages on the difficulty of getting her works performed, yet, while one is sympathising with her, one thinks of at least half a dozen no less eminent male composers who could tell a similar tale of hope deferred.

Fortunately, this book contains some first-rate chapters in which the Dame is able to avoid what she admits to be her King Charles's head. 'The Curate' shows the author's lively narrative style; but it is a bit unkind. There must be many folk in the Midlands able to identify the hapless victim of this cruel sketch. After all, he was well-meaning as well as importunate. Sir Henry Wood comes in for a handsome eulogy; common-sense is written concerning the everlasting opera question; and there are other very readable papers. The volume includes also the libretti of 'The Bosun's Mate' and 'Entente Cordiale.'

---

'Internationale Klaviermusik.' By R. Teichmüller and K. Herrmann.

[Hug, Leipsic; E. W. Organ, Birmingham, 8s.]

A catalogue of modern pianoforte music, intended to serve as a practical guide for pianists. It is comprehensive, but there are regrettable omissions. Testing the book at random, I found no mention of an important—indeed particularly significant—work of Kœchlin, the set of twelve 'Paysages et Marines.' Under the heading 'Balakirev' only two pieces are mentioned 'Islamey' and the Sonata—which is all the more extraordinary since the Preface points out that 'Balakirev is worthy of close attention.' The lists of de Sévérac's, Florent Schmitt's, and Liapunov's works also proved incomplete. But on the whole there is much useful information. The short notes, descriptive or critical (now and then very much to the point, in praise or in censure), are much above the average, and should prove really helpful.

M.-D. C.

---

'Panorama de la Musique Contemporaine.' By André Cœuroy.

[Paris: Simon Kra, 1928.]

Wisely and wittily, the author has forestalled almost every possible criticism in his six-word Preface: 'Trop vaste, trop près; mille regrets.'

His panoramic survey is carried out in accordance with a few general views. He steadfastly believes that nationality is the strongest feature in contemporary music (which shows, almost in every country, a struggle between inspiration and materials, which are national, and form, which is non-national). Composers of certain races—the Russians, the Spaniards, the Hungarians, the Poles, the British, the Finns and Scandinavians, the Dutch—are striving towards a style of their own. In other countries, which both benefit by and suffer from the weight of an old, uninterrupted tradition—Italy, Germany, France—it is towards a new discipline that they strive.

A good many composers are named, and not a few are cleverly characterised. One feels, nevertheless, that two words might have been added to the Preface: 'Trop court'; for, however much a writer may know on his subject-matter (and M. Cœuroy knows a great deal), it is impossible to assess or even fully to define a tendency, a composer, or a work within the compass of a paragraph or a couple of sentences. Many of us have struggled against similar difficulties, and those who know by experience how great they are will be the first to acknowledge M. Cœuroy's resourcefulness.

M.-D. C.

---

'Serate Musicali.' By Adriano Lualdi.

[Milan: Treves, Lire 19.50.]

There is a wealth of information and much sound, courageous, criticism in Signor Lualdi's 'Serate musicali'—a volume recently published dealing with the most important events which have happened in Italian theatres and concert rooms during the last four years. The historian will find much to his taste—accounts of new works by young men who, unknown to the wide public to-day, may some time win a solid reputation; articles on premières of importance like those of Boïto's 'Nerone' and Puccini's 'Turandot'; discussion on composers whose fame rests on sure foundations and of others whose reputation is still being discussed. In all this the sincerity, the open-mindedness of the critic is most evident. He is given neither to venom nor to unbridled enthusiasms; he is neither a partisan nor an apostle, but a keen-eyed observer and an appraiser of music and musicians.

Whether we agree or disagree with him there is no questioning his fairness, his determination to allow nothing to stand in the way of absolute fairness. Lualdi is an admirer of Wagner and of Verdi, yet his admiration does not prevent him from making shrewd remarks on the subject of 'Rhinegold' and of 'Un Ballo in Maschera.' Of course, as regards contemporary music we all have our own views, which may differ very considerably from those of the author. But he appears so sound and so sane in all the many problems with which we are familiar that on the whole we feel inclined to trust him in matters which have not come within our sphere. If, at some future time, the work of any of those composers of whom we know nothing were to acquire greater strength and importance, one feels confident that the candid yet kindly views expressed by the critic on their early attempts will not be found to have erred to any appreciable extent. We may not ask more from the critic—only a prophet or a soothsayer pretends to foretell the future.

F. B.

A NEW SETTING OF 'THE BLESSED DAMOZEL'

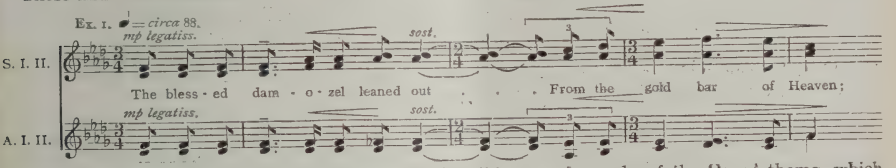
Members of the large number of well-equipped and accomplished female-voice choirs must sometimes wonder why their activities are confined to short part-songs. No doubt the limitation is mainly due to the scarcity of extended works. Cantatas and operettas abound, but they are usually simple in style and designed for use by young folk. Yet no one with a sense of choral beauty can hear first-rate unaccompanied singing by women's voices without longing to hear its potentialities developed far beyond the stage possible in a brief part-song. As a medium, the female-voice choir is capable of more subtle and delicate variety than the male-voice, and the tone-colour palls less quickly. It may be argued that the absence of a real bass quality is a drawback, but the principle of relativity applies here, as in all other questions of balance and contrast. Given a substantial alto contingent, a practical composer may use it in such a way as to make it sound of far greater gravity than it actually is; its lowest notes, entering after a passage for high voices, make an unexpectedly good bass.

These and other considerations occur to us after a study of a new work for unaccompanied female voices, 'The Blessed Damozel,' by Julius Harrison, just published by Messrs. Novello. It has been written specially for the next Blackpool Festival, and will be used as a test-piece in the chief class for women's choirs. It is hoped that the competing choirs will give a combined performance under the composer's direction.

Perhaps the best testimony to Mr. Harrison's setting is the impression one receives that, although Rossetti's poem has been set many times and in many ways, the medium here used is the most fitting. By no other means, we feel, could a composer so well evoke an atmosphere which, though celestial, has contact with the terrestrial through the human love of 'the damozel.' This duality is admirably realised, as we hope to show in the following analysis.

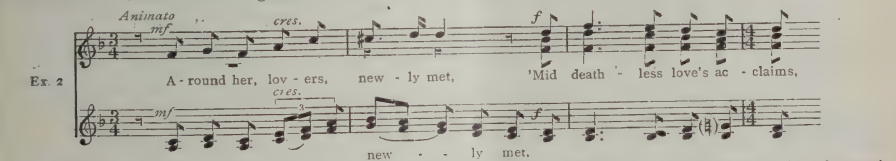
A few representative themes are used, but in such a way as to avoid the drawbacks that too often result from such a method. They are never obtruded, and they fit so well into the texture that their main function, after all, is to give cohesion to the work.

The opening phrase:

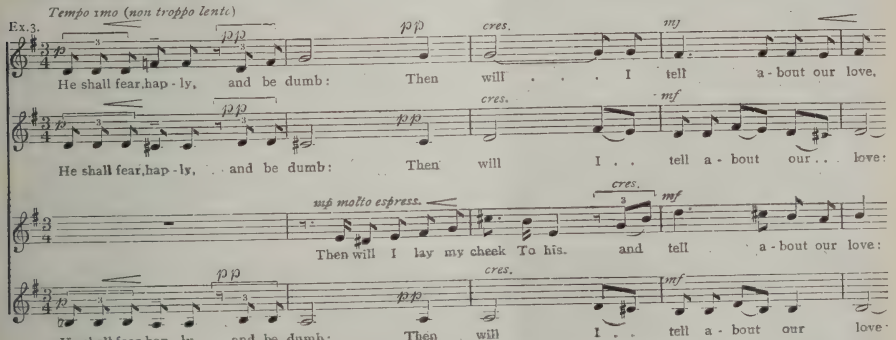


contains two motives that are used subsequently in various ways to accompany references to 'the blessed damozel' and to the 'gold bar of Heaven.'

Striking use is made of the 'love' theme, which first occurs on p. 4:



On p. 12 the second portion of it steals in via the first alto part—a beautiful bit of vocal tone-colour, this:



Tempo 1mo (non troppo lento)
Ex. 3.
pp
cres.
mf
He shall fear, hap - ly, and be dumb: Then will . . . I tell a - bout our love,
He shall fear, hap - ly, and be dumb: Then will I . . tell a - bout our . . love:
mp molto espress.
Then will I lay my cheek To his. and tell a - bout our love:
He shall fear, hap - ly, and be dumb: Then will I . . tell a - bout our love

A sudden change to G flat brings us to a passage in which the second treble deals with both 'love' and 'gold bar' motives, the latter suggesting the waiting of the Mother to welcome the lover at the gold bar of Heaven. The quotation gives a good idea of the admirable texture of the music, and also shows the practical skill with which transitions that appear to be difficult are made comfortably manageable:

Ex. 4. Più mosso e con elevazione

And the Mo-ther will ap - prove . . . . My pride, and let me
And the dear Mo - ther will ap-prove My pride, and let me speak. Her -
And the dear Mo - ther will ap - prove . . My pride, and let . . me speak. Her -
And the dear Mo - ther will ap - prove . . My pride, and let me speak. Her speak. Her - self shall bring us, hand in hand, To Him . . round whom all souls Kneel
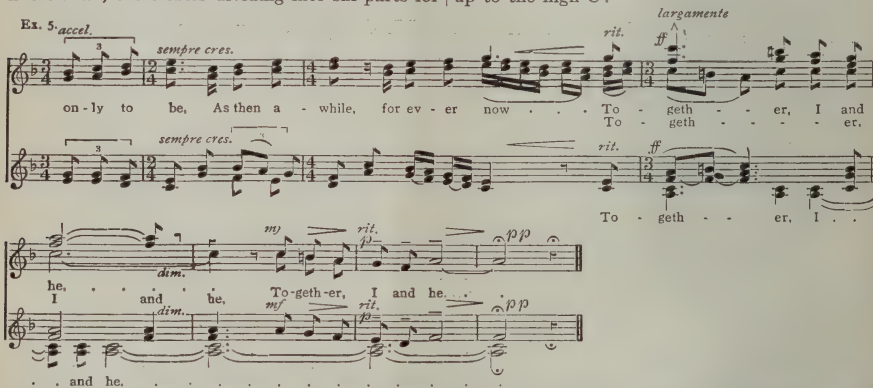
- self shall bring us, hand in hand, To Him round whom all souls Kneel
- self shall bring us, hand in hand, To Him round whom all souls . . Kneel
- self shall bring us, hand in hand, To Him round whom all souls Kneel

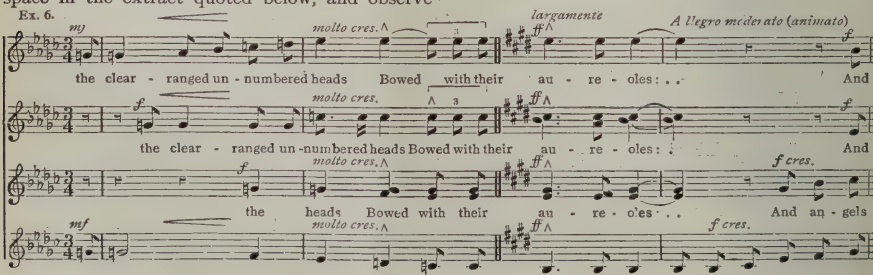
The 'love' theme makes a final appearance in a fine climax, the trebles dividing into six parts for a couple of bars, and the highest voices soaring up to the high C:

Ex. 5.



We said at the beginning of this review that all effects in music are relative. Good instances of this are seen in several climaxes. Note how two are built up and left in a short space in the extract quoted below, and observe how an astonishing effect of sonority is obtained by the outspreading voices at the peak of the climax. And it is not for nothing that each building-up begins from a single note:

Ex. 6.



the clear - ranged un - numbered heads Bowed with their au - re - oles: . . And the clear - ranged un-numbered heads Bowed with their au - re - oles: . And the heads Bowed with their au - re - oles . . And an - gels the clear - - ranged heads Bowed with their au - re - oles: . . And an - gels meet - ing

(senza vit.)
cres.
ff sempre ff
rit.
an - gels meet - ing us shall sing . . To their cith - erns . . and ci - toles. . .
an - gels meet - ing us shall sing . . To cith - erns and ci - toles. .
meet - - ing us shall sing To their cith - erns and . . . ci - toles. .
us, And an - gels meet - ing us . . . shall sing. . . . . .

The quaver theme at 'And angels meeting us' is used later to depict the flight of angels, sung by a four-part soprano semi-chorus to 'Ah.' The writing here is in nine parts, a second semi-chorus of six voices singing sustained passages to 'Ah,' while the main chorus continues the narrative. This forms the concluding portion of the work. Quotation of the whole texture is impossible, so we give only a few bars of the semi-chorus:

Ex. 7.

It will be seen that a well-equipped force is called for. It need not be large—a note on p. 16 concerning the proportions of the semi-chorus implies that the composer has in mind a choir of less than forty. The chief demand is for good, real sopranos, able to sing in the high register easily and at all degrees of power from pp to ff. Weighty contraltos are not plentiful, so Mr. Harrison is wise in writing few very low notes. The E flat occurs twice, but the general 'lie' of the second alto is comfortable for the normal choral society contralto. The music is mainly diatonic; some unexpected transitions occur, but an examination of the score shows the composer always giving an eye to that convenience of the parts which ensures safety for the whole. There is great scope for subtlety of nuance and variety of tone-colour.

Some of the divisi passages look rather formidable, but actually they are well within the power of a choir able to muster a group of reliable singers to act as semi-chorus. The quality of the music and the technical excellence are what we should expect of the composer; far more important, however, are its beauty and expressiveness. So much serious music of to-day is lacking in both these qualities that it is good to find them fully exemplified in a new work by a composer who certainly cannot be described as reactionary or old-fashioned. It is one more welcome sign that the pendulum has swung its full distance in the anti-romantic direction, and is now on its way back.

We warmly commend Mr. Harrison's work to the consideration of conductors, not only of women's choirs, but also of mixed-voice societies where the sopranos and altos are sufficiently accomplished and ambitious to undertake an important number on their own account.

Gramophone Notes

By 'Discus'

—

H.M.V.

Those who do not find the Prelude to 'Parsifal' afflicting in its long-windedness will welcome an unusually good recording of it, played by the Berlin State Opera Orchestra under Karl Muck. Even the afflicteds will enjoy the nobility and richness of the brass tone (D1400-01).

For most hearers Respighi's 'Fountains of Rome' is none the worse for its indebtedness to other composers—especially Wagner and Debussy. It lends itself well to gramophone use, its scoring being of the type that comes through well. With Albert Coates conducting the London Symphony Orchestra, none of its attractive colouring is lost (D1429-30).

The Suite from Manuel de Falla's 'Three-cornered Hat' inevitably loses somewhat in being detached from the Ballet. Yet it is vital enough to stand on its own feet, and its rhythmic life, vivid colouring, and authentic Spanish flavour make a highly-attractive mixture. It is capitally played by the New Symphony Orchestra under Malcolm Sargent (B2721-22).

The palm for orchestral recording among this batch, however, must go to No. D1427—'The Dance of the Fire-Bird,' from Stravinsky's Ballet, played by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, Leopold Stokowski conducting. It would be hard to beat the later stages of this in vividness. For companion piece it has the Entr'acte from Act 4 of Moussorgsky's 'Khovantchina,' the sombreness of which makes it a good foil.

An outstanding event is the recording of Franck's Quintet, the performers being Cortot and the International String Quartet. Just now there is an anti-Franck feeling in some quarters; in his 'History of Music' (just published), Cecil Gray tells us that many who began by being Franck enthusiasts find his music wearing badly. There is something in this. Franck's mannerisms are of the type that do not stand the wear and tear of long acquaintance; they play too much round tricks of chromaticism, and his melodies have a way of turning on their toe instead of going forward. The intensely personal mood, too, is not for everybody—or even for anybody, at all times. Yet there is not one of Franck's representative works that does not contain much that enables us to turn a tolerant ear to the weaknesses. In the Quintet, for example, the splendid vigour of the Finale makes it easy to overlook the querulousness that just spoils the first movement. And when all is said, the anti-Franckite has to admit that the Quintet remains among the best of its class, like the Quartet, the two big pianoforte solos, and the pick of Franck's organ works. Even the Symphony holds its head up well, despite that dreadful 'Faith' motive, and the organistic scoring In these records of the Quintet the prime virtue is in regard to the pianoforte tone, which has a clarity and freedom from jar that we should welcome in solo records. The string tone tends to hardness in loud high passages. The balance is excellent. Franck enthusiasts have a good time before them here; and the 'anti' who can hear the records without weakening has my sympathy (DB1099-1102).

However much we may differ about Franck, we all join up where Haydn's chamber music is concerned. Here is the familiar D minor Quartet, Op. 76, No. 2, admirably played and recorded. The performers are the Elman Quartet, the famous violinist being joined by Bachman, Schubert, and Britt. The new party could hardly have made a better start. Sonority, balance, and variety are alike first-rate, and make this Haydn recording one of the very best of recent chamber music efforts. Not the least of its good points is the interest imparted to the canonic Minuet, which is so often made to sound mechanical (DB1146-47).

Another admirable example in this department is the record of Schubert's Quartetsatz in C minor—the first movement of an unfinished Quartet that, given completion on the same level, would have been about the best of all Schubert's chamber music. The players are the Budapest Quartet (D1421).

Among the trickle of small beer served up by 'cellists such a work as Brahms's Sonata in E minor stands out as an example of courage and enterprise. Beatrice Harrison and Gerald Moore play it capitally. Specially striking is the wide range of variety and power on the part of the 'cellist. This is a recording to be specially noted (D1380-82).

The sole organ record is of Harold Darke in Jongen's 'Pensée d'Automne' and Saint-Saëns's third Rhapsody on Breton Airs (C1468). The highly-coloured Jongen piece comes through very clearly; the Rhapsody doesn't give us all we want of the climax, but it, too, is clear. By the way, once more the labelling has to be pitched into. Saint-Saëns's piece is described as 'Rhapsody in C,' whereas it begins in A minor and ends in F. Apparently the office boy is told to look at the copy in order to find the key, and, seeing no sharps or flats in the signature, the bright youth says, 'C, sir.' The inaccuracy may appear to be trifling, but such slips cause a good deal of inconvenience to publishers, who are frequently asked for works which have no existence. Saint-Saëns wrote no Rhapsody in C; there are, however, two large separate works called Rhapsody, one in E flat, the other in D flat. An order for a work as described on this label leads to a good deal of delay and correspondence. All the recording companies have to do is to follow the title-page, and if they want to know the key, ask a musician.

There are two choral recordings—the poles asunder in musical value. The choir of Westminster Cathedral is heard in Palestrina's 'Missa Papæ Marcelli' (C1473-76); and the St. Margaret's, Westminster, Choir, sings a couple of hymns ('Lead us, Heavenly Father' and 'The Voice that breathed o'er Eden') and Stainer's 'Sevenfold Amen' (B2531).

The Palestrina records are curiously unequal. The Kyrie is very vague, and this makes the first record of the set a good bit below the rest in value. The Gloria is very fine (C1474), and the Benedictus runs it close (C1476). But the whole set presents an opportunity which should not be missed of studying one of the greatest of Church music masterpieces. The purchaser of the records will be wise to go to the further trifling cost of a vocal score (Novello, 3s.). The tone of the choir is excellent, though some of us may find the boys inclined to be hooty at times. Power contrasts might be more vivid, but the performers may have taken the view that overmuch variety in that direction may rob the music of the impersonal character which is one of its chief beauties. The St. Margaret's wedding hymns are well sung, with effective use of descant and alternation of accompanied and unaccompanied verses.

The only vocal solo record is of Barbara Kemp in a couple of extracts from 'Der Rosenkavalier,' the orchestra being that of the Berlin State Opera, under Leo Blech. I do not feel that Madame Kemp's singing has enough of the sheer musical charm that the music needs, and which is so evident in the playing of the orchestra (D1431).

COLUMBIA

Here the accent is on the Schubert Centenary, with a very notable batch that includes three big works calling for more detailed discussion than space allows. As a general remark, let it be said at once that all are worthy of the music and the occasion.

The Octet in F (L2108-13) is played by the Léner String Quartet, joined by C. Hobday, C. Draper, E. W. Hinchliff, and Aubrey Brain—four Englishmen distinguished enough for any company. The fact that we don't get quite enough double-bass indicates that the problem of tonal foundation is not yet fully solved. The tone and vigour in the loud passages are first-rate, but as the long work progresses one is conscious of some lack of power contrasts. More could be done in the direction of soft playing, apparently, in the slow movement above all. How many of us know the Octet? It is so full of attractive music that it ought to have a more frequent show in the concert room. Why shouldn't it be heard (at least in part) at the coming 'Proms'? The Beethoven Rondino (for wind octet) and the Septet are trotted out occasionally at orchestral concerts (I believe the former is played at every season of 'Proms'); but the Schubert work beats them both hollow. I suggest that at the coming series, a couple of its best movements should replace the Rondino.

Assuming that only one of the Trios could be recorded, the choice naturally fell on the great work in B flat. This has already been recorded by H.M.V., with the Casals-Cortot-Thibaud combination. Damaging comparisons are being made, but the performance of d'Aranyi, Felix Salmond, and Myra Hess gave me no impression of inferiority. There is a danger of our too readily taking it for granted that the Casals-Cortot-Thibaud Trio is unapproachable. Anyway, those who want anything better than this Columbia performance are hypercritical. I hope the Company will give us further chances of hearing these three fine players together. The ensemble is such as to rule out individual mention, but I feel a word is due to the excellence of the pianoforte tone (L2103-06).

For the 'Trout' Quintet (L2098-2102) the players are John Pennington, H. Waldo Warner, C. Warwick Evans, Robert Cherwin, and Ethel Hobday. Here again the pianoforte sounds like itself at its best, instead of suggesting an instrument ready for the knacker's yard. As I have frequently said in this connection, the almost invariable purity of pianoforte tone in chamber music points to bad methods on the part of pianoforte soloists. I cannot believe that there is any excuse for such a disparity as exists between the tone of the instrument in ensemble work and of the same medium (and often the same player) in solo work. In all respects this recording of the Quintet is of high standard.

After these big sets of records we come to a modest 10-in. disc of unique quality and interest. It gives us Sir George Henschel singing, to his own accompaniment, 'Das Wandern' and 'Der Leiermann' (D1621). Were the singer a man in his heyday the performance would be outstanding; as he is in his seventy-ninth year it is astounding. I defy anybody to point to a single detail in the performance that suggests the septuagenarian. In voice and pianoforte-playing alike there is a zest and a finish that puts many a young singer to shame—in fact, not many young men to-day sing rapid passages with anything like the clarity shown in this performance of 'Das Wandern.' Having emerged from his retirement, Sir George should be persuaded to stay out a bit longer and add to the slender store of fine Lieder records.

Not content with these Centenary works, the Company has issued several important orchestral recordings—Strauss's 'Don Juan,' by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, under Bruno Walter (L2067-68); the 'Rakoczy' March and 'Dance of the Sylphs,' from Berlioz's 'Faust,' by the Hallé Orchestra (L2069); and a dozen movements from de Falla's ballet, 'El amor brujo,' conducted by Pedro Morales (9390-92).

There is a lack of finish about the 'Don Juan'—for example, the attack of upward-rushing passages for strings is often ragged. On the whole, I should describe the records as merely good instead of first-rate. The 'Rakoczy' March is less exciting than I have heard it before per gramophone. I fancy that Sir Hamilton Harty's crusade on behalf of Berlioz will fare better if he can persuade the Company to let him loose among some of the less familiar works—the things that the Berlioz disciples talk to us about but which we never hear. The de Falla records are, I think, the most attractive of this group. The music very well bears transference from the stage, and the glowing colour and strongly marked rhythms are capitally reproduced.

In the way of light work there are a couple of Waltzes of the old type—Vollstedt's 'Lustige Bruder' and Gungl's 'Hydropaten'—played by the New Concert Orchestra (apparently a New York body), conducted by Anton Weiss (9388); and Albert Sandler and his orchestra play Percy Fletcher's attractive 'Folk-Tune' and 'Fiddle Dance' (4854).

The Grenadier Guards Band, under Captain George Miller, plays Ketèlbey's 'By the Blue Hawaiian Waters' and 'Jungle Drums' (9411).

One may sympathise with Lionel Tertis on the shortage of original works for his instrument and at the same time question his choice of music for transcription. The characteristic tone-colour of the viola is fatal to a good deal of violin music; Mozart's Sonata in A (K. 305) is, therefore, a bad shot, I venture to say. Nor do I feel that his playing is as good as usual. This impression may really be due to the instrument, but certainly there is at times a stiffness that Mozart, of all composers, cannot stand (L2070).

Gaspar Cassado, the 'cellist who made so successful a debut recently, is up to form in his latest record—a Haydn Minuet and Popper's 'Chanson Villageoise' (D1613).

'When in doubt, play the "Liebestraum,"' seems to be the motto of performers on all sorts of instruments. Here is Mr. Pattman, making a highly orchestral effect with it on the Compton Theatre organ. This is an exceptionally good record of its kind (4838).

The saxophone has possibilities as a solo instrument, chiefly on the score of range and agility. But its tone soon palls. Rudy Wiedoeft is described as 'the Sammons of the Saxophone,' and certainly he does dexterous things with a Beethoven Minuet and his own 'Valse Manzanetta,' without being able to make us forget the fatal tendency of the instrument to snivel (4839).

Three choirs—two fra' Sheffield—have been recorded. Sir Henry Coward conducts his singers in Spohr's 'As pants the hart' and Barnby's 'Break forth into joy.' I do not like the soloist in the former; the tone is unsteady, and there is a lack of ease. The Barnby anthem is too strenuous, and the women's voices tend to shrillness. The organ records well (9387).

The Salisbury Singers, in Festa's 'Down in a flow'ry vale,' are clearly aiming at the free rhythm that comes from attention to verbal values; but they haven't got the knack of making it sound natural. And they overdo the expression badly. This charming old piece doesn't call for soulfulness. It needs a somewhat quicker pace and a far lighter touch than it gets here. The party is more in its element in Macy's 'Pickaninny Lullaby' (4840).

The Sheffield Orpheus Male-Voice Choir must increase its resources in the way of variety. At present it is content to plod along on a level forte. 'There is a tavern in the town' lacks gusto; and there is no conviction about 'The Lincolnshire Poacher.' The refrain, 'Yes, 'tis my delight, On a shiny night,' is sung so primly that I found myself going on, in the approved Savoy manner, 'Yes, 'tis their delight,' &c. These Sheffield singers should hear this fine song done (as I have heard it) by a choir of genuine rustics, most of whom know all about illicit hares. It really is their delight on any old night (4841).

Vocal solo records are of Norman Allin in the 'spiritual,' 'Were you there,' and Farrar's 'Brittany' (D1614); Clara Butt in 'Home, sweet home' and Nevin's 'O that we two were maying' (X339); and Robert Easton in Glinka's 'Midnight Review' and 'Hybrias the Cretan' (9412). I have never heard Allin's voice sound finer than in this record, though I don't feel that the 'spiritual' is his song. Dame Butt employs a method of breathing that is both noisy and over-frequent; a detail of that sort apparently doesn't matter when a singer is eminent. Mr. Easton has a fine voice, but (at all events in these songs) is a good way off from singing finely. Glinka's song has neither variety, drama, nor atmosphere, and poor old Hybrias is not even clearly defined in notes, and also suffers from some clipped time—e.g., the phrase, 'Down in a trice,' almost every time it occurs. I recommend Mr. Easton to turn on the Henschel record mentioned above, and take an object-lesson in clarity and rhythm.

. . . . . .

P.S.—I have to point out that the Gramophone Notes appearing in the Weekly Dispatch over the nom-de-plume 'Discus' are not by me.

NEW LIGHT ON LATE TUDOR COMPOSERS

By W. H. Grattan Flood

XXXV.—Robert Jones

Not a little confusion has been caused by the fact of two contemporary individuals named 'R. Jones' having been interested in companies of boy players in the last years of Elizabeth. However, the Christian name of the elder was Richard, while his junior was Robert. Further, it is well to bear in mind that Robert Jones, Mus.B., was dead in 1618, whereas Richard Jones, the actor-musician, was in Germany and Poland with Robert Dowland, the son of John Dowland, from 1617 to 1623. And it need hardly be said that the subject of the present article is a very different person from the Robert Jones who flourished under Henry VIII.*

Quite a prolific composer and lutenist was Master Robert Jones, yet his latest biographer, Dr. Fellowes, regretfully tells us that little is known of him, and that the dates of his birth and death are unknown. Fortunately, I have succeeded in adding a little to the biographical details given by the late William Barclay Squire, Mr. Henry Davey, Dr. Fellowes, and Mr. Philip Heseltine, and I want here to express my indebtedness to my old friend W. J. Lawrence for some new light on Jones as co-patentee of Porters' Hall, in Blackfriars.

It has been assumed, too hastily, that Jones was really the author of the ballad, 'Farewell, dear love, since I must needs be gone,' snatches of which are sung by Sir Toby Belch in 'Twelfth Night,' but it is evident, as Sir Sidney Lee writes, that Jones mostly collected 'ditties by divers gentlemen,' and that Sir Toby Belch 'borrows in the play several specimens of the same kind, which were already of old standing.' Yet it is distinctly to Jones's credit that he collected and arranged folk-songs of his day, and so preserved them from oblivion.

It is safe to assume that Robert Jones was born about the year 1575, and that he was a Welshman; and it is certain that he studied at Oxford, where he graduated Mus. Bac. from St. Edmund Hall in 1597. He found a patron in Sir Robert Cecil, then all-powerful with Queen Elizabeth, and, in 1600, put together his 'First Book of Ayres,' published in 160?, and dedicated it to Sir Robert Sidney, first Earl of Leicester. In this volume (Book 1, No. 12) occurs the Shakespearean song, 'Farewell, dear love' ('Corydon's Farewell to Phyllis'). This rare work was printed by Peter Short 'with the Assent of Thomas Morley,' and a copy—lacking title-page, dedication, and address to the reader—will be found in the British Museum.

So successful was Jones's first publication that he followed it, in a few months, with a 'Second Book of Songs and Airs,' in 1601. This second volume was set for 'the Lute, the Bass Viol the plain way, or the Bass by Tablature after the leero fashion,' and was printed by 'Peter Short for Matthew Selman, with the assent of Thomas Morley,' and dedicated to Sir Henry Lennard. In the same year (1601) Jones's madrigal, 'Fair Oriana seeming to wink at folly,' was included as No. 21 of the 'Triumphs of Oriana.'

* See article, 'Robert Jones,' in 'Early Tudor Composers' (Oxford University Press).

There is a lacuna in the data of Jones's biography between the years 1602 and 1606, but Mr. Lawrence thinks it fairly certain that he was in Germany from 1602-05. We next hear of him in 1607, when he published his 'First Set of Madrigals for 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 parts, for Viols and Voices, or for voices alone, or as you please,' some of the madrigals being dedicated to his old patron Sir Robert Cecil, who was at that date Earl of Salisbury. In the following year (1608) appeared his 'Ultimum Vale, or the Third Book of Ayres of 1, 2, and 4 Voyces,' followed by 'A Musicall Dreame, or the Fourth Booke of Ayres, in three parts, for Lute, voices, and Viol da gamba,' in 1609. Finally, in 1611, came his well-known 'Muses Gardin for Delights, being the fift Booke of Ayres,' the only known copy of which is now in the Huntington Collection at New York, but of which an excellent edition, by W. Barclay Squire, was issued by Blackwell in 1926.

Dr. Fellowes says that Jones, 'in conjunction with Philip Rosseter,* was granted a patent, in 1610, to train a school of children, to be designated, "the children of the revels to the Queen,"' but the Jones whose name appears in the patent was Richard, not Robert, and, as has previously been stated, Richard was an actor. From the Malone Society's 'Collections' (I. 271) we learn that the patent of January 4, 1610, was granted to Robert Daborne, Philip Rosseter, John Tarbock, Richard Jones, and Robert Browne. However, on June 3, 1615, a patent was granted to Philip Rosseter, Robert Jones, Philip Kingman, and Ralph Reeve, to erect a theatre in Jones's house (Porters' Hall), 'in Blackfriars near Puddlewharf'—in reality, to empower the patentees to continue their dramatic performances in 'Lady Saunders's house, known as Porters' Hall, now in the occupation of Robert Jones.' After a few sporadic entertainments, however, the patentees, on January 26, 1616, were obliged to have the theatre taken down, owing to the interposition of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London.†

Meantime, Jones contributed three pieces to Sir William Leighton's 'Teares or Lamentations of a sorrowful soul,' in 1614. From 1615 to 1616, apparently, he was more or less devoted to the interests of the Children of the Queen's Revels, the Prince's Players, and the Lady Elizabeth's Players, but with the demolition of his house his fortunes must have declined, and we hear no more of him after the year 1617.

There are signs that Jones's music was popular in the closing years of Elizabeth. His ayre, 'My mistris sings none other song' ('First Book of Songs and Ayres,' 1600), was sung by Franchschina in Marston's 'Dutch Courtezan,' in 1605, and is quoted more than once by James Shirley; and Dutch words to the tune are printed in Starter's 'Boertigheden' (Amsterdam, 1634). Another song from this book, namely, 'Love wing'd my hope,' was reprinted in Jackson's 'English Melodies,' published by Dent, in 1910; and a third song, 'Now what is love?' (words by Sir Walter Raleigh), was sung in Heywood's 'Rape of Lucrece.'

Notwithstanding Jones's fame, it is strange that there are only two part-books of his madrigals now surviving, although six numbers are in the Fétis Library, at Brussels, in Thomas Myriell's MS. (No. 3095). One of his madrigals arranged for six viols is in the British Museum (Add. MSS. 37,402-06).*

Jones did not altogether neglect sacred music, for the Christ Church Part-Books not only have the music score of his full anthem for five voices, 'Singe joyfully,' but also the setting of four songs from his 'Second Book of Ayres' (1601); and the words of one of his anthems are quoted in the Rev. James Clifford's 'Divine Services and Anthems' (1633).

DR. FRANK BATES'S RETIREMENT

The retirement of Dr. Frank Bates from the organistship of Norwich Cathedral closes a long and distinguished public career, forty-three years of which have been spent as 'chief musician' of the East Anglian city. As he had previously held posts at St. Baldred's Episcopal Church, North Berwick (1873-81), and St. John's Episcopal Church, Edinburgh (1881-85), in addition to a preliminary period as assistant at Holy Trinity, Leamington, his length of service in the organ-loft has been exceptionally long. At the time of his appointment to Norwich he was one of the youngest Doctors of Music in England, having taken the degree at Dublin two years before, when only twenty-seven years of age. During his long tenure of office at the Cathedral

Photo by] [A. E. Coe & Son, Norwich.

* See article on Rosseter in present series, No. XXX. (December, 1927).

† By a strange slip Mr. Peter Warlock ('English Ayre,' p. 81) says that this was the Company of the Queen's Revels 'for whom Ben Jonson wrote "Cynthia's Revels" and "The Poetaster."' The boys for whom Jonson wrote were the Children of the Chapel Royal.

* Dr. Fellowes has edited and published the five sets of Jones's Ayres in song-form in his admirable 'English School of Lutenist Song-writers.'

he has served under six Deans, and has seen the re-opening of the Choir and Nave after renovation, the installation of a new organ, and the reorganization of the Choir School. The Norwich Diocesan Church Choral Association, which was almost defunct forty years ago, was revived by him soon after his appointment. It has done much to raise the standard of Church music in the county, and its present vitality was shown on May 31, when at the Triennial Diocesan Festival of the Association a thousand singers, drawn from over twenty parish churches, took part in a fine service. The conducting of this Festival was Dr. Bates's last official act, and a more fitting conclusion to his career could hardly be imagined.

Music at Norwich owes much to Dr. Bates, apart from his long and devoted services to its Cathedral. For nearly thirty years he has directed the Norwich Philharmonic and Choral Societies, and it would be difficult to over-estimate the valuable influence of this part of his work on the musical enterprise and taste of the district. In a recent issue of the Morning Post, Mr. Basil Maine (himself a Norwich man, and therefore able to speak from direct knowledge) paid a tribute to Dr. Bates's extra-Cathedral activities. After giving some particulars of the work of the Philharmonic Society, Mr. Maine wrote :

> The work of this Society is overshadowed, so far as renown is concerned, by the Norfolk and Norwich Triennial Festival ; but without gainsaying the importance of the Festival in the slightest, there is no doubt in my own mind that the foundations of musical enterprise at Norwich have been laid by the Philharmonic Society ; which is as much as to say that they have been laid by Dr. Frank Bates, for he it is who, in a quiet, unostentatious way, has been chiefly responsible for the active life of the Society.

A leading article in the Eastern Daily Press, written when Dr. Bates's retirement was announced, contained a warm eulogy on the part played by him in the post-war rebuilding of the musical life of Norwich :

> Those who have watched the course of the musical activities of the Cathedral and the city since the war will recognise how deeply indebted all must be to Dr. Bates's intense enthusiasm and devotion to his art. It has been a period fraught with tremendous difficulties, as all transition periods must be. The process of recovery from such a cataclysm, difficult as it was in the material pursuits, was infinitely more so in the cultural arts. Without the inspiring energy of Dr. Bates, arising from a rooted determination to rebuild the edifice of the musical life of Norwich, the task which would have fallen to his successor would have been almost impossible. That such a rebuilding should have fallen to a man of his years might have spelt at worst, disaster, or at best no more than a holding of such ground as remained. But the last two or three years of musical activities at Norwich have shown that almost, if not all, of the lost ground has been recaptured. Artistically, if not actually in terms of numbers, the musical life of the city is as full and as fruitful as ever it was.

Such appreciations as this and many others which Dr. Bates has received will do somewhat to temper the regret with which he lays aside an office so long and happily filled. We join in the general wish that he may enjoy many years of well-earned leisure.

'THE EGYPTIAN HELEN'

On June 6 'The Egyptian Helen' of Strauss and von Hofmannsthal was produced at the State Theatre, Dresden, with all the pomp and circumstance which a Strauss première involves. It was at least as brilliant an occasion as the first production of 'Elektra' or the 'Rosenkavalier.' And, as far as first-night auguries go, the new opera bids fair, for reasons which will presently appear, to be the greatest popular success of the whole series.

The press of Germany has devoted a great deal of space to von Hofmannsthal's libretto, in many cases more than to the music. It is an interesting libretto, with many weak points and a good deal of obscurity, which the music of Strauss has frequently cleared away. It deals with the reconciliation of Helen and Menelaus after the fall of Troy. The author has told the world that the question of how the famous couple established the modus vivendi had occupied his mind ever since he was a school-boy (just as nowadays a great many of us wonder what happened to Mr. and Mrs. Pinkerton after the Butterfly episode). He has taken as his leitmotif the story told in the Odyssey by Homer that, after her return to Sparta, Helen mixed a drink of Lethe for Menelaus whenever she suspected that his memory was straying back to the old days of Troy. Indeed, many potions of forgetfulness are mixed in the course of the two Acts. Without discussing the metaphysics of Helen and Menelaus any further, it will be enough to state briefly that Menelaus is at first determined to exact vengeance from the faithless Helen, but at the end he is enslaved again by her will-power and beauty. That is the main, indeed the only, subject of the libretto. The work might have ended with the first Act ; the second Act merely shows how irresistible is Helen's power, for the sheiks of the desert, to which Helen and Menelaus are carried, fall ready victims to her.

As already said, much of Hofmannsthal's psychology is extremely subtle and very ably indicated, but Strauss sweeps it all aside almost in the same way as Wagner throws his metaphysics to the wind when he writes the love-duet in 'Tristan.'

From the musical point of view the score is a striking proof that a man of sixty-four is not inaccessible to new ideas. In one sense the music takes 'Ariadne' as its starting-point ; in others it is wholly different, if only because in 'Ariadne' Strauss contented himself with a small orchestra. Here he employs the full apparatus. The great new departure in 'The Egyptian Helen' is that in aiming at the production of a 'classical atmosphere, such as that created by Goethe in "Iphigenia,"' Strauss has adopted a vocal style which is practically new for him. His vocal line is almost throughout broad and stately, but he has not modified the rapid, incisive utterance of his orchestra. This new method gives the hearer many surprises.

As an almost necessary consequence of this 'classical' ideal Strauss often indulges in normal full-closes, and a good many passages are in what the Germans call 'geschlossene Form.' It may be said at once that in the manipulation of his material Strauss's skill is as dazzling as ever, although (or perhaps because) he apparently has less room than usual in his colour scheme for extreme hues, which he employs only when he wishes to emphasise some specially dramatic effect. Every page of the score bears the unmistakable hall-mark of Strauss, and yet it is different from any other score which he has produced. He scatters dissonances over his pages much more sparingly than of old, rarely using them simply for their own sake. His melodic invention is as fertile as ever. Strauss himself has said he was afraid the music was tuneful, and his fear was not groundless. There will, no doubt, be much difference of opinion as to the value of his actual ideas. Some will say that the melodies are sugary and effeminate, but the power of the orchestral commentary is sufficient to counteract any impression of weakness.

Many of the principal themes in the score are extremely reminiscent of much that Strauss has written in the past. In one or two places it almost looks as if he was deliberately quoting from himself, relying on his skill to create variety by means of dexterous treatment. Even one of the waltz themes from the 'Rosenkavalier' is present, and we are constantly being reminded of the more peaceful passages in 'Elektra,' such as the Recognition Scene, of the trio in the 'Rosenkavalier,' and of passages from 'Tod und Verklärung.'

'The Egyptian Helen' contains an unusually large proportion of numbers which can be separated from the context as independent pieces. The first of these is the imposing passage in which Helen bids Menelaus drink to her, which might almost have been inspired by Gluck. The opening soliloquy of Helen in the second Act is of great dramatic force. The trio (two sopranos and a tenor) which ends the first Act is another inspiration which proves Strauss to be among the very great ones, and it is almost equalled by another trio in the second Act, which leads up to the wild incursion of the sheiks and their army, and prepares the way for the glittering Epilogue. It may be objected that this last orchestral outburst is theatrical music, but it is also a remarkable piece of harmonious polyphony, and goes straight to the point, which, after all, is not a defect in operatic music.

One other characteristic in the music deserves to be mentioned. In the music of the inhabitants of the desert Strauss has almost invented a new style of Orientalism in sound, which merits our gratitude. He has entirely eschewed the tricks to which lesser composers have recourse. He succeeds in producing the effect he desires without augmented seconds and wearisome reiteration of phrases of squealing oboes.

For these reasons, whatever may be the judgment of the austere musician, 'The Egyptian Helen' seems destined for a career of remarkable popularity. The number of applications that were at once made for its production on various European stages was exceptionally large, and it is already decided that it will be produced at New York in November.

The performance was one of exceptional excellence. More artistic mounting has seldom been accorded to any work, and the singing of the chief parts could hardly have been better. Fräulein Rethberg in the title-part returned to the scene of her old triumphs, and her singing was beyond all praise. The way in which she continued to sing high A's, B flats, and B's, with unvarying beauty of tone and subtle variety of colour, was nothing short of astonishing. Fräulein Rajdl, of Vienna, as Aithra the Sorceress, also did extraordinarily fine work, and the contrast between her voice and methods and those of Fräulein Rethberg added dramatic point to the whole. Herr Taucher as Menelaus is both a real Wagnerian tenor and a powerful actor. It is somewhat surprising that Strauss did not make Menelaus a baritone. The other artists were all good, but they helped to increase our admiration for the authorities at Covent Garden, who have managed to find singers free from the most aggressive Teutonic characteristics. A. K.

[Another notice of the opera, by Dr. Adolf Weissmann, our Berlin correspondent, appears on p. 657.]

Occasional Notes

The Report of the Tonic Sol-fa College for the year ended March 31 deals in a spirited way with the Board of Education's proposal to abandon the use of Tonic Sol-fa notation. We hope that all readers interested in choralism, and especially in the teaching of singing in schools, will support the College in the stand it is making against the Board's proposal. At the recent Conference summoned by the College to discuss the matter, ample evidence as to the importance of retaining the Sol-fa notation was forthcoming from such authorities as Sir Henry Coward, Mr. Robert McLeod, Mr. Arthur Stork (Music Superintendent to the Bradford Education Authority), Mr. Field-Hyde, Dr. John E. Borland, Dr. W. G. Whittaker, &c. We are aware of the arguments against the Sol-fa system, but they weigh little in the scale compared with the evidence in favour which festival adjudicators encounter time after time. When judges find, as they do, that the bulk of the safest part-singing, and practically all the notable feats in sight-singing, are achieved by Tonic Sol-faists, they naturally wonder why anybody should suggest the scrapping of that notation unless similar results can be proved to be obtainable from the use of the Staff.

We agree that nobody should be content with Sol-fa alone; the Staff, as the universal and historic notation, should be familiar as well. Similarly, all those brought up on the Staff would benefit by a grounding in Tonic Sol-fa, especially if they are singers. The dual notationist is, in fact, the best-equipped musician. But in the early stages of singing-class work, whether in schools or in choral societies, the Tonic Sol-fa notation should be used for two reasons: (1) it gives results very quickly, and so leads singers on instead of discouraging them; (2) it develops from the start a clear mental perception of the relationship between the degrees of the scale—a valuable sense that many Staffites never acquire. It enables the singer to think musically, and so avoid slavish dependence on an instrument. Those who recommend that it should be dropped in favour of the principle of applying the movable doh direct to the Staff, overlook the fact that already sight-singing is too often neglected on the ground of lack of time. As the Sol-fa notation is by far the most expeditious means of learning to read, the time-table difficulty will be increased by the substitution of a system that, with all its excellences, is undeniably slower.

It is impossible to avoid an impression that the campaign against the letter notation is inspired by mere personal fancy rather than by a consideration of practical results. The Tonic Sol-fa College Report, for example, describes a demonstration of sight-singing at which—

> . . . Dr. Somervell, Mr. Richards (Chief Inspector of Education in England and Wales), Sir Henry Hadow, Sir Hugh Allen, Dr. John Borland, and Dr. Whittaker heard the children from two London elementary schools (not taught on Dr. Somervell's plan), one for boys and the other for girls, sing at first sight from the Sol-fa notation the most difficult test that has ever been given to children, to the surprise, delight, and satisfaction of all present. After this an ear-test, which was played on the pianoforte, was taken down in the Staff notation, and another sight-singing test, this time in the Staff notation, was sung to the entire satisfaction of the audience. Dr. Whittaker, rising to address the audience, declared that after hearing such results his advocacy of the cause of Tonic Sol-fa was almost unnecessary. Dr. Somervell, on the other hand, a little more than a month later declared that Tonic Sol-fa is to be scrapped!

The Report asks whether Dr. Somervell can produce anything like the above results from the schools that are following his plans: 'If so, let him do so, and we will believe.'

A prime factor in musicianship is the ability to read at sight. As the quickest and safest results in vocal sight-reading are obtained by the use of Tonic Sol-fa,* that notation should be retained, at all events during the early stages of class-singing. The Staff should be added as soon as possible, but the foundation should be Sol-fa; and if time admits of only one method being taught, the method preferred should be that which gives the maximum of results with the minimum expenditure of time, labour, and money. Our personal regard for Dr. Somervell cannot prevent us from saying frankly that we consider his proposals to be a menace to the musical education in the schools, and therefore, in the long run, a hindrance to music in the country as a whole. Sir Hugh Allen has spoken of 'the wonders that Tonic Sol-fa instruction achieves,' and the word 'wonders' is not too strong a term to apply to the results that are met with wherever the system is thoroughly taught. A method that has done wonders ought not to be laid aside lightly in favour of an alternative whose wonder-working powers have yet to be proved.

We said above that the anti-Sol-fa campaign appeared to be based on mere prejudice. On second thoughts we suspect, too, a touch of snobbishness—a relic of the old days when many musicians sniffed at the system as one used mainly in publications that, quâ music, were almost negligible. But to-day practically all the great classical choral masterpieces, and a very large proportion of modern works, are published in Sol-fa. All the evidence shows that but for this fact many important choirs (especially in the North and Midlands) would sing such works as (say) 'Gerontius' or 'The Hymn of Jesus' either less well or not at all. An attack on Tonic Sol-fa notation is, therefore, an attack on the one department of musical performance in which this country admittedly excels.

* By a happy coincidence, our 'Sixty Years Ago' extract on p. 646 contains evidence as to the sight-reading supremacy of Tonic Sol-faists at that distant period.

We have received the annual Report and balance sheet of the British Musicians' Pension Society. It records steady progress in membership, but the donations total for the year is small. The opening paragraph says that although the Society has been in existence for nearly twenty years, there are still thousands of professional musicians and patrons of the art who are unaware of its existence. It asks for greater publicity, so we gladly accord it a paragraph. Ambitious projects are in hand at the moment. A Convalescent Home is the chief. A site of twenty-three acres has been bought in a beautiful district near Dorking. The coming of age of the Society on January 1 next is to be marked (the Society hopes) by the placing on the Pension List of every original member who has reached the age of sixty. Readers may obtain a copy of the Report on application to the hon. secretary, Mr. Leonard Pinches, at the Society's offices, 21, Albert Embankment, S.E.11. We hope many will send for it, read it, and circulate it among their friends.

Sixty-six works were submitted to the judges of the British Section in the Schubert competition organized by the Columbia Graphophone Company. The first prize of £150 has been divided between Mr. Frank Merrick and Mr. J. St. A. Johnson, and a third prize of £50 awarded to Mr. Havergal Brian. Mr. Merrick's entry consisted of two completing movements for the 'Unfinished' Symphony; Mr. Johnson (who is a resident of Virginia Water) sent in a symphonic slow movement entitled, 'Pax Vobiscum,' in memory of Schubert; and Mr. Brian submitted what the official announcement calls 'an immense choral work entitled "Gothic Symphony."' The three manuscripts have been taken by Prof. Tovey to Vienna, where the International Jury will decide as to the award of the chief prize of £2,000.

In our May number we mentioned the 'spoof' supplement issued on April the First by our lively contemporary the Dominant, and we alluded specially to an article by Sir Richard Terry on a mythical Tudor composer, hight Nicholas Bugsworthy, as being a particularly successful piece of fooling. It has, in fact, turned out to be even more successful than Sir Richard could have anticipated, for it has been seriously quoted and made the basis of comments in a provincial paper over the signature of a well-known music critic. He says:

> But the most interesting feature to me is the article by R. R. Terry on a newly-discovered manuscript in the Bodleian library. The composer bears the very unattractive name of Nicholas Bugsworthy. Perhaps his name has had something to do with this long-continued obscurity, yet he is said to have been a composer of marvellous contrapuntal skill . . . Nicholas Bugsworthy was born about 1540, and the family name seems to have been variously spelt Boggesworthy, Boggysworthy, and sometimes Boggs, any of which would be preferable to the afore-mentioned Bugsworthy. . . . The MS. recently unearthed contains several hundred sheets of music, the contents consisting of Madrigals, Ballets, Fa-las, and some instructions, with examples, in the art of counterpoint. It is to be hoped that some of the pieces may be published shortly, for the more we know of the music of that 'Golden Age' the more do we realise the high position held by our English composers in the development of the art.

---

Perhaps if Sir Richard had given 'Norfolk Howard' as one of the alternatives to 'Bugsworthy,' the writer of the above might have smelt a rat. We ourselves passed the name without a qualm, seeing through the joke on quite other grounds. But here a curious point arises. Why did the name not arouse our suspicions?

The answer is that we had met with a Tudor composer named Bugsworthy in a recent book dealing with the Tudor period. At first we thought the authority had been Mr. Jeffrey Pulver's 'Biographical Dictionary of Old English Music,' but reference to it brought to light no more hideous names than Nicholas Staggins and Thomas Mudd. Then suddenly we remembered Mr. Morris's 'Contrapuntal Technique of the Sixteenth Century.' Sure enough, among the music-type illustrations at the end of the book were two examples of combined 7-4 and 5-4 time ('super-tripartiens quartas' and 'sesqui quarta'), the sources being given as 'Bugsworthy, Conceits and Vapours, No. 10,001,' and 'Ibidem, No. 10,002.' The title ought to have proclaimed the jest (even with that '10,001'!), for although 'conceits' belonged to the period, 'vapours' was surely an anachronism. Now, we reviewed that book, and spent so much time over the examples that we were able to point out several obscure misprints. Yet we suspected nothing, and even the fact of the sample from No. 10,002 being set to the words 'Everybody 's doing it now!' escaped our notice. Nor were we alone, for of the many reviews of the book that came our way not one alluded to so unique a feature as an elaborate joke in a treatise on a highly scientific subject. Clearly, if there was no old composer named Bugsworthy there ought to have been, and we suggest that the omission be made good by the future ascription to Nicholas of any works of doubtful origin. Our old friend 'Anon.' has earned a rest.

---

The above episode is only one more example of the dangers that attend jokes about music. Some years ago there appeared in the Musical Times a set of bogus reviews entitled, 'Next Season's Novelties,' with numerous music-type illustrations, the whole being (we should have thought) so obvious a piece of nonsense as to deceive nobody. Yet within a few days of the appearance of the article several of the 'novelties' were ordered from Messrs. Novello! And on more than one occasion we have found readers taking our regular feature, 'Sixty Years Ago,' as having reference to events and publications of to-day. We suggest to our confrère in charge of the Dominant that in future his journal should (like the Musical Times) maintain a becoming gravity, and deport itself with a seemliness in keeping with the art it serves.

Readers will remember that in 1926 a choir of German students, under the title of 'Märkische Spielgemeinde,' made a successful tour in the south of England. The choir intends to repeat the visit during the coming autumn. This time they will be known as 'The German Singers,' and will tour specially in Wessex and East Anglia, singing in cathedrals and churches, club houses, town halls, or privately, wherever arrangements can be made. They offer programmes of sacred and secular music, both choral and instrumental, and also performances of a 17th-century opera with a puppet show. They will be delighted to collaborate with any local choirs, madrigal singers, branches of the English Folk-Dance Society, &c. In return, they ask for hospitality (bed and breakfast). Collections will be taken to cover local expenses, and the surplus will be shared between the Cecil Sharp Memorial Fund and the choir's (English) travelling expenses. Here is a scheme desirable in every way, and we wish it all success. The party (about thirty strong) expects to arrive at Southampton on September 24, leaving on October 25. Readers who are interested, or who may be able to arrange for some performances locally, should write to the Secretary, The National Union of Students, 3, Endsleigh Street, W.C.1.

---

Composers should note that 'The Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Prize' of a thousand dollars is offered for a chamber work written for five wind instruments (flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon, horn), or for pianoforte and four (or five) wind instruments. The competition is open to composers of all nationalities. The judges will be Georges Barrière, Philip Hale, Ernest Schelling, Leopold Stokowski, and Carl Engel. Entries close on April 15, 1929. Manuscripts (score and parts) should be sent anonymously (with composer's name and address in sealed envelope) to the Music Division, Library of Congress, Washington. Only original works (that is, not arrangements) may be submitted, and the compositions must not have been previously published or performed.

---

Mr. W. H. Brereton, the secretary of the Westminster Singers, writes to us concerning a reference in our Toronto correspondent's June notes to the Canadian tour of the 'Westminster Glee Singers.' The Westminster Singers are a male-voice quartet founded forty years ago by Harper Kearton. The title was registered, the property being specially in the word 'Westminster,' all the original singers having been members of the Abbey choir. The adoption of the title by other quartets may be prevented legally in this country, but there is no means of restraining its use by singers elsewhere. The party referred to in our Toronto notes are not the original Westminster Singers, but a recently formed group who are not blind to the advantages to be derived from the word 'Westminster.' The public is naturally unaware of the distinction, and an unfortunate result of references in the English press to the touring Westminster Glee Singers is a loss of engagements by the genuine quartet at home, owing to a natural impression that they are abroad and therefore not available. We are glad to make these facts public.

We congratulate Mr. W. H. Reed, leader of the London Symphony Orchestra, on being made an M.V.O. The honour bestowed on Mr. Reed gives the more satisfaction in that it is paid to one who belongs to a branch of the profession that rarely receives due recognition, although it probably contains more musicianship to the square yard than any other.

Judging from our correspondence, there are still many readers in a state of doubt as to the principle that determines the status of certain diploma-distributing colleges. We hope the letter from the Secretary of the I.S.M., on p. 641, will make the matter clear.

Our Busy Optimists:

Miss ——, L.L.C.M., A.L.C.M., Medallist and Prize Pianist, Teacher of Pianoforte, Theory, Harmony, Voice Production, Singing, Ukulele and Banjolele, success guaranteed in all examinations, &c., at first attempt. Ukulele and Banjolele played first lesson.

CHARLES DIBDIN: A RETROSPECT

By W. A. Roberts

By a happy coincidence, on the day when appeared the letter in the Musical Times requesting the loan of any papers or documents which would be helpful in the preparation of a book dealing with Charles Dibdin and his sea-songs, I came across a copy of the Admiralty edition of Dibdin's songs, with a memoir by his son Thomas Dibdin. (Published, 1875, by Messrs. George Bell.) The quaintly characteristic illustrations by George Cruickshank are alone worth the shilling for which the book passed into my possession, and the list of patrons and subscribers makes interesting reading, well worth another shilling. The little volume stimulated a desire to know something more about Dibdin than the mere fact that he wrote 'Tom Bowling,' 'Blow high, blow low,' and 'The Jolly Young Waterman,' and one or two other songs. Not many people know that Dibdin wrote about thirteen hundred songs, and that his two sons, Charles and Thomas, produced nearly double that total. If they had written ten times as many, it would not have mattered, except as a dreary record of futility, to judge from examples available. But their father's case was very different, and a survey, however brief, of his life and life-work leads to the conclusion that Dibdin was a rare blend of poet, musician, and interpreter.

The Admiralty edition of 1875, a reprint probably of an earlier one, is sufficient testimony of the high opinion still cherished of Dibdin's sea-songs—written, by the way, by one who never was at sea, but who yet had acquired a remarkable and accurate knowledge of nautical phraseology.

Of the first edition, Queen Victoria subscribed for fifty copies, Queen Adelaide, fifty copies; Earl Minto and the Lords of the Admiralty, five hundred copies; John Murray, thirteen hundred copies; the Elder Brethren of Trinity House, a hundred copies; Friends in the New Zealand Board, a hundred copies; Hon. Edmund Byng, seventy copies; Lord Yarborough, fifty copies; and Miss Coutts Burdett, forty copies. Many other distinguished people, Dukes, Duchesses, Lords and Ladies, Admirals and Captains, also appear in the list, which includes Charles Dickens, Samuel Lover, Mr. Novello, John Parry, and Sir George Smart.

Anyone interested in the life and history of this remarkable man may be recommended to study the memoir written by George Hogarth, in the two volumes published in 1848 by G. H. Davidson, London. These contain the music of a number of his songs, with new pianoforte accompaniments by Lancelot C. Purday, Westrop, and Hogarth. The memoir states that Charles Dibdin was born at the village of Dibden, near Southampton, in 1745, and in early years was removed to Winchester, where he was placed under Peter Fussell, the Cathedral organist, who taught him his notes, and gave him some instruction in the rudiments of music. Later, Dibdin appears to have cherished an idea of becoming Fussell's successor. But even at the height of his fame Dibdin never possessed more than rudimentary musical learning and skill. He was never even able to put a correct bass to one of his own songs, and in his harmonies there were palpable errors. Perhaps Fussell was a poor teacher, although a respectable Church musician. But it was probably Dibdin's own fault in being an impatient pupil; no doubt he regarded his natural gifts of an excellent ear and a turn for tune as sufficient outfit for a composer. Certainly his inexhaustible fund of melody usually carried him through. In later years, however, he was so bold as to publish a didactic poem, 'The Harmonic Preceptor,' and two books of instruction entitled the 'Musical Mentor' and 'Music Epitomised,' in which he tried to teach what he did not know. He seemed to be unaware of his limitations.

Photo by [Reg. A. Wood.

Singing and harpsichord playing were branches of music which he taught himself by teaching others, and when he settled in London, at the age of seventeen or eighteen, he was able to support himself in this way, and soon to obtain employment as a chorus-singer at Covent Garden Theatre. Handel had died a year or two before Dibdin's arrival, but Handel's famous tenor, Beard, took the gifted youth under his wing, and encouraged him to compose the poetry and music of a little pastoral drama, 'The Shepherd's Artifice,' in 1762, when he was seventeen years of age. Circumstances also threw him in the way of Garrick and Isaac Bickerstaffe, a great stroke of luck which provided him at the very start with an outlet for the employment of his manifest talent in its own special line—theatre music. With Dr. Arne he would necessarily become acquainted, and also with Arne's daughter Susanna, another of Handel's favourite singers who had sung the contralto airs in 'The Messiah' at its first performance at Dublin in 1742.

Dibdin appears to have taken Arne as his model. I remember reading an article in which Arne was classed as 'no eagle,' but always to be respected as a musician conspicuously safe and reasonable. In his day, although 'no eagle,' the composer of 'Rule, Britannia' was the most popular and prolific composer of English opera. Arne appears to have been less under the influence of Handel than other musicians of the period. His style was essentially English, and he wrote melodies which touch the mind and ear of the average listener, even at the present day. Dibdin's melodies were often just as tender and touching as Arne's. After his early success Dibdin followed it up by writing a long series of similar works for various theatres. A list of at least seventy testifies to his unfailing versatility and unflagging industry.

Here are the titles of a few: 'The Maid and the Mistress,' 'The Institution of the Garter,' 'The Ladle,' 'The Brickdust Man,' 'The Two Misers,' &c. It is recorded that 'The Padlock' (1768) netted £1,700 for the librettist, Bickerstaffe, the composer's share being only £45. Probably this inequality led Dibdin to become his own librettist, and his only large work, 'The Waterman' (1774), was entirely written and composed by himself, as was the case in all subsequent pieces. In more recent years the popularity of 'The Waterman' was revived by Sims Reeves, whose singing of Dibdin's songs possessed a quality of indescribable charm. I can speak from personal experience of this, for on several occasions I had the unforgettable privilege of accompanying this truly great English singer in various Dibdin songs, notably 'Tom Bowling.' The earlier beauty of the matchless voice had waned, but the perfect art of the singer remained, and it would appear that Dibdin himself possessed a similar art in captivating his audiences in the medley monodramas which in 1798 succeeded his theatre pieces. For his own theatre, 'Sans Souci,' in Leicester Place, Dibdin wrote his 'table entertainments' on the lines later adopted by modern entertainers such as Fred Maccabe, Corney Grain, and George Grossmith. His resources were fully able to sustain a programme of pieces which he himself wrote, composed, recited, sang, and accompanied—unaided exhibitions of his talent which are recorded as being annual delights of the town for many years.

Dibdin's reliance on his own resourceful powers was so great that he often sat down to the pianoforte and performed a new song from the words alone, putting the music on paper only when the copy was wanted by the engraver. Such a habit of extemporization probably accounts for much of the inequality in his published poems, some of which are very inferior to his best work in rhyme and rhythm, e.g., this verse in 'Happy Jerry':

> At sea, as with a dangerous wound,
> I lay under the surgeons,
> Two friends each help I wanted found
> In every emergence.

But (as Hogarth says) Dibdin's poems were meant to be sung, and not to be read, and as sung by him even doggerel would pass muster. It is the naturalness and sincerity rather than the poetic value which is noteworthy in the way Dibdin depicts the sailors and soldiers of his day, not only in their splendid courage and bulldog endurance, but also in their faults and foibles. But Dibdin's sailor had other qualities beside those he possessed as a fighter and a drinker. He did not always sing about 'the grog aboard and the girls ashore.' He could be constant as well as inconstant, and warmly affectionate to those he loved at home. Dibdin, indeed, praised and inculcated virtues he did not observe in his own domestic relations.

And nowhere does he allude to the other side of the picture, the terrors of the iron discipline of the Navy in those days, which permitted such inhuman punishments as seven hundred strokes of the 'cat,' keel-hauling, and hanging at the yard-arm. A brutal captain could make his ship a hell afloat, in which sailors had to fight or be flogged to death. And in the little book under notice, whereas Jervis and Duncan have separate songs in their honour, there are only brief references to Nelson, the

> Nelson that took St. Nicholas,
> My timbers, how he mauled her!

So that the songs are not direct links with Trafalgar, although they undoubtedly suggest the 'Nelson touch.'

But the national note is less finely expressed than in his contemporary Campbell's 'The Battle of the Baltic' and 'Ye Mariners of England,' or in Newbolt's 'Drake's Drum' and 'The Old Superb,' or, again, in Kipling's 'Ballad of the Bolivar' and many another of his inimitable epics of the services. At any rate, Dibdin may be credited with one deathless lyric in 'Tom Bowling'; and 'Blow high, blow low' is not far behind, if only as a description of the author's own experiences as a dry-land sailor in a voyage of thirteen hours from Calais to Dover. I was recently delighted to come across this celebrated air in the 'Album Anglais,' for 'Harmonium ou Orgue,' published by Litolff. The song comes from Dibdin's comic opera, 'The Seraglio' (Covent Garden, 1776).

In Hogarth's book bitter reference is made to Dibdin's retirement on a pension of £200 a year, awarded him rather late, for having at the express desire of Pitt's ministry put himself to an expense of more than £600, by quitting highly lucrative engagements and opening his theatre in a hot July, to considerable nightly loss in town, where he was instructed to write, sing, publish, and give away what were termed war songs. His son, Thomas, further states as a melancholy fact that before his father enjoyed the pension long enough to repay his actual losses in earning it, it was withdrawn by a succeeding ministry. Part of it was restored a little before his death, in 1814, in his sixty-ninth year, in Camden Town. On his tombstone are inscribed the familiar lines :

> Though his body 's under hatches,
> His soul has gone aloft.

Dibdin's versatility and industry are also shown in his three-volume ' Life ' by himself, and in a bulky volume, with steel engravings, dealing with a tour he made ' through almost the whole of England, and a considerable part of Scotland.' It consists of letters addressed to a large number of ' intelligent and respectable friends.' There is no doubt that the life of this remarkable man, although it did not achieve any great artistic results, or further the progress of English music, had considerable personal influence on music in England in his own period, and in view of the projected book on ' Dibdin and his Sea-Songs,' it is to be hoped that the appeal which has been recently made for the loan of Dibdin papers or documents of any kind will receive attention and a satisfactory response.

New Music

PIANOFORTE

Several Bach transcriptions have been sent for review lately. They vary in merit, but it is an excellent thing that chamber music and cantata movements of Bach, if only by means of arrangements, should come to the notice of those who have concentrated chiefly upon the pianoforte music. Harold Craxton makes a good solo of the Largo from the F minor Clavier Concerto. His arrangement is thoughtful and sensitive, and such adaptations as have to be made are made in the spirit of the work. The lovely soaring melody seems to call for the sostenuto of the violin or oboe, but even on the pianoforte it is beautiful enough. The movement as a whole is well suited to the character of the organ, so it is worth noting that another version thereof (that used in a Cantata) is among the set of organ transcriptions noted elsewhere (Oxford University Press). William Murdoch's arrangement of the Vivaldi-Bach Concerto in D minor is much more of a virtuoso affair. It may be argued that this is in the spirit of Vivaldi and of Bach's own transcription. Mr. Murdoch goes further, however. His chording and lay-out are very thick at times. There are many passages of descending thirds in the bass which sound exceedingly podgy ; and altogether it seems as if the difficulties have sometimes been put in for their own sake. On the other hand, a masterly performance of the arrangement would certainly sound very imposing.

There are also two arrangements of the Minuet from Handel's ' Berenice.' Adam Carse (Augener) cares more for the dignity of the melody ; Jasper Rooper (Forsyth) more for its gracefulness. Rooper's texture is lighter and more airy ; Carse's foundations are more solid. Both arrangements are good. Josef Holbrooke's Ballade (No. 2), ' Penmachno,' is a big work, calling for a big technique and a firm mental grasp to hold together a rather disjointed movement. There is a real intensity here, and some moments of great beauty, but the interest is not kept going in the ' bridge-passages ' (Chester).

Roy Agnew's Prelude No. 4 and ' Two Pieces ' come from the Oxford University Press, and have sensitiveness and charm ; the composer all too easily drops into the clichés of modern pianoforte music, which are every bit as hackneyed as the clichés of Dykes or Barnby, if not more so. The best of these numbers is the second of ' Two Pieces,' ' An English Lane.' Here the gentleness and quietness are out of the ordinary ; there is not a trace of affectation, and the result is an extremely attractive little work.

In a later batch are yet two more Bach transcriptions. Donald C. Powell gives a straightforward and effective version of the fine march-like chorale-setting (not a ' Prelude,' surely), ' Rejoice, ye redeemed hosts,' from Cantata No. 30 (Augener) ; and Harriet Cohen transcribes the short G major version of ' Blessed Jesu, we are here ' (Oxford University Press). Here the arranger's work was light, as the original organ version had only to be copied out on two staves with the pedal part put into the left hand. It therefore seems rather cool of Miss Cohen to dedicate Bach's work to Mrs. S. Courtauld. Perhaps, however, it is her own work that the arranger dedicates—the sixteen marks of expression that decorate the sixteen bars of music. Apropos of this one recalls Mr. Harvey Grace's excellent remark in the preface to his volume of organ transcriptions : ' Expression marks are very sparingly used ; the player who needs copious directions as to . . . movements so intimate and searching . . . will miss their secret anyway.'

The same Press sends four pieces by Corbett Sumsion, which are included in Grade F of the Oxford Piano series. Mr. Sumsion has a picturesque imagination and interesting musical ideas, and one of his pieces, ' Willow's Shade,' is a charming little work, having something of the cool, quiet beauty of Ireland's ' Darkened Valley,' with which it invites comparison. In other cases the composer's sensitiveness to the qualities of sound seems to mislead him. He is, in ' Mirage,' so taken with his piquant (but not very distinguished or original) opening discovery that he cannot leave it alone. ' Hey-Day,' again, relies too much on its sevenths and fourths. The effect has obviously attracted the composer, and he overdoes it. In both these numbers, however, there is vigour and spirit ; and in ' Sandford Pool ' we feel, in addition to those qualities, a directness and thoughtfulness that go to make a very interesting work. There is undoubted musical feeling behind all four pieces, but it is when Mr. Sumsion is least self-conscious that he is most interesting.

From Chester's come three pieces by Poldowski. ' The Hall of Machinery—Wembley,' by hard rhythms and jangling, discordant effects produces an effect undeniably metallic and hard, but lacking the dignity and restraint that seem to characterise good machinery. It is an interesting yet not very convincing experiment. Honegger was more successful in a similar attempt with his locomotive ; but in any case the thing is hardly worth doing. Poldowski's skill with fine textures and delicate line-work is better shown in ' Sonatine,' a curious but attractive little thing, consisting of Andante, Allegro con brio, Largo, and Allegro con fuoco. This is rather the French overture form—a satisfying one which Poldowski uses to good effect.

(Continued on page 629.)

All ye who music love

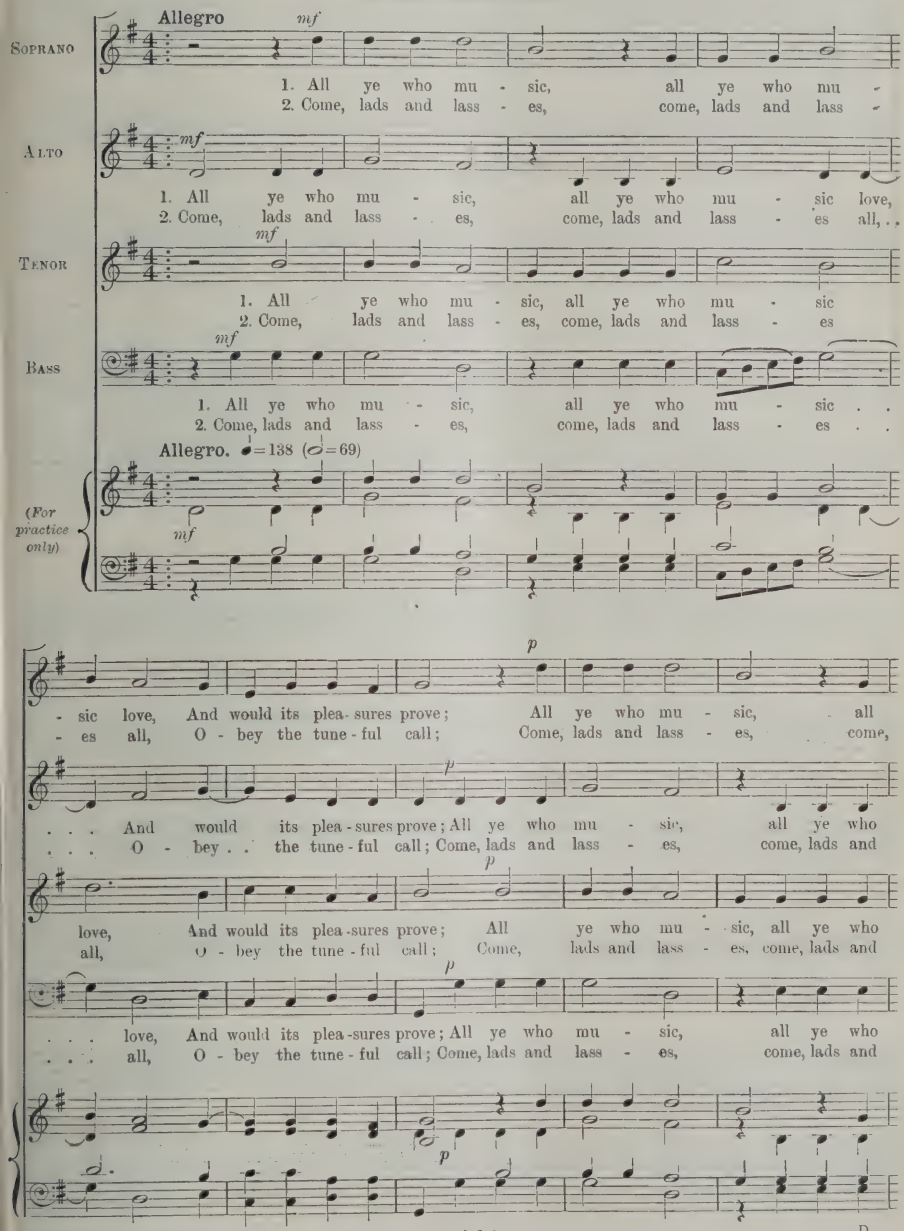
MADRIGAL

Words by Thomas Oliphant

Music by Balthazar Donato (1548—1603)

London: Novello and Company, Limited; New York: The H. W. Gray Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Allegro
mf
Soprano
1. All ye who mu - sic, all ye who mu -
2. Come, lads and lass - es, come, lads and lass -
Alto
1. All ye who mu - sic, all ye who mu - sic love,
2. Come, lads and lass - es, come, lads and lass - es all, . .
Tenor
1. All ye who mu - sic, all ye who mu - sic
2. Come, lads and lass - es, come, lads and lass - es
Bass
1. All ye who mu - sic, all ye who mu - sic . .
2. Come, lads and lass - es, come, lads and lass - es . .
Allegro. ♩=138 (𝅗𝅥=69)
(For practice only)
p
- sic love, And would its plea - sures prove; All ye who mu - sic, all
- es all, O - bey the tune - ful call; Come, lads and lass - es, come,
. . . And would its plea - sures prove; All ye who mu - sic, all ye who
. . . O - bey . . the tune - ful call; Come, lads and lass - es, come, lads and love, And would its plea - sures prove; All ye who mu - sic, all ye who all, O - bey the tune - ful call; Come, lads and lass - es, come, lads and
. . . love, And would its plea - sures prove; All ye who mu - sic, all ye who
. . . all, O - bey the tune - ful call; Come, lads and lass - es, come, lads and ye who mu - sic love, And would its plea-sures prove; O! come to lads and lass - es all, O - bey the tune - ful call;

mu - - sic love, . . And would . . its plea-sures prove; O! come, O!
lass - - es all, . . O - bey . . the tune - ful call;
mu - - sic love, And would its plea-sures prove; O! come to lass - - es all, O - bey the tune - ful call;
mu - - sic . . . love, And would its plea-sures prove; O! come to lass - - es . . . all, O - bey the tune - ful call;
us who cease not, cease . . not dai - ly, cease not dai - ly, cease come to us who cease not, cease . . not dai - ly, cease not dai - ly, us who cease not, cease . . not dai - ly, cease not dai - ly, cease us who cease not, cease . . not dai - ly, cease not dai - ly, cease

p
. . not dai - ly, From morn till eve to war - ble gai - ly, war - ble gai -
f
p cease not dai - ly, From morn till eve to war - ble gai - ly, war - ble
p
. . not dai - ly, From morn till eve to war - ble gai - ly, war - ble
p
. . not dai - ly, From morn till eve to war - ble gai - ly, war - ble
p
f
- ly, From morn till eve to war - ble gai - - ly: Fa la la
f
p gai - ly, From morn till eve to war - ble gai - - ly: Fa la la
f
p gai - ly, From morn till eve to war - ble gai - - ly: Fa la la
f
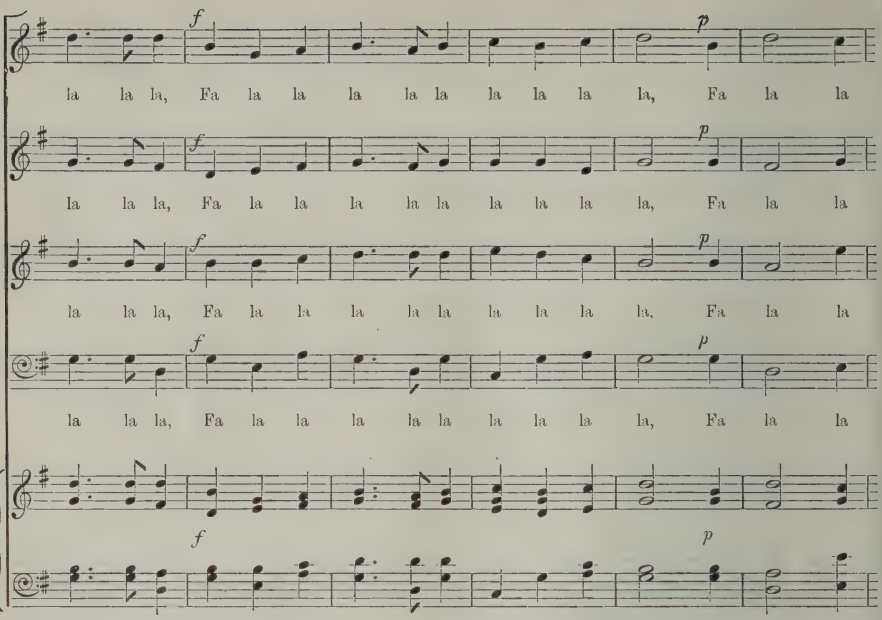
p gai - ly, From morn till eve to war - ble gai - - ly: Fa la la
f
p



f
p la la la, Fa la la la la la la la la la, Fa la la
la la la, Fa la la la la la la la la la, Fa la la la la la, Fa la la la la la la la la la, Fa la la la la la, Fa la la la la la la la la la, Fa la la
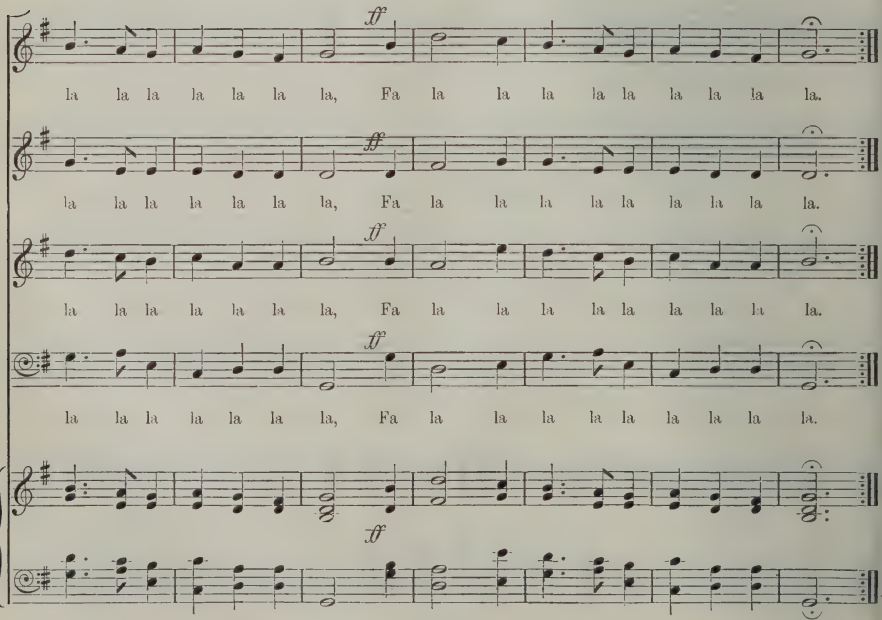
f
p



ff
la la la la la la la, Fa la la la la la la la la.
la la la la la la la, Fa la la la la la la la la.
la la la la la la la, Fa la la la la la la la la.
la la la la la la la, Fa la la la la la la la la.
ff

(Continued from page 624.)

There is a pleasant freshness and clarity about the work, and it is well worth careful notice. 'Study' is brilliant and quite effective, but has not the distinction of outlook that marks 'Sonatine.'

A number of other new publications, including a big work by Kaikhosru Sorabji (Curwen), a set of Six Preludes by Maurice Besly (Winthrop Rogers), and G. O'Connor Morris's 'Coquette' (Augener), are held over for discussion in a later article. T. A.

ORGAN

Some organ music of high standard has just been issued by the Oxford University Press, and all the publications noticed in this review are from that house.

First comes 'Ten Instrumental Movements from the Cantatas of J. S. Bach, transcribed for organ by Harvey Grace. (These pieces are also issued in separate numbers.) This is an extremely valuable addition to the organist's library, because it brings before the player some important sides of Bach's genius that are not largely illustrated in his better-known organ works. The big Preludes and Fugues are for the most part essentially public utterances, where Bach is in more or less formal costume. In his Orchestral Suites he is very much more unbuttoned; and in the Cantatas he seems to admit us to the most intimate parts of his mind. This side of his nature is shown, e.g., in the Adagio of the Toccata and Fugue in C (perhaps with the result that the work is not frequently played), and even more freely in the Chorale Preludes, but is not a very familiar one to the student of the bigger organ works only.

In some of the Adagios of the present volume, such as the Sinfonias to 'My spirit was in heaviness' and 'Wailing, crying,' the intimacy of the grief is intense; we seem to see Bach face to face. At the other end of the scale, in the Trio, 'Tis my pleasure,' the March from 'Dramma per Musica,' or the brilliant Sinfonia to 'We thank Thee,' the great man is in his most boisterous and sprightly moods—a side of his nature that is important to the student and a welcome surprise to the man in the street. 'I should have guessed fifty times before putting that down to Bach,' is the sort of comment one hears—meaning that the speaker simply did not know his Bach, and thought of him as a sort of solemn sobersides whose music is in the best of taste, and never lively.

One of the things that strike a player here is the un-selfconsciousness of the art. Bach obviously wrote, just as the others did, 'occasional' music in which he was at no pains to be personal. The March might be by Handel; it has no real individuality, but has abundant vitality for us to-day because of its spontaneity, and because the ordinary material is used with fine vigour and proportion. Bach's was a different attitude from that of the modern composer, with his 'artistic' outlook, and his consequent smallness of output and lack of directness. We gain in some ways, no doubt, but in others we lose.

The transcriptions are admirably done; there are suggestions by the arranger, even in the matter of fingering, but a good deal is wisely left to the performer. The edition is in every way practical. Such liberties as have been taken with the text are catalogued in the introduction, and added notes are printed in small type, so that the player always knows where he stands. Two misprints have occurred: the E in the pedal part of bar 4, line 3, p. 5, should be F; and the L.H. clef on line 1 p. 34, should be treble, not bass; but apart from these the print is beautifully clear, and well spaced. A reviewer must be pardoned for dwelling at some length on a publication so stimulating as this.

H. G. Ley's Fantasia on 'Aberystwyth,' which comes in the same batch, was written for the Hereford Festival of 1927, and is a piece of real organ music, and English at that; it carries on the tradition and to some extent the method of Parry's larger Fantasias. The well-contrasted subjects of the work are made out of features of the tune, and from this material is built up a movement which culminates in the full presentation of 'Aberystwyth' at the final climax. Subsidiary climaxes are well-placed; the growth of interest is consistently maintained throughout the work; and, as a result, the final entry of the tune is thrilling. This Fantasia is not easy, but as modern organ music goes, it is not hard, and the effectiveness of the lay-out makes the player's work pleasant.

F. H. Shera's two pieces, 'Aubade' and 'Nocturne,' are sensitive and musicianly, and the first, with its lightness of character and texture, has a charm that is grateful. The second (written in 1919) depends largely for its effect on 'crushed' sevenths and ninths used consecutively. This sort of harmony had just come from the Continent in 1919, and was fairly novel. But custom has staled a variety that was never anything like infinite, and the sound has lost its freshness. With this gone, the Nocturne has little effect left.

Thoughtful and sincere again are Arthur Egerton's 'An Easter Prelude' and 'Prelude-Improvisation on Veni Emmanuel,' but the composer has not in either case satisfactorily solved his formal problems, and the general effects are rather patchy. The treatment of plainsong in chorale preludes is a very difficult matter. Even Parry failed with 'Jesu dulcis memoria,' and to some extent for the same reason as accounts partly for Mr. Egerton's failure with 'Emmanuel.' Both have attempted to set a modal tune in a matrix of modern tonality. Even Parry's delicacy of style was insufficient to carry it off. Still less does Mr. Egerton succeed, with a groundwork that is somewhat rhetorical in manner.

A similar inequality is felt in Robin Milford's 'Two Sea-Preludes,' written on verses from the Psalms. The first of these is built on a fine modal tune, which is heard twice, the second time on a very effective tonic pedal. The climax and Coda are striking, but there is elsewhere a hesitancy that detracts from the general effect. The music is not rhetorical like Mr. Egerton's; rather it seems to stammer. Moreover, I do not believe, Vaughan Williams or no, that consecutive octaves between bass and treble that are contrapuntal in style can ever be effective. The musical ear follows the two independent tunes with a satisfaction that is immediately lost when for a moment one part forgets its self-respect and lamely follows the other. Mr. Milford's second Prelude is not easy to understand; it is a Sea-Prelude, but the verse that stands as its motto is the one about the stony rocks being a refuge for the conies. In form the Prelude is a short passacaglia, based upon a tune of chorale style. It has a cool charm. But the interest is not cumulative, as it particularly needs to be in a work of this sort; and there is a lack of grip, both structurally and texturally, which destroys the effect of some moments of restful beauty. Here, again, is music of undoubted sincerity and dignity, and it is disappointing, after real trial, not to feel more warmly about it.

When we turn to Healey Willan we move from an air of experiment into one of achievement. Organists already owe this composer a debt of thanks for some fine works, and here is another. 'Choral Prelude No. 2' on 'Andernach' is a toccata-like movement of great brilliance, comparable with Parry on the 'Old 104th,' but not lacking its own personality. From the opening bar one feels a note of authority and grip. The music grows unhesitatingly to a fine climax and finish, and the Prelude is really a very notable work. Particularly interesting it is to see this fine brilliance of sound achieved with a texture that is thoroughly English, and not the least indebted to the French masters of organ music. Prelude No. 1, 'Puer nobis nascitur' is quieter in style, and has an almost unbroken use of a drooping Bach-like figure, under which the phrases of the tune sound one by one. In this slighter work again is felt the certainty of touch which marked the larger Prelude, and the two together form an important addition to the organist's rather scanty repertory.

T. A.

---

CHURCH MUSIC

A new Motet, 'God Within,' by the late Sir Herbert Brewer, has recently been issued by Novello. It is for four-part chorus, orchestra, and organ, and was composed for the 274th Festival of the Sons of the Clergy, St. Paul's Cathedral, 1928. It is an admirable example of this composer's work, broad and dignified in style, and showing the writer's mastery in the treatment of both voices and orchestra. It is of moderate length—running to sixteen pages—of no great difficulty, and should speedily find its way into the repertory of good choirs. The same publishers send also a hymn, 'Lord, grant me light'—words and music by Basil Sellars—which is tuneful and flowing and an attractive addition to their Sunday School Festival series; and an anthem, 'Thus saith the Lord,' by H. C. L. Stocks. This is a simple, straightforward little work, suitable for Saints' Days or general use, and intended for unaccompanied singing.

Two settings of the Communion Service—in G by Alan Gray, and in A minor by William Lovelock—are worthy additions to the Oxford Church Music series, of which the general editor is Harold E. Darke (Oxford University Press). Both admirably meet the needs of the average parish church choir. Without being elaborate, the vocal writing is fresh and interesting, and in each case is backed up by an excellent organ part. Choirmasters should examine these settings. Several misprints occur in Dr. Gray's work. Misplaced—or missing—accidentals have been noted in the organ part on p. 6, bar 4; p. 7, bar 15; p. 9, bar 8; and in voice parts, p. 11, bar 12; p. 17, bar 7. Four additions to the Oxford Series of Modern Anthems—edited by Stanley E. Roper—are good examples of modern English Church music. 'Be still, my soul'—an Introit for use at Holy Communion—is an interesting and expressive setting by C. H. Kitson of words by W. D. Maclagan. Although the parts frequently divide, the work is not difficult. A setting by Herbert Howells of 'My eyes for beauty pine'—words by Robert Bridges—is for unison singing with one brief passage for optional four-part harmony. In its short course of three pages the time-signature is changed ten times, 7-4 predominating. For the Easter hymn, 'O Sons and Daughters,' C. C. Harwood has written a good tune which is effectively varied by means of faux-bourdon and other devices. Percy W. Whitlock's setting of 'Sing praise to God Who reigns above' is a strong, vigorous little work, written for the Diocesan Choirs' Festival in Rochester Cathedral, 1928. It is in four-part harmony throughout, with a change of key and of time-signature for the middle verse. In the first bar of the bottom line, p. 3, there is a misplaced sharp in the organ part.

From William Clowes comes 'A Book of Organ Descants,' by Charles W. Pearce. These are intended for the accompaniment of unisonous hymn-singing of boys and men alternately. In this book Dr. Pearce has provided two descants for each of the twelve hymn-tunes selected; the one 'to afford a comparatively soft accompaniment to the unisonous singing of boys (or women), the other being designed for the promotion of louder singing by men in both choir and congregation.' The arrangements supply some ingenious examples of the writer's well-known skill as a contrapuntist. Canonic treatment is frequent, different phrases of the tune are heard simultaneously, and in some instances two different tunes are combined. In 'Christians, awake,' for example, the tune, sung by boys, is given to the left hand, while the right hand, on another manual, is occupied throughout with bits of the tune to 'Hark! the herald-angels sing.' The composer suggests that the descants might be found useful as short 'voluntaries' before, during, or after Service.

Two fine specimens of polyphonic writing have been edited by H. B. Collins—Christopher Tye's Motet for five voices (S.A.T.BAR.B.), 'Omnes gentes, plaudite manibus,' for Ascension Day or for general use, and William Byrd's Motet for two trebles, alto or first tenor, tenor, and bass, 'Non vos relinquam orphanos,' for use at Whitsuntide. The text is in Latin (Chester). The Plainsong and Mediæval Music Society issues separately, in plainsong notation, the traditional setting of the Nicene Creed.

Mention may also be made in this column of the very fine edition, recently produced by Stainer & Bell, of Eduardo Grell's 'Missa Sollemnis.' Grell—we learn from 'Grove'—was born in 1800, and was the son of the organist of the Parochialkirche at Berlin. He composed many works of large extent and of the most elaborate structure, and was one of the most learnèd contrapuntists of his day in Germany. His greatest work is the Mass now under notice, which is in sixteen parts a cappella. Adequately performed, its effect should be imposing. Perhaps one of our big choral bodies will take it up.

G. G.

SONGS

'O sweet sincerity,' wrote Thomas Hardy in 1899:

Where modern methods be,
What scope for thine and thee?

And certainly the reviewer of present-day songs is apt to long for the work that says its say plainly and naturally, without all this extraordinarily self-conscious avoidance of what is felt to be obvious. The thing may be as modern as it likes, if it will only be direct and consistent, and give the impression of the composer 'writing as he speaks, and speaking as he thinks.' That is why such a song as Frederick Keel's 'Remembrance' is so welcome; here there is no elaboration nor pretence, nor a note too much. The composer is concerned only with expressing as simply as possible in music his realisation of the poem, and it is a completely successful method. These light textures and firm outlines give the words their fullest effect; and with none of that sense of strain to contend with, the careful phrasing and balance of the song tell at once. It is a moving little work (Cramer).

Similarly direct and natural, though far more elaborate and subtle in texture, is Herbert Howells's 'Come sing and dance.' The naive and quiet joy of the carol is skilfully reflected in the swaying rhythm of the accompaniment, as well as in the flowing phrases of the voice part. It is a difficult song, both for pianist and singer; the high, flute-like passages of the soprano need such ease and poise, but it is certainly beautiful. Two other good songs from the Oxford University Press are Patrick Hadley's 'The Sheep' and 'Bury her at even.' The first is very successful with the opening monotony of O'Sullivan's poem, and with the subsequent transition, without change of rhythm or heightening of tone, to the sadness of memory. It is again a difficult song to handle, calling for the lightest of touches from the pianist, if he is not to disturb the even flow of the long phrases. Given the right performers, it should sound well. 'Bury her at even' is more 'rarefied,' and at first is difficult to follow, but careful playing reveals its quiet beauty; the pianist's part is, perhaps, a little too elusive in style, but one can sympathise with the composer's aim. The difficulty is to strike the balance. If it is not so light as to seem elusive it is apt to be heavy enough to seem far-fetched.

Elusiveness reaches its limit in the five songs by Ian Whyte which Chester's have published. The restless, uncertain rhythms with which the composer tries to match the subtle but steady flow of Wordsworth's 'The sun has long been set' give the song an air of complete aimlessness. The same is true of 'Piping down the valleys wild' and 'Twilight.' And the studied avoidance of any normal coherence of texture in 'Song of the Fairies' is maddening. Yet in spite of all one can feel Mr. Whyte's view of the poems; there are 'moments of vision,' and the work is sensitive; in practical performance, however, one cannot find a sustained concentration in any of the songs as a whole.

Two settings of Shelley poems by E. E. Matthews (Oxford University Press) are slight, but out of the ordinary. The simplicity of manner makes for effect, and the composer gets into the heart of the texts. This insight is specially noticeable in a very thoughtful setting of 'If I walk in Autumn's even.' Singers should not miss these.

A set of songs by Constant Lambert was noticed here some months ago. A second set of 'Three Poems by Li-po' (Chester) shows similar qualities. At a first glance one might think the songs trifling and empty. Short they certainly are, but they have moments of a very unusual beauty, achieved with an equally unusual economy. There are passages in all these songs, particularly the first and last, that seem to mean more and more as one grows more familiar with them. Their cool air of detachment is deceptive; this is where they fit their words so well; they seem to me to have a great deal in them, and they undoubtedly grow upon one.

Two songs by B. Burrows, published by Augener, are settings of Housman. 'When first my way to fair I took' has just the right 'wry smile' for its poem, and is a good little work. 'Yonder see the morning blink' is not so happy. It deals carefully with the words, but does not get below their surface. There is in the music none of the essential quality of the very bitter little poem. The same composer is in sprightlier mood with 'The dusty miller' (Cramer). It is well written and uncommon, and should be effective. From Paxton's is an arrangement by Cyril Jenkins of the Welsh air 'Black Sir Harry.' T. A.

UNISON

A gay little song of summer is 'Under the Greenwood Tree,' which has the tune of 'Sellenger's Round'—six-eight, with the dotted quaver jump. In the same copy is a two-part song, 'The Daisies,' by W. Hately, arranged by 'H. A. C.' This also is in lively six-eight time. (A note mentions that it was originally issued as a unison song, under the title, 'Daisy Nurses.') It is suitable for quite small singers. An excellent twopenny reprint gives Schubert's 'Hark, hark,' suitable for older children, and his 'Cradle Song,' for juniors, together with a portrait of the composer and a capital article upon him by G. Kirkham Jones (Novello).

Markham Lee has made a charming, clear-eyed setting of 'Here a little child I stand,' very simple and happy. Colin Taylor hits the mechanical gait without dullness in 'The Clock Shop'; for fairly young children, this. It has some effective staccato.

From an unfinished Schubert opera comes a 'Romanze,' to which Albert Latham has set new words, with the title 'The Lost Lamb.' Dr. Whittaker edits this. It reminds us, at the start, of the 'Cradle Song,' is very short, and asks ppp singing and delicate shading (Oxford University Press).

Donald Ford's 'Little Shepherd' is a quick, waltz-like piece, needing good line-drawing and phrase-balancing, plenty of tone, and contrasts (Murdoch).

'Madge,' a camp-fire play by Kitty Barne, introduces folk-songs, sung and acted. It can be done indoors or out. No scenery is needed. There is scope for fun in dressing up and miming the songs. The play is a happy affair (Novello, 1*s*.).

W. R. A.

PART-SONGS FOR CHILDREN'S AND FEMALE VOICES

Purcell's 'For love ev'ry creature,' originally a soprano and baritone duet from 'King Arthur,' is adapted by Dr. Whittaker for S.S. It is a love-song in general terms ('For love ev'ry creature is formed by his nature; no joys are above the pleasures of love'). There are passages (short) in dotted quaver-semiquaver rhythm. 'The Spend-thrift Spring' (new words by A. G. Latham) is arranged from Schubert, for S.S. This is fairly long, and contains good variety of style, notably some charming staccato music. It could be sung by children or grown-ups. We have also a first set of rounds and canons by Schubert, containing four pieces, each for three voices—neat, well designed, and tuneful. 'The Bells,' by Dr. Sweeting, is marked for three voices; the lowest goes down to B flat. It is a slowish, graceful piece, giving scope for the use of varied tone-colour, as the suggestions of different bells, joyous or sad, are pursued. Schubert's setting of the twenty-third Psalm, 'The Lord is my Shepherd,' for S.S.A.A., should be welcome in Sunday schools and all places where women's voices are raised. The lowest part touches A flat, but not often. The Sol-fa copy is for once issued separately (Oxford University Press).

Edgar Bainton's setting of Wordsworth's 'The Green Linnet' achieves simple distinction without being difficult. S.S. singers with a little experience of refined singing will appreciate its curves and interplay (Novello).

Elsie Horne's 'Nocturne,' for S.S.A., is a fairly easy piece in which colour and controlled power can be employed. Its flavour of older days will be noted with pleasure by those who do not yearn for novelty in their part-songs. Donald Ford might seek a rather fresher turn of melody. 'A Cradle Song,' for S.A. (down to B flat only), is agreeable enough. His second part does not always make the most effective moves against the first (Murdoch).

MALE-VOICE

Most of Schubert's male-voice choruses are to be issued by the Oxford University Press. Ten numbers are out, all for T.B.B. Four of them—'Forgotten,' 'The heart here wells over,' 'He whose flag,' and 'Each in other's arms'—were written to successive verses of Schiller's 'Elysium.' They could be sung as a suite. All the pieces are short, and, as the editor warns the ambitious, they are 'entirely innocent of counterpoint.' The original scoring was for T.T.B. (really T.BAR.B.), so choirs with few tenors will find them particularly useful. There is a good deal of excellent work in these, which even expert choirs will enjoy, whilst younger bodies should certainly get some of them. The titles of the last six are: 'Gravedigger's Song' (a solemn, moralising ditty, as may be expected), 'Bard's Song' (of peace and joy after battles are over: plenty of exultant carolling), 'May Song' (swinging six-eight, mostly soft), 'Drinking Song in May' and 'Drinking Song in Winter' (both unsophisticated ballads, the former major and the latter minor).

'The Agincourt Song' is arranged for T.T.B.B., with strings, timpani, pianoforte, and organ (score and parts on hire), by Arthur S. Warrell—a well-wrought piece (Oxford University Press).

Bainton's 'If I were yonder wave' (Moore's words) is an easy, free-flowing T.T.B.B. setting (Novello).

Dr. Sweeting has arranged 'Turmut hoein'' for T.B.B. This, one of the 'English County Songs,' is the sort of rustic ditty that people cite when they want to make a gentle skit on folk-song. If its authenticity were not vouched for by several respected names, I should have thought the words were a parody, for they conclude with the delightful admission that, as 'the fly is on the turmut,' 'it 's all my eye for we to try to keep fly off the turmut.' I hope the song will never be sung by any but the truly devout. In this setting it is attractive to any choir. Vincent Thomas sets Herbert's 'Man's Medley' ('Hark! how the birds do sing') for T.T.B.B. This is straightforward, nicely varied, and thoughtful (Cramer). W. R. A.

A HANDEL DISCOVERY

A good deal of interest attaches to the publication, by Messrs. Schott, of seventy-six pieces for harpsichord by Handel, all, with one exception, now appearing in print for the first time. The collection (which is in two books) has been made from four MS. volumes formerly in the library of the Earl of Aylesford, and sold in 1918 to the late W. Barclay Squire. A portion of the Preface is by Mr. Squire, and he was also part-editor, his colleague being Mr. Fuller-Maitland.

The character of the music (much of which is unusually sketchy, even for Handel) seems to bear out Mr. Barclay Squire's view that many of the pieces are very early in date. Indeed, some of the harmony is so weak as to suggest that if Handel gave lessons, a few of his pupils' exercises may have been included by mistake.

A batch of Minuets, grouped in pairs and keys (D minor, D; F minor, F; G minor, G; &c.), leads to an editorial surmise that they may have been a kind of store from which the ever-busy composer could draw at need. Thus, an Overture in G minor being finished, there is need for a Minuet wherewith to round it off; you merely overhaul the volume—or tell young Christopher Smith to do it for you—and the job is completed (always provided that you are not over-particular about a nice fit in the matter of style!). In fact, these works show, even more than the familiar Suites, that Handel was rarely self-critical in his keyboard works. The hand of the arch-improvisator is almost everywhere apparent.

Perhaps the most interesting feature in the collection is the laying-out of several works for a two-manual harpsichord, each manual being given on a separate pair of staves. Usually the two manuals are used antiphonally, the echo effect being liberally employed. In the 'Air for two-rowed Harpsichord' (No. 36), the arrangement is analogous to that of an organ piece with a solo stop. (No doubt the plain bass of this piece was filled in, although there are no figures.) In another piece bearing the same title (No. 37) we have a kind of two-part invention in which the strands are so closely interwoven that performance on one keyboard at the right pace is practically impossible.

In the long Chaconne in F (the one work which is already tolerably well known) the two manuals are used in a variety of ways, the player occasionally finding himself awkwardly placed with his left-hand part on a higher stave than his right. This excellent piece clearly gained much from the variety made possible by the original arrangement. Discussing these two-manual pieces, Mr. Fuller-Maitland says rightly that they are important, in that they settle a disputed point:

> A certain school of writers on the subject of old keyed instruments has opposed the tradition that the one keyboard was often used as a kind of echo to the other, and that the repetition of each half of almost every movement is to be accounted for on the theory of a change of keyboard. The old tradition is fully supported by this, the first piece of documentary evidence to come to light.

It is difficult to understand how the old tradition could ever have been disputed, seeing that the echo effect would inevitably suggest itself as the obvious way of making the most of two keyboards whose possibilities of dynamic variety were otherwise limited. In fact, a very good bit of evidence is found in the 'Jig' Fugue of Bach—a work which, although now included among the organ music, was originally written for a two-manual cembalo with pedals. It contains brief repetitive passages that are meaningless without the echo effect. Old organ music (especially French) is full of this naive device. Yet some of us in our organ pupilage were told that in the D minor Toccata and Fugue the rapid alternation of Great and Swell in the long arpeggio episodes was 'playing to the gallery,' and not at all what Bach would have tolerated! The fact is, of course, Bach needed the alternate manual effect far more than we do to-day, his facilities for registration being few and clumsy.

The whole question of repeat marks in the older classics is raised by this Handel evidence. If—as seems certain—each half of (say) a Sonata of Scarlatti's was played twice merely because two contrasted keyboards were available, the consistent use of repeat marks in the Sonatas of Haydn, Mozart, and (early) Beethoven was merely one of the many instances of a practice being continued long after its raison d'être had ceased. The entire omission of such repeats to-day is merely commonsense. The only exception is, perhaps, in the classical Minuet and Trio, wherein the repetition of the Minuet at its first playing makes the right balance with the repeatless da capo, on the principle of shortening a recapitulation; and the Trio, being short and tuneful, can always stand the repeat.

The interest of these two volumes is not confined to the historical. There are some truly characteristic movements. No. 52, for example, though called 'Aria,' is a fine piece with a touch of the hornpipe in its rhythm, and hinting at an orchestral origin in its suggestion of antiphony of strings and wind. Certainly there is nothing of the Aria style about it. No. 51 shows us Handel reaching out to the modern pianoforte composers with a little piece called 'Impertinence.' There is a lively Sonatina (No. 44); a Courante that suggests Purcell in its broken writing for the keyboard; a fine 'Allemane,' marked by the editors Andante, crotchet = 72, but which I feel ought to be quick and fiery; and a one-movement Concerto, which, despite some Handelian padding, has a capital swing. There are two further versions of the well-known Gigue in G minor. The long Chaconne in C (No. 15) is on the whole desolating as music, but is of great interest in regard to the development of keyboard technique. Altogether these posthumous pieces will provide the Handelian with a good deal of enjoyment, both at the keyboard and away from it. (By the way, there are more engraver's errors than we expect to find in a work bearing such distinguished editorial names.)

H. G.

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

'The History of Music.' By Cecil Gray. Pp. 284. Kegan Paul, 12*s.* 6*d.*

'Foundations of English Opera.' By Edward J. Dent. Pp. 242. Cambridge University Press, 12*s.* 6*d.*

'Music.' By Ursula Creighton. With a Preface by Edward J. Dent. Pp. 256. Chatto & Windus, 7*s.* 6*d.*

'The Art of Organ Accompaniment in the Church Services: What to do and what to avoid.' By Walter L. Twinning. Pp. 66. William Reeves, 2*s.* 4*d.*

Wireless Notes

By 'Ariel'

The enterprise of the B.B.C. in undertaking to give us the whole of the Bach Church Cantatas is such as to make criticism seem ungrateful. Nevertheless, the unfamiliarity of the bulk of the Cantatas, and the special difficulties they present both to performers and hearers, make criticism more than usually necessary. With regret, then, it has to be said that the performances of the first few have fallen short, not only in regard to certain practical details that will, no doubt, be put right speedily, but above all (and far more important) in the matter of spirit. One could not avoid an impression that the task had been approached with too little realisation of the intimate and intensely personal quality of the music. The performances might have suited Handel, or certain choruses in the 'Christmas Oratorio,' but they missed something that those of us who have long been familiar with a fair number of the Cantatas feel to be the very essence of the works.

An analogy may be drawn from the organ side of Bach's output. Many organists can put up a brilliant and rousing show with (say) the Toccata and Fugue in D minor or the Fantasia and Fugue in G minor; without special study and taking thought, however, they would be unable to reveal the beauty of the Chorale Preludes. And they would then have to acquire almost another style for the Trio-Sonatas, which demand a clarity of part-playing, a subtlety of phrasing, and a nice adjustment of balance beyond anything else in the organ repertory. In fact, there are half a dozen Bachs, seeing that practically every department of that vast output may be subdivided, each subdivision presenting its own problem in technique or interpretation, or in both. The Church Cantatas are, on the whole, the biggest of all the tasks, because (1) they are, in the main, the outcome of a pietistic spirit that exists to-day only in odd corners of the religious world; (2) they present great difficulties in regard to colour and balance, owing to the prominent part played in them by obsolete instruments; and (3) the vocal writing, though less ungrateful than was formerly supposed, yet requires almost a technique of its own. For these reasons it would have been well for the B.B.C. to have invited the co-operation of a few scholars, conductors, and choirs who have for some years given special attention to these works. In London, for example, there are at least three choirs whose constitution and ability are of the right stamp—the Oriana Singers, the Bach Cantata Choir, and the Harold Brooke Choir. As to the provinces: any experienced adjudicator on the choral side of competition Festivals could name at least a dozen choirs (each within reasonable distance of a broadcasting station) that, given due notice, could put up excellent performances of two or three Cantatas per season. The B.B.C. scheme will take several years for its completion; is it too late or too presumptuous to suggest that a good proportion of the Cantatas should be delegated to such choirs? They would, I am sure, welcome the chance of singing to a wider audience; the study would do them good, and the fee would strengthen exchequers that at present are in most cases badly in need of a tonic. Such co-operation would enable the B.B.C. to help choralism as it is already helping orchestral music in places.

The Bach Cantatas, as I have said above, present problems to the hearer hardly less than to the performer. For the sake of the average listener, therefore, the performances call for the utmost care and thought. Anything less will put listeners off, just as the dry and casual playing of the Preludes and Fugues in the past led to an idea of Bach so mistaken that it has only lately been removed.

One other point in connection with the Cantata performances: Among the letters I have received on the subject are several expressing regret that the hour chosen is one which rules out the largest of all the classes of potential hearers—the church organists, choirs, and church folk generally. One correspondent sends a copy of the reply he received from the B.B.C. on his writing to them about this.

The main point of the answer was that an earlier hour would not be suitable because it is felt that listeners don't want anything so serious during the afternoon. It seems to me that the public to whom these works appeal would be as ready to listen at 3.30 or 4.0 as at 6.15 p.m.; and, similarly, the listeners who don't want them at the earlier times won't want them later. The case is clearly one where a special class of listener deserves consideration, especially as more and more church choirs are adding the Cantatas to their repertory. Why not later try a time on Sunday during the post-Church hours? Or, if that is impracticable, would it not be possible to give some of the Cantatas on week-day evenings? I hope the B.B.C. will reconsider this question of time.

---

Most organists were pleased to see the Rheinberger Sonatas given a turn in the 'Foundations of Music' series. But assuming that only a single week was available, it seems a pity a better choice of works was not made. The third Sonata, though good, is far from being among the best. Moreover, seeing that Rheinberger links up his first and last movements so often, an effort should have been made to give a complete work at a sitting, even at the cost of one of the middle movements. For example, the Pastoral Sonata contains a slow movement of no great value; the meat of the work is in the first movement and the brilliant Fugue that forms the finale. In cases of this sort the first and third movements make an excellent pair, and should be regarded as Prelude and Fugue. The E flat minor Sonata is another work that may be similarly treated. And why be so stingy of time when music of this kind is concerned? The first Sonata played was No. 2. On Monday we had the Fantasia and Adagio, which lasted barely ten minutes. The final Fugue, which draws some of its material from these two movements, takes only another five.

Couldn't the German 'talk' have waited for a few minutes, and so have given the complete Sonata a chance to show its constructive interest? (The fact is, ten minutes is a beggarly allowance for so important a feature as the 'Foundations of Music.' Think of the solid hours given to the fatuous humours of the Charlot troupe, and to dance bands, and to feeble songs warbled and wobbled by barely articulate singers!)

If another Rheinberger series is contemplated, I suggest that the programmes be drawn from the many admirable detached pieces, plus a few of the finest of the Sonata Fugues. Rheinberger wrote nearly a hundred short pieces that are in organ music pretty much what the short pieces of Brahms and Schumann are in pianoforte music—indeed, in mood and idiom, they contain strong suggestions of the two pianoforte composers. The ignorance of the public—even of many organists—concerning the organ repertory is so great that there is useful missionary work to be done here. As in the case of the Bach Cantatas, more forethought seems to be necessary, and counsel should be taken with any one of the well-known excellent organists who have practically the whole of Rheinberger's large output at their fingers' ends.

---

Space having run out, I defer till next month discussion of several points raised by readers. I must, however, add a word of appreciation of two features that have given peculiar pleasure to me and (I gather) to many others—the Bach Sonatas for flute and pianoforte, played by Joseph Slater and Gordon Bryan; and the first-rate string orchestra concert of Sunday, June 17, conducted by Julius Harrison. It was a happy thought in the latter to include both a Handel Concerto Grosso and the splendid Introduction and Allegro of Elgar—the latter a work that (no less than the two Symphonies) surely shows Elgar to be in the line of the really big composers.

Teachers' Department

THE SELF-EXPRESSION OF CHILDREN IN MUSIC

II

By R. H. Hull

In recent years the tendency in educational circles has been to exaggerate the significance of the advantages to be derived from musical appreciation. The consequence is that teachers have been led to expect magical results through extended appreciation courses when other means have failed. The subject is certainly important, but its limitations have to be recognised. We cannot settle the problem by indicating the satisfactory attendances at the Children's Concerts at Westminster Central Hall. If I remember rightly, the advisability of some details in the methods of instruction employed there were rightly questioned in these columns some months ago. I do not want to revive that particular point, beyond suggesting that 'mass appreciation' is open to obvious dangers, and the illustration of music by catch-phrases is one of them.

On broader lines there are at least two well-defined points of view. The first is that children should be spoon-fed with the classics from their earliest years until they are old enough to receive undiluted nourishment. Alternatively, it is held that education in listening to music should be postponed until children have reached an age (some teachers say about fourteen) when they are able more fairly to grasp the nature of what they are asked to accept. My feeling is that one scheme to some extent implies the other. If children are introduced sensibly to good music at a fairly early age, the chances are that they will realise 'the nature of what they are asked to accept' when they reach adolescence. It seems a little absurd to expect older children to face the question without any preparation, as the second method seems to suggest. But this does not indicate that young children should have the classics administered to them in the fashion (to use a nursery simile) of a grey powder covered with jam. This expedient may work for a time, but when the jam is removed on the day of reckoning the dose becomes nauseous in the extreme. The point is that the process has to be gradual. There is no need whatever to expect a child to swallow a symphony at one gulp, and in any case he would probably refuse to. But it is most important that the music children do hear should be presented in its genuine form without being doctored. A judicious choice can make it attractive, and obviously the method would be progressive.

Some psychologists may object that such an introduction would be too vigorous. Against this, however, I would urge that a child is less likely to react against musical education if aware of its true nature than if a process of deception is adopted. I have seen cases in which children have definitely abandoned musical interest at adolescence, without subsequently regaining it, as a result of having a 'soft' course of appreciation. Theoretically, too, the principle is culpable in the extreme, and its pursuit is always attended with danger.

Some practical examples may be of interest. 'A,' a boy of fourteen, had had very little training in appreciation work before he was twelve. He then started a fairly normal course, which he followed with indifferent success for about eighteen months. Reaction became more marked, and at fourteen he had completely lost interest. Originally he had definite musical tendencies, and continued as an able pianist even after appreciation work failed to attract. He became definitely averse to classical music, with results that were apparently permanent. So far as I can gather, there was no fault in the training apart from the fact that it was delayed until too late.

'B,' the second case, was identical with 'A' in age and sex, but his training in appreciation started much earlier—at eight years old. The case was normal and unexciting so far as progress was concerned. The boy was introduced gradually to the best music, and had covered considerable ground by the time he was fourteen. I understand that from fourteen to seventeen his taste for the classics was modified to some extent, but this may be considered as a natural part of development. He recovered at eighteen, and at the end of observation was progressing normally.

As both cases concern older children, I consider that they show quite fairly the results of the two different methods. No illustrations can be regarded as final, but these do at least support the argument I am trying to advance.

In connection with temporary arrestment, there is an important point to be observed which is illustrated to some extent by the second case I have quoted. There is much truth in the saying that every child is a genius up to the age of ten, although the statement must be accepted with reservation. But it is often manifested by an amazing capacity for absorbing facts, and a phenomenal readiness to receive musical instruction may be regarded from the same angle. It is with the approach of adolescence that this brilliance is apt to wane, even to the extent of turning into lethargy. To the teacher this is most discouraging, and causes many to inquire whether their methods of musical education are at fault. The difficulty has to be met with means appropriate to the occasion, though in any case a relaxation of policy is probably indicated. One sees the problem in an acute form at public schools. An apathy to Bach is one of the most characteristic signs. But in the majority of cases the phase is transitory, and need not be viewed with grave concern. The danger is that teachers are apt to regard this indifference as idleness, and in urging the claims of good music inculcate a dislike of the classics which may become permanent. Only a keen discrimination will serve to discern what is the true condition of the pupil's mental development at the moment.

There is, on the whole, a diffidence among teachers to allow a child to substitute one form of expression for another, and it must be confessed that this caution has much to commend it. It is not advisable for a pupil to change over from, let us say, pianoforte to violin without some very definite desire to do so, particularly since such an action may be calculated principally to avoid discipline which has become unwelcome. There are cases, however, in which such measures are not only desirable but essential. It is very difficult to discover accurately, when a child is young, in what direction his genuine inclinations lie. It may well happen that he is definitely musical to the extent of being able to make some progress at the pianoforte, although the latter is not the instrument upon which he is designed ultimately to express himself. The development of a year or two may make a considerable difference in general outlook and growth of fundamental ability. It is necessary, therefore, to be on the alert for any marked retardation of interest. If the fault does not consist in wrong methods of teaching, a change of expression may be salutary. Obviously the position can be ascertained with some exactness before the actual step is taken, since the latter must be regulated by the degree of necessity for it.

In the musical education of children one cannot remain insensible to the considerable change of policy that has characterised so many day-schools and kindergartens within the last few years. It means in result that, while certain modifications allow for the intelligent presentation of lessons together with more enlightened methods generally, there is on the other hand a tendency to laxness which is wrongly interpreted as allowing children more freedom. I mention this point because music teachers, occupying a subordinate position on the staff, often find that they are expected to co-operate in the details of the theories according to which the school is run. In some cases this arrangement may be satisfactory, but, unfortunately, a number of these theories are based upon false psychology and, from a teacher's point of view, are entirely without value. Where music is concerned the attitude must be one of absolute independence. Interference from headquarters is quite inadmissible in connection with the teaching of the subject. This is hard counsel to those whose livelihood depends upon the caprice of a head mistress, or master, but any other arrangement quickly becomes intolerable.

The question has arisen again and again in one context or another, but compromise, quite apart from loss of self-respect, can rarely, if ever, resolve the issue. The teaching profession has co-operated to some extent in dealing with the problem, but the importance of the matter is not lessened. Children are extraordinarily susceptible to influence, and it may be readily imagined that if, musically, they have to submit to the theories of a non-musical faddist, their chances for normal development in the future are likely to be permanently ruined.

I would suggest that neither musical appreciation nor singing per se can be regarded as an entirely adequate medium of expression for children, although both form a necessary part of their education. An accurate sense of proportion is essential to the true estimation of the value of these subjects in teaching children, and since no two cases are alike the final responsibility must rest with the teacher. If control is to be absolute, the necessity for flexibility has also to be observed. Within the last generation there have been very definite improvements in the technique of music teaching. To enjoy the benefits which these modern explorations have made possible it should be the business of every teacher, not only to ensure an adequate technical groundwork for each pupil, but also to stimulate those imaginative gifts so indispensable to sound musicianship.

POINTS FROM LECTURES

The attitude of the press to music was discussed by Mr. R. D. Blumenfeld, president of the Institute of Journalists, during the British Music Industries Convention at Buxton. News is what the public wants, and music is not always news. The press cannot possibly go on week after week giving little essays on music. If the public shows clearly that it wants a page on music in the newspaper, then it will have it.

Despite all our speeding up of life, this was a lazy age, said Mr. J. Raymond Tobin, speaking at the same Convention. Everything was carried to the doors of the people, and the music trade had to follow suit and carry music to the people. In many outlying districts parents would not have their children travelling to the neighbouring town. A crowd of teachers go on using the same old material. When the pupil arrives home with her 'new piece' it is discovered that her mother had it before her. Much attractive music by our own younger men has been published with the intention of displacing the pseudo-classical material of third-rate Germans.

'A hopeless optimist,' Sir Richard Terry styled himself when addressing the Dundee Rotary Club on the outlook for music. People asked what would happen to the orchestral players if concerts didn't pay. The real fact was that fine posts could be obtained in cinemas and restaurants, with salaries that were princely compared with the old days. A player in a jazz band had a much higher salary than the organist of St. Paul's Cathedral. A very important organ post was being offered to musician after musician, and refused. An objection raised by the pessimist was that, with all the mechanical music, people would not learn the pianoforte. He could only say to that, 'Thank God for it.' The right people were keeping up instrumental practice, and children now were more efficiently taught. People in the past went to concerts simply because it was the correct thing to do, but now they were making their music in their own way.

'How music can make or mar a picture' was Mr. Edwin Evans's subject at a luncheon recently. Musical accompaniment of films was comparable to lighting in a theatre, which brought into prominence certain important events on the stage. It was because of its subtle quality that music in the cinema had never been esteemed at its true worth. Films should be given the music they deserved, and Mr. Evans added rather acidly, 'I leave you to imagine the kind of music some films deserve.'

Much of a lecture-recital entitled 'Six Centuries of Song' is bound to be so rapid in its review that a lasting impression is unlikely. But when the lecturer is Mr. Rutland Boughton, something is sure to remain. At Gloucester he said he had little use for the modern music of such composers as Stravinsky or Arthur Bliss. He thought the most musical section of the British public were the miners, because their occupation drove them back upon themselves.

Schubert came into the course of the South-East London Recorded Music Society. Mr. Alec Robertson addressed the members at Lewisham upon the 'Keats of Music,' whose lyric quality made him so beloved of all men, no matter what their tastes may prove to be in other directions. The composer's genius for melody, dramatic expression, and lovely modulation had ample demonstration by gramophone records.

J. G.

---

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. Our 'Answers to Correspondents' Column closes on the 14th of the month. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

G. R. F. (Nigeria).—Your letter has interested us very much. You wish to spend your next leave, from September 1 to December 1, in hearing as much good music as possible, and you are doubtful as to London meeting with your requirements. Your last leave, spent in the capital, disappointed you because you heard only two works that were new to you ('a ripping Symphony by Sibelius and a ripping String Quartet by Vaughan Williams'). You wonder whether you will have a better chance of a good musical time—(a) in the provinces, (b) on the Continent, or (c) by postponing your leave for a few months, or years. You wish to hear works that you have never heard before, by Vaughan Williams, Holst, Bax, Delius, Elgar, Stravinsky, Prokofiev, Honegger, Kodály, Bartók, Sibelius, de Falla, Respighi, &c. There are many like you, but the conditions of musical life in London now make it impossible for concert managements to present a great deal of unfamiliar work. The two main hindrances are the cost of rehearsal and the indifference of the general public to new music. We do not think you will find the provinces more fruitful, because you will have to go from place to place in order to seize such opportunities as present themselves of hearing an occasional unfamiliar work. And we doubt whether you would fare better on the Continent, except perhaps at Vienna. But at Vienna you would be unlikely to hear any works by Vaughan Williams, Bax, Holst, Delius, or Elgar. On the whole, then, we advise you to come to London. You say you want 'a musical adventure, not a forlorn hope.' London does not promise much in the way of a musical adventure just now, but there is plenty to be heard so long as you do not demand red-hot novelties. And the 'Proms' will be in full swing when you arrive.

EEZE.—(1.) Most men who sing alto are baritones or basses using what is called the falsetto voice. There are, however, a few altos who are, as you say, natural—that is to say, their voice has not 'broken' in the ordinary way. Some excellent altos we have heard have apparently been tenors who have developed the upper register in an unusual degree. In fact, it is sometimes difficult to say whether the singer of an alto part is a falsetto or a tenor. But the whole question is surrounded with difficulties, and we prefer not to dogmatise. (2.) It is difficult for us to recommend solos for you. As you live in London, your best plan would be to call at Novello's and ask for suitable material for an alto soloist. (3.) We do not know the setting you refer to, so we can express no opinion on it. But you must not regard the fact of its having been sung by first-rate choirs as proof that it is first-rate music. (4.) The dropping of the organ for an occasional verse of a hymn is a means of obtaining variety and relief, and it is surely a natural course to sing the penultimate verse unaccompanied when the last verse is a loud one demanding organ. No doubt this is the reason why you invariably find this treatment given to the hymn you name. (5.) There is no profit in arguing over a matter of taste. You dislike the work you mention, and your friend likes it. As you suggest, you may be as great a lover of music as he. Go on having the courage of your opinions, and if you don't like a thing say so boldly. (All the same, we agree with your friend.)

J. O. A. (Nigeria).—(1.) London teaching institutions approved by the Teachers' Registration Council are the R.A.M., R.C.M., Trinity College of Music, Incorporated London Academy of Music, G.S.M. This also answers your query as to the London College of Music. (2.) 'Choir Training,' by Martin (Novello), and 'The Boy's Voice,' by Bates (Curwen). (3.) You ask whether it is 'advisable for a church organist to play dance music either in public or private.' We ask, Why not? So long as it is good dance music, and he plays it well, nobody will be a penny the worse. On the contrary, many organists would improve their playing (especially on the rhythmic side) by unbending occasionally over a good fox-trot. (4.) The Dominant (Oxford University Press, Amen House, Warwick Square, E.C.4; 6*d.* monthly); Musical Opinion (Chichester Chambers, Chancery Lane, W.C.2, 6*d.* monthly); Music and Letters (14, Burleigh Street, Strand, W.C.2, 5*s.* quarterly); Musical Courier (437, Fifth Avenue, New York, 15 cents weekly). (5.) The Federation of Music Clubs, 11, Orsett Terrace, W.2. This organization will put you in touch with a club in the district you require.

W.—(1.) The only work for pianoforte and organ that we know is Hollins's 'Polonaise Brillante'; but we think it would be too difficult for your purpose. Write to Novello's for their catalogue of works for harmonium and pianoforte. The harmonium part could easily be adapted. (2.) An average church choir desirous of performing a Bach Cantata would do well to choose 'God's time is the best.' There is more than the usual amount of chorus work, and it is not unduly difficult. Solos are for alto, tenor, and bass. It is published in Tonic Sol-fa. As the solo side of these works often presents a problem, you had better write to Novello's for a few cantatas on approval, from which to choose. State your requirements as to degree of difficulty, soloists, &c.

SOTTO VOCE.—You ask why it is that certain diplomas are not recognised by the Teachers' Registration Council, and you wonder if the fact signifies that the diplomas in question are worthless. We think you should ask the Council a question of this sort, but as you have asked us, we can only say that the diplomas you refer to are quite good so far as they go, which, however, is not far enough for the requirements of good teaching. Non-recognition does not necessarily mean that they are valueless. For example, the Registration Council recognises the diploma of F.R.C.O., but not that of A.R.C.O. Yet the A.R.C.O. is far from being valueless. It does not, however, take the holder sufficiently far to indicate full qualification.

W. H. S.—We prefer to make no metronomic suggestions; the direction given, 'The crotchets very moderate,' ought to be sufficient. (For readers' benefit we say that the reference is to the tenor solo, 'Jesus Christ now is risen,' in Bach's Cantata, 'Hold in remembrance Jesus Christ.') In florid solos of this type clarity and rhythm matter far more than pace. Well-defined semiquaver passages at a moderate rate often sound quicker than they are actually, one reason no doubt being that they keep the hearer interested, whereas quick, smudgy passages don't.

BEDFORD.—It is impossible for us to suggest a programme for performers of whose abilities we know nothing. Write to Messrs. Novello, Stainer & Bell, and the Oxford University Press for specimens of Schubert part-songs for various combinations of voices. Many of Schubert's most popular songs can be had in cheap school editions from Messrs. Novello, as well as from the Oxford University Press. Ask for specimens. These, with any good Schubert song album, will provide you with all you need in these departments. It is difficult to suggest items for your little instrumental force. Write to Novello's for their special Schubert list, and make a shot for yourself.

Emélie.—You ask for pianoforte pieces by Debussy, Satie, Scriabin, &c. We suggest the following: Debussy—any one of the Twelve Preludes (first set); Florent Schmitt—'Sur le nom de Gabriel Fauré'; Scriabin—two may be suggested, one of his early period and one of the later works. For the first, one or two of the Six Preludes, Op. 13; for the second, the fourth, fifth, or sixth Sonata; Dukas—'La plainte, au loin, du faune'; Malipiero—'A Claudio Debussy'; B. J. Dale—Sonata. E. F.

J. S.—Debussy's Arabesque in G is founded upon three-part form, the parts being as follows: Part 1, bars 5 to 37; part 2, bars 37 to 61; part 3, bars 62 to the end. As general helps, compare 4 to 14 with 62 to 71, and observe their respective positions in the construction; notice the rhythmic formation from 15 to 28; the action of response between 5 and 28; the particular function of 28 to 37, and the repetition of the same at 100, &c. E. F.

D. B. J.—(1.) We do not know of 'a book on Theory that includes also Harmony, Counterpoint, &c.' Try 'Theory of Music,' by O'Neill (Novello, 1*s.* 6*d.*); for the other subjects: 'Harmony,' Kitson (Oxford University Press, 10*s.* 6*d.*); 'Counterpoint,' Bridge (Novello, 3*s.*); and 'Applied Counterpoint,' Kitson (Oxford University Press, 5*s.*). (2.) 'A History of Music,' by Stanford and Forsyth (Macmillan, 10*s.* 6*d.*).

J. A. McF.—(1.) Handel's 'Lord, remember David,' is not from an oratorio; it is an adaptation of the song, 'Rend' il sereno al ciglio,' from the opera 'Sosarme.' (2.) The Mozart phrase you quote is the commencement of the slow movement in Mozart's Violin Sonata in F (K. 377). (3.) We can discover no pianoforte solo arrangement of the Adagio from Beethoven's Sextet (Op. 81).

C. A. H.—We receive many inquiries such as yours, from people anxious to know of an organization which will give them concert engagements, but we can do no more than suggest that you try to get an audition with the B.B.C., or with a reliable London concert agent. But don't expect too much; the market is badly overstocked.

Clapton.—A good deal depends upon the pace of the song. Assuming it not too slow, we should take a half-breath after 'hard,' and carry on the phrase to 'golden.' This disregards the quaver rest marked by the composer—which we think is an improvement.

A. E. D.—We have no knowledge as to which organ scholarships at Oxford and Cambridge (if any) will be falling vacant at the end of this year. Your only plan is to work away and keep your eye on the journals in which such vacancies are advertised.

BM/VCHV.—The scheme you suggest for your seven-year-old pupil seems quite good. But of course all depends on its use, and on the aptitude of the child; and you must be prepared to modify it if necessary. That is where the aptitude of the teacher comes in.

E. A. R.—So far as we can ascertain, the only journal that inserts advertisements of cinema musicians' posts is the Kinematograph Weekly. Perhaps a reader can help 'E. A. R.' by further information.

Celt.—We have never heard that harp-playing has a detrimental effect on a pianist's fingers.

L.R.A.M.—The address of the Teachers' Registration Council is 47, Bedford Square, W.C.1.

E. P. R.—The publishers of James Lyon's Postlude in E tell us that it is out of print.

In our reply to 'H. W.' last month we stated that his description of 'a book about Bel Canto was too vague.' Mr. John E. Campbell writes pointing out that 'H. W.' probably means 'An Essay on the Bel Canto,' by Herman Klein, published by the Oxford University Press.

In our answer to 'Pompa' last month we gave the address of the Paris Conservatoire de Musique as Rue du Faubourg-Poissonière. Mr. Calvocoressi kindly writes to say that this building was pulled down in 1912 or thereabouts, and that the Paris Conservatoire is now in the Rue de Madrid, Paris, 8ème.

Church and Organ Music

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

The Annual General Meeting will be held on Saturday, July 21, at 2.30 p.m.

DISTRIBUTION OF DIPLOMAS

Members and friends are cordially invited to attend the distribution of diplomas to successful candidates at the Fellowship, Associateship, and Choir-Training Examinations on Saturday, July 21, at 3 p.m. The President, Dr. W. G. Alcock, M.V.O., will deliver an address entitled, 'The Future of the Organ and its Players,' and Mr. H. L. Balfour, Mus. Bac., will play upon the College organ the following pieces selected for the January Examinations, 1929:

FELLOWSHIP

Prelude and Fugue, C minor ... J. S. Bach
Novello, Book 7, p. 64; Augener, p. 168; Peters, Vol. II., No. 6.
Larghetto from Quintet, Op. 108 ... ...Mozart
Chorale Prelude, 'St. Mary' ... Charles Wood

ASSOCIATESHIP

Andante con moto, Sonata No. 5 ... Mendelssohn
First Movement, Sonata in C minor, No. 3, Op. 56 Guilmant

No tickets required. There will be an informal conversazione immediately after the recital, to which members and friends are invited. Tea and coffee. H. A. Harding, Hon. Secretary.

---

On the 12th and 19th of June a Choir Festival was held at Newcastle Cathedral. The choirs taking part, numbering nearly six hundred voices, were divided, one-half singing on each occasion. The music was chosen with a view to setting a standard for an ordinary parish church evensong—an excellent idea that deserves to be more generally adopted. The anthems were Gibbons's 'O Lord, increase my faith' and Tomblings's 'Come, my Way, my Truth, my Life.' For the Psalms and Canticles the pointing of 'The English Psalter' was used, and we are interested to hear that it proved to be easily manageable, and met with general approval. Mr. William Ellis accompanied and conducted, and Dr. J. E. Hutchinson played organ music before and after the service.

---

Mr. William H. Stocks has retired from Church organ work after fifty years' service. He was a pupil of Hopkins at the Temple, and received his first appointment at the age of nineteen, when he became private organist to Sir Robert Menzies. He then spent many years as organist and music-master at Dulwich College, afterwards returning to Scotland in the capacity of private organist to Sir Neil Menzies. His last post was at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Newlands. Mr. Stocks has done valuable service in the Glasgow diocese, especially in connection with Choir Festivals. The close of his seven years' work at St. Margaret's was marked by presentations from clergy, vestry, choir, and congregation.

---

Mr. William C. Webb has been appointed organ professor at Lawrence College, Appleton, Wisconsin, U.S.A., and sails at the beginning of August. During the past fifteen years Mr. Webb has done excellent and much-appreciated work at the Hampstead Garden Suburb Free Church. He will be able to continue his activities in this kind at Appleton, as he has been appointed to the Methodist Episcopal Church in that town. At the College he will have under his care two large four-manual organs. Mr. Webb's many friends on this side will wish him all success in his new and interesting sphere of work.

NORWICH CATHEDRAL

Dr. Heathcote D. Statham, organist of St. Mary's Church, Southampton, has been appointed organist of Norwich Cathedral. Dr. Statham began his musical career as a choir boy at St. Michael's College, Tenbury, and later proceeded to Gresham's School, where he studied under Mr. Geoffrey Shaw. From thence he went to Cambridge (scholarship at Caius College), and finally to the Royal College of Music, studying during this time with Stanford, Bridge, Parratt, and Charles Wood. Before going to Southampton he had held appointments at Calcutta Cathedral and at his old college, St. Michael's, Tenbury. He took his A.R.C.O. in 1920, his F.R.C.O. in 1921, and obtained his Mus.Doc. degree at Cambridge in 1923. Dr. Statham's published compositions include 'The New Master' (comic operetta for boys), Organ Rhapsody in C major, String Quartet, plantation songs arranged for sopranos and violins, and 'Forty 16th-Century Rounds' for schools. He has also transcribed from the original MSS., and published, fourteen anthems and a Service in the Dorian Mode by Dr. John Blow.

Photo by S. A. Chandler & Co., Ltd., Southampton & Exeter.

The Triennial Festival of the Norwich Diocesan Church Choral Association took place at Norwich Cathedral on May 31, when a thousand singers, representing about twenty parish churches, took part. The Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis were sung to Chambers in G; the anthem was Geoffrey Shaw's 'Hail, Gladdening Light,' and a selection from 'The Last Judgment' was also given. The singing reached a high standard. The organ accompaniments (supplemented by brass and drums) were played by Mr. Maddern Williams, and Dr. Frank Bates conducted, this being his final duty before relinquishing his post. After the service the choirs gathered in the cloisters, and feeling references to Dr. Bates's retirement were made by the Dean, and by the Doctor himself.

The organ at Great Meeting, Leicester, has been rebuilt. In connection with the re-opening, Dr. Gordon Slater, Dr. B. Burrows, and Dr. E. L. Lilley gave recitals.

The organ at Gainsborough Bridge Primitive Methodist Church, Leytonstone, was re-opened on May 30, after complete renovation by the builders, Messrs. Spurden, Rutt. Dr. Harold Darke gave a recital, playing Thomas Adams's Overture, Handel's B flat Concerto, Bach's E flat Prelude, Wolstenholme's Allegretto, Elgar's 'Imperial March,' &c.

A new organ, built by Frederic Rothwell, has been installed in Kensington New Church (Pembridge Villas). The opening recitals were given by Mr. J. Holgate, who played Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Hollins's Allegretto Grazioso and 'Morceau de Concert,' Boëllmann's Gothic Suite, &c.

Mr. Allan Brown opened a new organ at Southfields Central Hall on May 3, playing Schumann's Canon in B minor, Wolstenholme's Finale in B flat, Bach's 'Great' G minor Fugue, &c. The organ was built by Messrs. Spurden, Rutt, and is a three-manual of thirty-eight stops and eleven pistons.

Astorga's 'Stabat Mater' and Palestrina's Mass, 'Æterna Christi Munera,' were sung at a recital by the Special Service Choir at Doncaster Parish Church. Mr. H. A. Bennet conducted, and also played organ solos by Strungk and Palestrina.

We are glad to hear that Dr. Davan Wetton is making a good recovery from his recent serious illness. He asks us to express his thanks to the many friends who have sent messages and inquiries.

Schubert's 'Song of Miriam' and a selection from 'The Creation' were sung recently at Bermuda Cathedral, conducted by Mr. H. T. Gilberthorpe.

The Dean and Chapter announce that the Charles Macpherson Memorial Fund now amounts to £2,065.

Dr. A. Eaglefield Hull has resigned his position as a member of the Council of the Royal College of Organists.

NEW LIGHT ON THE ALBERT HALL ORGAN

More journalistic nonsense has been written about the organ than about most instruments, but one hardly expects to meet with examples in a leading London daily paper. The Evening Standard of June 16 contained an article, 'By a Special Correspondent,' entitled, 'In the Loft of the World's Biggest Concert Organ'—that of the Albert Hall—and contained a mass of puerility from which we quote:

> 'The strings and woods and brasses seem afloat on an ocean of sound, rocking and swinging to a gentle swell or pitching and rolling in tempest. If we are interested enough to wonder where this new enveloping sound comes from, all we can discern is an array of tall pipes that might have been erected by a playful plumber.'

The organist's hands 'are sometimes on all four manuals at once.' (The writer might have said 'always when a photograph is being taken'! We may have seen a picture of a player with both hands modestly on one manual, but if so, we have forgotten it.) We are told, too, that among the many harassing things the organist has to do is to decide 'whether the volume of strings needs assistance from the organ, or if the choir should be helped out with Vox Humana'! The choir that will be helped by the Vox Humana must be as nearly dumb as possible. As for the organ itself:

> 'A musical instrument? Rather the organ is a musical engine—an engine that can growl, whistle, sing, hum, roar, shout, coo, or swear at the will of its master in the console. He, the god of the engine, can loose anti-cyclones from the musical Azores to sweep through the upper galleries, or send such sweet zephyrs of song sighing along the outer corridors that the waitresses in the tea-room drop adulterating tears into the milk-jugs.'

The writer's confusion between cyclones and anti-cyclones may be forgiven, as he was obviously writing in a very much het-up state. But what is the Editor of the Evening Standard doing to admit such drivel as this? The journal has on its staff a recognised music critic (one who, we believe, was himself formerly an organist). Why not ask him to cast his expert eye over copy of this kind, and cut out the nonsense? The remainder (if any) might be dull, but it would not be foolish.

RECITALS

Mr. E. Emlyn Davies, Westminster Congregational Church, S.W.—Trio-Sonata No. 1 and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Symphony, second movement, Kaikhosru Sorabji.

Dr. Gordon Slater, St. Helen's, Gate Burton—Scherzo, Bairstow; Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Alla sarabanda, Vaughan Williams; Carillon, Vierne.

Mr. H. Moreton, Plymouth Guildhall—Andante, Finale, and Fuga (Sonata No. 7) and Pastoral Sonata, Rheinberger; Final, Franck; 'Cloister Garth,' Herbert Brewer; Sonata No. 1, Borowsky; Toccata-Prelude on 'Pange Lingua,' Bairstow.

Dr. Chastey Hector, Brighton Parish Church—'Gigue' Fugue, Bach; 'Unfinished' Symphony; 'Old English Air' (varied), Arne-Benedict; 'The South Wind' and 'The North Wind,' Rowley.

Mr. Bernard F. Page, Town Hall, Wellington, N.Z.—Toccata, Adagio, and Fugue in C, Bach; Meditation No. 3, Ropartz; Improvisation-Caprice No. 2, Jongen; Prière in C sharp minor, Franck.

Mr. Nicholas Choveaux, St. Agnes's, Kennington Park—Two Choral Preludes, Ambrose Porter; Two Trumpet Tunes and Air, Purcell; Allegretto grazioso, Frank Bridge; Bridal March, Parry.

Mr. F. C. Welling, Christ Church, Ware—Agitato and Cantilene, Rheinberger; Fantasy in D, Harvey Grace; Sonata No. 2, Mendelssohn; March upon a Theme of Handel, Guilmant.

Mr. Stanley Blizard, St. Stephen's Walbrook—Variations on a Theme by Beethoven, Merkel; Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach; Song of Triumph, John E. West.

Dr. C. H. Moody, Ripon Cathedral—Choral No. 3, Franck; Concerto No. 4, Handel; Evening Song, Bairstow; Chorale Prelude, 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring,' Bach; Easter Melody, with Variations, West.

Mr. R. Richardson Jones, Peterborough Cathedral—Overture in D minor, Handel; Psalm-Prelude No. 1, Howells; Sonata No. 6, Rheinberger; Two Chorale Preludes, Farrar.

Mr. Cecil Price, Parish Church, Ashby-de-la-Zouch—Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Concerto in F, Handel; Toccatina in E flat, F. H. Wood.

Dr. H. G. Ley, St. Mary's Parish Church, Slough—Sonata No. 5, first movement, Bach; Allegretto (Sonata), Elgar; Prelude in D minor, Stanford.

Mr. Eric Brough, St. Mary-le-Bow—Choral No. 1, Franck; Fantasia and Fugue in C minor, Bach; Academic Festival Overture, Brahms-Lemare.

Mr. Claude A. Forster, St. John's, Forfar—Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn; 'The Four Winds,' Rowley; Suite Gothique, Boëllmann.

Mr. George Metzler, St. Stephen's Walbrook—Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Mendelssohn; Sonata No. 6, Rheinberger; Grand Chœur, Hollins.

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Ernest A. Crisp, choirmaster and organist, Congregational Church, Anerley, S.E.

Mr. F. Vernon Curtis, choirmaster and organist, St. Michael's, Paternoster Royal, E.C.

Mr. D. L. Hawkridge, choirmaster and organist, Parish Church, Ilford, Essex.

Mr. H. Scott-Baker, organist, Christ Church, Woking.

Mr. Arthur J. Ward, choirmaster and organist, St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Newlands, Glasgow.

Letters to the Editor

[We re-open this painful matter with reluctance, and only after due consideration. It is clear that Mr. Scholes has a right to be heard concerning the charges brought against him, and also on three important points in Dr. Eaglefield Hull's letter in our June number. Our columns are open to any reply Dr. Hull may wish to make to Mr. Scholes's letter; otherwise the correspondence is closed.—Editor.]

THE ETHICS OF BORROWING

Sir,—As I was the initiator of the correspondence upon 'The Ethics of Borrowing,' and as that correspondence appears now to be ending, I hope you will accord me the usual courtesy of a few final remarks.

With you I heartily welcome the fact that the six months' correspondence has brought from Dr. Hull an apology. But I feel that in that apology there is an omission which, when it is pointed out to Dr. Hull, he will wish to rectify.

In your January issue Dr. Hull charged me with making a quotation from his preface in which I 'deliberately omitted a qualifying phrase.' In your February issue he said, 'Mr. Scholes does not even quote correctly.' In your March issue he alluded to my 'many inexactitudes, mauled quotations, misspellings, and curious claims to Russian rights.' He has also charged me with a bad motive—that of having taken up the subject not as 'a matter of public interest' but as one of 'private business.'

I think that it can only be necessary for me to point out my right (certainly moral, and I think also legal) to a withdrawal of these statements for Dr. Hull to do the proper thing. To the best of my knowledge I have not misquoted Dr. Hull to the extent of a letter or a comma; in quoting him I have been scrupulously accurate. There was no 'qualifying phrase' in that passage for me to omit. If I have mis-spelled it has been inadvertently, and I have no knowledge of the fault. I have certainly never claimed 'Russian rights' in anything whatever. As for my motives, I think that the course of the correspondence has sufficiently justified my action, and I must leave it to Dr. Hull to include, or not include, that detail in his withdrawal, as he may feel inclined.

There are several points in Dr. Hull's letter that could be taken up, but I am sure we all wish to bury the subject as quickly and decently as possible, and I will only allude to two or three which are so important that they clearly demand a word.

(1.) Dr. Hull says: 'The allegation made against me of a "violation of trust as a publisher's reader" is entirely unjustified, for the MS. concerned is a translation of an already well-known published work—and that, too, in Russia, where the European copyright does not, unfortunately, yet obtain.' This is really serious. It implies an ignorance of the law of copyright most dangerous in the case of an author, translator, and editor so active and prolific as Dr. Hull. In his own interests he should be told that copyright subsists in a translation just as much as in an original work, and that the fact that the work translated does not itself enjoy copyright does not affect the existence of copyright in the translation. To imagine an instance: I translate Molière and Dr. Hull reprints my translation; the fact that there is no copyright in Molière's plays does not affect my enjoyment of copyright in my translations. This is an elementary statement as to the law of copyright, but it seems to be necessary to make it. As for the suggestion that there is no 'violation of trust' in a publisher's reader taking matter from a mere translator . . . !

(2.) The allusion to Dr. Hull's 'sources' being 'specified' in the list of books of reference in Appendix V. is inexplicable. Appendix V. is merely a 'List of Musical Biographies and Studies in English'—a guide to further reading, such as commonly appears at the end of such books, and the sister to Appendix IV., which is a list of Gramophone Records. It is to be hoped that Dr. Hull will see this point, for if in any future editions he relies in any degree whatever upon a list of this sort as excusing him from formal acknowledgment he will not be accomplishing his desire to do the right thing.

(3.) About those 'future editions.' Nothing less than a careful study of Dr. Hull's book by himself, from beginning to end, with a scrupulous identification of every quoted passage, will suffice. The instances of plagiarism that have been pointed out to him in your columns must not for a moment be thought to exhaust the complaint. So far as I know none of us have searched the book for quotations. Personally I have merely called attention to one or two that jumped to my eye as I turned over the pages. Many chapters in the book I have never read. Since your last issue appeared the well-known American critic, Mr. Lawrence Gilman (who does not seem to have seen the present correspondence), has published a very striking two-column article on Dr. Hull's book in the New York Herald Tribune (Sunday, May 27), in which, under the title, 'How to write a Book about Music,' he makes free use of the parallel column method to call attention to some of the borrowings. Only one of his examples duplicates any of those given in your pages, the others showing lengthy unacknowledged quotations from Mr. Paul Rosenfeld's 'Musical Portraits' and from Mr. Gilman's own writings. But I think that Dr. Hull will realise that the examples any of us have quoted in your pages are no sufficient guide to him, since he has now, adopting the words of a previous author (with quotation marks, this time !), described his book as 'a posy of flowers gathered from many gardens, and in which the compiler has contributed little more than the string which tied them together.' He must then now tie lots of labels on that string !—Yours, &c.,

PERCY A. SCHOLES.

P.S.—I think I have seen announcements as to translations of the book to appear in various foreign languages. Naturally these should be held up until the complete revision is ready.—P. A. S.

THE DESTINIES OF MUSIC

SIR,—Although there is much that is probably true in Leonid Sabaneev's forecast of the music of the future, there is also much that all hopeful, earnest, and determined devotees of the Divine Art must surely take exception to. And, generally, so pessimistic an outlook must not go unchallenged, if only for the fatal effect that, if taken seriously as gospel, it is bound to have upon students and upon amateurs who look to the Musical Times for a lead in these matters.

Probably it may be true that the idiom is exhausted, and that, like Greek sculpture, it has reached the acme of perfection, and that the limitations of the art have now been realised. Certainly, the modern methods of Cacophony and Atonality can only appeal to a vitiated taste. Modal methods do not always seem to suit Equal Temperament, and they have become a fetish with some composers. The introduction of all sorts of instruments into the orchestra tends to muddiness and lack of clarity. Melody seems to have gone. All we get in a new work is a conglomeration of trivial themes of no character, beauty, or dynamic force, and, such as they are, they are buried like needles in a bundle of hay amongst orchestral muddiness or blared out by trumpets or trombones so that noisy confusion and not beauty of effect is the net result. (There are, of course, exceptions. It might, I trust, be permitted to mention Elgar and Holst amongst English composers.)

But with all this to depress us as regards the outlook there are healthy signs, surely. First, there is the revival of folk-song. There is the interest in Tudor music, and the intelligent and musicianly use of the Modes, which, if not overdone, increases our vocabulary. Bach still holds sway, and as long as that is the case there is little chance of a musical neurasthenia paralysing either performers or their audiences. Broadcasting is popularising Beethoven and all the great masters. 'A thing of beauty is a joy for ever,' and, in spite of all that the ultra-modernists may say or think, there are certain vital elements in some of the great compositions of the past which, like certain masterpieces in literature, will enable them to hold their own and force their way through the destructive criticisms and ever-changing fashions of modern innovators and of those who mistake originality for genius.

But, as M. Sabaneev points out, we want more time for meditation. We want more detachment from the distractions of modern life. We want more sincerity and a deeper grasp and insight into the inner meaning of music. We want to remember and to get into our minds that Music means something, reveals something; that it is not a mere performance, that it has a message. If it does not suggest an atmosphere or symbolise something it is a dead art—beautiful, perhaps, but only as a corpse may be beautiful. We must have reality and conviction so that every note shall tell.—Yours, &c.,

CLAUDE W. PARNELL.

Ruardean, Glos.

SIR,—M. Sabaneev, in his deeply enjoyable article last month, expresses the view that the change in the artistic organization, since its invasion by non-musicians, and the absence of love in the attitude towards music nowadays, are due to the hurried march of civilisation, which he terms 'vulgarisation'; yet he also thinks that music as a sphere of action is finished because of the advance of culture. Now, if civilisation and not culture ('the two concepts should be strictly differentiated') is causing the destruction of music, as M. Sabaneev premises, how trace the seeds of decay in the musical growth to this same culture? Is it not rather that the trouble is only temporary, that the cult of aural discomforts is a sign of the times, the passing frenzy of a sick man which a friend forgives in the belief that mental clarity will return with health?

Art, whether of light, sound, or form, cannot die. It may wane temporarily for lack of fresh air, but it is truth and is immortal. Why should the art of music cease to be, simply because ours is an age of too-clever invention, a mass-production age, a 'progressive thought' age? In the feverish speeding up of ideas musicians and others in their world have been caught up like bits of paper attracted to a fast-moving railway train—to their own destruction. Such exploitation of art brings its own punishment; the power of repose is lost, exhaustion follows on the pursuit of mere 'interestingness,' and in time the way will be ready for the expression of a wiser and better generation. The human ear craves beauty, not 'stunts.' True music, after all, partakes of the spirit, and its creation involves a lifting up of the mind and heart—not a rapid calculation of box-office returns!

As for novelty—the hope that 'from the malformed fruits on the tree of culture may spring the seeds of a new art'—now who is crying for the moon? Apparently those much-blamed innovators are seeking in good company! However, amidst so much falseness and uncertainty, small wonder if faith is shaken as well as ear-drums. Meantime we have Handel 'in modern dress' and the pure wells of centenary celebrations to draw upon. Between the past and the present, Heaven help us to foresee a brighter future!—Yours, &c.,

F. A. GRIFFIN.

Room F*a*, Parliamentary Floor,
House of Lords, S.W.1.

DIPLOMAS

SIR,—Recent issues of your journal have contained correspondence and editorial reference to examinations conducted by certain proprietary bodies.

It is assumed by some people that the question of professional recognition depends upon such minor points of detail as the excellence of the syllabus or the academic distinction of the examiners. I submit that these points have no bearing on the subject, and only fog the main issue. The principle involved is one of 'responsibility.'

If those who practise music as a profession constitute a profession, then they have a duty to the public; and the profession cannot, as a profession, publicly recognise or support any institution which is irresponsible.

Institutions so constituted that their income and property may only be devoted to the furtherance of their aims and objects, such as Universities, chartered institutions, or institutions incorporated under licence of the Board of Trade for educational or artistic purposes, are responsible public bodies. Their first duty is to the public, and this public responsibility carries with it professional recognition.

Institutions, societies, or companies registered as of limited or of unlimited liability are, from the public point of view, irresponsible. The first duty of their directors is to their shareholders; they are not amenable to public criticism, and cannot, therefore, receive professional recognition or support.

That is the principle involved, and it is a vital principle, which no profession can disregard without prejudicing its status. The public responsibilities of a profession form the foundation for all rules of professional etiquette.

Those who practise music as a profession are either members of a great and learned profession, or they are engaged merely in a form of middle-class casual labour.

If they are in the second category, then they have no public responsibilities and there is an end of the matter; but, if they constitute a profession, then there is no alternative: the public responsibilities of their profession demand that they recognise only those responsible institutions which are amenable to public criticism.—Yours, &c.,

F. EAMES
(Gen. Secretary, I.S.M.).

LONDON ORPHAN SCHOOL

SIR,—I shall be greatly obliged if you will be so kind as to put a note in the next edition of your paper asking readers who are subscribers to the London Orphan School at Watford to be good enough to give their votes to Noel Howard Eldridge, age nine and a half years, whose father, Lieut. Eldridge, was Director of Music of the Band of the 1st and 2nd Life Guards, and who died recently at the early age of forty-two, from pneumonia, leaving a widow and twin children, boy and girl. Lieut. Eldridge had done his best by insuring his life heavily, and from the result of such insurance the widow draws £60 a year, but, including his pension of £45 and the children's allowances of £32, her total income is only £137.

Lieut. Eldridge was born in the Rifle Brigade, and enlisted in that regiment as a boy. His first appointment as bandmaster was to the 2nd Battn. The Durham Light Infantry, and he remained with that regiment until specially selected for the Life Guards.

Efforts are being made to secure the election of both children to the School, where they will be assured of the education and start in life they would have had had their father lived, but it will be a very hard task, as, being twins, there are only three elections before they attain the age limit.

Votes will be gratefully received by me at the address below, or by Mrs. Eldridge, 'Melita,' Westway, Harpenden, Herts.

ERNEST W. BIRT
(Lieut.-Col. late The Durham Light Infantry).

2, Evelyn Mansions,
Queen's Club Gardens, W.14.

ABSOLUTE PITCH

SIR,—Will you allow me to plead the facts of geography in extenuation of my tardiness, and to join in the 'absolute pitch' discussion?

I am the unfortunate possessor of a sense of absolute pitch—although, strictly speaking, as one of your correspondents pointed out, it is not a sense but a special form of musical memory. It has, of course, its uses. In this country the two chief uses for me seem to be that I am an infallible speed indicator for a gramophone, and that I need no tuning-fork to tell me when a class is singing a song (as often happens) a tone or more too low.

But its discomforts are many. It happens that I was brought up on the ordinary flat pitch, and therefore at every concert where English concert pitch is used I am constantly distressed because the music is being played a semitone too high. In reading a score I find every instrument a transposing instrument. I am struggling to learn the clarinet, and its natural difficulties are increased by the fact that the note I get for a certain finger-position is never the note I am told to expect. Worst of all is the almost hopeless difficulty I find in playing on any pianoforte that is not in the 'right' pitch—i.e., the pitch I was brought up on. A constant effort of will is needed to keep my fingers from slipping into the set of keys that give me the sounds I want—and then it is all up with muscular memory of the piece!

Of course, it is only a piece of memory, so there is hope that constant use of different pitches will obliterate it—but I seem to have made little progress so far. I only wish I could remember other things as successfully!—Yours, &c.,

W. E. WARD.

Achimota College,
Accra, Gold Coast Colony.

[Having willingly re-opened this correspondence for the benefit of a distant reader, we close it again. Incidentally we are interested to note that Mr. Ward's experience bears out our view, expressed some months ago, as to a sense of absolute pitch being very far from an unmixed blessing.—EDITOR.]

PROPOSED TESTIMONIAL TO MR. JOHN GRAHAM

SIR,—May we beg the courtesy of your columns for a notice of a testimonial to Mr. John Graham for which the Stratford and East London Musical Festival has assumed responsibility?

Mr. Graham has announced his resignation as secretary of the Festival after serving since 1882, and his record of organizing fifty such festivals (including four at North London) must be unique. It may be observed that Mr. Graham has passed his seventieth birthday, and feels that he must now limit his activities.

His special experience in competitive musical festivals and as a journalist, and his active interest for many years in folk-song and dance, may be said without exaggeration to have made his genial personality known throughout the British Isles and beyond. An appeal based merely on his work at Stratford, important as that work has been, would therefore hardly be adequate.

The Stratford Festival considers that the occasion must be honoured in tangible form by a presentation and some celebration, and is taking steps accordingly. It invites the co-operation of all persons who wish to be associated in the matter.

Any gifts from other bodies or persons will be acknowledged as such, and will be designated and applied as may be desired by the donors.

Mr. H. A. Donald, of 57, Woodcote Road, Wanstead, London, E.11, has kindly undertaken the duties of hon. treasurer, and will be pleased to receive remittances at that address.—Yours, &c.,

C. ERNEST COWARD
(Chairman of Committee).

THE LARYNX AGAIN

SIR,—I shall be obliged if you will permit me to answer my critics, though I find it very difficult to reply to people who have no constructive criticism to offer, and who merely tell me that I am wrong. They, in common with the rest of humanity, do not realise that it is the larynx which is the organ and not the voice.

There can be only one right way of using this muscle, and in the right use of it lies the whole technique of singing—which ought to be as exact a technique as the training of the muscles of the fingers for either the pianoforte or violin.

The German Lieder singer to whom Mr. Field-Hyde refers certainly made no discovery, as there are thousands of people teaching the lowering of the larynx—though it is mostly called 'opening the throat,' which is, in effect, the same thing, as one cannot do the latter without having first done the former. As well tell anyone to open the mouth to whistle as to tell him to open the throat to sing, for it is a physiological impossibility, but the attempt to do so is fraught with most disastrous consequences.

All this wordy warfare is utterly futile, as words, like figures, can apparently be made to prove anything. The only test of any value must be practical, and that test should be the effect of any method on very bad throats. I maintain, and am prepared to give proof of this, that the raising of the larynx—under expert guidance, be it well understood, for it is not an easy matter to do it in the right way—will, without fail, and almost instantaneously, wipe out any form of throat trouble, even if it is chronic and of years' standing.

Let anyone who will, ask a throat specialist what is the condition of a singer's throat who consults him for recurrent attacks of laryngitis, and he will tell them that it is a stretched throat, and this condition is caused entirely by a dropped or lowered larynx. It is against Nature, and is the only cause of all the vocal defects which are causing such merciless criticism of the modern singer—who is not to blame in this matter, but who is the victim of unscientific methods.—Yours, &c.,

7, Clifton Gardens, Maida Vale, W.9. ETHEL AUBREY.

---

SIR,—I feel impelled to give my testimony to the efficacy of the raised larynx, as, seeing Mrs. Aubrey's letter in the Evening News some six months ago, in reply to Sir Henry Wood's articles, I tried for myself, simply on reading the letter, what raising the larynx would do to remove a break which had persisted in spite of the various methods I had tried during the preceding five years. However, feeble as—obviously—was my unaided effort without proper guidance, the result was so amazing that I was determined to go further into the matter; and after six months of concentrated study on these lines, I have proved beyond question that it is the only right way to sing. After but two weeks of careful practice, it removed the break which had resisted the conscientious efforts of two first-class singing masters. But, what is more amazing still, having a naturally high coloratura soprano voice, I have now developed about half a dozen low, vibrant chest-notes which previously were entirely non-existent!

What I have said can, if challenged, be supported by various credible witnesses.

Trusting you will find room in your columns for this unbiassed testimony.—Yours, &c.,

'Alston,' Queens Road, Teddington. CYNTHIA BILTON RAWLE.

---

SIR,—May one who has tested and proved Mrs. Ethel Aubrey's method of the high larynx in singing be allowed a short space? I write as one who, having commenced vocal study with a voice of good quality and compass, was left, after having lessons with various teachers who were advocates of the 'open throat,' practically voiceless and with a chronic bad throat.

My attention was attracted by Mrs. Aubrey's letters (which appeared in the Musical Times just over four years ago), and I got into touch with her. The results of my study with her are sufficiently remarkable to afford convincing proof as to which method is the right one. My throat was cured almost at once, and now, after four years' study, my voice is better than it ever was—in compass, quality, and flexibility.

May I draw very special attention to the fact that I have worked hard for four years (and am not yet finished), in view of the remark of your correspondent, Mr. G. T. Pinches, who invites anyone 'to experiment with a high larynx' and judge the result? And he calls it 'an easy matter'! It is one of the most difficult things to do correctly; and even were it easy, does Mr. Pinches imagine that anything can be done at a first attempt with results which are other than feeble? One might as well put a violin into the hands of a beginner and expect him to produce the tone of a Kreisler!

Mr. F. C. Field-Hyde deprecates 'direct manipulation' of the larynx. It is just that which is needed. When people will realise that it is the instrument which must be trained, and not the voice, we may hope for singers whose technique shall be flawless.—Yours, &c.,

20, Hilda Road, S.W.9. NELLIE QUINT.

---

AN ANGLO-AMERICA MUSICIANS' 'FIELD DAY'

SIR,—May I be allowed the only means possible of catching the eye of musicians from distant parts of the Empire and from the United States of America who may be at present in this country?

A 'First Field Day for Music Educationists—British and American,' will be held in London on Saturday, July 7, under the joint presidency of Sir Henry Hadow and of Dr. Walter Damrosch, of New York. It is to open at Æolian Hall, at 9.30 a.m., with a reception jointly by Sir Alexander Mackenzie (representing Britain) and Mrs. Francis Clark (representing America). Discussions on all branches of musical education from the elementary school to the University, will continue during the day, and in these many prominent British and American music educationists have promised to take part. The proceedings will close with a dinner, over which Sir Hugh Allen will preside, and at which Sir Landon Ronald will move a proposition that arrangements should be made for a joint British and American Conference (probably lasting a week, and possibly at Oxford or Cambridge or in Switzerland) in 1929.

All musicians and educationists will be welcomed at any of the day's proceedings, of which further particulars will be sent on application to myself.—Yours, &c.,

121, Bedford Court Mansions, W.C.1. PERCY A. SCHOLES

---

NEW YORK BOY CHOIRS

SIR,—I have been much interested in your correspondents' observations regarding the boy choirs of New York. However, I fail to see why comparison of New York choirs should be made. I have no desire to add to the number of critics and judges. The purpose of this letter is to state that the authorities of St. Thomas's Church, New York, did a splendid thing for Church music, boy voice-culture, and Church musicians when they appointed Dr. Tertius Noble from York Minster to St. Thomas's. As a man, composer of Church music, solo organist, accompanist, conductor, and choirmaster, he has been an enormous success. If there are others like him in England, there is plenty of room and demand for them in the U.S.A. The choir of St. Thomas's, New York, is regarded as a model in this great country. I visit my native land, England, every year, and I have long ago come to the conclusion that there is need for waking up the music in English Cathedrals and parish churches. The word 'dead' describes much of it very fully. It is a dangerous characteristic of the rut that few of us know when we are in it. We have plenty of 'organ grinders' in America. We need expert choirmasters and all-round musicians for our church posts.—Yours, &c.,

Studio 609, Steinway Hall, New York, U.S.A. FRANK H. MATHER.

A BEETHOVEN DISSONANCE

SIR,—In the June number of the Musical Times, Mr. Felix White has called attention to a passage in the Rondo-Finale of Beethoven's Sonata in D, Op. 10, No. 3, instancing it as a clashing of tonic and dominant harmonies, such as is found in the first movement of the 'Eroïca' Symphony.

Is it not also possible to regard the D and B flat of the R.H. at the second bar of the quotation as a somewhat bald and acid use of a thirteenth and eleventh? That is how I feel the passage.—Yours, &c.,

E. T. SWEETING.

'Rydal,' Lemsford Road,
St. Albans.

WOBBLING B.B.C. SINGERS

SIR,—I notice you have instituted a 'wireless column' in the Musical Times. I am writing to beg that therein you will from time to time, until the nuisance is abated, deal faithfully with that irritating and vicious habit of unceasing tremolo, so characteristic of the broadcast singers of to-day, who make use of it from beginning to end of their turn, to the great exasperation of the more musicianly of their hearers.

I have written to the B.B.C. about it, who reply that there is nothing more than the natural vibration of the singing voice, intensified by the mechanism of transmission and reception. This one cannot accept, for there are rare and blessed occasions on which they send through a voice, usually a baritone, free from this blemish.

This vice of unceasing tremolo, introduced by Continental singers, is spreading to our chorus singers; and, such is the power of pernicious example, will doubtless soon infect our church choirs, unless vigorous measures are taken to check the disease.

Trusting you will bring your great influence to bear on the B.B.C. in the direction of purer vocalisation.—Yours, &c.,

E. A. SHAW.

Lulworth, Cheltenham.

'THE NATURE OF HARMONY'

SIR,—I am afraid it is not Mr. J. Morrison who has read 'rather hurriedly,' but Dr. Shirlaw who has written more hurriedly, although he has taken such a long time in replying to his critics. Most certainly 16 : 19 : 24 and 6 : 7 : 9 are minor triads; it would be as reasonable to deny that c-e on the pianoforte is not a major third, because the ratio is not precisely 4 : 5. However, I am not concerned with Dr. Shirlaw's criticism of Mr. Morrison. He has blundered much more seriously in his attempt to reply to me.

Dr. Shirlaw commences this reply with a serious inaccuracy. He 'notices' that I am 'quite unable to discover any resemblance between the proportions that respectively determine the major and minor harmonies.' What I am quite unable to discover is the relevancy of the figures employed by Dr. Shirlaw in his musical illustrations. The major common chord may be represented by whole numbers (4, 5, 6), and the minor common chord by fractions ($\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{5}$, $\frac{1}{6}$) in reverse order; in which case we have the relative vibration figures. Or the major chord may be represented by fractions and the minor by whole numbers, in which case we have the relative chord-lengths. But to represent both chords by whole numbers, as Dr. Shirlaw does, is (to use his own expression) a childish game.

In 'The Nature of Harmony and Metre' (p. 17 of Heathcote's translation), Hauptmann says: 'The minor triad thus being of passive nature, and having its starting-point above (not its most real starting-point, yet that which is determined as unity) . . .' The italics are mine. Here we see the great theorist enamoured of a will-o'-the-wisp, but declining to follow where it would lead him. Riemann went a step further, and persuaded himself that a series of undertones existed in Nature; starting from C, this, of course, gave the common chord of F minor, and comparing it with the chord of C major, he called it the 'turn of harmony' (see his 'Harmony Simplified,' English ed., p. 44). But even he did not venture to go the whole distance and call f-a♭-c the chord of C minor. On the contrary, he was at great pains to explain why, in the 'underclang,' the best note for doubling is the under fifth (ibid., p. 12). The mere appearance of this chord of six notes, as Dr. Shirlaw has written it (Musical Times, March, p. 211), ought to have warned him that he was on the wrong tack; the chord looks as though it were standing on its head.

If one rejects the theory of the polarity of the two modes, where is the sense of beginning the minor 'at the wrong end'? If the minor mode has any origin in acoustics comparable to that of the major, such origin has yet to be discovered. Meanwhile we must rest content with the simple and obvious fact that it is produced by the transposition of the two thirds which go to make up the perfect fifth.—Yours, &c.,

ARTHUR T. FROGGATT.

5, Richmond Mansions,
Denton Road, Twickenham.

SIR,—Referring to Dr. Matthew Shirlaw's letter on p. 535 of the June number, I feel that we must congratulate you on including the interesting series of articles, and Dr. Shirlaw on his able researches.

Whatever may be the scientific or æsthetic value of the problems concerned, no one can doubt Dr. Shirlaw's eminent qualifications as a musician, historian, and philosopher, to be the expositor of such questions and the theory of their being. Dr. Froggatt also is cogent, with his questions as to the characteristics of the octave, and Mr. Morrison has some interesting questions on the pseudo-triads of the series.

I hope such problems may always continue to receive the hospitality of your valuable space. I think, however, that we often increase their difficulty by restricting their statement to conventional terms of the practician. Scientific theory (or philosophical truth) is no respecter of any particular aspect, and in this case, if we direct attention not so much to the objective notes as to the 'invariant' factors of tonality, to wit, Intervals, we shall find that such problems as those of Dr. Shirlaw's will be found to present a much simpler appearance. In fact, the pattern of a tonal combination appears almost as a visual image. Now the pattern of a major triad can only reappear undistorted in one other form, viz., the complete obverse, which is the minor triad.

An interval may be nothing objectively, but inside the ear it is a very real thing on the sensorium, something that can be recognised and named, apart from any conventions.

Does not this fact suggest a particular course for our tonal investigations?—Yours, &c.,

92, Cheriton Road,
Folkestone.

JOHN L. DUNK.

THE SMALLEST FOUR-MANUAL ORGAN

SIR,—As the designer, in 1908, of the concert-room organ at Trinity College of Music, I was interested in Mr. Thomas Curry's appreciative letter in your June issue. I did my best with the somewhat limited cubic space at my disposal by endeavouring to provide an organ the console of which should resemble that of a big church or town hall instrument, but with a refined chamber tone which should not interfere too seriously with the lessons given in the other College teaching rooms. I rather prided myself on the success of the Double Dulciana, soft open 16-ft. common to both Great and Pedal claviers. For some time I hesitated upon the choice of a single reed stop for the Swell, but eventually decided in favour of an Oboe instead of a louder reed (Horn, or Cornopean).

I well remember hearing Mr. E. H. Lemare's recital, mentioned by your correspondent, as well as a wonderfully fine extemporization given—after an organ examination at the College—by my lamented friend (and sometime pupil) 'Charlie' Macpherson, of St. Paul's. I confess, however, that I was less fortunate in the carrying out of a later design for a small three-manual students' practice organ (with two on Swell, one on both Great and Choir, and one on Pedal), which was erected in one of the larger class-rooms in the College by a rather matter-of-fact builder, who lacked the artistic vision and feeling of 'Harry' Vincent, of Sunderland, who built the four-manual.—Yours, &c.,

C. W. PEARCE
(Emeritus Director of Studies, Trin. Coll. Mus.).

ONE-HANDED PIANISTS

SIR,—Every experienced teacher will agree with Mr. Alec Rowley as to the need of catering for the unfortunate pianist deprived of the use of one arm. Realising the neglect in this direction, some months ago Mr. F. Percival Driver and I started collaborating in a scheme of pianistic work for the left-hand alone, and in a lesser degree for the right hand alone, the latter being less liable to damage.

For the benefit of those seeking this particular class of teaching material it may not be inappropriate to give the information that a series of graded albums are now appearing (published by Messrs. Boosey), under the auspices of Mr. Driver and myself, entitled, 'Single-Handed Pieces and Studies.'—Yours, &c.,

GERTRUDE AZULAY.

10, Buckland Crescent, N.W.3.

'Improving the Classics'—Too late for our June number came a long letter from Mr. Clinton Gray-Fisk, to which we wrote an equally long reply. We regret that an unexpected call on our space at the last moment compels us to hold the correspondence over. —EDITOR.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Pianist (gentleman, moderate player) wishes to meet violinist for mutual practice. One evening weekly. —61, Dowanhill Road, Catford, S.E.6.

Violinist wishes to join quartet or trio for practice of chamber and other music. Or to meet pianist for mutual practice. Leytonstone and district. — W. H. B., c/o Musical Times.

Young lady pianist, attempting silver medal examination, wishes to meet another for mutual help in ear-tests, &c. S.W. district.—O. K., c/o Musical Times.

Lady pianist and contralto vocalist wishes to meet soprano vocalist or lady violinist for mutual practice. Mornings or afternoons. Harrow district.—E. C., c/o Musical Times.

Piccolo player wishes to join amateur orchestra for practice.—W. G. BELLMAN, 67, Aston Street, Birmingham.

Pianist (moderate player, lover of Bach) wishes to meet other amateurs for study and enjoyment of that composer.—F. M. K., c/o Musical Times.

Tenor vocalist wishes to meet accompanist for mutual practice.—VOCALIST, 441, Moseley Road, Birmingham.

Violinist available for practice of classical music. Paddington district or near.—ARCO, c/o Musical Times.

Lady violinist and 'cellist wish to meet good pianist for mutual practice of sonatas and trios. S.E. district.—M. H. F., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist (gentleman), graduating for orchestral work, wishes to meet other instrumentalists, or would join trio, for mutual practice. Wimbledon.—F. T., c/o Musical Times.

Lady vocalist (advanced) wishes to meet pianist (lady) for mutual practice of classical music. Evenings. N.W.6 district.—A. L., c/o Musical Times.

Experienced amateur violinist wishes to join good orchestra, quartet, or trio. Southall or W. London district.—E. S. C., 71, North Hyde Road, Hayes, Middlesex.

Pianist (gentleman) wishes to meet vocalist or instrumentalist for mutual practice. Hounslow district or near any District Railway station.—L. B. S., c/o Musical Times.

Sharps and Flats

'Pavane pour nue infante . . .' (Debussy).—Concert Programme.

Anything that I have done has been a matter of instinct and not study. To my knowledge, there has never been a great composer who did not study. Men have become successful composers without inspiration, but never without study.—George Gershwin.

What's the matter with inspiration, George? . . . But otherwise you're right. If Schubert, after writing the immortal B minor Symphony, was going to study counterpoint, why shouldn't George Gershwin study counterpoint after writing the Rhapsody in Blue?—Musical Courier.

I've been singing syncopation for twenty-two years, and if I'd been singing it for another ten years I'd be that much younger to-day.—Sophie Tucker.

I have finished at the Piccadilly Hotel, and am going on a tour of concert work. An artist cannot really give of his best when he realises that he has to convince the customers that his music is better than the steak and chips or the sweetbread or something in front of them.—De Groot.

Verse tragedy has gone. So, in another art, has oratorio. And opera is going; since it drags out a precarious existence supported by the subsidies of wealthy people and imposed by them upon a suffering proletariat, which will probably begin the Social Revolution by burning down the opera houses.—Philip Guedalla.

Many symphonies would be popular to-day if they had been left unfinished. It was the finishing which finished them.—Clarence Lucas.

'OYSTERS SING TOO MUCH'

Headline in Daily Paper.

Obviously practising to become oyster Pattis.—Punch.

Each item was interrupted very faithfully and very effectively.—Concert notice in local paper.

The winners sang in a style different from any of the other choirs. They moulded the first phrase and it melted like water into the sand. They sang as though the music belonged to something—the Church. One noted the absence of passion, and the presence of compassion. — Report of Competition Festival in Canadian paper.

The singing of the anthem was specially commendable, being punctuated with a never increasing crescendo.—Local paper.

How Samson can 'fall for' the synthetic Delilah that Saint-Saëns has drawn is inexplicable to me, except on the assumption that he is by nature such hyper-inflammable stuff that the Theatres Committee of the London County Council ought to see that there are no naked lights in the place on 'Samson and Delilah' nights.—Ernest Newman.

I play the same pieces to-day that I played twenty years ago. They are as popular now as they were then — 'Madame Butterfly,' 'Roses of Picardy,' 'La Bohème,' 'The Lost Chord.' . . . I have played 'La Bohème' ten thousand times. I am superstitious about it, and play it first wherever I go; I wouldn't dare to vary the procedure.—De Groot.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times of July, 1868:

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—In consequence of the sudden withdrawal of all pecuniary aid from Her Majesty's Government, it has been resolved by the Special Committee appointed at a General Meeting of the Directors, Subscribers and Professors of the Institution, on the 2nd of May, to make an APPEAL to the general public, with a view to raise an adequate fund for the future provision of the Institution. A SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION LIST has therefore been opened at the LONDON AND COUNTY BANK, Hanover Square; and the names of those who are willing to become contributors, either as Annual Subscribers or Donors, will be received and duly acknowledged by the Members of the Committee, as well as by the Secretary; by whom also copies of the Special Report, issued by the Committee, will be forwarded on application—By Order,

C. A. BARRY,
Secretary to the Special Committee.

Royal Academy of Music, Tenterden Street, Hanover Square.

THE result of the Annual Musical Examination of the Society of Arts, conducted by Mr. John Hullah, has just been made public. 77 certificates have been awarded, 21 of the first class, 26 of the second, and 30 of the third class. There are also two prizes of £5 and £3 respectively, offered annually. Last year, both these prizes, as well as 10 out of the 12 first-class certificates, were taken by Tonic Sol-faists. This year again, both the prizemen, and 15 out of the 21 first-class certificates, come from the same ranks. We understand that the Sol-faists are now asking the Council of the Society of Arts to institute a higher examination, conducted in their own notation, grounding their appeal on the fact that for two years they have formed a majority of those who have received certificates.

WE understand that the Monster Tower Drums which were used at the Handel Festival this year were originally manufactured for the Great Handel Festival held in Westminster Abbey, A.D. 1784. They were called "Tower" drums owing to the fact that one of the heads was made from the skin of the celebrated lion known as the 'Monster Leo,' which was exhibited at the menagerie kept at the Tower of London about that period—a circumstance now almost forgotten.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

The students' chamber concert on May 31 was unusually interesting. To begin with there was some excellent organ playing by Mr. Edward Power Biggs in the first movement of Widor's Symphony No. 5, in F, Op. 42, and four young men gave a tasteful performance of the third movement of Debussy's Quartet, Op. 10. It is always interesting to listen to new works, in spite of the many disappointments suffered in the process. Mr. Yelland Richards's Fantasie-Sonata in D minor, with the composer at the pianoforte, is, however, far too long, and is handicapped by the first of the four movements, marked lento tenebroso. The whole thing is too ambitious, and Mr. Richards may be reminded that a pint pot will never contain the contents of a quart. Montague Phillips, an old student, was represented by the Intermezzo (Allegretto grazioso) movement from his String Quartet in D. It is pleasant music, and was played in attractive style by four male students. Miss Molly Ivorson, who comes from South Africa, has a pretty voice and sings well. Both de Falla's 'Nana' and Delibes's 'Les Filles de Cadiz' were given with point and a good deal of piquancy.

The orchestral concert at Queen's Hall on Tuesday, June 12, was a great success. Sir Henry Wood conducted Elgar's Introduction and Allegro for strings, and I have heard many worse performances from well-known professional orchestras—indeed, without exaggeration, it has seldom been better played. The four young women, Misses Phyllis Macdonald, Adna Ryerson, Winifred Copperwheat, and Joan Mulholland—the solo quartet—may be congratulated on doing their part in first-rate fashion. Incidentally, on June 28, these same four players brought to a successful conclusion a great and unique enterprise. During the last nine months they have played all of Haydn's String Quartets—eighty-three in number. It has been quite a remarkable adventure, and Mr. Lionel Tertis has every right to be proud of his pupils. To go on with the tale of the concert, Mr. Eric Brough conducted his own Symphony in D minor. It is in one movement, and like most youthful efforts is distinctly reminiscent, often of Elgar. Still Elgar is our greatest composer, and a good mentor. Mr. Brough shows promise, and when he has acquired the trick of knitting his efforts more closely, may be encouraged to try again. Of late the Academy has produced a good crop of men singers, to mention only Mr. Roy Henderson and Mr. Arthur Fear. Another may be added to the list. Mr. Edgar Elmes sang Hans Sachs's Monologue most creditably, and it will be of interest to hear him in the opera during the New Scala Week, July 9-14.

The three operas to be given are 'Carmen' on Monday and Friday, July 9 and 13, at 8 p.m.; 'Madame Butterfly' on Tuesday and Thursday, July 10 and 12, at 8.15 p.m., and a Saturday matinée, July 14, at 2.30 p.m.; 'The Mastersingers' on Wednesday and Saturday, July 11 and 14, at 7 p.m. It is a happy idea to repeat 'The Mastersingers,' for its success last year was undoubted. Mr. Julius Harrison, who is in charge of the opera class, will conduct all the performances.

Æolian Hall was full on Friday evening, June 15, when the Virtuoso String Quartet, assisted by Miss Harriet Cohen and Mr. E. A. Chapman, gave a concert, the proceeds of which were handed to the Students' Aid Fund. J. B. McEwen's Quartet in C minor was played for the first time. It is a musicianly and melodious work, most grateful to the ears, and, like everything this composer does, well put together. There followed Arnold Bax's Quintet in G minor, for pianoforte and strings, and York Bowen's Quintet in C minor, for horn and strings. An all-British and an all-Academy evening.

The annual dinner of the R.A.M. Club will take place at the Trocadero Restaurant on Friday, July 20.

The reception by the R.A.M. Club on Saturday, June 16, proved to be a most exciting evening. The guest of honour, Ernst von Dohnányi, brought with him his Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra (a hundred and ten players), Dr. Franz von Szeklyhide (first tenor of the Royal Opera, Budapest), Emil Telmányi (the violinist), and Otto Berg (conductor of the Royal Opera, Budapest). Needless to say Duke's Hall was crammed to its utmost capacity. The programme of music is worth placing on record: Overture, 'Leonora' No. 3; 'Ruralia Hungarica' (Dohnányi); Variations on a Nursery Song, with Dohnányi at the pianoforte, conducted by Berg; and Rhapsody No. 1 (Liszt). So great was the enthusiasm that the 'Rakoczy' March was added as an encore. So much has already been written of the merits of this fine orchestra that there is no occasion to enter into details, but I should like to say that the 'Leonora' was given a splendid performance. Miss Katharine Goodson received the guests, in the absence of the President, Sir Henry Wood, who was on the Continent, and afterwards proposed a vote of thanks to Dohnányi and his colleagues, which was seconded by Dr. McEwen, and enthusiastically supported by everybody present. The concert was a red-letter event in the annals of the Club.

F.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Three departments of the work of the College have given a taste of their quality since the last issue of these notes. The dramatic class gave two performances of Mrs. Madeleine Ryley's romantic comedy, 'Mice and Men,' with incidental music for small orchestra specially written by Leonard Isaacs, a student of the College. The production was under the direction of Mr. Cairns James, and was highly successful. The operatic class, besides paying attention to répertoire work this term, has had 'Figaro' and 'Louise' in preparation. The first of these, compressed into three Acts, was given two performances last month, under the direction of Mr. T. C. Fairbairn, with a full orchestra conducted by Mr. H. Grunebaum, in the presence of large audiences. The orchestral classes have given three concerts, the most interesting, perhaps, being that of the First Orchestra, when Dame Ethel Smyth's Jubilee was celebrated by a performance of 'On the Cliffs of Cornwall,' from her opera, 'The Wreckers,' and a rarely heard Symphony by Gustav Mahler, a composer whose music is not much known here, was also played. Of other events of the month a pianoforte recital by Mr. Arthur Alexander, a distinguished member of the teaching staff, stands out as the conspicuous achievement of a fine artist; and a Patron's Fund Rehearsal devoted to performances by pupils of Mr. Tobias Matthay, in honour of his seventieth birthday, proved a fitting tribute to a master of his craft.

The annual competition for open scholarships resulted in the following awards being made: Composition—Helen S. Hunter (S. Shields); Pianoforte—George M. Child (Birmingham), Irene Kohler (London), Flora A. H. Shaw (Belfast); Pauer Memorial Exhibition—Margaret H. Watts (London); Singing—Elisabeth Aveling (London), Eric T. Grant (Bottlesford, Wilts), Eleanor King-Turner (Fairford, Glos.), John Lowther (Heywood, Lancs); Violin—Helen P. James (Great Malvern), Myer Phallis (Leeds), Annie Wainwright (Leeds); Violoncello—James Whitehead (Rossendale, Lancs); Flute—John Francis (London); Hautboy—Arnold Fawcett (London).

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The rehearsals for the usual terminal invitation orchestral concert at Queen's Hall on July 7 are very promising, and among the interesting items to be played on the occasion is Saint-Saëns's novel 'musical joke,' 'Le carnaval des animaux.'

Within a fortnight of this concert a chamber music and choir concert will be given at Grotrian Hall, and the Offenbach opera, 'Madame Favart,' will be produced at the Scala Theatre.

Mr. E. Beck Slinn, a former scholar of the College, has been appointed Director of Music of the Peterhead area of the Aberdeenshire Education Authority.

'HIAWATHA' AS A MASQUE

It was not a 'dramatic' version of 'Hiawatha' that Mr. Fairbairn produced at the Albert Hall, but a very picturesque masque, and in view of the present state of opera it may well be worth while for young composers with a taste for the stage to study the possibilities of a form which flourished in England more vigorously than elsewhere. Just now the music-drama of Wagner and Verdi has no imitators, for the simple reason that no sensible composer will dare to challenge those men on their own ground. Even Puccini after long devotion to romantic ideals turned to 'Turandot,' in which the elements of opera are found side by side with the elements of the masque. Strauss's 'Helen in Egypt' is masque much more than opera. In the circumstances it may well be that the very successful production of 'Hiawatha' will lead to other experiments of a similar nature—Elgar's 'Caractacus' would be a capital subject—and perhaps a revival of some old masque would lead to the writing of new masques.

If a young composer were to set his heart on masque writing he could obtain very helpful suggestions from Mr. Fairbairn, whose showmanship deserves much praise. Dr. Malcolm Sargent, again, could tell him all he needs to know about ensemble, for the ensemble was admirable. And if, having written his score, he were to look round for likely interpreters, the programme of the 'Hiawatha' production would suggest the names of very able and intelligent exponents. But the programme should not be trusted implicitly. It contained the name of Miss Miriam Licette, who was then singing Desdemona at Covent Garden.

It was a good show to which the direct, fresh music of Coleridge-Taylor contributed its share. But the music we knew. What we did not all know, and the production demonstrated, was that there are legitimate uses for the Albert Hall.

B. V.

H.M. ROYAL MARINES BAND, CHATHAM

Under a recent regulation lowering the age of retirement in the Royal Marines, Captain Charles Hoby left the service on June 12, being promoted to the rank of Major. Under his conductorship the R.M. Band has done twenty years of excellent concert work at Chatham. With the exception of one season during the war, concerts have been given regularly during every winter by the band in its orchestral capacity, apart from its activities throughout the country as a military wind band. (The forty to forty-five players are what is known as 'double-handed musicians,' that is, available either as orchestral or military band performers.) A list of the music performed during the twenty years covers a wide field. The Symphonies number forty—Beethoven (nine), Haydn (seven), Mozart (four), Tchaikovsky (three), Dvorák (three), Brahms (three), Franck, Borodin, Gade, Glazunov, Svensden, &c.

The seventy Overtures include practically all the classical examples, with modern ones by Mackenzie, Goossens, Moussorgsky, Stanford, Berlioz, Brent-Smith, &c. The Suites number over a hundred, and range from Giles Farnaby to Elgar, Holst, and Quilter. The lists of light music show a quality too rarely met with in this department of military band activities. British music is well represented in all departments. Clearly the musical public of the Chatham district owes much to Major Hoby, and it is to be hoped that his successor will continue a policy founded on such sound and catholic taste.

COVENT GARDEN OPERA SEASON

The second 'Ring' had some points of superiority over the first performance, notably in Madame Frida Leider's Brünnhilde. Great taste and intelligence have gone to the making of this fine artist's singing. If only the gift of brains were more general among the stentors of the operatic stage! Madame Leider uses her voice for all it is worth. She knows what it can and can not do. She is scrupulous in avoiding anything unmusical. She never loses her head. Her voice is not felt to be one of the prodigies of Nature, but it is a beautiful instrument on which the owner has, by sheer taking of thought, learnt to play the greatest parts. Her Brünnhilde did not include the marvellous effects of Miss Austral's triumphant resonance, but on the whole Madame Leider is the most acceptable Brünnhilde Covent Garden has known within normal memory.

There was also a splendid Wotan in this 'Ring'—Hans Nissen, who was no whit below the first Wotan, Rode. Nissen was also a very fine Sachs in 'Meistersinger'—as near as may be an ideal Sachs, so warm and resonant was his tone, so genial his acting and appearance. The great tenor parts were all more weakly sustained. In the second 'Ring,' Siegfried was shared between Lauritz Melchior and Rudolf Laubenthal. The latter is a spritely and, indeed, rather jerky actor, and a pretty competent but dry singer. The former has a surprisingly powerful but intractable voice. His more taurine utterances are simply not musical at all. Siegmund is his best part. He bellowed intolerably in the last Act of 'Siegfried.' There was a new Swedish tenor, Carl Martin Oehmans, heard in the last performances of 'Tannhäuser' and 'Meistersinger.' His voice was useful rather than ingratiating. His singing lacked charm. The German season was distinguished by the new basses—Rode, Nissen, and Andresen are all names to remember. But the new Brünnhilde, Madame Elisabeth Ohms, was not first-rate; and Emil Schipper (Sachs, Wotan) seemed to have deteriorated. The casting was uneven. There was not one wholly unexceptionable cast, although the singers were there for a wonderful 'Walküre,' if only they had all been heard on the same night (Leider, Lehmann, Olczewska, Melchior, Rode or Nissen, and Andresen or Helgers).

THE FRENCH SEASON

Three French operas were sung: 'Samson et Dalila,' 'Carmen,' and 'Louise.' The artistic achievement fell as sharply as the musical interest. 'Samson' was indifferently performed, in spite of Fernand Ansseau's presence. The part of Samson was too heavy to show him at his best. There was a good new bass, Paul Payan. The Dalila, Madame Frozier-Marrot, was not a success. Judgment was suspended, in spite of some very cloudy and throaty singing, until we heard her in 'Carmen,' for it is cruel to 'down' a singer on one performance at Covent Garden. After a clumsy and charmless 'Carmen,' however, it would have been unfair to the majority to encourage this singer's sojourn among us. Ansseau's José saved the evening. This fine artist's singing was as good as ever, and his acting was improved. No one need want a better José. His French was faultlessly clear—a pleasure to hear. His tone was brightly resonant, but not to excess. There was no exaggeration, and still the whole performance was full of life and eagerness. This Belgian is the living exemplar of what a French tenor should be. Payan also was first-rate as Zuniga. Marcel Journet is past the right age for singing Escamillo. He spoilt the song in Act 2 by peppering aspirates. The Micaela, Miss Joy McArden, had a voice, but it was, on this first appearance, out of control. The conductor was Charles Lauwers, of Brussels. He did little to help bring a Mediterranean glow to our northern clime. A much better performance of 'Carmen' was given a night or two later, thanks to Madame Jane Bourguignon, an excellent little French contralto who has been remarked on for years for her excellent performances of the subsidiary aunts, chaperones, and waiting-maids in the repertory. Her Carmen was delightfully sung. It was fresh and lively. Madame Bourguignon helped on her reputation that night.

'Louise,' conducted by M. Lauwers, was found not to wear very well. The opera begins effectively, but the interest scatters amid the Parisian panorama; and the climax when the two lovers kneel to chant their evening hymn to the Eiffel Tower is ridiculous. The performance was quite good, with Journet as the father (imposing and human), Madame Bourguignon as the mother, and Franz Kaisin and Madame Guyla as the lovers.

ITALIAN OPERAS

The Italian season began with 'Madame Butterfly.' Vincenzo Bellezza conducted with much vigour and dash, and the operatic temperature went up. There was, moreover, a very pleasing little new singer, Madame Rosetta Pampanini, as Cio-cio-san. She could sing, she could act (a little fussily, perhaps, but still prettily); she gave the languishing part a personal character. Madame Pampanini has, indeed, been one of the welcome new-comers of the season. Her voice is not marvellous, but is very adequate, and she uses it with real mastery. 'A professional!' we say, the moment she arrives on the scene; and that is a pleasant change from the awkward amateurishness of so many would-be professionals.

'Turandot' was again a handsome spectacle, whatever we may have thought of it as an opera. Miss Eva Turner, formerly of the Carl Rosa and British National Companies, returned to her native land after some years of enriching foreign experiences, and triumphed in the difficult music of the Princess's part. Years ago we knew that Miss Turner had a huge voice, but the effect she made with it was always rather prosaic. 'Turandot' proved that, as a technician, she has entrenched herself impregnably. On the trying high phrases of the Riddle Scene she let loose again and again a stream of tone brilliant as a trumpet's, without a tremor or a shade of uncertainty. It was marvellous singing; an achievement comparable with the fiddling of a Heifetz. What else there is in the gallant little singer we shall have to wait and see. It may be that nothing else will suit her quite as well as the misanthropic Princess's high and daring music; but it is unlikely that in that part any soprano in the world can match her. Aroldo Lindi was the tenor, and Madame Pampanini sang very prettily as the pathetic Liu. The mandarins' harlequinade at the beginning of Act 2 (a piece of sheer padding) was well done.

The King and Queen were present at an inferior and noisy performance of 'Bohème.' Aureliano Pertile returned to the scene as Rodolfo. He has a tremendous tenor voice which, on this occasion, he used without any regard for discretion. On every possible opportunity he came forward and let rip. We wonder at the possibilities of the human larynx, but are not charmed. Even on 'ah' Pertile manages to produce a biting, forward tone. Miss Margherita Sheridan sang pleasantly up to a point as Mimi, but her voice is not steady, she is a haphazard technician, and far from a great singer. In smaller parts Madame Carosio and Giovanni Inghilleri, a new baritone, did reasonably well, but the performance was noisy and the ensemble lacked give-and-take.

'Cavalleria Rusticana' gave Miss Turner another and different chance. She expressed Santuzza's passion and ache with simplicity but with effect, and the strong stream of her vocal tone suited the music. Mr. Tom Burke sang the tenor part with less freedom than one could have wished. In 'Pagliacci,' Inghilleri brought the house down with the Prologue, Madame Pampanini was as clever in Nedda's part as in everything else, and Pertile tore Canio's jealousy to tatters in a singular but much-applauded performance.

'Othello' was a performance with many weaknesses, but the acting of the Othello, Renato Zanelli, and in a measure his singing, were worthy of the occasion. The new-comer was a lively personality. He made us aware of a drama; it was not a mere cantata in costume. Against that it must be said that his singing was not of the wild forcefulness demanded by the music. Zanelli's higher notes were not first-rate, and he did not grip us with the 'Ora e per sempre addio,' which, for that matter, Bellezza took much too fast—not assai ritenuto, or even ritenuto at all. Miss Miriam Licette looked the most graceful of Desdemonas, and she sang sweetly in Act 4, but in most parts of the opera her tone was too thin and bloodless. Inghilleri was a commonplace Iago. Considering what a useful voice he has, it was surprising he failed to make anything of the drinking-song in Act 1. What a masterpiece the opera is!

C.

---

OPERA AT THE COURT THEATRE

Mr. Johnstone-Douglas's season of opera in English at the Court Theatre began with a revival of Mozart's 'Così fan tutte,' on the same lines as had pleased the public so much at the Kingsway Theatre last year. Dr. Adrian Boult conducted, and the singers were the same—Miss Louise Trenton, Miss d'Orsay, Miss Chatterton, Mr. Steuart Wilson, Mr. Johnstone-Douglas, and Mr. Arthur Cranmer. The piece is captivating, the translation is adroit; the singers had improved on the polish of their Kingsway performance, although the lovers did not quite match their ladies in gracefully artificial style. The best singing was Mr. Cranmer's. His Don Alfonso could not be bettered. But the whole production was enjoyed.

There were more loose ends in the Company's triple bill, presented a fortnight later. Vaughan Williams's 'Shepherds of the Delectable Mountains' is a piece of purely and deeply beautiful music; its hush and exalted serenity had charmed us before, and will again. but this was not quite the time or the place. Is the piece not a fragment of some large scheme?—a scene from a Bunyan masque? Whatever it is, it is not 'light opera.' Manuel de Falla's 'Master Pedro's Puppet-Show' is in a different way another wilful child of a fine musician's fancy, that belongs to no category, and, what is more serious, refuses to fit into practical conditions. The piece is slight, yet the score (a little masterpiece) is most elaborate. Success was achieved in the public eye by the puppets, at the Court production, but they were too grotesque for the sense of the piece. And the Showman's Boy chanted his patter unintelligibly. 'The Faithful Sentinel' was an adaptation of the eighteen-year-old Schubert's one-Act ballad opera, 'Der vierjährige Posten,' in which Miss Dorothy Silk sang very prettily, but Miss Astra Desmond and Mr. Steuart Wilson thought to achieve a light style by keeping their mouths almost shut, with dull effect. The original author of the libretto, Körner, was a juvenile poet who was killed in the Napoleonic wars. Since so much adaptation had been done by various eminent hands, the excessive references to the Deity might have been modified, for they are in bad taste in such a triviality as this. The genuine Schubert peeped out here and there, but the simplicity of the whole was such as to make one feel rather uncomfortable.

C.

MASEFIELD'S 'THE COMING OF CHRIST'

By DYNELEY HUSSEY

Mr. John Masefield's mystery play, 'The Coming of Christ,' which was produced in the nave of Canterbury Cathedral on Whit-Monday, is a courageous attempt to revive an ancient form of dramatic entertainment. The poet has taken the story of the Nativity and preluded it with a scene in which the Spirit of Christ decides, in the full knowledge of what the action entails, to take on Manhood for the deliverance of mankind. This colloquy between the Spirit and the four Angels is in conception a fine piece of imaginative work, even though one felt at times that the poet has not matched his idea in the execution, that is, in the language with which he has clothed it. At the end of this long prologue, the Spirit and the four Angels retire through the door in the choir-screen, through which they had entered, while the Heavenly Host sing of the birth of spring and of a new era for mankind.

Mr. Masefield is to be congratulated upon the successful manner in which he has made use of the stage afforded by the great flight of steps with three platforms or landings, which rises up to the Choir from the Nave. The screen made a superb background to the action, while the great arch in front of the steps, curving up from two of the immense pillars which support the central tower, formed a dignified proscenium. The choir was placed above on the screen, from whose central door the heavenly characters entered, while the earthly characters came from the transepts.

The first of these earthly characters are the three Kings, made by the poet to represent worldly power, worldly riches, and worldly wisdom. They enter with their train of men-at-arms, and each has a long expository speech. It was here that one felt that the poet had not adequately solved the difficulties of the problem. The acoustics of the vast nave are not such as to make it easy for actors, however skilled, to be heard distinctly. The action of the scene was too static to hold the interest in long speeches, of which little could be understood. Yet, when in the subsequent scene of the three Shepherds, the dialogue became more lively, the same difficulty of hearing the words again militated against success.

In this scene, too, Mr. Masefield was confronted with another problem. In the old mystery plays this would have been the occasion for much low fooling for the entertainment of the audience, whose tastes had to be allowed for, even if they were to be edified by the more serious part of the spectacle. Modern susceptibilities would hardly permit of anything more than the mildly amusing, and, even as it was, one hears that the anti-militarist sentiments (which were, indeed, countered with another point of view) expressed by one of the Shepherds gave offence in some quarters. At the end of the Shepherds' scene there occurred the only really dramatic moment of the play, when an Angel suddenly appeared to announce the birth of Our Lord. The remainder of the play consisted of a procession of the Virgin and Child and the presentation of gifts by the Kings.

So it is to the spectacle and the music that we must turn to find the greatest merits of the performance, since the action was insufficiently interesting and the verse too often commonplace. The costumes, designed by Mr. Charles Ricketts, were worthy of the setting. They provided for the eye a continuous enjoyment by their individual beauty as well as by their collective effect against the grey background, when the ear was wearied of trying to catch the speakers' words. The dignified gold dresses of the four Angels set off the white figure of the Anima Christi, to which Mr. Ricketts skilfully gave an added stature by the arrangement of drapery. The Kings were sumptuously clothed and well contrasted, and the final tableau was a most notable achievement in pictorial decoration. There was no attempt to ape any particular style of the past, yet the whole was perfectly adapted to the Gothic setting and in the true tradition of the great masters.

The music composed by Mr. Gustav Holst was a no less successful adjunct to the play. Indeed I felt that had Mr. Masefield given the composer more opportunities for music, the whole would have gained greatly thereby. It is just when words fail, whether from inaudibility or any other cause, that music can come to the rescue. Apart from a trumpet fanfare to announce the opening of the play, there is no music until the end of the long first scene. It is certainly difficult to see how, given the lay-out of this scene as it exists, music could have been introduced earlier. But I feel that the poet would have done well to invoke the aid of the sister-muse, whose entry at once raises the pitch of interest and emotion.

When he wrote the music, Mr. Holst evidently took into consideration the conditions in which it was to be performed. He realised that any elaboration in the choral writing would be labour wasted, since it would only sound confused. For the most part he has kept to a simple melodic line, sometimes supported only with a sustained pedal-point on the organ. Even in the Antiphonal, the most extended and elaborate chorus in the work, he has made the parts march note for note with one another, eschewing contrapuntal devices. The result was that the music sounded limpid and clear. This is only one instance of the composer's uncanny instinct for making the best of any given combination of circumstances which may limit his mode of expression.

Not less admirable and successful is the way in which he has contrasted the choruses of the Kings' men with those of the Heavenly Host. Most composers with experience of how instruments sound in a cathedral would have avoided a pianoforte like the plague. One can imagine how dreadful the instrument would have sounded if used by a man less skilled. Mr. Holst employs it simply as a percussion instrument, to provide a rhythmic accompaniment to the songs of the warriors. There is no 'pianistic' writing or contrapuntal imitation of the voices. The result was astonishingly successful, both in itself and in the dramatic contrast which it made to the music of the Heavenly Host.

As often happens, the limitations which the composer has observed have had the result of bringing out the best in him. The music is simple, and relies for its effect upon tunefulness. There are few of the rhythmic subtleties in which Mr. Holst has so often indulged, and such mannerisms as the use of long passages of basso ostinato are conspicuously absent. He had relied on his melodic invention, and it has not failed him. The tune called 'Hill Crest' (a compliment, I believe, to Mr. Masefield) deserves to take its place in the hymn-books. In general, the music is far warmer and more human in feeling, being almost devoid of far-fetched harmonies, than anything else Mr. Holst has written.

If, therefore, one came away from the performance feeling that the poet had not altogether surmounted the difficulties which faced him—and perhaps they are insurmountable—he had at least provided the framework for an unusually impressive spectacle accompanied by beautiful music in the true tradition of the English Church composers, one of whose most illustrious members, Orlando Gibbons, watched and listened impassively from above his tomb.

---

THE ROME COPYRIGHT CONFERENCE: CHIEF CHANGES IN INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION

From a Special Correspondent

The International Convention at Rome, for the protection of literary and artistic works, was held from May 7 till June 2 in the Palazzo Corsini. It was attended by delegates and expert advisers from the thirty-nine countries which already subscribed to the International Convention, from thirty countries non-subscribing, and from the League of Nations, the International Institute of Intellectual Co-operation, and the International Bureau for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works. There were fifty-five sittings of the full Conference, Commission and sub-committees, at which more than a hundred and fifty proposals and amendments were discussed.

Great Britain was represented by Sir Sidney Chapman, chief Economic Adviser to the Government; Mr. W. S. Jarret, Comptroller of the Industrial Property Department; and Mr. A. J. Martin, Assistant-Comptroller of the Industrial Property Department.

The principal subjects discussed were the protection of copyright, broadcasting, performing rights, works of art applied to industry, and what is called les droites morales, or the right of the author to prevent the mutilation of his work, or any action in connection with his work that might prejudice his reputation.

A new Article was agreed to embodying this principle, and placing the responsibility upon national governments to determine how that principle should be defended and exercised in various countries.

Apart from minor alterations to the text of the Berlin Convention of 1908, several other new Articles have been adopted and embodied in the Rome Convention.

The Rome Convention fixes the term of the protection for works of joint authorship as dating from the death of the last survivor of the collaborators. This period is defined as being during the life of an author and fifty years after his death. It further stipulates that where that period is not adopted the period shall be determined by the country in which protection is sought, and in any case cannot exceed the period fixed in the country of the origin of the work.

An important new Article recognises that authors have the exclusive right to authorise 'the radio diffusion' of their works. Such an Article has been made necessary owing to the fact that since the Berlin Convention of 1908 wireless has created an entirely new intellectual and artistic medium. The new Convention states that it is the duty of national legislatures of countries belonging to the Union to determine the conditions under which that right should be exercised. It suggests that, failing a friendly agreement, a just remuneration should be determined by a competent authority.

The subject of broadcasting aroused a considerable amount of discussion, and the proposal was lost in the sub-committee; it was, however, brought up again in the General Committee, and was finally included owing to the strong attitude that was taken up by the British delegates, who emphasised the dangers that would result from the rejection of the proposal to insert a broadcasting clause. A consideration in the minds of the opposers was that in certain circumstances authors' rights might conflict with the public interest. Although no amendment to the Convention was actually made, owing to the strong opposition of those countries which were against the insertion of anything in the nature of a compulsory licence, it appeared to be generally accepted that there was an inherent right in the legislature of each country to take measures to reconcile the exclusive rights of an author with the public interest. It was felt by many delegates that while it might not be a matter of public importance if any individual author withheld the broadcasting rights of his works, anything in the nature of a general boycott by authors leagued together might be opposed to public interest.

The same debating considerations were brought forward when proposals were being discussed relating to performing rights. In most countries performing rights are looked after by one society for the purpose of collecting fees, and the methods of some of these societies provoked a certain amount of criticism. It was reported that difficulties had arisen owing to the concentration of these performing rights in the hands of individual bodies. Although the performing rights of composers and authors were recognised, it was agreed that countries had the right to legislate in the public interest if they were of the opinion that the exercise of rights given to authors in accordance with the Convention was being exercised contrary to the public interest. There were two schools of thought: One said that the existing system was satisfactory, and was disinclined to agree to anything that would savour of compulsory licence; on the other hand, there were those who held that it was a question for the individual nations to legislate as they saw fit in regard to such rights. The latter party was opposed to anything that would limit the rights of individual countries.

An amendment was made in the Articles relating to the reproduction of articles in the press. Under the Berlin Convention, a newspaper article might be reproduced by any newspaper unless reproduction was expressly forbidden. In the new Convention this right to reproduce articles, unless reproduction is forbidden, is limited to articles on current, economic, political, or religious topics.

Considerable discussion arose in regard to Article 13 in relation to the mechanical means of reproducing musical works, such as the gramophone and the pianola. Article 13 of the previous Convention stipulates that the authors of musical works have the exclusive right to authorise (a) the adaptation of those works to instruments for their mechanical reproduction, and (b) the public performance of such works by means of such instruments. It further states that the reservations and conditions relative to the application of that Article shall be determined by the legislature of each country concerned, and any such reservations and conditions should be strictly limited to the countries in which they were imposed.

France had a proposal that would have abolished the right of each country to give a compulsory licence. If that had been agreed to, it would have involved the repeal of Section 19 of the British Copyright Act, 1911. Austria, on the other hand, proposed that a compulsory licence should be enforced in every country. The proposal of Austria was strongly resisted, and, as there was a sharp division of opinion, no alterations in the present Article were carried through, and the Article remains unchanged.

The question of the amount of royalty to be paid on gramophone records in various countries naturally did not arise, as under the Article the matter was one for each individual country to decide.

A slight amendment was made in Article 14, making it clear that copyright had to be given to cinematograph productions in all cases where the work was of an original character; if not original in character it had to enjoy protection as a photographic work.

An important Article was drawn up to make more effective the findings agreed to by the countries which subscribe to the Convention. At present the Convention is weakened by the fact that a number of countries have elected to substitute certain provisions of the earlier Conventions. Under the new Convention, the countries now belonging to the Union will be able to maintain only the reservations which they have already made. New countries coming into the Union will be allowed to make only one reservation, namely, in regard to certain translation rights—a matter of comparatively minor importance.

No new Articles were imposed which would involve the passing of any new British legislation.

The alterations embodied in the Rome Convention are surprisingly small in view of the large number of proposals discussed at great length, and the fact that the previous Conference was so long ago as 1908, since when many important developments have taken place. The explanation is that no Article could be revised unless there was unanimity on the part of all the members. As a consequence, it was possible for one or two members to prevent a decision when all the rest were in agreement. Nevertheless, although no sensational changes were made, much useful work was done, and the way was prepared for a bigger advance when the Convention next comes up for revision.

London Concerts

[The two concert notices following were inadvertently omitted last month. We insert them, however, for purposes of record.]

B.B.C. NATIONAL SYMPHONY CONCERT

The last concert of the season brought us, besides the delight of Paul Hermann's urbane mastery in the Dvorák 'Cello Concerto, two novelties. Marcel Labey's 'Overture for a Drama' (unnamed) was played for the first time in England. This is well-made, conscientious music, that swirls along in a hearty style, bringing whiffs of Wagner (it is no worse for that), and showing no reason why it should stop here, there, or anywhere. The chief attractions were that it bore no resemblance to the smart chatter that too often passes for representative French music these days, that it was well orchestrated, had some moments of climactic interest, and proved that the composer knew the technique of his trade.

The other novelty, Bloch's 'Israel' Symphony, impressed me very much. It is the most significant new work the season has brought forth—indeed, for me, the only one of any real significance. It has something of the stark strength of 'Jew Süss.' Bloch seems to have hewn out a technique of his own, choosing his materials and building them up into a work that stirs the mind and brings to the imagination old, unhappy, far-off things. His use of voices in the last movement is poignant. This striking pageant of Jewry has all the force of the Old Testament narratives. I listened to this concert from Sussex, and, as far as I was able to judge, the playing under Sir Henry Wood was uncommonly good. We must certainly hear the Bloch again.

W. R. A.

ROYAL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY

The concert on May 1 was broadcast from 5GB. I heard it in the hall. Since Mendelssohn (in England, the first that ever burst into the key of C in the big Schubert Symphony) no conductor can have striven so hard to get what he wanted from the Philharmonic orchestra. Even Mendelssohn, eighty-four years ago, couldn't get the players to realise the greatness of that giant-striding Finale. The Philharmonic men worked hard, but rarely seemed to give Harty just what he wanted. Did I spy strangers? Whatever the cause, there was a lot of rough playing. The slow movement was taken extremely slowly. It dragged, but all else was happily, buoyantly conceived. The Finale, which is more exciting every time one hears it, had grip, and really grew. In 'Heldenleben,' Harty was the hero, and the players rose to something like his stature, though some of the wood-wind work was not pretty. Best played of all was the 'Royal Hunt and Storm,' from Berlioz's 'The Trojans.' (When shall we hear this opera in a Covent Garden season?) Here Harty was very happy, and the orchestra nearly enjoyed itself too.

W. R. A.

BUDAPEST PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA

Dohnányi is so well-liked in this country that his presence as conductor was sufficient to ensure a cordial welcome for the visitors (Queen's Hall, June 15 and 17). But the playing was such as to make the orchestra at once highly esteemed on its own account. The pick of the force was, perhaps, in the wind department, especially the wood; more delightful playing than that of the latter is rarely heard. The strings seemed lacking in power for so large a force—the band numbered a hundred and ten. The proportion of double-basses (eight) seemed hardly adequate at times.

The unanimity and finish all round was of the excellënce that Londoners have almost ceased to know, and which will be theirs once more only when London has at least one orchestra rehearsing assiduously and concertising regularly under one conductor. These Budapest players had none of the somewhat aggressive discipline of our recent visitors from Berlin; but there was a very likeable absence of display for its own sake, and a consistent refinement and musicality that was a relief in the midst of so much nowadays that is sketchy and 'near enough.' True, it left us with a feeling that we had been defrauded of something; we had a right to look for at least a touch of the abandon associated with Hungarian music. (Perhaps their national anthem played at the outset ought to have warned us; poor in melody and rhythm, and feebly harmonized, it must surely be among the world's worst.) Dohnányi's 'Ruralia Hungarica' is an attractive Suite that might have reference to almost any country—and we all felt at home with it, especially in the final movement, which was based on a Hungarian tune almost note for note like our own 'Keel Row.' The Suite was beautifully played, as was also Liszt's 'Les Préludes.' In Brahms's first Symphony the quality of finish was too evident. It was Brahms with the roughnesses ironed out. Can a performance of the C minor Symphony be quite right if it leaves us with an impression of Brahms as an urbane, delightful fellow? The real Brahms is shown by something midway between this finished, 'musical' interpretation and the underlined, purple-patchy methods adopted by some recent conductors from Germany. In Mozart's G major Concerto Dohnányi was both delightful pianist and unobtrusive conductor. There were very few anxious moments, but despite the absence of fuss a touch of the 'stunt' was inescapable. We saw nothing in the experiment to justify a return to the old method of conducting from the keyboard—a method which after all belonged to the days when conducting, as a fine art, was non-existent. For the second concert the hall was sold out, and enthusiasm was evoked by a programme consisting of Elgar's 'Cockaigne,' Bartók's 'Deux Images,' the 'Eroica,' and the conductor's own Violin Concerto (soloist, Emil Telmányi).

H. G.

ERNEST HUTCHESON

It would be unfair to say that Mr. Ernest Hutcheson's playing is 'academic,' for he obviously understands problems of interpretation almost as thoroughly as he understands problems of technique. Yet he seemed to excel as a pianist rather than as an interpreter of the classics at Wigmore Hall (on June 12), not because of any error or weakness of his reading, but because of the great care and distinction of his tone-production. We all felt as if we were assisting at a demonstration on pianoforte tone applied to the music of the great masters. This is not, perhaps, the greatest pleasure music can give—but it was unalloyed; the high standard was maintained from first to last, and one felt grateful to Mr. Hutcheson for never arousing expectations which were not fulfilled. B. V.

KOCHANSKI

The playing of M. Kochanski at Wigmore Hall on June 12 was curiously uneven. There were moments when the brilliance of his tone and the polished ease of his performance equalled Jacques Thibaud's. And there were also moments when imperfect intonation and unsteady rhythm pulled down the standard very considerably. Of course, slight errors of intonation can be ascribed to a number of causes not always controllable by the player. But I can find no explanation for the rhythmic vagaries of the Bach Adagio, where there seemed to be two distinct ideas of tempo—one applicable to the long notes, the other to the groups of triplets. This can only mean that M. Kochanski is not at ease in the serene atmosphere of Bach. And undoubtedly his most notable performance was in Stravinsky's 'Suite on Themes of Pergolesi,' which differs from Bach as a child's toy ship differs from a full-rigged ship. In this one could admire without reserve both technique and interpretation. F. B.

KREISLER

Kreisler filled the Albert Hall on June 10—something of an achievement which shows that his fame in London has reached the zenith. But his playing, matchless in quality of tone and general finish, deserved no less. I am not so sure about the programme, which, apart from the usual Kreisleriana, was open to objection on one or two points. The Concertos of Bach do not show Kreisler at his finest, and the Fantasie of Schumann did full justice neither to the talents of the performer nor to the genius of the composer. But possibly most people cared more for the performer than for the music. In any case, the concluding group of short pieces—arrangements by Kreisler and by others—gave us our fill of those sweet and charming trifles in the playing of which the Viennese violinist excels. B. V.

MISS PATTIE UPTON

Miss Pattie Upton has not yet acquired the technique or the style expected in a public performer. But there was evidence of taste in the choice of programme she played at Æolian Hall, and also of a certain natural ability, which, properly guided, might in time lead Miss Upton to the goal. There are many schools and systems by which one can learn the secrets of violin technique—all of them efficient in their way. The player, however, should attempt to discover the one most suited to his temperament and physical aptitude. I had the impression—perhaps a mistaken one—that Miss Upton had worked on the wrong lines. Some features of her performances were palpably erroneous. But now and again her success in tackling fairly difficult passages was surprising. B. V.

SYDNEY BOWMAN

Excessive vibrato is so common a fault amongst the young violinists of the present day that one wonders whether the popularity of the jazz band—where the greater the wobble the warmer is the applause—has not something to do with this distressing habit. Mr. Sydney Bowman's performances at Wigmore Hall would have been interesting enough but for the 'wobble,' which cheapened the austere beauty of Bach's Concerto in E and made Chausson's sentimentality into absolute bathos. The remedy is in the player's own hands. The determination to avoid 'jazzy' effects, and a course of Bach's Sonatas varied by a little Tartini and Veracini, would make all the difference to Mr. Bowman's style. B. V.

THE ENGLISH SINGERS

The English Singers, having been busy for a long time with a round of calls in the New World, looked in at the West End for an evening on June 13, and as usual made themselves at home. They were very welcome. The June musical season, as dull and drab as the countryside is fresh and green, needs a freshener of this kind—interesting and rare music intelligently performed by people of wit and good sense. The recital was not only delightful but reassuring; popular success in many places has not had any ill effect upon the artists, who are as alert and as ready to take up a point of style as ever. They gave Ballets, Madrigals, Fancies, Motets, Cryes of London, and folk-song arrangements, including two new ones by Dr. Vaughan Williams, 'The Lawyer' and 'An acre of land.' They are soon going to America again. X.

THE ORIANA MADRIGAL SOCIETY

The most interesting thing in the programme of the Oriana Madrigal Society's summer concert at Æolian Hall on June 11 was Jannequin's 'La Bataille de Marignan.' This is one of the earliest of the long line of descriptive pieces, on which composers have lavished every ingenuity in the attempt to make music sound like something else. However strongly theorists may condemn these imitations on æsthetic grounds, we may be sure that they will never deter the Beethovens from depicting brooks and nightingales or the Strausses from putting into musical notation the bleating of sheep. Jannequin's 'Battle' is certainly no better as music than the many other compositions of its kind. The episodes follow one another without any sign of an attempt to weld them into a coherent musical structure. But it has a pleasant freshness which it has managed to carry down from the days when this kind of thing was really new, and it was sung with such spirit that all the sounds of battle were very faithfully presented. D. H.

BACH CANTATA CLUB

The season ended at St. Margaret's, Westminster, on June 19, with a scheme that had the Motet, 'Jesu, Joy and Treasure,' as its central point, preceded and followed by various treatments of Chorales, Organ Preludes on the melody leading into the Chorale sung by the choir. Mr. Stanley Roper conducted the Bach Cantata Choir in an admirable performance of the Motet, and Dr. Alcock did fine work at the organ, both in the Chorale Preludes and in an improvisation on 'Jesu, meine Freude,' before the Motet. The attendance once more showed that there is a large public appreciative of these meetings, where may be heard, under ideal conditions, first-rate performances of Bach at his most intimate. H. G.

The Society of Women Composers will celebrate its sixteenth birthday this month with a competition for the Cobbett Medal for Quartet playing by the Chamber Music Section (July 4) and a performance of new chamber works by women composers (July 7). Further particulars from the Hon. Secretary, 74, Grosvenor Street, W.1.

Music in the Provinces

BIRMINGHAM.—The Festival of the Worcestershire Association of Musical Societies, held on May 17-19, was a success on the artistic side, but failed as a public attraction, probably because it was held at Birmingham, where it did not rank as a recognised institution in the eyes of the musical populace. It did not lack local connections, for among the assisting bodies were the city's B.B.C. Orchestra, the Birmingham Festival Choral Society, the City of Birmingham Choir, and the Birmingham branch of the B.M.S. The choral works and their conductors were 'The Revenge' (Mr. Stephen S. Moore), 'Hiawatha' (Mr. Joseph Lewis), Mozart's 'Requiem' (Mr. Harold Gray), 'The Dream of Gerontius' (Dr. Adrian Boult), 'The Messiah' (Sir Hugh Allen), and 'Phaudrig Crohoore' (Dr. Boult). Mr. Julius Harrison conducted his 'Worcestershire Suite' and Schubert's fourth Symphony, and the rest of the programme of music was full of good things, with first-rate artists to take part in them. There was no good reason for the public indifference to this brave and well-planned enterprise.

BRISTOL.—The programme given by the University of Bristol Men's Choir on May 24 was as usual well varied and select. The choir, under Mr. Arthur S. Warrell, sang in Grieg's 'Landerkennung,' Vaughan Williams's Five Mystical Songs (with Mr. Emlyn Davies as baritone soloist), Holst's 'Hymns from the Rig Veda,' Dunhill's 'Pilgrim Song,' Bantock's 'Lock the door, Lariston,' with shanties, 'spirituals,' traditional, and folk-songs. Among the orchestral works was Cyril Rootham's Miniature Suite for pianoforte (Mr. M. H. Salter) and strings.

CAMBRIDGE.—An excellent musical entertainment was given at the Guildhall on the Friday evening of May week by the University Musical Society. Dr. Rootham conducted his 'Brown Earth,' and Dr. Vaughan Williams his Suite, 'The Wasps.' The choir also sang Weelkes's madrigal, 'Thule, the period of cosmography,' and Mr. Howard Bliss played Dvorák's 'Cello Concerto.

HARROGATE.—The Symphony concerts re-opened under Mr. Basil Cameron's direction on May 31, when the programme included a Haydn Symphony, Liszt's 'Les Préludes,' and Franck's Symphonic Variations, played by Miss Lilian Niblett.

MANCHESTER.—The Tuesday mid-day concerts came to an end on May 22, when the Brodsky Quartet played Beethoven's three 'Rasoumovsky' Quartets.

NEWCASTLE.—Sir George Henschel's eight-part unaccompanied Mass was sung by the Bach Choir at the Cathedral on May 23, Dr. Whittaker conducting. The Mass was preceded by four Chorales from the 'St. Matthew' Passion.

OXFORD.—At Keble 'eights week' concert on May 30 a large string orchestra, led by Mr. Charles Woodhouse and conducted by Mr. Ralph Downes, played Elgar's Introduction and Allegro, Vaughan Williams's Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis, Parry's 'English' Suite, and the third 'Brandenburg' Concerto. The Choral Society gave a selection of part-songs.——On May 30, Prof. Tovey gave a pianoforte recital in aid of Dr. Schweitzer's equatorial hospital.——Miss Jelly d'Aranyi and Miss Myra Hess had a large audience for their recital of Sonatas by Bach, Schubert, Beethoven, and Franck.

PORTSMOUTH.—The Petersfield Festival Choir gave an admirable performance of Brahms's 'Requiem' under Dr. Boult at St. Matthew's Church, Southsea, on May 20.

TORQUAY.—The last concert of the season given by the Municipal Orchestra was a farewell to Dr. Harold Rhodes, henceforth to be organist at St. Michael's, Coventry. Dr. Rhodes played Franck's Symphonic Variations to the conducting of Mr. Ernest W. Goss. The programme included a Suite for strings, 'Light Heart,' by Markham Lee.

WINCHESTER.—Bach's 'St. John' Passion was performed on May 31 by the Winchester Music Club, under Dr. Dyson, the principal soloists being Miss Dorothy Silk, Mr. Eric Greene, and Mr. John Andrews.

Competition Festival Record

PROPOSED TESTIMONIAL TO MR. JOHN GRAHAM

In our correspondence columns appears a letter drawing attention to Mr. John Graham's resignation from the secretaryship of the Stratford and East London Musical Festival, and announcing the starting of a Fund towards a suitable recognition of Mr. Graham's work on behalf of the Festival movement in general and of Stratford in particular. The Presentation Committee includes Messrs. Frank Bonner, C. Ernest Coward, Mrs. Annie J. Curwen, Mr. C. B. Gilbert, Miss Elsie Horne, Messrs. Henry Riding and George Day-Winter, with Mr. H. A. Donald as hon. treasurer.

We have pleasure in commending the Fund to the consideration of our readers. In Festival circles few names are more honoured than Mr. Graham's, and his retirement from active service in the movement ought not to be allowed to take place without recognition.

---

BOURNEMOUTH COMPETITIVE FESTIVAL.—Bournemouth's second annual competitive Festival attracted a thousand three hundred and fifty entries—many more than last year's corresponding affair; and proved in various other respects a very gratifying success. The Earl of Malmesbury was again the patron; the Mayor of Bournemouth (Alderman H. J. Thwaites), president; Sir Dan Godfrey, chairman of the general committee; Mr. Hadley Watkins, hon. secretary. The Festival advertised itself in striking fashion by starting off with a march competition in which Second Section bands engaged, following one another from the Town Hall to the Winter Gardens, the latter being the venue for the whole of that day's subsequent events. Followed the Festival proper, with its whole week of gloriously crowded days. Not a single day was without its splendid surprises. Monday saw a blind young man from Wales—Mr. Alec Templeton—capture the pianoforte gold medal with a delightful performance of Beethoven's Sonata in F sharp major. 'The player's very beautiful touch,' remarked Mr. Harold Craxton, 'made the instrument sound almost like a different piano.' On Tuesday, Mr. Frederick Keel was expressing astonishment at meeting 'so many contraltos of such good quality.' In Wednesday's junior choral and folk-dancing tests no fewer than two thousand boys and girls took part, Mr. E. Stanley Roper noting a marked improvement in their singing as compared with the efforts he judged here in July last, and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Kennedy observing that there was 'no nonsense about any of the dancing.' Special mention should be made, by the way, of Mary Scott's amazing triumph in the ear-test. This youthful contestant, from Parkstone (Dorset), survived the entire long series of increasingly difficult tests imposed; and two other local girls were almost equally successful. Mr. Spencer Dyke—busy here all Thursday—appeared to be specially impressed by the string quartets, not merely by the excellence of the playing, but also by the fact that there were as many as three entries. Not least exciting of all was the achievement of Wimborne Road (Southsea) Boys' Demonstration School, in winning a challenge cup against two adult combinations. Sir Richard Terry was here for the last two days, judging the adult choral classes. He told the Women's Institute choirs that their technique, generally speaking, left a good deal to be desired, while some of their members shared the too-common failing of being 'nervous about getting the wooden mask off their faces.' Still, Women's Institute choirs looked like becoming a great and important feature in the musical life of the country. 'Your church choirs,' Sir Richard declared later on, 'have set an example to the whole of England. In the majority of competition festivals it is almost impossible to get a town church choir to enter. Nothing has been more wonderful to me than the way in which village choirs have gone in for the most difficult music. I have a suspicion that the reason town choirs don't enter is that they are afraid to meet each other. They are not sporting enough to meet each other in friendly rivalry on the platform and do the best they can.' T. W. C.

Brighton.—This Festival (May 19-26) thrives on enterprising and determined management of the kind that gives life to the Greater or Brighter Brighton movement. The scheme provides both competition and performance, but not entirely in the usual sequence of cause and effect. For instance, the opening event was, apart from some reed-band contests, a concert by the Brighton and Hove Harmonic Society, under Mr. Percy Taylor, with a selection from 'Elijah' as the principal music. Other concerts, however, included massed work by competing bodies. The important choral contests occurred on the Wednesday. In the three mixed-voice classes, graduated by number of voices, the winning choirs were Portsmouth Excelsior Temperance, Clifton Road Congregational, and Henfield Musical Society. First prizes were also awarded to Chichester Diocesan Training College Ladies' Choir, Barcombe Women's Institute, and Madame Dorothy Kennard's Male-Voice Choir. One of the features of the next two days was folk-dancing, with plenty of keenness given to it by adults and children. On the final day brass bands and orchestras took the chief part, prizes being awarded to Brighton String Orchestra and Peacehaven Philharmonic. The Brighton and Hove Philharmonic Society again took part in the concluding concert. The Festival was a success with the public and with the competitors, whose numbers had increased by about fifty per cent.

Buxton.—At this Festival (May 16-19) there was some memorable male-voice choral singing on the part of Gorton Choir (the winner), Chesterfield and District, and Nottingham Gleemen. The first awards in other important competitions were won by the Margaret Hadfield Ladies' Choir from Droylesden, Mr. William Woolley's mixed-voice choir from Nottingham, and the Liverpool and District Folk-Dance Society.

Folkestone.—At the nineteenth Kent Musical Competitive Festival there was a large gathering of solo performers of all kinds, and in some cases the choral competitions were well supported. But choirs of the first class were few, and Mr. Leslie B. Mackay and his splendid choir, or choirs, from Chatham, were able to clear the board, coming out best in the chief female-voice, male-voice, and mixed-voice competitions, and also in that for smaller mixed-voice choirs. Lyminge (Miss E. Jacobs) was successful among large village choirs, and Willesborough and District Labour Club (Mr. L. Wortley) among the large village orchestras. The best town orchestra was the Old Barn Orchestra, Sandling (Mr. E. F. Parkes). Miss Winnie Axford (contralto) won the Federation prize for the best individual competitor.

Frome.—This year's Mid-Somerset Festival (May 19-26) was beaten in numbers only by last year's at Weston-super-Mare. Choirs came from over a wide area to compete in the open events, and throughout the various choral classes the average entry was satisfactory. The following were the winners in the open classes: Male-voice Choirs (seven entries)—Frome (Mr. F. E. Bell). Female-voice Choirs (five entries)—Miss Mary Wood's Choir, Bath. Mixed-voice Choirs—Weston-super-Mare Sunnyside P.M. Choir (Mr. Seymour Dossor). Winners and massed choirs took part in a Festival concert on the Thursday evening following the chief competitions, and the remainder of the Festival was devoted largely to folk-dancing.

Ilkley.—The twenty-second Wharfedale Festival (May 16-19) ended with some exceptionally fine examples of choral singing in the three chief classes. The winning choirs were Bradford Vocal Union, Colne Orpheus Glee Union, and York Old Priory (female voices). The XXV. String Orchestra of Leeds distinguished itself by its splendid playing of a Concerto in C minor by John Humphries and the Intermezzo from Frank Bridge's Suite—to which Holst's 'St. Paul's' Suite was added for the evening performance.

People's Palace, E. London. — This Festival works steadily ahead doing fine fostering work for music and musical practice among a vast and otherwise almost untouched population. The standard of music remains at a practical level, the competitors remain interested and do their work earnestly, and the Festival arrives at a far more useful type of success by its unremitting ground-work than it could ever achieve by aiming at more spectacular feats. The hon. secretaries to the Festival are still those untiring workers, Miss Edith Barran and the Rev. C. J. Beresford, and the hon. treasurer, who would gladly receive more subscriptions, is Mr. R. P. Kitkat, Morton House, Hatfield. The principal prizes at this year's Festival (May 7-19) were won by All Hallows' Fellowship, East India Docks (Mr. E. G. Beck); St. Stephen's Choral Society, Bow (Mr. W. E. Pepper); Gill Street Girls' Choir (Mr. T. H. Burros); Stepney Orpheus Choir (Rev. C. J. Beresford) and St. James's, Ratcliff, Choral Society (Mrs. Atherton Knowles); Victor Duane's String Orchestra; and the L.M.S. Amateur Orchestra (Mr. W. E. Chalk).

Ryde.—Since the foundation of the Isle of Wight Competition Festival in 1923, the interest has been so keen that no fewer than eighty-three classes had to be provided for this year's Festival (May 17-19), and the greater part of them were fully justified by the number of competitors they brought in and the quality of the performances that resulted. An excellent mixed-voice choir competition was held, with Brahms's 'Song of Destiny' as the test-piece, the choirs, in order of merit, being Newport Philharmonic (Mr. H. W. Stubbington), Shanklin Philharmonic (Mr. E. A. English), Sandown Philharmonic (Mr. English), Bembridge (Mr. J. C. Riddick), Ryde (Mr. E. G. Welsh), and Wootton (Mrs. Mitchison). Seven Women's Institute Choirs were led by that of Seaview (Mr. W. L. Reed). Shanklin (Mr. C. G. Crawley) was the best of five female-voice choirs, and Newport Gleemen won in the male-voice class.

Newcastle.—The great and growing North of England Musical Tournament was carried out to the general content on May 9-19. The main features of the immense syllabus were those common to all large and standard organizations, but Newcastle can show features of its own, notably the competitions in Northumbrian piping—both on 'small-pipes' and on 'half-longs'—and there was a demonstration of folk-dancing such as few other Festivals could rival. Experts in 'long-sword' and 'short-sword' and other traditions and mysteries kept this part of the Festival alive for session after session. Most memorable of all, perhaps, was the dancing of the Winlaton White Star short-sword team, most of them about seventy years of age. There was good singing in the choral competitions. Middlesbrough Glee Society (Mr. Gavin Kay) was given full marks for its interpretation of Stanford's 'Blue Bird,' the own-choice piece which it added to Farnaby's 'Simkin said that Sis was fair' and the Agnus Dei from Schubert's Mass in E flat. The same choir was first out of five entries in the male-voice class, the second place, by two marks, being taken by Newcastle Glee and Madrigal Society (Mr. R. Tindall). In another male-voice class, L.N.E.R. Works Institute, West Hartlepool, was several points ahead of Keswick and District. Conspicuous among the soloists was a class of sopranos whom the adjudicator described as 'thundering bad'; a sixteen-year-old pianist, A. G. Soulsby, of Gateshead, who has been winning prizes in advancing series at this Festival for five years; and a young organist of musicianly gifts, A. C. Harker, of Newcastle. The final concert was a Schubert celebration given with the help of the Newcastle Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Harold Darke.

The following Festivals have also been held: (we regret being compelled to summarise) the sixth Norfolk Festival at NORWICH on May 16-19; the ALDERLEY EDGE Festival on May 17-21; the Staffs County Musical Festival at STAFFORD on May 17-21; the second BRIDGNORTH AND DISTRICT Schools Musical Festival on May 22; the eighth Thanet Festival at MARGATE on May 22-23; and the third Countryside Festival organized by the Gloucestershire Rural Community Council at GLOUCESTER on June 2.

IRELAND

DUBLIN.—The Feis Ceoil, held during the third week of May, again drew a great number of entries, the bulk of which were comprised in the solo singing and pianoforte-playing competitions. Among the former the interest centred chiefly in the special classes that were independent of the usual distinctions of voice. The first prizes were awarded as follows: the Plunket Greene Cup for interpretation, the Wallis Cup for self-accompanied song, and other awards, to Miss L. Finneburg; the Schubert Centenary Prize to Miss Pearl Maconkey; the O'Sullivan Medal for Irish songs to Miss Finneburg; the McCall Cup for singing in Irish to Mr. Denis Cox; the O'Mara Cup for an Irish melody of the competitor's own choice to Mr. Frank Cowle. There were few choirs, except in the Joseph Sarto competition for Plainsong singing, which brought in thirty-one entries. The prize went to Greystones Church Choir. Derry Glee and Madrigal Society was the best of four Ladies' Choirs, Phibsboro Musical Society the better of two mixed-voice choirs, and the Catholic Literary Institute, Limerick, was the only male-voice choir in the chief class. Holy Faith College sent the best of the large string orchestras, and Miss Petite O'Hara's was the best of the smaller. Mr. A. J. Thornton won, unopposed, the Fitzgerald Cup for advanced organ playing.

Music in Wales

ABERYSTWYTH.—The fifth Cardiganshire Musical Festival took place in University Hall on May 16. As usual the morning was devoted to a children's programme, with about twenty children's choirs taking part, accompanied by the Aberystwyth Junior Orchestra and conducted by Miss Esmé Silver. In the afternoon a mixed vocal and orchestral programme was given, with the assistance of a contingent of the Welsh Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Bumford Griffiths. Schubert's 'Unfinished' Symphony was the chief orchestral item. The evening session consisted of a performance of 'Judas Maccabæus,' conducted by Mr. J. T. Rees. Eleven choirs took part, and the soloists were Miss Elsie Suddaby, Miss Myfanwy Ellis, Mr. Francis Russell, and Mr. Ceredig Jones.

BANGOR.—At the last College concert of the season Miss Kathleen Washbourne and her orchestra played Vaughan Williams's 'The Lark Ascending.' Miss Martha Servine joined the College players on May 24 in a programme of her own compositions—a Pianoforte Trio, a Violin Sonata, and twelve Preludes for pianoforte. Works recently performed under College auspices have included 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast,' Schumann's Pianoforte Concerto, a Bach Concerto for two violins, the C minor String Quartet of Brahms, the Violin Sonatas of Elgar and Franck, Beethoven's 'Cello Sonata in A, and Trios by Haydn, Mozart, and John Ireland.——Students of Bangor Normal College gave creditable performances of Brahms's 'Song of Destiny' and the concert version of 'Semele' under the direction of Miss Ceridwen Lloyd.

CAERPHILLY.—On May 21 the Caerphilly and District Choral Society, conducted by Mr. Edgar J. Reynolds, united with the National Orchestra of Wales, conducted by Mr. Warwick Braithwaite, to give a mixed choral and orchestral concert. Choral numbers included Wagner's 'Hail, bright abode,' McCunn's 'The Wreck of the Hesperus,' and Stanford's 'The Revenge.'

CARDIFF.—At the closing College concert on May 19 the College choir, conducted by Prof. David Evans, gave a fine performance of Vaughan Williams's Mass in G minor. The programme also included the same composer's 'Concerto Accademico' for violin and strings, with Mr. Hubert Davies as the soloist, and a String Quartet by Wyndham Williams, a student of the College.——The first series of subscription concerts in the City Hall, arranged by the co-operation of the Cardiff City Council, the B.B.C., and the National Council of Music, came to an end on May 19, when the programme included Rimsky-Korsakov's Overture to 'Ivan,' Liszt's first Hungarian Rhapsody, and Saint-Saëns's 'Africa' Fantasia for pianoforte and orchestra, played by Miss Renée Sweetland. At the previous concert, on May 17, Elgar's arrangement of Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in C minor, and Mozart's G minor Symphony were in the programme. The mid-day and afternoon concerts in the National Museum of Wales are being continued.——On May 25 a choral and orchestral concert was given by the Cardiff Musical Society in conjunction with the National Orchestra of Wales. The choral items consisted of madrigals and part-songs by Benet, Byrd, Morley, Sullivan, and others.

NEWTOWN (Mon.).—The eighth annual County Festival took place on May 17, when twenty choirs, totalling approximately a thousand voices, assembled in the Pavilion. The orchestra numbered sixty-five, and consisted of local players augmented by members of the Birmingham City Orchestra and the Welsh Symphony Orchestra. At the afternoon meeting the choral items included Gounod's 'By Babylon's Wave,' Stanford's 'Heraclitus' (which achieved a great success), Walford Davies's 'Lord, it belongs not to my care,' and Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens.' Orchestral items consisted of the Overture to 'William Tell,' the first 'Peer Gynt' Suite, and the Overture to 'Rienzi.' Two special features of the afternoon were Schubert's Trio in E flat for pianoforte and strings, played by Mr. Charles Clements (pianoforte), Miss Evelyn Cook (violin), and Mr. Arthur Williams ('cello), and the slow movement and Finale from Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, in which Miss Cook took the solo part. Mr. Horace Stevens sang 'Good fellows all, be merry,' from Bach's 'Peasant' Cantata, and other vocal solos were given by Miss Elsie Suddaby, Miss Catherine Stewart, and Mr. R. A. Bryan. 'Elijah' was given at the evening session with the four soloists above-named. The conductors during the day were Dr. Adrian Boult and Mr. W. R. Allen.

GENERAL.—Church Choral Festivals, Singing Festivals (Cymanfa Ganu), and local Eisteddfodau are taking place in all parts of the Principality. The long daylight in the early part of summer, the passable state of the roads in country districts, the lighter demands of farm work at this time of year, and the comparative absence of visitors, all combine to make this period an ideal time for these festivals of song, which are the result of long hours of preparation during the winter and early spring.

TOWN WAITS AND THEIR TUNES

At the February meeting of the Musical Association, a paper on 'Town Waits and their Tunes' was read by the President, Prof. J. C. Bridge. He said that little justice had been done to them by historical writers, but they were important town officials and, in many cases, skilful musicians. 'Wait' was a 'Watchman.' The word might be traced through Teutonic dialects from the Anglo-Saxon 'Wacian' up to the German 'Wachter,' both meaning to watch or guard. First of all the Waits were night watchmen in castles and walled towns, who piped watch at stated hours during the night and perhaps for the purpose of changing guard, and awoke certain persons at appointed times by soft music at their chamber doors. When castles were disused and towns grew larger and demanded better protection than a musical policeman, a proper watch was formed, and the Waits became a mere musical combination, and in most places civic officers.

They used sometimes to attend the mayor and aldermen to church on principal festivals, besides playing at certain times about a town. Another function was to meet any illustrious stranger when he arrived at their town and play him to his lodgings. This was always a great perquisite of the Waits at Bath, who were good musicians. At Whitehaven, they attended weddings, and the arrival of seafaring men from their voyages, and at Liverpool also they were in the habit of going to the houses of the masters of vessels on the day after that of their arrival in port, and playing before their doors by way of welcoming them home.

In London, there were not only the City Waits, but Waits in all the wards, such as Blackfriars, Tower Hamlets, Southwark, Finsbury, and also the City of Westminster. Burney says that the Blackfriars Waits were the best, but Hawkins seems to show that the Tower Hamlets ran them very close.

These town bands must have supplied themselves with special music, and almost every town had its own particular tune, a few being still extant. Some were evidently for wind and some for string instruments, but all were of a simple nature, for they had to be memorised, and, moreover, often played with very cold fingers. London Waits were nine in number, to correspond to the Muses. In 1802 they were replaced by trumpeters. In 1854 it was decided to fill no more vacancies. In 1914 they were abolished, and it was decided to employ the trumpeters of the Household Cavalry in their stead.

Although a Wait was necessarily a minstrel, every minstrel was not a Wait. At Chester the Fraternity of Minstrels was kept quite apart from the City Waits. At York, on the other hand, the Guild of Minstrels included the Waits. Such Guilds were Trades Unions and governed by similar restrictions, and peaceful picketing was freely indulged in. No minstrel at York could accept an apprentice for less than seven years, with the exception of the Waits, who were allowed to hire assistance when civic functions were more numerous or more pressing than usual. No musician could perform in that City unless he were a member of the Guild, but such rules led to retaliation, and at Doncaster an itinerant musician was promptly ordered to leave the town because ' he was one of the Waytes of York.'

A very tight hand was kept on the Waits by the civic authorities, who, however, were sometimes set at defiance. Undoubtedly Waits were troublesome people. Although they made harmony, they were rarely harmonious amongst themselves. For sheer unresolved discord the Waits of Leicester seem to have been the worst. We read that, in 1602, ' the Waits, because they cannot agree together, are therefore now dismissed from being the Town Waits from henceforth.' Similar disorders were recorded at Canterbury, Chester, and other places.

The numbers varied. In London there were nine, but in other places there were usually three to five. The Waits were always provided with official dress, generally given every second year, consisting of variously coloured gowns or cloaks, which were sometimes ornamented with gold or silver lace. On the sleeves of these gowns, or on their cloaks, many Waits wore an embroidered badge. This was a survival or an imitation of the badges worn by the dependents of great noblemen. But the greatest glory of the Waits was in the silver collars, badges, and chains with which they were provided by many Corporations. Some of these were unfortunately sold when the Municipal Reform Act of 1835 was passed, but some examples had been recovered, and we had descriptions of others. These badges were of considerable monetary value.

The instruments varied, but there was little doubt that at first they were wind instruments, as being more effective and better heard in the open air. Early players used trumpets (called shawms) and other brass instruments, but many seemed to have been very partial to an instrument of the hautboy family, which was called a Wayte. There had been much discussion as to whether the instrument took its name from the player or vice versâ, but there was really no doubt on the matter. The derivation of Wait or Watchman was certain, but there was no derivation whatever for Wayte as an instrument other than that it was derived from the player. These Waytes were the later Cornetts. As time went on string instruments were added, though these must have been rather feeble out of doors, and they could not have been used when the Waits rode in procession, as they often had to do. Sometimes the instruments were provided by the town and sometimes by the players. This last arrangement gave rise to many squabbles.

The standing wage of the Waits was not large, but it was substantially increased by the fees received for riding in processions, or playing at mayors' banquets and at weddings, while it must be remembered that they were a Trades Union and allowed no free trade in music. At Leicester in 1581 the regulation ran : ' It is agreed that every inhabitant or householder in Leicester (being of reasonable ability) shall be taxed (at the discretion of the Mayor) what they shall quarterly give to the Waytes towards the amending of their living. In consideration whereof the said Waytes shall keep the Town, and to play every night and morning orderly, both winter and summer, and not to go forth of the town to play except to fairs and weddings, and then by licence of the Mayor. Item, that no strangers, viz., Waytes, minstrels, or other musicians whatsoever be suffered to play within this town, neither at weddings nor fair times, or any other times whatsoever.'

The Waits from early times took part in public plays, interludes, pageants, &c. In fact, no public ceremony was complete without them. There were many records of this in different places. At Norwich, for example, in 1570, it is stated that ' the whole company of Waytes of this Citie did come into this Court and craved that they might have leve to play Comodies and Interludes and such other pieces and Tragedes which shall seem to them meete ; which petition is granted, they not playing in the Tyme of Divine Service and Sermons.'

The Norwich Waits were the most celebrated of all. They were undoubtedly singers, actors, and instrumentalists of more than ordinary ability, and their fame was widespread. When Queen Elizabeth made a great entry into Norwich, in 1578, she was greeted with music, and there is a tradition which asserts that she gave each of the five Waits an instrument and also a house in King Street. Sir Francis Drake kept considerable state on board his ship, and in 1589, before starting on his expedition under Sir John Norris to 'singe the King of Spain's beard,' he applied to the Corporation of Norwich for the Waits to accompany him as his private band. The voyage was a failure, and the mortality was enormous. Of the six Waits, only two returned.

The illustrations to the lecture comprised various Wait tunes connected with London, Colchester, Tower Hamlets, York, Stamford, Warrington, Oxford, and Chester, which were played by Dr. Bridge (pianoforte), Mr. Joshua Goldstein (violin), and Mr. C. F. Peters (horn), the two last being scholars of Trinity College of Music. Canon the Rev. F. W. Galpin also brought with him a genuine old Wayte-pipe, on which he played ' London Waits.'

---

Mr. R. M. Cadman is retiring in August from the post of Music Director at Trent College, Long Eaton, Nottingham, after twenty years' service.

Musical Notes from Abroad

GERMANY

THE NEW STRAUSS OPERA AT DRESDEN

After an interval of nearly nine years, which had been filled by some smaller works, a new grand opera by Richard Strauss, called 'The Egyptian Helen,' appeared at the Dresden Staatsoper, which for almost thirty years has had the privilege of producing Strauss operas for the first time. It was therefore not surprising that on the appointed day, June 6, a great part of the musical world had assembled at Dresden, anxious to hear the results of the artistic labour of so many years. Of course, even the smaller works had proved that Richard Strauss, after the comparative failure of 'Die Frau ohne Schatten,' had abandoned the idea of producing anything of a novel cast. He had made up his mind to go on in the direction of his later works, i.e., to obtain a balance between the singer and the orchestra without giving up his individual methods.

It cannot be denied that he has attained the synthesis at which he aimed, but that, on the other hand, his individual style has become thinner than one had expected twenty years ago. What he calls melody has nothing to do with what we regard as melodic in the works of the great masters. Even Puccini's cantilena, though not based on a texture so complicated as that of Strauss, seems more noble than Straussian melody. The composer is evidently inspired by the wish to please the public as much as possible. But there is in Strauss's music an excess of sweetness. We must not doubt his sincerity, but we doubt his self-criticism. The traces of 'Ariadne' and of 'Der Rosenkavalier' are to be recognised by everybody; at the same time Wagner, who had always stood in the background of Strauss's music, makes his appearance in so sensational a way that even the most uncritical hearer cannot overlook it. The Straussian and the Wagnerian elements of the score are seasoned by the composer with his well-known cleverness, but the sauce which is destined to sweeten this composition has a bad taste. Simplicity, in this case, begins to be a vice; the more so because the libretto knows nothing at all of this directness.

The book has been written by a poet, Hugo von Hofmannsthal, who certainly possesses a genuine feeling for music, but who is at the same time intellectualised to such an extent that he hardly succeeds in giving the composer clear outlines or plastic scenes. The libretto of 'The Egyptian Helen' cannot be understood even by one who has read it. It is very difficult for him to decide with which of the two Helens he has to do—with the Egyptian who has been dramatized as the faithful wife of Menelaus, or with the other, who by her adventures had caused the Trojan war. Menelaus himself is, in two Acts, represented as a man who, usually bearing a dagger in his mouth or in his hands, and ready to kill Helen, has been brought, by means of Lethe or similar potions administered to him by Aithra, into such a state of insanity that he is unable to decide whether the real or the unreal Helen is standing before him. At last he is convinced of the reality of her appearance by the fact that their daughter Hermione, who has grown up in the meantime, arrives on horseback. Both recognise her; and Menelaus, ready to acknowledge the fait accompli, departs with Helen, whom he loves, to Sparta.

The first Act is not devoid of interest, but the second proves really tedious, mainly because Strauss (accustomed to offering musical sacrifices to family life) dwells overmuch on this reunion, with cloying results.

The performance did its best to assure a triumph for the composer. But the external signs of a great success are no criterion as to the value of this work, which certainly will not win a permanent place in the repertory.

Fritz Busch conducted the performance with great energy, emphasising everything that was calculated to make the opera successful. Elizabeth Rethberg sang the part of Helen with all the sweetness asked of her by the composer, but as an actress she did not come up to expectations. Maria Rajdl as Aithra vied with Helen in impressing the audience. Curt Taucher as Menelaus hardly suggested the lover, so far as his vocal powers were concerned.

ERNST KRENEK'S THREE ONE-ACT OPERAS

At Wiesbaden, on May 5, three one-Act operas by Ernst Krenek revealed a representative of the modern school progressing on his way to normal opera. It goes without saying that Krenek, who is his own librettist, does not devote his efforts to past prima donnas such as Helen, but takes his plot from actual life, whether amusing or depressing. In the first piece his protagonist is a dictator, who falls in love with the wife of a young officer blinded in the war; the third piece derides a master-boxer, whom his wife deceives with a young man physically weaker but far more sly than the boxer. The middle piece, however, which bears the title of 'The Secret Kingdom,' leads us into pure romanticism, for it sings the triumph of great qualities over external power.

Both the every-day Krenek and the romantic have been, to a certain degree, anticipated by his successful —rather too successful—'Jonny spielt auf,' that jazz-opera which, at least for a season, has been the catchword of most opera-houses in Germany, and which is to be performed also at Paris and at New York. No doubt the theatrical gifts of Ernst Krenek are superior to his musical talents. His musical essence is not first-rate, nor is his way of handling his material out of the ordinary. He takes the good wherever he finds it, and very skilfully adapts it to the spirit of the theatre as he sees it. His conversational style is open to objection, his scoring does not always please our ears. To this reproach, however, Krenek replies that he does not want to write beautiful music. Why, then, does he become so romantic—why does he ally himself again to Franz Schreker, his former teacher, whom he had left very far behind in his earlier work? Let us not forget that with all his talents and achievements, Ernst Krenek is only twenty-seven years old. He has not yet found a style of his own, in spite of some critics who have discovered it. What he gives us for the present is very interesting, sometimes very amusing (as in the last piece of the trilogy) but not always very important. The romanticism of 'The Secret Kingdom' seems promising. This unsentimental romantic tendency will bear its fruits.

The performance of the trilogy afforded Paul Bekker, the Intendant of the Wiesbaden Staatstheater, an opportunity of making known his programme. The Festival, of which it was the first evening, made a contrast with those that had taken place under the imperial regime. Meyerbeer has been replaced by Krenek. Perhaps the great public will not share the opinion of the Intendant and of his ministerial protectors. Let us, however, praise the furthering of the young composers.

ADOLF WEISSMANN.

HOLLAND

A 'Netherlands Music Exhibition and Netherlands Musical Festival,' held in the Scheveningen Kurhaus from May 26 to June 3, was more interesting on the exhibitional than on the festival side. The latter consisted of a series of fifteen concerts and two lectures, in the programmes of which no new works and few that were unfamiliar were brought forward. The best that can be said is that they were comprehensive and representative. Besides works dating from the golden age of Netherlands music, and some of those of Richard Hol, Gottfried Mann, Coenen, Diepenbrock, and Zweers, examples by over thirty living composers were also performed. J. P. J. Wierts, with a sacred cantata, and Sigtenhorst Meyer, with a miscellaneous programme, were the only two to have whole concerts to themselves, though Willem Pijper, Willem Andriessen, Alex Voormolen, and Dina Appeldoorn figured frequently in the other programmes. Apart from these the standard of work was not on the whole a high one. The chief interest in the exhibition centred in a collection of violins, with two or three other stringed instruments, a harpsichord, harmonium, several pianofortes, a carillon clavier, &c. The violins—apart from a certain number, all on good models, by present-day Dutch makers—had been drawn together from various private and public museums by Mr. D. J. Balfoort, the conservator of the Scheurleer Museum and a leading authority on the subject. All were of Dutch make, and ranged from a viola da gamba by John Roos, dating from 1587, probably the oldest Dutch-made instrument in existence to-day, to those of Duwaer and Hampe in the second half of the 19th century. They included three by Johannes Cuypers (although up till now it had not been known that more than one Cuypers still remained in Holland), and several by his sons, Johannes Franciscus and Johannes Bernardus; also examples of the whalebone purfled instruments of Hendrik Jacobsz and his famous pupil, Pieter Rombouts. Among other curiosities were a mahogany violin by Jacobsz, and one by Jan Heefke, dating from 1775, which had been buried with its owner probably several generations ago and recently disinterred from the churchyard at Tilburg, and a fine violin with inlaid fingerboard of which the maker is not known, but which would appear almost certainly to be Dutch. The Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche Muziekgeschiedenis, the Royal Library at The Hague, the Scheurleer Library, the Royal Conservatorium at The Hague, and a large number of publishers, lent manuscripts and published works of various periods. During a tour round Holland of journalists visiting the Olympic Games, a visit was made to Maastricht, where a concert was given by the Royal Choral Society 'De Mastreechter Staar,' a particularly fine male-voice choir of about two hundred and fifty voices, under the direction of Mr. Pieter Gielen. The programme was not ambitious, except for a remarkable impressionist work, 'Foi,' by Jules Sauveniere, but throughout it was performed in a manner that stamped the choir as one of the very highest quality. At the time of writing the Swedish 'Servants of Orpheus,' conducted by Hugo Alfven, are announced to appear, but their concerts take place too late for notice this month. The Scheveningen summer concerts started on June 15, the conductors this year being again Prof. Georg Schnéevoigt and Ignaz Neumark.

HERBERT ANTCLIFFE.

ITALY

PIZZETTI'S 'FRA GHERARDO'

The first performance of Pizzetti's new opera, 'Fra Gherardo,' was given recently at La Scala, with Toscanini conducting and Trantoul in the title-part. The libretto is by Pizzetti himself.

Fra Gherardo is a priest of the days of the Italian Renaissance, who, in an excess of piety, becomes a fanatic and a revolutionary. The story traces his career for some ten years, ending with his execution and the death of a woman of the people, Mariola by name, whose life has been emotionally involved with his. The drama revolves round these two principal figures, and in laying out his material the author manages to put into their mouths just the words that would appear most natural. There are moments when one would wish for a little more strength and manliness from Gherardo, but to have made him more heroic than his life and actions demanded would have been too great a concession to popular fancy. It is a pity, however, that the author chose such a plot and character for his work, as this is really the only reason why the opera may not be acclaimed even the greatest music-drama of the decade, or possibly since Wagner.

From the pen of so esteemed a composer as Ildebrando Pizzetti one expects music of the best modern idiom, and he is not disappointed. Throughout the score there is abundant and prolific musical invention. The choruses are especially well done. Pizzetti is well known in this branch of composition, but it is extremely doubtful if he has ever written anything quite so good as some of the finer of the concerted numbers in 'Fra Gherardo.' His orchestration is not always perfect, but the weaker moments are rare, and would pass the average observer by. The vocal lines are, as a rule, pretty difficult, and bear rather pitilessly at times upon the frailties of the human vocal organ. Gherardo's part lies almost all within the compass of a brilliant baritone, and calls for a declamation in the middle and lower registers that would have certainly been assigned to a baritone in the days of Rossini; then, within a couple of phrases, he is sustaining high B naturals that need a very secure tenor to handle them. In a word, Fra Gherardo must be a tenor of extraordinary capabilities. The rôle of Mariola is very dramatically conceived, and calls for a good deal of the sort of singing that is, unless well done, apt to leave the voice rough for a couple of days. The accompaniments are not only cleverly conceived on art-song lines, but are spontaneous and rich without being prodigal. Of the interludes the best is where the scene closes on the mutual discovery of the two lovers. There is a wealth of colour, strength, and fineness in this that calls for the highest praise.

In the performance an extraordinary success was achieved. On the second night the entire house was sold out, a fact that to the theatrical man is full of significance. Antoine Trantoul, the hero of the 'Otello' revival, was the principal singer, and gave a magnificent account of himself. His is probably the only tenor voice in Italy capable of doing the part. Both vocally and interpretatively his work was satisfactory in the extreme. In the robes of Mariola, the Rumanian soprano Florica Cristoforeanu sang with brilliance and great dramatic intensity, using her fine vocal resources with taste and effect, and in the minor parts of Bishop and Mayor the baritones Fatticanti and Baccaloni respectively earned well-merited recognition. Under Toscanini the orchestra left nothing to be desired. What there was to hear was produced to the utmost advantage, and the popular director, together with the composer and the artists, were the recipients of abundant and well-voiced public approval.

THE BERLIN SINGAKADEMIE AT LA SCALA

The B minor Mass and 'Israel in Egypt,' under Schumann, at La Scala, were the occasion of mingled enthusiasm and disappointment. The choir was of two hundred and fifty voices, and showed a much greater accuracy in its work than is to be found in an Italian body. On the whole the technique was of a very high order, although not, I think, quite so good as that of some of the English choral bodies. The tone was not as brilliant and clear as is expected south of the Alps, nor was there any superabundance of 'temperament' shown in the performance as a whole. The soloists were very satisfactory, especially the women, but a throatiness inevitably connected with the language was much more apparent with the men. The two works being too familiar to the English reader to require details, it remains but to add an appreciation of the fine conducting of Dr. Schumann.

CHARLES D'IF.

---

The programme of the Haslemere Festival (August 20-September 1), contains, as usual, many novelties and features of interest. The Rebec will be used in some of the dances, Mr. Dolmetsch having devoted special study to the instrument during the past year. Works new to the Festival are pieces for various combinations of viols by Byrd, Corkine, and Ferrabosco; for sets of five violins by Vecchi, Legrenzi, Albonini, &c. Special concerts will be devoted to Purcell, Bach, the music of various nations, dance music, &c. Tickets and all particulars from Messrs. Charman, High Street, Haslemere.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

JAMES ROBERT STERNDALE BENNETT, at Dymchurch, Kent, on June 4, when within a few days of his eighty-first birthday. He was the younger son of the composer, but did not follow music as a profession. Nevertheless it was one of the chief interests of his life, and in his capacity as schoolmaster at Sherborne and later at Derby School (where he was headmaster for ten years) he did much to develop the musical side of school work. During his Cambridge days he was one of the founders of the Musical Society of his College (St. John's). In 1908 he published a life of his father, and he also contributed some important articles to 'Grove.'

ERNEST BRIAN BISHOP, on May 19, at Kettering aged seventy-one. For forty-nine years he held the post of organist at SS. Peter & Paul Parish Church, Kettering, retiring last year. Formerly he was organist at Grinton, Yorkshire, were, at the age of nineteen, he succeeded the late Dr. Creser.

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Reconstitution of the I.S.M. | 593 |
| Schubert's Style. IV.—Rhythm and Tempo. By Richard Capell | 595 |
| 'Charles Auchester.' By Rutherford Crockett | 599 |
| The Limits of Music. By Leonid Sabaneev | 602 |
| Chopin: His Wit and Humour. By Mrs. Frank Liebich | 604 |
| Music in the Foreign Press. By M. D. Calvocoressi | 606 |
| The Musicians' Bookshelf | 607 |
| A New Setting of 'The Blessed Damozel' | 611 |
| Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus' | 614 |
| New Light on Late Tudor Composers. XXXV.—Robert Jones. By W. H. Grattan Flood | 616 |
| Dr. Frank Bates's Retirement (with portrait) | 617 |
| 'The Egyptian Helen' | 618 |
| Occasional Notes | 619 |
| Charles Dibdin: A Retrospect (with portrait). By W. A. Roberts | 622 |
| New Music | 624 |
| Wireless Notes. By 'Ariel' | 633 |
| Teachers' Department: | |
| The Self-Expression of Children in Music. II.—By R. H. Hull | 635 |
| Points from Lectures | 636 |
| Answers to Correspondents | 637 |
| Church and Organ Music | 638 |
| Royal College of Organists | 638 |
| Letters to the Editor | 640 |
| The Amateurs' Exchange | 645 |
| Sharps and Flats | 645 |
| Sixty Years Ago | 646 |
| Royal Academy of Music | 646 |
| Royal College of Music | 647 |
| 'Hiawatha' as a Masque, at the Albert Hall | 647 |
| Trinity College of Music | 647 |
| H.M. Royal Marines Band, Chatham | 647 |
| Covent Garden Opera Season | 647 |
| Opera at the Court Theatre | 648 |
| Masefield's 'The Coming of Christ.' By Dymeley Hussey | 649 |
| The Rome Copyright Conference: Chief Changes in International Convention | 650 |
| London Concerts | 651 |
| Music in the Provinces | 653 |
| Competition Festival Record | 653 |
| Music in Wales | 655 |
| Town Waits and their Tunes | 655 |
| Musical Notes from Abroad | 657 |
| Obituary | 657 |

MUSIC.

| | |
|---|---|
| "All ye who music love." Madrigal. By Balthazar Donato (1548 1603) | 625 |

EXTRA SUPPLEMENT given with this number:
'Let all the world.' Anthem. By Eric H. Thiman.

YOUNG SINGERS
Their Voice Cultivation and Preservation.

A concise, comprehensive, up-to-date guide to all engaged in teaching voice-production, enunciation, and singing to boys and girls

By JAMES BATES

To be obtained from:—
MESSRS. STAINER & BELL, 58, Berners Street, London, W.1.

Price One Shilling and Twopence, post free.

DURING THE LAST MONTH
Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED

ATKINS, IVOR.—"Ad lucem." School Song. 3d.

DONATO, B.—"All ye who music love." Madrigal for S.A.T.B. (No. 1025, The Musical Times.) 3d.

FLETCHER, PERCY E.—"When the green leaves come again." Two-Part Song for S.A. (No. 243, Novello's Octavo Edition of Two-Part Songs.) 4d.

KARG-ELERT, SIGFRID.—Partita in E, Op. 100. (No. 114, Original Compositions for the Organ—New Series.) 5s. 6d.

ROSCOE, REV. J. E.—A Chant Communion Service. 6d.

SALMOND, M. A. C.—"Beachley." March for Pianoforte Solo. 1s.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 433, contains the following music in both notations. "The Bells of St. Michael's Tower." Two-Part Song. Adapted from Sir R. P. Stewart's setting. 2d.

SCHOOL SONGS.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation. A. B.
No. 1493. "When the green leaves come again." Two-part Song.
PERCY E. FLETCHER — 3d.

THIMAN, ERIC H.—"Let all the world." Anthem. (No. 1151, Novello's Octavo Anthems.) 4d.

TONIC SOL-FA PUBLICATIONS:
ROBSON, R. WALKER.—"O Lord, support us." Anthem ... ... ... ... 2d.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:
No. 2563. "In Derry Vale" (The Londonderry Air). Arranged as a Trio for S.S.C., by W. MCNAUGHT ... ... 2d.

WEATHERDON, H. B. — "Pièce Idéale." For Organ. 1s. 6d.

WILLIAMS, C. LEE.—"A Harnet zet in a hollow tree." Part-Song for S.A.T.B. 4d.
—— "The Curfew tolls the knell." Part-Song for S.A.T.B. 3d.
—— "The despairing lover." Part-Song for S.A.T.B. 3d.

PUBLISHED FOR
THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK

LUTKIN, P. C.—"The Knight of Bethlehem." Motet for Mixed Voices. 12 cents (6d.).

THOMAS, L.—Jubilate Deo, in E flat. 15 cents (8d.).

ASSISTANT-ORGANIST REQUIRED for St. Stephen's, Battersea. Use of organ in return for services. Write, "V. G. B.," 59, Kelmscott Road, Wandsworth Common, S.W.11.

BASS LEADER REQUIRED.—Congregational Church in Croydon. Must be an experienced sight-reader, and good soloist. £20 per annum. Reply, Box 51, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—"APOLLO" PEDAL REED Two-Manual Organ, cost £195. Practically new. Offers wanted. Also electric blower, cost £80. "D. J. M.," 6, Queen Anne's Gate, S.W.1.

IMPORTANT TO COMPOSERS.—Send stamp for our latest prospectus on music publishing. The Norman Reed Music Company, 133a, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF MUSIC at a Public School where the Chapel Music is a special feature, will have a VACANCY for an ARTICLED PUPIL in September. Board and rooms in College, and small salary. Duties: light secretarial work and some piano teaching. Good opportunity for one desiring time for private work, and for the study of Choir-training, Plainsong accompaniment, and Church music. Apply, Box 54, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

HARVEST FESTIVAL MUSIC

CANTATAS

A GOLDEN HARVEST

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS
WITH HYMNS TO BE SUNG BY THE CONGREGATION

THE WORDS AND HYMNS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY H. KNIGHT

THE MUSIC BY
THOMAS ADAMS

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

THE RAINBOW OF PEACE

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN

THE MUSIC BY
THOMAS ADAMS

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

HARVEST-TIDE

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN OR SMALL ORCHESTRA

THE MUSIC BY
HUGH BLAIR

Price One Shilling and Sixpence; Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR CHORUS, SEMI-CHORUS, AND ORGAN

THE WORDS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY
J. F. WALLER

THE MUSIC BY
G. M. GARRETT

Price One Shilling and Sixpence. Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100; or with Music to the Hymns, 12s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

RUTH

FOR SOPRANO, CONTRALTO, AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY
E. OXENFORD

THE MUSIC BY
ALFRED R. GAUL

Price Three Shillings.
Paper boards, Four Shillings; Cloth, Six Shillings.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. Choruses only, 1s. 6d. Book of Words, 6s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR SOPRANO (OR TENOR) AND CONTRALTO (OR BARITONE) SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY
R. D. BETJEMANN

THE MUSIC BY
JULIUS HARRISON

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

SONG OF THANKSGIVING

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS (OR CONTRALTO) SOLI AND CHORUS.
WITH HYMNS TO BE SUNG BY THE CONGREGATION

THE WORDS WRITTEN AND ARRANGED BY
S. WENSLEY

THE MUSIC BY
J. H. MAUNDER

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence:
Paper boards, Three Shillings and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100;
String Parts, price 13s. 6d.; Wind Parts, 21s. 5d.; Full Score, MS.

THE JUBILEE CANTATA

FOR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

THE MUSIC BY
C. M. WEBER

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Paper boards, Two Shillings and Sixpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.
String Parts, 12s.; Wind Parts, 9s. 8d.; Full Score on hire.

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST

FOR SOPRANO AND TENOR SOLI AND CHORUS

THE MUSIC BY
JOHN E. WEST

Price Three Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100; or 3d. each with Music to the Hymns.
Orchestral Parts can be hired.

A HARVEST SONG

FOR SOPRANO SOLO AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY
J. BENNETT

THE MUSIC BY
C. LEE WILLIAMS

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.
String Parts, 9s. 9d.; Full Score and Wind Parts, MS.

HYMNS AND CAROLS.

BARNBY, J.—Come, ye thankful people, come ... ... ... 1½d.
Harvest-tide thanksgiving, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 2s.
Let all our brethren join in one ... ... ... ... ... 1½d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
Lord of the harvest, Thee we hail (Two Versions) each 3d.
O Lord of heaven and earth and sea ... ... ... ... 1½d.
Praise, O praise, our God and King ... ... ... ... 3d.
Sing to the Lord a joyful song ... ... ... ... ... 3d.
Sower went forth sowing, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... 2d.
BUNNETT, ED.—Sing to the Lord a joyful song ... ... 1½d.
CRAMENT, J. M.—Sowing and reaping (Carol)
Words only, per 100 2s.
DYKES, J. B.—Holy is the seed-time ... ... ... ... 2d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
GILBERT, B.—Come, ye thankful people, come ... ... 1½d.
HARVEY, W. C.—We thank Thee, Lord, for this fair earth (Children's voices) (Staff and Sol-fa Notations) ... ... 1½d.
HERVEY, F. A. J.—Make melody within your hearts (Carol) 2d.
KETÈLBEY, A. W.—God with plenty fills the hours ... ... 4d.
LEE, T.—King and Ruler of Creation ... ... ... ... 4d.
LOWE, A.—Holy is the seed-time (Carol) ... ... ... 2d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
MAUNDER, J. H.—Harvest Hymn of praise, A. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
Joy of Harvest, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
STIRLING, E.—Now Autumn strews on every plain ... ... 3d.
TOZER, F.—Lord of the rich and golden grain ... ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
TWELVE HYMNS selected from The Hymnary ... ... 1½d.

NOVELLO'S HARVEST ANTHEMS

SELECTED LIST

EVERY GOOD GIFT. By GEORGE RATHBONE.
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

THOMAS ADAMS
ALL THY WORKS PRAISE THEE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

IT IS A GOOD THING TO GIVE THANKS
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

W. G. ALCOCK
GIVE EAR, O YE HEAVENS
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. C. BAIRSTOW
I WILL GREATLY REJOICE
Price Fourpence.

J. BARNBY
THE EYES OF ALL WAIT UPON THEE
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HUGH BLAIR
OH, BRING TO THE LORD
Price Fourpence.

A. HERBERT BREWER
LET THE PEOPLE PRAISE THEE
Price Threepence.

EDWARD BUNNETT
BLESSED BE THOU, LORD GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.
O CLAP YOUR HANDS
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

PERCY C. BUCK
GOD BE MERCIFUL UNTO US
For Boys' Voices.
Price Fourpence.

H. A. CHAMBERS
IF YE WALK IN MY STATUTES
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

EDWARD ELGAR
FEAR NOT, O LAND
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

PERCY E. FLETCHER
LET THE PEOPLE PRAISE THEE
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

ALFRED R. GAUL
O BE JOYFUL IN THE LORD
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. M. GOODHART
LET US NOW FEAR THE LORD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

CUTHBERT HARRIS AND GOD SAID
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

SING A SONG OF PRAISE
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

ALFRED HOLLINS
GOD THE ALL-FATHERLY
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

ALBERT LOWE
THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

ARTHUR W. MARCHANT
I WILL MAGNIFY THEE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

GEORGE C. MARTIN
THUS SAITH THE LORD GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

E. W. NAYLOR
I WILL CAUSE THE SHOWER
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

J. VARLEY ROBERTS
BLESS THE LORD THY GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.
I WILL MAGNIFY THEE
Price Fourpence.

F. W. WADELY
PRAISE, O PRAISE OUR GOD
Price Threepence.

HERBERT W. WAREING
THE LORD GOD PLANTED A GARDEN
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HAROLD E. WATTS
THE GOD OF ABRAHAM PRAISE
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

JOHN E. WEST
PRAISE TO GOD, IMMORTAL PRAISE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

FATHER OF MERCIES, GOD OF LOVE
Arranged for Boys' or Female Voices.
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

W. WOLSTENHOLME
O THAT MEN WOULD PRAISE THE LORD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL FESTIVALS

SET IX. JUST PUBLISHED

HYMNS AND TUNES

SETS PUBLISHED IN BOTH NOTATIONS COMBINED

PRICE SIXPENCE PER SET. Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

SET I.

1. COME, CHILDREN, ON AND FORWARD ... ... G. C. MARTIN
2. FOR THE FRESHNESS OF THE MORNING ... LADY EUAN-SMITH
3. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ... ... FREDERIC CLAY
4. COME, O COME! IN PIOUS LAYS ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. THINE FOR EVER! GOD OF LOVE ... ... W. C. HARVEY
6. JESU, WHOM THY CHILDREN LOVE ... ... H. E. BUTTON
7. SWEETLY O'ER THE MEADOWS FAIR ... ... F. A. CHALLINOR
8. WOULD YOU GAIN THE BEST IN LIFE ... ... C. J. MAY
9. ON OUR WAY REJOICING ... ... ... WALTER B. GILBERT
10. NOW THE DAYLIGHT GOES AWAY ... ... ... J. ADCOCK

SET II.

1. AGAIN THE MORN OF GLADNESS... ... ... ... J. STAINER
2. THE ANGELS' SONG ... ... ... ALBERTO RANDEGGER
3. FORWARD, CHRISTIAN CHILDREN ... ... ... ALFRED MOFFAT
4. THE GOLDEN SHORE ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR ... ... ... JOHN E. WEST
6. ENTER WITH THANKSGIVING ... ... ... F. H. COWEN
7. MAN SHALL NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE ... J. V. ROBERTS
8. STARS, THAT ON YOUR WONDROUS WAY ... ... J. STAINER
9. THE DAY IS PAST AND OVER ... ... ... JOSEPH BARNBY
10. GOD WILL TAKE CARE OF YOU ... ... F. R. HAVERGAL

SET III.

1. WE MARCH, WE MARCH TO VICTORY ... ... ... J. BARNBY
2. HARK! HARK! THE ORGAN ... ... ... G. J. BENNETT
3. O WHAT CAN LITTLE HANDS DO? ... ... H. E. BUTTON
4. WHILE THE SUN IS SHINING ... ... ... T. ADAMS
5. I LOVE TO HEAR THE STORY ... ... ... H. J. GAUNTLETT
6. THE ROSEATE HUES OF EARLY DAWN ... ... A. SULLIVAN
7. LORD, THY CHILDREN GUIDE ... ... ... A. S. COOPER
8. IN OUR WORK AND IN OUR PLAY ... ... F. WESTLAKE
9. THE BEAUTIFUL LAND ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
10. GENTLE JESUS, MEEK AND MILD ... ... ... J. STAINER

SET IV.

1. THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF ENGLAND ... ... ... J. STAINER
2. THE CROWN IS WAITING ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
3. THE CITY OF LIGHT ... ... ... ...E. J. TROUP
4. HE DWELLS AMONG THE LILIES ... ... ...LADY EUAN SMITH
5. GOD IS IN HEAVEN! CAN HE HEAR ... ... H. E. BUTTON
6. THE GOOD SHEPHERD ... ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
7. A LITTLE KINGDOM I POSSESS ... ... ... R. S. NEWMAN
8. RAISE YOUR STANDARD, BROTHERS ... ... ... E. J. TROUP
9. FLOWERS ... ... ... ... ... ALBERTO RANDEGGER
10. JESUS, TENDER SHEPHERD, HEAR ME ... ... H. PARKER

SET V.

1. CREATOR, GOD, AND LORD ... ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
2. WHEN LOVE DRAWS NEAR ... ... ... ... E. J. TROUP
3. COME, PRAISE YOUR LORD ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
4. WE WILL PRAISE THEE ... ... ... ... ... J. STAINER
5. ABOVE THE CLEAR BLUE SKY ... ... HERBERT E. CRIMP
6. WE THANK THEE, LORD ... ... ... W. C. HARVEY
7. COME, FRIENDS, THE WORLD WANTS MENDING ... E. J. TROUP
8. COME, SING WITH HOLY GLADNESS ... ... G. W. TORRANCE
9. THE LESSON OF LOVE ... ... ... ... ... J. BARNBY
10. NOW THE DAY IS OVER ... ... ... ... F. W. BLUNT

SET VI.

1. HOSANNA WE SING ... ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
2. HEAVENLY FATHER, SEND THY BLESSING ... W. C. HARVEY
3. BLESSED JESU, WE CAN SEE THEE ... ... ... A. ROWLEY
4. THE DAYS OF OLD ... ... ... ... ETHEL BOYCE
5. WHAT IS THE GIFT ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
6. WHILE OUR LORD WAS PASSING BY ... ... ETHEL BOYCE
7. THE EARTH IS FAIR AND SWEET ... ... ... A. ROWLEY
8. PILGRIMS OF THE NIGHT ... ... ... ... O. KING
9. THE HOLY LIGHT ... ... ... ... ... C. H. LLOYD
10. NOW SINKS THE SUN ... ... ... ... ... C. J. MAY

SET VII.

1. LIFE'S GLAD MORNING ... ... ... ... G. C. MARTIN
2. JESU, BLESSED SAVIOUR ... ... ... A. HERBERT BREWER
3. COME, CHRISTIAN YOUTHS ... ... ... HARVEY GRACE
4. THY WORD IS LIKE A GARDEN ... ... ... E. H. THIMAN
5. GOD OF MERCY, THRONED ON HIGH ... ... HARVEY GRACE
6. GOD OF OUR FATHERS ... ... ... ... E. J. HOPKINS
7. WHEN THE LORD OF LOVE ... ... ... E. H. THIMAN
8. CHILDREN OF GOD ... ... ... ... ... F. G. RUSSELL
9. THE CHILDREN'S PRAYER ... ... ... ... R. MCLEOD
10. THE LORD BE WITH US ... ... ... ... ... C. J. MAY

SET VIII.

1. THE CHILDREN'S SONG ... ... ... GEORGE RATHBONE
2. THE CHILDREN'S FESTAL DAY ... ... ... J. H. ADAMS
3. SING ALOUD TO JESUS ... ... ... ... ALEC ROWLEY
4. LONG AGO SWEET VOICES CALLING ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
5. CHILDREN'S VOICES ... ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
6. AROUND THE THRONE OF GOD (Tune—"LASST UNS ERFREUEN") Arr. by IVOR ATKINS
7. GOD, WHO HATH MADE THE DAISIES ... ... ... R. MCLEOD
8. FOR EVER AND FOR EVER ... ... ... J. H. MAUNDER
9. FRAMER OF THE LIGHT ... ... ... R. WALKER ROBSON
10. THE JOYOUS DAY, O LORD, IS ENDING ... ... C. J. MAY

SET IX.

1. ALLELUIA! HEAR US SINGING ... ... ... H. E. BUTTON
2. SHEPHERD OF TENDER YOUTH ... ... ... H. A. CHAMBERS
3. FATHER, HEAR THY CHILDREN'S PRAISES GEORGE RATHBONE
4. GOD OF THE MORNING ... ... ... ... CHARLES BURNEY
5. LET ALL THE WORLD IN EVERY CORNER SING H. E. BUTTON
6. OUR HEARTS ARE FULL OF GLADNESS ... ... ALEC ROWLEY
7. THANKSGIVING ... ... ... ... ... MYLES B. FOSTER
8. GOD WHISPERS ... ... ... ... ... ROBERT MCLEOD
9. GOD IN ALL ... ... ... ... ... ... EDGAR MOY
10. HEAR THY CHILDREN, GENTLE JESUS ... ... ... C. J. MAY

The Hymns and Tunes may also be had in separate numbers, price 1½*d.* each

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.
"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC
BY
J. H. MAUNDER

| HARVEST ANTHEMS. | Staff Notation. | Tonic Sol-fa |
|---|---|---|
| Sing to the Lord of Harvest | 4d. | 3d. |
| While the earth remaineth | 4d. | 3d. |
| Blessed be the Name of the Lord | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICES | | |
| SERVICE IN G | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum | 4d. | 3d. |
| Benedicite, omnia Opera | 3d. | 3d. |
| Benedictus | 3d. | 3d. |
| Jubilate | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion | 10d. | 8d. |
| Pater Noster from the above | 3d. | 3d. |
| Amen ditto | 1½d. | 1½d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) | 1s. 4d. | 10d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion | 8d. | 6d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis | 4d. | 3d. |
| Te Deum in B flat | 4d. | 3d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) | 4d. | 2d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D | 4d. | 3d. |
| ORGAN. | | |
| Voix Seraphique (for Recitals) | 2s. 6d. | — |
| CHURCH CANTATA. | | |
| Penitence Pardon, and Peace (for general use) | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

GOD WITHIN

MOTET

FOR CHORUS, ORCHESTRA, AND ORGAN

Composed for the 274th Festival of the Sons of the Clergy

BY

A. HERBERT BREWER

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

New Numbers in the "YORK SERIES."

ALLELUIA HAIL WITH GLADNESS.
J. LAMONT GALBRAITH.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

CROWN OF LIFE.
NOEL HANNENFORD.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

THE SHEFFIELD CATHEDRAL DESCANTS.
(24 Settings of Popular Hymn Tunes.)
By T. W. HANFORTH.
Price 6d.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

Popular Cantatas for Harvest

A JOYFUL THANKSGIVING
S.A.T. & B. SOLOISTS AND CHORUS
By CALEB SIMPER
Vocal Score, 2s. net. Sol-fa, 1s. 4d. net. Words only, 3d.
(Orchestral Parts published.)
¶ Very melodious, not difficult, about 35 minutes.

THE ROLLING SEASONS
(60th Thousand).
S.A.T. & B. SOLOISTS AND CHORUS
By CALEB SIMPER
Vocal Score, 2s. net. Sol-fa, 1s. 4d. net. Words only, 3d.
(Orchestral Parts published.)
¶ This tuneful work is enormously popular, about 35 minutes.

THY BOUNTEOUS GIFTS
S.A.T. & B. SOLOISTS AND CHOIR, OR CHOIR AND SCHOOL
By CALEB SIMPER
Vocal Score, 8d. net.
¶ A beautiful Choral Anthem or Short Cantata. About 15 minutes.

O GIVE THANKS
S.T. & B. SOLOISTS, CHORUS AND CONGREGATION
(Optional.)
By A. J. JAMOUNEAU
Vocal Score (both notations), 1s. net.
¶ Melodious, and not difficult. About 40 minutes.

Send for Specimens on appro.

Popular Anthems for Harvest
BY CALEB SIMPER
57 Separate Anthems which have run into over 2,500 Editions.
Special List on application.

| GEORGE BELCHER | |
|---|---|
| A handful of corn | 4d. |
| I will greatly rejoice in the Lord | 4d. |
| Serve the Lord with gladness | 4d. |
| The finest of the wheat | 4d. |
| Thou crownest the year with Thy goodness | 4d. |
| ARTHUR BERRIDGE | |
| All things praise Thee, Lord Most High | 4d. |
| Lord of the harvest | 4d. |
| O thank the Lord | 4d. |
| Praise waiteth for Thee | 4d. |
| The God of harvest praise | 4d. |
| The joy of harvest | 4d. |
| Thee, Lord of harvest, we adore | 4d. |
| REV. E. VINE-HALL | |
| Come, ye thankful people, come | 4d. |
| O praise God in His Holiness | 4d. |
| Thou visitest the earth | 4d. |
| While the earth remaineth | 4d. |

The publishers very heartily commend these Anthems to all Choirs needing bright and tuneful works for the approaching Festival. They are well harmonized, without any great technical difficulties, and are full of interest.

All Anthems also in Sol-fa at 3d. each.

Send for a Selection on appro.

A. WEEKES & Co., LTD., 13 & 14, HANOVER STREET, LONDON, W.1.

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SMALL

| | Full Orchestra. | Small Orchestra. | Full Score. | Piano Conductor. | Violin Conductor. | Piano Solo. | Violin and Piano. | Violin 1mo. | Violin 2do. | Viola. | 'Cello and Basso. | 'Cello. | Basso. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| AUSTIN, E., Sweet Night ... ... | ... | 2/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 4d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| BENDALL, Pas Seul ... ... | ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| BENNETT, Eventide Melody ... | ... | 4/4 | 4/- | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. |
| BLAIR, Serenata ... ... | ... | 5/4 | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| BREWER, Auf Wiedersehen ... | ... | 4/4 | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| CAMPBELL, Nocturne ... ... | ... | 7/4 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. |
| CARSE, Barbara Allen Variations | ... | 6/- | ... | 2/3 | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | ... |
| „ Gavotte in G ... ... | ... | 5/4 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, Waltzes, Four | ... | 19/5 | ... | ... | ... | 4/- | 4/6 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | ... |
| „ Hiawatha (Selection from Wedding-Feast)... | ... | 23/9 | ... | 2/3 | ... | ... | ... | 2/3 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | 1/6 | 1/6 |
| „ (§ Novello Music.) Prelude, 2nd Entr'acte | ... | 17/- | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ (§ Novello Music.) Intermezzo ... ... | ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. |
| „ (§ Novello Music.) Finale, 1st Entr'acte | ... | 18/2 | ... | ... | 2/3 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 1/6 | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ (§ Novello Music.) Eastern Dance ... | ... | 11/8 | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ (§ Novello Music.) Novelletten, Nos. 1, 2, & 3 ea. | ... | 3/8 | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ „ No. 4 ... ... | ... | 6/2 | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| COWEN, English Dances, Four ... | ... | 22/2 | ... | ... | ... | 4/- | 4/6 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | ... |
| „ February (Months, No. 2)... | ... | 6/4 | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. |
| „ May ( „ „ 5)... | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. |
| „ June ( „ „ 6)... | 4/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... |
| „ September ( „ „ 9)... | 10/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ November ( „ „ 11)... | 11/10 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 1/6 | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ December ( „ „ 12)... | 7/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| „ Menuet d'Amour ... ... | 5/8 | ... | 5/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| DAVIES, Solemn Melody (str. & org.)... | ... | 2/4 | 3/- | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| DUNHILL, Chiddingfold Suite... | ... | 9/9 | 7/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | 1/6 | 1/6 |
| ELGAR, Chanson de Matin ... | ... | 4/- | 4/- | 8d. | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| „ Chanson de Nuit ... ... | ... | 3/8 | 4/- | 8d. | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| „ Pleading (Solo parts extra) ... | ... | 3/4 | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... |
| „ Serenade (Wand of Youth) ... | ... | 2/4 | ... | 1/6A | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Canto Popolare ... ... | ... | 6/4 | 4/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| FLETCHER, Bagatelles (strings only) ... | ... | 3/6 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 1/6 | ... | ... |
| „ The Toy Soldiers' March... | ... | 8/- | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Valse Lyrique ... ... | ... | 9/6 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| GOUNOD, There is a green hill ... | 4/8 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... |
| HANDEL, Dance of Sailors ... ... | 7/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| HAYNES, Westwood Gavotte ... ... | ... | 6/4 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| HOLBROOKE, Souvenir de Printemps ... | ... | 4/4 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| IRELAND, Bagatelle ... ... ... | ... | 7/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| JOHNSON, Elves (Faerie Suite, No. 1)... | ... | 8/- | ... | 1/6 | ... | 3/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ Pavane in A ... ... ... | ... | 6/8 | ... | 8d. | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| KREUZ, Conversation Amoureuse ... | ... | 6/10 | ... | 1/6 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 1/6 | ... | ... |
| LEMARE, Andantino ... ..., ... | ... | 5/8 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Chant sans Paroles ... ... | ... | 5/- | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| „ Menuet Nuptiale ... ... | ... | 4/4 | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| MACKENZIE, Benedictus ... ... | 4/8 | ... | 7/6 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | A | A | 8d. | 8d. | ... |
| PURCELL, Gordian Knot Untied, 1st and 2nd Suites ... each | ... | 2/8 | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Suite ... ... ... | ... | 2/8 | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ The Virtuous Wife (Incidental Music) | ... | ... | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| RAMEAU, Gavotte ... ... ... | 6/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| RAWLINSON, Serenade ... ... ... | ... | 3/8 | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Aubade ... ... ... | ... | 6/- | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| REED, Serenade (Suite Venitienne) ... | ... | 4/8 | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| ROÉCKEL, Graceful Dance ... ... | 6/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| ROWLEY, Andante Religioso in 4/4 time | ... | 2/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| WADDINGTON, Intermezzo ... ... | ... | 7/4 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| WAREING, Summergold Gavotte ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| WENDT, Air de Ballet ... ... ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| WEST, Intermezzo ... ... ... | ... | 5/- | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Marjorie Gavotte ... ... | 5/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Maypole Dance... ... ... | 14/- | ... | ... | 2/3 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| WOLSTENHOLME, Allegretto in E♭ ... | 6/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |

N.B.—Parts marked A, B, C, D, E, or F, are printed together.

ORCHESTRAS. SUITABLE FOR CINEMAS, &c.

| | Oboi. | Clarinetti. | Fagotti. | Corni 1 & 2. | Corni 3 & 4. | Trombe. | Cornetti. | Tromboni 1 and 2. | Trombone 3. | Euphonium. | Tuba. | Timpani. | Cassa. | Piatti. | Side Drum. | Triangle. | Tambourine | Harp. | Solo-Corne or Euphonium. | Organ or Harmonium. | Harp or Piano. | Bells. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 1/6 | 2/3 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 1/6 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d.A | A | A | A | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d.B | B | 4d. | B | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | .. |
| † | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 8d.A | 8d.B | B | A | 4d.C | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | C |
| | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 1/6 | 3/- | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d.A | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d.A | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. |
